Better Baby Contest

Readers of the Woman's Home Companion have no doubt been interested in results of the Better Baby Contests from east and west, north and south, for which this magazine has made a specialty. It was through the Woman's Home Companion the Welfare Department of the Woman's Club received material which enabled it to carry on the Better Baby Contest to a successful conclusion in Sanford.

The co-operation of the physicians Palestine, Tolar, Denton and Marshall were appreciated, as without them the contest would not have been possible, thirty babies being examined. The prize baby and one to receive the bronze medal was James Meade Fox, whose score was 99 per cent.

Those receiving diplomas were: Division One (six months to one year)—highest boy and girl: Charles Claudius Cobb, 97 per cent; Frances Louise Purdon, 96 per cent.

Division Two (thirteen months to two years)—William Morton Thigpen, Jr., 98.5 per cent; Ada Alphaec Singletary, 96.5 per cent.

Division Three (twenty-five months to three years)—Russell Stringfellow Wallace, 98 per cent; Evelyn Smith, 96.5 per cent.

Mrs. C. C. Cobb had prettiest decorated carriage, most original carriage being that of Mrs. J. G. Hurley.

On Extended Trip

Mr. and Mrs. J. Tilden Jacobs who have just closed a very successful year as principal and assistant principal of the Lake Monroe schools expect to leave their home in Chuluota in a few days for an extended trip throughout the northern and western states.

They will visit North Carolina for several weeks, going from there to Kentucky and then to Denver, Col., where they will visit Mrs. Jacobs' sister. They will return in the early fall in time to take up their duties at the Lake Monroe school. Mrs. Jacobs' sister will return with them and will also teach at Lake Monroe next winter.

E. B. Brown Here

E. B. Brown spent Tuesday in

Sanford, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Holly. Mr. Brown has been elected state manager of the Virginia Carolina Chemical Co., with headquarters in Jacksonville and will take up his new duties about July first. He is a former resident of this city where he was local manager of the V. C. Co., afterward going to Tampa to become manager of the Gulf Fertilizer Co., and is now returning to his first love. Mr. Brown is probably one of the best posted fertilizer men in the state and is thoroughly familiar with the business from every angle. While in Tampa he was secretary of the Shrine Patrol and was presented with a beautiful diamond Shiner's pin upon the eve of his departure at a banquet given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Brown. His many Sanford friends are glad to know that his talents have been recognized and that he has reached such a high position in his chosen line of business. Mr. and Mrs. Brown are very popular in Sanford and other cities where they have resided.

Letter From Chas. Munn
St. Mencholl, France,
May 15, 1919.

Dear Father:
Will write a few lines to let you know I am still alive.
I received a letter from you Sunday, were indeed glad to hear from you and to know you were all O. K.
We are having some fine weather now, the sun shines every day and the trees have been blooming for two weeks. It makes France look a lot better, for I like sunshine better than snow and rain, especially when it steels for a week without stopping. I went to Bar-le-Duc last Saturday for a couple of days. We can get a pass almost whenever we want one.

I went back Tuesday to see the dentist. I had my teeth worked on. I had three filled and had them cleaned. It isn't like back home. This job would have cost me about $20, so as I am in the army now it don't cost anything. I pay $6.70 a month for my insurance. I haven't been sick but once since I left home, that was when I was in La-Chapelle in the winter. I was on guard for 24 hours and it was snowing and raining all the time. It laid me up for three days. Gee, we have a cinch here, nothing to do but to eat and sleep. I happen to be the lucky one this week—I haven't done anything since Saturday, or Friday, I should say. Only been to Bar le Duc twice. It don't cost anything to ride on the train.

You wanted to know how long we were going to be in France, well I don't know, but we won't be here very long, not over three months. Our Captain said we would be doing police duty in New York in less than three months, but of course we don't know, for Germany hasn't come across yet. I she don't sign up we are going over and take her off the map. I am sending some pictures in a day or two of the boys here in this town. This is the bunch I am with now.
I will close. Give my love to all. Tell Earl I won't forget the overseas caps for him and James when I come home.
Charles.

Body Found in Car Lumber

The mangled body of an unidentified negro was found in a car of lumber in the Sanford yards of the A. C. L. on Tuesday of this week. The car came to Sanford from Tampa and was enroute to Palatka, Florida. Being reported by train-men as in bad order, the car was transferred to the Sanford shops for repairs. Workmen in the shops discovered the body of the man who had evidently been dead several days.

The body was taken out of the car and a coroner's inquest held and interment made here. It is impossible to tell whether this man was stealing a ride and was killed by the shifting of the lumber or whether the body was placed in the car for disposal by some one. Certain marks on the body led the sheriff's office to believe that the man may have been a victim of foul play and the authorities at Tampa have been notified but to date no reply has been received.

Real Estate Transfers

The following deeds were filed for record in the office of the clerk of the circuit court for Seminole county during the week:

- C. S. Lee and wife to Sam. W. Stephens.
- Harriett M. Hutchinson to Chas. E. Baker.
- J. W. Ford and wife to Overstreet Turpentine Co.
- Mabel L. Fernald to City of Sanford.
- Minnie May Long to Helen Robbins.
- Currie Mfg. Co. to J. R. Robbins.
- A. M. Hunt et al to Overstreet Turpentine Co.
- A. W. Moreman to Overstreet Turpentine Co.
- Arthur A. Lewis to Celia F. Lewis.
- H. O. Crippen and wife to H. C. Dieterich.

Rand Grove Sold

One of the largest transfers in grove property for some time was handled Saturday by the firm of Bradshaw & Harris, when A. Y. Fuller bought the F. H. Rand grove near Longwood for a consideration of $30,000.

The property consists of some hundred and twenty acres with forty or more planted to oranges. This was the home of Mr. Rand for forty years prior to his moving to Orlando.—Orlando Reporter-Star.

New Addition

The store room on Park avenue by the Sanford Cycle Co. is being enlarged by an addition making a room 30x25 feet for the vulcanizing plant to be installed for this enterprising firm. Mr. Bryan of this firm states that the business has doubled during the past year and the vulcanizing of bicycle and auto tires will be added to the auto accessory department of the business.

First Subscription to Daily Herald

The first subscription to the Daily Herald came in voluntarily this week the lucky man being D. C. Marlowe, secretary and treasurer of the Sanford Truck Growers, Inc., of this city. Mr. Marlowe is one of Sanford's greatest boosters and aside from his many other duties is acting as secretary of the Sanford Board of Trade. He believes in publicity and knows what a good five-daily newspaper means for Sanford, hence his desire to get his subscription in before they fare all gone. The Herald will keep his check for $6 until the daily makes its first appearance and will treasure this check above all the rest, for it is the very first to come in. In a few weeks the management of the Herald will make a canvass of the city for subscriptions and advertising and meantime those who want a good paper are invited to step up and get in the band wagon. The daily will be $6 a year, $3 for six months or ten cents per week by carrier. A small price for a good paper.

SCOUTS MUST "RAISE GRUB"

The gardening season of 1918 is here, the war is still on, and America is sending more men across the ocean to prevent the enemy reaching our glorious country, says Chief Grub Scout Hal B. Fullerton.

America must feed these men, and feed them well. They are our boys who are risking everything, even their lives, to save our country, our homes, from the horrible fate of each and every country in Europe that our cruel enemy has overrun.

That means more work, bigger work, better work for the boy scouts than the splendid work they did last year. Get busy! Keep busy!

This year every scout is asked to be responsible for securing one adult to agree to work with him on the scout's individual garden or on the troop garden or on the local council garden. The adult might be a scout's father, his brother or his sister's best fellow, his uncle or, indeed, any man who will faithfully stick to the job until the crops are harvested.

BREAKING A DEATH GRIP.

Boy Scouts Learn Rescue Work and Are Safe in the Water.

HE'S A BOY SCOUT:

His Uncle Sam can bank on him what ever be his part,
He's a scout!
No "ifs" or "ands" or "buts" or "ors" confuse his mind or heart,
He's a scout!
Come, look him over carefully, front and face about,
Quiz him, poke him, turn him upside down or inside out,
You'll find him true as navy blue
And resolute and stout!
He's a scout!

His sense of duty points for him a clear and shining way,
He's a scout!
He understands what "service" means, and "honor" and "obey"
He's a scout!
He's genuine American, he's loyal through and through,
He's on the job to show old Bill what Yankee boys can do,
And there he'll stick through thin and thick,
Until the war is through!
He's a scout!
—F. J. P. in Boys' Life.

SCOUTS ALL OVER WORLD.

Besides the 353,048 Boy Scouts of America, duly registered, there are in the great boy scout brotherhood all over the world millions of boys wearing practically the same uniform and having the same sign and oath, the same beliefs and principles and cheerful outlook on life and its opportunities for service.

There are large boy scout organizations, following the one originated in England by Lieut. Gen. Sir Robert Baden-Powell, in almost every country wherever boyhood longs to be manhood's pal and to play the man's part.

Heat and Tuberculosis.
James B. Murphy and Ernest Sturm (Journal of Experimental Medicine) subjected mice to heat and a week later inoculated them with a strain of tubercle bacillus virulent for mice. These animals displayed a greater resistance than normal.

BEFORE

you start on a motor vacation for the summer take a look at your tires. Do they show signs of much wear or look as though they might blow out any moment, if so bring them to us. WE WANT THOSE TIRES.

No, we don't want them to retread for you or ourselves or anyone else, for greater false economy was never practiced, and, well—it needs no explanation, the "Motor-wise" motorist, the man who actually knows how much it costs him to run his car, just doesn't do it, and that's sufficient proof in its self. Its part of our business to keep mileage cost records on several standard makes of tires, and in doing so have discovered that the number of retreads in use on cars where the cost count, is practically negligible.

WHAT WE DO WANT WITH THOSE TIRES IS THIS—We will give you a complete new set of tires and one or two spares, with tubes if you say, and make you an allowance for the used tires taken off your car. The allowance we make is very reasonable, being based on the present list price of your tires, the mileage they have made, and their condition in general. Our charge for the new tires is their present list price, plus the customary war tax, less the amount offered for your old tires.

Suppose you drive that old casing until it blows out, you have ruined a tube that might have been good for many thousand miles more. The result is you not only buy a new casing but also a new tube, the old casing and tube going to the junk man, from whom you receive very little.

On our offer we take all the risk, we might over estimate the value of your tire equipment, and thereby be the loser, but you in every case get tires of standard make, guaranteed for 6000 miles, and in the event of a defect we make the adjustment here. You don't have to wait for the tire to go to the factory as is usually the case with tires purchased from many other sources. The total cost of such equipment so you will figure less than you have been paying for tires of standard make.

Service—built in with quality materials and expert workmanship is the predominating characteristic of

READY-MIXED HOG FEEDS.

(National Crop Improvement Service.) The breeder should use his own mind and judgment in mixing the percentage of his feed for hogs. He can find all the tables in Henry & Morrison's Feeds and Feeding and in his agricultural college bulletins, and if he has the facilities can arrange and balance a ration on the basis prescribed. He would, however, save himself a great deal of time and labor and get more exact results should he ask the state feed inspection department for its published lists of all mixed feeds registered in the state, and choose those ready to feed which will meet his requirements.

He will find it to his advantage to know the game. He must use his own noodle in determining the quantities of each feed for each lot of pigs at different times during their growing period.

Professor Ervrad says: "The young growing pig weighing 50 to 60 pounds should eat about one pound of protein for every four pounds of carbohydrates."

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

BRITISH SCOUTS' WAR WORK

Harry Lander, the famous Scotch comedian, on his recent appearance in Omaha, Neb., said of the work of the scouts in England:

"There are at present 240,000 boy scouts engaged in work in England that hitherto had been performed by men. Their work is such that a well-trained man can accomplish as well as a well-trained boy. Carrying messages across the country, helping wounded soldiers after their return from the battle front and a thousand

"When the pig reaches 100 pounds in weight, about one pound of protein to five pounds of carbohydrates is correct.

"At 150 pounds it should be increased; for each pound of protein six pounds of carbohydrates.

"The fairly well-grown hog, 240 to 300 pounds, in fattening will do well on one pound of protein to eight pounds of carbohydrates."

After listing the various feeds and combinations of feeds used in extension hog feeding tests at Iowa agricultural college, Professor Ervrad says: "Each buttermilk hog drank 32 pounds of buttermilk, ate less than half as much of the $2 corn, only one-third as much of the $30 tankage, only two-thirds as much of the $55 middlings, and actually reached a weight of 200 pounds some 62 days before the hog without buttermilk did."

So it would seem that buttermilk is one of the best hog feeds. Where it is not freshly available it may be had in a dried powder form. There are ten pounds of solids in every hundred pounds of liquid buttermilk. The rest is water.

other things keep the lads busy all the time. They are an important factor in England's destiny. The British boy scout is doing a great work today in the service of his country.

"The man, the soldier, is the 'bulldog' as it were, and the boy scout is the 'ferret'. There are 40,000 of these boys actively guarding Britain. With their keen little eyes and their quest for romance and excitement they are playing a great part in guarding our sea-girt shore.

"To be a boy scout is to be a disciplined good boy. Good boys make good men, good men make good citizens, and a good citizen is always respected. Every boy as well as every man must do his best today for his country."

SCOUTS AIDING THE NAVY.

Immediately following the declaration of war steps were taken to effectively organize, along lines similar to the coast guard work of the Boy Scouts of England, older boys specially selected in order that there might be available a resource for use by the navy department, should the occasion warrant.

Special organizations were perfected covering a large part of the Atlantic coast line, and in each case the boy enrolling secured special permission of his parents. All of their work was done privately.

The boys agreed to hold themselves in readiness for any emergency call. They also undertook to make a careful survey of the actual conditions in a definitely prescribed territory so that there might be available information as to the full resources of the community in case of disaster, including a list of all houses suitable for hospital purposes, names of all doctors, information about all automobiles, motorboats, etc., which might be of service.

In addition to this, in some of the naval districts, boy scouts co-operated in the early days of the war in locating unlawful wireless stations.

WHAT FOREIGN SCOUTS DO.

We must produce food as never before to keep America for Americans. Secretary Houston urges the boy scouts to double their production of food in 1919. It can be done. The scouts of every country in the world have made good.

Belgian boys carried dispatches through the very enemy's lines when the most skillfully trained soldier couriers failed. Belgian scouts gave up their lives rather than betray the secrets of their country.

French and English scouts have many times secured information absolutely necessary for the safety of their countries' armies.

Certain it is that American boys would live up to the records made by these European scouts, even to the giving up of their lives if their country needed these supreme sacrifices.

American scouts, scoutmasters and scout commissioners already are in the trenches of Liberty's front lines defending civilization's freedom from barbarian onslaught.

GEN. STRONG LIKES SCOUTS.

In a letter written by Maj. Gen. F. S. Strong, commander of the "Sunshine," or Fortieth division, at Camp Kearny, Cal., to President Frank von Tesmar of the Coronado boy scouts, he says: "A previous engagement makes it impossible for me to be with you. This is regretted particularly, because I have always had a great interest in the boy scout movement. I have had occasion to observe them in many parts of the country, and have noted their efficiency wherever they were called on for service.

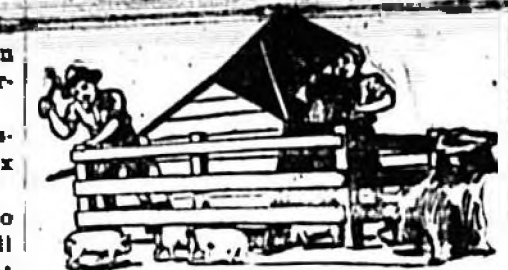

"In Honolulu they were invaluable in handling many details of the carnival and were highly praised by the governor and officers of the association.

"The boy scouts as an association stand for everything that is honorable and patriotic, and they deserve commendation of all for the work they are doing."

SCOUTS ARE LIFE-SAVERS.

If the scout's willingness to help others were not backed up by scout knowledge and ability, his "daddy good turn" would have more of kindness than of genuine service to others in it. As it is, the application of what each scout must know covers service to others going all the way from answering questions and pointing out directions and giving first aid, even to the saving of life.

Scouts in Long Branch, N. J., saved a man from drowning in a well.

HOW TO KEEP BOYS ON THE FARM.

Start your boy in with animals of his own, and arrange with him so that all of his profits may be his. Nothing will send your boy to the factory so quickly as to encourage him to raise a pig and when sold put the money into your own hands and tell him that he owes you board.

FEEDING THE UNWEANED PIGS.

(National Crop Improvement Service.) At two or three weeks of age the pigs will begin to manifest an interest in the food of the sow. At this time unweaned pigs should have a low net rough barred to keep away the bigger pigs, and they should be encouraged to go to it to satisfy their hunger. The use therein of sweet milk and a little milk feed or pig meal will soon induce them to eat a great deal in this way, thus supplementing the milk of the sow and hastening their sturdy growth.

Weaning at four weeks of age is usually not of good practice; if not actually cruel, the change is too sudden for best results.

Two litters a year may be had if the pigs are encouraged to eat while still nursing, and if they are not weaned until six or eight weeks of age. This probably is the better practice.

When pigs are left with the sow for periods as long as ten to twelve weeks she will wean them herself, but it is time wasted, for two litters are impossible.

When weaning takes place the sow should be returned to the pigs two or three times so that the udders may be milked out.

MATURE HOGS QUICKLY.

The hog which weighs from 200 to 250 pounds is the hog which the packer wants and is the choicest and best hog the farmer can raise. According to Doctor Henry, the amount of gain required per hundred pounds of gain is as follows:

|                 |                    |
|-----------------|--------------------|
| Weight of hogs. | For 100 lbs. gain. |
| 100 to 150 lbs. | 127 lbs. of feed   |
| 150 to 200 lbs. | 123 lbs. of feed   |
| 200 to 250 lbs. | 120 lbs. of feed   |
| 250 to 300 lbs. | 117 lbs. of feed   |
| 300 to 350 lbs. | 114 lbs. of feed   |
| 350 to 400 lbs. | 111 lbs. of feed   |
| 400 to 450 lbs. | 108 lbs. of feed   |

From the farmers' standpoint there is greater profit in putting hogs on the market at 200 to 250 pounds. In marketing hogs young, the risk of loss from disease is also lessened. He is therefore justified in feeding the very best feeds obtainable while the hog is capable of making his greatest gains.

BEGIN TO RAISE HOGS.

(National Crop Improvement Service.) Those who have not been raising their pork and bacon should get a good gilt as soon as possible and begin. It is hard to estimate the value of a good brood sow, which can produce two litters of pigs a year. It will be more economical in the end to buy a purebred and raise good pigs. You can always sell registered stock because the demand is greater than the supply. As a rule purebred sows or gilts are better feeders and will respond to good care better than scrubs. All swine should be purebred, but not necessarily registered, although registering adds to their sale value.

With a bred gilt, or one to be bred to farrow early in the spring, it need not take one long to raise enough hogs for the farm meat supply.

We will not miss our German frankfurters if every farm home will learn how to cure meat and to make pork sausage and specialties. Every producer of pork should cure his own hams and sides—at least enough to meet the demands of his own household and his own hired labor. Home-cured hams and bacon are always in demand among your neighbors, provided of course that you do a good job. You cannot expect to get a good price for inferior work.

Hogs will turn pasture and grain into more and quicker meat than other animals, and do it most economically of all. Start now and start right. Get good animals and interest the boys in the game.

SELF FEEDERS.

(National Crop Improvement Service.) Hog raisers with self feeders can keep more hogs than they could otherwise. The members of the boys' pig club and the county agent should confer with the lumber yard and prepare plans and specifications which will avoid many of the evils incident to the average feeder built without thought. In some counties building pens have been held by the county agent and in one county nearly a thousand self feeders of the proper kind were built, which caused an immediate increase of 2,000 more hogs on account of the labor saving effected.

NO, HE DIDN'T RUN.

A colored boy named Sam, while rambling through the woods, came on a hornet's nest. With rare courage for one so young he flung a stick into the abiding place of the little arthropods, with the usual quick results. Sam made a hundred yards in two-fifths of a second less than nothing.

"You didn't run, I hope, Sam," said a white "gommern" to whom Sam related the episode.

"Well, mistah, I wouldn't say 'zactly 'that I run, but a man in a field 'cross the road said he couldn't see nothin' of me fum mah waist down."

The organization is daily growing stronger--and all the time becoming more efficient in its service to growers.

Over four thousand grove owners are affiliated with the Florida Citrus Exchange, and their helpful suggestions as to the policy and operation of the body are of the greatest assistance to the officers and directors.

The active interest of the grower members of the Florida Citrus Exchange is the solid foundation on which has been built a business structure with the power to weather adverse conditions and to take the fullest advantage of favorable ones.

Having saved the citrus industry of Florida from destruction, having made for the growers who are members millions of dollars and having proved beyond question that its work is on the right line, the Florida Citrus Exchange asks that its usefulness may be helped to become even greater by your support.

Hogs, Hogs and More Hogs

Many theorists who are old enough to know better are advocating that a man who produces all that he can on his farm is foolish, because they have noted at various times that small crops have sold for more money in the aggregate than larger crops.

"Suppose in a crop failure year that corn should go to $10 a bushel? If you have no corn what good would that do you? Would it be better for a few farmers who have corn to make big money out of the farmers in the crop-failure section and others who have no corn?"

"Suppose every man should cut down his acreage of cotton to boost the price. Would the man with the smallest amount of cotton get rich? Nobody asks you to grow cotton at a loss; there are hundreds of things that can be successfully grown at a profit. Why do you always get rich when you do grow cotton, grow on each acre all you can profitably produce. In order to do this you will have to know the cost of fertilizer, labor, etc. Then it is a matter of arithmetic.

"There are planters who make money year after year in cotton. They can make money often when you can't. Whose fault is it? Many fail in business-farming as well as merchandising. If you can't make it pay, get out of it.

Make Every Acre Work Profitably.
"The principle involved is the same as in manufacturing. The student of economics knows that if a plant is not used to its full capacity there is a consequent loss in the return on the investment. The same is true on an acre of land," said Mr. Frank Baackes, vice president of the American Steel & Wire company, when asked about the cotton situation. "In the press service of one of our middle states colleges, the dean says, 'None of our instructors are teaching the farmer that it is either his duty or to his greater advantage under peace conditions to secure a maximum production regardless of other economic con-

BOY SCOUTS

SCOUTS LED, NOT DRIVEN

To do all the undone things, to complete all the war tasks of the back-home battleground, to give help unpaid wherever other organizations need helping, is the gladly volunteered service offered to the government by 353,018 of America's young chaps that can't get into the army or navy anyhow.

Raising gardens, selling bonds, distributing official information, coaxing quarters for War Stamps, saving food and fuel—and urging everybody else to do these things—are among the duties of patriots as exemplified by the organization of the Boy Scouts of America.

No one makes the boys do these things. They are not paid—thus there is no compulsion. No one over them has authority to say, "You must do this." They just follow the compulsion to duty as expressed in the scout advertisements. Exactly so, but such advice must be made definite in order that the lay and inefficient may not take it as an excuse to loaf on the job.

"It is true that if every factory in the United States should make nothing but collar buttons we would soon have more collar buttons than could be disposed of; and the same thing is true of farming. Do not be misled—every farmer must produce all of the corn, oats, hay, forage, wheat, sirup, Irish and sweet potatoes, vegetables, milk, butter, fruit and all other products of the soil first, to properly nourish his own household, and second, to feed the outside world.

Distribution Usually to Blame.
"The trouble is not usually in over-production. Distribution is to blame for most of the trouble, although of course there is always the danger that too many farmers will manufacture collar buttons, so to speak, when they ought to be balancing the world's ration.

"The surest of markets has undertaken this problem—that is, to advance so far as possible what to grow, but the farmer is doing as he always has done. If the price of potatoes is high in the fall he grows potatoes until he gets the market. Next year he grows no potatoes, and the third year potatoes are high again. The wise man does not attempt to keep all of his eggs in one basket.

"The farm is a factory and the same advice is given to farmers that has been adopted by other manufacturers: You can't make a profit unless you know your costs. Standardize your products.

"No market scheme, whether of co-operation or legislation, can long maintain a superior price for an inferior commodity.

"Farmers should first maintain themselves and family and labor on their own farms; and this applies to cotton in the South and to wheat in the North. I have no patience with a pile of tin cans at the back door of the farmhouse."

oath and brought into action by the leadership of men acting as scoutmasters and as troop committeemen and as members of local councils.

Among all these thousands of men leaders there are less than 300 paid workers—and these for the most part are scout executives directly hired to look after the scouts by councils of business men in cities where there are quite a few troops.

The tremendous task of rousing these voluntary workers to an energetic answer to the many calls of the government falls upon one man—the chief scout executive at the national headquarters in New York city, Mr. James E. West.

SCOUTS ARE GOOD SOLDIERS.

As an organization the scout movement is not military in thought, form or spirit, although it does instill in boys the military virtues, such as honor, loyalty, obedience and patriotism.

The uniform, the patrol, the troop, and the drill are not for military tactics; they are for the unity, the harmony and the rhythm of spirit that boys learn in scouting. It is in the wearing of the uniform and doing of things together as scouts that they absorb the force and truth of the scout law, which states: "A scout is a friend of all, and a brother to every other scout."

While the spirit of scouting is not military, the experiences of the last year have completely demonstrated that outdoor scout training with its cooling, camping, hiking, signaling, map reading, wireless electricity, knowledge of woodcraft and ability to care for oneself in the open helps immeasurably in fitting a man for the duties of a soldier.

While scouting as a teenage boy program very properly is not militaristic from a technical standpoint, it is, however, patriotic, as proven by last year's wonderful record of scout nationwide, civic war service for the navy department, in the two Liberty bond campaigns, in the gardening propaganda, in selling War Savings stamps, in distributing more than 5,000,000 patriotic documents for the committee on public information, in co-operating with the Red Cross, war camps, community recreation fund, Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus and other war relief agencies.

SCOUT GAME, NOT SPY PLOT.

Mysterious notes found in hiding places on the street in Indianapolis recently caused much consternation in the neighborhood and resulted in a call for the police. Visions of some mysterious spy plot filled the minds of those who read the notes.

A boy found a folded letter on a street corner, which directed him to go to the bread box outside the corner grocery, where further directions would be found. Although the night was dark the boy followed up the directions.

On the bread box he found another note even more mysterious, which directed him to go to the first street, then north, and then to the nearest lamp post. The alarm was given and the police took up the trail.

Rev. Hugh S. Clifton of the Toledo Baptist church, 29 Garfield avenue, admitted he was the arch-plotter, and had innocently caused all the trouble. The explanation was very simple, Mr. Clifton, with the boy scouts of his church, were out playing one of their tracking games.

He went ahead in an automobile, and he placed tracking directions, and it was up to the boys to follow the notes and find him and the automobile.

EGGS THAT SCOUTS GATHER.

There is a new kind of egg hunt service set up by the scouts. With their sharp eyes and trained powers of observation the boy scouts can find a lost service to any city by removing the eggs from the trunks of automobiles and will soon hatch out into a caterpillar pest.

These little masses of white eggs covered over with a slight gauze covering can be detected easily by sharp eyes and can be removed on the end of a stick or with the fingers.

THE ADVENTRESS

By MARY POWELL

Lydia fingered the missile from over her shoulder, tenderly. A letter from Blythe! Inscrutable! A small ivory paper cutter within the flap of the envelope, she eagerly drew forth the contents. Suddenly her smile vanished, and a gasping sound issued from between her thin lips. With an effort she recovered herself and cried shrilly:

"What! All steps! I don't recall her call, and Alicia, in timid fright, entered. Lydia's agitation was evident. "Read," she commanded, and thrust the letter into Alicia's hands.

"Aha! coming home at last," Alicia read, and suppressed a shriek of joy. "An bringing—my wife!" Alicia looked up startled. Blythe married? She smiled radiantly. "Oh, Lydia!" she breathed, "isn't it wonderful?"

"Wonderful," snapped Lydia. "I call it brutal!" "I'll mean giving up all this," she swept the luxuriously furnished room with expressive eyes. "Blythe doesn't say so, directly, but intimates that, as his wife, this person will take her proper place in his house. To think that Blythe, at his time of life—"

"He's only 40," protested Alicia. "After all, why should we care? Goodness knows it's been mighty dull here since Blythe left." She reread the letter. "Oh," she cried, happily. "I know she's a darling!"

Lydia drew herself up to the full height of her stilly starched and perched person. "Alice Billings," she cried in a hoarse tone. "I'm ashamed of you. You—a Billings—to talk like that?" She glared at the culprit.

But Alicia, with very pink cheeks, stood her ground. "I don't care," she defiantly. "He says she saved his life—nursed him back to health when he was wounded."

"Supposing she did," stormed Lydia. "She's probably an adventress"—bitingly. "Pshaw!" Alicia laughed a low, tremulous little laugh that ridiculed the idea, then patted her sister's arm reassuringly.

They came at last, the great, bronzed man in khaki, his old boyish manner gone forever, and in its place a certain grim determination, and by his side a sweet bit of femininity, whose name was Corinne, and whose shy, demure smile flashed naively up at the spinster sisters, straightway taking Alicia's heart by storm. How could Blythe help loving this adorable, dimpling creature? whose eyes were azure blue, and whose cheeks were like the petals of a full-blown rose? Alicia thrilled. Adventure, indeed!

A bit shyly Corinne assumed her rightful place as mistress of Blythe's home, and pretended not to see Lydia's ing the bedclothes about Lydia's slim shoulders. "Would you mind—kissing me?" Corinne bent close. Kiss you? Oh, Lydia—darling!" was all she said. But those few words spoke volumes. (Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Nero's Golden Palace.
The golden house was the palace of Nero in ancient Rome, which occupied the valley between the Palatine and Esquiline, and connected the palaces of the Caesars with the gardens of Maecenas. It was built after the great fire of 64 A. D., and was so large that it contained porticos 2,800 feet long and inclosed a lake where the colossal sea horse stood. The foremost contained a colossus of Nero 120 feet high.

It is claimed that chess playing is dying out. In the old days, when the term did not have possession of the land and the inhabitants thereof, chess playing was quite popular. Now we are a steam-heated civilization, with no time for study for the mere delight of learning. Remember when Paul Murphy of New Orleans was the chess wizard of the world?—Los Angeles Times.

Once Powerful Empire.
No country, not even Egypt, made a deeper mark in the history of the ancient world than Mesopotamia. For thousands of years it was the seat of the Assyrian and Babylonian empires. Its beautiful resources of nature its peoples added those of art and science, and the country during the centuries waxed not only in material wealth and military power, but also in culture. The ancient city of Mesopotamia has passed, but the glamour remains.

THE HAPPY PRANK

By NELLIE GORDON.

The afternoon of the Red Cross room had been a particularly lively one. Every one of the younger girls had seemed just full of it, as the saying goes, and therefore, laughter reigned. Barbara Smith, prim and 32, left the room a short time before the others, and after she had been gone a few moments one of the liveliest of the girls, who was folding an olive-drab sweater, began to chuckle mysteriously. After much questioning she explained:

"I just thought what a lark it would be if we planned Barbara's name in this sweater, and some unknown soldier would begin writing to her. She is so prim and proper, you know, that it would be a dandy joke on her."

The others, laughing joyfully, immediately agreed, and thus the dark deed was perpetrated.

In the meantime the subject of their discussion went her homeward way slowly, her mind full of thoughts which could be better described as rebellious than prim and proper.

Brought up by very strict and sensible parents, she never shared in the simple pleasures of other girls of her age. Skating parties, dances, etc., were taboo. Instead, she was taught useful things after her school hours.

Thus, romance had overlooked her, that is—almost. It was just before a skating party that the high school seniors were planning, and Frank Gant, one of the most popular boys in the class, for some inexplicable reason had approached the shy little Barbara and asked if he might be her escort.

With her very primest manner, she refused, saying that she wasn't allowed to go to silly parties. With the honesty of the boy of 16, he frowned. "Huh, you big baby! That's no man's apron-string."

With tear-filled eyes, she loyally defended her mother's ideas, then she ran homeward, crying and wishing frantically that she could have accepted.

Frank Gant, a most comely young man, and never noticed little Barbara afterward, which caused her much pain.

Remembering the amusing little incident, she wondered idly where he was. It was years since they had met, but she unconsciously carried his image in her heart.

"A rough dugout, amid the ruins of a hamlet in France, a bronzed giant had just been given to him. As he unfolded the sweater, something sharp pricked his hand. As he drew out the offending slip a slip of paper slipped onto the floor.

"Barbara Smith, Lexington—!" he read aloud. Then, he added, musingly, "That name seems familiar." As he searched his memory more thoroughly, he laughed. "Why, that was the name of the bashful little girl who so laughingly refused my company to a party when we were in high school. But, of course, this can't be she. She was always too proper to do a stunt of this sort. Merely a coincidence, I suppose. No doubt, this is from some romantic youngster of the same species some young fellow to write to her." As he glanced at his gray hair in the mirror, he grinned impudently at it. "I will write to her, anyway. She'll never know the difference, and letters from someone at home would be mighty welcome to me."

So the strange correspondence started; for some reason or other, Frank signed his middle name to his first letter. Barbara, after the shock of receiving a letter from a perfectly strange man, and after a battle with her stern bringing-up, recklessly answered it, and all the others which came after it.

Then came the wonderful day when hostilities ceased, and transports turned homeward, bearing their precious cargoes.

Barbara, who had been watching the postman in vain for three weeks, was startled to see a soldier, leaning on a cane, walking up the front path. She opened her door, and seeing who her visitor was, emitted a little shriek of surprise.

"Well, Miss Prim," came in mocking tones, "you might at least ask a friend in. It would be just as proper as to invite correspondence from a strange man," he added with a twinkle.

And in the weeks that followed, it is sufficient to say that romance, now turned penitent for her flagrant neglect, certainly made up for lost time.

Noted Japanese Woman Dead.
Mrs. Kiko Minelima, the wealthiest woman in Japan, as noted in the Japan Bulletin, recently died in Tokyo at the age of eighty-six. Her fortune was estimated at $12,500,000, and its extent was due to her business sagacity, proving that among women "East is West."

Forty years ago her husband died, bequeathing her his savings as a successful pawnbroker. This she invested in real estate until she owned 570 acres in Tokyo, where values increased rapidly. She also founded in succession, the Ogurita Bank, Owgrita Trust Company, and Minelima Real Estate Company, and conducted them all with an iron hand. She was rightly honest in all her dealings. Last November she donated $250,000 to the city of Tokyo to assist the cause of education.
