Park Avenue work underway

SANFORD — A repaving project is underway this week on Park Avenue in Sanford. Today, barriers have been set up restricting all traffic on Park from Fulton Avenue to Seminole Boulevard.

Public Works director Jerry Herman said the repaving in the area between the Sanford City Hall and Seminole County Courthouse should be done by late today.

"As soon as we're finished with that area," he said, "we'll be starting to repave Park from 10th Street to 25th Street, which will probably take the rest of the week."

Herman suggested persons going to the city hall or courthouse approach from the side streets and park either east of the courthouse, or in the city hall parking lot.

While the present work near the city hall has caused the entire street to be closed, Herman said, "We'll try to keep some of the traffic lanes open to traffic as much as possible between 10th and 25th, but there may be times when we'll have to have flagmen out there."

The work includes removing some of the present surface and installing new asphalt. The work is being done by Orlando Paving Company, under contract with the city.

Tizzio appointed to state council

SANFORD — A Seminole County man has been appointed to Florida Department of Labor and Employment Security Independent Living Advisory Council. The 14-member panel advises the state labor secretary on issues affecting access for the handicapped and the expenditure of state and federal funds for handicapped and vocational rehabilitation programs.

Anthony "Tony" Tizzio of Casselberry will serve in the position for three years. Tizzio, 37, is past chairman of the Seminole County Republican Executive Committee outreach subcommittee and has been active in issues affecting the handicapped in central Florida for more than 10 years. Throughout the 1980s, Tizzio hosted the local "Special People" television program and took part in several specials in 1991 and 1992. Tizzio has cerebral palsy.

Small business seminar set

SANFORD — The Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce is presenting an informational seminar next Friday. The subject is "The ABC's of Small Business Loans."

Facilitator for the workshop is Ryan Tennyson of Portfolio Review Services. Tennyson is a SBA expert, who will give a step by step method to assist in the preparation of small business loan packages.

Bob Boyd, Sun Bank N.A., is chairman of the small business council. Sanford chamber members are acting as sponsors of the workshop.

The council supports and encourages small businesses in the area through programs, and individual counseling on problems that small business owners encounter.

A complimentary breakfast will be served. There is no fee to attend, but advance reservations are requested. The meeting is open to chamber members, guests, and prospective members.

The workshop will be held at the chamber building, 400 E. First Street in downtown Sanford, beginning at 8 a.m. Friday, Sept. 17.

For information on the SBA workshop or reservations, phone the chamber office at 322-2212.

End of water woes?

County to replace Midway's rusty, leaky pipes

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Senior Staff Writer

MIDWAY — Nearly three years after a controversy over escalating water bills with the community water association arose, work is about to begin on the replacement of miles of rusting pipes.

Last month, the county awarded a $570,000 contract to Vilcon Construction Co. of Flagler Beach to replace about six miles of water lines in Midway, beginning the week of Sept. 20. The bid was far less than the anticipated $750,000 feared by county officials. The entire replacement project will be done in about a year, said Buddy Balaglia, county community development planner.

The project will be funded from the county's community development block grant program, financed with federal grants. The money had originally been allocated for drainage and sidewalk projects, but residents asked the county to use the money to replace the water lines.

Midway's water problems boiled to the surface in early 1991 when residents began to question high water bills from their customer-owned Midway-Canaan Water Association. They found the bills were the highest in the county. The State Attorney's Office investigated, but found no wrongdoing, but residents tossed out the board of directors.

But the board's replacements found a federal See Water, Page 5A

Holiday pretty quiet for cops

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Labor Day weekend was relatively mild for law enforcement agencies. Officials report arrests were not any greater because of the holiday.

Lake Mary Police Chief Richard Beary said there was a slightly higher level of domestic violence cases. "We can just about depend on having a higher number of such cases whenever there is a three day weekend," he commented. "Most of it is caused by the fact that husbands and wives are home together for a longer period of time, and of course, the fact that even a holiday such as Labor Day produces over-abundance of alcohol use."

Beary said arrests for driving under the influence of alcohol however, were no more than usually encountered over a weekend.

A spokesman for the Florida Highway Patrol said the three-day weekend produced no more than the average number of traffic stops for DUI.

In Sanford, police Commander Dennis Whitmore said, "According to our reports, we didn't make any arrests for DUI during the entire weekend."

Seminole County deputy Jack Berning was forced to use his baton to quell a motorist at a county park early this morning.

According to Undersheriff Steve Harriett, "At 1:16 this morning, we received a call from a Freshwater Fish and Game Commission officer that there was a suspicious vehicle in C.S. Lee Park, near the Mims Bridge on E. S.R. 46."

"When officer Berning arrived," Harriett said, "he found a man sitting in a parked car, with the windows open, and the radio blaring."

The man was identified as See Deputy, Page 5A

Labor of love

Labor Day yesterday means many things to many people, but the preferred way to spend it was with those you love and doing something you love to do. While the humans struggle to dock their boat at the public boat ramp at the Monroe Harbor Marina in Sanford, above, a flock of ducks glide effortlessly through the water in and around the docks. Humans and ducks probably spent the Labor Day holiday in pretty much the fashion: fishing and relaxing by the water. The people, however, had to return to the regular grind today while the ducks will head back out to the water for more lazy paddling and splashing and looking for fish. Meanwhile, Julia Oliver and her family and friends, remained safely on land for their Labor Day celebration. Oliver was joined by Dorothy Cotton, Lillie Oliver and James Oliver for a holiday cookout in Ft. Mellon Park. The rich smoky smell of pork ribs were on the menu for the day. Holiday celebrants outdoors ducked intermittent showers and a hot sun, while many chose to stay cool, watching movies or reading a good book often put aside during a hectic workweek.

Kaplan's bond is increased

Competency to be determined

By SANDRA ELLIOTT
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Bond was increased Sunday to $300,000 for a former state legislative candidate accused of shooting his political opponent's wife after the original bonding company withdrew its bond.

Eric (Ric) Kaplan, 29, Altamonte Springs will remain in jail awaiting a Friday hearing to determine his competency to stand trial on charges of attempted murder, aggravated battery, shooting into an occupied building and use of a firearm in commission of a felony. Kaplan is charged with shooting Judy Starks on Sept. 27. Kaplan was seeking election to the house seat of Rep. Bob Starks. A commercial airline pilot, Starks was not home at the time of the shooting.

Kaplan, who was freed on $100,000 bond after his arrest, has been in the John E. Polk Correctional Facility since April 29 when Judge Alan Dickey said he had failed to notify the court of his whereabouts and cancelled bail. Kaplan submitted a new post office box address to the bonding company but apparently did not notify the court of the change. In addition, Dickey raised bond another $100,000. Unable to post the additional bail, Kaplan has been in jail over four months.

On Saturday, Wheeler Bonding Agency withdrew its original $100,000 bond for Kaplan and Circuit Court Judge Seymour Benson raised bond an additional $100,000 making the total bond $300,000 on Sunday.

Carol Wheeler, office manager of the bonding company said by withdrawing the bond, Kaplan will get credit for the time he serves in jail awaiting the disposition of the case. Even though a prisoner is in jail, if there is an active bond, they SANFORD — Based on the low attendance at the other hearings regarding the Seminole County school district's 1993-94 budget, officials don't expect much objection to the district's plans for spending $355 million over the next fiscal year.

The school board will meet on Thursday night to give taxpayers a final chance to voice their opinions on what the school district is planning to do with their tax dollars.

District officials report that they have received few calls from taxpayers expressing dissatisfaction with what they have seen in the See Budget, Page 5A

FLORIDA BRIEFS

Man shoots stranger, then kills self

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Investigators are still searching for a motive behind a Florida man's shooting of a woman in a crowded pavilion here. The gunman then killed himself, police said.

Police said the man and woman didn't know each other, and that it appeared to be a random act of violence.

Eileen Myers, 33, of Langhorne, Pa. was sitting in a pavilion located between South Carolina and Ocean avenues around 1:30 p.m. Sunday when she was shot once in the back of her head by Kevin Earl Bliss, of Hudson, authorities said.

Bliss then ran 50 feet and shot himself once in the head, killing himself instantly, police spokesman Capt. Joe Jastiecki said Monday.

Myers was taken by helicopter to Jefferson Hospital in Philadelphia where she was in critical but stable condition early today officials said. No one else was injured.

Big-footed teen gets promise of shoes

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Robbie Compton hasn't been able to find a pair of Shaq Attack Reeboks for his size 16 feet, but basketball star Shaquille O'Neal will see what he can do.

The teen-ager complained last week that the shoe company doesn't offer the Shaqs for sale in sizes larger than 15, although their ads feature the basketball star, who wears a size 20.

O'Neal and his father, Phillip Harrison, called Friday night, said the 15-year-old Compton, a sophomore at Irmo High School.

"We only talked for about a minute or so, but he said he saw the article and that he would try to help," Compton said.

Harrison asked Reebok to make a special order of Shaq Attacks and promised to send Compton a package of O'Neal's line of clothing and a size 16 pair of another kind of Reebok, Compton said.

Harrison also was trying to arrange transportation and tickets for him for the next time O'Neal's Orlando Magic plays in Charlotte, Compton said.

"I just wanted some shoes. ... I didn't expect anything like this," he said.

Seven charged with scalping tickets

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Seven people, including a Floridian, were arrested for scalping tickets to the football game between the New York Jets and the Denver Broncos, authorities said.

"This is a felony and if we catch you scalping, we're going to treat you that way," Bergen County Prosecutor John Fahy said.

Fahy said the scalped price of the tickets for Sunday's game ranged from $65 to $75 several hours before the start of the game and were going for about $35 just before the 1 p.m. kickoff.

The seven were arrested on Route 120 in East Rutherford, the access road leading to the stadium from Route 3 and in front of the stadium's gates.

Arrested were Peter Leffers, 33, of Jersey City; Gary Vogel, 38, of Levittown, N.Y.; Victor Crawford, 27, of New York; Scott Elener, 33, of Hockessia, Del.; Kevin Gray, 33, of North Arlington; James Haines, 31, of Harrison and Keith Byrnes, 31, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The arrests were a combined effort between the prosecutor's office, the New Jersey State Police and Michael Rowe, executive vice president and general manager of Seaboard and the Meadowlands Area, Fahy said.

Jury out in case of burned tourist

WEST PALM BEACH — After a 10-day trial pitting a victim's emotional testimony against a lack of physical evidence, jurors began deliberating the fate of two white laborers in the burning of a black tourist.

Before resuming deliberations today, jurors heard a clerk read back the testimony of a prosecution witness they had asked to hear again. The witness, Anne Kendall, was a shopper who identified the two defendants as men she saw in the Winn-Dixie shopping center the morning Wilson was abducted there.

The panel of five whites and one black deliberated 3½ hours Monday evening.

"It's going to be a tough decision," said one of the two alternate jurors excused when the jury got the case late Monday after instructions from Circuit Judge Donald C. Evans.

If convicted on charges of attempted murder, kidnapping and robbery, Mark Kohut and Charles Rourke could each face life behind bars.

Prosecutors are relying on the testimony of burn victim Christopher Wilson of New York City, who identified Kohut and Rourke as his attackers. Wilson was abducted New Year's Day outside a suburban Tampa shopping plaza and forced to drive to a remote field, where he was doused with gasoline and set afire.

Zoo offers educational programs

By NICK PFEISFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Central Florida Zoological Park has announced educational courses for the remainder of 1993. Both the after school Nature Niche and Docent Training programs are underway.

The next Docent Training will begin Wednesday, Sept. 15, and Saturday, Sept. 18, from 9 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. Two classes will run concurrently, on each of the days, for eight consecutive weeks.

There is a $25 tuition fee for this mini-zoology course, and applicants must be 16 years or older.

After completing the basic course, docents will be qualified to lead guided tours at the zoo, as well as provide animal encounters with education department animals.

Docents also conduct outreach programs which take animals into the community and give educational presentations. Over 45,000 school children visited the zoo in 1992, discovering hundreds of animals and learning about their characteristics with the assistance of 106 previously trained docents who provided 12,594 hours of service.

Other volunteer opportunities at the zoo include receptionist, secretarial, gardening, special events, painting and computer data entry support. The Nature Niche is a program offered to children age six through 12, to coincide with year-round school programs. It is a nature study program for youngsters to encourage awareness and discovery, highlighting the wildlife found in the natural wetlands surrounding the zoological park.

The Nature Niche will be offered one week each month, 10 months a year, to accommodate students attending year round school.

Participants will meet Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m., and participate in activities, games, crafts, and behind the scenes tours, while discovering the animals exhibited at the zoo.

The last three sessions for 1993 will be presented during the weeks beginning on Sept.

20, Oct. 18, and Nov. 15. Cost per child is $65. For zoological society members, the cost is $50. Lunch and a snack each day are included in the fee. The Central Florida Zoological Park is located at 3755 N. Highway 17-92, just east of I-4 exit 52 in Sanford.

For further information on the Nature Niche, or the docent training programs, phone the zoo at 323-4450.

Exuberant principal collapses, dies on spirit stick dash

By Associated Press

LAKELAND — Crisis-team counselors will be at George Jenkins High School today to help students and school personnel deal with the sudden death of their exuberant principal, who collapsed during a dash for school spirit.

"He was just so excited, his heart could not contain all that joy," Peggy Lewis said of her late husband Richard. "I honestly believe that."

Lewis died Friday night after suffering a heart attack just before the start of the new school's opening football game against Tampa Catholic. He was 52.

Lewis helped put the finishing touches on the team's mascot emblem on the football field before going in to change into his own Eagles' attire and lead the band back down to the field. Lewis collapsed yards away from the field, where he was supposed to christen the turf by dashing across it with the school's spirit stick.

"There was nothing that could have made him happier, or more proud," Peggy Lewis said. She said her husband had a heart condition since birth that caused blood to leak back in to his heart chamber and could cause an irregular heartbeat. But he was under a doctor's supervision and had never had any kind of attack before Friday, she said.

"I've lived this day a thousand times, just not knowing when or where. He's always known, he's told our Sunday school class many times, he wasn't going to crawl into the grave, he was going to jump," Peggy Lewis said.

"We will miss him greatly, but if we listen to him, we won't sit around and mope and cry. We'll get up and go help someone."

Lewis had also planned to run the first 100 yards with his fledgling cross-country team Saturday morning, during their first meet in Auburndale.

In the months leading up to the opening of Jenkins, it was not unusual for Lewis to put in 18-to-20-hour days.

Officials said two crisis teams will come Tuesday to the sprawling campus of the school in south Lakeland, which opened last month. Another will go to Lake Gibson High School, where Lewis was principal for 4½ years, and his wife, Peggy, taught English until this year.

She is now Christian education director at Highland Park Church of the Nazarene.

Glenn Reynolds, the area school superintendent who will serve as acting principal, said the school and all activities will go forward as much as possible Tuesday.

"As quickly as we can, we'll get back to normal, so we'll run a full schedule," Reynolds said. "I talked to Peggy (Lewis) and she said Richard would have wanted it that way."

POLICE BRIEFS

Man shot at

John Andrew Knight, 47, 1817 Harding Ave., Sanford, was charged with aggravated assault with a firearm and shooting into an occupied dwelling on Monday by Sanford Police.

Police said he shot at the victim, Solomon Hardy, several times with a gun.

They said he also fired the gun into the victim's house after Hardy entered the home.

Police said they found the gun and a St. Christopher medal at the scene, along with a pocket knife. Knight told police that all those things were his.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $4,000 bond.

Reckless driving arrest

Robert Shawn Jones, 25, 2920 Cameron Ave., Sanford, was charged with willful and wanton reckless driving by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Monday.

Deputies said he pulled out from Swamp Lane onto State Road 46 where he did a full 360 degree spin across the road. Deputies said there was traffic coming from both directions when he fishtailed across the traffic lanes.

He told deputies that he was trying to "see what the vehicle could do."

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Drug charges

John Czompi, 36, 117 Christi Court, Winter Springs, was charged with obtaining a controlled substance through forgery and possession of a controlled substance by Longwood Police on Monday.

Police said he went to the Eckerd Drug store on State Road 434 in Longwood and tried to transfer a prescription from another Eckerd store.

Pharmacy employees felt he was suspicious and had heard from Longwood Police that there was a person who had been attempting to call in fraudulent prescriptions for Lorib 7.5 mg, which is what the prescription was for.

Czompi could not provide the pharmacy with any identification.

They also stated that the telephone number and address he gave them could not be confirmed.

When Czompi gave police conflicting stories and was unable to answer some of their questions, he was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $3,000 bond.

Cops say trespass warning ignored

Reginald Carl Bookman, 23, who gave police no local address, was charged with trespassing after warning by Sanford Police on Monday.

Police said he was given a written trespass warning on July 31 for 718 Locust Avenue, Sanford.

Police said the resident of that home awoke to find Bookman asleep in the cab of her pickup truck which was parked in a locked, fenced yard.

Bookman was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Children from armed cult

David Koresh may have fathered 12 who died in fire

By The Associated Press

WACO, Texas — Women who had sons by cult leader David Koresh say he fathered 12 of the 17 children who died when fire swept through Koresh's Branch Davidian compound last spring.

The children ranged in age from 1 to 4 and were born to six cult members other than Koresh's wife, the Waco Tribune-Herald reported Sunday.

One woman, who fled the compound last year with two children she said Koresh fathered, told the newspaper she knew he wouldn't willingly let his children leave.

"I just couldn't see him giving them up to the world," said Dana Okimoto. "He knew they would probably be placed in foster care. The chances of them being given back to their mothers was small. He was afraid they would be polluted by the world's ideas." Koresh and the children were among 85 people who died when fire swept through the compound April 19 as FBI agents stormed its cluster of buildings.

The buildings had been surrounded since a Feb. 28 raid by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms in which four ATF agents were killed and 16 wounded in a shootout with the Branch Davidians.

None of the 21 children released during the 51-day siege of the Mount Carmel compound were Koresh's.

Cult members told the newspaper that girls as young and 16 and 14 were mothers to some of the Koresh children who died.

They said another mother was Judy Schneider, the wife of Koresh's top lieutenant, Steve Schneider. The Schneiders also died in the fire.

Huffers: Institute battles inhalant abuse

By AMY LIGHTZ
Associated Press Writer

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — When Ryan Link came home after a night out with his friends, it wasn't smoke or alcohol his parents smelled on his breath — it was gasoline.

Ryan, 17, was a "huffer" — someone who inhales fumes from gasoline, hairspray, butane, or any number of household products to get a cheap high.

When Ryan's parents sought help, their minister advised them to "make light of" their son's substance abuse. The family doctor and the high school counselor didn't know how to handle Ryan's problem, and other parents thought the Linka made too much of it.

Parents and educators often dismiss the dangers of huffing, despite its prevalence, its increasing popularity among teens and its potential deadliness, said Catherine MacIntyre, the director of the International Institute for Inhalant Abuse in Englewood.

Nearly one-fifth of American high school seniors have tried to get high from some kind of inhalant, according to a 1991 study by the National Institute on Drug Abuse. Inhalants rank fourth in popularity among schoolchildren, behind alcohol, tobacco and marijuana, but ahead of LSD and cocaine.

Of Colorado eighth-graders, 21 percent reported using inhalants at least once in their lifetimes, according to a survey. Inhalants were also the drug of choice for eighth-graders across the country, according to a University of Michigan study released this spring.

Inhalant institute officials say huffing is attractive to juveniles because it is cheap and the products themselves are legal. Worse, it causes more irreversible physical damage than other drugs, and can kill on the first try.

The problem crosses cultural, economic and social lines:

—MacIntyre recently got a call from a prevention specialist in Nebraska, who said kindergarteners were caught huffing gasoline from baby-food jars. They had seen a second-grader do it.

—In Japan, where pressure to succeed scholastically is enormous and drug laws are strict, many teens huff. On New Year's Eve, five schoolgirls leaped eight stories from an apartment building in Tamari in a group suicide attempt after sniffing paint thinner. Three died.

—In April, a 33-year-old mother of eight was found dying in a ravine near Golden, Colo. Officially she died of hypothermia, but health officials said her 10-year huffing habit really was responsible.

—A 15-year-old South Carolina girl ran her car off a road last September and killed two people. She told a judge she was so high from huffing she was unaware she had hit anything.

Ryan Link said he began huffing in the fifth grade. "I got introduced to it and thought, 'Heck, I'd try it,'" he said. Initially an infrequent diversion, huffing became a daily habit for Link.

"I didn't crave it," Link said. "It was just what we did when there was nothing else to do. We were bored."

Ryan and four or more friends would hallucinate when they huffed; he said their hair seemed to change color, or people appeared to be choking on toothpicks that weren't there.

Ryan's concentration and memory deteriorated when he was huffing, said his father, Dick Link. His grades dropped — from a 3.5 grade-point average in eighth grade to a 0.8 GPA in high school. As a result, he had to drop baseball, football and wrestling. He grew increasingly violent, kicking in doors and verbally abusing his mother, his father said.

Link will be a senior at Berthoud High School this fall, and it has been 18 months since he huffed. His father credits MacIntyre's inhalant institute.

The 2-year-old institute is a clearinghouse for medical research and prevention programs. Dr. Neil L. Rosenberg, the institute's medical director, concentrates on research, while MacIntyre crisscrosses the country talking to students, police, emergency medical workers and parents. She frequently takes Ryan Link with her.

"We've heard over and over that the parents are relieved it's not cocaine," she said. "Parents think this is the glue-sniffing of the '90s, and it's not."

Today, huffers don't merely spray an aerosol on their sleeve or in a paper bag to sniff it. Many inhale butane directly from disposable lighters, or propellants straight from cans, Rosenberg said.

Until a few years ago, huffing wasn't socially acceptable among teens.

"Now it's cool. It's hip. It's in. Before, it was a trash drug," Rosenberg said.

It is impossible to tell how many kids die from huffing, Rosenberg said. Not only can they be lethal, they can make troubled teens depressed, violent and suicidal, he said.

Rosenberg has researched the effects of inhalants for seven years. Preliminary findings from his latest study show "unequivocally" that huffing not only causes permanent brain damage, but also measurable brain damage after only six months of abuse.

He said the inhalants enter the bloodstream quickly and seek out fatty organs, such as the brain, liver and kidneys.

New card game, 'The Old Bachelor': mama's boy with a bald spot

By F.N. D'ALESSIO
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO — Remember the Old Maid, the long-nosed and less-than-lovely lady on the card you didn't want to get stuck with?

Two women have discarded the Old Maid and replaced her with the Old Bachelor. He combs his hair over his bald spot, keeps his mother's picture on his dresser and has a thick "little black book."

"It's Old Maid for the '90s," said Jane Johnston, who developed the game with Debby Eisel. They are Chicago-area editors for legal publications.

Old Bachelor went on sale recently at 75 area stores for $10 a pack. Gone are the lumberjacks, skiers and gold-diggers seen in some versions of the game. The new characters include a cardiologist, a stockbroker and a rock star.

And they're all women — except, of course, for the Old Bachelor, a preening type in a tweed suit, bow tie and pocket handkerchief.

Both women said the Old Bachelor is meant to be a figure of fun, rather than the cruel caricature they saw in the Old Maid.

"Everything in the traditional game was based on the Old Maid's unattractiveness," Eisel said. "We wanted to eliminate that."

"We didn't want the Old Bachelor to be misconstrued as a put-down of any kind of man," she added. "He's kind of from another era — out of step."

"He's basically a nice guy, but something's lacking," Johnston said. "He doesn't have an interesting job like the other characters, and he's more interested in himself than what's going on in the world. I think I dated him two or three times, at least."

The women said the idea for the new game came to them five years ago when they were playing Old Maid with Eisel's daughter, now 11.

"We noticed that all the male characters were supposed to be fairly competent, but the female characters weren't," Johnston

Curb violence in the home

The chief of operations at the State Attorney's office in Sanford said Seminole County is "way ahead" of the rest of the state in dealing with domestic violence.

It's heartening to know the county is doing as much as possible toward quelling domestic disputes. It is people however, not the county who must assume responsibility.

Police Commander Dennis Whitmire explained that the instances were not increasing. Expanded laws now allow people to be apprehended even though the spouse may not prefer to press charges. This results in a higher number of arrests.

There is no secret regarding what spurs domestic fights. Alcohol and drugs are major causes. Others include disputes over money, child rearing, and infidelity.

Solutions may appear simple: take a long walk to calm down; leave completely if possible; pause to cool off then try to talk it over; or erect a punching bag in the garage and vent frustration on it.

The overall picture however, may require resolution by some type of help. If it can be afforded, professional counseling can be arranged. Spouse abuse support groups are available. Seminole County's new Safe House, to open later this year, will also be of assistance.

Candice Slaughter, who heads the Women in Prison Committee, and a number of others, are urging Gov. Lawton Chiles to set up a statewide task force to help communities develop responses to deal with domestic violence.

For persons who need such support, we believe this would be an excellent project. It may go far toward reducing domestic violence cases.

Parents should keep in mind that their actions will be carried over to their children.

People who may have come from families where "dad smacks mom" was common, may have a tendency to do likewise. This concept must not be carried over from generation to generation.

In the animal world, it's survival of the fittest. If another animal appears to be a threat, the response is to attack.

People however, have larger brains, and should realize this is not how to survive. Human beings are directly responsible for their own actions, not a situation which may have occurred.

When people start to think as humans rather than animals, we will have a reduction of domestic violence.

Seminole County must be commended for undertaking this new Safe House. We believe it will prove successful.

On GoldenRule

The front page of your Aug. 12 issue detailed a rather childish debate between two Seminole County commissioners over an amount of $5,000 reduction in a grant for the Main Street Sanford project.

A week or so prior to this meeting the commission met to review the block grant funding approved by the Advisory Committee, a group who is appointed by the commission. One of the applicants for funding was the GoldenRule organization who had requested funds for administration such as salaries, office rent, telephone installation and costs, an automobile, and its expense of operation. Nothing was apparently requested for actual building of homes for low income families. The advisory group rejected this request unanimously stating that there were at least two other sources for such expenses.

One of the commissioners immediately requested that GoldenRule be given $40,000 when the balance of the grant seemed to climb all over each other to raise the ante. It was finally agreed that GoldenRule would receive $80,000.

While the commission was catching its breath, the GoldenRule group left probably laughing all the way to the bank. Isn't the use of tax money for political purposes just grand?

Editor's note:

GoldenRule did submit an application for SHIP affordable housing funding on August 11, but nine minutes too late and it was disqualified. GoldenRule had sought up to $290,250 for new construction and $22,662 for additional administrative uses.

Stop injustice to Michael Jackson

I first met Michael Jackson five years ago. I came away with but one impression of the man whom the celebrity mags Vanity Fair and People declared the most famous entertainer in the world: He truly was the nicest human being I had ever met.

The pop star was not simply striking a pose, pretending to be gentle and guileless before his adoring public while running roughshod over his hired hands away from the public eye. I have seen him in close quarters several times since our first meeting and he has only confirmed my initial impression.

Which is why it pains me to read the recent spate of sensational stories about Jackson quoting anonymous sources (naturally), who offer unsubstantiated second-, third- or even fourth-hand dope alleging that the pop star fondled and had sexual relations with somebody's child.

These are the verifiable facts that have emerged in the case: The child in question, a 13-year-old boy, is at the center of a bitter custody battle between his estranged parents. His mother says she was not aware of any abuse of her son. Jackson's representatives say he received an extortion demand of $20 million, which he refused.

That a man who so loves children, who has donated millions of dollars to various children's charities, who has graciously opened up his terminally ill children, who sets aside thousands of free concert tickets at his tour stops for disadvantaged children, would have his good name so besmirched is an injustice.

I am reminded of the observation by Claire Booth Luce that no good deed goes unpunished.

The irony of this whole sordid affair is that among the ranks of celebrity sports figures, matinee idols, TV personalities and pop music stars, few have led as exemplary a life as Michael Jackson (who,

He truly was the nicest human being I had ever met.

it should be remembered, has had to contend with his celebrity status since he was the 8-year-old lead singer of the Jackson 5).

He has never had to check into the Betty Ford Center for alcohol abuse (Elizabeth Taylor). He's never been arrested for drug possession (Paul McCartney, Steve Howe). He's never been investigated for rape (Rob Lowe, Mike Tyson). He's never beaten up a girlfriend or spouse (Jackson Browne). He's never been booked for publicly exposing himself (Pee Wee Herman). He's never been stopped for carrying an unregistered firearm (Harry Connick Jr.).

What he has done is endow more than 100 scholarships through the United Negro College Fund. He helped build a special burn treatment center at Brotram Memorial Hospital in Los Angeles. He has opened his purse to Camp Ronald McDonald for Good Times, a place for children with cancer. And, lest it be forgotten, he helped raise millions for starving Ethiopians by co-writing and performing the now-famous anthem "We Are The World."

My only real fear is that the negative publicity that has attended this sordid matter will discourage the already reserved and sensitive Michael Jackson from having any future contact with his young fans.

Time for President Clinton to act

The difference between spotted owls and salmon in the Pacific Northwest is that nearly everyone wants to save the salmon from extinction.

Beyond that, both issues are very much alike, prime candidates for forcing a federal court judge to dictate regional economic and natural resource decisions. Turmoil.

It is now time for the president to do for the salmon what he's trying to do for the forests, bring the competing interests together before the situation spins out of control.

The salmon dilemma is both far more complex and potentially more disruptive to the region's economy than the forest controversy Mr. Clinton is trying to solve.

The synopsis is this: Sixteen million salmon used to make the annual run from the sea into the fresh waters of the Columbia and Snake Rivers to spawn. The run is now down to about 2.5 million, and about 75 percent of those salmon are hatchery-bred. About 100 salmon and steelhead trout stocks are already extinct. Another 150 to 200 are at risk of disappearing. Three Snake River stocks are already listed as either threatened or endangered under the Endangered Species Act. Pressure is mounting among conservationists to list many more.

Last year, only one female sockeye salmon made it to the Snake River spawning ground. Wildlife biologists used frozen male sperm to fertilize 2,000 of her eggs that are now being "raised" at special hatcheries in Seattle and Boise in a desperate attempt to retain some genetic continuity.

Dams are a very large part of the problem. Specifically, the dams built and maintained by the Army Corps of Engineers that today provide, among other things, an enormous quantity of relatively cheap electric power to the region and beyond.

The main problem with the dams is their reservoirs. Juvenile salmon historically traveled from their spawning grounds to the sea in 7 to 14 days, before they transformed into saltwater species while still in fresh water and died. But where the rivers once ran fast, the reservoirs now slow the migration by up to 60 days. The stocks are devastated.

That's the problem facing the salmon. The problem facing the rest of us is politics, bureaucracies and vested interests. The Northwest Power Council, a four-state regional compact, favors drawing down the reservoirs for two months during springtime to make the rivers run faster so the juvenile salmon make it to the sea on time. The Bonneville Power Administration, the arm of the federal Department of Energy that sells the electricity from the Corps' dams, doesn't like this idea. "There is no biological agreement on whether or not higher flows increase salmon survival," says Bonneville spokesperson Greg Drals.

"That's the oldest dodge known to God and man," replies Ted Hallock of the council. Several thousands years of salmon survival in fast-running rivers are all the biological evidence Hallock needs.

The Corps, which answers to the secretary of Defense, has a soft spot for barging salmon between dams because that's what it's been doing for years, without too much success. The Corps says dam modifications needed to draw down the reservoirs will cost up to $5 billion.

Conservationists like Lorraine Bodl of American Rivers put the cost closer to $1 billion and, resignedly, see the whole issue "playing itself out in the courts."

Then there's the Bureau of Reclamation, which answers to the Interior Department, that is responsible for lots of river water in irrigation catchment dams. And the National Marine Fisheries Service, an agency of the Commerce Department, which enforces the Endangered Species Act for salmon. The Fisheries Service may wind up supporting draw down, but because it knows the Corps and Bonneville don't like it, the service may come up with a split-the-difference plan that's sure to disgruntle everyone.

And, of course, there's the clout of the aluminum industry that uses Bonneville's low-cost power, farmers and ranchers who use the water, barge operators who move grain. Native Americans angry that one of their main food sources is vanishing along with a tangible symbol of their culture, and the people of the region who uniformly say they want the salmon saved.

"It's warfare," says Doug DeHart of the Oregon Fish and Wildlife Department.

There is no clear way through this thicket, but certainly handing it off to a federal judge, which is the way things are now headed, would be decision by default.

At the very least, Mr. Clinton can designate a prominent member of his administration, perhaps Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt, to cut through the squabbles now gridlocking Interior, Defense, Commerce and Energy and get the players under his authority working together.

It is now time for the president to do for the salmon what he's trying to do for the forests.

Plan must stress healthful living

The broad outline of President Clinton's national health plan, announced in mid-August, depends largely on rearranging how we use what's already available. It relies on making employers pick up a bigger share of health costs, developing insurance-buying cooperatives to help small businesses get better insurance rates and encouraging competition among health plans.

The hows and wherefores will come later, the president says, but unless his vision expands to a broader view of the health-care puzzle we'll still be in trouble. Here are some goals the president should add to his list:

1. For a national health program to pay for itself and not bankrupt us, it must truly be a "health" program that teaches and promotes health and prevents disease. What we've had largely is a "disease" program, a group of after-the-fact services to mop up after the damage is done.

2. Insurance companies have to begin paying for routine health screening, which most physicians believe is necessary to maintain good health. Historically, they have been reluctant to pay for preventive exams, paying for tests only when there is reason to suspect disease.

3. Insurance companies must offer incentives for the insured who practice good health habits - namely, lowered rates. Unlike other forms of insurance, where I am charged at least in part by the risk I take - driving a sports car, having a high accident or traffic violation rate, heating with wood - I get no such break in health insurance. If I eat a diet high in fat, work at a breakneck pace with a butt between my fingers and get no exercise, I pay the same rate as the person who runs 15 miles a week, meditates to relieve stress and counts fat grams as if they were live hand grenades.

4. If health insurance were priced according to lifestyle habits, an employee who practices preventive health habits would cost his employer less in insurance fees. Would that lead to discrimination, with employers hiring only non-smokers who keep in line with the height-and-weight charts? It doesn't need to. Employees who persist in living an undertaker's dream can pay the difference between the rate employers pay for workers who practice good health habits and their own higher-risk rates.

5. We're going to have to tax the bejabbers out of cigarettes and alcohol, and perhaps even some foods. If you think that's a radical idea, consider that some medical researchers estimate that as much as 46 percent of Americans' illnesses are smoking-related, another 10-15 percent is attributable to alcohol (although since most alcoholics smoke, how much damage comes from which habit is murky) and being overweight contributes to a variety of serious health problems.

6. Blair Justice, in his book "Who Gets Sick: Thinking and Health," blames obesity for 20 percent of all disease, physical inactivity for another 10-15 percent and drug addiction for another 6-10 percent. Sufficient taxes on the purchase of substances linked to disease could provide the money necessary for long-term care of the chronically ill.

7. For decades, insurance companies required hospitalization for many procedures that didn't need it. Getting a check meant checking in. Some insurance companies are beginning to reform this practice, and we have to guarantee that the trend continues.

8. We have to curtail the unwarranted hospital expansion, which has led to the doubling of unused hospital beds over the last 30 years, enriching builders and some lenders and forcing hospitals into a scrap for patients and sometimes into bankruptcy.

Here are some goals the president should add to his list.

White House releases plan to overhaul government

By RON FOURNIER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The White House today recommended a wide array of cuts, consolidations and changes in the federal bureaucracy that it said would save $108 billion by century's end.

The streamlined government would have 252,000 fewer jobs, with thousands of federal employees phased out through attrition, buyouts, early retirement and retraining for private sector jobs.

Reducing the civilian, non-postal work force by 12 percent over the next five years would bring the federal payroll below 2 million employees for the first time since 1987.

The report from the so-called National Performance Review, which was six months in the making, said its proposals would "reduce waste, eliminate unneeded bureaucracy, improve services to taxpayers and create a leaner but more productive government."

Aides to President Clinton hoped to give the politically popular concept a huge send-off at a South Lawn ceremony attended by Clinton, his Cabinet and his point man on the review, Vice President Al Gore.

Aides also planned a bit of theatrics at the ceremony, perhaps a forklift symbolically hauling off reams of rules and regulations the White House hopes to eliminate.

Although Clinton could implement many of the recommendations to "reinvent government" immediately, the White House did not plan to do so today. The president likely will sign executive orders implementing some of the suggestions later in the week.

A colorful, breezily written, 168-page report, "From Red Tape to Results: Creating a Government that Works Better and Costs Less," recommended cutting wasteful and duplicative programs, including:

- Ten percent of the Agriculture Department's 12,000 field offices nationwide. Estimated savings through the 1999 fiscal year: $1.7 billion.

- All regional offices at the Department of Housing and Urban Development, plus a promise to "pare down" its system of 80 field offices and cut its 10,000-person field staff by 1,500. Estimated savings: $187 million.

- Five of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' 11 field offices. Estimated savings: $68 million.

The recommendations embrace old or ongoing studies by the departments and agencies themselves. The report did not include specific closings, apparently leaving it up to agency and department heads to determine which offices would be shut down.

As expected, the White House said law enforcement functions of the Drug Enforcement Administration should be merged into the FBI, saving $187 million over five years.

The White House wants to merge the law enforcement arm of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms with the FBI and combine ATF's regulatory and revenue functions with the Internal Revenue Service. But the report says the idea can wait until after the FBI-DEA merger is complete. The ATF currently is in the Treasury Department.

The report did not say how many of the 252,000 targeted positions actually are filled by employees now, or how much would be saved by cutting the workers.

"There are not going to be 250,000 layoffs," White House Chief of Staff Mack McLarty said today. "Quite the contrary," McLarty said on CBS. "It can be done over time, through attrition."

The report also did not say precisely how many of the 800 recommendations needed congressional approval.

But Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole suggested today that Republicans could support the plan.

"We think it's more of a modernization, bringing it up to present day realities. If that's the case and it really saves money, again it's going to have broad support," Dole said on NBC.

Gore, in an interview with The Associated Press on Monday, said "fewer than half" of the recommendations require an OK from Congress.

"I think that the ground has shifted and many who are traditionally cynical about the prospect for system changes are going to be surprised by the amount of support for rock 'em, sock 'em, shake 'em up, sweeping changes of this kind," Gore said.

In other areas, the report said government leaders should:

- Overhaul the budget process, give managers more power to hire, fire and reward employees, eliminate the "regulatory overkill" and make it easier for workers to buy government equipment on the private market.

- Make service organizations such as government printing, real estate and management enterprises compete with the private sector. Also allow for more public surveys by agencies.

- Increase the ratio of supervisors-to-workers from 1-to-7 to 1-to-15, hold workers more accountable and offer them more training.

Today's announcement capped a frenzied six months in which Gore gathered a team of 200 federal employees and outside advisers to pick apart every Cabinet department and 10 agencies. It also marked the start of Gore's toughest task: Helping to implement a large percentage of the recommendations over the objection of workers whose jobs are at stake and legislators who lord over the programs and departments that Gore wants to revamp.

The report also pointedly attacked Congress at times, particularly regarding "pork barrel" provisions in spending bills that "ensure that funding flows to favored programs and hometown projects."

But it pulls at least one punch: An early draft accused Congress of keeping field offices open "not because they serve customers, but because they provide jobs." The criticism is not in the final draft.

Officers tackle wildlife as part of their job

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — They call police to complain that an alligator has taken up residence on their lawn and is demanding dinner. That a cow is cruising downtown. That a pig has followed them home.

All in a day's work. While many of Central Florida's larger police agencies don't answer animal calls, the smaller ones often must because there are too few animal control officers.

Lake County deputy sheriffs alone answered 1,009 calls between January and mid-August from citizens with animal problems.

One recent call taken by the sheriff's complaint desk was from a woman complaining "a large swine" had followed her home.

The complaint taker didn't laugh. Instead, she sent the request in a computer message to the dispatcher. The message noted: "THIS IS A REAL CALL. MARILYN!" Marilyn sent a deputy.

Vicki Rodgers, who lives north of Altoona, was glad to have the deputy take charge of the hefty porker. The pig had been wandering along State Road 19 and had nearly been hit.

That was an easy call compared to some of the others.

"I usually give 'possums a wide berth," Eustis police Lt. Mike Whitaker said. "They've got that grin and it's all teeth. Nothing more scary, all those rows of teeth, all pyramid shaped."

Snakes don't get a second chance with Whitaker. His motto is simple: Blow 'em away.

A resident in Eustis called to complain that a poisonous, aggressive cottonmouth snake was lurking around his home.

"We got there and there was one cottonmouth, so we destroyed it. Then there was another one, so we destroyed it. Then another and another, and another," Whitaker said.

Where were they all coming from? "Well, once the officer shot in the hole, it started percolating."

so to speak," Whitaker said.

Lake Deputy Kelly Cromwell answered a call three months ago about an alligator nipping a woman's ankles in the parking lot of a country western bar.

Cromwell nabbed his suspect.

"Then I had to drive down the road, holding an alligator by his mouth and sitting on his tail and praying I wouldn't drop him," the deputy said.

Cromwell made it to Lake Harris where he dumped his reptilian cargo.

Wild creatures aside, even farm animals can cause havoc in a city neighborhood.

Two months ago, officers used their squad cars to box in a bull roaming a Leesburg neighborhood.

"We managed to herd him to the gate of his pasture," Officer Bill Grove said.

loan debt. Sanford's wholesale water payments, and a decaying, leaky system were the main reasons for the expensive bills. The rates didn't come down. The new board sought to unload the responsibilities of the water system to whoever would take it off their hands.

In late 1991, the situation boiled over when State Road 46 construction work disturbed the community's main line from Sanford, forcing unannounced cut-offs and boil water notices from health officials. The state road department stepped out of its own limits and replaced the main line, but residents were left with the leaky lines in their neighborhoods.

Who will eventually own the system remains uncertain, said Balaglia. Sanford officials have expressed an interest if the system were improved, but county commissioner Bob Sturm has suggested commissioners consider taking over the system.

Bond

do not get credit for the time they serve in jail, according to Wheeler. The collateral used to secure the bond is also released. The first bond was maintained while waiting to see if Kaplan's parents would arrange for the second $100,000 bond. They did not.

Near the end of May, Kaplan's attorney, James Russ, addressed the question of his client's incarceration for failure to notify the court of his whereabouts.

"As a result of your cancellation of his bail, Mr. Kaplan has been incarcerated for nearly 30 days...despite the fact that Mr. Kaplan throughout the month of April, 1993 was such a frequent visitor to the Seminole County Courthouse and the state attorney's office that he became a nuisance and perceived threat to employees of the local judicial system and the state attorney's office."

Kaplan filed a complaint against Russ with the Florida Bar Association accusing the attorney of dishonest, unethical, unprofessional and criminal misconduct. Russ denies all of the allegations and has asked to withdraw as Kaplan's attorney. Russ also asked the court to determine Kaplan's competency to stand trial.

The competency issue centers on whether Kaplan understands the charges against him and can deal with his attorney.

Another hearing is scheduled Friday on the competency issue after Kaplan took more tests from one of two court appointed psychiatrists last week. Kaplan said on Wednesday he was transported to the Orlando office of Dr. Edward Herrera and took two written tests but did not see the doctor during the visit.

Deputy

Mark Edward Jones, 38, of Altamonte Springs.

Harriett said Berning attempted several times to gain Jones' attention, but when he shined his flashlight on the man, the man placed his hands over his face, and began singing the song on the radio.

"When the deputy finally got Jones out of the car," he continued, "Jones reportedly punched the deputy in the face with his fist. From that point the deputy required a great deal of effort to restrain Jones, finally having to resort to hitting him in the upper thigh with his baton."

After Jones was secured in handcuffs, he was transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital for treatment and drug/alcohol tests, then taken to the John E.

Polk Correctional Facility.

The deputy said he also found a plastic cup in the car containing what was identified as beer.

Jones has been charged with battery on a law enforcement officer, resisting arrest with violence, possession of an open container of alcohol in a county park, and driving under the influence of alcohol.

Harriett said Jones' blood alcohol level was listed at .163.

Deputy Berning was treated for an apparently sprained thumb obtained during the confrontation with Jones, and Harriett said his right hand was injured as well as a bruise from the blow to his face.

Deputies were still continuing their investigation of the case this morning.

Violence

"Sanford was relatively quiet during the past three days," he said. "Labor Day is not one of the big weekends of the year for these problems."

Traditionally, the three holidays which result in a large number of arrests for DUI and domestic violence are Super Bowl weekend in late January, the 4th of July, and New Year's Eve.

Undersheriff Steve Harriett said deputies did not make any unusual number of arrests. "We had the normal amount of cases," he said, "but I couldn't honestly say the fact that this was a holiday weekend produced any significant increase."

school board approves the proposed budget, as expected, on Thursday.

According to staff members, the amount of taxes due on $100,000 home with a homestead exemption of $25,000 will be $753.23, an average of $2.10 less than the owners would have had to pay for that same home last year.

An increase in the number of homeowners will allow the district to slightly lower the "operating fund-local required effort" millage rate while still bringing in a bit more money.

The operating fund-local required effort millage rate is required by the state as a condition for the district to receive the state operating funds. The rate is set annually by the state Legislature.

The current 6.485 rate is a decrease of .028 mills from the 1992-93 rate of 6.493.

The operating fund discretionary millage, which is also set by the state Legislature, will remain at .510 mills.

The school district staff warns that though the levy is labeled as discretionary, it would "severely restrict the district's educational programs" to be without the approximately $4.9 million it would provide.

The $10.4 million raised by the 1.068 mill debt service millage levy will be used to pay the principle and interest on the district's 1992 and 1993 Refunding Bond issues. The debt service millage is the same as it was last year.

The capital improvement millage rate is being recommended at the same two mills that it has held at for the last several years.

That rate is discretionary and may be levied by the board to pay for new construction and remodeling projects, site and site improvement, maintenance of existing schools, purchase of new and replacement equipment, payment of educational facilities due under lease-purchase agreements, instructional materials, payments on leased portable classrooms and payments of some loans.

In addition to building an elementary and a high school over the next year, the district is doing improvement or renovation work on most of the county's 46 schools.

The two mills being levied for capital improvement is the maximum the district can levy.

Miss America prepares to pass crown

By NANCY PLEVIN
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Leanza Cornett is wrapping up her year as Miss America with $35,000 in scholarship money, $200,000 in speaking fees, a job on television and just one complaint: taxes.

But it appears success, and its penalties, will continue for the time being for the 22-year-old from Jacksonville, Fla.

Cornett, a communications major, is negotiating for a job with the syndicated TV show "Entertainment Tonight" but cannot sign a contract until she passes the Miss America crown to her successor Sept. 18.

Meantime, she's been busy making her final appearances as Miss America, filling in for "ET" host Mary Hart and moving to Los Angeles, where she'll continue her studies at UCLA and be closer to her new beau, Mark, a 29-year-old sportscaster whose last name she wouldn't reveal.

Tax concerns aside, Cornett said it has been a terrific, if exhausting, year.

"I didn't realize it would be as busy as it has been," she said in a telephone interview from Houston. "I've traveled 20,000 miles a month — a different city every other day."

About 75 percent of those stops were made to educate people about AIDS, which Cornett chose as her Miss America cause.

Throughout the year, Cornett said, she struggled against claims that she was using a frivolous job to discuss a grave subject.

"I expected people to have a perception of what a Miss America is and does, based on history," she said. "In spite of the criticism, I think that I've overcome that."

She recalled winning over one skeptical audience of doctors.

"I told them stories they don't get," she said. "They don't get the opportunity to travel 20,000 miles a month and see children who are living with this disease and talk to mothers who are kicked out of their homes because they have the disease."

In Florida, she managed to get her AIDS-prevention message across at several school assemblies despite administrators' demands that she not use the words "sex," "condoms" or "AIDS."

At one talk, she slyly described how doctors wear gloves for protection. "It is important to put on a glove. Make sure it is a latex glove," she said, speaking slowly and deliberately. She added with a wink, "I hope you understand what I said."

"She is unusually articulate for a young woman of her age," said Leonard Horn, head of the Miss America Organization. "Extremely well-poised and able to handle herself with the best of them under any circumstances. She was the epitome of what we believe Miss America should be."

The requirement that contestants select a cause was introduced four years ago to make contestants' relevant role models, not irrelevant beauty queens.

Cornett's choice of AIDS-prevention generated far more attention than the causes selected by previous winners, which included motivating youth to excellence, domestic violence and increasing parent involvement in education.

Cornett's advice to this year's contestants is to choose an issue for its personal significance, not for the attention it might garner.

Cornett developed an interest in AIDS after befriending a man infected with the virus. Before becoming Miss America, she volunteered weekly at Florida AIDS hospices.

One anti-smoking theorist troubles those in his camp

By FRANK FISHER
Associated Press Writer

CARBONDALE, Ill. — Donald Garper, a former three-pack-a-day smoker with an intense dislike of the tobacco industry, is one of the most influential writers on how to sue cigarette companies.

How then, did the Southern Illinois University law professor find himself on the same side of a smokers' issue as the Tobacco Institute, the industry's trade group? And why are some businesses upset?

"There's at least one thing more important than a tobacco-free society, and that's a just society," said Garper, who stirred controversy with the recent publication of his paper, "Protecting Job Opportunities of Smokers: Fair Treatment for the New Minority," in the Seton Hall Law Review.

Garner contends the dozen or so major employers who refuse to hire smokers feed a tobacco industry campaign that aims to portray smokers as an abused minority. These businesses include CNN parent Turner Broadcasting System.

And Garner says if employers don't wise up, lobbyists may persuade lawmakers to give smoking civil rights protection, creating "an aggressive new minority — 50 million strong." That, he says, could set back the anti-tobacco movement years.

TBS spokesman Gary McKillips said the company adopted its anti-smoking policy in 1986 after a survey found most workers in favor. He said the health of Turner's 6,000 employees was the motivation, and the company provides financial aid to help smokers quit.

"Certainly if you have a healthier work force, you'll have to pay lower health insurance premiums," McKillips said. "That's a nice byproduct of an anti-smoking policy."

Garner is not advocating that no-smoking rules on the job be rescinded.

Rather, he recommends a law to prohibit employers from refusing to hire anyone on the basis of their off-the-job smoking. Exceptions would include businesses with 25 or fewer workers, asbestos manufacturers and government.

Garner also would let employers charge smokers more for health insurance.

Thomas Lauria, a Tobacco Institute spokesman, said 29 states already protect off-the-job smoking through privacy laws. While agreeing with some of Garner's points, Lauria objected to smokers paying higher insurance premiums.

Bobbi White, left, and Vicki Jernigan are waiting at Sanford Paint and Body to service you and your car.

Car Care With A Woman's Flair

Once again that familiar white steam begins pouring out from beneath your hood and forms a cloud above your car. You pull off to the side of the road and pop the hood to examine the cause of this steam cloud - one which is definitely lacking a silver lining. Just be thankful that you're a man and you can take care of yourself in these situations. Yep - there's the engine, the carburetor, the transmission, and...more steam. Where could it all be coming from? You see a truck pull up behind your car. The driver walks over and begins talking to you from behind the hood. "Maybe I can help you with that," the voice says. You peer out from under the hood with the hope that this person can miraculously fix your car. The first thing you see is long, dark blonde hair. A woman?! A woman can help me fix my car? Is this a joke? Well, if it is then the punchline is...Vicki, new owner of Sanford Paint and Body, will help you with all of your car care needs whether they be mechanical problems, body damage, or towing needs.

However, this is no laughing matter. Fred Bussey is now the president and has turned daily operations over to Vicki Jernigan, Vice President, and Bobbi White, new office manager. They are two women who are serious about caring for your car's every need. Sanford Paint and Body does more than just paint the body work. It's your "one stop service shop" which also provides mechanical repairs and 24 hour emergency towing. They know that the most important thing is to have your car fixed as quickly and efficiently as possible.

"It looks like you need a tow truck," the female voice says. Sanford Paint and Body's experienced tow truck operators are available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Whether you want your car towed to your house, Sanford Paint and Body, or another shop, the drivers will haul it short or long distances without damaging your car. Towing service is available for both accident vehicles and those with mechanical problems.

"Why don't we get your car over to Sanford Paint and Body to have our mechanic take a look at it?," the voice suggests. Sanford Paint and Body can expertly care for mechanical problems on your vehicles - foreign or domestic, car or truck. Why run around town from one specialist to another when you can have the professionals at Sanford Paint and Body care for all your car's needs under one roof?

"Not only do you have some engine trouble, but it looks like your paint is beginning to chip and peel," the woman continues. Sanford Paint and Body can paint your car to give you that new car look without the hefty price tag of a new car.

"How did you get this dent?," she asks as she examines the passenger side of the car. Sanford Paint and Body can fix this for you without any extra aggravation. They know that the last thing you need after the frustration of an accident is to worry with the body shop and insurance company. Sanford Paint and Body makes it easy on you by communicating directly with your insurance company on all of the necessary details from body damage to car rental. By ordering your parts in advance, Sanford Paint and Body has your car only for the time required to fix it. They believe that your car was meant to be driven and go places rather than wasting time sitting and waiting on their lot. Whether you were involved in a fender bender or a major accident, the body and paint shop will replace needed parts and feather and blend the factory matched paint to make repairs unnoticeable. Sanford Paint and Body won't forget those finishing touches such as trim work, molding, pin stripes, and detailing.

"This car is a 1969 Mustang. Isn't it? Have you ever thought of having it restored?," she inquires. Your car doesn't have to be wrecked to take advantage of the experienced auto body staff at Sanford Paint and Body. Bring your older or vintage car in for a free estimate to see how they can make your 20 years old car look 20 years new.

Although some things may have changed at Sanford Paint and Body, you can still get professional service Monday through Friday from 8:00 to 5:00 or by calling 322-8844 or 322-8909. Towing assistance can be obtained by calling 322-8930.

YOUR CLASSIFIED AD works best when it contains what the reader wants to know.

GIVE FACTS
Put yourself in the buyer's place. What would you want to know? List the item's age, condition, size, brand name, model and approximate value. If you're selling a car, state the type of transmission, mileage (if it's low) and special equipment.

DON'T EMBELLISH!
It's risky business to exaggerate and it won't increase your chances of success. Misleading information may get a buyer to your house. It may also get you a punch in the nose.

AVOID ABBREVIATIONS!
While a few abbreviations can save you space, too many of them strung together can create confusion. A confused reader won't take time to sort out your meaning.

INCLUDE PRICE!

Hollywood has record summer

By JOHN HORN
AP Entertainment Writer

LOS ANGELES — A set of cinematic blockbusters has made this the biggest summer in Hollywood history, weekend estimates show. "Jurassic Park," "The Firm" and "The Fugitive" have helped box offices sell more than $2 billion in tickets in North America from Memorial Day to Labor Day. Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc. estimates.

The previous record was $1.99 billion in 1989. By Friday, sales totaled $2.09 billion. Exhibitor analysts said. The three-day Labor Day weekend was expected to bring in about $150 million more, taking the season gross above $2.2 billion. The summer season reverses a trend of sagging summer box office sales. In 1991, theaters grossed only $1.66 billion, and in 1992 the figure was only $1.74 billion.

Some of the gain comes from higher ticket prices, but popular movies accounted for most of the rise.

Revenues were boosted not only by blockbusters but also by smaller films that appealed to a wide array of audiences. "Sleepless in Seattle" attracted statistically older audiences while "Free Willy" and "Snow White" snared younger patrons. "To make a successful season, you need them all, and they were all there," John Krier, president of Exhibitor Relations, said Friday. "There was a mix in the audience and there was a mix in the pictures presented. There was something for everybody."

Other high-grossing summer films include "In the Line of Fire," and "Cliffhanger." "Rising Sun" did modest business and "Dave," which was released before the summer started, made much of its money during the summer.

The dinosaur film "Jurassic Park" has grossed more than $311 million to date, the second highest-grossing film of all time behind "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial."

The single year record also was set in 1989, when sales totaled $5.2 billion and "Batman" and "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" were the top releases.

This year is on a pace to challenge that record as well, although the fall films are not expected to be strong at the box office.

Winning votes: Religious right how-to, from pews to precincts

Part two of three parts

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

VISTA, Calif. — If, as Pat Robertson says, it is time to bring God back into the schools, then once tranquil Vista and its "Policy No. 6019: Teaching Science" are destined to make history.

Inspired by victory in this San Diego suburb, religious conservatives across America are fighting to take over public schools. They are targeting school board elections, demanding curriculum changes, challenging sex education programs, pushing for prayer in the classroom and purging reading lists and libraries.

This is sophisticated politics: state-of-the-art fund-raising and mass communications supplemented by old-fashioned, vigilant foot soldiers recruited from evangelical, fundamentalist and other conservative churches.

It offers a revealing look at the strategy the religious right adopted in the aftermath of Robertson's failed 1988 presidential campaign: Pour resources into local politics, from school and library boards to county commissions and state legislatures.

"We're looking for men and women candidates who want to run for office — school board, dog catcher, anything," says Pat Garland, the Christian Coalition's director in Georgia. "We're getting people from the pews into the precincts."

While low-turnout elections for school boards and other local posts are the immediate target, these groups also hope to develop a pool of candidates for higher offices. Already, the religious right and its allies have made inroads in a number of state legislatures: Pennsylvania, Montana, Idaho, Oregon and Washington among them.

Both the Christian Coalition and another religious right powerhouse, Citizens for Excellence in Education, are encouraging Christians to run for office and teaching them how to campaign.

"The Bible, being the only true source on right and wrong, should be the guide of board members," says CEE's Robert L. Simonds in his handbook on how to elect Christians to higher office. "Government from the president on down should be permeated with Christians as it now is with secularists."

Citizens for Excellence in Education claims more than 3,000 of its members have been elected to school boards nationwide, but refuses to identify them.

People for the American Way, which monitors Christian activist political activity, believes that figure is inflated. But even this liberal group estimates CEE has elected more than 1,000 of its followers to school boards. It estimated that 40 percent of candidates backed in 1992 by Christian right organizations won.

"The school board stuff is probably the biggest growth industry in the right wing," said Michael Hudson, People for the American Way's Western director.

Vista, a growing middle-class community of 76,000 with a school population of 21,000, has become a battleground for Christian activists and opponents who emerged after Christian right successes in 1990 local elections.

The two camps are bitterly divided over Policy 6019, which the Vista school board adopted last month in defiance of its teachers union and state education guidelines. It requires schools to teach, as an alternative theory to evolution, that God created the earth and its inhabitants in six days.

To local resident Ruth Steiner, the decision ignores the Founding Fathers and their "wisdom in building a wall between church and state."

The board's majority saw things differently.

"We now have creationism on an equal footing with evolution," said Deidre Holliday, the board president. She is a member of the National Association of Christian Educators, sister organization to Simonds' neutrally named Citizens for Excellence in Education.

Similar efforts abound: —In New York City, Catholic and black groups joined forces with Christian conservatives this spring to oppose the city's liberal education policies. Together they distributed 500,000 voter guides in 1,200 churches. The Christian Coalition says 66 like-minded candidates won.

—In Duval County, Fla. (including Jacksonville), the school board's conservative 4-3 majority adopted "Teen Aid," an abstinence-only sex education program that does not mention birth control.

—In Lake County, Fla., near Orlando, the religious conservative majority refused to allow a Head Start program in

Americans: government could cut lots of waste

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The average American thinks more than a third of the $1.5 trillion federal budget could realistically be cut as wasteful, according to an Associated Press poll.

When President Clinton outlines his plans Tuesday for "reinventing government," he will be appealing to a widespread cynicism. In the poll, 95 percent said the government wastes lots of money.

Based on a study led by Vice President Al Gore, Clinton is expected to propose numerous changes in the way the federal government buys services, hires workers, makes budgets, pays benefits, collects fees and divides duties among agencies.

When asked in the AP poll, "What percent of the federal budget do you realistically think could be cut as wasteful?" the average response was 37 percent. One in 10 wanted to do away with more than half the budget.

Assuming the nation doesn't shirk its debt service or defense plans, the only way

Congress could cut more than 30 percent would be to chip away at benefit programs such as Social Security and health care for the elderly. The poll shows most Americans don't consider such popular programs wasteful.

Seven in 10 people polled say foreign aid is wasteful. But to cut its $19 billion from the budget would be like dipping 3 tablespoons out of a 1 gallon pail.

The telephone poll of 1,004 adults was taken the last five days of August by ICR Survey Research Group, part of AUS Consultants. Results have a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Opinion was lopsided on how much the federal government wastes: 72 percent said "a great deal" and 23 percent said "quite a lot." Two percent said "not very much," and 3 percent were not sure.

Responses were more varied when different categories of spending were mentioned. Fifty-one percent said military spending is wasteful, for example, and dissenters were largely Southerners, people who live outside metropolitan areas and those whose families earn less than $15,000 a year.

Welfare seemed wasteful to 59 percent overall, but not to most blacks and to those earning less than $15,000.

Two-thirds of those polled said Social Security spending is efficient, not wasteful. Men were more likely to consider it wasteful than women, upper-income people more than lower-income, young people more than old people, Republicans more than Democrats.

Those who say a program is wasteful may still support it or tolerate its expense. They may want the same money spent more wisely.

Those who thought the federal budget could be hacked by half or more were somewhat more likely to consider Social Security wasteful. Even so, six in 10 of these heavy cutters did not call Social Security wasteful.

Most of those polled, 94 percent, found wastefulness in at least one of nine categories listed in the poll.

Depression usually the silent partner when death is suicide

By JANET KERLIN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON — The suicide of White House staffer Vir Foster made front-page news, but experts say there was little appreciation of the illness that likely caused his death.

"Did the stress of life in Washington, did the strains and stresses of this powerful and public job overwhelm this man? In my opinion, it would be no," said Dr. Douglas Jacobs, a Harvard University psychiatrist.

He said it was likely that depression, an illness which affects some 15 million Americans, caused the suicide of Foster. Depression is considered a major factor in most of the 32,000 suicides committed annually in the United States.

Experts don't know why similar stresses produce depression in some people and not others, but they believe Foster's suicide July 29 with a handgun fit a profile similar to most suicides.

That typical victim is male, not getting treatment for his depression, uses firearms and kills himself on his first attempt, Jacobs said.

Depression's symptoms can come on relatively quickly, said Dr. Susan Blumenthal, president of the American Suicide Foundation and chief of behavioral medicine research at the National Institute of Mental Health.

"Depression is a potentially fatal illness just like heart disease is, and when the symptoms aren't taken seriously they can be fatal," Blumenthal said.

Introduce a weapon into that period of pain and hopelessness, and suicide becomes an out, said Pamela C. Cantor, past president of the American Association of Suicidology.

Washington was surprised by the Foster suicide; however, experts say there are signs in most cases.

"People tend to always react to it as if it was out of the blue. And the fact is you trace back and you find a person had a major depression. It was either unrecognized, untreated or ineffectively treated," said Dr. Lewis Judd, former head of the National Institute of Mental Health.

"Just like we are aware of 10 warning signs of cancer, we as a society should be aware of 10 signs of mental illness," Blumenthal said.

Symptoms of depression include change in sleep, appetite and weight; fatigue, and feelings of hopelessness, worthlessness or inappropriate guilt, experts say.

Someone who has had the symptoms for two or more weeks should seek professional help, they say. And if someone is thinking of death or suicide, professional help should be sought immediately.

Strange as it may sound, even success can trigger depression in some people.

Reaching a pinnacle of success can cause some people to feel under scrutiny and under pressure to perform. The feeling of disappointing other people can trigger depression, said Dr. Linda Austin, associate professor of psychiatry at the Medical University of South Carolina.

Foster, a longtime friend of Bill and Hillary Clinton who came to Washington as a deputy White House counsel, said in a note written before he died that he was not suited for a city where "ruling people is considered sport."

It is not known whether he sought counseling help. Only one-third of the 15 million Americans with depression annually receive treatment, the NIMH says.

Failure to recognize depression as an illness and the wish to avoid the stigma of needing counseling are major reasons why people don't seek treatment, Judd said.

Ready or not it's Fall

Sanford softball league's open seasons tonight

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

SANFORD — Is it Fall already? It seems just a few weeks ago that the Sanford Recreation softball league's were trying to wrap up their Spring seasons.

But time waits for no man and the Sanford Recreation Department Fall Slowpitch Softball League's will begin their seasons this week.

A large field of teams have registered for the Fall season, with 25 men's teams and five women's teams ready to go head to head over the next 10 weeks, or 12 in the case of the Men's Thursday Night League at Pinchurst Park.

The season kicks off with a pair of leagues tonight.

The Men's Tuesday Night Class C Fall Slowpitch Softball League will be at Chase Park, located on East Celery Avenue behind the Seminole County School Board while the Women's Fall Slowpitch Softball League will open at Pinchurst Park, located on West 24th Street and Marshall Avenue, five blocks off 17-92 behind Hungry Howies.

Tonight at Chase Florida Manor will take on Discount Propane at 6:30 p.m. Monroe Harbour will play the Orphans at 7:30 p.m. and Gager Pest Control will battle Whirlhel & Howard at 8:30 p.m.

Tonight at Pinchurst Hopkins Meat Packing will face Lake Monroe Inn at 6:30 p.m. Hungry Howies/Crazy Wings vies with Invexst at 7:30 p.m. and Hungry Howies/Crazy Wings sticks around to play defending champion Myers Tree Service at 8:30 p.m.

The rest of the week's opening schedule has:

- Wednesday night at Chase Park, defending champion Helig Myers tackling EXPRES at 6:30 p.m. Sportsmart welcoming Seth & Son/Crazy Wings at 7:30 p.m., and Blussions separating off with Briar Corporation at 8:30 p.m.

- Thursday night at Chase Park, defending champion Bamboo Cafe faces Myers Tree Service at 6:30 p.m. Florida Sport Wear takes on A&M Discount at 7:30 p.m., and R.E. Templeton Co. Inc. plays Hancock Hardware at 8:30 p.m.

- Thursday night at Pinchurst Park, Exterior Homesavers plays Beer 30 at 6:30 p.m., MA Erectors faces Florida Sportsmen at 7:30 p.m., and Sanford First Baptist welcomes S&S Raiders at 8:30 p.m. Country Store has a bye this week.

Wayne Gager (top photo) of Gager Pest Control and Shari Peterson (catching ball, bottom photo) of Myers Tree Service will look to help their teams defend their Spring titles when the Sanford Recreation Department Fall Slowpitch Softball League starts play tonight with the men at Chase and the women at Pinchurst.

SANFORD HERALD PLAYER OF THE WEEK

Wilson's defense garners attention

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

WINTER PARK — It's not very often that we get to honor a defensive player.

But this past Friday night at Winter Park's Showalter Field, Lake Howell linebacker Jermaine Wilson went above and beyond the call of duty.

See Player, Page 2B

Jermaine Wilson

Lake Howell's Jermaine Wilson was the first Sanford Herald Player of the Week.

Other players considered were:

- Seminole's Cliff Branch, who overcame a slow start to complete seven of his last eight attempts and nine of 15 passes for two touchdowns and 112 yards for the game.
- Lake Mary's Tyson Hinshaw, who came off the bench to throw for 139 yards and two touchdowns.
- Lyman's Jason Shipley, who returned a fumble 46 yards for a touchdown.
- Oviedo's Oscar Duncan, who ran for 68 yards.
- Lake Brantley's Jeff Shaw, who threw for 76 yards, including a 17-yard touchdown, and ran for another 88 yards.

Emminger runs away in Pro Late Model feature

By BILL SIEBERT
Special to the Herald

BARBERVILLE — Don Emminger of Astor took off from the pole position and led from flag to flag Friday night, running away from a strong challenge from neighbor Paul George to take the Pro Late Model feature event on the Volusia County Speedway three-eighths-mile dirt track.

Emminger and J.D. McGinnis started side-by-side in the 25-lap main event, but as McGinnis was falling back, George was working his way up from the third row in the 10-car field.

George was on Emminger's bumper by the end of the third lap, but couldn't make the move to break into the lead.

Emminger and George led Garry Flynn, Joe Grubb and Jack Raleigh across the finish line.

Emminger did add a little more excitement to the night when the left rear wheel-bearing on his car caught fire on the victory lap.

"I was trying to raise the entertainment value of the ticket by catching on fire," Emminger told VCS trackside announcer Tom Tipton. "The competition on this track is coming around fast. We're going to take off next week to go hunting, but plan to be back in two weeks and finish out the season here."

In the other divisions, Shane Williams crossed the start/finish line first in the Pro Stocks, but was disqualified after a post-race takedown, handing the victory to Brian Bales, Mike Ponce and Ronnie Ponce of St. Augustine provided a one-two punch in the Mint Stock Division and Mike Schild took the checkered flag in the Hobby Stocks.

Williams ran unheaded from the opening green flag until the checkers fell 20 laps later in the Pro Stocks, but the disqualification allowed Bales, from Holly Hill, to end up with the first place trophy.

Finishing second through fifth were Dean Jarvis, Charles Hall, Mike Hunter and Steven Stairs.

Mike Ponce started on the outside of the front row of the 15-lap Mini Stock Division feature and had to follow pole sitter Jesse Caswell for the first four laps.

But when Caswell lost power on lap five, Ponce assumed the lead, a spot he would keep for the rest of the race.

Ronnie Ponce came home in second, while Tommy Rupp was third, Caswell fourth and Dan Paterniti fifth.

Monitoring blood pressure at home

DEAR DR. GOTT: Since reading in my local newspaper that only about 40 percent of all nurses can take an accurate blood pressure reading, I would like to know how accurate home electronic digital BP monitors are.

DEAR READER: I don't know in what newspaper you read that 60 percent of nurses cannot take an accurate blood pressure, but I do not believe this is a correct figure. In my experience, virtually 100 percent of nurses are skilled in performing this basic and important medical test. This is like saying that 60 percent of automobile mechanics cannot change a tire. I just don't buy it.

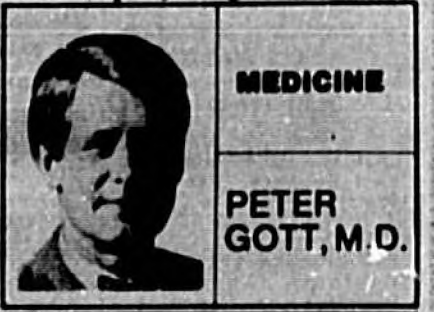

Nonetheless, home blood pressure devices do play an important role in monitoring hypertensive patients. Most of the machines are reliable (although they should be calibrated periodically), and most people are perfectly capable of learning to take home blood pressures.

Thus, for the chronic hypertensive - especially the person who is extremely nervous in a doctor's or nurse's office - home monitoring is a splendid way to obtain blood pressure readings at odd hours (such as at bedtime), thereby establishing a record to help the doctor adjust the dose of blood pressure medicine. Also, some tense patients have "white coat hypertension": consistently high readings in the office, low or normal values at home.

For example, I have several patients who obtain reliable, normal blood pressure readings at home; these are invariably 20 points higher in the office. I'm sure that their home readings better represent true blood pressure levels. Therefore, I trust these readings and adjust their medications accordingly.

Whether a person should engage in home blood pressure monitoring is a decision that should be made in conjunction with the doctor. For technical reasons (such as poor eyesight), this option may not be appropriate for all patients. But I believe that the majority of people can safely and effectively follow their own blood pressures, with a little training, practice.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

As in last year's experiment, this year there were two Epsom Worldwide Pairs, held on June 4 and 5. Clubs in 90 countries took part. Some 30,500 players competed in North America; there were 11,500 competitors in China.

The Epsom is unusual in that when you finish a deal, you learn your score (from 0 to 100) immediately. The other results in your club - or anywhere - are irrelevant.

The deals are taken from tournaments held many years ago. The scores are derived from the original results.

The biggest single score was 1876 out of 2400. It was achieved on Friday, June 4, by Zhao Bao Qi and Wang Zuo Lei from China.

The best North American score on that day, 1818, was achieved by Roland Brunet and Sarko Kassabian, who live in Montreal. They did very well on today's deal from the event.

Kassabian, South, realized that he had a very strong hand. Opposite something in spades, which North must have had in order to bid three no-trump, he decided to take a shot at the club slam. Even if his partner was short in clubs, perhaps the jack would drop. It pays to be aggressive in the Epsom.

West led a low spade. Kassabian won in hand with the 10, played a diamond to dummy's king, ruffed a heart, ruffed a diamond, overtook the club jack with the ace and ran the rest of his trumps. West kept two spades, so the contract made exactly.

Being plus 920 was worth 87 out of 100 matchpoints.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bode Ocol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Sept. 8, 1993

In the year ahead you might be rather fortunate in finding and acquiring collectible items of considerable value. If this is your intention, do so in a methodical, organized way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Don't be intimidated by challenges today, but, by the same token, don't make self-diluting assessments where you think the odds favor you, when, in actuality, they're against you. Virgo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you have something of critical importance to do today, put it on the top of your agenda and give it priority. Finish this first before doing anything else.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's best not to make impulsive commitments today pertaining to investments. What might look good at first reading may not hold up when closely scrutinized.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even a well intentioned associate could unintentionally hinder you today. Try to do what needs doing independently of others, thereby avoiding risks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not let your ego get in the way today if there is something you are trying to do but lack the know-how to do so. Everyone has to ask for help upon occasion.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Perhaps it's best you do not pry too deeply into a matter an intimate friend is trying to keep secret. You might learn something you'll wish you hadn't.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to skirt issues today which tend to divide family members into warring factions. Instead talk about things where all are in accord.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be extremely considerate today regarding the ways you deal with persons who are performing special assignments or tasks for you. Unreasonable demands could shut down your production line.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your judgment might not be up to par today when it comes to taking risks in areas that directly affect your finances or security. Move cautiously.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today if you are going to do something special for a person for whom you feel responsible, do it without fanfare or strings. Contingencies will produce negative effects.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Wait until you have all the facts at your disposal today before making evaluations. If you prejudice people or situations you may have to operate from a distorted picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Try not to get involved today in an arrangement with a close friend where one has to borrow from the other, or where you are collectively doing something you hope would generate a profit. (C)1993, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.
