Sanford, county a first in adult deal?

By Russ White
HERALD STAFF WRITER

SEMINOLE - Sanford and Seminole County are about to become the first city and county in Florida to share sites between jurisdictions for possible use by adult entertainment establishments.

The Sanford City Commission unanimously agreed on Monday night to move on with a partnership plan with Seminole County that provides an appropriate number of sites for both the city and county. The ultimate vote will come at a second public hearing on March 23.

Last Thursday, the city's Planning & Zoning Commission voted, 4-1, to deny the proposal and ask the county to redraft and resubmit the ordinance. "We found some ambiguities and things that needed clarification," P&Z member James Hattaway said Monday. "We've got this cleared up now. We're okay."

Deputy County Attorney Lonnie Groot and Acting Director of Planning Francis Chandler explained the partnership package at the City Commission meeting.

Sanford City Attorney William Colbert said Monday. "We're very comfortable with it."

There are no problems." "It's a unique arrangement, the first in the state," County Commissioner Grant Maloy said today. "I don't have any problem with it except that it could leave the county with the short stick."

"This is the way to build a community," County Commissioner Win Adams said. "A definite coming together."

Today, the County Commission will hold the first of two public hearings on the Sanford partnership and at 7 tonight the second and final hearing

Focus: Juvenile justice for all

By Nick Pfeiffauf
HERALD STAFF WRITER

SEMINOLE - Seminole/Brevard State Attorney Norman Woffinger doesn't need a specific week's designation to remind him of juvenile crime. It is one of the more serious problems facing Central Florida and the nation.

Gangs and increasing teenage crimes committed by girls are one of the big concerns.

In keeping with these problems, the week of March 15-21 has been designated "Juvenile Justice Week." It is sponsored by the Florida Department of Juvenile Justice in coordination with Business Partners for Prevention.

The intent of the week-long observance is to heighten the public's awareness of juvenile justice and highlight programs involved with the prevention and intervention of juvenile delinquency.

"Seminole County is doing a very pro-active job in helping to combat juvenile crime," Woffinger said. "We have a wonderful program under way, and I firmly believe our Juvenile Assessment Center (JAC) opened just a number of months now, will eventually be the model for the entire state," he said, referring to the sheriff's department "Intensive Community Control" efforts.

He explained that the reason Seminole County is doing so well is because of the cooperation between agencies. "We

Seminole County announces 1999 Teacher of the Year

From Staff Reports

APOPKA - Seminole County Public Schools surprised its 1999 Teacher of the Year, Artie Almeida, a music instructor with Bear Lake Elementary, at 11 a.m. today. Seminole County Schools Superintendent Paul J. Hagerty, county school board members, Teacher of the Year Selection Committee, District Office Administrators and Almeida's students were on tap for the presentation of the honor. "Mrs. Almeida is an outstanding teacher," said Bear Lake Elementary Principal Tim Seibert. "She is very representative of all teachers in the county."

Almeida, an 18-year veteran, is the music teacher for grades kindergarten through fifth at Bear Lake. Her classroom offers fast-paced lessons that include opportunities in the areas of singing, moving, playing instruments, listening and creating.

Almeida offers two extracurricular musical ensembles to Bear Lake students, which involve over 200 students in a fast-paced, professional performing experience. Standards for these groups are extremely high, and because of this, the groups have achieved state and national recognition. The students meet after school and focus on musical performance through singing, playing recorders and bells. Because of the caliber of their performances, they have gained national recognition including their selection to perform for international conventions of the Central Florida area. The Bear Lake students were chosen as the only school in the county to do a demonstration of their jazz unit on the national TODAY SHOW in 1991.

Almeida teaches music not only all day, but every evening as well. She taught elementary music education classes at UCF for 12 years and has taught Secondary Recorder Class and been the interim director of the UCF Early Music Ensemble. She is the Early Childhood Music and Movement instructor at both Seminole Community College and at 4C, teaching students who are working toward an Associates Degree as well as day care providers from the Central Florida area.

Almeida teaches saxophone at Valencia Community College, as well as studio of middle and high school saxophone students from Seminole, Orange and Osceola counties.

For the last four years, she has been a music clinician, providing workshops around the country to teachers in public and private schools. In January 1998, she was featured instructor of a four-day national seminar for elementary teachers in the Republic of China.

Almeida is author of a teacher resource book of recorder instruction and has had articles published in professional music journals. She is the only music educator in the county who serves on the National Board for Professional Teaching Standards designing the national certification process for teachers and is the liaison to the national Music Standards Committee.

In November 1997, Almeida was invited by President Clinton to have breakfast at the White House. Almeida even had a brief conversation with the President about both of them playing the saxophone.

Almeida has been a Teacher of the Year at the school level no less than six times and was the Seminole County Teacher of the Year Elementary Finalist in 1991. She will represent the school district in the Florida Teacher of the Year Program. The Seminole County Teacher of the Year Recognition Program will be held on Tuesday, April 21, at Lake Howell High School.

Sanford OKs controversial land change

By Shari Brodie
HERALD FEATURE EDITOR

SANFORD - The Sanford City Commission Monday passed an ordinance changing the future land use element of city's comprehensive plan, allowing Wallace Devlin to go forward with building apartments on County Road 46A.

After almost three hours of discussion and negotiation, the commissioners voted 4-1 to approve the request for the land use change made by Devlin, but not before both sides of the controversial issues agreed to compromises.

The ordinance came back to the commission after the Florida Department of Community Affairs completed its review of the land use change request. The city had 60 days to approve, with changes, the ordinance. The second public hearing included a discussion of the change of designation from Residential/Office/Industrial to Medium Density Residential (MDR-15) on the southern portion and High Density Residential (HDR-20) in the northern portion. "This was a change brought about by the applicant," Mayor Larry Dale told those in attendance.

Dale and Sanford's Director of Planning and Development Jay Marder traveled to Tallahassee prior to the commission meeting, to confer with the DCA. Marder said, "It is perfectly appropriate that the Tax refunds for disaster victims

Individual taxpayers who suffered losses in Florida's recent series of tornadoes and floods may qualify for refunds from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) on either 1997 or 1998 income tax, state and federal disaster recovery officials said Thursday.

"Taxpayers with verified casualty losses have the choice of amending their current (1997) tax return or claiming the loss on 1998 income," said Paul Fay, federal coordinating officer for the disaster. This option is available only to taxpayers in declared disaster areas.

Joseph Myers, director of the Florida Division of Emergency Management (FDEM), said it's advisable to consult a tax specialist before deciding which year to use. "Financial situations differ greatly," said Myers. "Using the current year could make money available quickly to help victims recover."

To qualify as a casualty loss, the reimbursed amount must exceed 10 percent of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income.

Taxpayers with questions should call the IRS toll free number, 1-800-829-1040. Those with hearing or speech impairments can call the toll-free TTY number, 1-800-829-4059. For personal assistance with tax matters, applicants can consult their accountants or visit an IRS office.

Ronald McDonald charities

Ronald McDonald House Charities has issued emergency grants from national and local funds totaling $61,000 to the American Red Cross. The money will help families of Central Florida devastated by last week's tornadoes.

The local chapter, Ronald McDonald House Charities of Central Florida, also will donate a portion of its canister proceeds to the cause. Collection canisters are located in all Central Florida McDonald's restaurants and will support relief efforts in Orange, Seminole and Osceola counties. The collection drive was effective Feb. 26, and will run through March 30.

Additionally, local McDonald's franchisees have donated food and volunteered their time to help. More than 5,000 Extra Value Meals have been distributed to both victims and volunteers via the American Red Cross. Individual owner/operators have:

Donated money to the American Red Cross, local families and affected crew members.

Cooked meals for victims and volunteers in affected areas, and:

Donated dry goods and other supplies to schools, shelters, families and disaster relief organizations.

"Our sympathies go out to all those families affected by the disaster," said Bob Straub, local owner/operator and president of the Central Florida McDonald's Association. "It's the McDonald's way to give back to the communities in which we live, especially in times like this. We hope our contributions can help victims in some small way."

Ronald McDonald House Charities and McDonald's Corporation have a long history of helping families in local communities, especially during times of need. Ronald McDonald House Charities has awarded emergency grants totaling $757,500 to assist children and their families in emergency situations. Over the years, McDonald's employees, franchisees, and suppliers also have contributed financial support, gifts-in-kind and volunteered countless hours to help recover from natural disasters.

Ronald McDonald House Charities provides comfort and care to children and families through its network of local charities serving in 25 counties. The Charity makes grants to not-for-profit organizations, and provides support to Ronald McDonald Houses worldwide.

Finding temporary, permanent home for kids

Special to the Herald

From radio announcements to trade fair booths, from movie screen promos to Burger King place mats, all media are fair game for use when it comes to finding shelter - temporary or permanent - children in the Orlando area.

"The bottom line is, we desperately need more foster and adoptive homes. And to communicate our need to eligible households we must work very hard to find out where they are," said Syd McCallister, District 7 administrator for the Department of Children & Families. "Sometimes, that means creative brainstorming and non-traditional thinking."

Currently, the district licenses 311 homes to provide foster care, and 12 as 24-hour emergency shelter locations, to accommodate a maximum of 827 children who may be victims of abuse, neglect or abandonment. Unfortunately, however, the number of children entering foster care system at a given time far outweighs the number returning to their legal or biological families. As a result, Children & Families faces a tough challenge every day in finding new foster parents and enough household space from among the 1.6 million residents of Brevard, Orange, Osceola and Seminole counties (District 7). Keep in mind that foster parents volunteer their services, receiving only a small monthly stipend to help cover their children's board expenses.

Nearly 120 of the district's foster children are waiting to be adopted. At the end of 1997, 1,800 children statewide are available for adoption. That total included 260 sibling groups, most of which consisted of three or more children under age 12. Nineteen percent were teenagers.

Sibling groups, racial and ethnic minorities and children above age 8 are considered "special needs" because they are the most difficult populations for whom foster and adoptive homes can be found.

So how does Children & Families go about recruiting these parents? "By employing the news media as much as possible," answers Martin Buckley, who heads the department's Family Safety & Preservation division. "And they have been truly supportive of our mission." Highlights have included staff interviews on WDBO-AM, WIOO-AM and WLOQ-FM.

Local weeklies have also published articles and announcements regarding foster care needs. The subject also has been explored on "Family Works," a WMFE-TV talk show on family and community issues.

One Church One Child Inc., too, has been an integral part of these recruitment strategies. A national organization that operates locally through Children & Families' adoption program, One Church One Child's goal is to secure participation from black churches to find adoptive homes for African-American children.

One unconventional, yet effective, approach to foster parent recruitment recently was an appeal to Burger King. It resulted in the printing of the foster parent solicitation ad on 14,000 restaurant trayliners during a two-month period. The outcome was numerous calls from foster parent prospects.

Thinking outside the proverbial box also persuaded Cobb Movie Theatres to run the ad on their movie screens prior to the featured film.

Children & Families adoptive and foster parent recruiters always keep a roving eye on gatherings of business professionals. They are interested particularly in organization meetings and conventions. "These events are perfect arenas for creating awareness of family needs and sometimes for actually bringing in new parents," says Marlene Richmond, who oversees the licensing of foster homes. Recruiters regularly set up information booths at local business expos. They also give presentations to chambers of commerce that represent multicultural segments of the Central Florida business community.

The recruitment message also extends into schools and neighborhoods. Currently, parent-teacher associations and neighborhood associations are being targeted for support for every target audience. Children & Families has a variety of promotional items to distribute. They are creatively designed, reflecting how positive an experience adoptive and foster parenting can be, and include contact phone numbers. Among them are: information packets, brochures, buttons, large plastic paper clips, coasters, and poems from foster parents and children.

"Numerous strategies have helped, but we still need more homes," says Buckley. "Our job is to keep on trying."

To learn about adopting or becoming a foster parent, call the Children & Families recruiters, (800) 882-8699 or Adoption: (407) 897-4130, Foster Care: (407) 245-0470.

UCF center awards grants for drug and breast cancer research

Special to the Herald

From a search for drugs effective against resistant strains of staph, to a new way to detect breast cancer, the UCF Center for Diagnostics and Drug Development (CD3) has awarded its first grants to faculty researchers working on a variety of cutting edge projects.

The $13,000 grants will allow the projects to continue over the summer months when the faculty researchers might otherwise be off.

The Center, established last fall, supports research in chemistry and microbiology aimed at the diagnosis of cancer, cardiovascular and infectious diseases, and discovery of new medicines. The research underway at UCF will open the way for commercial development of new treatments.

For example, one recipient, Saleh Haaser, is looking in tropical plants for drugs which are active against the germs associated with tuberculosis. These pathogens are increasingly resistant to existing drugs, and it is vital to find new ways to fight them. Another researcher, Otto Phanstiel, is working on a chemical which will deliver cancer killing medicine just to the cancer cell, avoiding damage to surrounding healthy tissue.

In other cancer related projects, Kari Chai is working to establish a new way to diagnose breast cancer by analyzing chemicals called will speed the screening of potential drugs.

"protease" in the cancer cells. The profile of these chemicals will also help doctors make a prognosis for the patient and plan treatment. Raina Chakrabarti is heading up a study of two human genes which may speed the diagnosis of prostate cancer.

The other two scientists are working on projects of great interest to fellow researchers. Cristina Fernandez-Valle's project, titled "Characterization of the Neurofibromatosis type 2 gene products expressed by normal rat Schwann cells," could lead to new treatments for nervous system tumors. Harry Price is working on the "Development of Fluorescence-Based Assays for the Detection of Inhibitors of DNA Directed Enzymes." It

Soap Box Derby rally

By Nick Pfeilau
HERALD STAFF WRITER

SANFORD - Sanford's qualifying event for the All American Soap Box Derby in Akron, Ohio, will be held on June 6. It isn't the only soap box racing event however, and a strategy meeting on a rally later this month is being held tonight at the Sanford Recreation Department.

In explaining the purpose of the rally, Sanford Recreation's Norm Perry, who is coordinating the event for the department said that in addition to the big race, there are several rallies held throughout the United States throughout the year. "At each of these rallies," he said, "participants gain experience and points toward representing their local derby at the national competition in Akron."

He continued, "The major difference between the rallies which are held during the year and the local All American race, is that the rallies are open to anyone regardless of where the racer lives."

With the wider scope of participants, the All American Race is open only to Central Florida youngsters, while the rallies are open to all drivers, regardless of where they reside.

Perry said the local rally, scheduled for March 22 in Sanford, will have top drivers and cars from seven states, including 15 cities in Florida.

Boys and girls ages 9 - 16 that are interested in participating the June race are required to attend a free workshop this evening (Tuesday) beginning at 7 p.m. in the recreation department at Sanford City Hall.

For additional information, phone the recreation department at 330-5697.

have the schools, law enforcement, courts, and the juvenile justice system all working together. In the past, the law has made an arrest then turned it over to the state attorney and courts, then to the parole department. Now all of them are working together rather than as separate entities in juvenile crime situations."

Regarding juvenile crime, Wolfinger said figures indicate Seminole County is seeing a slight drop in recent times. "The previous year's figures from the Florida Department of Law Enforcement indicated a drop of 11.1 percent in violent juvenile crime," he said. "My figures show juvenile crime has dropped by almost 10 percent locally in 1997."

He sees crimes involving gangs as one of the larger problems, observing that the sheriff's department has been doing an excellent job in working against gang crime. "That's not to say we have gangs like they have in some of the major cities up north," Wolfinger said, "but we have reason to believe some of the northern gang members moving to the south may be causing gangs to spring up locally."

Regarding crimes being committed by females, he said there has been a large increase. "Last Monday for example," he said, "Three out of seven juveniles in juvenile court were females, and the charges involved beating up their parents. It's an example of what we're facing these days on an ever-increasing problem."

In honor of the designation of Juvenile Justice Week, Seminole County will have open houses at several facilities including Excel Alternatives, JAC and the Grove GUYS and KEYS programs. There will also be a march on March 28, from the Seminole County Courthouse to Fort Mellon Park, where special guest speakers will address the public on violence-free issues.

Wolfinger said there is also an observance this month called "Victory over Violence."

Seminole County has also benefited in the field of juvenile justice through the sale of "Invest in Children" license plates. According to Juvenile Justice Council Chairman Dr. Hortense Evans, "The residents of Seminole County are directly responsible for creating these funds and now Seminole County citizens will directly receive the benefit."

Through the money raised by the license plate sale, $4,000 has been given to Juvenile Assessment Center, $2,000 to Lynn High School attendance software, $3,000 for Salvation Army of Seminole County's visitation program, $499 to Seminole County Teen Court, and $2,131.71 to Police Athletic League activities.

request can be modified along the way."

Dwight Saathoff, an attorney for the developer, said that the site plan submitted to the Planning and Zoning Commission for the planned development approval, showed the total units to be 599, reducing the density in the northern portion to less than 10 dwelling units per acre. Commissioner Kerry Lyons said that with the change in density, if the designation on the entire tract could be changed to MDR-15, "that would make it more palatable to me."

Residents of Sanford's Kaywood subdivision, some of whom never conceded to allowing multi-family construction on the property adjacent to their neighborhood, told the mayor and commissioners they could live with densities of 10 dwelling units per acre on the southern portion of the property and 15 dwelling units per acre on the northern portion of the property, if the developer would restrict access to east Twin Lake.

Saathoff conferred with Devlin, who was present at the meeting, and told the commission Devlin would agree to the restricted access if the residents would agree to 11.5 dwelling units per acre, instead of 10, on the southern portion, reducing the total number of apartments to 574. "It's a pretty substantial hit economically to reduce the south half by 50 units," Saathoff said.

"We're getting so close," Dale said to the Kaywood residents. "Garnering an agreement with no access to the lake is a major accomplishment. I think these guys have come a long way to your side."

Devlin said he would build a gazebo at the water's edge, giving the apartment residents an amenity for the lake. All of the stipulations agreed upon in the public hearing will be reduced to writing in the form of a developer's agreement. "The all of that together and that's a deal we're willing to live with," said Dean Shoemaker, son of the Kaywood developer, Kay Shoemaker.

Commissioner Velma Williams moved to accept the ordinance and the developers agreement, with Lyons seconding the motion. Whitley Eckstein cast the dissenting vote.

Marder said the ordinance will be reviewed by the DCA and it will have 45 days to a notice of intention to accept or not accept. "This hearing tonight is really not the end of the story."

on land use and the grandfathering of five adult businesses in the Fern Park area.

County officials anticipate the chambers will be filled as residents of Fern Park/Casselberry protest one more time. They want the existing clubs out of their area.

Commissioners Dick Van Der Weide and Maloy are against grandfathering but appear to be short a vote. Commissioners Adams, Randy Morris and Daryl McLain approve of the grandfathering. McLain said it would be "ludicrous even thinking about relocating" the businesses in Sanford.

has been charged in connection with reportedly exposing himself to four girls at an elementary school.

"We don't believe he's the man we've been looking for," said Sanford Deputy Police Chief Dennis Whitmire. "We faxed an artist's drawing of the man we are looking for to them, and there doesn't appear to be much similarity."

Whitmire said the man being sought in Sanford was identified as having short hair, while the man arrested in Brevard County had long hair. "Even with the hair-growth tonics they have these days," he said, "he couldn't have grown hair that fast."

The first of the Sanford incidents occurred on Feb. 24 when a man said to be driving a red pickup truck approached a young girl on Airport Boulevard near Jewett Lane. On March 4, two young girls were approached by a man at 18th Street and Oak Avenue and on Catalina Drive, near Sanford Middle School. He was also said to be driving a red pickup. In each case, he was said to have approached the girls and attempted to persuade them to get into the truck. He was reportedly seen fondling himself, similar to what Brevard County deputies said about Comtois.

Sanford police say the man

"The grandfathering is a must," Sanford Mayor Larry Dale said Monday. "In order for this partnership to work, the county must grandfather those clubs. We don't want them relocating in Sanford. They have to stay where they are."

The interlocal agreement allows the county to take credit for the city's sites and the city takes credit for the county's sites. The Supreme Court has ruled that all jurisdictions have a required number of sites for adult entertainment businesses.

Sanford officials have fought not to have the area near the Orlando Sanford Airport identified as a site but to do so have surrendered a couple of sites in the westside of the city not far from Route 46. Pastor Jimmy Dale Patterson of Central Baptist Church and residents have protested.

To meet its requirements, Sanford identified four sites in 1994. They included a small parcel near the Central Florida Zoological Park that has no access roads. Another larger parcel (33 acres) is platted but undeveloped land at Silver Lake Industrial Park.

When the Silver Lake land was designated as industrial sites, there was not much concern any adult entertainment owners would have any interest. There shouldn't be now if the existing Fern Park clubs are grandfathered.

"What people don't understand is that unless you identify areas, these businesses can come in anywhere," Dale said. "We've done something to protect ourselves from that. We've worked with the county to identify the least likely sites. I don't believe any of them will ever be used."

Keeping the focus on juvenile crime

Some people believe the news media is making a mountain out of a mole hill. They think juvenile crime is being stressed only to gain readers and viewers. Wrong! It's a problem which is becoming worse with each passing day.

State Attorney Norman Wolfinger is openly concerned. Police and sheriff departments are worried. Everyone is doing what they can to help combat juvenile crime. Through the school system, special programs have been put into operation. Various groups are conducting meetings to discuss the situation.

Nevertheless, it continues to grow. And it's not because we are more aware of it than we were in years and decades gone by. In the past, we didn't have shoot-outs in schools like we often have these days with youngsters going to school packing a firearm. We didn't have open drug sales on school grounds. We didn't have ten and 12 year olds robbing stores or stealing cars.

What has changed? Why do we have it now? Other than that, how are things? They're fine. People are earning better salaries, folks have more freedom and spare time. Unemployment in Seminole County is down to 3.2 percent, well below the state national average. Prosperity is right around the corner and getting better all the time.

Whoa, wait a minute. Are we so involved in prosperity and financial concerns that we are overlooking our own children? Are we leaving them unsupervised too much? Are we willing to allow someone else to "keep them company" while we work?

If our courts, law enforcement agencies, government officials, school leaders and teachers are working diligently on reducing juvenile crime, who is left? Who else needs to dive into this problem?

Who indeed. Unless and until parents and family members truly get involved, the hardest work by these various agencies isn't going to reduce it. It will take EVERYONE working together. Parenting is more than just having children, clothing them, and putting them through school. They have to be taught right from wrong (with parents setting the example) and the home room for such education in within the confines of your own residence.

Give it some thought. With all of the work fighting increasing juvenile crime failing to produce serious results, what - or rather, WHO is missing from the picture?

Call to action

Over the past several years, many excited entrepreneurs have made their way to the heart of Historic Downtown Sanford. Drawn by the promises of "good things to come" they enthusiastically made their jump into the downtown area.

My wife and I were two of those people, excited and ready to bring new life to this historically significant area.

There were supposed to be support groups; Main Street, The Chamber of Commerce, City Developmental people and others...but somehow, no one could answer the bothersome day-to-day problems that just wouldn't go away and eventually would just wear down even the most optimistic small business person. Questions such as:

"How can a city official bring personal lawsuit against a local business owner, when the city official was the one in violation of local codes? The business owner simply pointed to the facts and was supported in the local newspaper in his call for her removal from her positions."

"Re: Parking: Why do certain people appear to be exempt from the rules?"

"Why are inappropriate businesses allowed to move in and operate illegally, and then one day given permits? The rules are changed?"

"How can city official, not follow the laws and still hold official positions?"

"How can it be, that there are plenty of empty storefronts, but businesses that what to come, can't find anyone to rent them?"

I am calling on the mayor and the city commission to take an active interest in the redevelopment of this town's heart. I am also calling for an immediate review of city official serving on boards and in other key positions that may have violated or attempted to violate knowingly city codes and covenants.

There are still those entrepreneurs and visionaries who would gladly come into this town and bring fresh ideas...as well as those of us who are still here and still hoping and working toward the future that we can see. But, there is also no doubt, that without a change of attitudes and actions by those who are in the public trust, we risk the loss of this town's greatest historical resource...It's Historic Downtown Business District!

Clinton's ratings dim GOP hopes

President Clinton's political fortunes someday may collapse under the weight of scandal evidence, but right now they are soaring and probably will climb higher with the facing down of Saddam Hussein.

Even though Saddam surely will eventually violate his promise to admit United Nations weapons inspectors, Clinton will achieve an immediate poll boost for forcing Saddam to capitulate. Clinton's apparent victory in the Persian Gulf — even if it's temporary — is a rebuke to critics, mainly Republicans, who said he had no strategy and had done a bad job explaining his policy.

A CBS New York Times poll conducted prior to the Gulf deal showed that 64 percent of the public thought that Clinton had explained his policy clearly enough that they understood why the United States might bomb Iraq — 12 percent more than said they understood George Bush's policy before the Persian Gulf War.

More important politically, the Gulf success is evidence that Clinton is focused on his job and doing it well, which is the basis of his high approval ratings.

The new CBS poll contains data that have to cheer Democrats and dispirit the president's enemies. It's also depressing to those (like me) who think that a president should set a high moral tone for the country.

The poll, conducted Feb. 19 to 21, shows Clinton's job approval rating at 68 percent, down 5 points since CBS's previous poll Feb. 17 — points that the Iraqi settlement probably will restore when a new poll is taken.

Asked what the main reason is for approving Clinton's performance, respondents said the major factor was that he is "doing his job" and "staying focused." A record 75 percent approve his handling of the economy, and 61 percent support his foreign policy.

If public satisfaction with Clinton and the state of the nation continue until November, the chances are that Republicans will make only modest congressional gains — scoring nothing like the wipeout that the GOP hopes (and Democrats fear) the Monica Lewinsky scandal will produce.

To sustain their hopes, Republicans are relying on the gap that turns up in many polls between Clinton's job approval ratings and his personal approval.

Ultimately, of course, Republicans are hoping that independent counsel Kenneth Starr will come up with evidence of misdeeds — lying and possible perjury and obstruction of justice — that will cripple Clinton politically and take Democrats down with him.

That's why the CBS poll has to be discouraging for Republicans. It shows that Clinton can be found to have committed almost any offense he's accused of and get away with it.

The poll's crucial question was, "If it turns out that President Clinton obstructed justice by encouraging Monica Lewinsky to lie, or by lying under oath himself, what do you think should happen?"

A near majority, 46 percent, said that Clinton should simply admit and apologize for his conduct and another 16 percent said the whole matter should be dropped — for a total of 62 percent saying that no serious consequences should ensue.

Only 12 percent said that Congress should impeach Clinton, and 21 percent said he should resign. Astonishingly, 49 percent of Republicans said Clinton should get away with no more than an apology, while 48 percent said he should be forced from office.

The split among Republicans is reflected in the behavior of GOP politicians. Members of Congress, nine months from election, are speaking very carefully about the scandal. Presidential candidates are freer with criticism.

On other poll questions, 57 percent of the public said that Clinton's "political enemies" are primarily to blame for the scandal, compared with 33 percent who blame Clinton. By 59 to 27 percent, the public says that Starr is "partisan," not "impartial." Even a plurality of Republicans believes he's partisan.

Fifty percent of the public would like to see Starr's investigation dropped, while 45 percent want it to continue. Sixty-four percent — including 53 percent of Republicans — say the public doesn't need to know what kind of relationship Clinton had with Lewinsky.

Demonstrating — thank heavens — that the public has not lost all sense of morality, 61 percent do think it's important to know whether Clinton encouraged Lewinsky to lie.

The upshot of these numbers is that Starr and Republicans have an enormous problem making a case against Clinton that will stain Democratic candidates as well.

It's not impossible, of course. Starr might find strong proof of obstruction of justice, which the House Judiciary Committee could work up into a politically damaging case against Democrats.

But the poll suggests that if it's just a matter of sex and lying about it, a 59 percent majority of Americans will forgive — including 60 percent of Republicans.

And this is even before the performance, rivaling Richard Nixon's Checkers speech, in which Clinton solemnly asks for forgiveness with his wife, Hillary, standing at his side.

Prognosis good, with vigilance

At first, it was a heartening sight. The doctor's kit on the toy store shelf had a picture of both a little boy and a little girl on the package. This tiny sign of progress pleased me, because I vividly remember the day in the '70s when I realized that the contents of my little red "nurse's" kit were identical to the contents of my brother Mark's blue "doctor's" kit. The only difference, aside from the name and color, was the fact that my plastic box carried a picture of a little girl, and Mark's had a little boy.

This was one of many little cultural manipulations that anyone growing up at this time experienced. I remember, for example, the day we were flying to my grandmother's house and the stewardess brought us some souvenir pins. It did not matter that I was 6 years old and Mark was too small to even hold his head up: My pin said "stewardess"; Mark's said "captain."

So I was excited to see the little girl on the doctor's kit, and quickly reached for the nurse's kit. And this is where it got interesting. Because the picture on the package — a solitary girl in a little white hat — struck me as a perfect illustration of where we stand on gender roles today. We have reached the point where it is acceptable — commendable, even — for women to enter the male domain, but we still haven't quite dealt with the idea of men assuming traditional women's roles.

Although the numbers have been gradually growing, men have not shown very much interest in entering female-dominated professions. This, of course, can largely be attributed to the fact that such occupations, like all traditional women's work, don't pay very well. But I think something deeper is also at work: the underlying assumption that there is something inherently superior about men's work. That the woman who wants to become an executive or a senator or a fire-fighter is ambitious and daring. But the man who aspires to be a nurse or an elementary-school teacher is, well, sort of weird.

And it's not just other men who feel this way. My friend Carolyn was recently horrified to discover that she was clinging to this double-standard. "It's very important for me to stay home with my kids," says Carolyn. "And I feel like that's a respectable thing for me to be doing. But I've realized recently that if a man said he was doing the same thing I would just assume that he couldn't get a job. I know that's totally wrong, but that's definitely my gut reaction."

Peter Bayles, the editor of At-Home Dad, a newsletter for stay-at-home fathers, is not surprised by Carolyn's comment. "If the workplace is a good-old boys network, this is a good-old girls network. Go to a playground and you'll see all the mothers sitting together at the picnic table, talking. The dads will be playing with their kids."

Bruce Drobeck, founder of the DFW At-Home Dads Network, says that stay-at-home fathers also take a lot of heat from their families. "Some guys said their parents and in-laws are asking them when they'll get a real job. They wouldn't say that to a mother," Drobeck told the Dallas Presses See Mohr, Page 5A

McCain-Feingold bill was flawed

I received an invite in my mailbox this week from G. Gordon Liddy. He's hosting a fund-raiser at his home in Scottsdale for Sen. John McCain, the Arizona Republican. For $125, I can attend the cocktail reception in the senator's honor. For $250, I can attend the VIP reception, which will include a photo with the senator and the "G-Man."

While I contemplate whether to fly from San Diego to Scottsdale to rub shoulders with two of my favorite conservatives — or to merely dash off a check to aid McCain's almost certain re-election — the senator is in Washington lamenting the death of the campaign-finance reform for the year.

"I think it is beyond doubt," McCain said earlier this week, trying to muster support for the ill-fated bill he co-sponsored with Wisconsin Democrat Russ Feingold, "that the way we finance our elections in this country has caused the people we represent to doubt our personal integrity and the integrity of the institution we are privileged to serve."

But I'm not so sure that the senator was right. Indeed, if the public were so concerned about how elections are financed, how would McCain explain a January poll by the Pew Research Center showing that the American public ranked campaign finance 13th on a list of 14 major issues?

Or if the people have become so concerned about the integrity of lawmakers who represent them in Congress, or the integrity of Congress as an institution, why did most voters return their incumbent member to Congress during the most recent election? Why did they keep Republicans in power in both the House and Senate?

McCain says that the object of his campaign-finance reform measure, was "to lessen the role of money in politics."

Toward that high-sounding goal, the McCain-Feingold bill would have banned the use of so-called "soft money" (donations that go to a political party — ostensibly for "party building" — rather than a candidate) in federal races. It also would have outlawed so-called "express advocacy" (the independent expenditures by groups unaffiliated with either a candidate or political party) within two months of an election.

McCain promoted his bill as the first best hope for meaningful campaign finance reform, "to repair this terribly inequitable, unnecessarily expensive and, at times, corrupted campaign-finance system." But taking a hard look at McCain-Feingold, it was difficult to see how it would deliver the promised goods.

First of all, the bill was based on the fallacy that money determines the outcome of federal elections (which means that if lawmakers reduced the money in politics, more elections will be competitive). But the evidence simply did not bear that out.

The Washington-based Center for Voting and Democracy thoroughly analyzed the 1996 House elections, particularly focusing on races for open seats (in which money should have had the biggest impact). The authors of the study, Bob Ritchie and Steven Hill, found that the strongest predictor of a district's congressional choice was how it voted in that year's presidential race.

In districts where Bill Clinton ran well, Democrats consistently won. In districts where Clinton ran badly, Republicans consistently won. In fact, nearly one-third of Republicans who won open seats in 1996 were outperformed by Democrats. Almost all ran in districts where Clinton mustered less than 50 percent of the vote.

Even if we had discounted these findings as a fluke, even if we had blindly accepted McCain's premise that money determines political outcomes, it still was disingenuous to believe that McCain-Feingold's ban on soft money would reduce the role of cash in elections.

For the lesson of the past quarter-century of campaign-finance reform is that, whenever Congress enacts a putative reform, an unintended consequence results. And when all is said and done, there is no less money in politics than before.

Indeed, in the early 1970s, Congress passed a campaign-finance reform measure that was supposed to give small donors more influence. This gave rise to political action committees, which, incidentally, McCain considers such a bane on electoral politics that his pre-revised campaign-finance-reform bill tried to legislate them out of existence.

Similarly, a late 1970s campaign-finance-reform measure was intended to encourage the parties to get more involved in grass-roots political activities, like town-hall meetings and voter drives. This much-ballyhooed reform gave us the very soft money that McCain now wants to ban.

So even if McCain had succeeded in banning soft money, it almost certainly would have ended up somewhere else. And the most obvious place is into independent advertising campaigns by the very "special interest" groups that McCain and supporters of his campaign-finance-reform bill despise so much.

McCain-Feingold aimed to "limit the role of independent expenditures in political campaigns," thus the provision of the bill that would have outlawed independent campaign ads from using a candidate's name or likeness 60 days out from an election.

But even if McCain-Feingold had been enacted, it was highly unlikely that that particular provision would have passed constitutional muster. Indeed, since the Supreme Court's 1976 decision in Buckley vs. Valeo, the federal courts have consistently struck down laws that attempt to limit political speech.

So what lawmakers were left with, then, was a bill that focused almost exclusively on soft money (which is fine by Democrats, since Republicans raise more of it than they do). But left unaddressed were other, no less important, problems with campaign finance.

For instance, the AFL-CIO spent $35 million last election on a campaign to defeat congressional Republicans. At least 30 percent of that money was derived from union members who support the Republican Party, which means that their dues were used to nullify their vote.

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that these union members are entitled to withhold the portion of their dues or agency fees that go to political activities. But this decision is not being enforced by the Clinton administration.

By the same token, McCain-Feingold ignored the role of foreign money in the most recent election. Indeed, the Democratic Party raised millions of dollars from non-Americans, including Buddhist nuns, Indonesian gardeners and at least one Chinese arms dealer.

It stands to reason that, if McCain wanted to limit how much American citizens can contribute to political campaigns, he should also have supported a complete ban on political contributions by noncitizens — foreign nationals who use their money to negate the vote of U.S. citizens.

Finally, it is interesting to note that McCain did not throw his support behind a simple campaign finance reform that has been proposed in other quarters. That is, to require a candidate to raise funds exclusively in the state or district in which he or she is campaigning for office.

Of course, if the senator had supported such a reform, he wouldn't have been able to ask me and other non-Arizonans to contribute to his re-election effort. He wouldn't like that, and neither would I.

ORLANDO - Making the Right Connections was what the over 500 attendees who were "Connecting for Success" at the third annual Region III Title I Family Involvement conference. The Grosvenor Resort at Walt Disney World Village was the site of this event.

The main objectives were to facilitate and increase the positive connections with families, schools and communities so that children would receive help and become successful.

Staff and parents were able to attend various planned workshops that were informative. Sheryl Hardy, a parent who has three children at the Midway Elementary Title I Program, says she is grateful for having the opportunity to attend her second conference and is grateful to have these new learning tools to help her children.

Laurie Abbott, a parent with two girls in the program at Lake Orienta School, attended the conference for the first time. Abbott says the session was wonderful. Informative and it gave her help with the study habits and study skills of her children. She also says her attending the workshop "PETALS" (Parents Exploring Teaching and Learning Styles) helps the parent to discover important characteristics about themselves, children and others that will improve relationships and communications. They indeed learned what makes people tick.

Various sessions of the conference made parents aware of the every increasing influences on their children that can both be positive and negative, outside their homes.

There was knowledge and effective strategies given which will work with educational and behavioral needs. This first multi-lingual conference was also informative to the Spanish parents as translators were available. Parents were shown hands on experience in making learning materials for their children to use at home. Math Make 'N Take.

State assessment tests were discussed to familiarize parents. Parents can help their children read at home by reading aloud newspapers and other concepts. This assures families that parents will be partners in literacy, raising a thinking child, and approaching the ways of improving our children's thinking skills and behavior. Now, women who have been struggling with discrimination in the workplace will probably not shed a lot of tears about the fact that men face their own set of problems when entering the woman's domain. However, I think this kind of lopsidedness hinders both men and women, since it limits the choices of men and perpetuates the myth that the work that women have traditionally done is less valuable. We would all do much better if we could truly believe in our hearts that real men do women's work.

Boy Scouts' dream starts with dinner

Boy Scout Troop 543 of Sanford, sponsored by the Father Lyons Council of Knights of Columbus, recently served spaghetti dinners at the KC Hall, from 3-6 p.m.

Troop members served salads, garlic bread, iced tea and plates filled with spaghetti and meat sauce. Wearing their Boy Scout uniforms and Prego chef hats, one group of boys scooped sauce from a 10-gallon pot onto plates heaped with spaghetti. Others were servers, while a third group took tickets or cash at the door.

The spaghetti dinner is one of numerous fund-raisers. The boys hope to raise enough money to one day take their entire troop to a Boy Scout Camp in Puerto Rico. That dream is many

OWNERS

Dear Valued Customers,

Due to recent coverage on WFTV Channel 9, we are compelled to inform you that several important facts have been missing in the reports:

1. The points in the survey of the restaurants were taken from the past two and half year's records. China King has been under our management for only two years. The points accumulated during the 6 month period before acquisition were not mismanaged by Hun Lung Inc.
2. During two years of management, we have maintained notable cleanliness in our premise. We have complied and rectified every citation and have not failed to do so.

We thank you for your patronage, and assure you that we will zealously maintain to cater quality food at an affordable price and pleasant dining environment for your enjoyment.
The management of China King

EMPLOYEES

To Whom It May Concern,

We have been employed at China King Buffet for 4 1/2 and 5 years and would like to inform you that some of your Action News reports are totally untrue. You state that M. Lam closed a business because of Health Violations and re-opened here. China King has been open for 5 years and Mr. Lam only took over management 2 years and 3 months ago. You also report we have had filthy conditions and health violations in the past 2 1/2 years. We have been here for all our inspections and the only violations we've had were before Mr. Lam took over.

Maybe we've had warning of a utensil being placed in a sink it shouldn't have been in or pest control problems which every restaurant has especially in Florida, but Mr. Lam is always quick to correct any problem we have and has done so all along. Why don't you put that in your report?

On your web site you show 18 other restaurants with many violations however you only show Bamboo Cafe' and China King on film, both Chinese Restaurants. Could that be discrimination? Also the way you show on your commercials the kitchen of Bamboo Cafe' and then our sign gives the impression that is our kitchen and it is not.

We understand you have a job to do and respect that fact but we also have jobs and if our customers believe your reports we will no longer be able to make a living.

We eat at China King almost every day as do our family and friends. Obviously if our restaurant was as dirty as you report neither us or our families would eat here.

We can also assure you we would not be writing you this letter with our signatures if we thought it would backfire.

As frequent viewers of Channel 9 we are very discouraged by the way this story was handled and wonder if the news we rely on every day is only half of the story as this one is.

Please know this letter is to tell you our side of the story as employees that want to get the story straight.

Sincerely,
Diane Webb

CUSTOMERS

To Whom it may concern:

My wife and I have been coming to China King for years. We have had very good service and food from this restaurant. I can say the food has been of the the highest quality.

Prices and service are the best in this area.

I have been coming to China King for the past two years and have never had any negative experiences. The food is excellent, well prepared, and a vast selection is offered. It definitely is one of the best values in Central Florida. On three different occasions I have seen the "negative" reports and they seem to be in accord with the current "media mania" which seems to continue to "Beat A Dead Horse". There are some very serious infractions being committed on a regular basis with about every "fast food" franchise, but due to political affiliations these go unreported due to their influence. China King should not be "singled out" for any reason. I will continue to come here and bring my international friends.

Two-baggers ring out in Sanford Co-Ed Softball

From Staff Reports

SANFORD - Double your pleasure, double your runs.

It's a bad pun, but that's what happened at Pinehurst Park in the Sanford Recreation Department Co-Ed Polar Bear Slowpitch Softball League Monday night.

In the opening game of the evening, Homegrown Hydroponics remained undefeated the easy way as Holmes Truss did not show, handing Homegrown Hydroponics a 7-0 victory.

In the nightcap, the two teams combined for 16 doubles (including 12 by Chang's Car Care) and 41 hits as Chang's Car Care won its fourth game in five starts, 29-16 in five innings, over Beer :30.

Pultz leads Oviedo; Lake Howell, Lyman rally

By Tony DeSormier
HERALD CORRESPONDENT

OVIDEO - Senior first baseman Lawrence Pultz went 3-for-4 with two doubles and four RBI Saturday to lead the Oviedo Lions to a 12-0 thrashing of the visiting DeLand Bulldogs in a Class 6A-District 3 baseball game at Mikler Field.

Pultz, who drove in a run with a ground out in the second inning to tie the game at 1-1, keyed Oviedo's five-run third inning with a two-run double. He also doubled in the Lions' 12th run of the game in the sixth inning.

Scott Ferrell plated the go-ahead run for Oviedo when his sacrifice fly brought home Justin Holmes in the bottom of the third inning to snap the 1-1 tie. Ferrell later added a solo home run.

Reliever John Buchanan, who worked two-thirds of an inning, was awarded the victory while Nick Traeger earned the save. Traeger came on in the top of the fifth inning with the score 9-5 in Oviedo's favor and DeLand runners on first and second base. He escaped the jam and allowed only one run on two hits over the final 2 2/3-innings.

Also contributing to the Lions' attack were Jeremy Frost (triple, single, two runs scored, two RBI), Ben Knapp (double, single, two runs scored), Troy Douthett (double, one RBI), Larry Grayson (two singles, one run scored), Holmes (single, two runs scored, one RBI), Guy Erwin (single, two RBI), and Ashley Stevens (two runs scored).

Oviedo (5-3 overall and 2-1 in district play) visits Winter Springs for a 7 p.m. game on Wednesday.

Raiders baseball team has winning weekend

From Staff Reports

SANFORD - Former Seminole Athletic Conference players had big weekends as did a couple of freshmen from Alabama and Seville, Florida as the Seminole Community College baseball team won three of four games and looks to be working its way toward respectability.

After starting the season 1-11-1, the Raiders have now won six of seven games and now stand 7-12-1.

It's a good time to get hot as SCC opens Mid-Florida Conference play today on the road in Ocala against a tough Central Florida Community College team starting at 3 p.m.

That game is just the beginning as the Raiders host Indian River Community College at home on Wednesday, travel to Jacksonville for an M-FC game with Florida Community College on Thursday (both game also at 3 p.m.), travel to Palatka for a M-FC doubleheader against St. Johns River Community College starting at noon on Saturday, then cap off the week with a home doubleheader against Madison Area Tech on Sunday starting at 1 p.m.

SCC softball team wins three of four

From Staff Reports

SANFORD - The Seminole Community College softball team swept a home doubleheader in exciting fashion on Thursday and split a road doubleheader on Tuesday to get its record back over the .500 mark for the season.

The Raiders saw their week get off to a bad start as after traveling to Madison, the North Florida Community College Sentinels scored four runs in the bottom of the first inning and held on for a 6-4 victory.

But SCC then got things going in the right direction, coming back from a 2-0 deficit to score nine runs over the final four innings of the nightcap to defeat NFCC, 9-4.

The Raiders then brought the momentum home with them as they swept a doubleheader from Grand Rapids (Michigan) Community College, 2-1 and 8-6.

But what made the wins even more dramatic was the fact that SCC won the first game by getting only one hit, and it didn't figure in either run.

Trailing 1-0 in the third inning, Lyman graduate Jamie Sharp walked, stole second, moved to third on a ground out and scored on a passed ball.

In the bottom of the seventh inning, Kim Ramey walked, advanced to third when Deltona's Erin Maljub got to second as her bunt was misplayed into a two-base error, Shannon Hay then pinch-hit and squeezed Ramey home with the winning run.

In the second game the Raiders again got in a hole, trailing 6-0 after three innings. The score stayed that way until the bottom of the eighth inning, when the hosts rallied for eight runs and the win.

"We waited until the sixth, but it was worth it," said SCC head coach Courtney Miller. "They (Grand Rapids) made a couple of errors that helped us out, but we kept hitting the ball hard and once we scored a few runs, they mentally broke down and we put them away."

On Sunday, SCC moved back to on campus Raider Field for a doubleheader with Hagerstown (Maryland) Junior College and got a split.

Sanford's Brad Jenkins pitched a good game, striking out nine, while allowing only three earned runs on nine hits, but got no offensive help in suffering a 4-0 loss.

The bats returned for the Raiders in game two, as Rhodes ripped two more doubles (giving him 11 for the season) in the hosts, 8-1 thumping of the Hawks. Evans and Johnny Gulsepice drove in a pair of runs.

Volunteers of the week

Church members aid tornado victims

By Susan Wenner
HERALD STAFF WRITER

SANFORD - The aftermath of the recent tornado that struck Osceola, Orange, Seminole and Volusia counties has taken its toll of many of its victims but the Rev. Bruce Scott and others from First Presbyterian Church have tried to ease the heartache through their volunteer efforts.

Rev. Scott, his wife, Jane; Office Administrator, Linda Gunter and Shirley Brumley have been among those tirelessly sacrificing their time and talents to help those in need. They have faithfully manned the phone, made deliveries, contacted service agencies, organized and worked to get things running smoothly.

The fellowship hall of First Presbyterian Church was initially set up as a shelter on Monday, February 23 just hours after the devastating storm. Later on Friday, February 27 the hall reopened as a disaster relief headquarters for the American Red Cross.

A flurry of activity has been present ever since and the Scotts, Gunter and Brumley have been in the center assisting in whatever way possible. In addition, everyone from the youth and ladies in the church have banded together for emergency assistance with yard work, meals for victims, arranging for food for funerals held at the church and all arcas of need.

According to Gunter, "The Red Cross called to ask if they could use our facilities for the shelter. They did but closed it down a few days later. Then they asked if they could set up the disaster relief here and they moved in on Friday. The Rev. Scott believes that the church facilities belong to the community so he wants to use it to help others. Shirley organized several days of crews with chain saws to help the victims."

She added that they have also called in local missions. Organizations such as the Sanford Christian Sharing Center and Goodwill have had needy people come to them and the church has assisted too. The stage of the fellowship hall is filled with donations and more keep pouring in. Members have been ready to travel to homes to supply these donations to anyone calling.

Red Cross confirmed that between the counties of Orange, Osceola, Seminole and Volusia over 21,924 meals and snacks have been provided and 334 families have received financial assistance. Assessment teams and other volunteers of the Red Cross are located within the fellowship hall for those that are able to come.
For more information about the church activities call 322-2662 or Red Cross efforts call 328-4573.

Check out those beautiful stamens

The "bottlebrush" belongs to the genus Callistemon, which means "beautiful stamens". There is no doubt that it is a perfect description of the bright red flower spikes. This small tree is native to Australia and belongs to the Myrtle family which includes Eucalyptus, guava, Surinam-cherry, Roseapple, and Myrtle. Hummingbirds frequently visit their flowers. The weeping bottlebrush has become a very popular garden specimen in Florida, California, and Hawaii. The lemon bottlebrush is also used extensively in Florida, less common in South Florida than further north in the State. Its leaves have the odor of citrus when crushed. The showy bottlebrush is more appreciated because of the longer flower spikes that can be up to six inches in length and have gold tips on the stamens.

The plant: The plant is an evergreen tree that can reach heights of 10 to 15 feet and has a medium to fast growth rate. Leaves are alternate, simple, lanceolate, and with entire leaf margins. Flower color is commonly red, but, white, cream and pink flowers are known to exist. Flowers appear in the spring and summer and are very showy. The flowers are followed by small, woody capsules that look like bead bracelets on the bark, which lasts for years. The fruit is round, about 1/2, brown in color. Capsules that surround old stems contain many dust-like seeds. Branches droop as the tree grows, and will require pruning for vehicular or pedestrian clearance beneath the canopy. It usually grows with multiple trunks, and is fairly resistant to breakage. The brittle wood of Weeping Bottlebrush may make it unsuitable for windy areas but this is usually not a problem in most locations. Surface roots are usually not a problem.

Culture: Bottlebrush can grow in almost any type of soil, slightly acidic and with good drainage. The tree blooms best under full sun. Transplant only little trees from containers. After the tree is established in the landscape, it is quite drought tolerant. Fertilize regularly to maintain good flower color and dark green foliage. It is recommended that trees should be fertilized two to three times per year. Suckers from the trunk need to be removed periodically to maintain tree form. Maintain a good control of the grass around the tree.

Use: Bottlebrush can be trained as a tree to 15 feet or espaliered as a quick wall cover. It makes a nice screen or tall unclipped hedge. Pruning to develop several trunks and removing some lower branches can create a fine small specimen tree. It can also be used in containers or above-ground planters; espalier; hedge; large parking lot islands; wide tree lawns; medium-sized parking lots or for median strip plantings in the highway; near a deck or patio; screen; small parking lot islands; narrow tree lawns; specimen or residential street tree.

Propagation: It is usually propagated from cuttings but it can also be grown from seeds and air-layers.

Pests and diseases: Bottlebrush is not affected by specific insect problems, but mites can affect the leaves. Root and crown fungal diseases can become a problem under high soil moisture conditions. Twig galls and witches broom, two fungal diseases, can disfigure the tree. Chlorosis, of the new leaves can be corrected with treatment of the soil using iron sulfate or iron chelate. The tree is often short-lived due to disease problems.

Manager struggles to keep office running on time

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR IGNORED: Ask your boss to put the office policies in writing, which may make them easier for you to enforce. Keep in mind that you were made the office manager for a reason, and that those are business relationships - not friendships.

Then, with a clear conscience, do the job you were hired to do.

DEAR ABBY: I am the manager of a five-person office. The office hours are supposed to be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., with an hour (from noon to 1 p.m.) for lunch.

Three of the staff members are older than I am, so it's uncomfortable for me to correct them. The problem is that two of them always come in late. One of them (I'll call her Betty) comes in from 20 to 40 minutes late almost daily, but she leaves at the stroke of 5, regardless.

The other (I'll call her Sue) adjusts her hours and stays late to make up the time.

I have a different kind of problem with "Jan." She refuses to listen when I ask her not to drink or eat near the computer. She becomes defensive when I remind her.

Abby, please help me to resolve these sticky situations. Is there a tactful way to get Betty and Sue to arrive on time, and to get Jan to confine her eating to the lunchroom?

A little dirt won't hurt you

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: In a recent article, you stated that beef is not contaminated by the fodder that cattle eat and, you concluded, people who have a problem with that ought to stick to vegetables.

Well, let's look at what goes into fruit and vegetables. Many farmers fertilize their fields with E. coli-containing chicken waste and hog manure — even, in some countries, human excrement. That's not all! Look at what makes up our soil. Soil has pretty nasty stuff in it and most of it is radioactive. Yep, put a Geiger counter next to it and listen to it click away. There are heavy metals in the soil, as well as bugs, slugs and every other thing imaginable.

Then, to top things off, soil mostly contains DIET, the stuff your mom made you wash off your hands before eating. The dirt that gave you pinworms, typhoid and heaven knows what! Dirt can turn to MUD!

Let's face it. Other than the taste of food, everything about its cultivation and processing is disgusting. I'll bet you're more likely to get sick from eating vegetables than from consuming properly cooked meats.

DEAR READER: Whew! Every so often, I get letters like yours that could politely be called "off the wall." I usually ignore them. I'm publishing yours because it is so full of inaccuracies that most of my readers will be amused. Most important, you seem to have lost an important attribute for a healthy and happy life: perspective.

Definition of a human being: a low-life form cursed by the ability to realize it could do better. You have carried this interpretation to new extremes.

Hey, we depend on soil, the recycling of nitrogen in waste, mud and good 'ol dirt. The components of soil don't enter growing plants; only the chemical molecules do. The tomatoes in your garden don't care if the nitrogen they need comes from chicken poop or synthetic fertilizer, it's all the same to them. The bacteria aren't a factor. They just sit in the soil, happy in their own ecosystem. The radioactivity in soil is trivial. You get more radiation by lying in the sun for an hour.

You can get crazy from imagining all the possible hazards in our environment. You have what I call "whole wheat germs." You worry about trivial stuff. Yes, wash your fruit and vegetables. But for heaven's sake, lighten up. Enjoy our environment, mud and all, because it's all we've got. And make sure that you eat a balanced diet that contains fruit, vegetables and a certain amount of dirt. Your body can take it.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What are dust mites? Are we breathing and eating them? Where are they? Should I use an air-purifier?

DEAR READER: Dust mites are tiny but ferocious-looking parasites that are ubiquitous in every house, no matter how clean the dwelling. These critters live wherever there is dust: in rugs and cracks, on upholstery, under the bed — everywhere. They eat the minuscule flakes of skin that we all shed, and they reproduce with utter abandon. They're harmless, for the most part. It's their feces that cause problems.

Many people are allergic to dust-mite excrement. Upon exposure (which may be fairly constant), such people cough and sneeze, develop postnasal drip, and suffer sinus congestion. Air purifiers rarely help the situation, because dust mites are as much a part of our complex ecosystem as are staph germs and molds. Patients with allergies to dust mites are often treated successfully with desensitizing injections.

Unless you have chronic upper-respiratory congestion (in which case you should seek medical attention), I suggest that you forget about dust mites; otherwise, you'll just get crazy.

WIN AT BRIDGE

One step, two step

By Phillip Alder

Ambrose Bierce, in characteristic fashion, said, "All are lunatics, but he who can analyze his delusions is called a ... What?"

Many (most?) bridge players delude themselves into thinking that they play better than they do. But whatever one's standard, to play well involves analysis. And, strange as it sounds at first, sometimes you can work out the right play from something that did not happen. For example, the responder passes his partner's opening bid. You now know he doesn't have six high-card points. That might prove critical.

Which negative inference applies in today's deal? You reach three no-trump by the speedy route. West leads the diamond two. How do you continue?

You have seven top tricks: two spades, two hearts, one diamond and two clubs. Clearly, the only danger is a 3-0 club break and a misguess. If you lose a trick to the club queen, surely the defenders will cash enough diamond tricks to defeat you.

If either defender is void in clubs, who is it?

The key is the opening lead: the diamond two. This tells you, assuming West is honest, that he has only four diamonds. Can he be void in clubs? If he is, he must have nine major-suit cards. Surely West would have led from his five-card major rather than his four-card minor. So, East is the only candidate for a club void. Start with the club ace. When East discards, your two-step analysis is duly rewarded.

Bierce claimed philosophers can analyze their own delusions.

HOROSCOPE

Your Birthday

Wednesday, March 11, 1998

A competent partner could be an enormous asset for you in the coming year if you cooperate unreservedly. Your joint accomplishment motivates you to put forth the extra effort.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Partnerships might not work out too well for you today. This is because both you and your counterpart may both be too self-serving and singular. Paces, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $2 and BASE to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1758, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10156. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Strive to be charitable today, but make sure it is for the right people and for the right reasons.

Do not let yourself become a victim of a manipulator.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you're watching your waistline today, stand guard over indulgence. Remember, unbecoming bulges are the fines we pay for exceeding the food limit.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Try to stay out of competitions today, especially those that directly affect your work or career. Lady Luck could be extremely fickle at this time.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Braggarts are the type of people you usually find very unattractive. Be careful today you don't give others reasons to put you in this category.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Unless you truly know what you're doing, be wary today about managing things for others. Your bungling could exceed your good intentions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Giving and taking is a two-way street today that you should keep uppermost in your mind. Strive to be as generous in return as people are with you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Do not do today what you can put off until tomorrow is a detrimental policy to follow at this time. Avoid the urge to play things this way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Take with a grain of salt today big promises made to you by an influential contact. This person might be a better talker than a producer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be extremely careful today not to give others the impression they are being used to serve your ambitions. Your image could be tarnished.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Ideas you conceive today might sound like dazzling at first, but they could contain flaws that won't be obvious to you or others until implemented.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Be careful not to overstep advances that are just to be in your possession. There might be a delay you won't be able to overcome too easily.
