

Former Casselberry Mayor Bill Grier Dies

Former Casselberry Mayor and Councilman Bill Grier died Thursday morning at his home after a long illness. He was 82.

Elected mayor of Casselberry in 1972, Grier became the city's first full-time mayor in 1977 when the city changed from the city manager form of government. He served a 12 years as a city official, six of them as city councilman.

A barber, he owned and operated the Village Barbershop in Casselberry for 18 years. He disposed of his business after becoming ill with pulmonary fibrosis, an irreversible lung disease, in July of 1985, according to his wife, Phyllis.

Former Casselberry Police Chief George Karcher, who worked with Grier for 10 years, said, "He certainly was a very understanding mayor and we had a great relationship. He was aware of the police needs and cooperated with me in what I was trying to do to build the police department."

"We all feel very badly about it at city hall," said Mayor Owen

Shepard. "He worked very diligently for the best interests of the city many times ahead of his own."

City Councilman Tom Embree said, "A lot of the city has gone with him. He was involved in politics for many years and he'll be missed. I served on the council when he was mayor and a councilman and he did a good job in both positions."

Born March 3, 1934 in Wetumpka, Ala., Grier, of 555 S. Lake Triplet Drive, Casselberry, moved to Casselberry in 1966 and had lived in the Orlando/Winter Park area since 1948.

He was a Protestant and a member of South Seminole Masonic Lodge 364 of Casselberry, and a 32nd degree member of the Scottish Rite Consistory, Orlando. He was a past member of the Tri-County League of Cities, Council of Local Governments (CALNO), and the Greater Seminole Chamber of Commerce. He was a World War II army veteran.

In addition to his wife, Phyllis, he is survived by a son, Bill L. King, Longwood; brother, Talmadge, Winter Haven; three sisters, Wilma Strickland, Montgomery, Ala., Elsie Adair, Orlando, and Thelma Traywick, Winter Garden; one grandson, Scott King, Altamonte Springs.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at Garden Chapel Home for Funerals, Orlando, and burial will be in Highland Memory Gardens, Forest City. Viewing will be 3-4 and 7-9 p.m. Friday.

Belfiore Not Added To List For Chief

By Paul Schaefer
Herald Staff Writer

Lake Mary's city commission refused to add Lieutenant Samuel Belfiore's name to the list of finalists for the city's new police chief Thursday night.

Belfiore, the city's acting police chief, and seven year veteran of the force, had applied for the position. He was not in the list of six finalists submitted for the consideration of the commission by the Central Florida Police Chief's Association screening committee.

With the absence of fifth commissioner Buzz Petsoas, the body was deadlocked 2-2 on addition his name. Commissioners Charlie Webster and Paul Tremel were in favor of adding Belfiore for consideration, and commissioners Russ Megonegal and Ken King against. Mayor Dick Fess, who does not usually have a vote on motions, served as tie breaker, and voted no.

"You cannot select one name out of all the (nearly 50 applicants) and add his name," Mayor Fess said after the meeting. "To do that in an official manner would not be proper," he said. "Then we have a liability to add every other applicant who wishes to be added to the list."

Webster made the motion to add Belfiore's name to the finalists.

Lake Mary residents and police department employees leave city commission meeting Thursday disappointed commissioners refused to add acting chief Sam Belfiore's name to list of finalists for chief's job.

"because of his long and hard work for the city, and dedication to the community. I want him to be considered," he said.

Tremel seconded the motion. "I say the motion is out of order," Megonegal said. "I am not speaking against the concept (of adding a name), I am against the motion. I would like to review the six with no doors closed to review of the others. I would like to go through the process with the six recommended.

"It is my opinion that the commission can do what it wants, if you want to add names to the list," city attorney Robert Petree opined after

1 Dead; 1 Critical In Area Shootings

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

A Forest City woman was shot to death early today, reportedly by her boyfriend. In an unrelated incident, a Winter Park man was in critical condition after allegedly having been shot in the face and chest Thursday by his estranged wife.

Details were sketchy on the Forest City shooting, which was reported at about 7:45 a.m. today. Seminole County Sheriff's Sgt. John Thorpe said he did not know the identity of the woman who was shot at her home at 617 Calleente Way. She was pronounced dead at Florida Hospital-Altamonte Springs at 9:05 a.m. and sheriff's deputies were searching for her live-in boyfriend who is believed to have killed her.

Early today sheriff's deputies issued a bulletin that a search was on for Robert N. Woodbury, 25-to-30 years of age, about 6-foot, 2-inches tall and about 165 pounds.

When he reportedly left the scene of the shooting at about 6:30 a.m. today Woodbury was wearing a cowboy hat, a black shirt, blue jeans and cowboy boots. He is said to have fled on foot and was possibly armed with a six-inch revolver. Woodbury, the bulletin said, is white and is known as "Woody."

Thorpe said he did not know nature of the wounds the woman received.

In the other case, Patrick Terrance Proso, 39, of 5680 Garden Grove Circle, Winter Park, was shot at about 5 p.m. Thursday, allegedly by his estranged wife Nancy Fuller Pennell, 45, of the same address. Seminole County sheriff's investigator Greg Futch said.

Proso, who had been sentenced in 1985 to two years of community control for allegedly battering Ms.

Pennell in Jan. 1985, doing $10,000 in damage to her face, had been served Thursday morning with an injunction ordering him to stay away from his wife, Futch said.

Ms. Pennell, whom Futch said is reportedly considering divorce, told Futch Proso was inside her home when she arrived there Thursday afternoon. There was a confrontation and Ms. Pennell allegedly shot her husband with a .38-caliber revolver.

Futch said it would be hard to say if there was a physical fight between the pair, because there were no witnesses. Ms. Pennell, he said, had a twisted ankle.

According to Proso's community control officer, Jim Goodwin, Proso called him at 9:45 a.m. Thursday and got permission to move from his home where he had been under "house arrest." Permission was granted, Goodwin said, but Proso called again at 3 p.m. and said he was returning to his home.

Ms. Pennell reportedly called Goodwin at 4 p.m. and told him she had a restraining order against Proso and if he was at her home when she got there she was going to shoot him. Goodwin said Friday.

When sheriff's deputies arrived at the scene Proso was found lying wounded on the sidewalk near the frontdoor of his home. Ms. Pennell was across the street at a neighbor's home, a sheriff's report said.

She reportedly said, "I did it. I shot him," the report said. Sheriff's Sgt. John Negri reported finding a handgun in Ms. Pennell's purse.

Proso was transported to the Winter Park hospital.

Both shootings were under investigation early Friday. No charges had been filed against Ms. Pennell.

Split Along Party Lines, 222-210

House Defeats Contra Aid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House handed President Reagan the biggest foreign policy defeat of his second term by narrowly voting against giving $100 million in aid to the Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

Brushing aside Reagan's last-minute offer to delay some military aid while pursuing a diplomatic solution to the Nicaraguan conflict, the House split almost along party lines Thursday to reject the package, 222-210.

The aid issue now shifts to the Senate with its Republican majority. If the aid is approved there, as expected, it will go back to the House where a new compromise is possible, close observers said. At the White House, Reagan pledged through spokesman Larry Speakes to reverse the defeat, calling the House vote "a dark day for freedom."

Sixteen Republicans joined 208 Democrats in voting against the aid package, which called for $70 million

With republican supporters queued behind him, governor hopeful Bob Martinez, mayor of Tampa, says Seminole County will be a key county in the upcoming election. Martinez, with running mate state Rep. Bobby Brantley, R-Longwood, was in the Sanford Friday

Lake Mary Commissioner Away, But Not Forgotten

Lake Mary City Commissioner Buzz Petsoas was away, but not forgotten, during Thursday night's regular commission meeting.

Petsoas was in California on business. During the March 6 meeting, Petsoas voted 'no' a motion to extend the meeting past 10 p.m., and again voted 'no' on another extension after the first 15-minute extension expired. Commissioner Charlie Webster customarily makes the motion for meeting extensions.

As 10 p.m. arrived Thursday and there was still city business to take care of, the motion was made for an extension and it passed unanimously. Webster quipped, "For Buzz's sake, I think he would vote against it."

About two-thirds through the three-and-a-half hour meeting, Mayor

Dick Fess' 7-year-old son, Brad, quietly emerged from a city hall office, and took Petsoas' seat at the curved wooden commissioner's table, next to his father.

The young would-be commissioner sat silently, occasionally spinning in "his" chair. He cast no votes, but did receive a copy of a report being distributed by city attorney Robert Petree.

Student Plunges To Death

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — A Georgia junior college student was killed instantly when she slipped backward off a motel balcony and fell six stories onto a parking lot, authorities said.

Laurain Day Buffington, 20, a second-year student at Gordon Junior College in Barnesville, Ga., was following a friend from one balcony to another at the Holiday Inn Boardwalk when she lost her grip and fell Thursday afternoon, police said.

"It was so ironic, because all she had to do was walk out to the corridor and go to the next room," said the friend, who asked not to be identified. "But we were partying and a little crazy. It was just a mixture of alcohol and craziness." Authorities ruled the death accidental, and an autopsy was scheduled for today to determine the cause of death and whether the victim had been drinking.

The friend said seven or eight people were in the two rooms, but the accident happened so fast no one could react quickly enough to save Buffington.

It was the first fatality of this year's spring break in Daytona Beach, where four people fell from motel balconies last year. Three of them were killed.

Caller Says Poison Put In Capsules; None Found

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A maker of capsule drugs asked stores nationwide to stop selling three of its products because of calls claiming poison had been put in the capsules. Officials reported evidence of tampering — but not of poison.

SmithKline Beckman Corp. said Thursday that it had asked retailers to pull Contac, Dietac, and Teldrin from their shelves because of telephone calls from a man who claimed capsules of the products had been filled with rat poison or cyanide and put in stores in Chicago, St. Louis, Houston and Orlando.

Administration tests determined some capsules in Houston and Orlando apparently had been slit open with a razor blade and contaminated with cornstarch — not poison.

John Norris, an FDA deputy commissioner in Washington, told the Philadelphia Inquirer that capsules of the products filled with a "harmless household product" were found in Chicago and St. Louis.

SmithKline warned consumers against using any of the three products bought after March 15 because of the calls from the man, who claimed the poisonings were part of a campaign to "get capsules off the market for safety."

"It is a terrorist act," SmithKline president Henry Wendt said. "He is saying in these four cities he has tampered with our products, and he has introduced poisonous materials, and that they are harmful and even fatal."

Contac, a cold medicine. Dietac, an appetite suppressant, and Teldrin, an allergy remedy, are made by the Menley and James Laboratories subsidiaries of SmithKline, a $3.5 billion pharmaceutical company based in Philadelphia.

In California, health officials ordered stores to remove the capsules, and Illinois health officials urged consumers to stop using the products.

Wendt said the "terrorist" called the company once Wednesday and twice Thursday. The FDA and FBI, which said it had given the case its "highest priority," reported other telephone threats were received by several news organizations beginning Wednesday.

In Orlando, media reports said the caller said his "group" poisoned capsules in four stores, and an editor of KPRC-TV in Houston quoted the caller as saying "we" put "rat poison

IN BRIEF

Senator Asks White House-NASA Phone Records Before Launch

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Ernest Hollings is seeking records of telephone calls between the White House and NASA to determine if the administration or Congress pressured the space agency into launching the ill-fated Challenger.

In a letter to White House counsel Fred Fielding, Hollings, D-S.C., asked for records for outgoing and incoming calls from several White House telephone lines to NASA headquarters in Washington, the Kennedy Space Center in Florida and the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

In a lengthy speech on the Senate floor before releasing the letter Thursday, Hollings raised questions about a possible connection between the shuttle launch and President Reagan's State of the Union address, scheduled for the same day.

Hollings made no specific charges about White House pressure to launch, but noted, "We know there was pressure. We just want to find out where it was coming from."

Key Rocket Wreckage Studied

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) — Salvage crews have recovered a piece of wreckage from Challenger's rocket boosters that could serve as a key for engineers trying to trace the cause of the shuttle's fiery destruction.

Sources said a 500-pound section of booster wreckage brought ashore Thursday was positively identified by NASA engineers late in the day as a crucial part of the shuttle's right-hand rocket, the one that ruptured Jan. 28 setting off the explosion of the ship's external fuel tank.

A photograph of the wreckage showed a jagged triangular piece of metal that included a large section of the joint between two fuel segments that is suspected of failing.

Testimony in Washington today at a public hearing of the presidential commission investigating the Challenger tragedy was expected to strengthen the case against the suspect joint.

Off the coast of Florida, the salvage ship USS Preserver stood by today to resume diving operations, weather permitting, to recover remaining wreckage from Challenger's blasted crew compartment.

Shuttle To Carry Insulin Tests

TORONTO (UPI) — A U.S. space shuttle mission in 1988 will carry experiments that American and Canadian researchers hope will refine a medical process and eventually change the lives of diabetics by ending daily insulin injections.

The experiments involve a process to encapsulate insulin-producing animal cells that would, with one annual injection, replace daily injections needed now by an estimated two million people in the United States and Canada, the companies involved announced Thursday.

Researchers said diabetes symptoms have been controlled in animals for more than two years with the encapsulation process in laboratory experiments. They believe production of the capsules in space, at near-zero gravity, will see a perfectly spherical capsule with uniform thickness.

Halley's Comet: A Black Potato

BOULDER, Colo. (UPI) — The first close-up pictures of the nucleus of Halley's comet show that it does not resemble a round, brown snowball as once thought, but looks more like an irregularly shaped black potato, scientists say.

Photographs taken by the European Space Agency's Giotto spacecraft just before it passed within 324 miles of the comet's nucleus last week provided the first close-up views of the core of a comet. The pictures, made public Thursday, are much more detailed than images taken by Soviet Vega probes.

"It's a burnt black potato," said David Aguilar, public relations director for Ball Aerospace Corp., which built Giotto's camera.

Abducted Woman Crawls From Kidnappers' Truck

By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

Driving on the wrong side of the road was the way to jail for two Orlando men accused of kidnapping a woman who came crawling and screaming out of the cab of their truck when it was stopped by a Seminole County sheriff's deputy.

Deputy Daren Tjomstol reported that when he saw a pickup truck westbound in the eastbound lane of Fernwood Boulevard in Fern Park at about 2:15 a.m. Thursday, he pulled his patrol car into the path of the vehicle forcing it to stop.

Tjomstol ordered the driver to pull onto the shoulder of the roadway. As he turned to use his police radio the driver and passenger got out of the vehicle.

Tjomstol reported he heard a woman scream and said that she appeared to crawl from the floor of the cab and was yelling for help.

As Tjomstol called for backup from other deputies, the woman ran screaming from the truck to his patrol car. Sharon Kaye Jones, 26, of Winter Park, told Tjomstol she had been forcibly taken by the two suspects from Fern Park Station on Fern Park Boulevard. She told Tjomstol the pair had threatened to rape her and that one had taken $98 from her, Tjomstol reported.

Tjomstol separated the three and while waiting for help determined that the driver of the truck had a suspended driver's license. He was arrested on that charge.

Eric Juergen Jolly, 21, had a charge of kidnapping added when sheriff's investigators arrived. Kevin Louis Bourgeois, 22, was also charged with kidnapping and robbery, for allegedly stealing Ms. Jones cash. Tjomstol reported.

Both were being held Thursday without bond in the Seminole County jail.

County Leaders Saddened By Death

"It's a very sad day," County Supervisor of Elections Sandra Goard said in response to the news of her former boss, Camilla "Cami" Bruce, had died Wednesday at her Sanford home at the age of 71.

"She was a dedicated public official and enjoyed her job. I not only thought she was a great supervisor, but a great person. She did more for me than anyone in my whole career," Mrs. Goard said.

"In 1977, when I became her office manager, she taught me everything, gave me responsibility and trained me well. When she decided to retire in 1983, with one year to go in her term, she worked hard to get me appointed to fill her unexpired term. I hope I can follow in her footsteps and do half as well," she added.

Mrs. Goard said Mrs. Bruce, longest serving election supervisor in state history with 32 years in office, had been with her at the Mid-winter Convention of state supervisors of elections last month in Tallahassee and, "Cami was doing just great."

Private family memorial services are planned for Mrs. Bruce, whose body was discovered by a maid when she came to work Thursday morning. She apparently died of natural causes. An autopsy was scheduled for today.

She was praised by County officials, who remembered her fondly for her warm personality and many years of dedicated service to Seminole County government.

They said the office of supervisor of elections evolved under Cami from using handwritten records to the punch computer process.

"She served our county very well and had one of the longest tenures of any elected official in Seminole County," County Commission Chairman Bob Sturm said. "She was very dedicated and conscientious and I am sorry to see her passing."

Commissioner Sandra Glenn recalled Cami as a hard worker, but also one with an unfailing sense of humor.

"In my opinion she really was a lady," Ms. Glenn said. "She served the county a long time and saw a lot of adjustments made in the supervisor's office."

"She never lost her sense of humor and was one of those people that didn't delegate authority, she just did it hands on," the commissioner said. "She worked just as hard as anybody in those trying times of an election. She was just a lovely person."

Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff described Cami as a person who "stuck to it and did a good job."

"She served the county longer than anyone else in recent memory. She started out in a part-time position with an office at the Chamber of Commerce, or the basement, or wherever they could find a home for her," Kirchhoff said. "She was a good citizen, a good neighbor, a good mother and a credit to the community. We will all miss her."

"I'm very shocked," County Tax Collector Troy Ray said, "I'll certainly miss her, she was a wonderful person so bright and pleasant. I don't think I ever saw Cami when she didn't have a smile. I was closely associated with her from 1964 until she retired in 1983 and she was always fair and straight forward with everyone."

Mrs. Bruce is survived by two sons, Robley R. of Longwood and Richard D. of Sanford; a daughter, Patricia B. Nuckolls, Longwood; a brother, Richard R. Deas, Sanford; and two grandchildren.

Three Charged In Arson Round-Up

A Winter Springs man has been charged in connection with two separate arson cases. His sister and another man were also charged in one of the cases.

Seminole County arson investigator Jon Christian reported charging Alton William Schneider, 30, of 302 Arapaho Trail, with two counts of arson and burglary in connection with the burning of a mobile home and a 1967 Ford pickup truck at Seminole Pines Mobile Home Park on Cheyenne Trail in Winter Springs. Schneider has reportedly said he entered the property to get warm.

That March 12 fire followed the Feb. 17 burning of a nearby Seminole County home. In connection with the burning of that home on State Road 419, near Winter Springs, Seminole County sheriff's investigator Barry Brady charged Schneider; Schneider's sister, Robin Lynn Childs, 25, of Middletown, Conn.; and Scott Michael Wheeler, 18, of the same address as Schneider's. The three have been charged with arson and the men face burglary charges as well.

The three were arrested Wednesday at the Winter Springs police station. Christian said personal property left at the scene of one of the fires linked the two cases and led to the suspects.

Ms. Childs reportedly sat in her vehicle in the driveway of the vacant home when it was torched on Feb. 17. In that case gasoline was reportedly used to ignite the fire. The home, which was destroyed, was valued at $15,000. Christian said the mobile home was damaged and the pickup truck destroyed. That damage totaled $2,000, he said.

The suspects were being held in lieu of $8,000 bond each.

$523 debt at the Hilton Inn, 350 S. Northlake Blvd., Altamonte Springs, using a stolen credit card, has also been charged in connection with the theft of about $1,000 in audio visual equipment from that hotel on March 10 or 11.

Altamonte Springs police reported finding stolen audio visual gear in a search of a home at 2903 Oak Lane Fern Park, on March 12. The search was in connection with the theft and use of the credit card of Sidney F. Rosen, of Altamonte Springs, whose stolen credit card was used at an Altamonte Springs pet shop as well as at the hotel, police reported.

A suspect was jailed in the credit card/pet shop case and police reportedly linked that man to the hotel case after a desk clerk reportedly identified a suspect in a photo lineup.

Charges were added against Jerry Douglas Kern, 25, of 2903 Oak Lane, Fern Park, at 7:20 a.m. Wednesday. He was being held in lieu of $3,500 bond on a grand theft charge.

Sanford police charged a 31-year-old Sanford man with possession of cocaine after reportedly spotting cigarette rolling papers in his pocket and finding a match box containing seven foil packets of cocaine in his pocket.

He then told the woman she needed to give a urine specimen, and told her how to do it, the report continued. He reportedly then asked the woman what she was wearing, and the woman hung up.

The woman then contacted her insurance company which said they had not called her, and recommended she file a report with the police department.

BURGLARIES & THEFTS
A $336 weed eater belonging to Earth Control Landscaping of 106 Delores Drive, Altamonte Springs, was stolen from the bed of a pickup truck parked at that address on Wednesday, a sheriff's report said.

Two potted palms, with a total value of $180, were stolen from in front of a Southland Corp. building at 2285 State Road 436, Casselberry, on Tuesday or Wednesday, a sheriff's report said.

Man Jailed For Lewd Acts With Minor Girl

A Casselberry man who pleaded guilty to a lewd, lascivious or indecent act or assault on a 15-year-old girl was sentenced to 30 days in jail and 2 years of community control, a form of in-house arrest. It was one of three cases heard recently.

Sergio Torres, 21, of 503 El Dorado Dr., was also ordered by Circuit Judge Kenneth M. Lefler to pay a $1,000 fine, write a letter of apology to the victim and pay her counseling and medical costs. He could have received up to 15 years.

Torres was arrested in June on a charge of sexual battery and committing a lewd and lascivious assault on the girl.

According to court records, the girl said she was raped in a bedroom while at a make-shift party at 500 El Dorado Dr. where she was baby-sitting. She said she was drinking and couldn't clearly remember what happened. A group of the girl's friends took her to the home of a friend who put her in a shower then took her home. The girl's father called the police, then she was transported to Central Florida Regional Hospital by ambulance for an examination.

In other court action, a Sanford woman, who reportedly stabbed a 15-year-old boy when he tried to break up a fight between the woman and his mother, has pleaded guilty to battery.

Eloise Warren, 45, of 815 E. 9th St., could receive up to a year in the county jail when sentenced April 23 by Circuit Judge Robert McGregor.

According to court records, the incident occurred Nov. 26 in front of Richie's Grocery on E. 7th St., in Sanford. While the women fought, Clemie Hudson Jr. joined the fight by getting in-between the women and during the fracas was stabbed in

The Intractable Mideast Conflict

The bad news continues from the Middle East.

Now the Palestinian mayor of Nablus, largest city of the West Bank, has been shot and killed by Arab extremists because he agreed to accept appointment from the government of Israel.

A former mayor of Nablus, Bassam Shaka, lost his legs in a car bombing in 1982.

Two years later, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin dismissed Shaka and a number of other elected Palestinians from office and placed Nablus and most other West Bank cities under Israeli military government.

There hasn't been an election in the occupied territories for many years, because Israel won't permit them.

Then, last December, businessman Zafer Masri was appointed mayor of Nablus.

A pro-Jordanian moderate, he was head of the city's chamber of commerce. But he was shot dead on March 3 as he was walking from his home to City Hall.

The gunman escaped. Later, two Palestinian extremist groups, one in Damascus and one in Beirut, claimed credit for the assassination.

And other Palestinians named to local government positions by the Israelis decided it would be too dangerous to accept the appointments.

Even though they may be supporters of the Palestine Liberation Organization, as Masri was, they would be perceived as quislings by the more extreme Palestinians.

Maasri's funeral was the occasion for another of the now-familiar scenes of frenzied grief, a peculiarly Mediterranean spectacle, whether the victim is Moslem or Jewish, which seems to presage vengeance.

In this case, the crowd couldn't decide whether to blame Syria or Jordan or the Israelis.

Israeli soldiers watched silently from the security of a nearby hilltop.

So another generation of young Palestinians is imprinted deeply with a tribal memory of bloodshed and the cry for revenge.

A people is raised up in the conviction that they are destined to be victims. Their rage and their conviction that their group suffering entitles them to reprisal by any means necessary make them a lasting danger to their neighbors.

Is there to be no end to the hatred festering in the occupied West Bank and the Gaza Strip?

Certainly there no longer can be any cheap and easy optimism. Pious expressions of hope for an eventual peace in the Middle East carry no credibility.

The former editor of The London Observer, Conor Cruise O'Brien, takes a skeptical view in his new book, "The Siege: The Saga of Israel and Zionism" (Villard Books, New York).

He says the "peace process" is mostly a mirage and the end of the siege is not in sight.

He has an Irishman's personal knowledge of a similar conflict which is intractable and which has lasted for hundreds of years.

Aid To Contras? History Holds The Answer

It is not surprising that President Reagan's request for another $100 million of American tax revenues to fund the contra rebels in Nicaragua has run into congressional opposition. Congress should, and perhaps by the time this column appears will, save the administration from a costly mistake in continuing to finance this highly doubtful venture.

The president's hope for expanding the contra aid money has run into congressional trouble, partly because the General Accounting Office was unable to provide answers to Congress about what has happened to previous congressional appropriations for the Contras. GAO auditors testified that they were unable even to document that the money had been expended as Congress intended.

But beyond this nagging uncertainty as to where previous aid has gone, Congress is faced with other serious questions, including the willingness of the Contras to fight against their own government. It is estimated by some American observers on the scene that close to three-fourths of the contras have been sitting in base camps in southern Honduras since last autumn.

Robert McCartney, of The Washington Post, recently reported from Honduras that the contras' lack of military activity has led to dissatisfaction among many of their U.S. supporters, including some U.S. officials close to the program and some members of Congress who have backed it in the past.

McCartney further reported that the rebel group has been unable to build a network of support among the Nicaraguan people, that it has no strategy for winning a guerrilla war and lacks the passion and commitment of the smaller but much more successful group of guerrillas fighting the government of El Salvador.

Although Nicaragua is a tiny, impoverished country, Mr. Reagan and his men have been trying to convince Congress that financing the contras in their seemingly hopeless task of overthrowing the Sandinista government is essential to American security. The president, in language not heard since the Vietnam War days, has warned: "If we don't want to see the map of Central America covered in a sea of red, eventually lapping at our own borders, we must act now."

He has also said that the contras now resting in Honduras and apparently not eager for battle against their countrymen next door are "the moral descendants of men at ... Valley Forge."

To another audience, Mr. Reagan issued a warning that the Sandinistas are "just two days" driving time from Harlingen, Texas. Still another group was warned that Brownsville, Texas, was exposed to the advancing Nicaraguan danger unless the hapless contras prevail.

That is exactly what American presidents said when we first started sending money and arms and later "advisers" to Vietnam.

It is these fears, based on historical experience, that are leading members of Congress to reject both the request for funding the contras or any future suggestions that we send our young men to battle in Central America.

200 Bees Needed To Kill

By Deltha Ricks
UPI Science Writer

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A so-called African killer bee is no more dangerous than the garden variety honeybee, but if you have agitated a swarm of the killers — watch out, warns an expert on bee stings.

"I don't like to call them killer bees," said Dr. Hal Renollett, an emergency room physician and a clinical professor of medicine at the University of California, Davis.

"I prefer to call them African bees," said Renollett, "and yes, if a swarm of them gets a hold of you, you can forget it. But these bees aren't out to kill anybody."

Renollett told emergency room doctors at the 115th annual session of the California Medical Association in Los Angeles that people have developed irrational fears about the bees observed recently in central California.

"Frankly, you can't tell an African bee from a honeybee. They're a little bit shorter than the average honeybee, but who goes out measuring them anyway? It would take the venom of about 200 of these (African) bees to kill an adult," Renollett said.

The black-and-yellow-striped American honeybee, found throughout all regions of the United States, originated in Europe. The bees live in colonies characterized by distinct classifications — workers, drones and queens.

"African bees can be deadly because they tend to mass swarm, so it is possible to sting by a lot of them. But you have to bear in mind that they are out to defend," Renollett explained.

Studies of the so-called killer bees, known to have stricken fear into the hearts of grown men and women, show they are primarily characterized by their habit of taking off for parts unknown, leaving hives they had been seen cultivating for weeks, Renollett said.

"And believe me, they'll take off and nobody will know where in the world they went," he said.

UC entomologists — experts on the study of insects — report the "absconding" characteristic as one of the major factors differentiating African bees from honeybees, which cultivate a hive for months, even years in the same location.

But both kinds of bees have similar social habits bee experts call "colonialism" and both belong to what is called the superfamily Apoidea, which differentiates bees from their close cousins, the wasps.

EDWARD J. WALSH

A Scary Prospect

The juxtaposition of two recent front page stories in The Wall Street Journal told volumes more about the decline of American manufacturing than a year's worth of congressional testimony by the nation's corps of economists.

The first described General Motors Corporation's discovery of rampant sale and consumption of illegal drugs, including cocaine, at its auto assembly plants, and the company's efforts to uproot it. Eventually, more than 200 people were arrested. The company's undercover operatives told horror stories of auto workers stumbling through the plants dazed by drugs, operating highly complex machinery. Sales and exchanges of hard drugs were discovered taking place within earshot of security personnel. Employees would simply duck behind auto chassis and bulky machinery and equipment to ingest cocaine.

Beyond that, tidy criminal businesses of resale of stolen plant equipment and other kinds of stolen property were being conducted within General Motors plants. The large American factory, it appears, is the perfect site for crime: the police do not patrol there, and there are plenty of places to hide.

The second article complemented the first in vast irony. It told how Japan's Sony Corporation seized on an offer by the Dutch firm, N.V. Phillips, to cooperate on development of a compact disk player, using Phillips' basic research. All American firms had given up on the technology, fearing it too risky and expensive. Today Sony's compact disk players, and those of other Japanese manufacturers, are the only ones available. Another market, it appears, is lost to U.S. companies.

Back to the drugs in the factory. Who knows how widespread these practices are? We can be sure they aren't limited to General Motors. Most likely, the sale of hard drugs can be found alongside the assembly lines of America.

Drug use by assembly line personnel, like timidity among managers, are not only problems of business. They are problems of culture. The plant worker uses cocaine for the same reason the movie star or the big-time athlete uses it — because something is badly askew in his realm of values, and that the small thrills of cocaine outweigh the satisfaction of performing excellently his work.

But the economic problems that derive from substance abuse and contempt for an employer's property are not to be remedied by preaching. A return to the moral values of yesteryear, though much to be desired, will not occur before American industry faces the prospect of its demise. The belief that one's job, employer, and industry are inevitably doomed might drive anyone — production worker or manager — to crime, or to abject fear.

Fear indeed pervades American industry today, but for more complicated reasons than the trade deficit in manufactured goods. Jobs are, and will continue to be lost because of lower-priced imports, but also because of the measures taken by U.S. manufacturers to combat them. Robots, doing routine chores once performed by humans, are an everyday phenomenon in today's factory. Tomorrow, machines that cost less than people may destroy the jobs not only of production workers but of secretaries, salesmen, librarians, draftsmen, accountants, and a host of others.

Reagan's Altered Policy

By Helen Thomas
UPI White House Reporter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, much as he might not want to acknowledge it, is coming around to Jimmy Carter's view that human rights do count in the foreign policy equation.

When Reagan began his presidency, his diplomatic advisers said the human rights issue would not be the flagship it was during the Carter administration. The emphasis, they said, would be on fighting communism and terrorism.

And so it has been, but the president has learned after five years that democracy works in tandem with an opposition to political tyranny, whether inflicted by friends or foes.

With the rapid fall of Claude "Baby Doc" Duvalier in Haiti and Ferdinand Marcos in the Philippines, Reagan has found that dictatorial regimes on the right are expendable.

By giving Duvalier and Marcos a shove out the door, Reagan was able to capitalize on the trends of the times and the will of the people. The crown is resting uneasy on other heads in Asia and Third World countries subjected to one-man rule.

The president has now issued a new foreign policy statement declaring: "The American people believe in human rights and oppose tyranny in whatever form, whether of the left or the right."

The statement is surprising since Reagan has adhered to the thesis of former U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick that "authoritarian" governments on the right are more palatable than dictators on the left.

The new policy statement to Congress puts the United States on the side of liberty and consistency — that human rights abuses even by our friends are intolerable.

Reagan told Congress: "A foreign policy that ignored the fate of millions around the world who seek freedom would be a betrayal of our national heritage."

Speaking of the overthrow of Duvalier and Marcos, the president said: "We did not create this historical phenomenon, but we must not fail to respond to it."

But recently the United States introduced a resolution in the United Nations Human Rights Commission condemning human rights abuses in Chile.

So there is movement in the right direction, and back to Jimmy Carter's belief that human rights have a place in foreign policy.

First Amendment Rights Are Expensive

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — A citizen files false arrest charges against a police department and loses; the city sues him for damages.

Protesters demonstrate peacefully against construction of a nuclear power plant; the county sues them for "interference."

A man writes to President Reagan opposing a candidate for U.S. attorney; when the nomination falls through, the letter writer is sued for libel by the would-be nominee.

These cases are part of an ominous trend in our litigious society: lawsuits filed against citizens who exercise their constitutionally guaranteed right "to petition the government for a redress of grievances."

What's particularly alarming about this trend is the growing number of suits that are filed by officials or employees of government agencies, according to Professor George Pring of the University of Denver Law School. Pring heads the school's "intimidation lawsuit project," which has documented nearly 100 cases of legal actions brought against citizens engaged in discussion of public issues at various levels of government.

In none of the cases studied did the plaintiff win any money. But even when they lose, the intimidators win — by punishing the defendants with costly legal fees, and by "chilling" future complaints or criticism as word spreads that it's dangerous to cross the plaintiffs. Here are some of the cases Pring cites in his study:

— John Miner, a deputy sheriff in Maryland, arrested Joseph Novotny on a drunken-driving charge. He also charged him with battery after Novotny spit in the deputy's face. Two days later, Novotny complained of police brutality. Miner was cleared of the charge — and sued Novotny for defamation, intentional infliction of emotional distress and abuse of process. The courts dismissed the case on First Amendment grounds.

— Two citizens invited to testify at a city council meeting in the Midwest charged that a certain police officer had been writing false speeding tickets to meet a quota. The officer sued them for $1.5 million; the case is still being fought.

— Richard Bozek filed false arrest charges against the city of Long Beach, Calif., and two of its police officers. He lost his case. The city then sued Bozek to recover its legal expenses. The state supreme court dismissed the city's case, stating that "the bringing of suits against the government is absolutely privileged."

Even when government officials and employees have the best of motives, such legal response to citizens' complaints will undeniably make others reluctant to bring charges against police officers. This was acknowledged by a member of the International Brotherhood of Police Officers several years ago when he said: "Where we have struck back, the number of police brutality complaints dropped sharply."

— San Luis Obispo County, Calif., sued a number of nuclear power protesters for nearly $3 million when their peaceful demonstrations delayed opening of a power plant. Pring, who filed a friend-of-the-court brief in the case, said it is typical of the trend toward intimidation lawsuits.

— A man sent two invective-filled letters to the president, opposing the nomination of a U.S. attorney. The prospective nominee sued for libel when he failed to get the nomination. The Supreme Court dismissed the case.

SEC Advances 3 To Quarterfinals

United Press International
The Southeastern Conference has forged a strong new reputation in the crucible of the NCAA Tournament. The SEC, traditionally known for its football prowess, Thursday advanced three teams — Auburn, Kentucky and Louisiana State — to the quarterfinals of the NAAs. It took one of the four member schools invited to the tournament to eliminate another when Kentucky defeated Alabama. The Wildcats play Auburn Saturday for advancement to the Final Four.

At Houston, Chuck Person overcame poor first-half shooting to rally Auburn from a 14-point deficit to a 70-63 victory over Nevada-Las Vegas in the West Regional. Auburn plays Louisville for the regional title. The Cardinals advanced with a 94-79 triumph over North Carolina.

At Atlanta, All-America Kenny Walker scored 22 points to lead No. 4

Kentucky to a 68-63 victory over No. 19 Alabama in the Southeast Regional.

Also, Don Redden scored 27 points and Derrick Taylor added 23, pacing Louisiana State to another upset, a 70-64 decision over sixth-ranked Georgia Tech.

Friday, Navy meets Cleveland State, and Duke faces DePaul in the East Regional at East Rutherford, N.J. North Carolina State plays Iowa State, and Kansas encounters Michigan in the Midwest Regional at Kansas City, Mo.

Auburn, 22-10 and seeded eighth in the West, moved within a victory of its first Final Four.

"We looked horrible against their zone in the first half, but we finally adjusted," Auburn coach Sonny Smith said.

Person hit his first 3 shots of the second half en route to 25 points.

"We weren't as intense in the second half." UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian said. "We weren't as quick. I'd like to have a big lead like that every game, but we were killed by Auburn getting the second and third shots 'in the second half."

Louisville had a 12-point lead evaporate in the second half, but Billy Thompson and Herbert Crook provided crucial late points to eliminate North Carolina.

"This is probably a national championship caliber game," Tar Heels coach Dean Smith said. "I'm just sorry that we came out on the wrong end."

The Cardinals are trying for their seventh trip to the Final Four.

"We've been playing well for quite some time," said Louisville coach Denny Crum, whose team has won 14 straight games. "We've played teams like Auburn, teams that have great quickness and a fine player like Person.

"But at this stage you can play your best and still get beat."

Kentucky's victory marked the fourth time this season the Wildcats, who won both the SEC regular season and tournament, beat the Crimson Tide, 24-9.

The Wildcats, depending mainly on the inside strength provided by Walker, a 6-foot-8 senior, and Winston Bennett, a 6-7 junior who scored 14 points, led by as many as 10, with the final margin as close as Alabama got in the closing 13 minutes.

LSU has lost all three of its games against Kentucky this season.

"If the pressure's on anybody, it's Kentucky," said Don Redden, who had 27 points against Georgia Tech.

Co-Burger King Players A Whopper Of Selection

Usually when two performers are named as co-players of the year it is a copout. The selection committee finds itself in a bind and rather than chose between two athletes decides to let them share the honor.

Once in a great while, however, a shared player of the year is justified. One of those great whites came Wednesday night when Seminole County's boys' basketball coaches voted Oviedo's Allen Unroe and Seminole's Rod Henderson as Seminole County's Burger King Co-Players of the Year for the 1985-86 basketball season.

Unroe and Henderson were honored along with Men's Coach of the Year Tom Lawrence from Lyman, Women's Coach of the Year Bill Moore of Lake Mary and Girls' Player of the Year Catherine "Kitty" Anderson of Seminole.

Burger King hosted the fete for 80-plus county coaches, players and parents at the George Perkins Building at Altamonte Springs Eastmonte Recreation Center. In a change of pace, Whoppers were out and chicken was in. Burger King's Scott Vatsaka and Bob Santulli unveiled the bird and accompaniments. Davgar, Inc. will open its first chicken restaurant in May on East Colonial Drive.

Getting back to basketball, the shared honor was warranted. Henderson, a junior forward, was the best all-around player on a good team while Unroe served the same role on a weak team.

Henderson, who was invited to tryout for Team Florida Saturday at Stetson, was fourth in five county statistical departments. Unroe, a senior, was the leading scorer in the county and ranked well in every other category.

All-County First-Team members for the boys were Henderson, Unroe, Seminole's Andre "Run My Picture" Whitney and Craig Walker, Lake Mary's Kelly McKinnon and Lyman's T.J. Scaletta.

Anderson, Lyman's North Carolina State-bound Kim Forsyth and Latanya Johnson, Lake Brantley's Sherry "Ice" Asplen along with Lake Mary's Teri Whyte and Cynthia Patterson.

Per usual, when an All-County Team is selected some grumbling accompanies it. Lake Mary's Tonya Lawson was probably the third best player in the county (behind Anderson and Forsyth or Forsyth and Anderson), but she wasn't on either the first or second team. Neither was Temika Alexander, Seminole's talented senior guard.

Santulli said he received ballots from five of the six boys' coaches while just three of the six girls' coaches mailed in ballots. Several coaches said Wednesday they didn't receive the ballot. Santulli said the envelopes were mailed directly to the coaches.

As much as Burger King does for Seminole County sports, one would think the ballot, which came with a self-addressed stamped envelope, could find its way to the coach's mailbox.

And once in the mailbox, it shouldn't be too much of a burden for the coach to fill in the choices, lick the back flap and drop it in the mail.

Don't tell Carl Poellnitz you can never go home again. Seminole Community College's sophomore forward will return to Mobile, Ala. this fall to pull on the jersey of Mobile College.

Poellnitz spent three trying years at SCC, which were plagued by redshirting, injuries and ineligibility. Through it all, though, the likeable power forward kept his chin up and finished strongly.

"Carl had more offers than all of our players," SCC assistant Dean Smith said. "They see that 6-5 and 215 pounds and drool."

Poellnitz moved into the starting lineup for the last two weeks of the Raider season and averaged 12 points and eight rebounds. His final totals were six points and 3.5 boards.

It was enough encouragement for coach Bill See POELLNITZ, Page 7A

Weather Wins Out Along With Evans, Lady Hawks

By Chris Flater
Herald Sports Writer

Lake Mary coach Mike Gibson, doubling as announcer, would have liked his last words Thursday night to be that his Lady Rams were upset winners or to thank everyone on hand for an outstanding meet.

As it turned out, Gibson's last words were, "It looks like the weather has won out."

A heavy, steady rain forced the cancellation of the remainder of the Lake Mary Invitational after eight events were complete on both the boys and girls sides. The team leaders after those events were declared the meet champions.

And eight was enough Thursday night for the Orlando Evans boys and Lake Howell High's girls. Evans' boys probably would have won the meet anyway as they compiled a score of 83 in those eight events and had a 39-point lead over second place Edgewater. Lake Howell's girls, on the strength of three places in the mile run, had 38 points after eight events compared to 35 for Seminole and 30 for Lake Mary.

Evans, which was second in the meet last year, got a big lead early with 39 points in the field events and then got a first from Calvin Windom in the 120 high hurdles to pull further away. The Trojans also won the last event of the meet, the 440 relay, which was run in a downpour.

Lake Mary's Rams scored 21 points in the eight events and that was good for third place. The top performance for Lake Mary was turned in by sophomore Eric Petersen who won the mile in one of the more exciting races of the shortened meet.

Lake Mary's Ken Rohr led for most of the race with Winter Park's Ken Gamber close the whole way. Petersen was content to sit back and kick at the end Lyman's Ralph Philpott continued to dominate Central Florida in the high jump as he cleared 6-6 despite the conditions to set a new meet record. Ironically, one of the former record holders at 6-4, Lake Mary graduate Mike Rouse, helped run off the high jump.

In the only other completed running event other than the 120 hurdles and the mile, Lake Brantley's Cornelius Friendly blazed to first place in the 100 meter dash with a meet record time (new event) of 10.9.

Aretha Makes First Transfer

Amvets To Hold Fund-Raiser Saturday At Allen Chapel

It may not be viewed as one giant step for mankind but it sure was a move in the right direction for Aretha Riggins Wednesday afternoon.

Aretha, a 15-year-old Seminole High School freshman, was diagnosed as having Landry-Guillain-Barre Syndrome, a disease which consists of ascending paralysis and weakening of the muscles.

Since early in January, Riggins, a standout performer in volleyball, basketball, track and softball, has been waging a comeback against the rare disease which affects just 1 in a 1,000 people.

Wednesday afternoon at Florida Hospital South in Orlando, Riggins took her biggest step in her rehabilitation drive when she successfully worked a "transfer" from bed to wheel chair on her own.

Aretha's volleyball coach, Beth Corso, said the "transfer" is a major step toward her recovery. "Aretha can't walk yet but she can stand."

Corso said Thursday. "She can lean forward and backward. The 'transfer' is a major accomplishment."

Corso said Aretha has attacked the rehabilitation program with vigor. "Aretha spends all the time she can in therapy," Corso said. "She goes in from 8 a.m. to noon and then back again from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m."

Aretha, the daughter of Sanford's Joe and Cora Lee Riggins, has been able to come home on weekends. Corso said it's possible she may be able to become an outpatient in three weeks to a month. She would then live at home and return to Orlando for therapy.

BENEFIT — A fund-raiser will be held for Aretha Riggins by the Sanford Amvets Auxiliary 17. The benefit will be Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Allen Chapel A.M.E. Church at 1203 Olive Ave.

Eartha Melton is the Amvets president while Juanita Redding and Tiny Johnson are chairladies.

1A Saints Stun Seminoles, 7-5

By Sam Cook
Herald Sports Editor

When a Class 1A school beats a Class 4A school in baseball, several combinations have to take place. The 4A school usually enters the game overconfident. The 1A school makes great defensive plays. The 1A school jumps to an early lead. A strange ending takes place.

All four factors took place Thursday afternoon at Seminole High School. Trinity Prep's 1A Saints, who always field a quality nine under coach Andy Denicole, surprised the 4A Seminoles, 7-5, in a prep baseball game stopped after six innings because of darkness at Seminole High School.

"We're improving," Denicole, in his 10th year with the 4-3 Saints, said. "We're beating the teams we're supposed to beat and playing the other ones pretty tough."

Trinity lost to Lyman, 12-2, a week ago. Seminole whipped the Greyhounds, 5-0, 10 days ago.

The game started 15 minutes after 4 p.m. due to the late arrival of the umpires. The Saints, though, weren't tardy with their bats, exploding for five, first-inning runs and knocking out lower Jeff Blake (2-3).

Derek Mays, key member of Oviedo's Senior League All-Stars last summer, greeted Blake with a double to left center, stole third and raced home when Roy Jensen bounced the throw past Gary Derr into left field.

One out later, Chris Granville, a product of Seminole Pony Baseball, walked and Chris Pearce smacked a double to left center, sending Granville to third. Perry Teague, who pitched for Maitland's Senior League All-Star district champions last summer, followed with a base hit up the middle for a 3-0 lead.

An error by shortstop Brian Sheffield and two more walks brought Blake's exit in favor of Mike Edwards. Edwards finally retired Mays on a force out but not before two more runs had scored for a 5-0 lead.

It was the second outing in which Blake suffered first-inning troubles. The last time, against DeLand, he overcame them to shut down the Bulldogs the rest of the way. This time, he never did get into the groove.

Seminole, which fell to 6-9 and lost for the first time on its new field, bounced back with two runs against Teague in the first inning. Alonzo Gainey walked and stole second. One out later, Brian Sheffield drilled a double to chase home Gainey. Sheffield moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on a sacrifice fly to left field by Willie Grayson.

The Tribe climbed within 5-3 in the second when Edwards drew a two-out walk, moved to second on Dave Rape's single and scored on a double by Gainey.

Trinity picked up its final two runs in the third inning, both after the first two hitters went down on strikes. Clint Dunston, another Oviedo Little League product, reached second after Sheffield made a fine diving grab, but threw the ball past first base. Edwards tried to pick him off second and his throw was poor, allowing Dunston a ticket to third. Mays promptly singled him home. Brian Bangle followed with a single and successive walks to Granville and Pearce scored Mays for a 7-3 edge.

Teague gave way to winner Rusty Swain after third. Swain, who spent time in both the Altamonte Little League and Seminole Pony, survived a shaky start (two runs in the fourth) but stopped the 'Noles in the fifth and sixth.

Sheffield's two-run double chased home Jensen and Rape after two were out in the fourth to pull the Tribe within 7-5, but three excellent defensive plays bailed Swain out of trouble thereafter.

Two of them came in the fifth after Ron Blake walked and moved to second on a balk. Derr lofted a deep fly to center which Dunston snagged while backpedaling. Blake tagged and went to third. Jensen followed with a scorching one-hopper to third which Teague smothered, held Blake and threw out the runner. Edwards grounded out to end the inning.

In the sixth, left fielder Mark Peoples made a superb lunging grab near the foul line on a fly ball by Gainey.

The umpire called the game in the top of the seventh. After taking three balls, Grayson was hit by the fourth one and the umpire declared it was too dark to continue and called it a game.

Sheffield had two doubles and a single for three ribbies. Rape had a pair of singles. Mays had a single and double for Trinity. Dunston added a pair of base hits.

Coach Mike Payroll's Tribe returns to action against Lake Highland Monday at the Greater Greyhound Invitational Tournament at Lyman High School. Game time is 1 p.m. Lake Highland, also a 1A power, is ranked No. 9 in the state poll.

Trinity, which lost to Lake Highland, 7-5, takes on Tampa Prep Saturday.

When Doctors Differ, Go To Big Hospital

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — For 16 years, I took eye drops for glaucoma. Then my doctor gave up his practice, and the new doctor says I don't have glaucoma. I stopped the drops and my eyes got worse. Another doctor also said I didn't have glaucoma. A third doctor was uncertain and said I had nerve damage, but not to use the drops. My eyes just keep getting worse and I have lost much of my sight. How can I find out what I have and how it should be treated?

DEAR READER — When doctors are unsure about the presence of a disease, the patient is usually best served by an evaluation in a teaching or university hospital. In such an institution, specialists have the training and sophisticated equipment to analyze the more difficult and puzzling health problems. If your doctor cannot seem to help you and your vision is falling, I suggest you make an appointment to be seen in the eye clinic of a large medical center.

DEAR DR. GOTT — What tests should be given when one asks for a physical? When blood is taken from the arm, what is it tested for?

DEAR READER — The answer to your question depends on the age and health of the patient and the preferences of the examiner.

Children need periodic evaluations to monitor growth, general health and the need for immunizations. Blood tests are seldom necessary for youngsters.

On the other hand, adults have individual requirements that may include X-ray examinations, cardiograms or stress tests. Pap smears, fecal-blood evaluation and analysis of other body fluids.

In my opinion, a complete history and physical examination, including a urinalysis and blood count, usually suffices for a healthy young adult. Elderly patients need additional evaluation that may include blood chemical analyses, sigmoidoscopic examinations and other more involved testing, performed at regular intervals.

The history and physical are the cornerstones of the medical evaluation. I believe that additional testing is a subject more properly addressed by the patient and the doctor, depending on individual needs.

As a general rule, most examinations of adults (over age 40) usually involve blood counts, blood chemical analyses (including sugar and cholesterol), urinalysis, cardiograms, chest X-rays and smears for blood in the stool. These tests are not necessarily required every year, but should be performed at appropriate intervals.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

It's not everyday stuff to reach a slam after the opponents have opened the bidding. And it's even more unusual when the strong hand first takes action at the five-level. North was aggressive to bid six, but he felt that South would not have bid over the double of five clubs without a six-card suit, and he hoped South had a card or two that would be enough for slam. In fact, the slam was made, but declarer had to play with care.

When West opened the club ace, declarer felt that the remaining high cards had to be in East's hand. If that were true, the road to 12 tricks would be by way of an end play against East. The ace of clubs was trumped. Then came the ace of hearts, a heart ruff, a spade to the ace and another heart ruff. Now declarer cashed the club king, pitching a low diamond from dummy. He played a diamond to dummy's king and trumped dummy's last heart. Only now did declarer play the second spade. East won the king and had a choice — he could lead away from the queen of diamonds or play another club. A club would allow South to ruff while discarding dummy's 10 of diamonds, and a lead away from the queen of diamonds would be equally futile.

Choosing The Right Grass Can Make Lawn Best In Neighborhood

It's that time of the year again when our thoughts turn to getting our lawns in shape for the season. We all want the best-looking lawn in the neighborhood—right? A perfect lawn—a super lawn! It's possible to come close if you choose the right grass for your landscape. If you're not satisfied with what you presently have or are about to install a new lawn, you do have a choice.

Most builders' homes have been sodded with Bahia grass. This grass produces a very durable sod which stands heavy traffic, has few pest problems compared with other grasses, tolerates drought and grows in full sun or even light shade. But it's not entirely fault-free.

Bahia grass needs a fairly acid soil to perform well. The soil pH should be between 5.0 and 6.0 for best growth. If your soil pH is much higher, or you live in a moist area, Bahia grass may not be the best choice. At high pH's, the important minor nutrient elements become locked into compounds and are not available to the grass plants. Thus, nutrient deficiency occurs, causing such symptoms as yellowing of the grass blades.

Most grove areas now being developed have a higher pH than Bahia grass prefers.

There are several Bahia grass varieties available as seed, but only one, "Argentine," is recommended for home lawns. Its dark green blades are long, narrow and closely spaced. So it produces a dense sod with good color. Other Bahia grass varieties are pasture-type and shouldn't be used for home lawns in our area.

One of the good things about Bahia grass is that you can sod it, plug it or grow it from seed. Of course, seeding takes longer, but it's a lot easier and cheaper than sodding. If you seed, you'll need about 10 pounds of seed per thousand square feet of lawn area. Be sure you use "scarified" seed, which has been treated to speed up germination. The best time to seed Bahia is April through June. Be sure you get the seed at least one-half-inch deep in the soil, and don't allow the soil to dry out during the germination period. You're talking approximately 10 to 21 days.

Alfred Bossen
Urban Horticulturist

The fact that Bahia grows from seed may be a disadvantage. During the summer season the grass produces tall, ugly seed heads that make mowing the lawn difficult. You'll need a heavy-duty rotary mower to cut this tough grass.

Of all the popular lawn grasses, Bahia tolerates insect and disease infestations best. Bahia grass is, however, plagued by mole crickets. These burrowing insects damage roots and cause the grass to decline. Caterpillars sometimes cause problems, too, but both are relatively easy to control with timely insecticide applications.

The most favored grass for home lawns is St. Augustine. Because of its versatility and adaptability, it is the most widely planted lawn grass in Florida. It grows well in just about all types of soil, grows in moderate shade to full sun, produces a dense sod that withstands wear well, and when properly maintained, has an attractive deep green color.

The most popular varieties are Bitter Blue, Floratam, Raleigh and Seville. Bitter Blue has a dark green color and tolerates some shade. Floratam is a vigorous type with good color, prefers full sun, and is highly tolerant of Chinch bugs, the most serious pest of St. Augustine grasses. Raleigh is released by North Carolina State University and has good cold tolerance. It has a coarse texture and is susceptible to Chinch bugs. Seville is a semi-dwarf St. Augustine grass with a dark green color and low growth habit. It is susceptible to Chinch bug and web worm invasions and is cold-sensitive. But it performs fairly well in shade and produces an excellent turf in full sun.

Seed is not available for St. Augustine grass, so you will have to use sod, plugs, or sprigs to plant your lawn. Sodding is the quickest, but most expensive. A plugged or sprigged lawn should provide cover in one season, with proper care.

A newly planted St. Augustine lawn needs water every day for the first two or three weeks, and fertilizer every three to four months the first season. Once established, the lawn will need less care. Established lawns need twice-a-year fertilization.

If your particular soil type holds moisture or is moist, or has a high pH, you may want to consider St. Augustine grass as an alternative to Bahia. During times of continued drought, supplemental moisture may be needed, but be careful not to overdo the watering. Let your lawn tell you when to water. Then, water deeply—and less often.

Take your choice—Bahia or St. Augustine. These two are the best for our area.

There are others, but they have so many problems that they are not worth growing. Remember, use St. Augustine grasses for lush beauty and relatively high maintenance. For a lower-maintenance grass, Bahia may be just the choice for you. Happy Gardening!

Fur Flies Over Adoption Of Kitten

DEAR ABBY: On Valentine's Day, my husband and I took our two daughters (5 and 2) for a follow-up appointment at the pediatrician's, and left the office feeling gum. Our 5-year-old had been pleading for a kitten for several months, so we decided to take the advice in your St. Valentine's Day column and adopt a pet. We went to our Humane Society to get a kitten. We learned that the kitten we selected would cost $45, which included initial shots and spaying/neutering at six months of age. We'd just written our last check at the doctor's office, so my husband and I counted our monies and came up with $43.78 cash.

Abby, they let us walk out with two crying girls. We could have given that kitten a perfect home, but being short $1.22 stood in our way.

Is that crazy or am I crazy?

Dear Abby

FEELING BAD IN BIRMINGHAM

DEAR FEELING: You are not crazy, and I cannot imagine the people at the Humane Society being so insensitive and petty. You failed to indicate in which Birmingham you live. There's one in Alabama, Canada, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, Michigan and New Jersey. Please write again and let me know. I'll send the $1.22, and if you don't get your kitten, fur will fly.

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column signed "Honest" in reference to thigh-reduction surgery (suction lipectomy). I would like to know more about this type of surgery. I need to do something about my thighs. I have dieted and exercised. Both have helped some, but my thighs are disproportionately large. I am so self-conscious about them that I will not wear slacks or a bathing suit.

THUNDER THOUGHTS

DEAR THUNDER THOUGHTS: A plastic surgeon. But you would be wise to get some recommendations from the county medical association or the American Medical Association to be sure the plastic surgeon is board-certified.

DEAR ABBY: My wife insists that it's the man's place to initiate sex. She says if I'm going to wait for her to initiate sex, there won't be any.

I'm tired of always being the aggressor. I've told her I would find it exciting if she would approach me for a change, but she says it's not ladylike and she wouldn't feel comfortable making the first move.

She has never turned me down, and it's very satisfying to both of us when it happens, so what should I do?

TIRED OF ARGUING

DEAR TIRED: Stop arguing. Your wife is replaying the "tapes" of the old admonitions she heard repeatedly as a girl. ("Nice women aren't supposed to be aggressive — it's unladylike.")

With counseling she will learn that it's OK for a woman to be aggressive in the bedroom. Everywhere else she can be a "lady."

Spring Hosiery Sports Colors, Florals, Dots

By Florence De Santis
UPI Feature Writer

Legs remain in fashion focus this spring, as suits come with shorts, skirts vary in length from above-the-knee to below-calf, and the general fashion mood is feminine.

A silky sheen is the background for spaced motifs. At Hanes, Oleg Cassini picks up the popular rose motif from fashion knits and scatters them in pink or other colors on sparkling sheer. For suits and knits, Cassini uses fine ribbing to simulate a sparkling pinstripe in a new delicate texture.

Lacy patterns fit the current mode if they are more delicate than those of past seasons. Burlington uses a white, spaced spring pattern on white nylon fine-lace pantyhose, while Hot Sox chooses a trellis design for yellow lace pantyhose to match all the yellow fashions this spring.

Yellow is one of a whole new group of fashion colors in sheers. Others include pink, royal blue, peach and more intense colors.

The muted trend can be seen in the use of ankle or side motifs instead of all-over patterns. Burlington marches a white lace floral strip up the side of its white sheer pantyhose. Flash Legs uses pastel floral sprays at the ankle and thigh of white opaque pantyhose. Lilies on a vine, climb up the side of Calvin Klein's black hosiery.

In spring everyone likes dots and you can have them in great variety. For dress wear, Charles Jourdan does delicate spaced rows of Swiss dots on mauve sheer. Bolder is the all-over black polka-dotting on Crystal Creations' fuchsia pantyhose, while you'd better have really slender legs to take the coin dots on Flash Legs' red pantyhose.

Many socks carry dots, of course. There are black coin dots on Ralph Lauren's white cotton crew for Hot Sox and varized white dots on a black cotton crew from Electric Sok. Geometrics and such novelties as bandanna motifs also appear on both hosiery and socks for spring, generally for wear with sports or casual clothes.

"Over the Waves," never made the top 40, but it's a tune that may still ring in your memories of childhood or even adult carousel rides on brightly painted, stately steeds.

And, since the 1800s, those handcarved mounts have ridden away with the hearts of Americans who have taken turns along a round-and-round, sometimes up-and-down, course usually to the tune of "Over the Waves."

Now they have, for the most part, trotted to a halt.

The decline in the merry-go-round circuit came when "old family parks went out of business," their magic tarnished in the shadow of grand-scale Disney-type amusement centers, according to 58-year-old Dick McFadden, who restored the old-time carousel that adds a nostalgic touch among the more modern rides at Walt Disney World.

McFadden, who for 25 years designed and built amusement parks and sold carousels across the country, has turned to making trolleys in DeLand. But the memories of carousel ponies, whose reins slipped from his grasp, prompt him to say, "No, damn it, I didn't keep any."

And, it's not just nostalgia that spurs McFadden's longing for one of these handsome horses which he calls "a true American art form." Their value as collectibles has jumped, he said, from an initial manufacturing cost of about $50 to as high as $39,000. That's for a single steed, an armored entry created by the Philadelphia Toboggan Co., a top of the line maker. That horse, McFadden said, look if it was covered with metal.

The 58th Academy Awards

The Oscars: A Glitzy Popularity Contest

By Vernon Scott
UPI Hollywood Reporter
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Predicting who will win the 58th Annual Academy Awards is no easy business. The popularity factor for individual nominees makes the Oscar race as unpredictable as the tenure of a movie studio president.

As the results are announced March 24, it will become evident that the way the 4,200 academy members cast their ballots can be governed as much by sentiment and emotion as by objective professional assessment.

To most of the public, only six Academy Awards really count: best picture, best actor and actress, best director and best supporting players. In these categories popularity can make all the difference. But not always.

This year James Garner's nomination for best actor in "Murphy's Romance" is clearly a sentimental one. He is one of Hollywood's nice guys and was rewarded with a nomination, although he is given only an outside chance of winning.

Another emotional example this year is the nomination of John Huston for best director and his daughter, Anjelica, for best supporting actress in "Prizzi's Honor."

Hollywood likes nothing better than tradition. Back in 1948 Huston won the best director Oscar for "Treasure of the Sierra Madre" while his father, Walter, picked up the prize for best supporting actor.

Sentiment ran strong, too, in veteran Don Ameche's nomination for best supporting actor in "Cocoon" this time around.

Elizabeth Taylor, never considered a great actress, won the 1960 Oscar for best actress in "Butterfield 8" after a series of physical catastrophes, including a tracheotomy.

Julie Andrews, many believe, won her 1964 Oscar for "Mary Poppins" for two emotional reasons — failing to win the title role in "My Fair Lady" and being overlooked for her outstanding performance in "The Sound of Music."

The rare posthumous Oscar to Peter Finch in 1976 for best actor in "Network" was another example of pure emotionalism on the part of the voters.

Conversely, some individuals have been denied nominations and Oscars because of their lack of personal popularity in the town. One of these might be Steven Spielberg, whose heart-rending film, "The Color Purple," won 11 nominations this year, including best picture. But director Spielberg was not nominated.

The apparent snub has sparked an outcry in Hollywood, although one member of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences noted that in the past, 146 directors whose films were nominated for best picture were similarly ignored.

Whatever the reason that Spielberg was overlooked in the nominations, he cannot point to studio politics. But there was a time when politics were an integral part of the Academy Award process.

In the old days, studios held stars in thrall under contract and studio loyalty was expected of directors, producers and others. Indeed, voting for an opposing studio's nominee was tantamount to heresy.

One veteran producer said MGM paid his $25 membership fee in the academy when he was a studio publicist. "It was common practice," said the producer, who is still an academy member and does not want his name reported.

"All the studios did it. The executives didn't tell you for whom to vote, but it was implicit that we should support the studio's movies."

"Employees were expected to vote in a bloc for the studio's performers as well as the film they were pushing for the Oscar. It was a matter of pride to vote a straight MGM ticket."

Today a lingering studio loyalty exists. But many films are made by independent producers and few actors are under exclusive contract to major studios.

As for personal politics, it plays almost no part in academy balloting.

Vanessa Redgrave's stand in support of the Palestine Liberation Organization didn't prevent her from winning the 1977 best supporting actress award for "Julia" despite the fact there is a large Jewish contingent in the academy membership.

Jane Fonda's controversial stand on Vietnam had no effect on her winning the 1978 best actress award in "Coming Home."

On the other hand, John Wayne's conservatism did nothing to hinder his winning an Oscar for "True Grit" in 1969.

Among members of the Academy, there is a growing pride in the integrity of the awards, which do not always go to personalities with famous names.

Art Carney was a TV comedian unknown to most of the movie colony when he won the best actor award for "Harry and Tonto" in 1974.

Nor were F. Murray Abraham (1985 in "Amadeus") and Ben Kingsley (1982 in "Ghandi") household names or members of the film colony before their victories.

Sentiment certainly was not a factor in voting Academy Awards to Marlon Brando and George C. Scott in past years. Both men scorned the Oscars, announcing before the awards ceremonies that they would not attend.

How does the academy winnow out five nominees in each of the 27 Oscar categories from the qualified 250 to 300 movies released every year?

The Academy begins in January by sending members booklets with the titles and casts of every eligible picture released during the past year in Los Angeles (for at least a week), no matter how remote its chances of winning anything.

Nomination ballots are then mailed to members of each of the academy's 14 basic branches — including acting, directing, music, short subjects, sound, makeup.

All members vote in nominating the best picture. Only members of a specific branch vote for individuals in their own branch. Actors nominate actors. Directors nominate directors.

It is estimated some 80 percent of the membership vote for nominations and in the final ballot. But there are accusations that too many members vote without ever having seen nominated pictures and simply cast ballots for their friends.

The quirks in the balloting process can result in legendary performers failing to win awards, or even nominations.

To correct these embarrassing oversights, the academy commonly hands out special Oscars or special awards for superstars lost in the shuffle.

Over the years such screen immortals as Charlie Chaplin, Henry Fonda and Cary Grant have been given special awards. This year Paul Newman is the recipient of a special Oscar. Newman has been nominated for best actor six times but has never made the grade.

In the main Oscar categories, the nominees announced Feb. 5 are:

Less formidable mounts, such as the Illions-made jumper that rode high at Coney Island from 1928 until retired and restored more than 15 years ago, are valued at about $2,500. Owner Eddie Gibson recently displayed it in Winter Park.

Like Gibson's Illions, most all carousel horses have been restored, because over the years, McFadden said, they all got a new layer of paint every year any way. To have a quality piece you need to get back to basics, down to the bare wood and metal and then try to duplicate the original look of the horse.

Gibson likened the restoration of a carousel horse to restoring an antique car. "The ones I have are put in the same condition the Smithsonian would want them to be in. You don't want it in its original condition because it wouldn't be very pretty," he said.

But McFadden learned just how cautious restorers must be many years ago when he handed over a merry-go-round set of 50 steeds to a stripper. The stripper did excellent sample work on the first horse and when the rest of the mounts were handed over to him, McFadden said his method changed.

The horses were dipped into a caustic solution. "We ended up with 198 horseshoes, 98 ears... We had to put them back together piece by piece. They weren't made with waterproof glue and the horses were made of pieces of wood, not carved from a single block of wood," McFadden said.

So, things aren't always easy for lovers of carousels. In fact, McFadden said, the first American to make a carousel was ousted from his German-Baptist church and community in New York state, because his creation was said to be that of the devil. Neighbors said Fritz Landow's handcarved, rideable horse, which was modeled from a pony, was too frivolous.

The frivolity was a carryover from a European game which, when popular in the 1600s, was a contest among knights mounted on horseback who tried to spear rings with their swords as they rode a course.

Toy teeter-totter versions of the game with carved ponies and toy swords were created for the children of the wealthy. That was the beginning of the wooden mounts, which over the years have been powered by manpower, steam and electricity, McFadden said.

The names of oldtime makers of these horses live on with their creations. To insure receiving credit, one carver, Illions, always included his name within the carved design in one horse on each of his merry-go-rounds.

The Philadelphia Toboggan Co., Muller, Carmel Borrelli, Spillman, Trojan and Parker are other famous makers. At one time, McFadden said, Parker had a very famous sander in his employ, the young Dwight D. Eisenhower, who went on to become 34th President of the U.S.

Parker, McFadden said, made "Rary looking horses, with startled manes in the air. I think they were kind of ugly."

The first "jumper," a horse that goes up and down as well as around, was created by Mangles of Coney Island, McFadden said. And that began the tradition of the three-abreast carousel with two rows of jumpers on the inside, and a stationary row outside ridden by those who wanted to grab for the brass ring.

The brass ring was also a carryover from the knight's games, but McFadden said because of liability in case of injury the brass rings have been pulled from the games.

Modern carousel horses, when they are made, aren't up to the standards of the old, McFadden said. They are cast either in fiberglass or metal and don't call for the artistry of the old painted ponies.

When searching for an old carousel horse, McFadden said, you'd be more likely to find one in Pennsylvania because many horses were made there and there were many family parks in that state.

But, Gibson said, no matter where you look it will be a task to track one of these horses because most that have survived are already in the hands of other collectors.

So you may just have to saddle up and spur your memories.

When Did Shirley Serve Burt Cottage Cheese?

Dear Dick — Years ago, I saw a movie which starred Burt Lancaster, and Shirley Booth played his wife. He comes home from a very depressing job and she flutters around him, as happy and loving as she can be, and for his supper fixed him some "nice cottage cheese." That scene has stuck in my mind all these years. Can you identify the picture? — M.B., Mesa, Ariz.

That was the 1952 film "Come Back, Little Sheba," and Shirley Booth won an Oscar for her trouble.

Dear Dick — A couple of years ago, my family took a cruise on the ship S.S. Norway. It is my understanding that this ship is the old S.S. France. Back in the 1950s, Jane Russell starred in a movie about this ship. Can you tell me the name of the movie and who starred in it? — B.S., New Albany, Ind.

That film, released in 1954, was called "The French Line." Besides Jane, the leading actors were Gilbert Roland and Mary McCarty.

Dear Dick — Who played the rodeo cowboy, Stony Burke? I know I am probably wrong, but I need it in writing. — C.M., Trout Run, Pa.

OK. Here it is in writing: you're wrong. Unless, of course, you said it was Jack Lord. In that case, you're right.

Ask Dick Kleiner

Dear Dick — I have a question for you about a movie which, I believe, was made sometime in the late 1950s or early 1960s. It starred James Shigeta and a blonde. They met and married in Washington, D.C. He took her home to Japan to meet his parents. Then there was some mystery about another visit to his parents connected to his death. Could you possibly find out the title so I could request a local station to run it for me. — Mrs. S.C.S., Jefferson City, Tenn.

That was a 1961 film called "Bridge To the Sun." The blonde was Carroll Baker.

Dear Dick — In the movie "Grease II," there were two young actors, Michele Pfeiffer and Maxwell Caulfield. What has happened to them? Are they still in movies? — N.J., Two Rivers, Wis.

Yes, they are both very active. Miss Pfeiffer has been in quite a few recent movies. Caulfield is visible every week as Miles Colby. In "The Colbys," the spin-off of "Dynasty."

Dear Dick — Recently, I read an article on Kirk Cameron. It said he was in "Beyond Witch Mountain." My question is what part did he play? — L.D., Mears, Mich.

It wasn't much of a part. The cast list for that film has him as "Boy," the last name on the entire list.

Dear Dick — My husband and I have money bet on your answer to this question. We went to a Chinese restaurant the other day and they had a picture on the wall of Peter Billingsley. I say he played on "Lassie" as Timmy, and my husband says he didn't. My money is riding on your answer. — S.H., Missouri City, Texas.

Pay up. At the time Timmy was on Lassie, which period ended in 1964, Peter Billingsley wasn't even born. Jon Provost played Timmy. Billingsley's chief claim to fame is that he was the young reporter on the "Real People" show.

Dear Dick — I hope you can help me locate a movie title. I believe it starred Peter Sellers. It was a comedy satire on the hospital medical profession. Patients, on entering the hospital, were carefully screened to determine their net worth. It was a very funny film. I would like to see it again. — B.S., Rockport, Wash.

Yes, that was Sellers, and the name of the film was "Where Does It Hurt?" It was released in 1971.
