ministry bridgehead, a prelude to a dash for the forbidden territory of Parliament Square, where a monster demonstration for additional unemployment relief apparently had been planned.

The police summoned motor reinforcements, and for the first time used automobiles to blockade the crowd, missiles began to fly and in a very short while there were many bloody heads among the police as well as the demonstrators.

As the afternoon wore on, it was apparent the police were going to succeed in their effort to prevent the riot from spreading across the Thames. Then the unemployed executed a strategy that smacked of military tactics.

The bobbies closed the crowded narrow streets one at a time around the council hall, only to find swarms of dour protesters advancing along some quiet and overlooked detour.

In Boniface Street under the shadow of the walls of Lambeth palace, three bobbies were trapped by a surging throng. Frantic a company is to take no part in political elections.

Farley Charges Intimidation Of Workers In Vote

James D. Tew, president of B. F. Goodrich Company, said any allegation that his concern has instructed or in any way coerced its employees to vote for any candidate for office in the November election is untrue.

R. R. Gross, Firestone factory manager at Akron, said:

"We have made no statements to our employees as to what party they should support."

Farley, in continuing his comment on the report from Ohio and the Ford statement, said:

"We are not at all disturbed at this. The explanation of Mr. Ford's enthusiasm for the reelection of Mr. Hoover can probably be found in the fact that Mr. Ford has built automobile manufacturing plants in Canada, in Europe and in the Orient, where he is now employing cheap foreign labor and utilizing foreign materials.

"It is to escape the penalties placed on American manufacturers by the Smoot-Hawley tariff, against which he protested so vehemently, and the retaliatory tariffs which it has brought in foreign countries. Mr. Ford's American plants are either idle or are working on part-time and thousands of his American employees are idle and in need. Certainly the conditions surrounding his business in America do not justify his enthusiasm for the reelection of Mr. Hoover."

torchlight parades to the arrival of the candidate in Buffalo.

In Rochester, he had followed hundreds of marching men to the convention hall to list the various Democratic achievements in the state in order, he said, to tell William J. Donovan, the Republican candidate for governor, "whether my claim that there are forgotten people in this country is based on my record of achievement."

The legislation included a law to forbid the working of women and children in industry for more than 54 hours a week; the direct primary law; factory inspection laws; measures requiring one day's rest in seven; the establishment of a park program, labor laws and highway measures.

Alfred E. Smith, the governor said, had "to bring the state up to modern ideas of social justice."

"And under the leadership of Governor Smith we started a park program," he said, adding after a brief discussion of the program:

"Yes, that was for the kind of forgotten man that I am talking about."

Roosevelt said Governor Smith had withstood "a terrific effort" on the part of "Republican leadership to give away to the money trust the state owned waterpower, one million and a quarter horsepower on the St. Lawrence River."

He added that there was a definite issue this fall in the same question.

The governor called upon his audience to ask Donovan "if he is in favor of the state of New York building the dam and the powerhouse across that river and turning its hands on the throttle of the power from now on into

Charles Vermillion Dies Of Heart Attack

Charles Judson Vermillion, 69, resident of Wekiva for the past 20 years, died at his home near there late Sunday, stricken by a heart attack.

Funeral services were held at the Erickson Funeral Home yesterday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock, with burial in Evergreen Cemetery. Rev. J. M. Thompson, of Lake Mary, officiated.

Mr. Vermillion was born in Licking Co., Ohio on Jan. 3, 1863. He came to Florida about 25 years ago, and had lived near the Wekiva River bridge for more than 20 years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Nettie Vermillion, and a daughter, Mrs. J. G. Lovett, of Wekiva, and a sister, Mrs. M. Pully, of Anthem, Ohio.

whistles brought rescuers, but not before one officer dropped under a barrage of rocks and bottles.

Other ancient streets close by the towering ecclesiastical precincts saw crisp fighting, and nightfall found St. Thomas' Hospital nearly a virtual clearing house for casualties.

The police steadily gained the upper hand, however, and the trouble would have been over, had not gangs of rowdy youths taken advantage of the turmoil to commence looting.

They chose dingy Marsh Street to start. A tailor lost an entire window display. A candy store was wrecked. A huge lump of concrete crashed through a radio shop window, and the proprietor fended off the crowd with a cut-glass

At the next shop, a haberdashery, deployed police reserves caught up with the looters and a fierce battle followed. The mob dashed for a motor accessory shop and seized big automobile parts to hurl against the constables.

Then sporadic outbreaks of this kind occurred on nearby streets, the progress of the looters traceable by the sound of smashing plate glass.

Meanwhile the main battle ground around the council hall was quieting down. Seven constables guarding the Lambeth north subway station managed to drag down the shutters in time to repel a last surging advance to break the line and cross the Thames. Reserves began clearing the streets and the regular riot squads concentrated on the looters.

By 11 P. M., most of the trouble area was quiet. A force of constables remained to guard the council hall, and all approaches to Parliament Square from the south were ordered heavily guarded throughout the night.

A check showed 20 policemen had been severely injured. Eight of the rioters were seriously hurt. Thirty demonstrators and looters were arrested.

Reynolds Family Shows Desire To Dismiss Charges

ble, at the same time issued a statement saying it had advised Reynolds, after an investigation:

"We have been unable to discover evidence which in our opinion would justify us in advising the family to join in the prosecution of the indictment, and we have so informed members of the family."

Reached at West Jefferson, where he is conducting a term of court, Solicitor Higgins said he would "take plenty of time" in considering the Reynolds letter.

"I shall consider the letter carefully, coming from the source that it does," he said. "After careful and deliberate consideration, I shall then make up my own mind, regardless of who wants this or that done. That's my responsibility and I intend to follow it."

The Reynolds letter contained the first public statement from any member of the family, except R. J. Reynolds, Jr., only brother of Smith. Shortly after his arrival in Winston-Salem from the West Coast of Africa, where he was cruising when notified of his brother's death, young Reynolds said he was of the opinion his brother was murdered. This opinion, he said, was based upon a reading of the testimony given at the coroner's inquest, which blamed his brother's death on "unknown parties."

The 28-year-old widow and Walker had been indicted, Aug. 4, before R. J. returned to the United States. They were then and are now free under $25,000 bond each.

When told of the Reynolds letter, Benet Pollock, of Mrs. Reynolds' local counsel, said he was not surprised, but indicated informally it was possible his client would prefer to stand trial.

"I felt that when Mr. Reynolds had investigated the evidence, his indignation would cause him to write such a letter," Pollock said.

Norris Calls On Labor To Oppose Hoover At Polls

fluence" to obtain for Richberg a federal judgeship.

"Now let us see the picture," said Senator Norris, copies of whose address were distributed in advance by the Democratic national committee; "let us get into all its hideousness."

"Mr. Doak's informant, Mr. Richberg that he was acting on behalf and at the suggestion of the President of the United States and it was deemed necessary for Mr. Richberg to come to Washington to give some important assistance."

"When he met the secretary, Mr. Richberg was informed the President was worried over the possibility that the anti-union bill might be pressed for passage in that session and he was anxious to see whether some compromise might not be worked out."

"Mr. Richberg demurred when he found he was called to Washington to hold a conference with the Attorney Emery (counsel for opponents to the act). He felt it would be useless to attempt any compromise with the man who so bitterly opposed the bill and who represented corporations which had always opposed that kind of legislation."

"Mr. Richberg informs me that when he was talking about this legislation with the secretary, Secretary Doak asked Mr. Richberg whether he would not like to be appointed to the federal judiciary and suggested he might be able to exert a great deal of influence in that direction."

The senator's address was delivered entirely to a discussion of the legislation he introduced, and its enactment. The anti-union bill, passed in the last session of Congress, curbs the power of courts in issuing injunctions in labor disputes, outlaws the "yellow dog" contract forbidding employees to join unions, and provides for a trial by jury in contempt cases not occurring in court.

"This act," the senator said, "has been heralded as a new declaration of liberty for the toiling masses of the country. It has sometimes been referred to as the second emancipation proclamation."

"The most astounding thing, however, which has ever been said about this legislation appears in the Republican campaign book just issued. This gives credit for the passage of the legislation solely to President Hoover."

COMPANIES TO EXPAND

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—(AP)—An outlay of approximately $35,000,000 is to be made by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company and the Bell system in the next year, officials announced. Much of the work is not an immediate necessity but was planned at this time as a means of adding in unemployment relief this winter.

Bronchial Troubles Need Creomulsion

Bronchial troubles may lead to something serious. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, a combined product that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and loosens the inflamed membrane and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creomulsion is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agents for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion soothes, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and soothe the inflamed membrane and free the throat from irritation. While the remedy reaches to the stomach, it is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germ.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of acute and chronic coughs, bronchitis, influenza, and other forms of respiratory troubles, and is especially effective in the treatment of whooping cough, croup, and other forms of acute respiratory troubles. It is especially effective in the treatment of whooping cough, croup, and other forms of acute respiratory troubles.

BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY
NO MORE WAR: Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.—Isaiah 2:4.

Don't forget Dave Sholtz tonight!

On Nov. 8, as we get it, the people of the United States will march to the polls for the purpose of confirming the Literary Digest's straw poll.

Gene Tunney has abandoned his campaigning for Franklin Roosevelt, declaring the Democrats are sure to win anyway. Over-confidence has lost many a battle.

The Standard Statistics Company representing the composite opinions of 530 representative business concerns throughout the United States reports that the crisis has passed and business has begun a slow but steady improvement since last June. Whether that is true or not, all we can say is that it is about time.

Walt Park, this country's most exclusive racing plant, announces that racing will be conducted next winter as in the past but that grandstand seats will be reduced from $2.50 to $1.00, while clubhouse privileges will be cut from $5.00 to $3.00. This will come as welcome news to those who still believe in their lucky stars, or that they can recoup the family fortunes by long shots on the nose. To those who merely like to see the horses run, it will mean little. They can't afford to go anyway.

A subscriber writes that he has invented a "perpetual motion" machine. A "perpetual motion" machine is one which runs all the time without any outside force, and, presumably, without any loss of energy. Many things may happen before then. The sun may crash into the sea, leaving the world to freeze under an avalanche of snow and ice. The earth itself may crash with the stars, scattering every bit of matter into countless bits and leaving the "perpetual motion" machine perpetually incapacitated.

Dr. Albert Einstein, German mathematician and scientist, whose mental gyrations are so complex that he alone can understand them, makes the assertion that the earth is 10,000,000,000 (ten billion) years old. That would make it just 5,000,000,000 years older than the Bible says it is, and about 6,000,000,000 years older than eminent Princeton scientists have figured. These are magnificent figures! When we think of the football game Saturday and the election next month, a billion years seems like an age!

According to the Miami Herald, 514 Florida persons were killed in automobile accidents last year. Broad highways, gentle curves, and well tried traffic systems, are not enough to prevent carelessness. Most accidents are indeed caused by carelessness, or if you prefer, thinking of something else when you should be thinking about driving your car. Further, most accidents occur at intersections. To a careful driver, an intersection is like the waving of a red flag. But many drivers whiz by almost crazily without a thought, leaving it entirely to God to see them through.

The Herald invites that portion of the public interested in football games, which we believe, includes practically everyone, to participate in The Herald's Eighth Annual Pick-the-Winner Contest. This year we are running the ball in smaller type than usual and in less conspicuous form, so the winners of limited space cannot see the results. But we are sure the contest will be one of the most interesting and the most exciting of previous years. So get out your spectacles, probe around until you find the ball, mark it and leave it at The Herald office.

Roosevelt And The Budget

Gov. Roosevelt's reiteration last night against the immediate presentation of the adjusted compensation certificates of the World War veterans against a positive stand in favor of a federal budget balanced not only in theory but also in fact, should go a long way toward setting at rest previously prevailing fears of business leaders that a Democratic victory would result in shaken confidence in governmental securities with all the disastrous financial consequences which that entails.

With the American Legion voting overwhelmingly in favor of the bonus payment, it has become almost a foregone conclusion that the next Congressional session will pass a bill making cash advances to the veterans of $2,300,000,000, in addition to the billion dollar item already included annually in the budget for their benefit. Only the veto power of the President can prevent the enactment of such a law which, in its least offensive form, would immediately increase federal taxes by over fifty percent.

No Congress would dare in times like these to make such an additional tax levy upon the people and would doubtless adopt the easier and more dangerous policy of leaving the budget unbalanced with the gaps to be filled in later through the sale of government securities. Gov. Roosevelt's positive stand in favor of a balanced budget leads one to believe that he would veto any bill tending to unbalance it and would make such recommendations as to economies and tax levies as would effectively balance it.

Just why balanced budgets should be so important in the economic re-adjustments of the country is not difficult for Sanford people to understand when they recall that for several years Sanford operated with its budget hopelessly out of balance, depending largely upon additional bond sales to pay interest and other contracted expenditures. It is conceivable that a policy of continued borrowing on the part of the federal government could result in a situation where U. S. governments would be little better than Sanford bonds.

Shortly after the World War, the public debt of this country stood at approximately $26,000,000,000. During the next ten years, largely as a result of an unprecedented period of prosperity and the enormous incomes of individuals and corporations and the resulting surpluses in the federal treasury from income taxes, the treasury was able to reduce this debt to a little more than $15,000,000,000. During the past three years, partly because of declining incomes of some fifty percent, and partly because of bond issues for public works to relieve unemployment and to provide funds for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, this debt has been increased from $15,000,000,000 to about $20,000,000,000.

Any failure to balance the budget, any resort to further bond issues for public works, such as advocated by William Randolph Hearst, any payment of bonuses such as advocated by the veterans, any inflation of the currency such as propounded by Senator Borah, any system of unemployment insurance or "dole" such as recommended recently by Gov. Roosevelt himself, any further loans to banks, insurance companies, railroads, farmers, or other special interests, such as has been inaugurated by President Hoover himself, can only bring about an additional increase in the obligations of this country, unless accompanied by unbearable increases in taxation.

And should the securities of the United States government become so impaired that there would be no market for them, or that their value would be depreciated from par to seventy-five, fifty or even lower, like most other bonds in the country, we would have a depression which would make this one look like the good old days.

Reverse English

Something unique in the procedure of an American case has developed in Winston-Salem where Libby Holman, widow of the late Smith Reynolds, tobacco fortune heir, awaits trial for his slaying.

When the tragedy first occurred the family of the dead man was insistent that death was not caused by suicide and called upon the authorities for a vigorous prosecution of the suspects. Libby Holman, chief among them, could not be found. She was in hiding somewhere and it was not for some time that she reluctantly gave herself up to be indicted for murder and later to be freed on bond.

Now the situation is reversed. The family of Smith Reynolds, for some undisclosed reason, wants the case dropped, perhaps because they realize all the unsavory details of a sordid life would be paraded before the jury to cast shame on one who is dead and humiliate his survivors.

At the same time Libby Holman is insisting that the trial be held in order that she may be vindicated once and for all without the specter of some future action always hanging over her. This attitude seems to indicate that she is confident of being acquitted.

But perhaps the most interesting thing about the situation is that either the family of Smith Reynolds or his widow should have anything to say as to whether or not a murder case should be prosecuted. Have our courts of law become so impotent that they must consider the wishes of the accuser or the accused in the performance of duty in a capital offense?

Allen Gets Quail Which Flies Into His Moving Auto

Would you consider it a violation of game laws to get a large, meaty quail that was killed when it struck your automobile windshield while you were driving, although it is not the open season for quail?

That's a question that Linton E. Allen, president of the Sanford Atlantic National Bank, asked several persons who entered the bank recently to receive, in almost every case the answer "Of course not."

Mr. Allen became in doubt as to the correct procedure in the matter late Monday afternoon while he was driving his 1931 Buick Orlando with his family. Near the Trison Dance Club on the Orlando road, Mr. Allen ran into a large covey of quail which swooped across the road. One of the birds struck the windshield and fell dead.

"I stopped the car and went back for the bird," Mr. Allen said, "but the thought came to me that since it was not the quail season, it would be illegal to use the bird as food. My young daughter made the most of the situation by proudly taking the bird in charge and before she went to sleep Monday night, she had exhibited it to almost every resident of Ross Court."

Mr. Allen did not say just what disposition he expected to make of the bird, but from the way he said "it certainly was a beautiful specimen, large and meaty."

war and international problems. "It was the same with Mr. Hoover," he continued. "When he was elected he expected to organize the machinery of prosperity. But the sudden turn of events laid upon his shoulders the most terrible depression the world has ever known."

Of the President he said, "he has faced the enemy for three years now; he knows all the tactics of the forces of destruction. Why bring in a new recruit and retire this seasoned leader, especially since Pres. Hoover has already got the massive forces of defense and recovery into action?"

The money question, Ford said, "bears directly on our present difficulty. Congress did not keep its constitutional control over money. It farmed out the national money to private hands. It would never dream of farming out naval defense, tax collection, or the postal service the same way."

"Congress should take back full control of money and give the U. S. a public money system as opposed to a private money system. I am convinced that our money system is antiquated. If Mr. Hoover, during his next four years, will give his mind to this matter, I think he will completely establish his fame as a great President."

THE STRIPED TIGER

"Nature in the Raw" as portrayed by the great animal artist, Paul Bransom... Inspired by the savage ferocity of the striped tiger, known throughout the world as the terror of the jungle, "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Music Department Of Club Has Program

At the first meeting of the season of the Music Department of the Woman's Club held Tuesday afternoon at the club room on Oak Avenue, the members celebrated the two-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Franz Joseph Haydn, with a program based on his life and music.

Mrs. B. C. Moore presided over a short business session when plans were made for the coming year. Mrs. Frances A. Hickson, program chairman for the afternoon, then took charge and introduced Miss Ellen Mahoney who gave a short sketch of Haydn's life.

A play consisting of three scenes was then presented with the following characters: Scene 1, Mathias Haydn, father of Joseph, Daphne Takach; Frau Haydn, his wife, Minnie Emma Strang; Johann Frankh, a singer and gambler, little Haydn's second cousin, Nancy Rossetter. Scene 2, The child Haydn, Eather Strang; Johann Frankh, Nancy Rossetter; Frau Frankh, his slovenly wife, Nellie Cunningham; George Reuter, Imperial Capelmester of St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna, Kathleen Adams, Scene 3, The Youth Haydn, Daphne Takach; George Reuter, Kathleen Adams; his assistant, Helen Chapman; Choir Boys, Sabit Chapman, Ruth Strang, and Eather Strang.

BORAH URGES ISSUANCE OF NEW CURRENCY

tell the difference between the Republican and the Democratic, adding every appropriation measure was passed through Congress on non-partisan vote.

The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee declared more than one-fourth of the public money is being spent to pay for the world war.

"I have been and still am opposed to what they call the bonus," he went on. "Speaking for myself and with entire respect for the brave boys who went to the front I am opposed to payment of the $2,500,000,000 bonus as long as the United States Treasury is anywhere in its present condition."

He warned if there is no reduction in taxes "there will be no real prosperity for decades to come."

He demanded the same decrease in the salaries of "public officials" that private individuals have had to take the last few years, and said if a member of Congress does not accept a reduction in salary he will not be very anxious to reduce public expenses.

In an emphatic conclusion, he declared: "We are in too large a measure in my judgment victims of international reduction of armaments and ended with an appeal for a time when the 'human race gets back to a place where it can devote brain and brawn for the benefit of mankind and not for the murder of fellow men.'"
