County Can't Tell Firm To Stop Depleting Long Lake

Oviedo residents living along the shore of Long Lake want its dropping waterline stopped. The question is, which governmental decision maker has the power to stop one property owner from pumping so much water from Long Lake — especially when the landowner sapping the shoreline owns 68.7 percent of it? Under the circumstances, Seminole County cannot tell Evans Groves Inc. to stop depleting the lake. The County Commission told a group of Long Lake residents Tuesday that because Evans owns so much of the property surrounding the lake, the other residents could not make a successful appeal to the board that the depletion is a nuisance. Florida law allows the commission to consider such an appeal if owners of more than 50 percent of the land abutting the lake file a petition with notarized signatures, said Ken Hooper, county environmental services manager. Residential property owners on the lake constitute only 31.3 percent of those around the total shoreline. However, the commission did not turn the appellants away without a glimmer of hope. "Evans Groves appears to be in violation of the order of the St. Johns River Water Management District ordering the conservation of water," said Hooper in a memo to County Attorney Nikki Clayton. "The water conservation ordinance adopted by Seminole County did not pertain to agricultural usage, thus no local control exists. "The only course of action I see for the property owners is to obtain assistance from the St. Johns River Management District or to proceed with a civil court action against Evans Groves," Hooper said in the memo. "The bottom line is that the board cannot take action on this matter," Commissioner Robert Sturm said. "It seems like there's something the board can do to help us without waiting on the St. Johns Water Management District or going to the exorbitant expense of a court fight," said Brent Reed, one of the Long Lake shoreline owners. "We cannot be all things to all people," Sturm said. "We are the county's attorney's client and have to abide by her recommendation." Commissioner Barbara Christensen said it is unfortunate that the larger percentage of property owners are actually in the minority on this issue.

"You have 90 percent of the property owners being damaged by one property owner just because he owns a bigger portion," Christensen said. Mrs. Glenn told the Long Lake residents they would have to be certain their issue is added to the water management district's December agenda. "There is an agency you can go to without charge for an appeal," she said. "The only thing this county can deal with is public bodies of water. We can get involved in using taxpayers' dollars only if it's a county park." "The county is a creature of the state," Ms. Clayton said. "We get our powers from what the state has given us, and unfortunately this is not one of those." — LEE DANCY

No More Tax For Water District

People living in the Lake Howell Water Reclamation District were officially freed Tuesday from a special tax levied on them since the area was originally developed. Conditions for Seminole County's acceptance of the district hinged on making certain the legal descriptions of the property were accurate, however. County Attorney Nikki Clayton said the legal descriptions submitted by former district director Bill Clark were the abbreviated versions used by the county tax assessor's office. The commission asked Clark to sit down with Ms. Clayton to make certain of the accuracy of the descriptions. "This district has never been straightened out legally, but it has been operating," Clark said. "My inclination is to just throw up my hands and leave it with you all."

'This district has never been straightened out legally, but it has been operating.'

The district was formed in the early 1960s when developers for Indian Hills, Highland Pines and other subdivisions wanted to drain their property and begin building. In order to do that, bonds were sold to help pay for digging the special drainage canals and maintain them.

When the developers pulled out of the area, property owners in the various subdivisions assumed the cost of maintaining the district through a special tax. As the area grew over the years, other subdivisions were built in the area and benefited from the drainage district, but were not required to pay the tax.

The county recently agreed to assume control and maintenance of the district. Taxpayers in the entire county will help pay for the district from now on, said Commissioner Sandra Glenn. — LEE DANCY

Saying 'No' County Turns Down Rezoning Requests

By LEE DANCY
Herald Staff Writer

Dr. Bill Moats wanted his request for a specific amendment to the county's land-use plan withdrawn, but the Seminole County Commission considered his proposal and denied it anyway.

It was Moats' second time before the board to ask for a zoning change on his 35 1/2-acre tract on Red Bug Lake Road. The first time Moats appeared, his withdrawal request was granted, but his Tuesday evening appeal for more time to prepare his site plan for the property fell on deaf ears.

Moats wanted 5 1/2 acres of his land fronting Red Bug Road, rezoned from agricultural to commercial. The land change involved a switch from an agricultural and low-density single-family residential designation to high-density single-family residential.

The minimum lot size for the property would have dropped from 13,500 to 9,000 square feet, if Moats' zoning change had been granted.

Commissioner Robert Sturm asked for a show of hands from people present who intended to protest the rezoning request. Numerous palms could be seen above heads in the crowded commission chambers.

"This is the second time you've asked us not to consider this request, Dr. Moats," Commissioner Barbara Christensen said.

The county Planning Department and Planning and Zoning Commission both recommended denial of the request. Mrs.

Christensen's motion for denial of the land use change and rezoning was unanimously approved by the board.

Another request, to rezone a 12-acre tract in Geneva owned by Burt and Ann Rutledge, also was unanimously denied. County planners recommended denial on the rezoning because of a lack of available water.

A third request, from Dennis Raines, to rezone three lots in the Palm Springs subdivision near Altamonte Springs from residential to residential-professional, was unanimously denied on Commissioner Sandra Glenn's recommendation.

A proposed low-density, single-family residential subdivision on a 35-acre tract on Tuskawilla Lake's east side was unanimously approved. The request for a zoning change from agricultural to residential with 13,500-square-foot lots received only one amendment.

The commission insisted on a 300-foot setback for homes built on the lakefront. Developer Hugh Harling said only lakefront property owners would have access to the relatively small lake. Homes ranging in cost from $135,000 to $250,000 will be built on the property, Harling said.

One other land-use change request, for a 67-acre tract on the south side of Longwood Hills Road, was approved by the commission. Bruce Bressler's rezoning request from agricultural to high-density single-family residential will allow 9,000-square-foot lots on the property.

Thanksgiving Provided Them Special Reasons For Thanks

United Press International
For 250 homeless and handicapped people in New York City, Thanksgiving was an elegant free meal served by waiters in tuxedos. For three children stricken with rare diseases, it was their first chance to eat a Thanksgiving dinner.

Millions of other Americans remembered the nation's historic origins and braved the elements Thursday to view annual parades sponsored by Macy's department store in New York — its 58th annual parade — and the 62nd annual Gimbel's Thanksgiving Day Parade in Philadelphia.

Many of the homeless, blind and lame guests who crowded The Lamb's held engraved invitations to the affair. They also listened to singer Glen Davis run through a few of the songs from the Broadway hit "The Fantasticks."

For the first time in their lives 2-year-old twins Kate and Kelly Daley were able to feast on a special Thanksgiving Day dinner after two months of special treatments in a West German clinic.

The twins from Newburgh, N.Y., suffer from a congenital disease — epidermolysis bullosa — that affects one child in every 50,000 and causes their skin to blister externally and internally. They had been unable to eat semi-solid or solid food without choking or crying out in pain because their disease caused severe blistering of the skin at the slightest irritation.

The parents of Nicole Fairchild, 7, were thankful their daughter was finally able to enjoy a Thanksgiving dinner. The second grader had never eaten any meal until several weeks ago because she was born without an esophagus.

Surgeons at Children's Hospital in Columbus, Ohio, made an esophagus from a piece of Nicole's colon so she can eat normally.

Four Running For Two Casselberry Council Seats

By TENI YARBOROUGH
Herald Staff Writer

Casselberry residents will pick two of four candidates running for City Council seats on Tuesday.

Incumbent Councilmen Tom Embree and John Leighty are pitted against former Councilman Carl Robertson Jr. and eight-year city resident George Smith, respectively, in their races for council seats. Embree, currently council chairman, represents Council Seat 5 and Leighty represents Seat 4.

Embree, 45, has lived in Casselberry at 512 Jupiter Way for 10 years. He served on the council from 1973 to 1978 before he was transferred out of state by the U.S. Navy. He ran unsuccessfully in 1977 and 1978, but was elected to a two-year term in 1979. Embree has also served on the city Planning and Zoning Commission for two years, one year as commission chairman.

He served 22 years in the Navy in personnel and general administration before retiring, and is employed as program manager of the Navy's Orlando Federal Credit Union credit-card department. He has served as president of the Central Florida Chapter of Credit Unions for two years and is a member of the Florida Credit Union League's board of directors.

Embree says his "background in municipal government and the leadership positions I have held both in and out of government" have prepared him to best serve the city as a council member.

Robertson, 47, lives at 1405 Lady Amy Drive and is opposing Embree for Council Seat 5. He served as a councilman from 1977 to 1980, until he was defeated in a race against Councilman Bill Grier for Seat 3.

Robertson, employed by Starch Brothers in Orlando, is married and has three children. He is a mason affiliated with Valley Hi Lodge, a military veteran, a member of the VFW post in Casselberry, and founder and current president of the Homeowners of Camelot association.

Robertson also served for three years on the city Board of Adjustment.

"As a citizen, I believe that we should receive all of the services we have been paying for," he said in an open letter to city residents. "These services do not include entertainment for councilmen at local conventions. I want our tax dollars to go for vital city services."

Robertson said his reference to "local conventions" concerns the current City Council's attendance at the Florida League of Cities meeting in Orlando last month. He said he does not feel city residents should pay for such expenses and that "when I was on the council the rules were such, but they changed it to suit their needs this time."

Leighty, 51, a resident of Casselberry for 22 years, lives at 661 E. Seminola Blvd.

He currently holds Council Seat 4 and has served on the council 10 years, including one year as council chairman and three years as vice chairman.

Leighty is married and has two daughters. He is a member of the Sanford Christian Church and works as an assistant construction superintendent.

His experience in local government includes three years as a member of the city Board of Adjustment, one year as a member of the Board of Parks and Recreation and five terms totaling 10 years as a city councilman.

Leighty is a member of the South Seminole Chamber of Commerce, a Seminole Community Action Inc. board member, and a League of Women Voters member.

He said that if reelected he will "continue my efforts to utilize the knowledge of 10 years of service with the city, "citing effective use of city financial resources, controlled city growth through sound planning, police and fire support, and the effective provision of the recreation and parks program as his priorities.

Smith, 53, lives at 866 Diane Circle and is opposing Leighty in the race for Council Seat 4.

JOHN LEIGHTY

TOM EMBREE

GEORGE SMITH

CARL ROBERTSON

Smith is married and has three children. Born in Baltimore, he moved to Florida in 1949 and has lived in Casselberry eight years. Smith retired from the U.S. Army after 23 years of service because of a medical disability resulting from wounds received in the Korean war.

Smith is currently a member of the Seminole County Parks and Recreation Advisory Board. He is a former member of the Casselberry Planning and Zoning Board.

In addition, he is the founder of the VFW post in Winter Park and has been a VFW member 35 years. He served as the VFW resident agent and corporation secretary from 1977 to the present. He is the former VFW post commander, all-state commander and all-state quartermaster. He is a member of the American Legion and past chapter commander of the Disabled American Veterans in Coral Gables.

Smith said that because he is retired he is "fully able to devote time and energy to the citizens." He said he is "in strong support" of the proposed paramedic program, which will appear on the Dec. 1 ballot in a binding referendum.

Like Robertson, Smith said as part of his political platform, that elected city officials "should not expect taxpayers of this city to pay for their expenses at conferences held locally."

According to City Clerk Mary Hawthorne, election polls will open Tuesday at 7 a.m., closing at 7 p.m., at City Hall, 95 Lake Triplet Drive.

Nosy neighbors used to be anathemas. Now they're highly desirable.

That's the message being put forth these days by Sanford police spokesman Sgt. William R. Bernosky.

Bernosky recently held his first meeting to introduce a group of Sanford neighbors to the concept of "Neighborhood Watch."

The program is based on the premise that nosy neighbors can deter crime. If residents stay abreast of the comings and goings of their neighbors they will be prepared to spot when something's amiss.

Bernosky said he hopes the majority of neighborhoods in Sanford will adopt a Neighborhood

Watch program. Each neighborhood appoints a chairman to organize the effort and police instruct the residents on what to do if they observe an unusual situation. Such nosy neighbors really do help stop crime, he said.

Bernosky, incidentally, was recently appointed public relations director for the Sanford Police Department. He will head the department's Community Resource Division.

Through this division, Sanford Police Chief Ben Butler said he will try to close the gap between police services and community needs.

"Crime prevention is a matter of attitude and community involvement by all of us," Butler said, "not just a job for select professionals.

"Citizen participation is one of the most effective tools against crime. We all need to strive towards establishing crime prevention programs such as Neighborhood Watch."

Butler issued a plea for civic, church and educational organizations, as well as individuals, to get involved in an effort to prevent presidential burglary, child and spouse abuse, rape, drug and alcohol misuse, robbery, assault and other crimes.

"We all need to be caring, as in days past, for our families, our property and our neighbors," Butler said.

CETA—It's An Expensive Cure-All

The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973 was a grand gesture. CETA was designed to attack unemployment on two fronts.

By immediately hiring hundreds of thousands of idle Americans, the federal government hoped to put the brakes on the skyrocketing unemployment rate. At the same time, a long range investment would be made by emphasizing the "T" in CETA — training. It was hoped that the program would provide the skills and experience necessary for the hard core unemployed to enter the private work force.

The CETA program is representative of many of the earlier schemes of the great society. It cost a great deal of money. The first year budget of $2 billion grew at one time to an annual appropriation of approximately $12 billion. The scaled-down CETA budget today is still more than $3 billion.

It was born with great expectations and high hopes. The project theoretically offered the best of both worlds: a short-term fix for unemployment woes and a thoughtful approach to the long term problem. If it succeeded, the plan would immunize the worst two or three percent of the persistently unemployed and provide hope for the future.

As in the case with many of the massive social programs of the last 15 years, the problem with CETA is not that it has failed completely. It is fashionable these days to attack such social programs in unequivocal terms, but sometimes the facts don't bear out the criticism. Roughly half of those who participated in CETA were able to move on to the private sector and get a job.

The real failure of programs like CETA can be measured in the enormous time, money and energy poured into the effort. What else could have been accomplished with the billions of dollars spent for this program? And how many hopes were pinned on the promises of this plan? Measured in these terms, the results are pretty poor.

Recently the Department of Labor announced a new CETA budget for fiscal year 1982. The Reagan Administration seems intent on phasing out CETA. Despite ominous signs that unemployment is again on the rise, we hope the administration continues to phase it out. CETA is clearly an idea whose time has passed.

Personal Debts

The vast number of personal bankruptcy cases filed these days is a national disgrace.

In the first nine months of 1981, there were 339,395 personal bankruptcy actions filed nationwide. If the rate continues — and there are sure signs that it will — cases for the year will total 452,500.

It's getting so filing for bankruptcy is about as common as filing for divorce — and carries about the same stigma.

Much of the increase in bankruptcies, according to Editorial Research Reports, can be attributed to double-digit inflation, credit-card abuse, unemployment, and other problems brought on by recession. But primary blame can be laid to the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, which makes it comparatively easy for individuals to escape responsibility for their debts.

One loophole in Chapter 7 of the 1978 act exempts a debtor's current and future income as a factor in declaring bankruptcy. A study conducted by Purdue University showed that nearly two out of every seven persons who file for bankruptcy this year under Chapter 7 could have paid off at least half of their non-mortgage debt in a period of five years. Most of the men declaring bankruptcy held full-time jobs.

Bankruptcy actions play havoc for big stores that carry huge credit accounts. For instance Sears' losses due to bankruptcy in 1980 totaled $40.5 million.

The Supreme Court is checking on whether bankruptcy courts have been given too much power. That's good. But what really is needed is some common sense about living beyond one's means. And a little old-fashioned pride in standing behind one's debts.

BERRY'S WORLD

"Will you stop acting like Henry Ford? We're NOT 'On Golden Pond'!"

ANTHONY HARRIGAN Global Welfare State

President Reagan's agreement to U. N. discussions of the problems of the poor countries was perfectly reasonable. America can't be indifferent to the breakdown of economies in the so-called Third World.

It is very important, however, that the U.S. public and government have a clear understanding of the pitfalls involved in aiding these poverty-stricken nations.

Prof. Kenneth Minogue, who teaches political science at the London School of Economics, has described some of these potential errors in a recent article in Encounter Magazine.

He warns at the outset that the Third World is "normally presented in the sentimental terms of Victimhood, and there are widespread traces of the idiotic notion that their poverty is fundamentally our fault." Certainly, that's the first notion that should be quashed in any discussions at the U. N. The poor countries are poor due to cultural and geographic factors, lack of natural resources, as well as bad government and worse economics.

Correcting this notion won't sit well with those whose stock in trade is anti-Western rancor, but it must be done.

It also should be realized that aid to the Third World has been in effect for many years. If foreign aid were a cure-all, countries such as Tanzania and Zaire would be paradises.

Prof. Minogue also urges us to bear in mind that aid "is money taken from the citizens of industrialized countries by taxation." The western countries, with serious unemployment problems and declining economies, can ill afford any extension of foreign aid in any form.

He also points out that it is the utmost arrogance "to imagine that the whole destiny of the South (the Third World) depends on how much cash we shell out. Africans and Asians are not mere pathetic figures on an Oxfam poster, but also able and energetic individuals coming to terms with the world in which they live like everyone else."

One of Prof. Minogue's most important statements deals with categories of aid. He observes that proponents of aid mix moral and prudential arguments for the assistance to Third World countries. He makes this intelligent recommendation:

"Perhaps it would be better if we simply made gifts on good moral grounds (to cover catastrophes) and lent commercially where aid could be constructively used, which presumably means where its economic return would allow repayment." Much of the trouble involving foreign aid has arisen over so-called "soft" loans which trade, as Prof. Minogue says, "on a confusion between charity and prudence."

No one in the United States opposes charitable gifts — gifts to victims of famine, for instance. Nor does anyone oppose loans which are commercially sound. What people oppose are gifts to inefficient socialist regimes under the guise of charity, loans which prop up mistaken or despotic Third World governments. Such "loans" have as pernicious an effect on the countries which receive the money as on the countries which provide the funds.

Prof. Minogue's remarks make clear that a new basis must be found for assisting the desperately poor countries. President Reagan has proposed that free enterprise and expanded foreign trade be the principal instruments for creating new wealth.

JEFFREY HART Political Economics

Reagan's economic plan has been in effect for only a little over one month. The first tax cuts took effect on October 1.

It's a little early, therefore — whatever Stockman said or meant — to pronounce it a failure; though, of course, powerful interest groups have a serious stake in doing so.

In the first place, it would be well to keep in mind the criteria we are using here. Before Reagan's economic plan can be considered a "failure," we first have to decide what we would mean by saying it had "worked."

Would success mean a generally upward trend in the economy, with greater investment, revitalized industry, more jobs, and lower inflation?

Or, for Reagan's plan to be judged a success, would we mean that he had achieved all of his goals, including a balanced budget by 1984?

In addition, when we are assessing Reagan's economic performance, we have to ask, "Compared to what?"

It is quite possible to discern in the congressional debates over Reagan's plan, and in the commentary of opposition columnists, a liberal-Democratic alternative. Is this alternate package credible?

It involves: 1) escalating federal expenditures, particularly in the "social" area — where a good deal of serious research indicates massive failure; 2) high taxes on all income, and particularly on investment ("unearned") income; that is, just the kind of investment the economy requires; and 3) easy money through an expansion in the money supply with, off down the road, wage and price control to combat the inevitable inflationary surge.

Now, suppose Reagan had not tilted toward supply-side theory, toward lower taxes and higher anticipated investment?

Suppose, instead, he had gone for the old

DICK WEST Roar Of The Snowflake

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Anyone who has never been on the front lines during a budget battle can scarcely imagine what such a clash is like.

Perhaps the most memorable elements are the sounds and smells of battle. Certainly the noise made by all-but-essential government services grinding to a halt is an auditory experience nobody is likely to forget.

If you saw the 1953 movie whose sound track simulated the Titanic hitting an iceberg, you have some idea of how a budget battle hits the ears.

The furloughing of nonessential government employees is itself an acoustical horror. The process, however, is more orderly than you might suspect.

It is fairly easy to determine which employees are nonessential. All that is necessary is the look back through the records and see who came to work after the last snowstorm.

Traditionally, when there is a big snowfall, the government gives non-essential employees the day off. Thus is provided a convenient roster of key personnel.

Employees who stayed home during the last snowfall probably didn't realize they were setting themselves up for furloughing when non-essential government services ground to a halt. But that's the way life is.

People who live by the snowstorm must be prepared to die by the snowstorm.

Budget battle smells make a strong sensory impression, although the aromas are not easily identified.

Kenneth Blaylock, president of the American Federation of Government Employees, said he detected "the strong odor of politics" in President Reagan's veto of an emergency spending bill.

But Blaylock called the furlough plan "a smokescreen," which has an entirely different smell.

Meanwhile, Reagan called the spending bill he vetoed "budget-busting" legislation. A busted budget, of course, has a distinct smell of its own.

And some congressional Democrats accused the president of "theatrics," indicating that the smell of greasepaint also was in the air.

A budget battle is, in short, an olfactory smorgasbord, but memorable nonetheless.

As a rule of thumb, the higher a federal position the less essential it is. During a snowstorm, for example, snowplow operators are the quintessence of essentiality. Government executives, up to and including the president, can stay home and shovel their sidewalks as far as the rest of us are concerned.

A better test may come when the budget battle and the blizzards resume next month.

JACK ANDERSON Navy Base: A Top-Secret Porno Theater

WASHINGTON — The Special Projects Branch of the China Lake Naval Weapons Center in California is a supersecret installation. Special security guards control access to the building. Only a chosen elite are allowed entry.

Tight security is needed to keep spies from finding out about the secret weapons being tested at China Lake.

But there may be another reason for the hush-hush arrangements: Navy personnel don't want outsiders to discover what else is going on at the Special Projects Branch.

My reporters Indy Badhwar and Paul Marks have unearthed evidence that employees at China Lake have also engaged in another secret activity — exhibiting hardcore porno flicks. One of the favorites was an X-rated film called "Debbie Does Dallas."

The porno films were shown on sophisticated government video equipment that was supposed to be used only for tests of Navy weapons. In addition, the equipment, paid for by the taxpayers, was used to reproduce copies of the snuff film.

"There were several days when all they did was watch porno flicks," one insider reported. "It was a weekly occurrence. There were several Fridays when we watched these films all day long. The problem was that the employees there had little else to do."

According to my sources, some of the videotapes were brought in by Navy officers who would have copies made and then take them back aboard their ships — apparently to make a few bucks by charging admission to the screening.

The pornographic movies were also shown on at least two occasions at bachelor parties off the base, using government equipment.

And one afternoon, pranksters played the soundtrack of a hard-core movie over the office intercom at the base, eliciting gasps from at least one female secretary, who later expressed dismay at the "groanings and moanings" coming over the intercom system.

Defense Investigative Service officials, when asked about the snuff performances, acknowledged that dirty films had indeed been shown on the base using government equipment. But a DIS spokesman insisted that the porno flicks were shown only during a two-week period, and then only during lunch hour.

Base officials contacted by DIS also insisted that only one videotape had been made on government equipment. They also said a branch chief and several employees involved in the porno operation had been given verbal reprimands and been told to cease and desist from further voyeuristic ventures at China Lake.

But a source close to the investigation said that snuff shows were a regular feature at the secret base for at least a year, and their reproduction on government equipment was an accepted practice.

POLITICAL POTPOURRI: Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, the first American to orbit the earth, is having more difficulty getting his 1984 presidential rocket off the ground. Though he dogs the Democratic National Committee for exposure opportunities, party leaders find him hard to sell. A dynamic speaker he's not, and his rather fuzzy Senate record doesn't command strong ideological loyalty. Undaunted, Glenn is speaking out on a variety of issues, hoping one will propel him into orbit again.

— In a recent interview, Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., threw down the gauntlet to the radical right with a ringing declaration: "If they want to challenge me in Massachusetts, let it be. I am prepared to contest their premises. Dealing in character assassination is not acceptable in my state. It doesn't bother me a bit to be high on the target list of the radical right. I am quite willing to let the people of Massachusetts make the right decision."

— New York State political savants are increasingly puzzled by the series of minor gaffes Gov. Hugh Carey has been making on the eve of his re-election campaign. They cite his attempt to improve his gubernatorial retreat on Shelter Island with state funds, adding a new wing to the executive mansion in a time of economic hardship, and letting the Greek government pay for his honeymoon trip. The latest boo-boo involved the 50th anniversary of the George Washington Bridge, a high-visibility event that called up the glory days of his revered Democratic predecessor, Franklin D. Roosevelt. Inimicably, Carey decided at the last minute not to attend — an absence that was noted slyly by Mayor Ed Koch and New Jersey Gov. Brendan Byrne, who did show up.

Teresa Hampton Honored At Surprise Bridal Shower

Probably every surprise party involves a "little white lie" in order to pull it off. Teresa Hampton of Geneva was given a surprise bridal shower Wednesday, Nov. 18, at the Geneva Elementary School where her mother, Bonnie Hampton works.

Teresa left her job at the Flagship Bank in Sanford early Wednesday as a result of a "little white lie" her mom told her. She was under the impression that she was to pick her mother up early for a doctor's appointment. When she walked into the school library to meet her mom — SURPRISE!

Most of the faculty and staff of the elementary school attended the miscellaneous bridal shower, and ac-

According to the school secretary, Polly Denton (Mrs. Tom), "She received a lot of nice gifts."

Mrs. Effie Oldham baked and decorated a beautiful cake with a watering can pouring out "Showers of Blessings," and the table was decorated in greens and yellows.

Miss Hampton is to become the bride of Private Mitch Schacter at 4 p.m. Dec. 26 at the Geneva Church of Christ.

According to Margaret Cammack, president of the Owners of Seminole County, Inc., the special hearing for testimony in the "power towers" controversy previously scheduled for Nov. 23 in Daytona Beach at the Volusia County Court House has been postponed until Jan. 11.

The postponement was a result of the granting of a joint petition filed with the State of Florida's Administrative Hearing Officer from Mrs. Cammack's organization and the Geneva Citizens Association which stated that neither group had received adequate notice of time to prepare for the special hearings.

Florida Power & Light proposes to cut through parts of Geneva (and other communities, too) that the citizens believe to be "prime land."

The Geneva Citizens Association will hold its regular monthly meeting the first Monday in December at 8 p.m. in the community hall. This topic will be discussed thoroughly at that time.

For more information in the meantime, you may contact Mrs. Cammack at 349-5300. The one-time dues in the Owners of Seminole County Inc. is $5.

Attention horse lovers. Wayne Johnson of Geneva, also owner of Orangewood Feed and Tack in Oviedo, learned this week that a very famous horse, "Foxy Majestic," owned by The James Gracey's of Oviedo, was sold recently.

The filly took the first place ribbon in the Florida Bred Fillies class at the Florida Quarter Horse Association's annual meeting at the State Fairgrounds in Tampa last Labor Day weekend as well as a second place in the Open Fillies division (open to fillies from anywhere in the nation).

Don't forget the Open Door at the United Methodist Church each Tuesday beginning at 10 a.m.

This community outreach is for the express purpose of neighbors meeting neighbors. A luncheon is served at noon for a freewill offering.

Have you been by the Geneva Elementary School's garden lately? It looks like harvest time is just around the corner.

The cauliflower patch is amazing! Those little beauties are all tied up, and if you peek inside the leaves, you can see the lovely white veggies maturing.

This project has been one to warm your heart — it is great to see the children of our community learning through such a basic project. City kids should have such an experience just once in their lives.

You May See Future Self In Mom

DEAR ABBY: You frequently fill your column with a lot of sanctimonious garbage about how much we owe our mothers, and how we ought to write, telephone or visit them as often as possible.

Dear Abby

In my case, my mother is 80, mentally alert and in reasonably good health, but she is more than I can take, except in very small doses. For the last six years she has lived in a nursing home 600 miles away. She hasn't traveled more than 10 miles from her home in the last 35 years. The last time I visited her (last summer) she talked steadily for 45 minutes about people I had never heard of. When she wasn't talking about people I didn't know, she was complaining about the other people in the home, the food, the care, her aches and pains, and the high cost of everything. (She lacks for nothing, and the home she's in is one of the most expensive.)

from your mother's room, pause a moment and take a long, hard look at her. You may see your future self.

DEAR ABBY: A lot of women enjoy talking on the telephone, but I don't happen to be one of them. I am busy with gardening, canning, sewing and other productive activities, and I consider talking on the telephone a waste of time. Besides, it makes me nervous. I have changed my telephone number three times in the last two years. It costs $25 every time you change your telephone number here, but it was worth it to me because each time I got rid of one bad pest. I kept my number secret for 10 months from one particularly persistent, long-winded pest by telling her I had my phone disconnected, but she got my number from a mutual friend and now I'm trapped.

When she calls me, I say, "I hear someone at my door, so I have to hang up," but she says, "Go ahead and see who it is. I'll wait." Abby, this boring talkative woman is driving me crazy! How can I discourage her calls? There is no cutting her off once she gets me on the phone. TRAPPED IN TAHUA, WASH.

DEAR TRAPPED: What's wrong with the truth? Simply tell her that you dislike talking on the telephone; it makes you nervous. Just recite your speech and hang up.

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL
 For Saturday, November 28, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY (Nov. 28, 1981)
 This coming year you will be rather fortunate in situations and areas which previously may have caused you frustration and concern. Everything will begin to run so smoothly you might even find it hard to believe.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You should be rather lucky today in just about anything in which you are involved, but your greatest advantages are likely to come from new enterprises which have captured your fancy. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph, Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Play your hunches today should you become involved in a challenging situation. Your intuition may present you with alternatives your logic might overlook.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You should be very good today at adding clever, progressive touches to ideas which have been bogged down. Your new twists will get things off dead center.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll respond very well to challenge today, especially in situations where others are about to throw in the towel. Boldness brings you victory.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Others can be supportive only to a limited degree today. It will be up to you to put the final touches on things if you wish to realize important aims.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't be afraid to assert yourself today. You have more power over events than you may realize. Take steps to change for the better that which needs altering.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Persons with whom you have a good rapport socially could prove helpful to you in other ways today, such as opening doors or offering sound business advice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Matters important to your work or career can be successfully concluded today. You know which are the most critical. Give them top priority.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Whether at work or play, your peers or associates won't resent your taking charge today. Under your guidance, all runs smoothly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're entitled to let your hair down a bit for some fun pursuits today, but first take care of things important to you financially or security-wise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You're likely to be far luckier today with ventures that are large and meaningful than you will be with the trivial or mundane. Think big.

SCORPIA (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Lady Luck is in your corner today. She may shower you with benefits you might not feel you deserve. You're wrong — you do.

Review Lifestyle At Exam Time

DEAR DR. LAMB—Surely you agree that a person can be checked up on Thursday and drop dead or have a heart attack and die within hours the next day. This happened to my father-in-law. My husband, with no history of high blood pressure, suffered a stroke and has been disabled for seven years. His blood pressure has been in the 130s before and after the stroke. What good have his annual physical checkups been? Send me your Health Letter on medical examinations.

DEAR READER—Even good medical examinations that include all the tests we know of that can or should be used in a medical examination will not prevent some such cases from occurring.

If doctors did coronary arteriograms and visualized the coronary arteries, they would find more advanced disease earlier, but the procedure is costly, time-consuming and not without risk. It is a good procedure in people who have symptoms or heart disease but it is not something that we recommend as part of a regular medical examination.

The standard, good quality medical examination will find many cases of high blood pressure, high cholesterol and abnormalities people do not know they have, which will enable these to be treated early — thereby decreasing the risk and disability.

Your husband may have been unlucky. Or he may have had a high cholesterol or have been a smoker. Also, a few strokes occur because of a birth abnormality in the arteries to the brain.

diseases that account for most of the deaths that occur. That includes heart attacks, strokes and cancer.

It is still true that the best opportunity to cure cancer is when it is found early and treated early. A good examination is the right time to review your lifestyle and change it for the better to avoid or at least postpone to an older age many of our major medical problems. There really is something to preventive medicine.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I have had some lab tests done. A test called a CBC has turned out to be abnormal. Could you please explain to me what that test is? What does this mean about my health? Is it serious?

DEAR READER—CBC is just an abbreviation for "complete blood count." It includes measuring a hematocrit to tell the doctor how much of your blood is made up of blood cells and how much is fluid. It includes a measurement of your hemoglobin (iron pigment in red blood cells). And it includes a count of your white blood cells including how many of several different types of white cells. The red blood cell count is also included. Platelets, the little cells associated with blood clotting, are counted and the early cells that lead to formation of red cells.

So what your test means depends entirely on what the abnormality is. If you have a low red cell count, you are anemic. If you have a low hemoglobin, you may have an iron deficiency. And if your white cells are up, you could have an infection. The degree of change is also important in terms of judging its importance in relation to health.

bad breaks when you can do so.

Here is his first example. West opens the king of diamonds against your four heart contract and after receiving the three spot from his partner West shifts to the queen of clubs.

You take dummy's ace and plays dummy's three of trumps. East follows with the eight and unless you are one of those players who takes no precautions against such things as a 3-6 trump break you will play your ace of trumps.

West will show out and after several moments of careful plan and soul searching study you will lose four tricks, game, rubber and your partner's respect.

Now suppose you take out some insurance. When East follows to that first trump just play your jack. You will lose an unnecessary trump trick if West produces the queen, but you will be sure of your contract any way you played the hand.

Dee Gatrell, Winter Springs, makes "pieces of Florida" for gifts and profit.

She Sells Sea Shells In Sanford

By TONI YARBOROUGH
Herald Staff Writer

Suste may sell seashells down by the seashore, as the tongue-twister goes, but Dee Gatrell sells seashells in Sanford, Longwood and anywhere else people want to buy them.

"I just tell people, 'give your friends a piece of Florida,'" Mrs. Gatrell, of 208 Mockingbird Lane, Winter Springs said.

Mrs. Gatrell makes stickpins, mirrors, picture frames, and even Christmas tree ornaments out of sea shells she finds along Florida's coastline.

"I usually go to Sanibel and Captiva Island for my shells about three or four times a year," she says. "The prettiest and most unique shells are there. The Atlantic coast, near Cocoa Beach and Playalinda, usually are good for filler in my crafts."

Mrs. Gatrell recently participated in the Longwood Art

Festival and sold her shell crafts for "my Christmas money."

"It's a lot of fun but it does take a lot of time," she says. "I get most of my work done in the summer when things aren't so hectic."

On Mrs. Gatrell's screened porch are buckets and cans filled with shells. This she said, is where she turns nature's gifts from the sea into practical, usable items.

"With the stickpins I just buy the pins and glue them to the shell, but that's the easy part," she says. "The distasteful part about making them is after you find the shells by walking along the beach and digging them up before they can burrow deeper in the sand — a little animal is inside of them — then, you have to bring them home and clean them up and boy, do they stink."

Mrs. Gatrell said having to put up with the smell of the shells makes the stickpins worth the price without considering the cost of anything else or the time it takes to make them. She sells the stick pins for $2.25 each or two for $4.

"The mirrors and picture frames cost more and take a lot more time," she says. "But, they are great gifts for framing a baby announcement, wedding announcement, a picture or whatever."

Mrs. Gatrell makes the mirrors and frames by cutting out a plywood frame in the shape she or a buyer desires and after painting and trimming the wood with felt, she begins to "build" the shell border.

"I usually start with a good base shell like clam shells or Florida scallop shells," she says. "Then I add shells as I like or as a potential buyer has specified. They may want a certain color scheme of browns, pinks, purples, grays or whatever and then I fill in the cracks and spaces with odds-and-ends shells usually that I've found at Cocoa or

Mrs. Gatrell said she has made sand dollar Christmas tree ornaments for her family, but hasn't made any to be sold because she "can't find any more decorating materials which are necessary to make them."

"The ornaments take a lot more time and care than other shells," she said. "They have to be bleached within no more than two days after you get them off the beach. Then, you need to dip them in gesso and coat them with white glue or they'll turn brown and brittle."

Shell gifts and ornaments are not new to the tourism or the crafts-for-profit market. But, Mrs. Gatrell said she feels she has something "different and unique" to offer with her shell crafts than others do.

"I give them a piece of natural Florida," she says. "My shell creations are not all equal sizes, or the same exact colors or the same dimensions. My shells blend because they are arranged as you would find them on the beach — naturally. The rough mixed with smooth, the round mixed with oval, all blending to depict Florida naturally."

Mrs. Gatrell's method for making shell crafts is expected to be published soon in Creative Craft Magazine.

Dee Gatrell shows how she makes beautiful gifts from Florida's bountiful sea shells.

Perry Mason Did Lose One

DEAR DICK: Did Perry Mason ever lose a case? And if so, how many? — MARCY LECKRONE, Vancouver, Wash.

The TV Perry Mason — I assume that's the person you care about — did lose one case in his 17-year career, in 1963, when a client wouldn't reveal the evidence needed to save her. But even that one he would up winning later.

DEAR DICK: I would like to know where and what to do to become an actress. I've always had the ambition but I am afraid to get started. Please help with a possible career. — K.P.R., Davenport, Iowa.

At least you didn't say you wanted to be a star. Acting is a very tough job. And the first thing you have to do is learn your craft. Study — do all the school plays and local theater you can, then save up some money and go to New York or Los Angeles or even London and study with better teachers. Get your foundation of skill first. That's the only way.

DEAR DICK: Please settle a small wager between an acquaintance and myself. I sincerely believe that Catherine Bach of "The Dukes of Hazzard," and Barbara Bach, of the movie "Caveman," are in some way related. My intellectual friend tends to disagree. Please settle this puzzling question. — C.M. Skillman, N.J.

Your intellectual friend is right, which may be why he or she is so intellectual. No, the Bachs are not related.

DEAR DICK: I saw the "Code Red" special on ABC. Could you please tell me if there is a possibility of it becoming a TV series? — M.F., Newtown, Pa.

By the time you read this, you may have learned the answer for yourself. Yes, it is a series, at least for the time being.

DEAR DICK: After watching "High Noon Part II," my husband and I were wondering if the horses used in the shoot-out scene were really killed. It did look very real. Do they kill or maim horses in other movies? — MR. AND MRS. RANDEL ARNDT, Lawrence, Mich.

No, not in the United States. There are always representatives of the humane society on the set when movies are made with animals. And these people make sure the animals are treated as carefully as possible. In other countries, however, there are not so many precautions, and killing animals is a frequent occurrence.

DEAR DICK: Could you tell me if Ben Gazzara and David Janssen are both dead? And what were the names of their TV series? ANN WILLIAMS, Copperas Cove, Texas.

Janssen is dead, but Gazzara is alive. Ben's big series were "Arrest and Trial" and "Run for Your Life." David starred in "The Fugitive," "Richard Diamond, Private Detective," "Harry O" and "O'Hara, U.S. Treasury."

DEAR DICK: Who played Alfalfa in the "Our Gang" comedies? My friend says it was Peter Blake and I say it was someone else. Who is right? — SUE, Mesa, Ariz.

You are. Robert Blake was one of the Gang, but the late Carl Switzer played Alfalfa.

DEAR DICK: Please help several dozen people here in Williamsport! We're stumped. What was the song that Marilyn Monroe played several times in the movie, "Niagara"? — JANET MEIER, Williamsport, Pa.

It was a song called "Kiss."

DEAR DICK: Please settle an argument we are having. Some of my friends say that the Clampett family of "The Beverly Hillbillies" originally came from West Virginia. The rest of us say they lived in Tennessee before they moved to California. Who is right? A lot is riding on your answer. — DONNA JOHNSTON, Bluefield, Va.

The original scripts never defined exactly where the Clampetts came from, but supposedly they came from the Ozarks. The scripts did say that Granny (Irene Ryan) had come from Tennessee when she was a girl, but that's all.

New Show For Philbin

Sarah Purcell will co-host during the first week of "The Regis Philbin Show."

Regis Philbin, Emmy award-winning host of a morning TV show in Los Angeles for the past six years, will move to NBC Monday to headline a new, human-interest daytime series featuring interviews with Americans from all walks of life, in and out of show business.

for more than three years is most exciting for me — and will be for the viewers, too.

This is a most professional and talented lady and her success on 'Real People' is making her a major talent."

Added Purcell, "I'm really looking forward to working with Regis again. I went from 'AM Los Angeles' to my work on 'People' for George Schlatter and much of what I do on 'Real People' was learned with Regis. We're going to have a ball!"

Philbin hosted "AM Los Angeles" on KABC until this month. He won an Emmy award for hosting "AM Los Angeles" in 1979.

"This show is going to be informal and informative," said Philbin. "Above all, I believe in having fun. And that goes for the way I treat my guests and my audience, too."

"We can have a good time and still learn something about each other and about what's going on. I'll visit with anybody who is interesting — an actor, a politician, a sports hero, a mother — anybody who has something to say. But I believe in going behind the words to find out what makes people tick."

Earl D. Greenburg, vice president of daytime programs, West Coast, NBC Entertainment, said the half-hour series will be produced live some days and on tape on others, with the taped productions planned for broadcast on a one-day delay.

A regular associate will share the stage with Philbin and his guests. "Anything in this country that interests people will be a potential topic for Regis," Greenburg said.

Sarah Purcell, star of NBC's "Real People," will be reunited with Regis Philbin during the premiere week of "The Regis Philbin Show." Between 1975 and 1978, Purcell co-starred with Philbin on "AM Los Angeles."

Philbin said: "Working again with Sarah as we did
