School head's contract renewed

SANFORD — Supt. Paul Hagerty will continue to lead the Seminole County school district until the end of June 1997. And he will make more money to do it.

The school board employs the superintendent and has the option each year to review his progress and make recommendations for improvements. This year, board chairman Barbara Kuhn said, Hagerty's evaluation was "stellar."

She said she was pleased with his work and his leadership, but was impressed by the fact that five board members, working independently, evaluated Hagerty "at expectation" or "above expectation" in all areas.

"This board could never be accused of being 'of one mind' on any issue," she quipped. "We have our own philosophies and ideas on every issue, but everyone of us agreed that Dr. Hagerty is doing a superb job."

In addition to adding another year to his contract, thus extending it through June 30, 1997, the board also agreed to increase Hagerty's salary by three percent, increase his vacation days and offer him the option of receiving payout for accrued annual leave at his discretion.

According to the revised contract, Hagerty will earn a base salary of $101,400. Automobile expenses, a portable telephone, insurance and other expenses will also be paid by the school district.

He will be given 25 vacation days each year, an increase of seven from the 18 he now gets. Any days he accrues in one year will be carried over into the next year.

The contract also permits him to "cash in" at any time. If he chooses, he may be paid for those days at the end of his employment with the district.

The board members spoke highly of Hagerty and his work, but pointed out that work still needs to be done in the areas of public relations and communications, areas they said needed work when they evaluated his job performance last summer.

"I feel very good about his progress," Kuhn said.

When the vote was taken Kuhn voted against the measure, but laughed at Hagerty's look of shock.

"Can't you take a joke?" she said. "I was joking."

Grindle withdraws from race

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — Former state legislator Art Grindle will withdraw from his bid to unseat rival Gary Siegel for Senate District 12. Grindle said the decision was made when his wife Phyllis discovered a lump in her breast. Grindle said his wife's family has a history of breast cancer. A test will be conducted next week to determine whether the mass poses a danger, he said. "She's such a sweet thing, I didn't want to put her through the stress," said Grindle. Grindle served 10 years in the House before seeking the Senate. He lost to Siegel in an often-bitter GOP primary race.

Joan Rivers' to shop alone

CHICAGO — Joan Rivers still can shop, just without you. Her syndicated home shopping program, "Can We Shop," was canceled Wednesday because of poor ratings. The show was produced by QRT Enterprises, a partnership formed by QVC, Inc., Regal Communications and Tribune Entertainment.

County OKs fund for commercial redevelopment

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County commissioners created a $250,000 trust fund this week to aid communities and organizations in redeveloping deteriorating commercial areas.

Under the pilot program, money will be offered to help pay county permit fees, right-of-way landscaping and to participate in the creation of new job-producing opportunities. The money can also be used to provide better access to commercial property.

There are no job production or private investment limits, but the projects must be located on major highways. Each proposal will be considered by commissioners.

The longer these structures sit vacant the harder they are to bring back into use.

—Commissioner Larry Furlong

The idea was raised by commissioner Larry Furlong in February, who suggested starting the fund with $100,000.

"The longer these structures sit vacant the harder they are to bring back into use," wrote Furlong in his proposal. "In the meantime, they are often an eyesore and generate less tax revenue than occupied buildings (e.g. the Seminole Plaza and the Sanford Plaza are taxed only on the land value - the buildings have no value for property tax purposes.)

Commissioners agreed Tuesday, but commissioner Dick Van Der Weide felt the program needed more study by county committees. Van Der Weide was also concerned the program, funded from reserves, was being created too close to the new budget year.

When other commissioners were ready to create the fund, Van Der Weide relented, but recommended bumping the amount up to $250,000. A pleased Furlong quickly agreed and commissioners voted unanimously for the proposal.

Furlong said he wanted to provide money to help bolster employment and the economic foundation of the county by providing incentives Bookin' It?

Libraries and media centers across the county will have their reference resources greatly increased since Florida Polymers, the Lake Mary-based manufacturer of plastics and environmental products, donated nearly 5,000 volumes of encyclopedias to schools and libraries in Seminole and Orange counties. Above, president Rush Bailey told those assembled for the donation that his company wanted to do something to benefit the community. Later, representatives from local libraries loaded the books and took them to their facilities where they will benefit youngsters. Murder trial

Verdict to be all or nothing

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — It will be an all or nothing verdict in the murder trial of Anton Daryl Meyers after the defendant refused to waive the statute of limitations in the case.

Meyers will either be found guilty or not guilty of first degree murder. If the verdict is not guilty, Meyer will be free. If he is convicted, he will face the death penalty or life in prison.

Meyers is being tried for first degree murder in the disappearance of 14-year old Kathy Engels in May, 1987. Her body has never been found. The statute of limitations on lesser included crimes, such as second degree murder or manslaughter, has expired. There is no time limit on prosecuting a first degree murder case. In refusing to waive the statute of limitations, the jury is not given the option of finding him guilty of a lesser crime with less severe penalties.

The defendant told Judge Alan Dickey Wednesday he did not want to exercise his right to waive the statute of limitations, against the advice of his defense attorney, Ed Leinster.

"I think it is careless to give up the opportunity to a guilty (verdict) of a lesser included (offense)," Leinster told the court.

The defendant also said on the record he is satisfied with Leinster's representation.

Meyers also requested to be excused from the trial during jury deliberations and when they re-

Commission term length issue back for discussion

By NICK PFEIFAUPE

LAKE MARY — The question of term lengths will be back before the Lake Mary City Commission this evening. A decision to place the matter on the November ballot was tabled at the June 2 meeting.

The basic concept would be to have the mayor and members of the commission elected for three rather than two-year terms.

During discussion earlier this month, Commissioner Gary Brender and Mayor Lowry Rockett both said they believed the three-year lengths would be better.

Builders seek approval for 47-acre housing development

By NICK PFEIFAUPE

LAKE MARY — It's the same song, but a different vocalist.

Builders are once again seeking approval to develop a 47-acre tract for residential homes on Lake Emma Road, at the southwest corner of Emma Oaks Trail.

The PUD, Planned Urban Development, was originally requested by Centex Homes. It was approved by the Lake Mary City Commission several months ago. With it came approval of a rezoning request for a 1.29 acre portion of the property from residential to industrial. Centex had announced intentions to build a day nursery for residents of the development.

Tonight, a new request will be made, this time by Pulte Homes, a different developer, who now plans to develop the area. Pulte however,

Multiple charges

Sanford police arrested William Ellis, 27, 2450 Center Street, following a chase through the city Tuesday. Officers said they were called regarding a possible burglary on Silver Lake Drive. They said when they arrived, a man, later identified as Ellis, was seen leaving the area in his vehicle, and was pursued through Sanford. At one point, officers said he ran a red light. During the chase, officers found the vehicle had been listed as stolen. Police finally apprehended him in the 2600 block of Laurel Avenue and placed him under arrest. He was charged with grand theft auto, resisting an officer without violence, fleeing and attempting to elude an officer, being a habitual traffic offender, reckless driving, and driving with a suspended/revoked license.

At the Sanford police department, officers found Ellis was also wanted in connection with the burglary of a residence in Franklin Arms Apartments. Police said Ellis reportedly broke into the apartment and attempted to rape a woman while she was sleeping in her bed. They said the woman sprayed aerosol at him, and he fled from the area taking $400 in cash.

In connection with the burglary case, Ellis has been charged with attempted sexual battery, burglary of an occupied dwelling and grand theft.

Suspicious vehicle

Sheriff's deputies arrested Brooke Courtney Salvatore, 19, of 409 Tangelo Drive, near Sanford, in the Idylwild subdivision early Wednesday. A resident reported seeing two females apparently being pursued by a passing car. Deputies conducted a traffic stop of the vehicle and checked the three passengers. Salvatore was placed under arrest. She was charged with possession of a controlled substance and possession of drug paraphernalia. Although the arrest report indicated that a male in the car was also arrested, no specific details were available. A third person in the car reportedly fled from the area and has not been identified.

Longwood police arrested Michael R. Harney, 19, 2163 Deer Hollow Circle, Longwood, on Tuesday. Police said they were investigating the theft of a radio from a vehicle on Citrus Tree Lane, and reportedly saw Harney running from the area. Police said they found him hiding on the ground near some bushes, and placed him under arrest. He has been charged with unarmed burglary, and grand theft.

Cop: O.J. Simpson to be arrested

Report: Blood type matches that of blood at crime scene

By JOHN MADEL
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson's blood type matches that of blood found outside his ex-wife's condominium, where she and a friend were stabbed to death in a fierce struggle with their attacker, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

A more exact DNA test to determine whether the blood is in fact Simpson's has not been concluded, the newspaper said, citing unidentified sources. Such tests can take two months or more. Blood types are shared by many people.

A lawyer for the 46-year-old former football star said Simpson was at home waiting for a limousine to the airport when Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were killed Sunday night.

But a police source, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The Associated Press on Wednesday that Simpson would be arrested in the slayings, perhaps within days.

The Times previously reported that Simpson had scratches on his body when police questioned him Monday. Mrs. Simpson's throat was slashed, and Goldman's wounds indicate he put up a fierce struggle before he died, investigators said.

Police were also reported to have found bloodstains in Simpson's driveway and his vehicle, and a bloody glove at the crime scene. Tests on the gloves have not been completed, the newspaper said.

Simpson's attorney, Robert L. Shapiro, did not immediately return a call for comment early today.

On Wednesday, Simpson slipped past reporters ringing his house to attend a private visitation service at a funeral home Wednesday for Mrs. Simpson. Her family was said to have treated him cordially.

"It was all friendly," Denise Brown, Mrs. Simpson's sister, told the Daily News of Los Angeles.

Earlier in the day, Shapiro told reporters that the former NFL star was at home in the city's Brentwood section at the time of the slaying two miles away.

"O.J. was at home waiting to get into a limousine to take him to the airport on a trip that had been planned well in advance for a promotional event" in Chicago, Shapiro said.

Detectives questioned the limousine driver and searched the car, KABC-TV reported. In Chicago, TV stations reported that Los Angeles police were in Chicago and planned to meet with investigators there today.

Funerals were scheduled today for Mrs. Simpson, 35, and Goldman, 25, a waiter and friend.

Shapiro, a lawyer with a track record for striking plea bargains for his celebrity clients, took over the case Wednesday from attorney Howard Wetzman.

Wetzman said he stepped aside because of his personal relationship with Simpson and his other professional commitments. He has been representing Michael Jackson, who is the focus of a child molestation investigation.

Shapiro said Simpson is under a doctor's care for depression over his former wife's slaying.

"I've never seen him lower. He's very, very distraught," said Simpson's longtime friend and former Buffalo Hills teammate Bob Chandler. "He's grieving the loss of the mother of his two kids."

Friends said Simpson and his former wife had been considering a reconciliation, but the Times quoted an unidentified source as saying Mrs. Simpson told him weeks ago that they could never get back together.

Police had been called to her townhouse several times in recent months to deal with disputes between the two, the source said.

Simpson was placed on two years' probation after pleading no contest to wife beating in 1989. He allegedly screamed, "I'll kill you!" as he slapped and kicked his wife. They were divorced in 1992.

Shapiro often represents celebrities in trouble, including such sports stars as Darryl Strawberry and Vince Colaninno.

Shapiro is known for handling cases in which plea bargains are struck or charges never filed. Wetzman, in contrast, is known as a courtroom fighter.

No briefs, no oral arguments over prison amendment

By JACKIE HALLIPAX
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida Supreme Court won't be hearing oral arguments or reading legal briefs while reviewing a proposed constitutional amendment that's designed to keep inmates in prison for longer.

No lawyers representing either the proponents or opponents showed up Wednesday to argue about the "Stop Early Release of Prisoners" proposal. And no briefs were filed.

"Had a party and nobody came," Sid White, clerk of the Supreme Court, said after a 10-minute hearing.

White said he couldn't remember a similar situation with any other proposed constitutional amendment.

Pinellas County Sheriff Everett Rice, a leading STOP proponent, said his fellow supporters didn't see the need to file briefs or make oral arguments because no opponents had come forward.

"The phony language of the thing speaks for itself," he said.

The STOP measure guarantees that prisoners would serve at least 85 percent of their sentences. On the average, Florida inmates are currently released after completing 44 percent of their terms.

No critics have surfaced but many of the measure's supporters have been both active and vocal.

The Supreme Court reviews proposed amendments after supporters collect 10 percent of the 429,428 signatures needed to make the ballot.

The court doesn't pass judgment on the measure; it only checks for two things.

First, the justices check to see if the measure deals with one subject, as required by the Florida Constitution. Second, they decide if the text voters will read on Election Day is a clear summary of the language that will be added to the constitution.

Not even STOP's supporters showed up Wednesday.

Justices addressed questions to the only lawyer present, Louis Hubener. He works for the office of state Attorney General Bob Butterworth, which sends the amendments to the court.

Playing devil's advocate, Justice Gerald Kogan asked if the amendment might not blur the lines between the legislative and executive branches of government, which would be a violation of the single-subject rule.

"Normally the attorney general's office doesn't take sides," Hubener said.

But, in his letter to the court, Butterworth said the proposed amendment satisfied single-subject and ballot summary requirements.

Over the last year, the Supreme Court has given the OK to one proposed amendment and struck down two others.

The measure that has won inclusion in the 1994 ballot seeks to limit the kinds of nets commercial fishermen can use. Elections officials have verified more than 422,000 signatures.

The court has rejected a measure that would have banned any anti-discrimination law that covered gays, and one that would have imposed a tax on sugar growers to pay for Everglades cleanup.

Help your child progress in life

Thirteen elementary schools in Seminole County are hoping to have changes in report card grading systems, especially at the kindergarten level.

Goldboro Elementary School Principal Geraldine Wright supports the narrative method, allowing teachers to meet with children's parents and discuss the youngster's achievements, or lack thereof.

For decades, elementary schools have used E for excellent, S for satisfactory, U for unsatisfactory, and N for needs improvement.

At higher grades, the A, B, C, D, and F systems have been used. Most of the time, report cards have a small area on which the instructor is to make an observation about the student's progress.

This hasn't always worked, however. Albert Einstein and Thomas Edison both had terrible report cards. Each of them failed many classes. One biography recalls that one of Edison's teachers once wrote on his report card, "Slow learner - doesn't pay attention."

It proves, at least in a few cases, that the grading system doesn't always reveal the true potential of a student. Some of it depends on what the teacher requires in comparison to what the student is willing to give.

We believe however, that one of the main reasons the present grading system doesn't work, is not the teacher nor the student. It is the parent or guardian who receives the report card. Too many people just don't care.

"As long as Johnny passes, who cares if he has mostly D's. I know he's a good boy," could be the response. In the future however, when Johnny tries to get into college or start a new job, those D's will haunt him.

Certainly no parent wants his or her child to become a bum. Yet the way some parents respond to the results of a school term or year, you would expect the opposite.

Whether these schools end up being able to hold individual parental discussions about each of their students, or whether we continue using the old-fashioned methods of grading, it's time to start paying better attention.

Not just students paying better attention in class, but parents being more aware of how their children are progressing.

Parenting doesn't stop with giving birth. It lasts for the rest of your life. Make the best of it and do whatever you can to help your child progress in this world.

Clinton confused on Haiti, Korea

The chaos in President Clinton's foreign policy is about to escalate. Hitherto all America has lost is its hard-won respect as the leader of the world. Now, as Mr. Clinton starts to implement various policies, we are going to begin losing American lives as well.

It seems clear that a military invasion of Haiti is in the works, probably within weeks. So, for the first time in modern history, American soldiers will be ordered to risk and if necessary lose their lives in an operation that involves no "vital national interest" whatever. The restoration to power of the flaky ex-priest Jean-Bertrand Aristide was pledged by Mr. Clinton to the Congressional Black Caucus last year, in return for its indispensable support for his budget proposal (which passed by one vote). If the death of American soldiers strikes you as too high a price to pay for redeeming that pledge, take it up with your Congressman.

Meanwhile in North Korea, where a vital American interest really is involved, Mr. Clinton has turned the old-fashioned cringe into an instrument of foreign policy. It was more than a year ago that Kim Il-Sung disclosed his intention to go into the lucrative business of manufacturing and selling (and perhaps using) atomic bombs.

The problem was turned over to Secretary of State Warren Christopher, a world-class ditherer, who dithered for a solid year, offering Kim everything from economic aid to recognition as the permanent dictator of North Korea if only he would abandon his intention. But Kim went grimly ahead, banning international inspectors from key sites and adding a line of intermediate-range missiles to his arsenal.

So now the doves in the Clinton administration have drafted a proposal for international economic sanctions against North Korea, allegedly designed to bring it to heel. They will, of course, do no such thing, and won't even succeed in delaying the crisis until after the 1996 elections - Mr. Clinton's favorite closet for ugly surprises that must be sprung on the American people.

For one thing, the sanctions to be imposed are ridiculously weak. I invite you to try to make sense out of the following sentence by New York Times reporter Michael R. Gordon: "Administration officials say that by withholding stricter sanctions, the plan is intended to deter North Korea from taking further steps to make nuclear weapons."

Meanwhile the serious men still in the U.S. government - notably Defense Secretary William Perry - have submitted a plan that contemplates military action against North Korea (probably "surgical" air strikes against its nuclear installations) within a matter of months if Kim takes the remaining few steps necessary to go into full-scale bomb production.

Mr. Clinton has not yet signed off on this plan, and we can be sure that if there were a cowardly way out of the dilemma he would take it. Repudiating his word (as in granting Most Favored Nation trade status to Communist China) would be no problem. Blaming our allies for American paralysis (as in Bosnia) would be easy. But what if Kim presses on?

JOSEPH SPEAR

Nixon skeletons continue to surface

From beyond the grave has come a whistling a missile that threatens to demolish Richard Nixon's final grasp for respect.

Will the heretofore secret diaries kept by his late chief of staff H.R. Haldeman at last do him in?

In a political career that spanned nearly half a century, Nixon rose and fell so often, failed and bounced back so many times, metamorphosed into so many forms that he often invited comparisons to moons, rubber balls and tadpoles.

In the post-Watergate years, he fought tenaciously to salvage an honorable place in history. How desperate was his struggle? When doctors told him he might die after blood-clot surgery in October 1974, he summoned his wife to record his version of events. When Pat Nixon tired of taking notes, she was relieved by an aide, who in turn was relieved by another aide.

He often invited comparisons to moons, rubber balls and tadpoles.

Nixon moved to New Jersey, met with pundits, wrote books, traveled abroad, dispatched letters to his successors, oversaw the construction of a private "library" in which the real Nixon story is told through "interpretive exhibits."

One by one his old adversaries yielded. By the time he passed away, he was being portrayed as a princely fellow, if not a saint. "He's a brilliant man," said former president Jimmy Carter. "Many of us are experiencing a sense of loss we did not expect to feel," wrote Washington Post columnist David Broder.

Now come the Haldeman diaries, which team with Nixon tirades against blacks, Jews and assorted foes. Nixon "pointed out that there has never in history been an adequate black nation," noted Haldeman in April 1969. "There was considerable discussion of the terrible problem arising from total Jewish domination of the media," he noted in February 1972.

So, will the Haldeman diaries foil Nixon's last comeback? Sad to say, probably not. Millions of Americans born since Watergate have no concept of the depths of his depravity. As a people, also, we are quick to forgive and especially to forget. Nixon's former associates keep working on his image, as well, and it probably won't be long before he is completely retooled.

Well, perhaps not completely. There are a few veteran Nixon antagonists - I prefer to call them realists - left who remain ever vigilant against revisionism. Their ranks are dwindling, but their resolve endures.

I proudly rank myself among them. Nixon stomped on the Constitution, and I shall forever revile him for it.

My old employer, syndicated columnist Jack Anderson, completely agrees. Nixon's minions investigated us, surveiled us, commandeered our phone records. We will grant no pardons.

Professor Stanley Kutler, author of an acclaimed history of Watergate, is with us. He says the University of Wisconsin, where he teaches, is "a Nixon-free zone."

Greek journalist Elias Demetropoulos, who fled his homeland when a military junta seized power in 1967, has special reason to see that Nixon is remembered as the villain he was.

In 1968, Demetropoulos presented Democratic National Chairman Larry O'Brien with evidence that the Greek intelligence service - founded and funded by the CIA - had channeled $549,000 into Nixon's campaign. The transaction had been facilitated by Thomas Pappas, a Greek-American tycoon, Nixon pal and CIA asset.

Dealing with police

My boyfriend and I moved to downtown Sanford two months ago. We were living here about two weeks when one evening I was home alone. I heard noises outside of my house for about an hour. I saw nothing through my window except two cats. I was so relieved I sat back down to watch television. I saw movement out of the corner of my eye, and looking towards my bedroom window, I saw a man standing there watching me. I ran up to the window shouting "Hey, get out of here." A tall black man who had been crouched down, stood up and bolted from my view, but the man at my window was Hispanic and he stood there and licked the screen on my window, and then calmly walked away. I screamed, slammed the window and proceeded to slam and lock every window in my house. Having no telephone, I waited until morning to report this to Sanford Police. They took my information over the phone and said they would put my house on the night patrol list.

That very same day, I was returning home on my bicycle and stopped to inform my neighbors of what went on the night before. As I walked up to my front door I heard a car horn and right across the street, parked in a little white Ford Tempo, sat a Hispanic male and a black man. They were shouting obscenities of what they were going to do to me and drove away. My neighbor got the tag number to their vehicle. The neighbors drove me to the police station. We turned in the tag number. I asked if a written report was needed and I was told that it wasn't necessary.

On Sunday, May 22, I was at the bus station using a pay phone when they drove by again, this time in a different car. A light blue Toyota Celica, an older one. They yelled out, "Hey girl, where's your man, he's not there all the time is he? And they drove off."

On Thursday, May 28, I was bringing my clothes off the line. I noticed a pair of my underwear was missing. Later that afternoon I found them in my mailbox with therotch cut out. My boyfriend and I called the police. They sent two officers to the house. I was told to get some pepper spray, never go the same route twice. We were told to get some rat traps and 2x4's with nails in them and set them around the house. These two officers also kept insisting that they had to be someone we knew. We do not know these people. We had never seen them before all of this started; we are new to this part of town.

The two officers did not take my underwear for evidence nor did they dust my mailbox for prints, nor did they take a written report. They just said, "Call us again if there's a problem and watch your back. I also told the two officers at this time that I saw them on Sunday driving a different vehicle."

The next incident occurred the night of May 31. My boyfriend went out with some friends. I stayed home because I wasn't feeling well.

My boyfriend returned home to find the front door window open, the nails that hold the screen in place, pulled out, the wire screen pulled all the way up, and only the doorknob lock was locked. He found me asleep in our bed with our flashlight on my dresser turned on, pointing in my direction; also, a teddy bear that I keep in my bathroom was beside me.

When I went to bed that night, I locked the doorknob and the deadbolt. The flashlight was in the kitchen drawer where we keep it. The teddy bear was in the bathroom which only means that they were here in my house watching me sleep.

When I spoke to the police the next morning they came out to the house. I requested to file out a written report. The officer did not take the flashlight to check for prints, nor did they check for prints around my front door. I wrote my report and he left.

Commander Tindel came out to speak to me personally only after I called and raised "cahn" with Officer Russell. He said there's not much they can do in this case except patrol the area more. I told him I can identify the Hispanic man. Can't I look at some mug shots? I was never answered. I was told there are a lot of Hispanics in this area. This is a bad part of town. I was told to get a watchdog.

So what's it going to take to get some real protection? I am in fear for my life. Is it because we live in this part of town that we are not receiving any help? Do we have to be rich in order to get any help? Or do I have to be raped first or murdered before anyone will do anything?

Editor's note: Sanford Police Commander Dennis Whitmire responds: The investigation into this incident is continuing, with Det. Pat Smith assigned to the case.

Whitmire said the Sanford Police Department is in the process of switching to a video-imaging system, which he feels is far superior to using mug books. The victim was not shown mug books because the Sanford police don't use them. Money has been allocated for the video-imaging. When the system is in place, victims will be able to identify suspects by using it. He said the flashlight was not removed as evidence because it had been contaminated with the victim's own fingerprints. Whitmire said the police take an interest in all crimes in all parts of town. The work load of each detective is unfortunately heavy, and Whitmire asks victims to be patient so police can do their jobs. He assures our letter writer Det. Smith is working on her case.

Healthcare plan

I've just read that President and Hillary Clinton's new healthcare proposal will cost $3.6 trillion between 1996 and 2004, when the plan will be fully implemented.

It seems to me quite an irony that the Clinton administration claims to have undertaken health reform largely because the nation could not afford increasing healthcare spending! Where exactly is the big savings in this new plan?

Add this huge cost to the problems of more government bureaucracy and the possibility of losing more than 900,000 American jobs (source: DRI/McGraw-Hill), and I'm not sure we need healthcare reform as much as the Clintons think.

It's true there is no such thing as a free lunch. But the Clinton price tag seems well out of the range of most American taxpayers. I'd rather see various market reforms (like capping malpractice suit amounts and allowing people to start medical savings accounts) tried before risking our entire economy on this radical plan of Bill and Hillary Clinton.

Key anti-bleeding protein found, should aid cancer treatments

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK — Scientists said today they have found a key blood protein that helps people stop bleeding, a discovery that should help doctors overcome a major side effect of cancer treatment.

The protein prods the body into making platelets, microscopic disks in the blood that rush to the sites of injury and clump together to stop bleeding. People with too few platelets can bleed to death.

Cancer chemotherapy can reduce platelets to dangerously low levels, and this side effect can limit the doses of chemotherapy doctors give.

But treatments with the newly found platelet-stimulating protein should let doctors give higher and possibly more effective doses of cancer medicines, said Dr. Janice Gabrilove, an associate member of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, who was not involved in the research.

The protein should also reduce the risks of serious bleeding in bone marrow transplants and let doctors avoid delays or reductions in chemotherapy due to low platelet levels, she said.

The finding could also enable doctors to study anti-cancer drugs that have unusually severe effects on platelet levels, she said.

Patients with low platelet counts can get platelet transfusions now, but transfusions work only temporarily and can lead to complications, Gabrilove said.

The new work is "very, very exciting," she said.

The discovery will not, however, help treat the uncontrolled bleeding of hemophilia, which is caused by a disorder elsewhere in the clotting process, not a lack of platelets.

The finding is reported in today's issue of the journal Nature by two independent research teams. One included Dan L. Eaton and colleagues at Genentech Inc. of South San Francisco with scientists at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., and Jacksonville, Fla. The other included Donald C. Foster and colleagues at ZymoGenetics Corp. of Seattle with scientists at the University of Washington School of Medicine in Seattle.

Another report on the protein was published in Nature by scientists from France and the Immunex Corp. of Seattle.

The protein stimulates the creation of specialized blood cells that make platelets, and makes the cells mature. Scientists found animal versions of the protein and then identified the human gene for it, which revealed the chemical makeup of the human version.

much more helpful in getting things done which have to go through lengthy processes," Brender observed.

Commissioners Sheila Sawyer and George Duryea both spoke in favor of retaining the two year terms. Sawyer commented on how the U.S. Congress served for only two year terms, "and they certainly have much more work and stress than we do," she said. "I don't see any problem with two year terms for our city commissioners."

Before being elected to the commission, Sawyer had served on the Charter Review Committee, which studied and re-drafted a great portion of the charter by which the city operates.

She reminded her fellow commissioners that the committee members had decided not to lengthen the terms in charter change recommendations, because they believed the citizens preferred the shorter terms. She said the concept is, if citizens were in opposition to a particular commissioner, they could vote him or her out of office in just two years.

Although members of the commission were split in their opinions on whether the terms should be two or three years, they voted unanimously in favor of drafting an ordinance to have the matter placed on the ballot.

Both Sawyer and Duryea said they supported having the matter placed in the hands of the voters, but planned to personally vote against it.

The ordinance has now been prepared, and will be brought up for commission consideration tonight. Approval to have it placed on this November's ballot is expected.

Two commission seats will be up for election this year, those presently held by David Meador and Gary Brender. If the referendum is approved, this year's election would not be affected, and winners would still serve for two years.

Beginning in 1995 however, with the seats presently held by Commissioners Duryea and Sawyer up for election, winners would serve for three years.

The following election, in 1996, the remaining seats, held by Meador, Brender and Mayor Lowry Rockett, would then be up for three-year term elections.

There would be no local city election required in 1997, with the two and three cycles to repeat in 1998 and 1999.

As a companion matter, the commission also tabled an ordinance dealing with the date following an election, for swearing in of a winning candidate. Another ordinance, which is unrelated, repeals a city charter section dealing with city acquisition of certain property.

All of the matters will be up for commission votes tonight, to have, or not have each of them placed on the November general election ballot.

The Lake Mary City Commission will begin budget hearings at 5 p.m. tonight, with the regular city commission meeting to begin at 7 p.m., or as soon after the budget hearings as possible.

The meetings will be held in the commission chambers of Lake Mary City Hall, 100 S. Country Club Road.

turned their verdict because he was tired of getting up at 3:30 a.m. This is the third week of the trial. Jury selection in the case began the day after Memorial Day.

The judge denied the unusual request noting that defendants are required by law to be present during critical stages of the proceedings. Dickey added, "I've never had anybody ask for that before."

Closing arguments began this morning and the jury was expected to begin deliberating this afternoon.

On Wednesday, prosecutor Chris White attempted to counter earlier testimony from a woman who swore she saw Engels in the Altamonte Mall hours after she allegedly vanished, last seen in the company of Meyers.

In video taped testimony, Susan Brandenburg said the woman thought about what she saw for a few days before telling Engels' grandparents. At the time, Brandenburg worked for the local Missing Childrens Center which gives support to the relatives of missing children.

Brandenburg said Betty Wayne told her on May 29, she had seen Kathy on the afternoon of May 25, 1987 at the mall with another girl and possibly a young man. Wayne told the Hoopers on May 30.

If Meyers is found guilty, the jury will return at a later date in the penalty phase of the trial to recommend either death in the electric chair or life in prison, 25 years without the possibility of parole.

Americans pile up debt in April

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Americans piled up huge debts in April, with the biggest increase in borrowing in nearly a decade.

The Federal Reserve said Tuesday that consumer credit rose by $8.9 billion, the 11th consecutive monthly increase and far more than most analysts predicted. The advance, led by a record rise in credit card borrowing, was the largest since consumer credit soared by $11.6 billion in March 1985.

Earlier, the Commerce Department reported that retail sales declined 0.8 percent in April while overall consumer spending for the month slipped 0.1 percent.

Analysts conceded that it seems contradictory that Americans would be piling up debt at the same time they were curtailing spending. But forecasters said the two sets of numbers do not always move in tandem.

"It looks like people are borrowing and not spending," said economist Kurt Karl of the WEFA Group, a forecasting service in Bala Cynwyd, Pa. "It may be people borrowed this month and next they'll pay off the bills."

"Credit can accelerate when the economy is slowing because people don't pay off the balances on their credit cards," said Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa.

wants the rezoning changed back to residential, as it reportedly does not plan to include a nursery.

According to preliminary development plans, Pulte wants to build a total of 188 residences on the land. Phase I will have minimum lot sizes of 50 feet by 110 feet. Phase II will have lots of 75 feet by 115 feet.

Statistics indicate that Pulte, a nationwide company, reported selling over 9,000 homes in 1993. In Central Florida, 511 were reportedly sold. Pulte, with local offices in Maitland, is presently building other housing near the tract under consideration.

According to City Planner Matt West, if all plans presently being proposed are approved, Lake Mary will see a heavy influx of new residential homes, possibly as many as 668 new residences.

"Olympia Homes, on the Stenstrom property south of Timacuan is looking into 270 homes," West said, "and Lenar is ready to build 210 homes. With the plans announced by Pulte, Lake Mary should really see a tremendous residential growth."

West said Olympia Homes is presently waiting for approval of land use by the state, but Pulte would not have to go through that process because Centex had already taken that step. Lenar has reportedly obtained all of its required approvals.

"Some of the homes in these three areas could be under construction by this fall," West predicted, "with the rest possibly beginning by next year."

The city staff has determined that the preliminary plan for the residential PUD submitted by Pulte is in compliance with all applicable code requirements.

The city's Planning and Zoning Board unanimously recommended approval of the preliminary PUD, subject to a number of conditions also identified by the city staff.

The preliminary approval for the 47-acre development is scheduled for consideration tonight, at the regular meeting of the Lake Mary City Commission.

With a budget hearing beginning at 5 p.m. this evening, the regular commission meeting will begin at 7 p.m., or as soon thereafter as possible.

The Lake Mary City Hall is located at 100 S. Country Club Road.

Playing for the future

Young Post 53 'B' team shows well in tough loss

From Staff Reports

DeLAND — When you're working toward the future, you have to be careful not to let the present get in the way.

For example, Sanford Post 53's 3-2 loss to DeLand Post 127 in an American Legion B Division (18 and Under) summer baseball contest Wednesday night at Conrad Park was the kind of game that can drive a coach to distraction if he doesn't keep the big picture in focus.

Larry Holbrook, the coach of Post 53 B team and the assistant varsity baseball coach at Seminole High School, knows exactly what the summer games mean for his young squad.

"We played good baseball tonight," said Holbrook, shrugging off the four Sanford errors that led to two unearned runs for DeLand.

"We're going young this summer. And they hung in there against a tough DeLand ball club."

"We're playing for down the road (at Seminole High School). The future looks very bright for this group."

After falling behind 2-0, Sanford got a run back in the top of the sixth inning when Phillip Eubanks walked and scored on Dax Kemp's single.

DeLand scored another run in the bottom of the sixth to take a 3-1 lead but the Sanford squad came back another run in the top of the seventh and were tantalizingly close to overtaking their hosts.

Brian Zaladonis opened the seventh with a single for Sanford. An out later, Brad Jenkins and Ryan Hall hit back-to-back singles. Zaladonis scoring on Hall's hit while Jenkins went to third.

After Hall stole second and the next batter struck out, DeLand opted to intentionally walk Eubanks (who had a double and a single earlier in the game) to load the bases. The move paid off as the Post 127 pitcher struck out the next batter to complete the win.

"The guys showed a lot of heart, coming back and loading the bases in the seventh," said Holbrook.

Squandered in the loss were outstanding pitching performances by Zaladonis and Hall. Zaladonis, who was the starting pitcher, allowed two runs (one earned) on three hits while striking out two and walking three.

Hall spelled Zaladonis in the fifth inning and surrendered an unearned run on three hits, striking out one without giving up a walk.

"Zaladonis did a wonderful job and then Hall came in and shut them down," said Holbrook. "We had outstanding pitching tonight."

The Sanford Post 53 B squad will play again this evening in a 5:30 p.m. game at Trinity Preparatory School in Winter Park.

Americans, Swiss feel they have something to prove

By HARRY ATKINS
 AP Sports Writer

PONTIAC, Mich. — Bora Milutinovic and the United States have something to prove. So does Roy Hodgson and Switzerland, the Americans' opponent in their World Cup opener Saturday.

"We're very happy to finally be here," Milutinovic said Wednesday after his Americans arrived in Michigan. "I can honestly say my team is ready for the World Cup. I feel we're ready to show the world the progress we have made."

In 1990, the Americans qualified for the first time in 40 years, but went 0-3 and finished 23rd among 24 teams.

Switzerland wasn't even at the World Cup four years ago. Before this year, the Swiss hadn't qualified since 1966.

Hodgson, a 46-year-old Briton, unified the Swiss team that qualified with a 6-1-3 record in a group that included Italy, Portugal and Scotland.

"They had to get out of that mentality that Switzerland is a small nation and therefore not a strong nation," Hodgson said, difference is our mentalities. Each region has different mentalities, and this is the first time the whole team has a good spirit together."

Hodgson scrapped the traditional defensive approach the Swiss had employed for so many years. He replaced it with a pressing style of attack featuring Sutter, Stephane Chapuisat, Ciriraco Sforza and Adrian Knapp.

"We all have our job to do," said Knapp, who has 21 goals in 31 international appearances. "We try to attack. We take risks."

It may be hard to attack Saturday when the teams play at the Pontiac Silverdome in the first indoor World Cup game. The temperature was 93 degrees Wednesday and the heat wave was forecast to last into the weekend.

"I also hope it will be humid," Milutinovic said Wednesday.

Last June 19, players sweltered inside the non-airconditioned Silverdome when England played Germany in an exhibition game. It was 78 degrees with 74 percent humidity outside the stadium on that day.

"The German trainer said that their players lost 3-to-4 kilos (nearly 9 pounds) during their match last year," Hodgson said.

The U.S. team, trying to avoid becoming the first host to fail to advance from the first round, arrived in Michigan Wednesday evening after a 4-hour, 15-minute charter flight from the El Toro Marine Base in California.

"We counted down the days for this. It seemed so far in the future," U.S. defender Alexi Lalas said. "Now, it's here."

A couple hundred fans, mostly young kids in soccer uniforms, and a band were on hand when the American team arrived at Oakland-Pontiac Airport. The fans waved small American flags, which organizers handed out. Some of the players came over to a small fence and shook hands and signed autographs.

Lalas, a native of Detroit, said he left about 75 tickets for family and friends. He, more than most, seemed caught up in World Cup excitement.

"It really doesn't matter if the game is in Detroit or on the moon," he said.

Find the cause of chronic cough

Copyright 1994 NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 84-year-old wife has a chronic cough that nothing seems to help. One doctor indicated she has scars on her lungs. If this is true, what's the answer for a cure?

who would like copies should send $2 for each report plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title(s).

DEAR READER: Chronic cough may not always indicate a primary lung disorder, such as pneumonia or bronchitis. Post-nasal drip (sinus drainage from allergies), chronic sinus infection, heart failure and hiatal hernia are associated with a troublesome, dry cough.

Also, certain drugs (notably the ACE inhibitors used for heart disease and hypertension) will cause a chronic, racking cough in about 10 percent of users.

I do not believe that your wife's pulmonary scars are the cause of her cough. Rather, the scars indicate a previous infection or injury. Nonetheless, until the cause of her lung scarring is determined, I'd be concerned that she might be suffering from a long-standing, low-grade pulmonary infection, such as bronchiectasis, abscesses within the lung tissue.

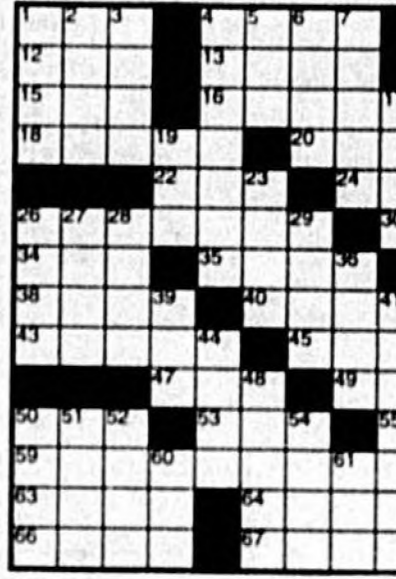

In my opinion, your wife needs to address the issues I raised. For instance, sinus X-rays and special lung X-rays (broncography) would establish the presence of infection in those two areas; a cardiac ultrasound could demonstrate a weakened heart muscle; an upper intestinal X-ray study should document a hiatal hernia.

Before throwing up her hands in frustration, your wife should undergo the necessary testing, which would enable the doctor to prescribe the necessary treatment, such as antibiotics, antihistamines or antacids.

To give you more information, I am sending you free copies of my Health Reports "Living With Chronic Lung Disease" and "Heart Disease." Other readers

Answer to Previous Puzzle

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

You are in your car, waiting to turn right. The car coming down the road to your left is signaling a right turn, implying it is safe for you to proceed. Do you pull out immediately? Or do you wait until the other driver slows to make the turn? If the former, you are relying totally on the other driver. In the latter, you are taking a safety-play, ensuring that you arrive safely, if more slowly.

A new bridge book has been published by Gollancz that works on the safety-play principle. In "The Extra Edge in Play" ($15.45, The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, NY 10025-7124), the authors, Englishmen Terence Reese and Julian Pottinger, want you to hunt for that extra chance to make your contract.

Today's deal from the book is representative of the 50 problems. Look only at the North-South hands. Against your contract of three no-trump, West leads the heart four; eight, nine, jack. How do you continue?

You must assume the opponents will run their hearts if you lose a trick. However, winning five club tricks will give you nine in all. There is no problem if the opponents' clubs are 2-2 or 3-1. But what if they are 4-0? This is no problem either -- as long as you start with the right honor first.

Did you begin with the club king, on the basis that if West has heart length, East has club length? That is reasonable; but why not cash the ace and king of spades first? Here West discards a diamond on the second round. Taking the hint, you play the club ace next, picking up the whole suit and making your contract. Copyright 1994, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
June 17, 1994

A number of welcome changes could be in the offing for you in the year ahead. Some may occur automatically, while others will be orchestrated. However, both sets should be appealing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Be mindful of incidental expenses today, especially when socializing with friends who are in better shape financially than you are. It isn't mandatory that you alone pay the tab. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences that are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You must have faith in persons to whom you delegate assignments today. If you insist on looking over their shoulder and analyzing their every move, it could hurt their performance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Information from insiders could be enormously overrated today, so it might be wise to be a bit skeptical. Don't take everything that is said as gossip.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Treating others in a generous fashion is a commendable attribute today. However, just because someone has his or her hand out doesn't mean he or she deserves your consideration.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) When you establish an objective today, don't try to achieve it in a piecemeal fashion. To be successful, you must coordinate your efforts and not trip over your own forces.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Usually you're not a gullible person who believes everything you hear. Today, however, you might be used as a conduit by someone who wants to put misinformation into the pipeline.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be very careful today not to offer unsolicited advice to friends in matters relating to their commercial or financial affairs. Your ideas might do more harm than good.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.

19) The possibility of a key associate being swayed to your position in a controversial matter is extremely slim today. You'd better look for support elsewhere.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Instead of operating along proven, traditional lines today, you might start looking for shortcuts or step-savers. Instead of enhancing your effectiveness, this may detract from it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Expenditures requiring large cash outlays shouldn't cause you problems today. However, when dealing with the dollar-and-dime stuff, you may do yourself in.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today you might run into an individual with whom you've had cross words recently. Treat this event delicately, because it is not yet fully resolved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Double standards could cause you a problem with a friend today. If you play favorites, someone is going to get hurt or provoked in the process.
