Spanky wants his wife. Johanna, to change the name of her business now known as the Cheepo Depot, located at the corner of Route 17-92 and 13th St. in Sanford. He says people tend to think she has goods to give away. 8200 Items for 820. Give-aways.

"She had to pay for this stuff," he grumbles. "She didn't get it for free...the Salvation Army and Goodwill get their stuff for free, and sell it for a lot more than Johanna sella hera for. I can't believe that. So maybe we need a new name." Spanky sighs.

The one he has in mind is "Needful Things." And more than likely that's what it's soon going to be.

"People Just don't understand what's behind Cheepo Depot," he says . "It's not C-h-e-a-p-o

County ignores problem, former commissioner says

By VICKI DOSORMIER Herald Senior Staff Writer

Decades of fighting the system and community prejudices have created a bounty of choices for recreational activities and better work possibilities for the developmentally disabled.

The question of living accommodations is the difficult one. It is not one easily answered.

The developmentally disabled often live with their parents well into their middle age. To the parents of a developmentally disabled child, parenting is a lifelong commitment of often intensive caregiving.

But what happens when the caregivers pass away or are no longer able to care for their off-

For some, the answer is simple, though unpleasant: placement in an institution where minimal physical needs are met, and mental challenges and all independent living po-tential are stifled.

Greg Drummond, 65, whose son Christopher is developmentally disabled, describes Seminole County's only institution as "a horrible place that amelia of urine and is very crowded."

While he said the Fern Park facility does the best it can with the resources it has available, he does not believe institutional living is appropriate for the developmentally disabled. However, community leaders in Seminole County have left few other choices for parents.

"We have formulated a plan for our son and a couple of others," he said, "and we're not sure if we'll be able to do it."

Sanford affected by Amtrak's changes

By MICE PPEIFAUP Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - Rail passenger carrier Amirak is making some changes in which Sanford could become the southern most terminal for the Sunset Limited, operating between Florida and

Los Angeles. At the present time, the Sunset Limited continues south to Miami.

According to Amtrak spokesman Mark Magitari in Chicago, "There are still a few decisions which remain to be made. One suggestion is to continue the Sunset Limited through Sanford to Orlando, then back to Sanford for its home location, but no matter what we decide on this, Sanford will be the main service center for this train."

Magliari said the change comes as the result of adding a third train (the Silver Palm) to the route between the northeast and Florida. "It became a question of cost," he said. "We figure the best way to handle this is to reduct some of the distance. We'll also have to determine the cost of running the Sunset to Orlando and back, because if that's too costly, we may go to busses between Sanford and Orlando to handle our passengers beyond the stopping point."

He said the Silver Streak and Silver Meteor will continue one run each day through Sanford en route to Miami, and eventually, the Sunset Limited may also be extended. "But no matter what we decide," Magliari stresses, "Sanford will be the home service and operating station."

Meanwhile, elsewhere around the nation. concluding that less than daily service doesn't work. Amirak plans to close down four routes and return to daily service on several others in an effort to save money and increase income.

Faced with a potential $258-million deficit for 1997, the national passenger railroad said Thursday that it will make sweeping changes in . its service effective Nov. 10.

The changes will increase Amtrak service for 131 cities but eliminate it for 42 other communities, the agency said. The result is expected to save nearly $200 million.

That will still leave the railroad looking at an almost $60 million shortfall for 1997, a year in which Congress is moving to cut its requested subsidy by $50 million.

The four lines to be eliminated are:

 Pioneer, currently three-times-weekly service between Chicago, Denver, Portland, Ore, and Seattle, will be discontinued between Denver and Seattle. Other service continues between Portland and Seattle and between Chicago and Denver.

Desert wind, now three-times-weekly between Chicago, Denver, Salt Lake City, Las Vegas and Los Angeles will be discontinued between Salt Lake City and Los Angeles. #### Cities target unfunded mandates

BOCA RATON, Fig. - Cities in the Sunshine State are sick of federal and state governments forcing them to pass laws without providing any funding, the incoming president of the Florida League of Cities said Saturday.

"They get the credit and we get the bill," said Jim Naugle, mayor of Fort Lauderdale during a break at the league's annual convention. "If it is important enough to enact a law by local government then send along funds."

Naugle said in Fort Lauderdale the city was forced to spend 8500,000 for a federal permit on a storm water runoff proposal. "It's been three years and we are still waiting for a silly permit," he said.

Cities are hoping to come up with consensus legislation that would prohibit unfunded mandates and give municipalities

Hundreds of cities were represented at the league's 70th annual convention. Representatives also explored ways to use the Internet to promote their cities and cut costs.

Law enforcement can download information on criminals and citizens can look up ordinances, neighborhood associations and job information on a city's home page.

"We are just getting started," Naugle said. "We will allow people to visit city hall by just going to a computer."

SANFORD — Sanford native Lynda "Lyn" Donato, in the seventh person to publicly an-nounce she is seeking election as mayor of the city of sanford this

Other candidates include Bob Thomas, Larry Blair, A.A. Mc-Cianahan, Larry Dale, Dean Ray, and Vernon Spears. Several others have indicated they are considering running, but are not willing to make any public pronouncement at this time.

Each of the candidates has reportedly opened a campaign account which allows them to collect money for their cam-paigns. The candidacies won't be official however, until qualifying time, which, for the city of Sanford, is Sept. 4 through noon, Oct. 29. Sanford's election is on Dec. 3.

At the present time, Donato, along with her husband and Donato attended the University of Maryland, and is in the process of obtaining a bachelor's degree from Barry University.

My decision to campaign for the mayor's seat comes from desires to make Sanford magnificent and to bring CHANGE to our city," she my "This can happen only by empowering the citisens."

"Tapping into the growth and development potential in the downtown shopping and historic area is late," she says. "Surrounding communities are progressing, while flanford remains in recession. Local government must be compelled to include the residents and merchants in all debates and decision making processes."

Among her observations about the present status, she com-mented, "Workshops occur at a time when the majority of the residents and merchants are unable to attend. Our city codes are out of control, yet our streets are dirty."

She says she will focus her campaign on several concerns; crime, a shortage of honesty (within the corridors of city hall), access, neighborhoods, growth, and environment.

Donato has been marted for 16 years and has one child.

LARGO. Fla. - A man who went to prison for shooting his flancee because she left him 17 years ago went through the same scenario with another woman last week.

This time, though, Richard Waddell Coleman succeeded in taking two lives: the woman he planned to marry and his own.

In 1979, Knihy Harrelson told Coleman she wouldn't marry him. Coleman chased down the 20-year-old Sanford woman as she drove home in east Hillsborough County, rammed her car and shot her.

Then he went to her parents' house nearby and shot the woman's father.

On Thursday, it happened again near Largo. Coleman shot Jennifer Fresch several times in front of her apartment, said Pinellas County sheriff's spokeswoman Marianne Pasha.

Then Coleman put a bullet in his own head. He died a short time later at Bayfront Medical

● Darius Ledrell Beamon, 20, 1699 E. 10th St., Sanford, and Miller Adolthus Brown, 35, 1003 Cypress Ave., Sanford, were arrested for possession of cocaine with intent to distribute by Sanford Police on Thursday.

Police said they were executing a search warrant and searching the residence at 1206 Elm Ave., Sanford, when they noticed a car parked in the alley behind the house. The car contained three passengers, but no driver.

They said they asked the passengers to step from the car.

Two juveniles, neither of whom had a criminal record, were in the car. Brown was the third passenger.

Interviewed separately, the two juveniles told police Brown had entered the car and handed a baggie containing crack cocaine to Beamon who exited the car. They said Beamon had been the driver.

Police found a baggie containing individually packaged pieces of crack cocaine in the car.

Brown was arrested and Beamon was taken into custody a short time later. Each was held at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility on $5,000 bond.

OBobble L. Rouse, 34, 1811 W. 16th St., Sanford, was arrested for selling and possessing cocaine and for possessing and using drug paraphernalia on Thursday by Seminole County sheriff's deputies.

Deputies said they stopped Rouse because he was known to them and because they knew he had on outstanding warrant. As they prepared to arrest him, they said, they found a crack pipe in his pocket and a vial with six individually packaged pieces of crack cocaine.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $5,000 bond. During booking, deputies said, he told another inmate,

They stole my dope, now I can't get out." • Latoshia Veresse Bingham, 23, 1206 Elm Ave., Sanford, was arrested for possession of cocaine on Thursday, by Sanford

Police. Police said they were executing a search warrant at her residence when they found her exiting the bathroom. When they entered the bathroom, they found an unspecified amount of crack cocaine rocks floating in the toilet. She was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $3,000 bond.

I am further outraged that Sheriff Kevin Beary, whom I believe has clearly demonstrated his concern for the residents of Orange County, was forced to learn of this new Orange County, was forced to learn of this new "resident" by reading it in the newspaper or by watching TV.

As a taxpayer, I am sickened that our teenage daughters, wives and loved ones would be forced to live in fear . . . waiting for Crutchley to attack again - which statistically, there is a high probability he will. As the newspaper states, this man is suspected of committing four other sleyings but was never charged. Because of his release, our families would live in fear and be subjected to nothing less than "community stalking" by a known rapiet and suspected killer.

As an elected State Representative, representing some of the families of the community-at-large where this felon would reside had he not violated his probation, I am appalled. This is another example of how the criminal Dijustice system needs additional reform. I

I know very little about politics but escapionally I listen to or watch a program. I've always felt like Pat Buchanan was as good as most men in Washington, D.C.

After the Republican party, Bob Dole and the news media demonized and tried to destroy him, I lest all respect for them.

One man's struggle to save a generation

WASHINGTON-Even without the Olympics, we need to talk about heroism. Even without we need to talk about herotsm. Even without astounding sports achievements-like gymnast Kerri c'rug's cinema-ready vault into history-there'd be people like Joe Marshall.

What makes a guy like Joe Marshall.

When Strug's courage got me thinking about herotsm, I called Marshall, 49, whom you may have seen on "Oprah" or on CBS, and who in 1994 won a MacArthur "genius" award. Marshall's recent autobiography, "Street Soldier: One Man's Struggle to Save a Generation--One Life at a Time," exemplifies a different-kind of herotsm. different kind of heroism.

Marshall, who founded the Omega Boys Club in 1967, has improved, and in some cases saved, the lives of dozens of at-risk kids. Which means he has saved the world.

A San Francisco Bay Area middle school math teacher for 18 years. Marshall once believed that "if young people could survive my academic rigor, they'd have productive lives."

Then he was changed. by "too many."

Too many of his students, he says, were getting "caught up" in the street life. Too many walked up to me and said. You were the best teacher I ever had .- and I didn't recognize them because they were strung out on crack." Too many girls visited his class, "giving me a hug with one arm and holding two babies in the other. ... Too often, a colleague said, 'Joe, wear

a suit tomorrow,' for the funeral of a student killed in gang violence."

Realizing that for many students, "55 minutes a day wasn't producing the result I wanted and they wanted," Marshall felt he had to do something.

That's always the hard part: doing something. Even as we all gasping at Olympians' exploits, most of us know that our own mettle can be proved on a smaller stage. Sometimes, just doing something-in a world that suggests nothing can be done--is the best heroism. Marshall's solution: the Omega Boys Club, "an academic, drug-free, violence prevention organization" for young people, 40 percent of whom are girls.

When keeping kids alive and out of prison is your priority, you tell children you've just met, "we will be your family." ... We will try to give (you) guidance, discipline, love, a college education." Currently, Omega has 80 students in colleges across the country, through donations from individuals, corporations and foundations. More than 30 Omegas are college grade.

grads.
"With such a priority," says Marshall, who's currently on leave from the San Francisco school district, "you learn what works. "Want to know what doesn't work," at least by itself? "Opportunity. A good woman. ... Good intentions.

Nothing can work, he stresses, without someone first "going inside and dealing with these kids" anger, fear and pain. ... Some people believe these guys are monsters. ... But knew them at 12."

"What works is changing the way people

Marshall, who'll be featured in an upcoming PBS series, says that more people don't step up to their own latent heroism for the same reasons that some kids go astray: a preoccupation with self. "Lack of time, resources-they're excuses. The kids are doing ... in illegal, destructive ways, what society tells them--that it's about me, my house, my car. ... It's not about other people."

Slow down to human speed limit

BOSTON--From the very beginning it feels as much like a documentary as a fantasy. This is the story of one man's life, circa 1996, stretched thin over the cracks between work and family. It even offers a motto for the era: "My whole life's an emergency!"

At work, our hero Doug has just been handed a second job for the paycheck of one. At home, he guiltily catches up on his daughter's graduation from Camp Fire Girls via videotape.

Putting it in a nutshell--a hard one to crack--the L.A.contractor and father describes his life this way. Work is first. Family a close second. I'm a distant third.

Pamily a close second. I'm a distant third. Bringing up the rear."

This is the setup for "Multiplicity" a midsummer, mid-life escape movie for folks who won't pay a baby sitter to watch the White House blow up. It's the fantasy for working parents skating ahead of the cracking ice, folks who don't have the leeway for one bad day and who want the same thing for Christmas, for their birthday, their thing for Christmas, for their birthday, their anniversary: "Time! Time! Time!"
Way back in the 1980s, when people still talked about role reversal, Michael Keaton played "Mr. Mom." Now it's the 1990s and Michael Keaton is back starring in a role with hardly any maneuvering room.

Just when men and women figure out how to share the burden of family and work, the load has gotten too big for two people to carry. Today, in most families he's working (overtime) and abe's working or about to be. The American family, as Keaton's wife says, "Doesn't need a schedule, it needs a miracle."

"Doesn't need a schedule, it needs a miracle."
But "Multiplicity" comes up with a miracle, the one special effect that a stressed-out nation really wants Hollywood to create: a clone. Or two. Or three.

With the help of an only slightly mad scientist, Doug reproduces Doug 2 to go to work, then Doug 3 to take care of the home. They in turn produce the dimwitted Doug 4. And together they make as appealing a

And together they make as appealing a movie about male life as we've seen in years.

By now, Hollywood has been through an entire Rolodex of "new male" roles. Some of the men in movies could only change their ways if they were shot in the head, such as Harrison Ford in "Regarding Henry" or dressed in drag such as Robin Williams in "Mrs. Doubtfire."

Occasionally, an Arnold Schwarzenegger was enlightened by pregnancy, only to return, in a postpartum depression, to his terminating ways. Tom Hanks appeared as the "new men" playing a child in "Big," or an idiot in "Forrest Gump."

Elt's the fantasy for the working parents skating ahead of the cracking ice.

But now the same director who condemned Bill Murray to repeat "Groundhog Day" until the self-centered cad became sensitive, has given Michael Keaton multiple personalities.

I know what I should like best about "Multiplicity." The movie offers a supporting cast for one of my pet and perverse theories. While all the world is promoting the two-parent family. I have long believed that we needed at least a three long believed that we needed at least a three-parent family to get everything done. This is a scenario that makes polyandry look practical.

Still, what's really most appealing about this family movie is the more subtle message about the changes men and women have gone through. The message says that for all the stress of partnership marriages, the "Time! Time! Time!" spent trying to balance work and family, our lives are actually richer when they are not limited to one sphere or another.

On the acreen, Doug rediscovers this the hard--and funny--way. When Doug 2 is apun off to do the job, he slowly becomes a tougher, edgier piece of work. When Doug 3 is restricted to homekeeping, he starts getting obsessed with the right way to wrap leftovers.

As the comedy appracrat of control, the

As the comedy spins out of control, the cione club doesn't function very well. It turns out that the original isn't as happy when his roles are subcontracted out. He doesn't really want life subdivided back into its

For a generation, we've been creating whole lives out of the old male and female parts. We still want it all. We just want a little less of it all.

Want to know the final '90s fantasy on and off the acreen? It's the desire to slow life down to the human speed limit. Now that's a thought worth cloning.

Everyday heroes

People need to know that you can be a hero by how you live your life.

I have heroes in my life. They're not sports figures. I love baskethall. I really do. But how heroic is it to practice hard, play hard "sometimes" and make millions of dollars?

Who are my home? Some are femous. Summer E. Anthony. Juliete Gorden Low, Jacques Costeau, Jonas Salk...people who have made a difference in our world, people who have made it better.

But I have many heroes you have never heard of. My sister Teresa graduated from college and tried to get into medical school. It was 1978 and their quota of women was full. So she went to the medical school as a graduate student in anatomy. Don't just check your doctor's diploma. Check their grades. Teresa tutored a lot of students who got into the medical program she couldn't get into. They were sons of doctors, and, therefore, a shoe-in. They were making D's.

The amount of sexist behavior she had to put up with would have been overwhelming for most people. (It took only one very demeaning sexist remark from my trigonometry teacher for me to give up math completely, a subject I liked and was good

But my sister kept her head up high and got her masters degree in anatomy. She should have had a doctorate, but that story would make you really anti-male. She applied at a different medical school and got in. This school looked at her grades, her ability, and her test acores, not its quota of women. She got a scholarship from the state of Georgia. Toward the end of her residency, she realised she wanted to pay off the state of Georgia. You see, the terms of the scholarship stated that she had to specialize in what they said and go where they said. So she began moonlighting. While keeping up her regular work schedule 'in during the week and believe me, they work residents like dogs, she worked weekends at small emergency rooms around the state. By the end of her residency, she was no longer obligated to the state.

My sister's specialty is internal medicine. She has many elderly patients.

She doesn't talk to them in a condescending manner or an impatient manner. She says "sir" and "ma'am" to everyone. You cannot imagine how much that means to some of the nursing home patients who come in. Or to some of the housewives who are not always treated with the respect they deserve

My sister is my hero because she persevered through adversity and she didn't become bitter, she became better.

Maybe if we pay more attention to heroes like my sloter, young people will realize that heroism is within their grasp. not by hurting others, or becoming a basketball star, but by living truly good, decent lives. By standing our moral ground. By living up to our potential. By making our corner of the world a little better to live in.

Seminole County: room at the inn

Herald Staff Writer

The University of Central Florida College of Business Administration has released the results of a June occupancy survey for hotels and motels in Seminole, Orange and Occeola Counties.

The data presented was reported for both this year and last year, based only on responses received from pro-perties in the survey area before the survey deadline time period.

While figures indicate Orange and Occeole have both reported increases in occupancy. Seminole County has come out in the survey as having a 2.42 percent decrease compared to its occupancy level in June of 1995.

In Osceola County, the survey showed a 2.85 percent increase in occupancy rates this June, while there was a 2.18 percent increase in Orange County over the preceeding June.

Further analysis of the overall
June, 1996 data indicates that small size properties (less than 201 rooms) showed the largest increase of 4.78 percent. Large properties. (over 400 rooms) showd a decrease of 1.36 per-

Occupancy percentage increased by 4.69 percent in properties with an Average Daily Rate (ADR) of up to $40.01 and by 1.62 percent in properties with prices per night above that level, up to 600. Properties with one-night charges of over $90 decreased by 1.36 percent compared to their levels in June.

Rooms in the Kissimmee East area increased in occupancy by 5.84 percent. South Orange Blossom Trail were up 5.62 percent, and Lake Buena Vista/ Walt Disney World Increased 1.87 percent.

Seminole County, Kissimmee

West and East Orlando/Airport reproted a decrease of 2.42, 1.22 and 0.97 percents respectively. The majority of the properties responding from these three regions however, reported an increase in their occupancy rates with only a few reporting drops, which survey officials say made the overall average occupancy rates result in the

A total of eight hotels/motels responded to the UCF survey in Seminole County. They represented 1,556 rooms, down 30 from the previous year. Average occupancy of the units (for the month of June only), was 62.65 percent, compared to 65.07 percent a year ago.

For the first six months of the year however, the figures were better than during the one-month period of June. Seminole County hotels and motels reported an increase in occupancy from 72.64 percent in 1995 to 73.77 percent in 1996.

In overall room rates, the average reported in Lake Buena Vista/Walt Disney World was the highest averaging $116.48 per night. Kissimmee West was the lowest at $43.99 per night. In comparison, Seminole County indicated an average cost of 968.85 per night.

Pesticide bill only the beginning of the new era

AP Form Writer

WASHINGTON - Consumers, especially children, will be getting fresh assurances about the safety of their fruits, vegetables and other crop foods because of pesticide legislation that Congress passed last week.

President Clinton says he will sign the bill, which gave farmers, the food industry and environmentalists something to It may take years, though, before the pesticide bill is carried out. The Environmental Protection Agency must look at some 9,000 existing pesticides and new ones on the way. Courts will likely have a role in deciding what key parts of the hastily crafted bill mean.

Despite the workload, the EPA can target the most worrisome pesticides. The bill says one-third of the tolerances - limits on pesticide residues — must be examined within three years.

The bill also adds to the list of health concerns that regulators must look at when setting allowable traces of pesticides in foods. Not only must regulators look at the cancer risk. They must also look at possible nerve damage, birth defects and reproductive harm from pesticides.

SANFORD - Oral contraceptive pills have been in use in the country for greater than 30 years.

They have proven to be effective for many women who have chosen to avoid pregnancy. However, birth control pills have created complications for some patients, particularly those with underlying heart disease, blood vessel problems, previous blood clots, diabetes, high blood pressure, as well as patients over the age of 35 who smoke.

Many pill users are aware of the controversy regarding health risks associated with birth control pills. However, I have found there are very few patients who understand the number of advantages associated with birth control pills.

Birth control pills work by blocking the function of the ovaries. It stops the production of egg formation in the overy.

This reduces the number of 'ovarian cysts' produced in afflicted with this recurrent condition, this offers some hope for relief and avoids surgery in Menstrual cramps also tend to be less severe. Some women will experience a decrease in their menstrual flow. In some cases low blood counts resulting from excessive bisecting with periods can be avoided. The contraceptive advantage of birth control pills is obvious. The birth control formulation has 99 percent theoretical effectiveness for the prevention of pregnancy. There are advantages aside from contraception. Pill users tend to have more predictable and regular periods. This avoids unexpected bleeding.

For those patients who may be at risk for ectopic pregnancy (tubal pregnancy), this again may allow them to avoid pregnancy and the complications which can arise from this ide-threatening problem.

One of the more extraordinary rewards with the use of birth control is a reduction in female cancer. Cancer of the unterus and cancer of the ovaries are substantially reduced in longterm pill users.

The risk of breast cancer appears to be unaffected with the use of the pill.

For those patients who are considering pregnancy in the near future the pill offers an excellent option. When pill use is stopped, fertility returns. This casy reversibility makes the birth control pill a popular choice for female contraception.

It is true that birth control pills may give limited protection from sexually transmitted diseases (STDs). But due to the high failure rate it can not be recommended.

Barrier protective measures (condoms) are more effective in protecting against STDs. The pill should not be relied upon in any situation where a sexually transmitted disease is a concern.

The pill should be strongly considered for those patients who have a low risk for complications.

therapy

For those young women with family histories significant for reproductive cancer (particularly ovarian and uterine cancer), the pill may be advisable and strongly encouraged. Those patients with menstrual disturbances may benefit form the use of birth control pills.

Finally, those patients who are over the age of 35 who have menstrual disturbances, who are non-emokers without other risk factors can be considered for the use of birth control pills.

The pill can be continued until menopause (change of life).

I would suggest each reproductive-age female discuss with her healthcare provider. A review of the risk factors such as emoking, being overweight and ongoing health problems should be thouroughly discussed.

If the choice appears reasonable, the pill can be used with confidence.

WASHINGTON - Don't expect to mind-game your way to a sports victory. Sports psychologists who claim you can may instead make a victory harder to get, according to a noted sports psychologist.

Much of the accepted sports-psych wisdom is based on guesawork and some of the guesses are bad, said William P. Morgan of the University of Wisconsin. Some concepts are proven and do work, but sports psychology is too new and has too little solid research to give coaches and athletes consistent value, he said.

Coaches and athletes are partly to blame for encouraging this, Morgan said. They want quick fixes, and they find psychologists who offer to de-tiver them, he said. As a result, sports psychologists who try to offer practical advice often bess it on intuition, poorly designed sports studies or

The problem is that cierical work or assembly line production doesn't require the same physical skills or have the same pressure, he said. Nor are cierts and factory workers commonly gifted with the skills of elite athletes, he said.

And the mind-body relation-ship often doesn't work the way the experts expect, Morgan said.

psychologists think a player should use relaxation techniques to prevent anxiety from interfering with performance, Morgan said. But, while this seems to work with some athletes, others need to be keyed up because they perform poorly when they are highly relaxed. and yet others seem to perform best in the middle, he said. Paradoxically, some people who do mental relaxation exercises find their tension increases, he Amtrak said it plans to restore the former Broadway Limited service between New York and Chicago, though it probably won't have that name.

The railroad will run the current New York-Pittsburgh Three Rivers service through to Chicago. The current Capitol Limited between Washington and Chicago will also continue but the former time-consuming connection in Pittsburgh will no longer be necessary for New York passengers.

Four routes where part of the operation was cut back last year will be restored to daily service. They are the Empire Builder between Chicago and Seattle, California Zephyr between Chicago and San Francisco, Crescent between New York and New Orleans and the City of New Orleans between Chicago and New Orleans.

Nearly 20 percent of the railroad's routes were cut back or eliminated in 1995 in an effort to shrink the deficit, but initial savings on routes cut to less than daily service didn't continue, said Mark Cane, president of Amtrak's Intercity Strategic Business Unit.

"You either have to be daily in a market or not in a market." Cane said. "We can't figure out a ladder that's tall enough for us to get out of the financial hole these trains are in," Cane said of the routes slated for closing.

Amtrak President Thomas Downs said the changes were being announced now to allow people time to prepare. The cuts will cost about 400 jobs, he said.

The Amtrak board will meet to finalize the decision in September, Downs said. But he said the changes will occur "absent some miracle."

vide care "with reasonable promptness to all eligible individuals."

Steven Weinger, a Miami attorney representing the John and Jane Does, said Ferguson will be asked to block budget cuts that eliminate state money for privately run institutions for the retarded, leaving 2,176 without a home.

That is vital for parents like Gerry Tucker, 62, a retired teacher whose retarded son. John. 37, is a resident of Miami's Sunrise independent care facility for the developmentally disabled.

The budget cuts will add $31,000 a year to the cost of his care, Tucker said. "I can't do that much."

"Some parents are concerned about their advancing age and what's going to happen to their children," added Tucker, who is a Sunrise board member. "All of our years are limited."

Sometimes, the developmentally disabled wait 18 years for placement in an institution. Only the deaths of their parents moves them to the head of the list, said House Aging and Human Services Chairwoman Mary Brennan, D-Pinellas Park.

Estimates of the cost of eliminating such waiting lists vary wildly.

Terry Farmer, president of the Florida Association of Rehabilitative Facilities, estimated that up to 10,000 are on HRS rolls awaiting care - and up to an additional 10,000 need abled, he said. care who are not even on waiting Jason Vail, an assistant attorney general representing the state, said if lawmakers face that kind of cost to wipe out waiting lists "it's a distinct possibility they would eliminate the service entirely.

"Once a state elects to provide part of the state Medicald plan and is subject to the require-ments of federal law," Ferguson ruled July 22.

If Ferguson orders the state to immediately wipe out the waiting lists, the state probably will appeal to the U.S. 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, Vail said.

tion next week to excite doubting Republicans.

Dole had hoped to keep his choice of vice presidential running mate a surprise until today's event. But even as American flags were being stationed Friday along Main Street for today's formal announcement, GOP activists were voicing enthusiasm about the selection of Kemp, a sometime Dole antagonist.

Kemp arrived at a small airport about 35 miles from here early today and spent the night at a motel in Great Bend.

Dole campaign spokesman Nelson Warfield said Dole was pleased with the newspaper coverage of his decision and particularly "impressed that (former New York Gov.) Mario Cuomo had called the choice formidable."

Campaign sources said Dole made the offer - and Kemp accepted - in a 15-minute telephone call late Friday night. The pair planned a triumphant entrance at the GOP's San Diego convention alte on Sunday.

Dole's choice ends a months-long review in which Dole sifted through a handful of popular governors and three former Senate colleagues before turning late to Kemp.

Just a month ago. Kemp predicted his stormy relationship with Dole - and a history of deep differences over economic policy - would keep him from being considered. But by Friday, the 61-year-old former pro football player's tune had changed. Quarterbacks are always ready," he declared.

The Dole team also was ready, arriving here with a vice presidential staff assembled and former Commerce Department official Wayne Berman at the helm as manager. Veteran GOP strategist Chartie Black, who ran Texas Sen. Phil Gramm's unsuccessful primary bid this year, was also drafted.

Democrata greeted Kemp's selection with footballs bearing the slogan: "Hall Mary Pass." But Cuomo, called the ticket "formidable" and said Kemp could hurt Democrats by appealing to minority Indeed, as word of Kemp's selection spread through San Diego, where Dole-Kemp Tshirts were already on sale, reaction among the GOP faithful was overwhelmingly positive.

But a walk through downtown Russell suggested Kemp was not a surefire hit with all voters.

'Who? I don't know him. It should be a woman. They never pick a woman," complained Kaylee Karst, a clerk at Don Dawson Pharmacy.

Dole and Kemp have been rivals - and antagonists - for years. They were unsuccessful candidates for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination, and both were passed over as a running mate for George Bush.

At the root of most Dole-Kemp feuds has been economics: Dole is a deficit hawk determined to balance the federal budget; Kemp a supply-side apostle supporting deep tax cuts and economic growth before balancing the Dole's new economic plan bridges both camps, and it was during deliberations over its $548 billion in tax cuts that Kemp emerged as a serious vice presidential contender.

"But I don't know yet if the county will let us turn this into a group home," he said. "The county has not been very accommodating to the develop-mentally disabled."

According to Drummond. Seminole County government has repeatedly balked at the formation of a task force to address the problems of the developmentally disabled.

"As for affordable housing, we have been told that 'those people' do not belong in the county's affordable housing," he noted. If the county denies the request to zone their home as a group living facility, Drummond said he has made arrangements for his older son to care for Christopher when the time

Marie Daniels, whose son David is developmentally disabled and approaching his 42nd birthday said she did not consider his care until she celebrated her 70th birthday.

"It's something you just try not to think about, but at some point you have to face your own mortality and you have to make accommodations for your children," she said.

Daniels said she has been "blessed with good friends and good family." One of her nieces has agreed to care for David after her death.

"She's only 40 and she's taking on this lifelong responsibility," Daniels said. "But she loves David and understands that he needa care.'

David is, fortunately, fairly independent and can care for his personal needs.

Really, he just needs some assistance with decision-making and financial matters," Daniels said.

She has, she said, had good fortune. Others are not so lucky. "I don't know what I would do without her (her niece)," she said. "I couldn't imagine having to put him in an institution."

Some mentally challenged residents of Seminole County. like Mike Bird, are living on their own even as their parents are still living.

'Mike has his own spartment and he has a job (as head bagger at the Sanford Food Lion store) that he rides his bike to and from every day. He does his own sadry, cooks his own meals keeping," explained Tracy Balint, a psychologist with SWOP (Seminole Work Oppor-tunity Program). "His mother comes in to help him with paying the bills and balancing the checkbook and things like that. When his mother passes on, he will be able to continue on with needs, including making her mother's meals and making sure she is dressed and ready for work at SWOP. "I have to make arrangements for her if I have to do something after work," she said. "It's a full-time job."

While she said the job is a difficult and often oppressive one, she would not think of placing her mother in an institution.

"This is what families are for," she said, noting that her daughter and granddaughter would soon join her household.

There will be all of us in this house and we will all take care of each other," she said. "I've always wanted one of those big extended families. Now I've got II. And I think this is what my mother needs and wants as well."

In Seminole County, Drummond said, the shortage of living facilities for mentally challenged residents can be attributed to the "elitist attitude" of the county government.

The message that is being sent to these people, natives of Seminole County, is 'GET OUT'. and we must change that, Drummond, a former Seminole County commission chairman.

said. Drummond added that most of the aging parents of middle aged developmentally disabled adults are "burned out" after 40 years or more of fighting the barriers that have been thrown up in their way. The most vocal of the advocates for the mentally challenged are the parents of young children.

"As things open up, it is the programs for children which are benefiting." Drummond said. "That is important, but we need to give more consideration to the housing and care of older (developmentally disabled) residents of Seminole County."

was before. According to Curry, the drug dealers have a strong drive-up business in the parking lot of the Southwest Food Market on Southwest Road. It has not slowed one lots, he said, despite community efforts to close it (the drug trade) down.

Undersheriff Steve Harriett said Curry has been "hell-bent" on getting the store, which is owned by Alex YI. closed down under the nuisance law that allows local governmental agencies to shut down businesses which are deemed to be a threat to the safety and wellbeing of the community.

Harriett said Yi "is a victim" of the drug trade. He praised the store owner for the efforts he has made to try and resolve the problem in cooperation with the community.

"The nulsance law doesn't apply here," Harriett said.

Curry insists the community residents are doing all that can be done, including calling in descriptions, tag numbers and other specifies about criminal activity they witness.

The problem lies, he said, in the fact that law enforcement and government don't care about the community.

"Absolutely untrue," said Commissioner Daryl McLain. "The initiative (to clean up the Lockhart area) is moving along at a fast pace." Two weeks ago, he pointed out, a county-sponsored cleanup effort helped residents rid the streets and vacant areas of trash. Trustles from the John E. Polk Correctional Facility assisted residents in the effort.

Some abandoned buildings along Southwest Road near the railroad tracks, which might have housed drug activity, are being torn down this week. McLain said.

Harriett offered assurances that the Lockhart community, especially along Southwest Road, was a priority enforcement area for the sheriff's office.

"We are doing all that we can," he said. "Within the last month we have added two more deputies in that area. It is a real concern for us."

Harriett noted that "the justice system to not dealing with these individuals (those arrested on drug charges) in a meaningful WEY.

Until those arrested are incarcerated for a maximum period of time, Harriett said, the problem of drug dealers on Southwest Road, or anywhere, would not be resolved.

Curry said the daug trade is thriving at the food store. Yi responds that things are getting better, but acknowledges there are still dealers working in his parking lot.

Seminole frosh use aerobics for conditioning

SANFORD - At first, the whole idea seemed stupid. The last thing the Seminole High freshman football team felt like doing was going out into the baking sun every week during summer vacation to, well, dance

"I thought it would be goofy." incoming freshman Clarence Latimer said. "It sounded like it was something for girls but the 11th graders told us it would help."

What Latimer is talking about is coach Scott Casko and his idea of introducing aerobic danct to the Seminoles pre-season conditioning program. Casko said his team last year showed up for the first day of official practice a bit winded and out of shape so he turned to his wife. Valerie, a certified aerobics instructor for help.

Valerie Casko is the owner of Valerie Marie's Weilness in Longwood and has spent 20 years in the health and fitness field. She offered to teach aerobics to anyone interested and Scott Casko sent out

Orlando trades Tompson for Spencer

Associated Press

Strikers (Alabama) 2

SALT LAKE CITY - The Orlando Magic strengthened their center position Friday by acquiring Felton Spencer from the Utah Jazz for guard Brooks Thompson, forward Kenny Gattison and an undetermined first-round draft pick.

The Jazz re-signed the 7-foot Spencer earlier in the day, but terms were not disclosed. Orlando needed a center after losing free agent Shaquille O'Neal to the Los Angeles

Lakers. Jon Koncak was the Magic's only other center.

The 7-foot Spencer was acquired by the Jazz from Minnesota in June 1993 for Mike Brown. Spencer played three seasons in Utah, his best being 1994-95 when he averaged 9.3 points and 7.6 rebounds.

Spencer ruptured an Achilles' tendon in January 1995, and missed the first 11 games of this past season rehabilitating. He did play in 71 games — starting all but one — but averaged just 17.8 minutes. He averaged 5.6 points and 4.3 rebounds.

Thompson, 6-4, was drafted by the Magic in the first round of the 1994 draft out of Oklahoma State. Last season he played in 33 games, and averaged 4.2 points.

Gattison, 6-8, who began his NBA career in Phoenix in 1986, was acquired by Orlando in a trade with Vancouver for Jeff Turner last January. He averaged 9.2 points and 4.6 rebounds in 25 games last season. He spent time on the injured list with a pinched nerve in his Casko has coached the freshman for two years but he has been at the school for 10. His team is coming off a $-3 re-cord but has high hopes coming into the season. More on that leter.

Casko distributed manuals to the incoming freshmen detailing what would be expected of them when the first official practices start, in about two weeks. Potential players have a program of weightlifting, conditioning and agility drills that are not mandatory but recommended. Come the first day of practice, it should be easy to tell who followed the manual and who spent the summer watching television.

Wednesdays are conditioning days and that's where the aerobics come in. Cosko said he expected about 10 players for the first gathering, instead he got about 30. Valerie Casko knew some of the kids would be skeptical so she mixes football moves in with dance moves and plays music that the ninth-graders can relate to.

"The kids have been very receptive," Valerie Casko said. "After the first time they said it's time to get ready to roll. These guys jam. If they can't pick up the moves right away, seem to mind. In 97 degree heat, the players sweated with Valerie for 45 non-stop minutes before doing sprints around the track. It has been a valuable addition

"First they looked at me like, yeah, right." Valerie Casko said. "Then they realized they enjoyed it."

More than 1,200 girls from 70 teams, including two teams from the Seminole Softball Club, have been playing at the Seminole County Softball Complex and the Merrill Park Softball Complex since Wednesday.

The championship game is set for around noon today at the Seminole County Softball Complex. located at 260 North Street near Sanlando Park off Douglas Road.

This tournament would give the young ladies of Seminole County a good opportunity to see how the game of fast pitch softball is played and maybe create some interest about getting a good

Junior Olympic program started locally. The tournament was down to its final four undefeated teams and final 12 teams overall Saturday afternoon.

The final four undefeated teams were all from California with the Southern California Cruisers facing Tuff-E-Nuff in game 129 and the California Grapettes taking on the Southern Califronia Stealth in game 130.

In Loser's Bracket: Game No. 125 - SK Gold Rush (Texas) vs. Louisiana Reflections: Game No. 126 — Lake Jackson Gators (Texas) vs. TBA: Game No. 127 — Strike Force (California) vs. Ultimate Oklahoma: Game No. 128 - Miami Mini-Canea va. Southern California Aftershock. Individually the tournament has been highlighted by three perfect games. Elena Ferrero hurled the first perfect game for the Southern California Stealth in an 8-0 victory over the Miami Mini-Canes.

Not to be outdone. Ferrero's teammate. Cristine Wann, matched her with another 6-0 no-no over the Louisiana Reflections.

The third perfect game was hurled by Rachel

100 E 1 Riley's zeal loses Howard

Francis II, 1:26p.m.
Les Angeles (Antocio 6-7) el Cincinnet

MIAMI — The worst loss in Miami Heat histo-

an be blamed on the coach. and to believe, but so is life on Mars. Pat Riley went on a free-agent shopping spree. and when he exceeded his budget, it cost the eam Juwan Howard.

The loss reverses the direction of a franchise that was on the verge of becoming a major force in the NBA, and it may take years for the Heat to Riley's response underscores the gravity of the situation, which has rendered the ever-eloquent coach speechless — publicly at least — for nearly is he angry? Anguished? Apoplectic? Riley won't say, and neither will anyone else with the organization.

Heat owner Micky Arison hired basketball's most celebrated coach a year ago to build a championship team, and this summer was Riley's chance. He began the offsesson $13.6 million below the salary cap with just three players under contract, giving him maximum maneuversbility in the NBA's biggest free-agent market ever.

Riley signed forward P.J. Brown, re-signed guard Tim Hardaway and then landed his biggest catch by luring Howard away from the Washington Bullets. Pairing the 23-year-old All-Star forward with returning center Alonso Mourning immediately boosted Miami into the league's upper echelon.

Two weeks later, the NBA voided Howard's seven-year, $100.8 million contract, saying it exceeded the Heat's salary cap. The ruling provided an opening for Howard, who apparently had a change of heart about leaving Washington and re-signed with the Bullets.

Riley is not exactly the most popular coach in the NBA, and the rest of the league is trying to suppress guffaws at the Heat's predicament.

"Nothing like this has happened before."
Orlando Magic general manager Pat Williams It happened to Riley because, in a fit of zeal, he tried to squeeze too many big contracts under the The TEAN said he falled to count incentive bonusse in contracts for Brown and Hardaway against the cap. Incentives considered likely to be achieved — such as the Heat winning 43 games, one more than last season — must be counted. The NBA also said the Heat reached an undisclosed agreement with Mourning on a seven-year. $112 million deal before signing Howard. That further reduced the available money, the league said.

Either Riley didn't know the rules, or he tried to bend them and got caught.

Regardless, the impact of losing Howard will extend beyond the coming season. Every personnel decision Riley has made was geared to this summer, because it provided a rare chance to restructure the roster.

But now Mourning's contract leaves little room under the cap. It may be years before the Heat can sign another free agent of Juwan Howard's

Some blame NBA Commissioner David Stern for the flacco, saying he has a vendette against Riley dating back to the coach's departure from the New York Knicks.

"That's incorrect," league spokesman Chris Briensa said, "That's not how we operate. We will vigorously protect the integrity of the salary cap, which I think is the real issue here."

And if Riley felt Stern held a personal bias, why would the coach skirt the salary-cap rules and give the commissioner a chance to intervene?

Riley can seek arbitration in the Howard case, but the Heat would be without allies because Howard prefers to remain in Washington and the players union will side with him. NBA chief legal officer Jeffrey Mishkin has said he's confident Howard will play for the Bullets this season.

"These are all unprecedented issues," Orlando's Williams said. "It's going to take a team of arbitrators with Solomon-like wisdom to get it all straightened out."

But when that happens, Riley will probably be forced to settle for free-agent leftovers such as Walt Williams and Rex Chapman, who played for the Heat last season.

And at some point, Riley must try to explain how he lost Juwan Howard.

The players got rid of their macho attitudes fast.

"I thought we'd be doing girl stuff and I thought we'd need to learn moves but it's been allright," Garrett Goldsmith The end of aerobics doesn't menn the end of practice.

Dripping with sweat, the players, including Valerie Casko, form a line and jog around the track which surrounds the football stadium. The person in Valerie - must sprint to the front upon Scott Casko's whistle. When the whistle sounds, the entire team yells, "Freshmeni" After that comes a cookie (that's a good idea since several players tend to lose their cookies after a particularly grueling practice session), some Gatoraid, and field practice.

And that's all voluntary. The pace will pick up when pads and helmets are ditributed and the season really begins in two weeks with the freshmen who decided to do their own things all summer.

Besides the benefits of getting prepared for official practice, the summer workouts have also brought the team close together. not always easny for a school that receives students from four different middle schools. Seeing the players interact with each other at practice, it's hard to tell they haven't been together for pears to be in good shape, it will be interesting next August to see how many of the by-then junior varsity Seminoles are out working with today's eighthgraders under the Central Florida sun. If everything goes as expected, it's a good bet.

And if things don't go as ex-pected this fall, the players can always try out for the Seminole High dance team.

The rest of December finds the Golden Knights visiting Conference USA foe South Florida on December 14 and ACC foe North Carolina State on December 19. UCF then hosts Youngstown State on December 23 in its final non-conference home game before traveling to Chattanooga, Tennessee and the 1986 Dr. Pepper Holiday Classic that begins on December 28.

UCF will battle Canisius (1996 NCAA Tournament participant) in the first round while the host and perennial Southern Conference power Tennessee-Chattanooga takes on Coastal Carolina. The winners will meet on December 29 to decide the tournament champion.

"We have another very competitive non-conference achedule," said UCF head coach Kirk Speraw, who is about to begin his fourth season at the heim.
"We play achools from three of the best conferences in the country in the SEC, ACC and Conference USA. We also rekindle our rivalry with Bethune-Cookman and we play a tough Canisius team at the Dr. Pepper Classic."

UCG opens its 16-game TAAC schedule when the Golden Knighta host Jacksonville State on January 2. Defending TAAC Champion College of Charleston (1996 NIT participant) visits the UCF Arena on January 30 while upstart Campbell University visits on February 1. The Golden Knighta host area

By MCK GANG AP Sports Writer

CHICAGO - in the offsesson, they'll drink a few beers, discuss the old days and rekindle a friendship that began as college assistant coaches nearly 20 years ago.

From Pittaburgh to Oklahoma State, later to a national championship at Miami and finally to a Super Bowl in Dallas, Dave Wannstedt and Jimmy Johnson were together.

Johnson became the boss and Wannstedt his assistant. Now they're NFL head coaches who are preparing to face each other when the Miami Dolphina and Chicago Bears meet in an exhibition game Sunday.

"My only concern is seeing our team go out and perform better than we did lest week," said Wannetedt, downplaying the meeting with Johnson.

"I'd like to play him in the Super Bowl. That would be a dream come true.

"You want to evaluate talent, you want to make some progress and you want to win the same," Johnson said.

The Dolphins are 1-0 after beating Tampa Bay 13-10 in Johnson's Miami debut last week. Chicago, playing without injured starting quarterback Erik Kramer, lost 30-12 at Carolina. Kramer will play Sunday at Soldier Field.

Johnson served as a counselor when Wannstedt, his former defensive coordinator, decided after the Cowboys' first Super Bowl win of the '90s that it was time to go out on his own as a head coach.

"More than anything else, I wanted to listen to him to get a feel for what he wanted to do," Johnson said. "My leaning was for the New York Ciants. But all along, Dave hept saying Chicago.
"Dave's done a great job. When you have Dave Wannstedt, you have the total package. More than anything, he knows how to deal with people." Wannatedt can't describe what Johnson's friendship and his expertise have meant. "I cherish our friendship, I love the guy, Wannatedt said. "Our relationship was head coach to assistant coach and big brother to little brother. He took care of me and my family in too many ways to ever talk about." The game also will be a reunion for Bears linebacker Bryan Cox, who left the Dolphina after five years, and Johnson.

Cox signed a four-year, $13 million contract with Chicago during the offseason after Johnson chose not to spend big bucks on Miami's free agents.

"I like him and appreciate him," Cox said of Johnson. "He sat down and told me how it was. You can't do anything but respect

"I don't have any ill feelings."

Plant dove hunting fields now

Wingshooters who want to boost their chances at having a good hunting season this fall, should start planting a dove field

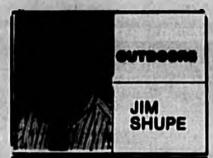

Although federal laws prohibit dove hunting over batted fields, it is legal to hunt doves over standing crops, including those that have been mound or disked. that have been mowed or di Nick Wiley, the Come and Fresh Water Fish Commission's amail-game coordinator, said he recommends planting brown-top "It matures quickly, and it's well-suited for Florida," Wiley said. "It does a good job of at-tracting doves if you plant a minimum of about five or 10 acres and mow it in alternating rows. Bigger fields are even better,

By planting part of the field now and another part in a few weeks, dove hunters can extend the field's attractiveness to the birds in that the second planting will mature later in the season.

"It's best if you time at least part of the field to mature two weeks before the opening day of dove season in early October," Wiley said. "Millet matures in about 65 days, but there are other plants that are also effective at attracting doves. You can plant corn, grain sorghum, sunflowers, wheat or rye, but timing is important."

IRL adds sixth site race at Pikes Peak

By The Associated Press

First hockey, now big-time auto racing. Sports in the Rockies are booming.

The indy Racing Leegue is going to Pikes Peak next year, the latest volley in Tony George's war with Championship Auto Racing Teams.

"With this announcement, it only goes to solidify the fact there's a tremendous opportunity in the Rocky Mountain region for motorsports that as of yet has been un-ispped. We're very proud to be involved in that," George said Wednesday at a news conference in Denver.

Last season, the Colorado Avalanche won the NHL Stanley Cup while Denver native Buzz Calkins won the inaugural IRL race at Orlando and fellow Coloradan Buddy Lazier, who lives in Vail, won the Indianapolis 500.

The as-yet-unnamed race at the new Pikes Peak International Raceway will make its debut on June 29, 1997, a week before the annual Pikes Peak hill climb.

"A few years back, nobody would have thought that Colorado would be a hotbed of racing that it's becoming," said George, the president of the Indianapolis Motor

"For the last neveral years, it's been a goal of mine to bring back indy-type racing to Colorado, and the fact we're announcing this is a much awaited addition to the IRL. "It will be truly a first-class facility, and we'll be proud to bring our racing teries here," said George, who last year founded the IRL in hopes of reducing the costs of racing, restoring the sport to its traditional oval-track roots and giving new drivers opportunities they might not otherwise have had. The one-mile oval track is being built 10 miles south of Colorado Springs on the site of a former horse track.

It will be the sixth IRL venue. The 1996 eason ended in May with the Indianapolis 500, and the first race of the 1996-97 season will be the True Value 200 next week at the New Hampshire International Speedway. Other races are scheduled at Las Vegas on Sept. 15, Orlando (Indy 200 at Walt Diancy World Speedway) on Jan. 25, Phoenix (200 mile race) on March 23 and Indianapolis (Indy 500) on May 25.

Other race sites are expected to be announced later.

"This is very exciting for me," said Calkins, who was the 1996 IRL co-champion. "I was born and raised in Denver. There's been a lot of stock car-type racing around Colorado, and I think it's created a lot of interest in racing in general. Bringing major league racing to Denver brings a lot more interest." CART, which claims CART, which claims most of the top teams and drivers. was invited to join the IRL. But when George reserved up to 25 starting spots at In-dianapolis for IRL regulars, CART boycotted the Indy 500 and staged its own race, the U.S. 500 at Michigan International Speedway, on the same day. George would not talk about the IRL-CART foud or whether there has been any movement toward reconciliation.

"I don't think it's appropriate to address that here," he said.

But Calkins said the IRL success so far, especially at Indianapolis, had dispelled the perception that it was a second-rate operation.

'There's been a huge change in reaction.

just from the fact that what was supposed to happen in our race happened in the other race," he said, referring to a pace-lap crash involving nearly half the field in the U.S. 500 after many in CART had predicted dieaster at Indianapolis. "You really can't point fingers," said

Calkina, who also attended the news conference. "But I think the perception has been much better and there has been better fan approval of it. I think it's only going to get stronger from here on out."

The new track also will have a 1.3-mile road course within the oval and will seat up to 100,000 people. Paving in expected to be completed by late September to mid-October, with the grandstands and 32 luxury suites finished over the winter and the entire construction completed by April

"We're very excited, and it is designed to kick off an entire week of racing in the Rockies." Pikes Peak spokeswoman Linda Clifford said.

"There is no major motorsports facility within 1,000 miles, and we're hoping that having it here will help break up the East Coast-West Coast traveling schedule."
Testing at the track likely will begin late this year, although no firm plane have been

Girls, young women spurring soccer boom

By CRAIG WALKER Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - The Olympic women's soccer finals showed the world's most popular sport is a big hit among young women in the United States, providing increased col-lege scholarship opportunities and new herotnes. The Olympic crowds were the largest ever to watch a women's sporting event in the U.S. Thousands of girls are putting up posters of Mia Hamm. Michelle Akers and team captain

"Girls are sick of being cheerleaders." said Linda O'Sullivan, who coaches the giris team at Leon High School in Tallahasecc.

California is the nation's leader in youth soccer, with nearly 1.8 million participants. Los Angeles ranks as the nation's top soccer market, with 806,000 last year.

One of the big reasons for the increase is the wide open market for college scholarships.

There are more opportunities than players right now, and I expect that to be the case for the next several years at least," said PSU's Kerby. "It may even take over from basketball one day."

The main reason for the college-level growth is a rush by schools to increase the number of women who play inter-collegiate sports. Gender equity to being pushed hard by the NCAA, in response to Title IX of the 1972 Education Amendmenta to the Civil Righta Act.

The NCAA considers an athletics program to be gender equitable "when the participants in both men's and women's programs would accept as fair and equitable the overall program of the other gender." In other words, the colleges want as many women playing as FSU and the University of Florida are examples, each ing their first teams in 1995. Each roster has about 30 players, with 12 on scholarship this year.

"I'm not sure demand will ever be outstripped by supply," said UF women's coach Becky Burleigh. "For women, no other sport generales as many people that quickly."

schools in NCAA Division I had women's soccer programs. In 1995-96, it had grown to 181 of the 305 Division I schools. If each school can fund 12 scholarships, that's a need for 2,715 quality players.

Though one of UF's starters was a walk-on last season. coaches are constantly attending topflight soccer tournaments for talent to recruit. The Junior Orange Bowl soccer tournament in Miami is considered a major women's recruiting opportunity.

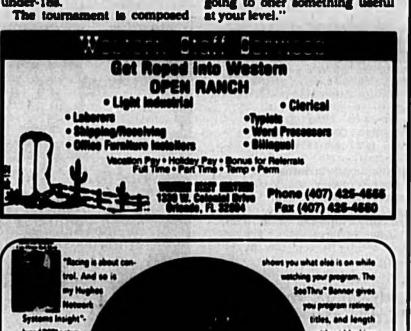

Organizer Don Tufts said 149 college coaches attended the tournament in December. There were 16 teams in the under-19 division, then another 32 in the of club teams from around the country, formed of top players who face rigorous tryouts. College coaches also take a hard look at players in the Olympic Development Program and from top high schools in each state.

"I'd recommend getting on a good club team with high-level competition," said Burleigh. "The Olympic Development Program also gives a good idea of how you compare."
There are also numerous soccer camps offered during the summer around the nation. Burleigh urges players to check carefully.

"Any camp is only as good as its coaches," she says. "Check with other coaches to see if it's going to offer something useful at your level."

Her menagerie of unicorns is a labor of love

SANFORD — Penny Fletcher doesn't think of her hobby of collecting unicorns as a mystical, magical endeavor but a labor of love. She shared that although some think the unicorn is but a fairytale type, she has Biblical basis for her love.

Since the age of 14, Fletcher spied the horned horses and has continued her passion even to the present. "I saw them one day and fell in love with them, "she said.

"They're so pretty."
Although she did admit that many in her earlier collection have gotten broken she still maintains them in numbers of over 60. Ceramic, porcelain. pewter, brass and glass in the form of plates, lamps and lewelry all carry her beloved

She added,"I don't go for the ones with a goatee. It makes them look mean. I like the ones with a clean look. I just feel unicorns are a gentle animal."

With unicorns from onequarter inch earrings to her favorite carousel that stands over one and a half feet high.

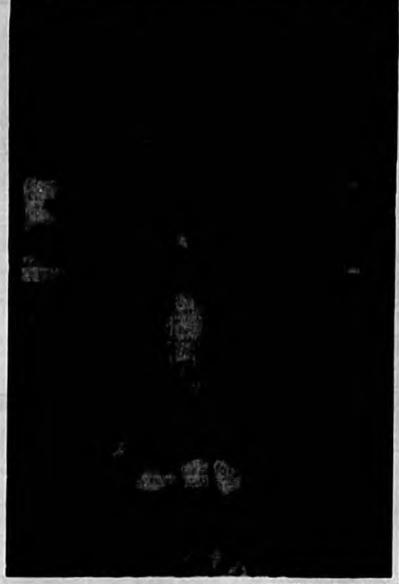

Christmas gift from my husband a few years ago," she said. "I saw it and I had to have it. My carousel is the most sentimental of all my unicorns."

Fletcher has a lamp, letter opener, rubber stamp, glasses, cups, postcards, clocks, a fan pull chain, puzzles, scarves, a coaster set, candles, bookmarkers, earrings, tshirts, a musical jewelry box, notepad holders and stuffed unicorns. Most given by family and friends, especially her in-laws.

The collection has been a continuing source of enjoyment and pleasure and Fletcher said she is always adding to it but is getting a bit more selective now. "If anyone has any unicorns they don't want just send them my way."

She and her husband, Kevin, have been married for 14 and a half years. They have one son, Robert.

The family have been members of Westview Baptist Church in Sanford for four years. Fletcher is in the choir, ladies ensemble, a member of the stewardship committee and a fourth grade Sunday

Adults' disapproval will not stop teens from having sex

DEAR ABBY: I am so sick of the argument that dispensing condoms in school encourages sex that I could acream. What are people thinking these days? I understand that parents and adults don't like the thought of fifth-graders (or younger or older, for that matter) having sex. but it's a fact that some do.

Adolescents and teens have sex for various reasons. Some are responsible and use condoms. But often they act irresponsibly and do not. Many are afraid or embar-each to ask their parents for them. As parents, adults and educators, we have a responsibility to provide young people with the necessary tools for survival in this world. I fail to see why anyone, especially our young, should be at risk of death because of a mistake in judgment.

Abby, you have been 100 percent correct in the past when you said that if children are at risk of dying, we as informed adults and parents have a moral obligation to educate children about safe sex. And yes, that includes providing condoms to help young people combat the spread of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases.

It's no longer enough for parents to tell young adults that abstinence is the best way. The kids know that. But they do not necessarily heed that advice. This means that we must communicate to them in other ways. By dispensing condoms to young people and counseling them about safe sex, we can tell them, "I don't agree with your decision, but as your parent or friend, I don't want you to die because you have chosen to be sexually active.

I hope you will print my letter. RESPONSIBLE ADULT IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR RESPONSIBLE ADULT: I'm printing your let-ter, but I anticipate sharp criti-cism from those who disagree

May I add that the only 100 percent safe sex is no sex at al — and I believe that is the end way to go for adolescents an

DEAR ABBY: Here's one for your "Tasteless and Tacky" files.

A young co-worker was getting married — a spur-of-the-moment thing. Having such short notice and being on a tight budget, my wife and I decided that a check for $30 would be our wedding gift. Two weeks after the nuptials, the groom informed me that they had accidentally "washed" our gir when it went into the washing machine with the laundry, and the check was ruined. Then he saked me if I'd mind writing out another check in the same amount.

Without telling you what I did, I'd like to know what you think of his asking me to write another check, and how I should have handied the situation.

By the way, six months later they separated, were not meaking to each other, and the divorce papers were already filed.
WONDERING IN THE WEST

DEAR WONDERING: This gives "laundering money" a new twist. His asking you to write another check to replace the one that went into the washing aine was not unre However, I suspect you delayed replacing the check until you were certain the marriage would last.

DEAR ABBY: A recent letter in your column really struck home with me. It was about an 11-year-old boy who hit a baseball into the neighbors' back yard. Thinking no one was home, he climbed the sence to retrieve it and encountered two nude women, sunbathing.

nude women, sumbathing.

Well, in 1967, I was I1 years old and visiting my cousin's home in Los Angeles. One afternoon we were practicing archery in his back yard, and I accidentally shot an arrow over the target and into the neighbor's fenced back yard.

When I climbed the fence to retrieve the arrow, I encountered a woman sunbathing nude! When she saw me, she shrieked, grabbed a nearby towel and ran inside her

Only later did I learn that the neighbor was Marilyn Monroe! Had I only known then what I know now .. SENTIMENTAL IN SAN FRAN-

DEAR SENTIMENTAL Right. You'd have grabbed a camera and asked for her autograph.

DEAR ABBY: My 14-year-old son recently passed away and I was amazed at how rude people can be at a time like that.

Several people sent plants to the mortuary with a note for certain people to take the plants home with them. One family even sent a plant with a note on it asking that the plant be returned to their home after the funeral!

The funeral director told us that this was becoming a real problem for them as it was causing a great many hurt feelings.

Abby, please tell your readers if they want funeral flowers given to a certain person, they should have the flowers sent to that person's home, not to the funeral home. A grieving person doesn't need any more pain. GRIEVING IN BUFORD, GA.

Tillmans mark 16th anniversary

Willie and Patricia Tillman Jr., of 1305 W. 15th St., Senford, celebrated their 16th wedding anniversary on Aug. 9. They were married on that date in 1980 by the late Elder Duke Green.

The Tillmans celebrated with a dinner party aboard Florida Central Adventure Dinner

The couple's three children are: Keme, 15;Dwayne, 14; and Whitney.7.

Willie is employed as a correctional sargeant by the Seminole County Sheriff's Office and Patricia is employed as a medical secretary by the sheriff's office where each has has been employed for 10 years.

Their hobbies are fishing and bowling and their secret for a successful marriage, according to Patricia is: "Submit yourself unto God and allow him to supply all your needs and direct all your paths."

Among the talented precision swimmers was Tammy Cleland, 20, who was born in Sanford and is widely known in aquatic sports. Tammy's mom taught at Lyman High School and her father was a professor at the University of Central Florids.

Tammy's coach was Mary Rose of Altamonte Springs whose "Loreleis" synchronised swim team has brought her much fame. Mary and her husband, Altamonte Springs City Commissioner Eddie Rose. were in choice seats at the Atlanta Olympics since Mary was on the swimming planning staff. After the Olympics ended, Mary went on to Washington. D.C. to coach a team in national competition.

Among those who remember the talented Tammy is Alyssa Peterson, a Sanford Herald summer intern from Apopka who has also spent part of her summer as a life guard before leaving for her senior year at Notre Dame.

Alysea said about Tammy, "We swam together for several years and were good friends." Eddie Rose said, "Mary had

HEY, HOW'S

The possibility of fulfilling your ambitions in the year ahead looks good. However, several goals that are priority objectives now might be replaced by new targets. LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There will be enough hours in the day for you to take care of your responsibilities and also have adequate time for fun activities. Meet your obligations first. Leo, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and SASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Make sure to state your zodiac

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone you know only casually might be extremely complimentary today. Do not let it turn your head because this is the way he or she talks to everyone.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If you attempt to do something today and fall flat, don't point the finger at someone else. Excuses will not hold water with your associates SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Politics and religion are two volatile issues which should not be imposed on others at a social gathering today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Joint endeavors must be analyzed in detail today, especially if you will have to make an investment. Make sure to get your money's worth. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today you will get better results in situations in which you are unencumbered by partners. Try to accomplish as much as you can on your own.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You may turn down a friend who will ask you for a favor today because you will not be tuned in to the urgency of his or her plight. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Even if you know some juicy gossip about a friend, try not to disclose it to others today. Put yourself in his shoes and think about how you would feel.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Do not attempt to use flattery today in order to hide your motives. If you are insincere, it

Youngsters spell success

By Phillip Alder

This week's columns were written National Spelling Bee. Maybe you saw 12-year-old Wendy Guey, from West Palm Beach, Fla., win the title by correctly spelling the word for burying someone alive. (If this column were coming to you over the Internet, I could give you the word orally so that you could try to spell it.)

This deal was played by Bobby Levin during the 1981 Bermuda Bowl. In winning, Levin became the youngest-ever world champion at 23. First, note Levin's four-spade bid, which wouldn't occur to many inexpe-rienced players. True, he had only six high-card points, but he had a secondary fit — of a sort — with partner, a side-suit singleton and six trumps. Also, in team events, if you smell a game, you bid a game.

Perhaps East should have overcalled two no-trump, not one heart, showing hearts and clubs. Five clubs is only two down. (In the other room, the American East also bid one heart, but he centinued with three clubs over two spades.)

West led the heart king. Levin won with dummy's ace, played a spade to his ace and a spade to dummy's nine. When the finesse worked, Levin drow the last trump and called for a low heart, giving East a problem. Not that it mattered here, but East won with the queen and tried to cash two club tricks. However, Levin ruffed the second, unblocked the heart jack, played a diamond to dummy's queen and claimed an overtrick when the finesse worked.

What is the word for burying some-one alive? Vivisepulture, which, afterward, Wendy Guey said she knew.
