AMERICA WILL SIT IN AT WEST ON WARTIME

Accepts Invitation Of League of Nations to Sit In At West Seat At Big Party

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—(AP)—The United States today accepted an invitation to sit with the League of Nations council in an effort to prevent war in Manchuria. The formal invitation, which had been sent to the United States by the League of Nations, was received at the State Department. President Hoover, American ambassador in Geneva, already has been authorized to accept the invitation and he probably will be in the city in a few days.

ENGLISH AUTHOR IS GLOOMY OVER WORLD'S STATE

Believes Civilization Will Go To Smash Unless Nations Agree

By EDWARD ANGLY
NEW YORK, Oct. 16. — Just turned sixty-five and still going strong, H. G. Wells arrived from England last night rather gloomy in his celebrated cosmic consciousness over how the present-day world is waxing. Mr. Wells, indeed, was inclined to think that civilization would go completely to smash pretty soon unless the nations got together, wipe off the muddled financial and economic slate and made a fresh start with a wholesale redistribution of income and some sort of world control of currency.

Personally the author of "The Outline of History" and of a score of other books, fat and thin, seemed more mellow, affable and content than when he last visited these shores ten years ago. But he was distinctly pessimistic as he sat in one of the Aquitania's deck chairs, surveying the troubled situation. Something far worse than a mere business depression was ailing the globe, he said, and went on to predict that unless the politicians fell back upon economic science and called in some specialists in that line all would soon be lost.

Primarily Mr. Wells has come to America this time on what he was pleased to call a midwife's mission. He is to assist at the birth next month of his new outline of economic, social and political sciences, a book to be called "The Work, Wealth and Happiness of Mankind." First he is going to Garden City, L. I., to read the proofs, and see the book off the press, after which he expects to visit a few American cities and size up the general situation on this side of the North Atlantic before his return to Europe in November.

As he sees it, three factors have brought about the present unhappy state of affairs on this earth, whose progress Mr. Wells has traced from the preindustrial days.

"The first," he said, "is national ill-will in itself."

"The second is the currency breakdown, and to a realization of money after the World War. Increased population after a period of great waste needed more money, but, instead, we have had less money, a restriction that has strangled economic development."

"The third cause is something which is absolutely new, and that is production which runs beyond any possibility of consumption."

"What would Mr. Wells suggest as a remedy?"

"We shall have to fall back upon economic science before it is too late," he said, "and treat it as a world problem, not as a series of national problems. The politicians must step aside and put economic leaders in, just as they put in medical authorities when they have a problem of world health to contend with."

Mr. Wells declined to suggest any particular economists for the job. He knew some worthy of the task, he said, but he was afraid he might, in naming them, overlook others.

"I think the politician is a necessary intermediary," he continued, "but his business is not to work things out, but to turn them over to persons better equipped."

"The primary thing is to recognize cosmopolitanism. If they (the various nations) don't work together the whole thing will bust."

"The check is one other thing that is an obsession of mine—collective enterprises in rebuilding cities. It is the only thing I can recommend for filling up the gap between excessive production and limited consumption. It is necessary to have some world control of currency or we are lost."

Some one asked Mr. Wells if he thought the present civilization was headed for the fate that befall Greece and Rome.

"It is not only possible but probable," he said, "and it will be much faster. Their civilization was nearer the goal. This is a tremendously crazy edifice of civilization. It will be a big, swift smash."

"This is not a mere depression that we are experiencing. Depressions are not proven things, all or all, nor the business cycle either. There have never been any regular variations in the successive booms and slumps."

"I don't see any signs at present of our getting back to where we were, and I do not see the present situation becoming worse."

"I don't think a war might be better."

"There is a likelihood of one, but I don't think it is the best solution."

BALLOON TIRES FOR WHEELBARROWS

BIRMINGHAM, England.—Wheelbarrows with pneumatic tires have been supplied to the gardeners in Birmingham's city parks so that they may be able to do their work more easily. The innovation prevents damage to delicate lawns and makes the wheelbarrows usable on the softest ground and also capable of handling twice the standard load.

One of the same type as the "History never repeats itself," he said. "There is a possibility that the next world war will begin with a localized conflict, and spread. Yes, the Sino-Japanese troubles might be the start of it."

Up to now, Mr. Wells went on, the various efforts to solve world problems had always started off on the basis of existing political complications. Instead, he suggested that the next attempt should start by "taking a view of the world as a whole," and then treating with political complications—frontiers, all that sort of thing—as they came, one by one, into the general picture.

Mr. Wells also was asked if it were true, as reported, that he would speak later this month at a dinner of the Birth Control League.

"I have received a telegram," he said, "from that very determined lady, Mrs. Margaret Sanger, and I suppose I shall succumb." He did not think birth control could avert the existing danger of a cosmic smash-up.

"Birth control may ease the situation and avert disaster later on," he said, "but obviously it could do no good for the next five years, and the time element is important now."

Mr. Wells who, in the absence of a world state, is very much an Englishman in appearance, accent and—to many observers—in thought, said "nothing very dreadful" would happen in England, in the immediate future.

"It is a very stable society, and never in its history have there been great political panics in England," he said. "It is not a revolutionary country."

"Would you say it was, politically, an evolutionary country?" he was asked. Such, he agreed, was the case.

Asked his opinion of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's recent actions, Mr. Wells said: "I have no very great admiration for Mr. MacDonald. He is a very self-conscious and theatrical person."

"Has he suffered in your esteem in leaving the Labor party to head a national government?"

"I knew about him before," Mr. Wells said, his blue eyes twinkling, a smile on his ruddy face.

Some one was interested in learning his opinion of George Bernard Shaw's recent remarks about capitalism and communism.

"I don't think I ought to interfere with the processes of Mr. Shaw's soul," said Mr. Wells. "He is my senior, and I have an enormous respect for him."

As for Soviet Russia, the British author expressed surprise that it was doing as well as it is—and they are doing rather well," he added. "They will be able to produce something that will look like success."

The recent "pay cut strike" in the British Navy, Mr. Wells made light of as a mere incident that produced no effect in England, however much of an impression it made abroad.

"For as it was nothing at all. Simply a remonstrance against a reduction in wages," he said.

As he rose to go, a reporter asked the visiting author when he would return "to your old mother as a novelist?"

"Bless my soul," he said, "do you think me a novelist?" and he shook the reporter's hand.

"Well, then," he said, "when I leave New York I shall go to work on a novel. I swear to God I will."

LONGWOOD AND FERN PARK Mrs. J. H. Menick

In honor of the teachers of Longwood a delightful reception was given by the City League at the library hall Thursday evening when 100 guests enjoyed the affair.

Mrs. Emma Abbott Lyman, former concert singer, beautifully rendered "Song of Singing" and "Lullaby." Mrs. B. R. Gray sang "In the Garden of Tomorrow" and "There's That's All." Alda La Vigne of Rollins college pleased the audience with "Sweet and Easy" and "Don't Know Why." Mrs. Louis Entaminger was an accompanist and Everett Mungler was announcer. Refreshments were served by Mrs. C. H. Searcy and Mrs. Harold Jackson.

There were show birds which demonstrate that they can make good layers contrary to popular belief that they are not good egg producers.

The Baptist Women's Missionary Union met with Mrs. J. Fred Schofield Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. J. P. Hearst, president, presiding, and with 12 members in attendance. Topic for the meeting was "My Allegiance to My State." Mrs. Dolley, Mrs. Wallace Billingsly, Mrs. R. S. Entaminger, Mrs. Olin Street, Mrs. B. R. Gray, and Mrs. J. A. Hustine taking part.

INDIGESTION

Take a Pinch of Black-Draught After Meals

If bothered with indigestion after meals try taking a pinch of Black-Draught just after you leave the table. Many people do this to avoid indigestion. Mrs. H. A. Cliff writes from Sherman, Texas, to say: "I suffered with bloating—a full feeling—I would almost lose my breath. My food disagreed with me. I began taking a pinch of Black-Draught after each meal, and I found that was the best way. I soon was relieved of so much gas, and the bloating quite disappeared. I had I soon began to feel much better. Since then, my health is much improved."

HAMILTON HOLT SAYS ROLLINS IS U. S. BRIGHT SPOT

Enrollment, Faculty, Largest In Entire History Of College

WINTER PARK, Fla., Oct. 16.—"Rollins College is one of the bright spots amidst encircling U. S. financial gloom," stated President Hamilton Holt in an address before the Orlando Chamber of Commerce today.

"Despite depression and a necessarily increased tuition fee, Rollins has the largest student group, chosen from the largest number of the largest number of freshmen applicants, and has the largest faculty in the history of the College," the president reported. "While most business, civic and educational institutions are retrenching in all fields, cutting budgets, laying off employees and reducing salaries, Rollins has increased its income, expanded its budget, added to its faculty, raised salaries, and spent thousands of dollars in improving its plant and equipment."

This is in addition to three new Spanish-Mediterranean style dormitories recently completed and to the new Knowles Memorial Chapel and the Annie Russell Theatre, now under construction, costing in excess of $100,000 each, Dr. Holt pointed out.

In the six years since Dr. Holt was invited to the presidency, the college plant has been enlarged and improved from an inadequate equipment for two hundred and twenty-five students to normal equipment for five hundred students, the maximum number to be accepted at Rollins under the plan to keep the college small, intimate, friendly, Dr. Holt revealed. He noted that this has been accomplished after the collapse of the Florida boom and during a nationwide depressed condition.

Speaking of the "advantages of being small," of "quality rather than mere bigness," the president stated that Rollins plans to remain small, and already has within twenty-five of the maximum number of students to be accepted, even when the present building program is completed.

Despite the material progress Rollins has made, however, the college is still far short of attaining the minimum amount of funds actually requisite for the operation of the college. Of the six hundred dollars pledged locally just before the boom broke, designed to carry the college through the first six years of rehabilitation, only about fifty percent has been paid, due to the post-boom depression. The Rollins campaign for two and one-half million dollars, essential minimum endowment for the routine expenses of the college, was stopped by the national depression after only one million had been raised. "So the need of Rollins is still acute," he stated, "despite the unusual progress which has been made up to this time."

Not only in material things has Rollins made progress, the president explained, pointing to Rollins' new curriculum plan, liberalizing education, establishing the criterion of "accomplishment in fact" rather than the conventional system of grades and credits; practically abolishing the time element in obtaining a degree, and otherwise individualizing and humanizing higher education. Six years ago almost unheard of, today Rollins is known throughout the country and is considered one of the leading colleges of America. Dr. Holt stated, promising the civic organization that the progress of Rollins had only begun and will never cease until its ideal is accomplished, "but as we will constantly have new ideals and strive for new goals of perfection, I feel sure that the progress of Rollins will probably never cease."

Damage caused by forest fires in the United States last year reached an estimated total of $65,000,000, not including damage to young growth, wild life, watershed values, and other intangible values which could not be measured in dollars and cents.

Senate Deeply Interested In Geneva Council

gether. I have no sympathy with the proposition that we should just keep hands off. Some of the news reports lead me to believe that the objectors would not be pained to see a war break out. It is a strange sort of selfishness for people to be against any kind of peaceful policy to avert war."

Many members of the Senate view the administration's willingness to participate actively in the league's discussion of the oriental situation so far as the Kellogg-Briand treaty is involved, as establishing a precedent.

From an obscure beginning in 1920, America's cooperation in League of Nations activities has grown steadily. Never before, however, has the United States sought a part, either active or passive in the deliberations of the league council.

America's diplomatic dealings with the league received their greatest impetus last year with the reorganization by Secretary Stimson of the American consular office at Geneva.

Previously the bulk of the diplomatic interchanges between Geneva and Washington were conducted indirectly by the American legation at Berne.

Large quarters close to the league secretariat were obtained and Prentiss Gilbert, assistant chief of the western European division of the state department, was appointed consul-general. The appointment excited considerable comment at the time, but the Senate approved the nomination.

A league publication entitled "The United States and the League of Nations During 1930" described the increased cooperation during that year between the league and the American government to the consular expansion.

power Pacific treaty which pledged them to arbitrate disputes.

The participation of the United States in the league's discussions will be limited to questions involving these treaties and will not extend to any action the league might take under its own covenant.

The attitude of the Washington government was outlined by Secretary Stimson yesterday to Ambassador Debuchi of Japan. The cabinet member emphasized that America does not intend to be swayed from its purpose of throwing the full force of its influence into an effort to maintain peace.

cluded too, to develop neuroses and a share of imaginary illness. As they are generally more susceptible than their physically sturdier brothers and sisters, the wisest course to follow, I have found, is to "treat 'em rough."

Coddling is the worst thing in the world for them. And as they usually get more than their share of this, they learn to expect more. Then we say of them that they are "spoiled," when actually the responsibility is ours, as we have spoiled them.

Of course, I don't recommend that we maltreat them. Children need our love, and they must feel and understand it. But I must certainly avoid stuj fussing.

The little egotists love attention. And they think nothing of going completely out of their way to gain it. In the case of frail children, the spotlight of parental affection always shines directly in their path. Who can blame them for enjoying to bask in it?

Treat a child as though he were an invalid or incapable of looking out for himself, and he is bound to develop into quite a helpless person. Disregard his inclinations, making it possible in the meantime for him to overcome them through the encouragement of exercise and diet, and watch him outgrow them.

Attitudes are contagious. And there is nothing truer of life or of human nature than that we get what we expect. What we are worth measures up pretty accurately with what we expect, too.

You And Your Child

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

By Jane Herbert Goward "Let nature take its course," is the unscientific, unattractive catch phrase formerly employed by physicians when confronted with a case which they could not diagnose.

Today we know better than to allow the blind force of nature to take its course, particularly when this course may mean going through life with enlarged or diseased tonsils, poor eyesight, defective hearing, poor posture—or an over-solicitous mother!

Children of the long, thin type are more than those of the broad, stocky type. They are more in-

PERSIMMON RECIPES

Persimmon Cake
Use 1 cup of persimmon pulp, 1-2 cup of sugar, 1 egg, butter size of walnut, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon of baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon of soda.

Preserved Persimmon Pulp
Place equal amounts of persimmon pulp and sugar in glass or earthenware jar or in coated sanitary cans. (Never use cans of unclean tin for persimmons.) Mix thoroughly and set in a cool, light place. Stir occasionally until the air is removed and seal with paraffin or waxed paper. The cans may be heated over a slow fire just enough to drive out the air, and should be sealed at once.

Preserved Whole Persimmons
Put a thin layer of sugar in the bottom of a jar, then a layer of whole ripe persimmons, then a layer of sugar, and so on until the jar is full. The sugar will soon dissolve and form a sirup. Press the upper fruits down under the sirup or add more sirup to the jar. Seal and store until used. The sirup may be drained off and the fruits served like dates, which they will resemble in appearance and flavor.

Persimmon Leather
Spread a thin layer of ripe persimmon pulp on waxed paper or on a large platter. Dry in the sun in a fruit evaporator, or in the oven of a stove, leaving the oven doors open. Remove the seeds. Add another layer of pulp and repeat until the leather is of a thickness to handle easily. This may be dried or mixed and used instead of raisins or citron in fruit cakes, cookies or puddings.

Persimmon Cream
Use 1 tablespoon gelatine, 2 egg yolks, 3-4 cup sugar, 1 pt. milk, 1 cup persimmon pulp, 2 tablespoons lemon juice.

Soak gelatine five minutes in one cup milk. Add to remaining milk and cook in double boiler until dissolved. Then add beaten yolks and sugar. Cook until slightly thickened. When cool add persimmon pulp and lemon juice and mix.

Where Wives Have Their Own Sign Language

By VINCENT WILSON
During the recent World War, from the masculine forms of speech to the feminine forms of speech, there was much secret writing for spying purposes. What school boy or girl did not thrill at the mention of secret codes and secret signs? Yes, and what man or woman but remembered the school days when he and she would patiently write short sentences in the secret code, making some appointment for some special evening and putting it all in the secret characters, so that teachers and rivals would never find out and interfere.

KNOW YOUR POLITICS

By JOHN PILGRIM
We move in a fast social order. Almost everything we do, have or want is dependent upon others. Our food, our clothing, our shelter, our recreation is supplied, partially or completely, by the handwork or the brains of other persons in a civilized society no man is independent. His very livelihood may be destroyed by a revolution in far off Brazil or a business failure in Germany. And the machinery of society is politics. To all intents and purposes, the political structure of any country is the channel through which the welfare and aspirations of the tiniest cog is brought in relation with the whole.
