Dancers Staying Fit

Joy Hinkle wasn't born wearing a pair of dancing shoes — but it must have been close. She has danced her way from ballet lessons at the Royal School of Dance in Orlando to her present position as an instructor at the School of Performing Arts in Fern Park.

She has danced in productions of Oklahoma, Hello Dolly, Disco '78 and recently attended a workshop for dancers held by the cast of Chorus Line in Orlando.

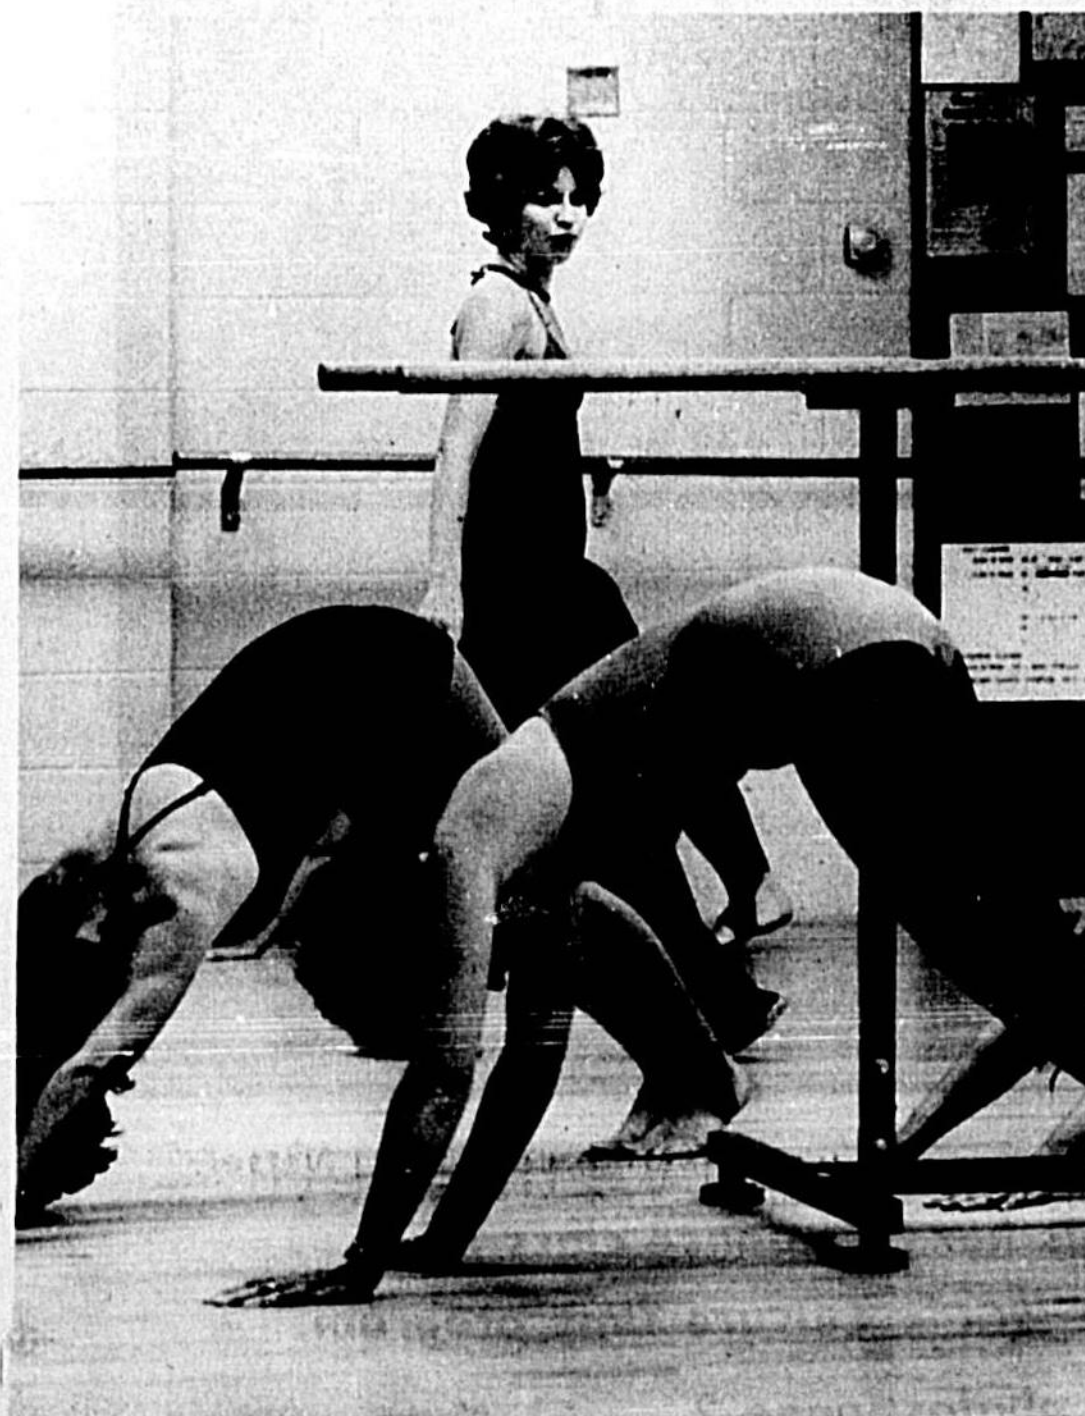

Having graduated with an associate of arts degree from Seminole Community College, Mrs. Hinkle, a Casselberry resident, has returned to teach Jazz dancing in the college's Leisure Time program. Holding six classes each week since January, more than 75 women ranging in age from teens to 58 have been toning up their muscles and getting in shape through dancing.

"Joy is a good teacher," Casselberry student Peggy Iselin said. "She's very positive and never makes any of us feel like we're not dancers, even though we're not."

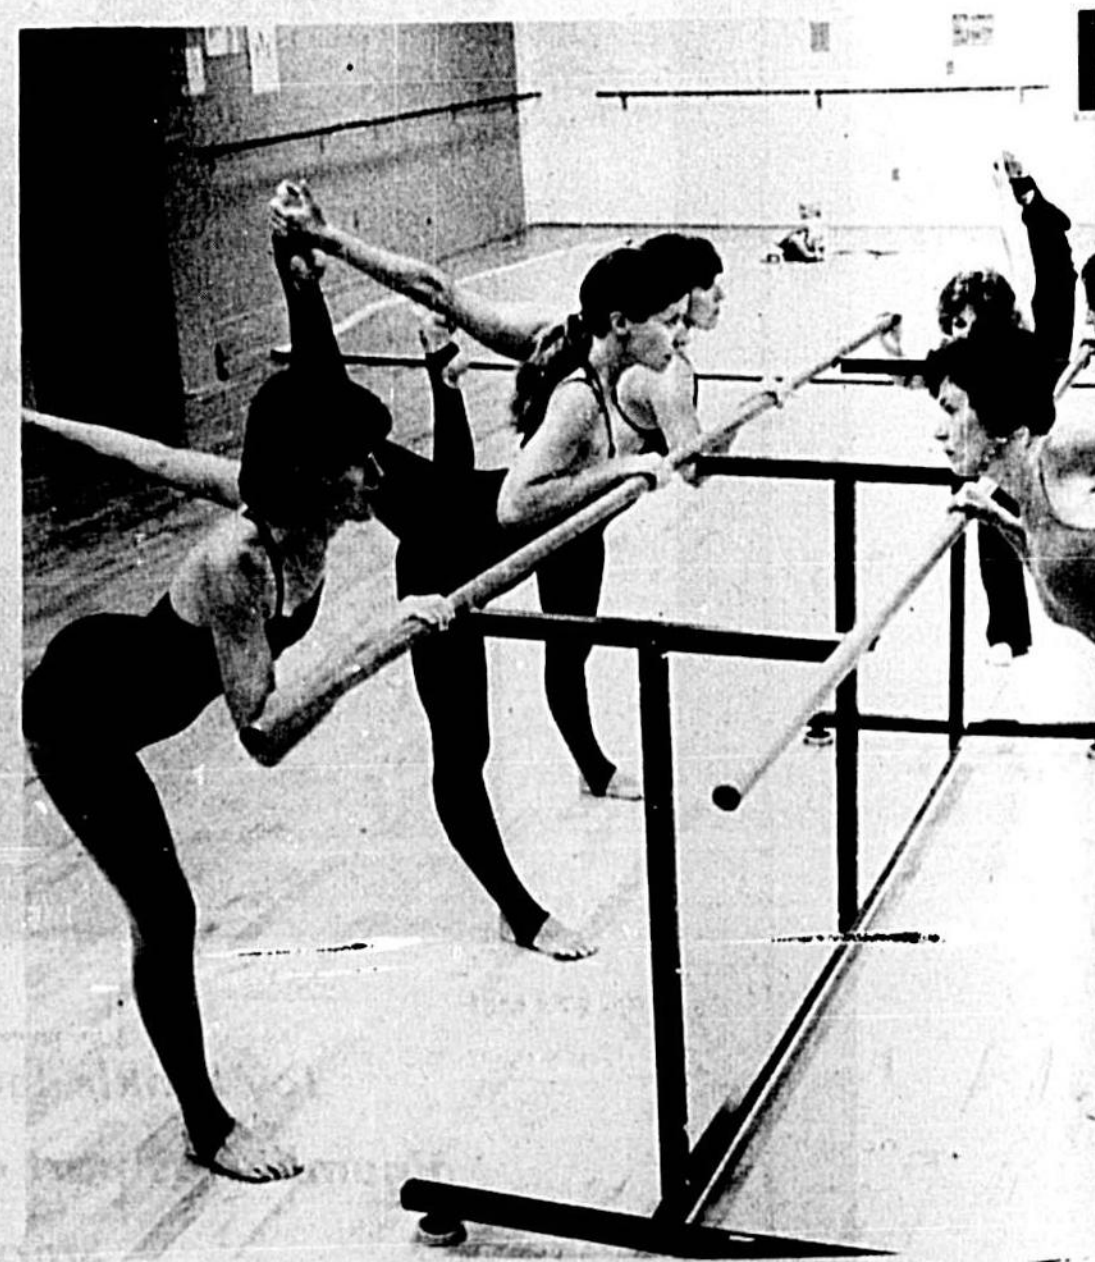

With upbeat disco music on the record player in the dance room at S.C.C., Mrs. Hinkle takes her students through limbering and stretching exercises at the barre, then progresses to isolation and floor work. Jazz steps and routines are taken up in the final portion of each class.

New classes form this month and 8 weeks cost $15.

Pool Players' Film

HOLLYWOOD (NEA)—Subject matter of movies runs in cycles. These days, TV movies are frequently about diseases (autism, Hodgkin's disease, retardation, etc.) while feature films about sports (tennis, skiing, basketball, bowling) are common.

And now they are shooting a movie about pool. It's called "The Baltimore Bullet," and I watched as they were filming part of the climactic tournament sequence. A big banner declared it a "Hustlers Tournament," and some of the genuine pool players hanging around said there really was such a thing.

"Yep, had one of those every year in Johnson City, Ill.," said Steve Mizerak. "Honest and truly was such a thing."

In this one, the finals are between James Coburn and Bruce Boxleitner, and the two were out there, lining up shots and chalking their cues and doing all those traditional things.

The real pool players, all dolled up in tuxedos, watched with superior looks at their faces.

Willie Mosconi said that this was the first film about the game since "Hustler." "And that wasn't really about pool," he said. "That was more of a love story. This one here is more of a pool story. That other one wasn't too accurate. I've never seen anybody's arm broken."

Irving Crane, a slim, gentlemanly old pro, said that he never did like "The Hustler."

"That movie," Crane said, "didn't do the game any good. For 40 years, we've been trying to defeat the stigma—the pool player with the cigarette dangling out of his mouth."

"This one is better, but

there still are some scenes that are no credit to me or to the game. Hustling is deception; I've never done it."

"The Baltimore Bullet" is the first feature film from a group called FilmFair, which has been making TV commercials for 20 years. It is the brainchild of John Brascia, the co-producer, who most people remember as a great dancer.

Brascia danced for many years on Broadway and then in films (he did the famous Frankie and Johnny number with Cyd Charisse in "Meet Me in Las Vegas") and then he teamed up with glamorous Tybee Afra. The dance team of Brascia and Tybee performed all over the world.

The easiest part, actually, in a film of this sort is what movie-goers think is the hardest—making the difficult shots by the unskilled actors. It's simply a question of having the pros line them up, show the actors how to hit the cue ball, and then doing it over and over until it comes out right.

Boxleitner admits he is a rookie at this sport. He's never had a cue in his hand before this, but he says he's "hooked."

James Coburn says he has played snooker all his life and some pool, but he is hardly in the professional class. He says he needs a lot of coaching.

Omar Sharif is also appearing in "The Baltimore Bullet." He is world famous as a bridge player, and I asked him if this current trend of sports films might be extended to include a movie about bridge. "No, I don't think so," he said. "Bridge is too serious to make a film about."

A former Golden Glover, O'Neal got his start as a teen-ager in his own ring, built for him by his father, who knew a tough kid when he saw one. The fact that O'Neal later moved into acting did not diminish his love of fighting (as many a bar owner can attest to).

Masters Remembered For Drawings

By NORMAN NADEL
NEW YORK (NEA) — It may be mere coincidence that Michelangelo di Lodovico Buonarroti Simoni, Rembrandt Harmensz Van Rijn and Jean-Honore Fragonard are having important exhibitions here at the same time.

And it certainly is coincidence, both strange and significant, that while these masters of the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries, respectively, are best remembered for their paintings (and sculpture, in the case of Michelangelo), it is their drawings that are being shown.

Yet this reflects the continuing and growing appreciation of drawings as the medium through which the singular genius of an artist is often best revealed. This is in spite of the fact that paintings tend to be more forceful and dramatic, not to mention more popular with collectors and higher priced.

Through July 28, the Pierpont Morgan Library is showing "Michelangelo and His World," featuring 41 drawings on 24 sheets, lent by the British Museum. It is the largest number of Michelangelo drawings ever exhibited in North America. As the artist usually drew on both sides of the paper, 17 of the sheets are mounted framed on stands, away from the walls, with glass on both sides.

The rarity of Michelangelo drawings can be explained by his obsession with perfection. Like many artists, he drew before he painted, working out problems of anatomy, posture, shading and facial expression.

But apparently he didn't want anyone to know, or remember, that he went through this entirely sensible preparatory process. So, shortly before his death (1564), he burned most of his sketches, studies and cartoons. Fortunately, other drawings were found in his house in Rome, and preserved.

These drawings at the Morgan Library indeed look like working sketches, sometimes with two or more placed every which-way on the brown paper. But they are no less astonishing for that.

As might be expected, his supreme mastery at depicting the human figure is the feature that most commands the eye and gladdens the spirit. He understood how much power is gained by having the figure turned, with the shoulders on one plane and the hips on another.

No anatomist could fault his delineation of muscle, joint or bone beneath the flesh. Even in these sketches, as in his finished work, nothing is static; the sense of motion and of life is irresistibly persuasive.

But the same attention and artistry is bestowed on non-human elements; the manner in which cloth drapes, for example. Seeing how Michelangelo represents the folds and furrows, you are bound to conclude that almost no one in the next four centuries did it as well.

While these drawings cannot be bought at any price, a 22-by-28-inch poster of the "Portrait of Andrea Quarantini" is available for $5, and the catalogue of 116 pages, with all 41 drawings shown is $12.50. The Morgan Library's address is 29 East 36th Street, New York City, 10016. The exhibition was made possible through grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and Philip Morris, Inc.

A century after Michelangelo, Rembrandt's long and productive career, spanning close to 50 of his 63 years, coincided tidily with Holland's brightest era of painting, in which good artists and generous, enlightened patrons abounded. Amsterdam was cosmopolitan, prosperous and lively.

While the Dutch were moderately religious, few artists painted Biblical scenes. Rembrandt was the conspicuous exception, and "Rembrandt and the Bible," at the Metropolitan Museum of Art celebrates that fact.

In contrast with the Michelangelo working sketches, Rembrandt's drawings were readily for sale and very popular during his life-time. As the first artist to draw and make revisions directly on the metal plate, he is considered the first modern etcher.

In his latter years he introduced the technique of combining etching and drypoint, producing a greater range of light and dark values along with richer detailing.

Before Rembrandt and for a long time after, artists depicted religious figures with a self-conscious religiosity; Rembrandt showed them as people. It is the humanity of his Biblical scenes that makes them so immediately accessible; we identify with the people; they are not pageant figures. In the several scenes he drew from the apocryphal book of Tobit, even the little dog is a real presence. Members of the Holy Family look like people we might know.

At the Frick Museum — one of the world's jewels among fine art collections — "Drawing by Fragonard in North American Collections" is the added attraction. That the 18th century Frenchman loved life is no secret; his sense of comedy, romance, intrigue, and his celebration of sportive sex in paintings, murals and ceilings is evidence enough. And this same buoyant feeling prevails in his drawings as well.

GENERAL RELEASE
DEER HUNTER (R) — Robert DeNiro, John Cazale, John Savage, Meryl Streep, Christopher Walken. Drama. This is a powerful, memorable look at three Pennsylvania steel workers who go off to fight in Vietnam. Director Michael Cimino has created images you may never forget. It is too long and some of it is forced, but it remains a classic film. GRADE: A

CHAMP, THE (PG) — Jon Voight, Faye Dunaway, Ricky Schroder. Drama. Director Franco Zeffirelli has dusted off the old classic about the ex-champ and his son and the rich lady who used to be the kid's mother. He pulls out all the stops — no sob is left unsobbed — and it's a treat for the love-to-cry set. But it is overlong and very over-sentimental. Young Ricky Schroder is the best child actor in years, however. GRADE: B-

LOVE AT FIRST BITE (PG) — George Hamilton, Susan Saint James, Arte Johnson. Comedy. You'll hate yourself in the morning, but you'll laugh while you're watching this spoof of the Dracula story. This time, Drac is back as a crack lover, in the present, and it's all done for fun. Enjoy. GRADE: B.

HANOVER STREET (PG) — Harrison Ford, Lesley-Anne Down, Christopher Plummer. Romance. This is for everybody who's been saying, "Why don't they make pictures like used to?" Except for one brief nude scene, this could have been made in the '40s. It's World War II again, England, American aviators and English girls, honor and nobility, a little adventure, a lot of balderdash. GRADE: C.

NORMA RAE (PG) — Sally Field, Ron Leibman, Beau Bridges. Drama. Forget the drab title, this is a grabber of a movie. It's about the attempts — by a union organizer from New York and his ally, a little Southern gal — to organize a tough textile mill in the South. Director Martin Ritt must be commended not only for what he did, but for what he didn't do — he didn't seize on the obvious cliches, and so he has a warm surprising film. GRADE: B-plus. (Film grading: A — superb; B — good; C — average; D — poor; F — awful)

$100 Promotion Gains County $500,000

By JANE CASSELLBERRY
 Herald Staff Writer

Their faces were red, but not from embarrassment over their bowling scores. Seminole women bowlers put on their warpaint and feathers at the recent Florida State Women's Bowling Association's convention in Fort Lauderdale, determined to bring the 1981 state tournament to Seminole County.

They did it. Representing the 3,385 members of the Seminole County Women's Bowling Association, the 10 officers and directors went all out to wrest the tournament from Tampa, which reportedly spent $1,000 in the effort.

The Seminole delegates spent $100 in their promotion. Between 6,000 and 8,000 women bowlers are expected to participate in the tournament, which runs every weekend from April through the middle of June. It is estimated they will spend $500,000 while they are in Seminole County.

The annual state convention weekend will be held here in conjunction with the tournament, and a banquet for 500 persons is planned for the Sanford Civic Center.

"This is the first for Seminole County, and we intend to make it the largest tournament ever," said Frankie Kaiser, one of five officers who met Friday with Jack Horner, executive manager of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, to discuss plans for the event.

"I can promise you the whole cooperation of the chambers of commerce in Seminole County.

The bowling lane proprietors and motel and hotel owners can expect a real windfall," said Horner. "We owe it all to these ladies who got the tournament for Seminole. It will put us on the map, in addition to economic benefits."

Mrs. Kaiser and the other women — Mary Grant, Phil Grant, Janet Laubert, Cathy McNabb, Dee Parr, June Plant, Kathy Shaw, Pam Veal and

This is a first for Seminole County... It will put us on the map.

Helen Barbour — had dressed up in Indian costumes and campaigned in Fort Lauderdale on the theme "Pow Wow in Seminole '81." They made and distributed brown felt Indian pouches filled with such items as memo pads, pens, pencils, needles and bottle openers donated by Seminole County merchants. They also handed out medicine bags containing Band-Aids and aspirin.

As the 429 delegates representing 49 counties filed into the meeting room of the Bahai Mar Hotel, the Seminole women stood at the doors passing out the gifts and asking them to vote for their county.

During a lull in the election for state officers, white votes were being counted, the Seminole raiders presented a skit in which they captured the "head white eyes of Tampa," who happened to be Pilar Challa, president of the Florida Women's Bowling Association. They tied her to a stake and threatened to hold her captive until 1982. It was all in fun and the "Indians" said everyone seemed to enjoy their antics.

Before voting for the tournament site began, Frankie Kaiser, secretary and treasurer for the county association, invited all the delegates and their members to come to Seminole in '81. Jack Kaiser, representing Sanford Mayor Lee Moore and the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce, gave a welcoming address. Don Van Wie represented the Seminole County Men's Bowling Association and the proprietors of Altamonte Springs Bowling Lanes, Bowl America, Sanford and Fair Lanes Indian Hills.

The state association will choose two of the three county bowling centers as sites for the tournament.

Bob Robinson, manager of the Altamonte Bowling Lanes, congratulated the association for having been chosen to host the tournament. "I know the ladies in the association worked very hard to secure this esteemed tournament, which brings more than 6,000 women and guests to the area," said Robinson. "Our community should be proud of them, as this event will bring prestige and added revenue to our community."

the Fair Lanes Indian Hills "Based on past history of participation in the state tournament and the ever increasing popularity of bowling, it can be realistically anticipated that from 5 to 6,000 women from throughout the state will spend from one to three days at the tournament or convention. I am sure any chamber of commerce would be happy with a coup of this magnitude." "I sincerely hope that the county and city governments as well as all businessmen, will strongly support the Women's Bowling Association in their hosting the 1981 State Tournament and Convention. I would like to assure them of the full support of all members of the staff at Fair Lanes Indian Hills," said Grant. In addition to the bowling weekends, the Seminole hosts expect many of the women and their families will spend one or two days sightseeing and visiting area attractions.

The visiting bowlers will put a total of $33,250 into the bowling fees and prize fund, it is estimated. Bowling fees are expected to total at least $34,144 and scorekeepers will be paid a total of $5,433, said Mrs. Kaiser. Between now and the 1981 tournament, members of the Seminole County Women's Bowling Association will be contacting county merchants for donations of door prizes and souvenir items for the "goodie bags" to be distributed to delegates.

THE 'MENACE' IS REMOVED

Trees that had been called a menace and potential hazard to incoming planes at the south end of the Sanford Airport runway are no longer a problem. They were cut down this week. The land on which the trees were located recently was ordered turned over to the Airport Authority, which instituted eminent domain proceedings against three property owners. The Authority claimed the trees had to be cut in order to comply with federal safety rules.

Carter, Brezhnev Meet On SALT; Treaty Signing Slated For Monday

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — President Carter and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev today held their first face-to-face summit talks aimed at reducing the risk of nuclear holocaust.

It was a 90-minute working session at the American Embassy during which the two leaders made general statements on their world political positions.

The SALT II meeting ended half an hour earlier than scheduled.

The second meeting, American officials said, would focus on arms control. This would include the SALT II agreement to be signed Monday, a comprehensive test ban, chemical and biological warfare and efforts to put a lid on weapons sales to third countries.

Face-to-face talks aimed at reducing risk of nuclear holocaust

Troop reductions in Europe were also on the agenda, the U.S. officials said.

The morning talks took place in a large, wood-paneled conference room with a plush gold carpet and with one picture on the wall — the Apollo moon landing and the planting of the Stars and Stripes on the lunar surface.

The two sides faced each other across a long rectangular table. Carter and Brezhnev in the middle and bottles of mineral water between them.

Brezhnev, in a dark suit with a red Soviet flag lapel pin and seven medals, wore heavy glasses and read his statement first from a typewritten paper and Carter used notes on a yellow legal-style paper.

The Soviet leader wore a hearing aid in his left ear, but looked well.

Carter was flanked by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and National Security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

When the meeting ended, the two leaders returned to their residences after posing for photographs and waving to a crowd of about 200. They made no statements.

American officials were upbeat before the meeting and optimistic there would be eventual negotiations for still further major reductions in nuclear arsenals.

Carter, in dark suit and striped tie, arrived first at the talks site — the U.S. Embassy in a slight drizzle.

Brezhnev stumbled as he entered his car to drive from the Soviet Embassy.

Outstanding Dads--By The Bunch

By SHARON CARRASCO
 Herald Staff Writer

Remember when your father took you on your first driving lesson or taught you how to throw your first curve?

He was the man who came to see you perform in your first high school play or hurt your last ball across the plate. Somehow dad always seemed to cheer the loudest.

The one who dug in his pockets for a quarter when the sound of the tee cream truck filled our neighborhood block.

Everyone has his own unique concept of what a father is supposed to be. Recently these personal thoughts and concepts were shared by readers of the Evening Herald in its search for the outstanding father of the year.

The Herald had asked readers to submit a letter telling about a man considered to be worthy of recognition as an outstanding father.

The response was heavy and the task of selecting one person to be interviewed was enormous. After the selection was made, Herald editors decided to share with readers some of the thoughts expressed in letters for some of the nominees.

The names of the nominees precede the passages excerpted from the letters sent in on their behalf.

 Our daddy possesses many endearing qualities: his generosity with time, money and especially advice. Most parents give their children the necessary material possessions but daddy has given us so much more....

anxiety symptoms. One day last month, Sheila (a new driver) ran into a brick wall with his car. Donna (a notorious driver) drove into the yard and destroyed the sprinkling system. Pam gave him a stray dog for his birthday.

With a chuckle and open arms, daddy welcomed us all and took us out to celebrate. Now that's a first class father of the year.

LOU TEMPLE
 He is big (when we were younger, he looked bigger) and he wears green. People call him "the green giant" but to his family, he's a big cuddly teddy bear full of love.

Dad is always doing for others. Many times he has ventured out on midnight calls but he was never too tired to help us with our homework or any problems we had.

For our dad, the family always comes first.

RICHARD SMITH
 My dad, Richard Smith, has been the comptroller of Seminole Memorial Hospital for the past 13 years. He is a Virgo which of course means he is a stubborn, one-sided person but it works to his advantage as being a great dad.

He has raised 13 children and has been taken in a friend of mine as a foster child. He has provided us a wonderful home here in Sanford for 16 years and has brought us up in the best way he could.

Of course all fathers want the best for their children and although we don't get whatever we want whenever we want we get along fine. We have our bad times but they are overruled by our good times.
