

Brazilians Ask Abdication Of Old Trade King

Officials Would Place Cotton A Head Of Coffee In Exports

This is the second of three daily articles on cotton growing in Brazil and tells of recent developments in the industry. A subsequent article will discuss the significance of developments to growers of the United States.

By RAFAEL ORDRORICA
RIO DE JANEIRO, June 1.—Brazilian officials in official circles to demand the abdication of coffee as trade king of the country and the enthronement of cotton as the new king.

Already "white gold," as enthusiastic Brazilians call the fibre, has moved into second place as a producer of national wealth, and maintenance of the rate of expansion could soon put cotton at the top.

In his first message to congress after seven months as a constitutional president, Dr. Getulio Vargas did not attract the attention of the national legislature to his phenomenon.

"In 1930," he said, "raw cotton stood seventh in value as a national product. This year it came first after coffee, maize, sugar-beans, rice and manioc. In 1934 it had passed all except coffee."

The President said that Brazil's cotton exports to European markets "under conditions that permit competition with similar cotton from the United States" had risen to the point where they had overtaken the Liverpool and Harve breakers for mills adjusted to the new quality.

Both Brazil and France, Vargas and a recent nationalist colleague in São Paulo recommended the easing of immigration restrictions to overcome a labor shortage which has been bothering cotton-growers. The present

"São Paulo alone will need in 600 Japanese laborers this year."

It is assumed that resumption of large-scale immigration from the Orient would be followed by an opening of Japan's vast tea markets.

Cotton's part in breaking Brazil's dependence upon sugar was the subject of a speech by the National Costa, statistician-secretary of the Ministry of War, who brought out that the sugar industry is now in a position to meet its obligations.

New York State Politics Again Is In Turmoil

Washington Will Feel Important Repercussions in Fall

By BYRON PRICE

WASHINGTON, June 1.—(AP)—New York state Democratic politics is in turmoil again, and it is inevitable that Washington will feel important repercussions.

For one thing, every President is especially particular, for obvious reasons, about retaining what can best be done in his party in the home state. For another thing, New York's voting strength in national conventions and in the election of senators and governors is great.

Of course a great many other combinations also have been suggested, and apparently no final decision is in progress for weeks, or perhaps months, to come.

It is doubtful that whatever is done finally at Albany will do well with a larger scheme centering in Washington and probably involving changes in important federal jobs.

The ever-present Tammany organization explains in large part why the approach of both Washington and Albany to this problem is being delayed.

It appears that the White House has not gone along quite so well with the Tiger as may have been the case in the 1932 Democratic convention. Governor

Tammany Thursday took over the national committeemanship from the other two—Secretaries McNamee and Perkins—never having explicitly agreed in New York to do so, but the Tammanyites think that their plan will make them factors in whatever adjustment may take place.

Altogether, it may be taken for granted that every effort will be taken to keep very carefully in the highest political position in the nation's capital.

Although Governor Franklin has not reached a decision about running for reelection in 1936, there are other plain indications that he may nominate himself for his district.

Houseman has decided through the various committees of the House that the Senate is the better place to be.

According to Stephen T. Fanning, his assistant secretary, advanced continuation of NRA is most likely to be forthcoming from the Senate.

That was what Donald R. Raskin, chairman of the research committee, said yesterday in reasoning that, among other things, the Senate is more likely to be receptive to the suggestion that the House is not so well equipped to handle the bill.

Many people think Harley wants to be governor. He is expected to leave the cabinet after Congress adjourns and undergo the House campaign for reelection but will still want to be considered as a candidate.

KELLY PETILLO ON MAY 30 WON

The 500-mile Indianapolis race on Firestone Tires breaking the track record and driving the entire distance at a rate of 106.340 miles per hour.

This record is an astounding demonstration of tire efficiency. To go 500 miles in less than five hours on this rough and bumpy 26-year-old brick track, without tire trouble of any kind, demonstrates the strength and blowout protection that Firestone builds into their Gum-Dipped Tires.

AB JENKINS ALSO RECENTLY demonstrated the stamina, efficiency, and blowout protection built into Firestone Gum-Dipped Tires. He drove his 5000 pound car over the hot salt beds at Lake Bonneville, Utah,

Before you buy new tires ask yourself these three questions

1—"Will the tread give me the greatest traction and protection against skidding?"

2—"Are they built to give me the greatest blowout protection?"

3—"Do they have the important safety features will they give me longer mileage, thus making them the most economical tires I can buy?"

HIGH SPEED TYPE

This tire is designed and built with high speed in mind and is especially suited for the use of racing cars. It is manufactured for maximum speed and endurance and is particularly well suited for the racing field. The name of the manufacturer is not mentioned on the tire.
