Enforcing city codes

Confrontation prompts new way to get job done

By Well ProPage Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - City Commissioner Hob Thomas says the city's code violation teams were improperly instructed on how to handle enforcement, and identified it as the main cause of a confrontation between the team and a homeowner last Monday.

The code team situation was brought up during last night's Sanford City Commission work session. City Manager Hill Simmons admitted that what had been planned for the agenda as a status report on the code team activities, now was an update on actions underway toward the resolution of problems.

Last Monday, a four member code team went to a house at 1000 W. 16th Street to check into several violations, when they were re-portedly confronted by the owner, Robert Morris.

According to the police report, an altercation started after Morris told the feam to leave his property.

The end result of the incident had Fire Inspector Terri Murray and police officer Tim Welter taken to the hospital for treatment of injuries, and Morris arrested on charges of aggravated battery, resisting an officer with violence, and battery.

Since that time, the NAACP has sent a letter to Simmons regarding complaints of alleged brutality in connection with the enforcement incident. Turner Clayton, Jr., local chapter president had written. "It is apparent that your task force violated the city's code enforcement Eslinger said due to the closeness of one part-mutuel facility - Seminole Greyhound Park - to Casselberry homes, those neighborhoods could be adversely impacted. A castno at Orlando Jai-Alai in Fern Park could have a lesser impact on nearby neighborhoods.

The Limited Castnos proposition on next month's ballot will allow up to 47 castnos in the state, mostly at existing pari-mutuel facilities. Seminole County could have three casinos at its two dog tracks and one jai-alai fronton. In addition, the Family escapes plane crash

BOCA RATON — A Jacksonville couple and their two children escaped serious injury after their single-engine plane developed engine trouble and wound up in a golf course lake. "Everyone was OK," said Palm Beach County sheriff's Sgt. Bernard Williams. "The son was taken to Boca Raton Community Hospital, where he was treated and released for minor injuries."

The pilot, Ronald B. Case, put down the small Piper A28 in a lake at the Boca West Country Club on Monday. The family had taken off from Ops-locka Airport north of Miami and were heading for Jacksonville.
"Somewhere around t

newhere around the Boca Raton area, they experienced some type of problem. We don't know just what it was yet." Williams said. "He radioed the tower at Palm Beach International Airport, and they directed him to make an emergency landing, like on a golf course or in a lake.

"That's what he tried to do. He landed in a lake on the golf course," Williams said.

In addition to 33-year-old Case, on board were his wife Rose and children, 4-year-old Ronald III and Christina, 2. The cockpit was submerged in the 20-foot-deep lake, with only the tail wing and one wingtip sticking up out of the water. After the family escaped, the plane was hauled out of the lake by a tow truck.

OSLO, Norway - The Nobel cided to give this year's award to israelt Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and PLO Jeader Yasser Arafat, a newspaper reported

The award was not to be announced formally until Fri-

But the Oslo daily Aftenposten reported the news early, based on unnamed sources, after the committee had trouble deciding during a meeting last week who should win the award for achieving last year's historic Middle East peace breakthrough.

The newspaper said the five-member Norwegian awards committee's decision so angered one member, Kare Kristiansen. that he has threatened to resign in protest.

Aftenposten reported that the decision to give the prize to Rabin and Arafat still could be reversed if the committee, in the face of the controversy, takes the unprecedented step of changing its decision.

The difficulty centered on whether the $933,000 prize, the most coveted of the six Nobel awards being given this month. should be shared equally among both sides to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

Aside from Rabin and Arafat. other key players included Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Mahmoud Abbas, a founder of the Palestine Liberation Organization who signed the peace accord with Israel last year in Washington.

Aftenposten, citing uniden-tified sources, said Kristiansen. who is a long-time supporter of Israel, adamantly opposed to giving the prize to Arafat. Kris-tiansen still considers Arafat a terrorist, according to the newspaper.

Aftenposten said the commit-tee had considered avoiding the problem by giving the prize to some of those who did the actual work. In months of secret talks last year, mediated by Norwegians, the two sides hammered out the agreement through what came to be known as the "Norway Channel." Those people would include Norwegian peace broker Terje Roed Larsen, Israeli negotiator Uri Savir and one of the Palestinian negotiators.

Aftenposten said the committee might have an extra meeting prior to Friday's announcement in an attempt to reach a com-

The newspaper also said that if Kristiansen resigns he would be the first member of the committee to step down in protest before the end of his term.

Please, please don't do this.
Please, Mr. Taylor, buy me too," the sabbing woman said. But Mr.
Taylor did not top a bid of 80 pauses and Lucy, still weeping, was led away from her husband.
Another slave, a carpenter, fetched a high price of 70 pauses — his tools were included in the sale. A woman whose master had recently died whose master had recently died was bright by her husband, a free black, for 42 pounds.

Organisers said these scenes dramatised the horrors of slavery. Protesters complained they elseapened history and dealt with an episode too patriful to handle in a theater-like production.

"This is pure and simple "This is pure and simple entertainment, making money off people's oppression," said Andrew Highsmith, a white student from Cincinnati. "It's not showing the true history of what it was like to be a sieve. Where is the story of people who fought back?"

But Larry Earl, a black actor who has taken part in several re-enactments, said one recent show depicted a slave killing his abusive master. "There were two forms of resistance against slavery — active and passive — and we showed both," he said. Curtis Harris of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference remained unconvinced that the portrayal was educational.

"I felt this was nothing more than a show, not an authentic history," he said.

The re-enactment drew protests from the time it was announced. Just before it began. Gravely and a small group of demonstrators pushed their way to the front of the stage area, and two of them refused to leave during the performance.

Their denunciations were countered by a tearful Christy Coleman, the actor who played Lucy and director of Colonial Williamsburg's Department of African-American Interpretations and Presentations. She pleaded with the crowd to "judge with honest hearts and open minds."

"It humanises slavery, it puts a face on what happened," she said later. "People will re-member what they see far more than what they read."

People: no dirty campaign tactics

When people are competing for election, how should they conduct themselves? A recent quote from a political campaigner in Lake County should stand as a guideline.

The man said, "This election showed that if you educate the public to what the issues are. they will go out and vote. I think the truth

The comment, as used here, is not in regard to the Lake County school board race. It is to show an example of proper campaign ethics.

When a person choses to run for a policitcal office and there is opposition, a plan of attack needs to be made. Looking at what other campaigners do may be a starting point, but their approaches don't always mean they should be emulated.

Our point here is on smear tactics. If a candidate spends all of the advertising money or public speaking time telling people what is wrong with his or her opponent, it's not doing anyone, especially the candidate, a bit of Saying. "My opponent has done this or that terrible thing, and shouldn't be elected," isn't what people deserve to hear in a political

What people want, and they prove it when they cast their ballots, is to be told not only what a candidate plans to do, by how it will be done, and how it will be financed.

Very few candidates have gone on to win races based on amear campaigns against their opponents. Yet their have been a few, and often, their words come back to haunt them. when their faults emerge to the surface.

explain why he or she in the best. Por incumbants, it should be not only explained during campaigning, but demonstrated during the entire previous term in office.

Standing before people at a political rally and saying, "My opponent is a crook," does not win friends nor influence voters. It only tends to alienate them against the person making the accusations. Seldom are accusations substantiated.

With the freedom of speech in our country, we cannot prevent any candidate from slamming the opposition. We can however, give these tactics serious consideration when it's time to push that lever at the voting

If we vote FOR people who we believe will do the best job, rather than voting AGAINST those who we have been told are the biggest crooks, we will be doing ourselves, our cities, county, state and nation the best voting service possible.

Giving thought to immigration reform seriously in favor of vigorous legal immigration, you'd better be ready to do something stark about illegal immigration.

This is the explicit message that emerges from the tough recommendations about illegal immigration in the first report of the U.S. Commission on immigration, chaired by former Texas Rep. Barbara Jordan.

Among the many ideas put forth by the Jordan mmission are 1) tougher deportation pro-tures; 2) better border control stressing "Hold cedures; 2) better border control stressing "Fiold the Line" prevention, rather than post-border crossing apprehension; 3) tougher penalties for employers who hire illegals; and 4) the heystone proposal, to set up a central computer registry (using Social Security and Immigration and Naturalization Service records), applicable to all, to establish whether people are eligible to work. Such a registry, according to the commission, would make it difficult for illegal immigrants to get jobs, thereby reducing the economic incentive for illegals to come.

There is already controversy. The White House

There is already controversy. The White House says America is not ready for such a massive registry; instead they propose incremental reforms. Some conservatives and libertarians denounce the idea as the first step toward a national ID card, and yet another move toward because it does indeed get tough on unfortunate people (the illegals). These are not insignificant arguments, but they tend to ignore the rising anger a g a i n s t t h e 200,000-300,000 iilegals that arrive in America each year. I felt it a few years ago after my book. "The First Universal Nation" - very pro-immigration - was published. I partici-pated in scores of call-in shows. About half the callers sup-ported the idea of continued, moderately growing immi-gration. Sometimes they were quite poet

And now it has become a flaming election issue

But the other half were furiously opposed. "They're taking our jobs," "They're stealing our country," "They're here for welfare and crime."

want to become Americans" were the common complaints. These are generally false charges, I believe. (Perhaps we ought to figure out a way for authors to do their call-in shows before their books appear, rather than after.) Since then, the intensity of anti-immigration feeling has grown substantially. We've been through a recession when jobs were scarce, and we've seen the World Trade Center bombod by foreigners. And now it has become a flaming election issue. In California, Gov. Pete Wilson's tough — some say demagogic — stand on the issue has helped boost him from apparent issue to apparent winner. to apparent winner.

Now, I haven't changed my mind about a healthy level of legal immigration. I still believe that it's good for America.

What are we to make of all this? I don't even think most illegal immigrants harm America. Typically they're here for work, not welfare, and many of them get lowly jobs that Americans

That issue, the actual level of legal immigra-tion, will be taken up as the final item of the commission, several years from now, Unices we deal with the inflammatory issue of illegals, there will be a campaign to go after legals as well. That would be bad for us.

Dieting: a new a state of mind

For Harolyn Ivy, it was ice cream. For Pat Mischou, butter. For me, sausage.

Maybe It's how frying sharpens its aromatic herbs. Or the symphony of sizzles and pops when it's cooking. I'm a vegetarian, but the thought of anuange still ignites childhood memories: of using a forkful to sop up warm yolk; of carefree days before the words "high in fat" put a crimp in Sunday breakfast.

Most people have a food that's as laden with memories as it is calories. Some have dozens. It's just one reason why Americans are fatter than they should be. Especially Black women.

According to the latest National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey, about 33.4 percent of American adults weigh at least 20 percent more than their ideal weight; among African American women, the figure is 48.6 The main incentive to lose weight among all women: looking good. Some women feel far from cover-girl status that they don't even try. But the best reason to lose is "to reduce the risk of arthritis, diabetes, hypertension, heart disease," says Dr. Denise Bruner, an Arlington, Va., bariatric physician idoctor who treats the overweight). "All are real problems for black women. All can be reduced with modest weight loss, just 10 percent."

Such problems aren't limited to black people. Pat Mischou, of Silver Spring, is of European ancestry. She has lost 73 pounds through a medically supervised program affilliated with a hospital. Mischou also lost her diabetes, swollen ankles and foot and leg pain.

Mishou, who creates support services for the disabled, says overweight people often have jobs in which they "attend to other's needs first." Then they nurture themselves...through food. To "stop feeling out of control and to take control," she says, study your patterns. "You may be depriving yourself of something else you need, and use food as the replacement."

Certainly, many African American women at the bottom of nearly every socioeconomic measure - feel deprived. Living in a stressridden society that often devalues them and many of their inate physical attributes doesn't help. But about 30 percent of African American women have a genetic propensity to be heavy, says Dr. Bruner, who has lost 45 pounds - and has kept it off. Half her patients are black women.

Then there's the diet of African Americans which is about 40 to 50 percent fat," she continues. "The typical American diet is roughly 34 percent...We grew up with Sunday church dinners with fried chicken, greens with fatback."

"it's the food," agrees Ivy, 54, a teacher in Washington, D.C., for 32 years. "At my school, people send out for food...fried fish dinners, all Another factor: Slimness isn't as integrak to black women's positive self-concept. Pennsylvania State University epidemiologist Shiriki Kumanyika studied black women's weight-related attitudes and found that while nearly all overweight black women believed they were too heavy, many didn't feel their weight made them unattractive. (Which jibes with the old notion among black men that "a bone aln't for nothing but a dog." Losing weight permanently is especially challenging when so many women work outside the home and are single mome with "little time for plan-ning meals." says Bruner. "So when the kids say, 'I'm hungry.' you say. 'Let's call Domino's or get Chinese takeout." Marion Ransell is an office manager. who under Bruner's supervision lost 60 pounds in less than a year. "People think you have a weight problem, because you...won't push away from the table," says Ransell, 35. "The problem is the other lasues in your life. You need someone to tell you that."

Most people have a food

that's as laden with memories

as it is calories

That's the toughest part, agrees lvy: "Just believing you can do it." After that say Ransell, lvy and Mischou, it comes down to commitment. "You can't look at it as dieting, but as a complete lifestyle change," says Ransell. "If you're 'dieting' you feel you're depriving yourself. But you're really bettering yourself."

We already know the best advice: Set realistic goals; exercise regularly; cut fat intake; use spices instead of grease for flavor; get professional help if you can afford it. Surround yourself with people who will help. Make a healthy body — not a thin one — your goal. Love yourself every step of the way. Resist raising children with the food-as-reward

And I'm using Ivy as my poster girl. A self-described "star pupil" of Dr. Bruner's who went from a size 14 dress to an B - Ivy would just as soon walk into the path of a Mack truck as eat her ex-favorite, ice cream. "It's a matter of how you think about food," she says. "I never buy anything that's not fat-free or low fat. Nothing...l go to wonderful restaurants and I have an appetizer and a salad. I never feel deprived.

"Once," she says, "that would have stunned

Unveiling the secret industry

In keeping with my duty as a pundit to ponder serious stuff, I often wonder what it will take to awaken the American people to the fact that the system the government uses to protect official secrets is a sham and an unholy waste of money

Expert after expert has said this. Commission after commission has concluded this. Scandal after scandal has shown this. Yet we continue to worship at the feet of the voodoo in the intelligence community who liggle their amuleta and chant their never-fail Incantation "national security national serity" and hypnotize us into believing it is their magic powers that keep the foe at

It is worse than a sham. In a democratic system nourished by a free flow of information, it is an obscenity.

Nowcomen another incident so absurd it defies comprehension by rational minds. Terry Anderson, the former information, it is an obscenity Associated Press reporter who was held hostage by Arab terrorists for nearly seven years, is writing a book on the experience. As part of his research, he submitted a request under the Freedom of Information Act for nourished by a government's efforts to secure his release. Well, responded the government - your government - there is this problem. The Information Anderson seeks is classified because the release of it might impair the national security. And then there are the privacy rights of the terrorists to think about. Anderson would have to get written permission from his captors before the federal files about his captors and the government could release this information. Are you getting the point now. America? The shamans who hold the secrets don't know national security from home plate. They don't really give a hoot about the privacy rights of terrorists. All the secrecy cultists care about is keeping the secrets, however mane and irrelevant they may be.

And what has this mindset wrought? The Office of Management and Budget this year disclosed that the intelligence community is spending more than $16 billion annually just to protect their pile of secrets. Of this amount, nearly $14 billion is said to be spent by defense contractors adhering to federal rules. The CIA and related agencies estimated they are spending a mere $200 million to safeguard the secrets, so you can see how utterly farcical the $16 billion total figure is.

According to the OMB, more than 32,400 federal employees are assigned to keep the secrets safe. The Defense Department, to cite just one example, spends $58 million a year to employ people to watch the people who guard the secrets.

Despite vows to curb government secrecy, the Clinton administration has done little about it. The information Security Oversight Office, created to oversee the government's handling of secrets, reported that the bureaucrats created more than 6.4 million new secrets in 1993 -- roughly the annual average of the Bush administration. Both were a big improvement over the Reagan regime, which hatched 15 million secrets in 1965 alone.

And why are these nuggets of knowledge so precious that the very survival of the nation depends upon their preservation? Well, there was the April 1917 file locked in the National Archives about U.S. troop movements in

And the 1947 Atomic Energy Commission order that classified "secret" all documents relating to radiation "experiments with humans" because they "might have adverse effect on public opinion.

Well, whaddya know? Another reason for keeping secrets.

Chiles slams Bush for using parents to raise

Clinton beefs up troops in Gulf despite promises

WASHINGTON — Refusing to take Saddam assein at his word, President Clinton is subling U.S. air power in the Persian Gulf apite Iraq's promise to withdraw its truspe adowing Kuwait. He declared sternly, "We're terested in facts, not promises."

The first real test of Enddam's intentions could me today, when any sign of an Iraqi pullout ould become apparent. "Saddam Hussein has own the world before ... that he cannot be usted," Cliston said in a prime-time Oval Office idness Monday.

Responding to Iraq's complaints about unlabing U.N. sanctions. Clinton said Sadden sors what he must do to get his oil on the world arbeit again: "Full compliance, not reckless overation."

Clinton's seven-minute speech came hours her Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations of Iraq's forces would abandon their positions

But with no immediate proof of a withdrawal, Clinton added 350 warplanes to his Persian Gulf around in hopes of forcing Saddam from the brink. The aircraft, including B-52 bombers and advanced fighter jets, will supplement a force of 70,000 U.S. service personnel aircrafty summoned against the threat posed by 80,000 leads massed near Kuwait.

Clinton spoke as SGO U.S. soldiers arrived in Kuwait City on Monday.

"We're interested in facts, not promises, in deeds, not words," Clinton said. "And we have not yet seen evidence that Iran's troops are in fact pulling back. We will be watching very closely to pulling back. We will be watching very closely to see that they do so."

Defence Secretary William Perry, saying U.S. saidlers "will not be pinned down" in the guif for long, refused to rule out a pre-emptive strike on long-refused.

Interviewed later on ABC's "Nightline," Perry said in response to a question that another option would be to expand the present no-fly sone in nouthern Iraq to include ground forces.

However, Perry said he thought Saddam would pull back his troops soon, adding: "I believe it will be a reflection of the deterrent effect of this very large military force we've put over there."

In the heat of the crists, the United States is still debating how far Saddam's forces must be pulled back and what steps must be taken to prevent another flare up.

"We are not going to put up with a situation where we have to go back there every two or three years," said a senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity. He said the United States hopes to see the first indications of a pullout today.

In weighing their options, Clinton and his aides are constantly reminded of the 1991 Gulf War, a rout that followed Saddam's broken promise to remove troops from Kilwait.

on, who briefed former President Bush on the crisis before the speech, credited Bush and his Gulf War generals for expelling Iraq from Kuwait in 1901. "Today, we remain committed to defending the integrity of that nation, as protecting the stability of the gulf reg Clinton said.

'Clinton said.

Hoping to keep the Gulf War alliance alive, Clinton on Monday called Russian President Buris Yeltsin. Egyptian President Hossi Muharak, British Prime Minister John Major, Turkish Prime Minister Tanou Ciller and French President Francois Mitterrand. Major premised to send another warship and bombers to the gulf. Every leader piedged support, according to the White House.

"We will not allow Saddam Hussein to dofy the will of the United States and the international community," the president said.

Bocial Security is cutting work force

WASHINGTON — Under or-ers from the White House, ocial Security is planning deep uts in its work force, and critics ay that means more busy ignals, longer waits and less tiention to finding fraud.

The Social Security Adminis-

ration, according to documents btained by The Associated ress, intends to pare its payroll y nearly 5,000 employees over he next five years, with the seepest cuts occurring after the 1996 presidential elections.

Agency officials say they are der orders to cut the work orce as part of President linton's drive to streamline overnment by eliminating 172,000 federal jobs.

But congressional officials say Sectial Security's plan un-sermines government because it ron't have enough staff to find buses and recover the millions of Hollars being paid to people on disability who have recovered or bitained their benefits dulently. According to the agency's deprint, Social Security would m 65,231 to 60,472 - be-

Commissioner Shirley Chater says the cuts will come from management and supervisory staff - not the field office employees who work with the public - and that automation and streamlining will allow the agency to do more with less.

"These initiatives will empower front-line employees by providing them with the tools required to maintain, and in many cases, improve SSA's customer service despite continu-ally growing workloads for the agency," she said.

The agency's plan to speed up decisions on claims for disability benefits, the centerpiece of its streamlining, will take five years to implement. Court tests and the need for congressional ap-proval could further delay re-

The General Accounting Office, meanwhile, is skeptical about Social Security's automation effort. GAO, the congressional watchdog agency, said in a new report that the improvements hold no guarantee that employees will be able to process all future workloads and improve service to the public.

The agency's last round of cuts occurred in the 1980s, with disastrous results. The work force slipped from almost 80,000 workers to 62,703, telephone lines to local offices were disconnected, callers could not get through on its toll-free line and the ill and injured began waiting months for their first disability

Today, according to congressional testimony, many applicants for disability benefits must wait a year for a final decision on their cases, and some have died or gone on welfare. Callers to the agency still get frequent busy signals or no answer at all, and w cases are checked for fraud.

Rep. Andy Jacobs, D-Ind., said e does not believe Social Security can trim its staff again and still answer its phones, fight fraud, speed up decisions for disability benefits and impose new rules on drug addicts and alcoholics.

Jacobs, the chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on Social Security. said it is "pennywise and pound-stupid" to treat Social ecurity's administrative budget ike the rest of government. The etirement system is funded hrough payroll taxes and runs a tuge surplus that masks the size the federal deficit. Service is going to deterioite." says Warren C. Fretwell, ecutive vice president of the merican Federation of Govmment Employees Local 3342.

which represents field office workers in upstate and central New York. "We're stretched very thin now, and somewhere, it's got to give."

Social Security's workload is expected to grow dramatically in the years ahead as the baby boom generation nears retirement and drains its financial reserves. Without change, Social Security will go broke by 2029, and public confidence in the national retirement system is waning. Next year, the agency begins sending out the first of millions of personal earnings and benefit estimate statements to working Americans. Congress has also required that it review many more cases to determine if people collecting disability are actu-ally well enough to work.

In addition, the agency is wrestling with a backlog of requests for disability benefits from 1.2 million ill and injured

Real work of reconciliation

After military strongman resigns, lawmakers get to work By AMTA COOK Associated Press Writer

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Hatti -Ministers loyal to exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide came out of hiding and pre-pared to occupy the National Palace today after the army chief resigned and promised to leave the country.

"But I also want to caution again: The job in Haiti remains difficult and dangerous." Clinton said.

In a reminder of continuing violence, the death toll reached 24 in a hit-and-run attack on a pro-democracy demonstration Sunday in a hamlet near the southwestern city of Miragoane, a radio station reported.

A man who witnesses said belonged to the pro-army Front for the Advancement and Progress of Haiti drove a bus into the pro-democracy rally, zig-zagging to intentionally run people down.

The driver fled the scene. Schrager, the U.S. Embassy spokesman, said he hadn't been found Monday. U.S. Special Forces troops were investigating.

In the capital, Robert Malval, Aristide's figurehead prime minister, was to assume his duties with other ministers in the ousted government, according to a source close to the ministers who demanded anomalists.

Seminole gets even in district

SANFORD — Overall it has not sen the best of years for a very oung Seminole High School girls volleyball team.

But when it comes to Class 5A-District 6 competition, the Tribe can play with anyone.

Monday night at Stil Pleming Memorial Gymnastum, Seminole, which has only two semiors and one junior on its roster, showed that it is going to be tough when the district tournament comes up in a couple of weeks, dumping district for St. Cloud in straight games, 15-13, 15-11. 15-13, 15-11.

"Tonight we got over the edge," said Seminole head coach Beth Corso. "We played in the Or-angewood Christian Tournament over the weekend and lost three matches in which we scored at least matches in which we scored at least 12 points in every game, we came close in every match, but just could not get over the edge. Tonight everyone got to play and we had excellent floor coverage and really played together as a team."

Seminole improved to 2-14 overall and 2-2 in 5A-District 6, while St. Cloud fell to 5-11 overall. The Tribe

Cloud fell to 5-11 overall. The Tribe will travel to Longwood tonight to take on Lyman in a Seminole Athletic Conference contest. Action starts with freshman action at 5

Christina Campbell led the way for Seminole with 12 assists, 15 other good sets, two aces, seven other good serves and five digs.

"Christina played very well," said Corso. "She did a good job in coverage, had a lot of real good passes and saved a lot balls for us. She can a superb leader on the floor tonight."

Corso also had good things to say about sophomore Liza Jones, who plays the backline in place of Geo Tribe, Page 18

Grant's tune music to Magic's ear

By PRED COCOALL AP Sports Writer

JACKSONVILLE -- The Orlando Magic like what it's hearing from Horace Grant.

The prized off-season acquisition won three NBA championahip rings with the Chicago Bulls and says he'd like to earn at least two more with his new team. "I don't know if it'll happen this year or next year.

but I guarantee we will win a couple of championships here before I retire," the 29-year-old forward said. Grant's signing heightened expectations even higher for a franchise fortunate enough to get Shaquille O'Neal and Anfernee Hardaway in consecutive drafts. The Magic won a club-record 50 games last season. but were swept by Indiana in the opening round of the playoffs. Grant is viewed as the tough defender and rebounder needed to complement O'Neal and help the team move to the next level. "I played against him for five years and hated it." said Nick Anderson. "I welcome him with open arms. He's going to take a lot of pressure off Shaq.

The 6-foot-10, 235-pound Grant cautioned, however, about not expecting too much too soon. O'Neal and Hardaway, who's sitting out training camp because of a contract dispute, are only 22 years old. Despite the Magic's potential, it's difficult to imagine a team going from having never won a post-season game to the NBA Finals in one year.

"I don't think there's any question we have the tools and talent to compete for the Eastern Conference title," said Grant, who averaged 12.6 points and 8.6 rebounds per game in seven seasons with the Bulls. But the fans and the city have to be patient with us.

This is a new thing for myself and for the team. We have to learn each other and get to know each other on the court. That takes time." Grant, who became an unrestricted free agent after last season, isn't worried about being overshadowed by O'Neal and Hardaway in Orlando. After all, he played in the shadows of Michael Jordan and Scottle Pippen in Chicago and still made a name for himself.

"I've never pulled on anyone's conttails. I go out to play my type of game," he said. "You do that playing beside guys like Michael and Scottle and you're going to get notoriety."

In some ways, Grant felt like a rookie again when training camp began at the University of North Florida. He described himself as being "one step above excited" about being with a new team. The Magic's potential is one reason. Another is the resolve Orlando's management had to sign him.

The NBA voided the first contract Grant signed, ruling a one-year, option-out clause violated the salary cap. He later agreed to a five-year deal with a two-year early termination option that was approved.

15-10 over Agape. B & M defeated First Baptist. 15-6, and Agape, 15-5. The other win was a 15-7

deciation in favor of Agape over

First Baptist. The standings (with this week's record in parentheses) in the A League has B & M (2-1) on top with a 9-3 record, while Westview (3-0) is 8-4. Agape (1-2) 5-7 and Pirst Baptist (0-3) 2-10.

The standings are even closer in the B League as two teams are tied for the lead and the other two teams are tied for third all three games the first week of the season, continued its rush to the top of the B League, posting its third straight undefeated week to pull into a tie with Nichols Outboard Marine Services (2-1 for the week).

Premier, which had to forfeit

Premier defeated Park Air Inc., 21-16, and Nichols Marine, 21-5. and also got a 1-0 forfeit victory from Neighbors.

In addition to the forfest from Neighbors. Nichols also beat Park Air. 21-12. Premier (3-0 for the week) and Nichols Marine (2-1) are both 9-3 tabbed as this week's Sanford on the scason, while Park Air Herald Player(s) of the Week. (1-2) and Neighbors (0-3) are promise to be of the control of the both 3-9.

hung in there with them and kept playing well.

"It was probably our most satisfying win of the year. because they played so well and we were able to play with them. It showed something about our kids. A kid from University was the MVP, and I believe he deserved it, but it showed that we play well as a team. If you shut one player down, someone else steps up. And our stats for the tournament showed that."

Whalen is looking forward to the matchup at Lake Howell.

"It (the match) will be for the SAC championship," said Whalen, "We must win or there will be a tie for the title. We want It this year."

LYMAN THUMPS SEMMOLE:
LONGWOOD — Lyman railed from a first game deficit to beat visiting Seminole in straight game, 15-11, 15-6, to avenge an earlier loss to the Tribe.

"Jason Gronert got us going tonight," said Lyman head coach Norm Ready. "We were down 9-3 when he started serving in the first game and by the time we had a side-out we were ahead 11-9. We started blocking and spiking better when he got hot. Andy Mayer and Stephen Wojtowicz also had good night's, but Gronert was the key for us."

Volunteer of the Week Senior devotes her time to other seniors

By GULLAN WERNER Horald Corresponder

SANFORD - Although Hilda Rossell is a senior citizen herself, she has devoted much of her time to other seniors. Her many efforts haven't gone unnoticed.

Family and friends excitedly bragged about this active lady and all her good works.

Rossell presently lives in Sanford but has lived in surrounding cities such as Longwood and Lake Mary for some 23 years. She is the mother of five ren. Dorothy Lee. Charles. Sandra, Terry and Richard and the proud grandmother of four. She is involved with the Salvation Army in the home league that encompasses Bible studies and craft classes.

Only recently has Roszell many years of teaching the women her numerous craft ideas at St. Steven's Church in Longwood. "I would teach the ladies all different crafts," she said.
"I'd just pick up ideas along the way and sometimes we'd share craft projects among ourselves. Some of the ladies would just come to the classes and buy the crafts. Others would sit and work on them with me."

Another part of Roasell's devotion is to the Lakeview Nursing Center. "Every year I make about 40 corsages for the women there around Mother's Day."

Rossell's real love is her volunteer work with RSVP (Retired and Seniors Volunteer Program).
"I've worked with RSVP fro 12 years now," she said. "We work year round to make things for crafts with them from one extreme to another. We make things for grandmothers, grandfathers, moms and dads. brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles." She elaborated on the reason for the work. "Around Christmas we open a little shop and children come in and for $2 they can buy their mome, dade or whoever a present. We see a lot of children from the Head Start program and other get together to work on projects but sometimes she is not able to attend so she works on things at home and sends it in. Her many craft designs were arranged around the room. Plastic canvas coasters, teddy bears with lace glued atop a Renuzit air freshener, and a large afghan was shown as her handiwork.

Her involvement with RSVP doesn't just stop with the crafts though. "I'll be 79 years old this year," she said. "I really enjoy shop for the crafts we've made. I've been Mrs. Claus for eight years now. I meet the buses that bring the children in. I guess I kind of keep them amused while they wait their turn to go into the shop. I really enjoy seeing their faces when they see me dressed up and when they come out with the presents all wrapped up and ready for Christmas. It's just so nice to see all the seniors working together. It's a good feeling to know we're doing things to help others. That's what it's all about."

Couple's schedule doesn't work for wife

DEAR ABST: My husband works as a security guard full time on the midnight shift. He makes 65.50 an hour. I also shift, making almost three times as much as he does. We are working these 4hifts so we don't need outside day care for our children. We have a baby together, and he has a son by a previous marriage who lives with us.

My problem to that he has been on the midnight shift for more than two years, and I have been getting very depressed as time goes by. I would like him to find a daytime job, and I will continue working afternoons. That way we still won't need day care but we could at least sleep together at night. He knows how miserable I am, but he doesn't even look for a job.

Abby, we are newlyweds of just over a year. This is putting a strain on our relationship because I feel he doesn't care enough to do something about it. On the weekends, he needs to catch up on his sleep and spend more time with the kids, and I feel like a third wheel. We have to be quiet around the house during the day so he can sleep. I mise my husband so much. but I guess he just doesn't feel the same. He reads Dear Abby. so I hope he sees this. Please tell me what is wrong with him - or THIRD WHEEL DEAR THIRD WHEEL: No amount of money will compensate for the time you spend away from each other.

This is much too serious a problem to hope he reads about it in the Dear Abby column. Collar him and insist that you see a marriage counselor

DEAR ABBIt This concerns treating all adult children equally. Three of our children have borrowed money from us. Two have paid us back promptly. The third has not repaid one dime. Careers: Jobs that need people now, in future

By The Associated Proce

The restructuring, downstring economy hasn't dampened demand for qualified people in certain fields: Historic Architecture

Some successful architects can hitch their future to the past, preserving and rehabilitating historic and older buildings. "We are getting to the point where we are recycling old buildings more than we're building new," says Roy Eugene Graham, adjunct pro-fessor of architecture at the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. "It's more energyefficient and more economical as building costs

He cites a prediction by the American Institute of Architects that over 90 percent of architectural projects built in the next century will be adaptive use of existing and historic structures.

Architecture students concentrating on historic preservation learn to negotiate national, state and local codes and restrictions governing historic architecture. Students can also prepare for planning jobs overseeing historic district administration, as staff members for preservation groups, and as architectural historians," Graham

The preservation architect should be well grounded in liberal arts, architecture and computer studies. They'll need to know how to use the latest in computer assisted design technology, as well as how to keep 200-year-old bricks from crumbling. Graham says. Commercial Pilota

U.S. airlines will need more than 10,000 new ptions by the middle of the decade, and they have almost nowhere to find them, says Dr. Steven Sliwa, president of Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. He predicts that by next year, the traditional sources of airline flight crews - the military and the industry itself - will be Silwa says the 25,000 pilots in the military will be reduced by at least 30 percent within four years. And pilots who survive downsizing in the industry are likely to have most sentority and are heading for the federal mandatory retirement age.

Institutions like Silwa's are trying to fill the gap by training from scratch. "Students selected from a pool of undergraduate degree candidates will be offered internships with the airlines, leading to virtually guaranteed flight positions which will satisfy growing demand requirements," says Thorston Hisam, flight training manager of Embry-Riddle, which has campuses in Daytona Beach, Fla., and Prescott, Artz. Real Estate

Real estate is a different ballgame these days. says Rick O'Neil of the Metroplitan New York City-Long Island office of Century 21 of the Northeast. "The present-day real estate professional has to be adept at automation and knowledgeable about what's happening in the investment and financial arenas, besides being that the real cotate agent has to be psychologist and family planner, he says.

Real estate people today are aware of an old idea that just about anyone could sell property. There used to be a time when real estate sales meant chauffeuring a homebuyer from house to house." says Joe Manrique, broker at Century 21 Scenic View Real Estate in Brooklyn, N.Y. "The challenge to a good real estate professional is not how many homes you can show but getting to the heart of your customers' needs to help them make decisions that will affect their lives over the next decades. Our education and experience allows us to help them plan for their children, parents, employment and investments. We wear Rosalyn Kriener, education coordinator for the National Association of Realtors, says professionals stay current with ongoing education. "There are a variety of continuing education programs available to real estate professionals.

Actually, if you think about it, a patient with emphysema who continues to smoke is acting a little crasy anyhow, because tobacco smoke will speedily worsen this lung disease. Therefore, the very fact that the patient continues to smoke may indicate a deficiency of perception and judge

DEAR DR. GOTT: My children tell me I'm old-fashtoned and out of touch with modern medicine. My concern is with the lack of clothing on my grandchildren. I think sick babies' ears and heads should be covered, and that they belong home and not out in the evening air. Young mome tell me we over-dressed our children, and their perintricians say that babies need fewer clothes than adults. Is this true?

DEAR READER: It depends on where you live. In general, babies should be dressed about givers. In northern climates, mante should be dressed more warmly than in southern

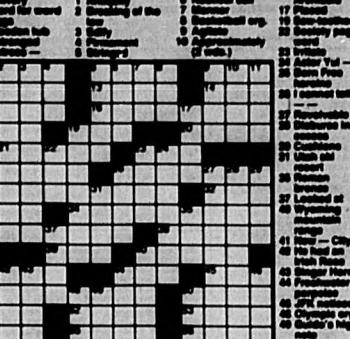

I do agree with you about covering bables' heads; because of a lack of hair, they may lose a lot of body heat from the scalp.

Freddie North to a well-known author and player in England. He used to write stories about a fictional Aunt Agatha, which I didn't enjoy. But for the last two or three years he has been writing an escallent series in Bridge Magazine entitled "What's it all about?" Arguably. he has left the best to last: counting. Today's deal from his possible for others.

North uses a limit raise, showing a maximum pass with at least four trumps. In North America, North might respond two clubs, the Drury convention, giving the same message, except that he may hold only three trumps. Drury has the advantage of keeping the auction lower, permitting extra inbefore switching to the club jack. Declarer won with dummy's ace and ran the spade jack, losing to West's king. Back came another club. South drew the remaining trumps, cashed the diamond ace and fidenced dummy's jack. But East produced the queen: one vccr Mete Inck observed North. "But you didn't benefit from your good fortune." What?

Boy, how unlucky can I get?" said South, intending his question to sound rhetorical.

"West had already produced the A-K of hearts, the club jack and the spade king. Yet he passed as dealer, so how could be possibly hold the diamond queen as well? You should have cashed your two top diamonds. And East did have the doubleton queen."

Those who are in a position to improve your lot in life may confide in you more in the year ahead than they have in the past. Confidential information you receive can be used profitably.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23)

Socializing and being around others could be fun today as long as you don't spend too much time with them. Your social graces might not last long. Libra. treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph pre-dictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph. c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You might have a short fuse today; Woe unto those who anger you! The probabilities for misinterpreting intentions is very high. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Have the courage of your convictions today where your ideas are concerned. Don't be intimidated by a know-it-all who ANNIE might try to discount your perfectly valid ideas in front of others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Instead of using funds for new endeavors or merchandise. it might be wise at this time to use some of your money to pay off old obligations.
AQUARTUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

It'll be easy to get along well with almost everyone today except for someone you've exchanged cross words with recently. If you sense storm signals, avoid this person like the plague. PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) If you expect others to do things for you today that you can easily do for yourself, you could be disappointed. Your friends aren't going to be in the mood to be ARIBS (March 21-April 19) In conversations with friends today, be careful not to impose your views on them. You might win the debate in the opening round, but you could end up altenating your pals.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) From your vantage point today. you may see ways to help your family by making some changes. However, if you don't explain your reasons well enough, you may not win their support.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Persons with whom you're involved might have better ideas than you do today. Convincing you of that, however, could prove an impossible task. Don't let your ego cloud your judgment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You will have very constructive advice on the ways someone else should manage his/her affairs today, yet, in your own dealings. you might not draw upon your own wisdom.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Beware of the inclination today to treat light situations solemnly. Try not to take yourself or the world too seriously. You don't need turnmy trouble or headaches.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
Take care of tasks that require know-how and concentration early in the day. Time might not be on your side today, and as the clock ticks on, temperament and talents could become dulled. CCopyright1994 NEWSPAPER EN TERPRISE ASSN.
