Representatives of the Sanford Christian Sharing Center and Manna Haven, local outreach ministries, will meet Wednesday. at 7:30 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church of Sanford to discuss the feasibility of consolidating their efforts by operating out of the same facili-

This was decided at the Sharing Center's annual meeting Thursday at which the Rev. Daniel Coy, pastor of Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, was elected president of the board of directors. The Rev. Richard Dantelak, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, outgoing president, said he hopes Coy's election will provide the Sharing Center with a "new sense of direction" and the number one priority is to find a new location in which to re-open.

Danielak said the Sharing Center Board voted to climinate the unpaid position of managing director held by Jean Holch for 40 years during the transition

He said the board's action has "opened the door for a whole new bail game.

Dantelak said the Sharing Center Board feels the center has played a very important role in the life of the community and that its closing left a void. They want it filled as soon as possible. he added.

The Manna Haven soup kitchen, which serves lunches to the hungry from a building at 519 S. Palmetto Ave., Sanford, has requested another lease extension. from the Seminole County School Board. The last extension. is scheduled to run out the end of February. The board approved. the last request by Chaplain Itil. West, president of Trinity Pines Inc., the ministry that runs Manna Haven, for a 60-day extension in December.

Seminole County had a good economic year in 1987. if not a great one, and residents can expect 1988 to be the same, according to Robert E. Patchett group president of Sun-Bank S.A. in Seminole County

'Bomb Of The Day' By Bits And Bytes

Students Causing Concern Over Homemade Explosive Devices

By Susan Loden Herald Staff Writer

Recipes for bombs, other incendiary devices and weapons that can cause extensive damage, pain and even death are readily available to Seminole County voundsters.

The "bomb of the day" can be concocted: from formulas that appear on computer "bulletin boards," as well as from plans from more traditional sources such as survivalist/terrorist print publications, or old inflitary manuals.

Evidence shows that Seminole County high school students not only have access to this material, but some also experiment with explosives. The computer building boards that offer information on bombs, just as similar bulletin boards offer games and other harmless information, encourage those who use that source to submit their own bomb and weapons formulas if they want to have continued access to the bomb bulletin boards, which are apparently generated by youngsters.

Seminole County sheriff's explosives expert Lt. Marty LaBrusciano has researched the legality of intrestricted access. to this type of material and has found nolaws that prohibit its distribution to anyone and everyone, including juveniles Laffrusciano said just as there are laws that protect children and society from pornography there should also be laws. restricting access to such material on explosives and other weapons.

It seems to me like one is deserving at least the attention, control and regulation as the other. Anyone can buy a book on bow to make a bomb and do great destruction and kill many people. Now we're seeing computer printouts, which keep people from even having to go in and buy the information. Some of these formulas are really unsafe for the user." he said

Such information is available throughout the nation and some bomb bulletin board information is known to be generated from: Chicago and Michigan, LaBrusciano said-Homb related incidents and materials sumlar to those in Seminole County have also

It's Official: United Way Will Merge Seminole County United Way is officially merged into the Heart of Florida United Way as a result of a unanimous vote of the 37 people who showed up at a donor meeting Friday afternoon at the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce

Orange County's United Way donor meeting also approved the merger Thursday Osceola County, the third county organization to make up the merged organization, is to hold its donor meeting Feb. 15.

Although any person who has donated to the United Way campaign could vote on the merger at Eriday's incetting, only one of the 37 people attending the meeting identified herself as a donor. All the others were either board members. or members of United Way participating agencies

The meeting only took a few numutes. Board Chairman Larry Strickler made the motion that the merger be approved and the revised bylaws be accepted, and the motion was seconded, and unanimously approved.

The merger has been in the works for about four years. It was originally to be effective Jan. 1. but the three agencies discovered that legally donor meetings in each county had to approve the merger. The merger will now be effective within 30 days of all three county organizations approving it

According to the bylaws of the news organization, a 60 member board of directors will be elected, consisting of 36 members from Orange County 15 from Semmole County and mise from made up of 20 director members, 12 from Orange, five from Semulole and three from

Preparations For 198° MLK Celebration Begin

What was intended to be the final meeting of the Martin Luther King. Jr. Celebration committee for this year's celebration actually became the first meeting toward planning for the 1989 celebration.

Members met Tuesday night in the city manager's conference room at Sanford city hall, 7 p.m. and plan to meet there again April 5. At the Tuesday meeting a tentative celebration schedule for next year was established.

"You were a great team," said Chairman Dr. Luriene Sweeting. "Rather than disbanding we are going to continue." She said this will be the last year she expects to chair the celebration committee, but she explained that in this third year of the celebration she wants to refine both the planning and the celebration

She noted that better management practices should be used. In both celebrations the past two years, more than one printing company was utilized to print the various programs, booklets and tickets needed for the celebration. Also various caterers were used. For the 1989 celebration, Sweeting recommended that only one printing firm be utilized, and only one caterer. Shirley Schilke, com-

Financially, the committee

kept in the black again this year. Receipts totaled $5,876.75 and disbursements amounted to $4,566.85, according to Schilke. That leaves $1,309.90 in the account at this time, with $1.250 of that amount earmarked for student scholarships. Since an organ rented from Kellar Music Company did not work, the committee expects a refund of $450 from that company. By the time other, smaller bills are paid off, the MLK committee will still have approximately $100 in its account.

Now that the MLK celebration has been held in Sanford for two years. Sweeting wants to see the event become "institutionalized" in the city. "What we are trying to do is to get the people in the city accustomed to and looking forward to what we're doing," she told the group.

The celebration in 1989 may extend over a three day period, Saturday Jan. 14 through Monday, Jan. 16, the committee decided. Extra events would not be planned, rather events as were held in 1988 would be spread over a three-day period, rather than a two-day period.

The Celebration choir, directed by Mary Whitehurst, is already getting invitations to sing throughout the area, Whitehurst told the committee. A concert to raise funds for the MLK celebration in 1989, is being planned for October at Seminole Community College.

It was the concensus of the group that with two celebrations behind them, the celebration, with a lot of hard work, can be better planned and publized over the next 12 months, than in either of the two previous years.

Hospital Begins Cancer Study MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — A "I think this is a very important blood by the discovery" Wallack said.

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — A south Florida hospital will begin using large doses of an anticancer drug in one of two national tests of a drug that has controlled some cancer cells in low-dose tests, officials said Friday.

Mount Sinai Medicai Center of Greater Miami plans to begin high-dose tests of Interleukin-2, the cancer-fighting drug, on the first patient next week, and will continue tests on up to 20 patients in the next six months.

Dr. Mark Wallack, chairman of the general surgery department, said tests with Interleukin-2 have shown promising results in halting the spread of cancer, and sometimes eliminating the deadly cells. "I think this is a very important discovery," Wallack said. "It shows that the body itself has the capacity to destroy cancer."

The Food and Drug Administration recently approved clinical tests of the drug, made by Hoffman-La Roche+ Interleukin is a protein that increases the white-blood cell count to provide the ammunition to kill cancer cells.

Mount Sinal and the University of Washington at Seattle are the two sites for the high-dose clinical tests.

Researchers will be watching for potentially harmful side effects from the administration of such high doses of the drug.

Bush Hails 'Clean' Michigan Win, Robertson Backers Plan Protest

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (UPI) - Vice President George Bush's forces dealt what they called a "clean defeat" to former evangelist Pat Robertson in a bitter, bloody bid for control of Michigan's 77 GOP national convention delegates.

But a Robertson campaign spokesman said Robertson delegates would boycott today's scheduled GOP state convention and stage an alternate "rump" convention to choose their own slate of delegates to send to the New Orleans national convention in August.

The national party's credentials committee would then have to decide which of the competing Michigan delegations to scat.

Returns from 17 of the state's 18 congressional district caucuses, electing three national convention delegates each, showed Bush with at least 33 of the 54 delegates up for grabs. Robertson won 11 delegates and Rep. Jack Kemp. of New York had won at least eight.

Meese Bribe Scheme Link Probed

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Attorney General Edwin Meese says he acted "correctly" at all times during talks on a $1 billion fraqi pipeline project but a prosecutor is examining evidence Meese may have known of an illegal plan to bribe a top Israell in the deal.

Revelation of the new evidence - a memorandum to Meese first disclosed by The Los Angeles Times - also brought word from the independent prosecutor Friday that his investigation's end is in sight and prompted the White House to again offer the embattled attorney general

At the White House, a spokesman said, "The president has full confidence in Ed Meese.

Prosecutor James McKay refused to discuss how much Meese knew of the alleged payoff proposal cited in a 1985 memo to Meese from his longtime friend, San Francisco attorney E. Robert Wallach.

Sources close to the investigation said prosecutors are examining whether Meese broke the law by doing nothing about the proposed transaction when learning of it. If so, it could result in his being charged in connection with the scheme, the sources said.

15,000 Lottery Tickets Issued To Store

Richard Whittaker Herald Staff Writer

The Florida Department of the Lottery made a mistake in filling an order for new tickets made by a Sanford business this week when it issued 15,000 of them instead of the 5,000 ordered.

Jay Murphy, manager of The Barn, a bar at 1200 S. French Ave. said he thinks the lottery department just accidently increased his order, but that he'll just keep the tickets anyway.

"It was an emergency order because I was getting low on tickets and wanted to make sure had some for the weekend." Murphy said. He explained the majority of the tickets he orders are sold on weekends.

Because the tickets are issued to Florida businesses on consignment. Murphy sad he can just retain the surplus tickets. instead of returning them to the state. "I expect to be able to gothrough these tickets in about three weeks anyway," he said.

In other local lottery-related happenings, the manager of a Sanford Seafood shop said he has stopped a promotion using lottery fickets even though two different state agencies disagree on whether it's legal or not.

Abducted West German Expected To Be Released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - A West German man abducted in west Beirut earlier this week will be freed within two days because of pressure from Syria and contacts by Syria's chief intelligence officer in Lebanon, a source close to the Syrians said Saturday.

"(Ralph) Schray will be set free very soon ... within the next two days. The Syrians are determined to settle the issue decisively," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Iran sent a delegation to Beirut to review the situation and the source said the Iranian Embassy in Damascus intervened with the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God. to put pressure on the kidnappers.

The Syrians had warned that force would be used against Schray's abductors if he was not released by midnight Friday-the end of a 48-hour ultimatum set by Damascus.

Schray, 31, a half-German, half-Lebanese industrial cogneer with a Lebanese contracting firm, was abducted Wednesday only a few yards from a Syrian roadblock. The daylight kidnapping was an embarrassment to the Syrian security forces, and sources said Iran also was "very upset" by the abduction.

Taiwan Buries President Chiana

TAIPEL Taiwan (UPI) - Taiwan turned the last page of a storied family dynasty Saturday, burying President Chiang Ching-kuo a mile from his father, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, as sirens wailed and bells in churches and temples tolled across the island nation.

More than 1 million people lined the 42-mile funeral procession route, many of them crumbling to their knees and weeping openly as Chiang's bronze casket, covered with white and yellow chrysanthemums, slowly passed. Chiang died Jan. 14 of heart failure at the age of 77. He helped transform Taiwan from an agricultural backwater into an economic powerhouse, but he failed to realize the dream of his father and the Nationalist Chinese-a return

Chiang was entombed in a black granite mausoleum in a red-tiled farmhouse amid tea plantations at the Taoyuan County, about 19 miles southwest of Taipei and a mile from where his father, Chiang Kai-shek, was buried in a similar farmhouse. They used to visit the area together.

At a ceremony, the Rev. Chou Lien-hwa said, "Under the care of God, Mr. President Chiang, no longer will your strength fail you when you want to go out and visit your people again, no longer will your voice desert you when you want to talk to your people again."

He was referring to Chiang's last days, when he was barely able to walk and his voice was hoarse, yet he still visited people in villages, schools and military camps.

Tourist Council Will Be Appointed

By Brad Church

Herald Staff Writer Seminole County Commissioners have taken the first steps in appointing a Tourist Development Council. The council will draw up a proposal for a tourist tax to be presented to the

The tax usually in the form of a surtax on hotel and motel charges, must be approved by a public referendum. Proceeds from the tax can only be used for limited purposes to promote tourism, such as helping to build or support convention centers or tourist attractions, or for tourism promotion

The committee must be composed of two elected officials, one from the largest city in the county; three representatives of motel-hotel interests, and three persons interested in the development of tourism but not owners or managers of hotels, motels or tourist parks.

Tuesday, the board appointed Commissioner Sandra Glenn chairman of the council. Appointed from Altamonte Springs.

city commissioner Pat Fernandez. Other members not connected with the hotel-motel business appointed were Randall Morris, a Lake Mary City Commissioner, Jim Young, chairman of the Sanford Chamber of Commerce Tourism Committee. and Edward Anderson. chairman of the Greater Seminole County Chamber of Commerce Tourist Development

Appointed as representatives of the hotel-motel business were Cindy Bower, general manager of the Ramada Inn Altamonte Springs; and M.M. "Red" Me-Cullough, manager of the Quality Inn North on Highway 434. and a member of a previous tourist development council.

Commissioner Barbara Christensen delayed making her appointments to the council, and Commissioner Bill Kirchhoff was not at the meeting so the rest of the council members will be appointed at the board's next meeting.

At this point, LaBrusciano said the only control over the situation belongs to parents who need to be more aware of how their youngsters are using their computers that have telephone linkups to bulletin boards. In addition to monitoring other materials children might have that might lead them to experiment with explosives.

The devices are not only dangerous in and of themselves. but many of the formulas, which usually feature chemical compounds and materials common in the home, are inaccurate, or give misleading information on their destructive potential and or the time frame for detonation, according to LaBrusciano.

Even an expert can't predict the outcome of the use of such formulas. To prove that point, LaBrusciano experimented with two computer generated bomb recipes. Although the bulletin said the first bomb LaBrusciano made would "make a cool smoke bomb," within five minutes of the chemicals being mixed it exploded, sending a sheet of flames about three feet into the air. The "smoke bomb" delivered more than promised. It did not smoke before it exploded.

"In many of these cases they indicate that you have plenty of time to get away once you mix the chemicals. That just isn't always true,' he said. Some of the mixes also give off toxic fumes of which the bulletins give no warning.

In the second test, using a different chemical max, which a bomb bulletin claimed would cause the demolition of a car within five minutes of having

All of these finds have been made by school officials within the past four months and the latest discovery was of a U.S. Army manual on explosives found about two weeks ago in the hands of an Oviedo High School student.

The bulletins supply more than formulas for bombs and weapons. They also encourage destruction of property and in-flicting pain with such descriptions as one related to the use of matches as weapons: "If you want to make someone fill (sic) some pain ... Hit them in the head with it! It's fun ... (You can also have fights with these!) ... use the big or small ones. (Preferable big for more PAIN)."

Or: "If you want to give a person a heart attack try this ... Three out of four times you will get a dust explosion and if the person doesn't know what is going to happen they usually p--- their pants at the blast."

Martinez Unveils Transplant Plan For Children's New Organs

MIAMI (UPI) — A state-administered transplant program will provide $3.5 million from taxpayer money and deductible contributions for families of children under age 21 needing new organs.

Gov. Bob Martinez unveiled the new program Friday as he announced he and his wife donated $500 to help the family of Che-Rea Barry of Stuart, an 18-month old girl who received a new liver in Chicago last week.

Transplant Lifeline for Children, to be run by the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services, was established last year, but recent disclosures about possible misuse of such donations prompted the announcement.

This program is the ultimate answer to making certain that those youngsters under 21 years of age will not be deprived of an opportunity to live," Martinez said.

Court Outlaws Planning Council

CLEARWATER (UPI) - The Pinellas County Planning Council, which has ruled development in the county for the past 15 years, has been ruled out of business by a court.

"The Pinellas County Planning Council (PPC) as established by the Special Acts of the State of Florida is unconstitutional and in violation of the Florida Constitution," Pinellas Circuit Judge Thomas E. Penick said in ruling the 14-member council invalid.

The ruling Thursday upheld a claim by Safety Harbor officials that under the council, land-use laws were being made by people not directly elected and that many cates never were represented.

Scott Steady, planning council attorney, said he probably will wait until the board's scheduled meeting Feb. 17 to decide whether to appeal the decision.

Vogt Optimistic On Session

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Senate President John Vogt says he is cautiously optimistic about next week's special session on medical malpractice, but that legislators must adopt limits on damage awards if anything substantial is to be accomplished.

"I think there is some possibility of passing the arbitration panels and the caps," Vogt said, "If you can't do that, there is no point in doing anything."

Vogt's prediction differs from that of many rank-and-file legislators, who believe they will be able to agree only on a few non-controversial items in the special session set to runfrom Feb. 2-5.

Administration Gears For Contra Aid Battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) - There will be little rest for the administration this weekend as President Reagan and his advisers gear for a final drive to avoid major political defeat in a showdown over ald to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The battle lines are drawn for a high-stakes, rough-and-tumble fight at midweek over a $36.25" million aid request that Reagan and even some of his critics have characterized as a pivotal test of support for the Contras.

In advance of the vote Wednesday in the House, which will decide whether the aid request is considered by the more conservative Senate, the administration is maintaining a steady drumbeat of arguments on behalf of the aid request.

Reagan dropped a pitch for Contra aid into a recitation of domestic policy Friday, Over the weekend. Reagan planned to devote his regular i dio address to the Contra cause and maybe place calls to fence-sitting lawmakers.

Other administration figures were to pick up the pace Sunday with a round of television interviews. Reagan will rally conservative support for the Contrasin a speech Monday to religious broadcasters, meet with members of Congress that day and Tuesday will address the nation on the eve of the House vote.

'A vote for more Contra aid is a vote for more war, mere repression, less democracy, and more Soviet aid," said Rep. Lee-Hamilton, D-Ind. It "also kills" the accords that won the 1987 Nobel Peace Prize for President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica, he said

The choice has never been so clear. There is a straight upor-down vote in the House.

It is the "shootout at the Contra Corral." said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

If the request for $36.3 million survives the flerce opposition of delivery of the pure $3.6 million the majority Democrats, it goes to the Senate the next day for a quick, final decision.

If the proposal loses in either chamber, Reagan's drive for a quick shot of aid to the Contras collapses. Any other requests can be stalled and sidetracked indefinitely in an election year. The Contras may disintegrate as a legitimate guerrilla army.

The purposes of Reagan's policy has been in bitter dispute for request for $100 million in years. And there is even disagreement about just how much he is asking for.

The president says the Contras are fighting communist subversion by Nicaragua, Cuba, and the Soviet Union. Critics say they are an ineffective force. guilty of human rights abuses. and that diplomacy instead of force should be the tool to contain Managua.

The White House says 90 for "humanitarian" aid, although this can pay for jeeps. trucks, and helicopter spare parts. It acknowledges that the package asks for another $20 million to cover the insurance cost for replacing lost CIA supply craft, such as the one shot down this month over Nicaragua.

Rep. Tony Coelho, D-Calif., the No. 3 Democrat in the House. said the total is more like $76 million because of these "passive" military costs. He estimates there is $20 million alone for aircraft radar systems, and millions more for electronic countermeasures for the planes and other transportation costs.

"It sounds like a wish list," he said, predicting victory, "They must realize they don't have the votes and are throwing this outto keep the right-wing happy. Then they will try to say the Democrats lost Central America."

He is apparently reaching out to the estimated 25 to 30 Democrats and perhaps 10 Republicans "swing votes" that are critical to the approval or passage of the request.

The House approved Reagan's Contra aid in 1986 by 12 votes, Before Reagan announced his latest package, Coelho said the margin of victory or defeat would be in this range. Now he says the victory margin will be higher.

Civil Rights Legislation Faces Veto

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Reagan will veto legislation restoring broad civil rights protection for minorities, women, the aged and handicapped curtailed by the Supreme Court

a spokesman said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the measure passed by the Senate Thursday and sent to the House. despite Reagan's veto threats. "infringes on states and local

The civil rights bill is designed to reverse the 1984 Supreme Court decision known as Grove City College vs. Bell.

In that case, the high court ruled that only the Pennsylvania school's financial assistance department, which received federal funds, and not the entire Institution, was subject to federal sex discrimination regulations. The narrow interpretation was applied to three similar statutes affecting discrimination based on race, age or handicap.

Fitzwater complained that the reporting on the administration's views had been a little unfair to us in suggesting we're not supportive of overturning the Grove City decision."

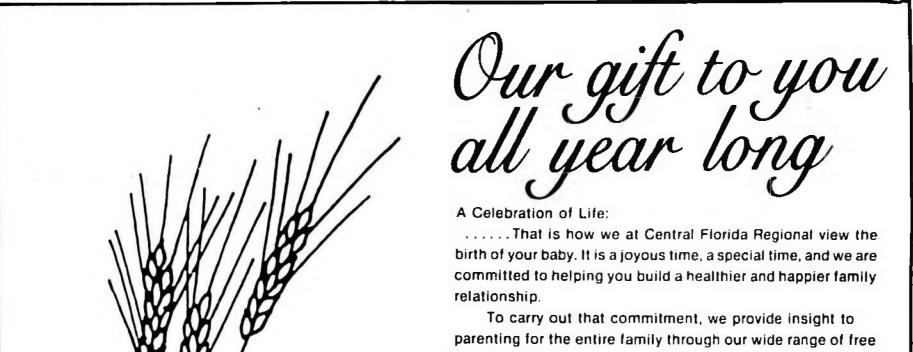

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said the 75-14 approval of the Civil Rights Restoration Act Thursday "demonstrates that the cause of civil rights is alive and well among the American people and the U.S. Senate."

Kennedy acknowledged that the bill, which Congress has tried to pass in different forms Ince 1984 and which now goes to the House for consideration, was aided by being the first dece of legislation voted on in the new congressional session and receiving more attention during this presidential camaign year.

Supporters and civil rights roups were jubilant at the utcome, but their reaction was empered by the adoption of an mendment, sponsored by Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo., that rould place strict curbs on bortion rights at educational natitutions.

It was the only significant hange in the bill after three tys of debate, despite an onaught of amendments offered conservative Republicans atinpling to bring the legislation line with the administration's inservative agenda. "While the Danforth amendent was a disappointing setck, there was an overwhelmg hipartisan rejection of the tagan administration's attempt weaken the four major civil ghts laws," said Ralph Neas, rector of the Leadership Conence on Civil Rights.

LAKE MARY - Biship Moore and Lake Mary lead their respected conferences after the opening two rounds of the Central Florida Tournament of Champions held Friday night before 1 251 fans at Lake Mary High School

Bishop Moore has a comfortable 41 point lead in the Orange Belt Conference heading into the conference finals today starting at 10 am. Lake Mary has a narrow lead as four teams are still in the minning for the Seminole Athletic Conference to

The Rams are leading the SAC with a total of 100 points, Seminole is right befind with 89 followed by Lyman with 84.5. and Lake Brantley with 84 Oviedo is next with 52 with Lake Howell right behind with a total.

The Hornets are tops in the OBC with 142 points, Kissimmere Osceola is next with 101, Leesburg is in third with 88.5. followed by St. Cloud with 66, Gateway with 62 and Jones' 17.

The opening rounds had their share of suprises in both conferences, as well as the top seeds. proving their worth.

Ovtedo's Aaron Jordan, who has been on a roll as of fate, and Lake Howell's John White will be in the SAC finals at the 103 division. Jordan took a pin over Seminle's Karl Gipe in the first round and a decision over Jon-Guzzetta of DeLand, White took a first-round bye before taking a hard-taught 6.5 decision over Lake Mary's Aaron Wheeler Joseph Torres of Bishop Moore will battle Mark Haven of Osceals in the same weight division.

Enrique Carbia helped Lake Mary continue its lower weight domination with a pin in just 45 seconds over Keith Giampetro of DeLand at the 125 pound weight class. Carbia will battle Don-Sellers of Semmole in the finals Sellers was awarded a first round bye, then took a convincing 11-0 decision over Oviedo's James Hurt.

Charles Vela of Oyiedo and Seminole's Larry Nathan then hattled in the 130 pound. division. Vela picked up two points with a reverse late in the final period to take a 75 de ciston. Nathan was last year's champion but Vela came up with a tough performance to upset him Vela will take on Lake Brantley's Greg Wyka who came up with a nice performance to down Lake Mary's Dan-Sacco, 12 (10) to enter the finals

Raul Salazar kept up his excellent wrestling for Hishop Moore in the 130 division. After receiving a first round bye, Salazar pinned Jim Baker sticking him just 44 seconds into the match. Salazar will take on-Jim Vangen of Gateway who took a 4-0 decision over Elijah Burton of Jones after an opening round bye.

Lake Howell's Dave Petrone came up with a nice performatter, taking a 13-5 decision over Lake Mary's Jose Carbia to enter the finals at the 135 pound. weight class Petrone will now face Chuck Morrow of Lyman who took a 7-4 decision over Semmole's Trent Schake

Rob Richards, a steady performer for Lake Mary, took an opening round victory over Bart Walters of Oviedo with a technical fall, 18-2, at the 2:40 mark: Richards then pinned Chris Jacobson of Lake Howell at the 3:53 mark, Richards will now take on Kevin Nathan of Seminole who pinned DeLand's Dominic Scorpio at the 2:54 mark. Nathan then came upwith a brilliant performance, taking an 8-4 decision over top seeded Gregg Hunziker of Lyman to reach the finals.

Bishop Moore's dake Nelson also continued a fine wrestling streak as, after a first round bye, Nelson came up with a tough 7-2 decision over Jones' Delton Roberts in the 160 pound weight class. Nelson will face Karl Scott of Leesburg who came up with a first round pin over Frank Hines of Gateway just 26 seconds into the match. Scott then upset Albert Ross of St. Cloud, 10-2, to reach the finals.

Steve Cumbic of Bishop Moore dominated the 189 division. needing only 1-12 to pin Pere Duran of Gateway in the second round after a bye. Cumbic will

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The Denver Broncos running game, hardly the most fearsome in the NFL, will find itself in a vital role come Sunday's Super Bowl.

"Our running backs will be the first to tell you they are not the strength of the team." said Denver Coach Dan Reeves. "We're not going to ram the ball down your throat."

The Broncos were 12th in the league in rushing. But despite John Elway's knack for heroics, the ground game could be critical against the Washington Redskins.

What Gene Long and I do collectively is very effective," said Sammy Winder, who has led the Broncos in rushing for five straight years. "Our game complements the passing attack even if our stats don't show Winder carried 196 times for 741 yards for a 3.8 average. Lang rushed for 303 yards on 89 carries and Steve Sewell, an effective receiver who was injured for much of the season, carried 19 times for 83 yards.

"Saying this is a one-man team really makes no sense, especially at the quarterback position." Elway said. "You rely so much on all the people on the field." Offensive coordinator Mike Shanahan said versatility has value in a backfield. 'One thing about our running backs is they have the ability to do everything." he said. "You may look at a running back and he's a 230-pound power blocker or you have a scatback who can go 85 yards but can't

"We ask our running backs to do a lot of things and sometimes they don't touch the ball a lot. They are very consistent. They're used in a lot of formations and a part of our passing game.'

Lang has few complaints.

"I'm not going to be a household word and I'm not going to gain a thousand yards because I'm in this offense," he said. "But I prefer winning."

Rather than having one dominating runner, the Redskins have three backs who could play pivotal roles against Denver. George Rogers is an inside runner on first down. Timmy Smith tends to run outside on second down and Kelvin Bryant is a frequent receiver on third down.

We've got to keep them from running the ball." Reeves said. "They are capable of doing it if they whip you up front.

Rogers gained 613 yards on 163 carries. Smith, a rookie from Texas Tech. had 29 carries for 126 yards. Bryant rushed 77 times for 406 yards.

This year took its toll on me, for real." Rogers said. "I had a dislocated toe. separated shoulder and groin injury. More than anything, the injuries slowed me down this year. But I'm going to be ready for this specialized role. "I feel comfortable right now," he said. We are keeping everyone fresh. We have a lot of good running backs here. It would be more difficult (not playing every down) if we didn't have such good running backs.

Bryant said he is content with his

SAN DIEGO (UPI) - Pity poor San Diego. Of all the mantac football fans in all the football towns in the world, San Diego had to host the crazed armies from Washington and Denver.

Up until this season's strike, Washington and Denver led the pros in consecutive home sellouts, filling all 55,750 seats in Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Stadium for 20 years and all 76.274 seats in Mile-High Stadium for 17 years.

In both cities, people wait decades for season tickets. Divorce lawyers get rich on custody battles over who gets the season tickets. Adult siblings argue at their parents' funerals over who gets the season tickets.

Corporate heads and CPAs in Washington and Denver - and both towns have plenty of each - paint their faces with team colors for home games, pounding on each other and shricking after pivotal plays.

Each city's most flamboyant fans, like the Broncos' Barrelman and the Redskins' Chief Zee, have become local celebrities who sign autographs for their own adoring fans.

Kaufman Hits 708 Series

the Sun Bank mixed league took high honor for the week with a 708 series. Aaron had games of 223, 237 and 248 to make up his series. There were over thirty 600 series rolled and some of the higher ones were Ron Allman, Sun Bank, 694, Jimmy Roche, Extravaganza League, 687, Don Gorman Sr., Sanford City League, 676, and PeeWee West. TGIF, 644.

Our Florida Bowling Proprictors Extravaganza Bowling League started last Friday with eight or nine teams and are looking for one more team of five men, women or mixed. We bowl on Friday nights at 6:30 and the League champion will advance to a state extravaganza roll-off near Miami worth over $35,000 in prize money. We had loads of fun last week. Come on in soon. Again we need one team and some individuals to fill other teams. It's a good money league-only 21 weeks in duration. And the Nassaus are great. ...

Here's an interesting fact. At the start of this season in the National Basketball Association, there were 44 players in the league who are 7-feet tail or tailer - while there were only 6 players who are 6-1 or shorter.

Amazingly, one high school in America has produced 2 players who went on to win the Heisman Trophy as the best college football player in the nation...Woodrow Wilson High in Dallas produced both Tim Brown of Notre Dame who wen the 1967 Helsman, and Davey O'Brien of TCU who won the Helemen in 1938.

Few people in sports history ever turned their careers around like Casey Stengel did as a baseball manager...The first 9 years Stengel managed in the big leagues he never finished higher than 5th. Then, after being out of the majors for 6 years. he got a second chance at age 59, and then finished in first place 10 times in the next 12 seasons to become one of the greatest managers in history.

SCC Road Success On Line At Santa Fe

By Mark Blythe Herald Sports Writer

Bill Payne will hope his basketball squad can continue to be a tough road team tonight as the Seminole Community College Raiders will travel to Gainesville to take on Santa Fe Community College.

SCC. 16-6 and 5-2 in Mid-Florida Conference play, is 4-0 on the road this season, posting wins over may strong opponents. Payne has been patient with his team this season and the young Raiders have been responding well as they are 7-1 overall since the break.

The Raiders, in the past, have been nearly impossible to beat at home and tough to beat on the road. With Seminole in a somewhat rebuilding season it has lost two conference games at home, the first to Valencia CC before the break and another to Florida Community College-Jacksonville this past Saturday

The Raiders and FCC-J, who played down to the wire, share the top spot in the conference with identical records.

Seminole will look to get its inside game going once again and make changes as the game.

Sophmore center Barry Dunning will be at full strength for tonight' game as he has been hampered over the last few weeks with an elbow injury. Dunning will have a tough task in stopping SFCC center Herbie Cooper. Cooper is just 6-1 but is known far and wide for his aerial acrobatics

'The kid (Cooper) can fly.' Seminole assistant coach Dean Smith said. "They love to lob him passes in the middle, it doesn't matter if there's a seven-foot center in the paint, they'll still try to get it inside to him."

Seminole will look to force the ball inside where it has had success to offset the Santa Fe attack. The Raiders are extremely strong in the paint and will be able to make things tough on Cooper all night.

Girls May Play On Boys Team BATON ROUGE. La. (UPI) -

PREP SPORTS School in New Orleans, took the LHSAA to court because she was not allowed to join the boys' soccer team. Clifton Ganus, a private school, does not field a girls' soccer squad.

Ruling: If Sport Not Offered,

U.S. District Court Judge Patrick Carr issued a temporary restraining order Jan. 19 enabling Dube to join her male. counterparts in a Jan. 21 game against Destrehan High. Clifton Ganus triumphed 1-0. with Dube playing about three-quarters of the dame.

Carr had scheduled a hearing for a permanent injunction for Feb. 4, but that meeting will not be necessary, Pedler said.

Until now, the LHSAA said girls must play on girls' teams and boys on boys'team, with the lone exception being mixed doubles in tennis.

The article in the LHSAA handbook pertaining to interscholastic competition for boys and girls was amended to read

"In order to promote as many athletic opportunities as possible for members of the female gender, whenever a school offers a boys' interscholastic athletic team but does not offer a girls' interscholastic team in the same sport, then girls in that school may play on the boys' team in that sport.

"If a girl plays on a boys' team and there is a girls' team in that sport at that particular school, she is considered an ineligible player and the penalties for playing an incligible player will apply to the boys' team in that school and. in addition, the school shall forfest participating in the girls' playoff in that same sport."

Todd Revels of Seminole will be opposite Whittaker Saturday night. Revels pinned Lake Brantley's Matt Thorton at the 2:58 mark after an opening round bye.

Lyman's Mike Breen managed to reach the finals with an 11-1 victory over Lake Mary's Chris Israel, it marked the second straight time that Breen has been able to dominate Isreal though not coming up with the pin. Breen will face Gene Devaney of Lake Brantiye who pinned John Songer of DeLand at the 4:58 mark after a bye in the opening round.

The tournament will add its new twist this evening when the conference's will come together to battle each other.

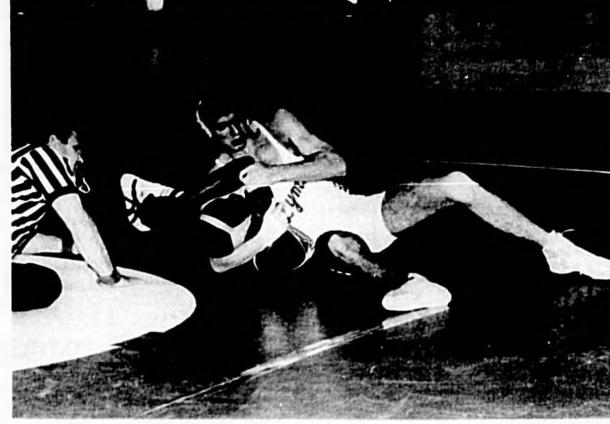

"It's kind of like Seminole vs. Orange County." Lake Mary coach and tournament director Doug Peters said. "We hope everything runs well and the fans are pleased with the tournament."

Tonight's session will begin with the parade of teams followed by a donation to the Special Olympics. Each individual conference champion will then do battle to complete the newly constructed tournament.

U.S. District Judge David Doty delayed action Friday on the NFL Players Association's suit against the league pending the outcome of a case against the union before the National Labor Relations Board.

Doty said he could not act on any motions in the suit until the NLRB, which enforces federal labor laws, decides on the league's claim the union failed to bargain in good faith.

Doty ruled the terms of the collective bargaining agreement continue until there is an "impasse" in negotiations. The contract expired Aug. 31. The league asked the NLRB to find the union guilty of bad-faith bargaining.

Whether the parties have in fact reached impasse as to the iree-agency issues is not clear." Doty said in a 32-page ruling. Because a finding in good faith must be made as a precondition to determining impasse, the court must await the NLRB's good faith' determination."

The league had asked for a dismissal of the case, which was filed just hours before the union ended a 24-day strike Oct. 15. The union asked for an immediate judgment in its favor without a trial and for a court order making about 500 players. nearly one-third the league, free agents effective Feb. 1.

Impasse has clearly been reached," said Doug Allen, the assistant executive director of the NFLPA. "We believe the NLRB will find us not guilty of bad-faith bargaining, and we believe the judge will then act on our motion for summary judgment and a preliminary injunc-

'We're very comfortable with this," he said. "We think this a very positive result for the union. We think that management has to be very unhappy about Jack Donlan, executive director of the NFL Management Council and the league's chief labor negotiator, disagreed.

"The union has been telling everybody that we're going to have 500 free agents on Monday. The judge said we're going to have the status quo," Donlan said. "I think the judge made it very clear that this is now a labor case. Right from the very beginning, we said this was a case that belonged at the bargaining table, that sooner or later it will settled at the bargaining table."

The union's lawsuit attacked the league's college draft, the right of first refusal. compensation system for players whose contracts have expired, and the standard player contracts. The union claimed that in the absence of a collective

CIA Installs New Officers, Makes Plans For Spring Fling

The Civic Improvement Association's installation of new officers took place Monday. New officials are: Vernon Fedderson. president; David Cruise, first vice president: Bob Stoddard. second vice president: Lucy Paskowski, secretary; and Thomas Mahoney, treasurer. also a city commissioner.

And, there are six new directors to serve on their committles. They are: John Connelly, Ethel Carlson, Frances Pratt, Craig Hench, Mark Albright and Harry Terry.

Several topics were discussed to improve the attendance of the CIA's monthly meetings.

Past president Charles Lauderdale, Lake Mary a Police Chief, suggested having speakers from all areas of the Lake Mary community. One idea was to have the Lake Mary City Manager help to show the "master plan" of Lake Mary and bring in people to show the direction the area will be going. With all the expected new population forthcoming. It is the need for all to be informed of developments which will concern the community. Also discussed was a proposed social time after these meetings for everyone to get to know one another.

In the spring, the CIA plans to have a flea market and dinner. Look for more on this project which will take place at the end of April or early May.

Door prizes were awarded to David Cruise who chose the 10 Florida State Lottery tickets and Doris Norden who won the dozen

The Developmental Division of Seminole

According to Nancy Williams of the SCC Developmental Division, by passing this exam, many of these graduates will receive a raise or job promotion, enter college or a vocational program, or qualify for a new job. Others took the test for their own personal satisfaction. Whatever the reason for taking the exam, this group of graduates was intent on enjoying the festive occasion. Williams said.

The ceremony began with graduates and guests pledging the flag and singing "God

It's Time To Have A Heart And Swing Into Spring

it's that time again - time to "Have a Heart and Swing Into Spring" when Central Florida Regional Hospital and the Seminole County Division of the American Heart Association pompously stage their annual luncheon and fashion show benefit.

Patrons can expect a real dazzler. Fashions will run the rampant — from the Itay bitay. casual bikini to the ultimate in formal wear for both milady and his majesty.

The show is off and running. according to a recent committee meeting to finalize plans for the gala, an event of Friday, Feb. 12. at noon, at the Sanford Civic Center.

This year, Lisa Maile of Lisa Maile Professional Image & Modeling School, Winter Park, will be the mistress of ceremonies and will bring six of her prothe local models appearing in the show.

According to Shirley Schilke. "This year is going to be different from before, going to be exciting."

A runway leading out into the audience will add a glamorous 'Miss America" touch to the festivity.

The women's fashions will be from Lois' Place. Lois Dycus, owner of the boutlque, is off to market this weekend shopping for the latest in spring styles for the models to show.

Women models will be Rose-

> Teen-age girl models are Lisa Clontz, Shanan Stewart, Monica Frakes, Melody Sorvas, Kathy Messina, Jenny Gruby and Julie

Men's fashions will be from HIM in Sanford. Modeling HIM's fashions will be Sheriff John Polk. Dr. Frank Clontz. Dr. Tom Largen, Dr. Jorge Gomez, Owen Frakes, Dr. Robert J. Smith, Dr. Narinder Anjla, Joines Tesar, Rep. Art Gilndle, Dr. Lawrence Vallero, Dr. Joe Johnston, Greg Gay, Dr. James Quinn and Troy

Teen-age boy models are Shayne Stewart, Todd Clontz, Tim Dycus and Kevin Smith.

A hearts and sweethearts motif will be carried out in the decor and seating will begin at 11:30 a.m. on a first come first serve basis. There will be no individual reservations except for corporate tables.

Tickets are $20 per person. For tickets make checks payable to American Heart Association and mail to Ms. Kay Bartholomew. Central Florida Regional Hospital, Sanford

After a triumphant success in numerous off-Broadway productions, Luis Perez Jr. made his debut on Broadway Tuesday night when the immortal "Phantom of the Opera" opened at the Majestic Theatre in a flurry of excitement.

Broadway's all-time musical sold out before it opened. Based on a 77-year-old French novel that inspired three Hollywood movies, the musical was hailed on opening night with a standing, shouting ovation headed by Mayor Ed Koch and hundreds of formally clad notables.

Luis, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Luis Perez of Sanford, is cast as the Slave Master and also in several other roles. We will keep you informed about Luis Perez on Broadway.

According to Shirley Milis. president of Seminole Community Concert Association, the concert sponsored by SCGA Thursday night at Lake Mary High School, "was excellent. Real jazzy."

The Earl Rose Trio, which attracted a large turnout, delighted the audience. Shirley said, and particularly jazz fans.

Adding to the concert setting was an art exhibit staged by several members of the Sanford-Seminole Art Association.

The Sanford-Seminole art Association will hold its 29th Annual Members Show on Feb. 13 and 14 at the Sanford Civic Center.

Cash awards will be presented to the winners who will also sell their works. A drawing will be held for a painting with proceeds going to the art association for continued community invo'vement.

The show will be open to the public from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The tea, from 2:30 to 4:30 Sunday, is also free and open to the public.

History buffs won't want to miss a free autograph party scheduled at 2 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 31, at the Henry Shelton Sanford Museum-Library, 520 E. First St. At this time, Gertrude Sanford Legendre, 85, of Charlelston, S.C., granddaughter of the founder of Sanford, will autograph copies of her book. The Time of My Life.

Mrs. Legendre has donated 100 copies of the book to the Henry Shelton Sanford Museum-Library Historical Preservation Society to be used to benefit the museum. The book is priced at $18.95.

The Woman's Club of Sanford will meet Wednesday for the February general business meeting and luncheon. The meeting will begin at 11 a.m., followed by a catered luncheon at noon. After lunch, Nicole Reeves-Baulch R.D. will speak on "Low Energy Food for High Energy People.

Phyllis Conklin is chairman of the hostesses.

The club's Annual Italian Night Dinner will be held Friday. Feb. 26, from 5 to 8 p.m., at the Sanford Civic Center, Tickets, at $5.50 each, are available from club members.

Last year, a large crowd attended the fete. According to Hazel Cash, chairman, the menu has been upgraded this year to make the meal more delicious, if that's possible.

Finalizing plans for the American Heart Association's luncheon and fashion show are: from left, Dr. Leslie Ann Bartlett, Shirley Schilke, Gail Stewart, chairman, Jean Clontz, chairman, Janice Springfield and Becky J. Wilson, Development Director of the AHA.

Lisa Maile, left, who will serve as mistress of ceremonles for the AHA fashion show and luncheon, takes fashlon notes from Lois

The car crashed on a major interstate highway down South. Our line of traffic halted and a state police trooper walked back along our waiting line, checking

"What happened?" we asked him.

"The lane merged and he didn't," he answered matter-of-factly, and continued his traffic-control supervision.

That's almost the tragic story of many lives: the lane merges; that is, gets smaller, moving traffic to narrow confines, but some people don't, the road curves, changes directions, but they don't.

Life, like a major highway, does not remain constant nor static—it merges lanes, moves through valleys and up mountains, but always warning when new adjustments are necessary.

Jesus said: "Narrow is the way, which leads unto life, and few there be who find it." (Matt. 7:14)

On Religion In Public Life

Foundation Seeks Consensus

By David E. Anderson UPI Religion Writer

Religion and politics have always been a volatile, highly flammable mix, and no more so than in an election year.

But in the last decade, the harshness of the rhetoric, the rigidity of the stances and the extremism of many of the activists have led a growing number of religious leaders. politicians and concerned citizens wondering if the national consensus is coming

To counter what they see as a rift in the national fabric, a cross-section of national political, business, academic and religious leaders have launched what they call the Williamsburg Charter Foundation to "forge- new consensus on the place of religion in public life

The privately financed and non-profit foundation, which has been given a oneyear life, has as its major aim the drafting. garnering signatures for and publicizing what will be called the Williamsburg

Although the charter is still in draft form and is expected to go through a number of revisions as it is circulated among participants in the public policy debate, its general thrust is unlikely to be altered, according to Os Guinness, executive director of the foundation:

Drawing from James Madison's argument that "the religion ... of every man must be left to the conviction and conscience of every man; and it is the right of every man to exercise it as they may dictate," signers of the charter will be asked to affirm that "freedum of conscience and the right to influence public policy on the basis of religiously informed ideas are irreversibly linked."

Organizers of the effort believe that the rhetorical violence of the debate over religion and politics in recent years has eroded the respect that is due to the beliefs of society's smallest minorities and argues that "religious liberty can never be taken for granted."

Guinness, in an interview stressed that the foundation is non-partisan and nonsectarian and that it would take no positions on political issues

Instead, he said, the drafters are trying to define "the guiding principles, the notion of the ground rules that should guide" the

"We are not out to stifle debate but to stimulate debate." he said, adding that the charter could serve as something like "the Queensbury rules for boxing." Unlike Lutheran pastor Richard John Neuhaus, who has argued that the "public square" is naked - that it has been secularized and forcefully emptied of debate from a religious perspective - drafters of the Charter find that the religious debate over public policy issues has become rancerous and dominated by extremists.

"What we argue for is neither a sacred public square or a secular public square," Guiness said, "but a civil public square" where the rights and beliefs of others are

After continuing to circulate and revise the draft, foundation officials hope to host a major public unveiling of the document in Williamsburg, Va., in June in which leading American public figures - perhaps including President Reagan - will sign charter and publicly recommit themselves to upholding and guarding the First Amendment guaranteeing the separation of church and state and the free exercise of religion

According to Guiness, who hopes to make the project one that "celebrates the First Amendment," both fundamentalists and secularists are weary of the bitter battle over religion in public life and this year is an opportunity "to restore what Walter Lippmann earlier this century called the

New Meaning To The Word 'Calling'

I became a Jehovah's Witness last week — for a day.

Many times over the years, 1 have opened my front door to find a Jehovah's Witness or two standing there, waiting to sell me a copy of Watchtower magazine and give a sales pitch for their brand of religion. I would smile politely, say I wasn't interested and close the

From what I could gather, the Witnesses were given a similar brushoff (or worse in some cases) at most of the homes where they rang doorbells. I wanted to see what it was like "from the other side of the door," where the Wittiesses stood.

That's why I decided to join a Jehovah's Witness - I'll call him Bob Peters - in this door-to-door ministry, which has angered so many people, yet, paradoxically, has been responsible for the amazing growth of the movement

From a membership of 25,000 in the United States before World War II, the mumber of Jehovah's Witnesses in this country has grown to 650,000. The majority joined after a Witness came to their front door. While Witnesses don't take no for an answer - if you turn them away at the door, they will be back in four or five months they have improved their doorbell-ringing technique. Once lousness, their approach is now more soft-sell.

We got no doors slammed in our faces as we moved up and down a quiet street in a middle class suburban neighborhood. Our problem was of a different kind. We got no answer at most homes.

"A lot of women are working these days," said Peters, "It is harder to find people at home." But at some houses we could hear the television inside. Someweren tanswering.

"They know we are Jehovah's Witnesses," explained Peters who, after 35 years of ringing doorbells, doesn't get discouraged easily. There's a reason.

"Most of today's Witnesses once slammed a door in the face of a Witness who called at their house," said Peters, "But conditions changed in their lives. On one of our return visits, they welcomed us.

Peters said the neighborhood we were canvassing was not fertile ground for Witnesses. "This is a community of families persistent to the point of obnox- who live in comfortable homes.

Peters' opening bit at each house we called on was to invite. the person who answered to a free lecture at the nearby Kingdom Hall (as Witnesses calltheir meeting placest. He also tried to interest them in buying copies of the Watchtower and Awake magazines.

We made one sale - a high school teacher bought a copy of each magazine. Peters and the teacher had a good discussion on evolution (which the Witnesses reject) vs. the Biblical version of

One woman seemed interested when Peters drew her attention to an article on crime in one of body was home, but they the magazines. She lives alone, and the rising incidence of crime frightens her.

But I don't think you can do anything about it," she said...

'We can't but God can," said Peters. "Better times are coming." He didn't go into it, but he was referring to the New Earth - free of crime, sickness and death - which Witnesses believe will one day replace the present earth.

She thanked us, but she didn't buy the magazine.

Jehovah's Witnesses are conscientious objectors. Peters spent time in prison for refusing to serve in the armed services

The people seem happy and during World War II. He recalls woman who had lost a son in Germany berated him for his pacifism

> "I know how you feel," said Peters. "And I'm deeply sorry about your son. But if it's any consolation, it wasn't a Jehovah's Witness who killed your boy.

Free Methodists Hear Missionary

Betty Ellen Cox, Free Methodist missionary in Rwanda and Burundi in central Africa who now makes her home in Spring Arbor, Mich., will speak at Sanford Free Methodist Church on Tuesday, Feb. 2 at 7 p.m. Miss Cox completed 42 years of missionary work in Africa in 1986. Because of her proficiency in languages and translation. she served as a full-time literature missionary during the last 22 years. She translated or collaborated in the translation of 60 books and booklets in the two countries She began her work in Rwanda in 1980. Working alongside a national helper, she completed the translation of eight Theological Education by Extension (TEE) books for use in the training of lay ministers who pastor many of the churches. Very little Protestant literature is produced in that country, so the TEE books are used by other church groups. With her national helper, Miss Cox translated, edited and prepared for distribution the Free Methodist Discipline in Kinyarwanda, a vital step toward formation of the Rwanda General Conference in 1985. She also taught language to missionaries in Rwanda and Burundi and taught in the John Wesley Bible School in Rwanda.

Hasidics Victims Of Sabbath Thefts

By Bernard Cullen

NEW YORK (UPI) - A father and a son have been accused of fencing silver stolen from Hastdie Jews on the Sabbath, a day when victims could not call police because of religious restrictions, authorities said.

A Manhattan criminal court judge set bail for Alan Kramer. 59, and his son Richard Kramer. 31, at $5,000 each and both were released about 12:15 a.m. Monday after their arraignment, Manhattan court clerk Eugene McNamara said.

The case was adjourned until Feb. B. McNamara said.

Father and son were caught by surprise in a 9 p.m. Saturday police raid and could not explain three 50-gallon drums filled with stolen silver, police said investigators forced their way into the Merchants Refining Co. where they recovered the drums of silverware and other rare items, including a $600 Menorah that survived the Holocaust, police said Sunday. Some of the items had already been melted down and others had been cut into pieces. Police said they could not estimate the value of the stolen items

The two men were charged with possession of stolen property. They allegedly fenced silver collected in a long string of burglaries committed by several other suspects, already in

Police said burglars victimized Hasidic residents in a section of Brooklyn, breaking into apartments on Saturdays, the Jewish Sabbath, when Hasidic victims were not home or unable to telephone police because of orthodox Jewish restrictions.

They would want for sundown when the lights would go on in Hasidic apartments. because they knew no one could call the police." Lt. Thomas Mauro said.

In October city and Housing Authority police began investigating a series of as many as 30 burglaries in the Brooklyn neighborhood, Mauro said-

He said only silver was taken in the break-ins. "Some of the stuff was of real-sentimental value. It was transferred from generations down from the Holocaust," Mauro said. "That made it a little more special.

"A lot of it has been destroyed, cut up and broken apart. They were starting to melt it down."

The burglaries stopped after three arrests were made by Jan. 2. Mauro said. Detectives continued their investigation. eventually leading to the Kramers.

Detectives said although the Kramers were believed to have purchased the stolen merchandise, they did not coordinate the robberies

Catholic Church's Tax-Exempt Status Challenged

Special to the Herald

Both the tax-exempt status of the Roman Catholic Church and its right to challenge demands for extensive church records are at stake in a case now under review by the U.S. Supreme Court.

In a brief filed Jan. 21 with the Court, Rutherford Institute lawyers argued that the church will suffer "irreparable harm" if the Court upholds a contempt order issued against two church ensubpoenaed documents.

The Rutherford Institute, a nonprofit legal organization based in Virginia, specializes in the defense of religious groups and churches.

In 1980, Abortion Rights Mobilization and several other pro-abortion groups sued the Internal Revenue Service and the Treasury Department for failing to revoke the Catholic Church's tax-exempt status after the church continued to engage tities for refusing to turn over in anti-abortion activities. 'For Keeps' Wipes Away 30 Years Of Teen Reality

IN MOVIE THEATERS

FOR KEEPS (PG-13) Here's a teen movie that seems to wipaway the last 30 years of social reality - even the last 30 years of teen movies. From the early image of the brightly painted vellow house with the white picket fence in which Molly Ringwald lives with her divorced fread uptight; mother, this romantic "dramedy" (to borrow a current TV term) exists in a vacuum of cute regression. The movie, directed by John G. Avildsen ("Rocky," "The Karate Kid"), tackles the subject of teen pregnancy in a manner both square and evasive. The ever-talented Molly Ringwald and newcomer Randall Batinkoff star - sweetly as Darcy and Stan, the "perfect teenage couple." When Darcy becomes pregnant, she and Standecide to get married and have the baby, casting aside promising college and career plans. Against their parents' objections, the pretty twosome settles into a rundown loft where they try to accept their limited options. Soon, though, they're at each other's throats. He stays is in Italy attending to his out late drinking, and she has a hard time with post-partum de- widow tries to patch things up pression. Stan's dad (quirky Kenneth Mars) articulates the movie's argument against his son's becoming a young father: "Grow up. You had a gerbil last year. You forgot to feed it." This is supposed to be a joke, one that indicates his dad's insensitivity as much as Stan's immaturity. seem more suited to earing for a Shanley for writing such fertile MOONSTRUCK (PG) The most frivolously charming movie of the past year, this comic ode to the Italian-American family is also the year's most satisfying offheat romance. It's on the same wavelength as "Prizzi's Honor" - another good (and perverse) Brooklyn-set movie that humorless types criticized for defamation of character.

In the lead role. Cher is the very soul of a frumpy, aging, yet still beautiful widow. Grown slowly pragmatic, she acquiesces to the marriage proposal of a paunchy, overage mama's boy (Danny Ajello). While her flance supposedly dying mother, the Instead, she falls madly in love

Nothing in Canadian-born director Norman Jewison's previous films (including "In the Heat of the Night" and "Fiddler on the Roof") points to this picture's wild ethnic flair and crackpot romanticism. Clearly. playwright John Patrick Shanley's script deserves a lot of the credit. The terrific support-roles - especially Olympia Dukakis and Vincent Gardenia as Cher's parents, and grand old Feodor Chaltapin as the grandpa with a quintet of baying dogs. GRADE: 31/2 stars...

NADINE (PG) CBS/Fox. $89.98. Kim Basinger really came into her own in this 1987 comic thriller directed by Robert Benton ("Kramer vs. Kramer") projecting an enigmatic blend of dreamer and spitfire. Basinger stars as a '50s Texas beautician who is still in love with her estranged husband (Jeff Bridges), an attractive schemer.

There's an anecdotal doodle of a plot in which Nadine inadvertently witnesses a murder and retrieves some incriminating photos wanted by a goatish con man (Rip Torn). The movie, while pleasant enough, never fulfills the promise of its rich. nostalgic milieu and its scrapping, screwball lovers. GRADE:

PREDATOR (R) CBS/Fox. $89.98. Cartoon-style hulk Arnold Schwarzenegger stars in this 1987 hit, playing the head of a military unit sent into a Latin American jungle to rescue some operatives from an enemy camp. Alas, the missing men have been murdered - and the killer turns out to be a non-human chameleon! As junk movies go, this one is rather crisply directed - a high-tech action thriller with a handful of nightmartshly suggestive jungle images. GRADE: 2 stars.

Conniff Wants To Stop Crime Before It Starts

By Susan Loden Herald Staff Writer

Apathy is the enemy of crime prevention programs, but Seminole County sheriff's deputy Larry Conniff, whose duty is to nip crime in the bud, said all it takes to renew interest in crime prevention programs, such as Neighborhood Watch, is a crime that hits close to home.

You can't evaluate a crime which does not occur, he said. So, interest in crime prevention often ian't a top priority with citizens or even with some law enforcement officials.

"Apathy is a constant battle. I'm neither for nor against aprithy," Connist joked. "You have to make something interesting. That's what we're trying to do. You can't have a good crime prevention program without having an interesting program. That's why we're drawing on the business sector, for more ideas, to make things more interesting."

Connill has his own new approach to crime prevention. He said the newly formed Seminole Crime Prevention Association (SCPA), of which he is president, is the only such organization in the area which ties the business community, which is al., interested in crime prevention, to law enforcement representatives. fire loss managers and citizens, who have the same goals.

All city police and public safety departments in Seminole County have joined Conniff in the formation of the SCPA, which has a 10member board of directors, which includes members of the business community. The police officers in the SCPA also serve as crime prevention officers within their own departments, Conniff said.

"The association (with about 100 members and a potential membership of more than 3,000 members) has brought a lot of the departments together. There is a lot more cooperation. Steve Falk of Longwood Police Department, who is the vice president, is my right hand man in this organization. He is invaluable. He helps me coordinate all the programs. It's just too much for one crime prevention officer. We all have this outside our jobs in our own departments," Conniff said.

Deputy Larry Conniff

Conniff, as a representative of the sheriff's department, remains active. in in Orange and Volusta counties' crime prevention associations as well as the Central Florida Crime Prevention Association, But he said he wanted to develop an association for Seminole County and he wanted to bring in elements that the other associations don't have.

"Our organization is primarily for the husiness sector with Neighborhood Watch programs incorported into it, with them also remaining independent organizations," Conniff said.

A key to maintaining interest in his new program he said is the scheduling of a monthly meeting at 11 a.m. on the first Thursday of every month at the Longwood VFW Building, on County Road 427. Each meeting features professionals who address crime related issues, such as security, loss prevention, enforcement of laws, fire prevention, and even tips from the IRS for crime victims and the security conscious, Membership is open to the general public with annual dues of $5 a year. Connilf said.

The SCPA also provides unique specialized services for business. It has a robbery team which will stage a bank robbery to teach bank workers how to react and what to watch for when confronted by a real rubber.

Seminole County sheriff's Lt. Marty LaBrusteano also presents a program on bombs. And sheriff's Sgt. Ken Starr has a presentation on fraud and forgery.

The 160 Neighborhood Watch chapters in Seminole County maintain their traditional functions, with interest in the various groups rising and falling with the crime rate in individual areas, he said. "We still work with Neighborhood Watch." Conniff said in explaining his official duties on behalf of Seminole County Sheriff John Polk.

Conniff said he and his sheriff's department partner, Tom Dutko. In addition to working on behali of the crime prevention associations and Neighbhood Watch, also represent the sheriff's department and speak for it at public functions and safety programs.

Conniff said he considers that all of his 27 years in law enforcement have been spent as a crime preventer, although he added that generally lawmen react to and deal with an existing crime. Crime prevention, he said, is proactive, with ateps taken to curb crime before it happens.

'In crime prevention a law enforcement officer changes his thought pattern. A lot of things we do are not the norm for the regular patrol officer. We like to go into an area if we patrol and look for certain aspects, such as an open garage door, a ladder against the house things that might lead to a crime.

Regular patrolmen are looking for occuring crime. We're looking to tell residents what to do to prevent crime. We're not always looking for deviate behavior.

'I believe in crime prevention. But it's something you can't measure. I wouldn't be able to to it efficiently or effectively if I didn't believe in it. People all of a sudden remember there is a police department there when a crime occurs. But just because you don't talk about the problem doesn't mean it has gone

"Many police departments don't ee crime prevention as a viable tool. That's why we have a lot of difficulty," Conniff said.

Economists Should Hold Number Bowl

I've often wondered why the Super Bowl generates so much more excitement than the economy. After giving the matter several minutes of careful thought, I've decided that what we need is a Number Bowl, in which key economic indicators compete to see which performed best during the previous year.

Each Number Bowl would be played at Washington's RFK Stadium. All the major economic numbers are computed in Washington, so imagine the excitement as local numbers compete for the nation's top prize. The number chosen by the judges as the performer of the year would have its computer printout framed for permanent display at the Smithsonian.

The key to the Number Bowl's success is that it be covered by sports reporters. To give you just a hint of the excitement, here's how ace radio sportscaster Tink Adams might cover the great Tink: Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen. We're live from the nation's capital, where in just one hour the most important numbers in the nation will alug it out to see which will be framed as the champion economic indicator for all of 1987. Yes, folks, it's Number Bowl time!

With me to bring you all the excitement and color of this annual classic is my old sidekick and former national income accountant, Irving Finster. How do you see today's contest shaping up, irving?

Irving: It's a great day, Tink, and we've got an exciting contest on our hands. Of course, the favorite is GNP, but I think Net Exports could be a real surprise out there today. As you know., Tink, when these great numbers meet on the playing field, you can throw away the record book.

Tink: Irving, this contest is the record book. Well, let's go right to the field and meet some of the favorites. GNP, 1987 was a tough year for you, but you finished strong.

GNP: No question about it, Tink. I know a lot of people figured me to go into a slump this year. but hey! I just took it one quarter at a time and played my game.

Tink: It looked bad for you there in the second

GNP: NO question about it Tink. I slowed up a little, but I just kept going forward. My goal for the year was to set the record for longest peace-time expansion, and I just kept my sights set on that. I came up strong in the third quarter. We'll just have to wait and see what I come up with for the fourth quarter. I'm expecting to linish Tink: That would give you the record. Has it been tough, with all the pressure and excitement building up as you've gotten so close to the record?

GNP: Well, you know, I just took it, like I say, one quarter at a time. But there's no question that when I got to the 18th quarter of expansion. and people started getting excited about the record, it got a little tough. But hey! That's what the game is all about. If you can't stand the heat, you know, you've got to pull up your socks and go out there.

Tink: Uh, right. Well, good luck out there. We have just enough time before the contest to chat with Net Exports. It's been a negative year for you again, Net.

Net: Well, yeah, but, well, you know.

Tink: Some people say you might take this contest despite showing a deficit.

Net: well, I know, you know, that people have been pretty disappointed in my game and all, but, well, the export part of me has really come up a lot, and, you know, the import part has been up so much because GNP is, you know, up.

Tink: A big boost for you from President Reagan.

Net: No question about that, Tink, When he said, you know, that I showed that the economy was healthy that really gave me a you know,

Tink: Still, the fans are pretty down on you.

Net: Well, anytime a number gets, you know. negative and all, they've got an image problem. But I can't worry about what the fans and the press and all are saying. I've just got to go out there and, you know, play my game.

Tink: Right you are, Net Exports. So, fans, that's it from the field. Who will prevail in this gigantic clash of numbers? We'll know at the end of Number Bowl '88. The big one.

Feminism Is Even Changing Anthropology

By GAYLE YOUNG UPI Belence Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) - In the 1950s. anthropologists who traveled to Australia to study the aborigines reported that the men bonded with each other and kept their women at bay with secret ceremonies and dazzling displays of magic they said came from the gods.

It was not until a woman anthropologist recently studied the same peoples that it was learned aborigine women knew the magic was a hoax, indulgently humored the men and had a good laugh about it behind their backs.

"You have to take a good look at the women to get the whole story," said anthropologist Helen Fisher of the American Museum of Natural History, who uses the story to illustrate a decade-old movement in the ranks of anthropology.

It is the feminization of a profession that, ironically, is best known to laymen because of a woman - the late and revered Margaret Meade, who wrote the classic anthropological work,

"Coming of Age in Somoa.

But many men and women anthropologists said in interviews that most early reports on evolution. primitive cultures and primate behavior were overlymale-oriented. and have since been proven misguided and misleading.

In the old Fred Flinstone school of anthropology, cavemen went out to conquer the world with a club while their monogamous mates stayed home in the cave with the kids.

Anthropologists who studied primate behavior tracked orangutans and gorillas and reported the dominant males kept harems of docile females. And those who studied primitive cultures wrote in innumerable ethnographies that men in most societies held all positions of religious and economic

"Basically, anthropologists were from white Western societies of male domination and everywhere they looked they saw Western-like societies of male domination," Fisher said in a recent interview at the museum.

"They were explaining male-female roles from a Western male perspective."

Now, a steady influx of studies and discoveries have painted a new picture of male-female relationships, status and roles.

Anthropologists have determined that most primate societies are comprised of matriarchal groups of related females that dominant males join - if the dominant females acquiesce.

A new look at primitive cultures has suggested that women's status cannot be measured by Western standards. In hunter-gatherer societies, for example, women play a crucial role in providing food and have more power within social groups than previously thought.

Our knowledge of early man, meanwhile, is so scant that anthropologists can't even say for sure whether people knew of the relationship between sex and birth. The concept of "fatherhood" may have been nonexistent.

"We don't have much of an idea at all of what social patterns existed for australopithecine," said University of New Mexico's Jane Lancaster of one of modern humans' earliest ancestors.

Lancaster and other anthropologists said few of their number actually believed that nuclear families similar to those of today existed hundreds of thousand of years ago. But they do concede an-

How Old Is Too Old?

In the minds of many Americans, the dreaded 65th birthday is the point at which middle age ends and old age begins. Social Security and Medicare begin paying full benefits at age 65, and life-insurance actuaries routinely define "senior citizens" as people of that age and over.

The question that bothers a lot of Americans is why a person's relationship to the government and an employer usually changes when he or she reaches 65. The answer is that New Deal social planners selected 65 as a chronological dividing line for determining who received federal old-age benefits, including Social Security. Over the years, 65 became—through force of custom and law—the official definition of old age.

The nation's demography has changed dramatically during the 53 years since the Social Security Act first mandated federal benefits for Americans over 65. The proportion of citizens who are 65 or older has risen from 6.8 percent in 1940 to 12 percent in 1984. As the ranks of older Americans drawing retirement checks grow, so does the burden on younger Americans whose payroll taxes finance the program.

Presently, 30 percent, or roughly $318 billion, of the federal budget is earmarked for programs benefiting the elderly. If Social Security benefits were to remain unchanged. 60 percent of the federal budget would be spent on the elderly by the year 2030.

One answer to the problem is to change the standard that determines old age. The vitality of many senior citizens and life-extending breakthroughs in medicine make 65 genuinely obsolete for determining who is old and who is not. Congress itself recognized this when, in 1983, it acted to raise to 67 the age at which Social Security would begin. That increase will be phased in gradually over the next four decades, but it is an important first Congress also encouraged people to work as late as 70, now the earliest mandatory retirement age for federal employees and most workers in the private sector. And for good reason. Retiring at age 65 deprives many of the opportunity to remain productive and robs employers of their most experienced workers.

As the nation's demographic and health trends change, so too should the government's definition of old age. If old age were defined as the last quarter of an average adult's life, beginning at age 20, old age could by 2030 begin officially between the ages of 72 and 75. The point is that old age should be determined by present trends, not by the calculations of 1930s social planners.

Morals For Hearts

Medicine's catechism of the heart cludes the memory as easily as Sunday morning lessons on salvation by grace. Let's see, is HDL the good cholesterol? Should the salad be dressed with corn oil or olive? Does the new regime of walking to work make up for those long runs along the river, abandoned now because of the creak in the right knee?

The only lesson that sticks is moral. In the mid-1970s, medicine aannounced that people who pushed for every advantage and never relaxed were at higher risk of keeling over with a heart attack. It was a medical lesson perfect for an age of American doubt about progress, striving and work. Those who hustle and drive would make the Earth, but only the meek and laidback would live long enough to inherit it.

Now comes new research confounding that cardiac moral theory. In a recent issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, researchers report that people with Type A personalities are, in fact, much more likely to survive a heart attack than Type Bs, the relaxed and unambitious. Coming on top of other studies that cast doubt on the link between striving and sick hearts, the new research seems to pardon pushiness and perfectionism.

So our compass, which scans nature for moral direction, spins again. Culture always has looked to disease, from tuberculosis to cancer to coronaries, as the stuff of metaphors for living.

Even as it buries the Type A hypothesis, an editorial in the New England Journal searches for alternatives: "Something is going on in terms of the relations between personality and heart disease," it avows. Tantalizingly, it cites self-absorption and hostility as possible alternative risk factors.

Could it be? Kindness and caring a balm for the heart? Cardiac salvation by good works alone? Moralist heart, be still.

Will Micheal Deaver's Prosecutor Strike Out?

If, some fine day soon, Mike Deaver walks out of the federal courthouse in Washington a free man, he can (paradoxically) thank the fact that the special prosecutor who engineered his conviction for perjury is a gung-ho liberal Republican.

Whitney North Seymour Jr., or "Mike," as he is universally known, is the son of a famous Wall Street lawyer. He joined the family law firm on graduation from Yale Law School in 1950. and carved out a distinguished career there and in various forms of public service during the Rockefeller-Javits-Lindsay era in New York Republican politics. President Nixon named him U.S. attorney for the southern district of New York in 1970.

After stepping down from that post in 1973, Mike returned to his Wall Street law practice and watched with grim disapproval as the Republican Party turned away from such sterling leaders as Nelson Rockefeller and Jacob Javita to follow the false gods of conservatism. including Ronald Reagan. It is, as a Marxist might say, "no accident" that President Reagan managed to staff his administration without calling on the services of Mike Seymour.

But when Attorney General Ed Meese decided to ask a judicial panel to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate alleged premature lobbying by recently retired White House aide Mike Deaver, it was probably Seymour's known distance from the Reagan administration, as well as his undoubted competence, that led the panel to give him the assignment.

Seymour leaped at the chance like a hungry tiger. A special prosecutor may theoretically conclude, after his investigation, that there is no evidence of criminality. (One decided exactly that, after investigating loose Democratic charges against Meese himself some years ago.) But nobody who knows Mike Seymour expected him to exonerate Deaver. Painstakingly, he began to construct a case under the Ethics in Government Act.

As it turned out, Seymour was unable to obtain an indictment under that act (which, in any case, simply prohibits retired employees of the executive branch from lobbying in ways that are are entirely legal for retired members of Congress). But in the course of testimony before sustain the ruling).

the grand jury. Deaver made certain statements which the jury considered false, and he was ultimately convicted of perjury for these.

Seymour was duly televised on the steps of the courthouse, thundering that this sort of unethical conduct was intolerable. For a moment, it seemed that a new career for Mike Seymour, as cleanser of the Reagan stables, might be constructed on the recumbent corpse of Michael Deaver.

But it transpired that, in accepting appointment by the judicial panel as a special prosecutor. Seymour had haughtily declined Attorney General Meese's offer of a parallel appointment as a prosecutor by the Justice Department.

But now a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia has ruled, by a vote of 2 to 1, that 'he specialprosecutor law is indeed unconstitutional. The ruling will of course be appealed to the Supreme. Court, but there it will take five of the present eight justices to overrule it (since a tie would

Animals And Drivers

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A publication describing itself as an "animal rights" magazine estimates there are about 400 million "roadkills" in this country every

"More than a million animals are killed each day by cars and trucks in America-making roadkills second only to the meat industry in terms of animal death," it says.

Naturalists seem to feel it is up to motorists to reduce the total, and I suppose it is. The animals themselves appear rigidly fixed in their habits, although a commuter who is accustomed to driving the same routes twice a day may be the most habit-ridden type there is.

I remember as a child being asked, "Why does a chicken cross the road?" The answer, then as now, was, "To get to the other

Only when, as an adult, I started to familiarize myself with animal rights, did I learn why they might want to get to the other side.

The magazine says they may be trying to "find mates."

It does not specifically address the issue of how many chickens are run over each year trying to cross the road but estimates "600,000 of the million roadkills daily are birds."

Dogs and cats, I gather, have largely replaced chickens as pets, and in some places appear more desirous of reaching the other side of the road, as well.

In one "relatively small" California county alone, Humane Society workers "picked up 2,900 dead dogs and cats" in 1986. The magazine doesn't say how many ware killed nationwide, but since dogs and cats are primarily pets, it follows they are the primary

Duck-In-Chief

Ronald Reagan was eloquent and correct in his State of the Union plea for aid to the contra freedom fighters in Nicaragua. But suppose the Congress, unpersuaded, votes down his request?

There will be much clucking about how this proves that Reagan is a lame duck. Well, maybe so. But It might be wise to remember that Reagan will still be president. "duck-in-chief" as it were, for another full year. And in our system, even lame presidents have great power if they choose to use it.

Now, administration sources say they have done no contingency planning for a "no" vote. They say they are not defeatists, that they are going to win the contest. Indeed, they might.

But it doesn't take more than a few phone calls to foreign policy. legal and political experts to figure out some of the options Reagan might consider if he loses the vote. Here are a few, ranging from cynical, to extreme, to unlikely, to plausible.

Reagan could do nothing. The main force of the contras would wither: Daniel Ortega would gradually reverse democratic reforms. The democratic governments of El Salvador and Guatemala would be threatened by Sandinista arms and subversion-and those governments might be taken over by either right-wing generals or Marxists. In the U.S. election, the Republicans would claim that communist chaos in Central America was caused by Democrats in Congress. That would be a harmful, and correct, charge.

There is a problem with all that. The communists win, and Reagan doesn't like communists. Moreover, Clare Boothe Luce said every president is remembered by one sentence. Under such circumstances Reagan's line in history would be "He's the president who lost Central America to the communists."

Reagan has other options. It is said that the War Powers Act curtails a president's military power. But it states, as a matter of to use America's military might in in a tragic war.

his capacity as commander in chief. Reagan could invade Nicaragua. That would be politically unpopular-unless it was successful. like Grenada: (If the American military couldn't handle Nicaragua in 89 days, taxpayers might properly demand refunds.) Alternatively, Reagan could blockade Nicaragua or mine its harbors on the grounds of keeping out more Soviet arms. Could the already tottering economy of a maritime state survive a 90-day blockade?

IN THE SPRIT OF GLASHOST, I JOINED

All that may be too extreme. If Reagan loses, remember that this time there will not only be no appropriation for the contras but also no Boland Amendment to curb the president's powers. Under a ctrcumstance of no-bill/no-Boland.

what could the president do? He could endorse a blue ribbon private committee to publicly raise private funds for the contras. He could then go on television and ask Americans to help out. No Oliver North, no secret bank accounts. nothing illegal-just ask Americans to help liberty survive in this hemisphere

He could ask friendly governments to help the contras-maybe the sultan of Brunei or the king of Saudi Arabia. Reagan couldn't promise any quid pro quos, but it's still nice to have a friend in the White House, even if it's only for a

He could break relations with Nicaragua, recognize the contrasand perhaps send some quick emergency aid to the new friendly contra government.

Using immigration laws he could welcome all the contras to the United States and keep them as an active, well-trained force housed at a U.S. military installation, ready to go back to Nicaragua if the Sandinistas don't democratize.

There is a lesson here for members of Congress who may think that it will all be over if they "just say no." It probably won't be. It law, that the president has 90 days could just be another new beginning

Cheap Sunshades Help Too

Sunglasses-either cheap plastic ones or expensive glass shadeshelp cut ultraviolet light that can cause eye damage, but become less effective if they slip down your nose,

In an article in the January issue. of the American Journal of Public Health, a team of researchers tested 32 pairs of sunglasses, including 16 with plastic lenses, to see how much they cut out ultraviolet radiation from the sun.

The radiation has been linked to eye damage and cataracts and can be especially dangerous for people living at low latitudes, lacking pigments, or who spend a lot of time outdoors, especially on reflective sand or water. The researchers found both the plastic and glass sunglasses cut out almost 98 percent of the ultraviolet light, and all the sunglasses were better than ordinary clear spectacles at reducing ultraviolet light. Ordinary prescription glasses cut out 84 percent of the light in one test and 54 percent in another. The study also tested the lenses on a mannikin with realistic facial features to see how well the sunglasses worked when worn. They measured the ultraviolet light that penetrated through or around the lenses to an instument below the mannikin's "eve." When the sunglasses touched the mannikin's forehead, they cut out 86 to 99 percent of the ultraviolet light, but when the glasses were placed a quarter-inch down the mannikin's nose, they only cut out 55 to 96 percent of the radiation.

Finding The Needle In The Haystack

By Jack Anderson And Joseph Spear

WASHINGTON - If there is anything more difficult than finding needles in a haystack, it's finding opium in Asia's Golden Triangle and marijuana and cocaine in South America.

A secret report compiled by a Defense Department task force on drug traffickers said the job is confounded by vast expanses of land, carefully hidden laboratories. the use of airplanes and ships to smuggle drugs, and endless miles of border and coastline to patrol. The experts outlined the complexity of stopping international drug traffic:

• An estimated 2,023 square miles of land are used for optum poppy cultivation in the seven major producing countries ---Afghanistan, Burma, Iran, Laos. Mexico, Pakistan and Thailand. That sounds like a big chunk of land to hide. But together, those countries have nearly 900,000 square miles of land suitable for farming. Therefore, the report says. 'any eradication program must first find the one acre of poppies in each 442 acres of other crops and wild growth in these countries.

 Cannabis—marijuana—grows anywhere, but mostly in Belize, Colombia, Jamaica and Mexico. Those four countries have a total land area of 1.214,446 square miles. but need only 137 square miles to grow all the marijuana they export. Thus, the experts calculate, "an eradication program must search 8,865 acres to find each acre of cannabls plants."

 Boltvia, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru are the four major cocaproducing countries for cocaine. They have a land area of 1,469,603 square miles, but only an estimated 684 square miles are used for cocacultivation. "Thus, an eradication program must find the one acre in 2,150 where coca is being grown." the report says.

• Cocaine laboratories "can be, and have been found anywhere from city buildings to remote jungles." A combined land area of 5,824,425 square miles would have to be searched in Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Ecuador and Peru to find them all.

• More than 5,000 miles of coastline along the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, excluding Alaska, have to be patrolled to guard against drugs smuggled into the United States by sea. U.S. citizens own more than 10 million boats. There are over 600,000 vessels plying the coasts of Florida, Texas and California alone.

• Our land border with Mexico is more than 2,000 miles long, and very porous. In 1986, more than 1.8 million illegal allens were caught crossing it.

• Aircraft bring a whole new set of problems, according to the secret report. "The air smuggler may fly over any of about 5,000 miles of southern border, and land ... on almost any field, road or desert." the report says. "There are 295,000 U.S. aircraft. Finding the drugs and their traffickers is indeed like fluding a needle in a haystack."

Candidates' Views On The Job Training Challenge

By William E. Davis

Any nation that refuses to make the investment necessary to ensure its ability to compete in the world economy is destined to a state of decline.

Few would argue that a competent and qualified work force is a crucial factor in sustaining the nation's economic competitiveness in the world and a sound domestic economy. But the sad fact is that the national work force is not as competent nor as qualified as it could be and must become.

Of all the substantive issues raised by current conditions in the nation's cities and towns, one of the most urgent is the need to address the competence and quality of the urban labor force. Preparing young people with the knowledge, skills and habits they will need to enter a more demanding labor market is fundamental to the future of our cities and our country. No less important is the development of re-education and retraining systems designed for those already in the labor force to enhance their resiliency to rapid changes in the economy and in the workplace.

Major shifts in manufacturing sectors and decline of the nation's farm economy have displaced workers who need new skills to be employable. Of workers laid off between 1980 and 1986, only 55.8 percent found work again. And of those who found work, 43.4 percent had to settle for lower-paying or part-time jobs. Only 46 percent of the steelworkers permanently laid off between 1979 and 1983, for example, had new jobs in January, 1984; another 40 percent were still hunting for jobs, and six percent had given up their searches by then-

Shifts in the economy have also created a large number of new jobs. But the net growth in the number of jobs in our economy masks serious problems in the quality of jobs being created compared with those being lost. Many of the Jobs available to displaced and once well-paid industrial workers, and to those just just entering the work force with few skills, pay so poorly that the workers holding them are among the growing number of working poor.

The job-skills mismatch threatens a continuing drain on government budgets for social services and represents a waste of human capital in an age. when minds are more valuable than muscles or

The problems presented by a large segment of the urban population with underdeveloped or obsolete skills are severe. Clearly there must be increased national investment in basic education to build a foundation for functioning in the world of work as it exists today and will exist in the future, and in job retraining to develop and update knowledge and skills needed in today's demanding and rapidly changing world economy. But the question remains-how? How can we best improve basic education and address the retraining needs of the labor force? One would think a national problem of such gravity is worthy of the attention of those individuals who wish to be president.

A glimpse of candidates' thinking on the issue has been provided by the responses of eight presidential candidates to a questionnaire of the National League of Cities Intitute's "Election '88" project, which is a two-year, non-pardsan effort to ensure an informed public discussion of problems and issues affecting America's cities and towns.

 Vice President George Bush called for the promotion of "productive public/private partnerships that would provide work and opportunity for those who seek it."

 Bruce Babbit, former governor of Arizona and a Democrat, proposed to forgive education loans to those who agreed to teach in public schools for five years; to "move in the direction of an individualized training entitlement" so that no worker need become obsolete; and to provide "incentives for training investment in the private

• Calling for the expansion of current job-training programs, U.S. Rep. Richard Gephart, D-Mo., also proposed legislation that would enable individuals to use their unemployment insurance money to start their own businesses without losing their benefits.

• U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp, R.N.Y., indicated that he would "pursue initiatives that provide states more flexibility to experiment with innovative job training programs to encourage entrepreneurship.

• U.S. Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., called for demonstration programs to provide low-interest training loans, to allow persons to draw unemployment while trying to start a small business, and to establish public works employment programs for the long-term unem-

 The Rev. Jesse Jackson, a Democrat. proposed an expansion of federal funding for Job training with matching state, local and private financing to provide education and job-readiness

 Gov. Michael Dukakis, D-Mass., declared the Job Training Princiship Act to be a solid foundation and pledged to halt efforts to cut it back. Further, he promised to broaden the job training system's capacity by creating a larger and more flexible dislocated worker program, and to strengthen its existing emphasis on breaking down barriers for the disadvantaged through a clear connection to national welfare reform.

• U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., cited the need to combine federal jobs programs with "realistic vocations training both in our schools and for those who need to be retrained for new jobs."

While none of the candidates quantified the resources to be committed to these efforts, their responses to the National League of Cities questionnaire suggest the direction of their thinking. But we need to hear more.

How would Vice President Bush promote public-private partnerships? How would Gov. Babbits's individualized training entitlement work? We need to hear more about Rep. Gephart's entrepreneurial unemployment benefit plan. What kind of job training programs would Rep. Kemp suggest to encourage entrepreneurship? How would Sen. Gore's lowinterest training loan program work? What level of state/local/private matching does Rev. Jackson envision for job training? What initiatives connecting welfare reform and job training could we expect from Gov. Dukakis? What steps would Sen. Simon take to ensure that vocational training is realistic in the context of today's job market? Moreover, we need to know what the other candidates have to say on this subject.

The voters should insist on a complete and thorough discussion of these vital issues as the camplagn progresses.

Child Care Truce Called

It's a never-ending truth I keep proving and proving and proving: You can take the daily newspaper, subscribe to seven magazines and listen to National Public Radio faithfully, and still be caught napping more often than you like to admit.

Such was the case recently when news broke of several new child-care bills, sponsored by both liberals and conservatives. OK, I admit I was momentarily distracted by Pat Robertson, who lamented that abortion may destroy the tax base, and Jack Kemp, who suggested that the answer to the Social Security crists may lie in getting the baby boomers to produce another boom. ("I have four," he told reporters, with emphasis.)

If liberals and conservatives have narrowed the gap separating their philosophies on child care, they must have been talking behind my back. Somewhere, at Junches and in congressional offices, they must have been talking more about the crisis than whether the child-care situation will either (a) prove the ruination of the family as we know it, or (b) drive women back into the home and keep men firmly in power. When it comes to protecting America's children, liberals and conservatives are sounding more like each other all the time.

Personally, [1] have to acknowledge I don't care how they arrived at the compromise. I don't care if the rightwing faction finally threw up their hands and said, 'All right, already! We Just can't deal with any more mothers staying on the public dole because they make more money on welfare than they do by working." Nor do I care if the left-wing faction is getting the hint that people are sick and tired of the idea of "entitlements" being a birthright.

But I am encouraged by one particular conservative who seems to understand the problem, as I see it everyday among the people I know and work with. Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah has introduced a plan to get the government more involved in child care, and in ways that reward parents for their work, instead of penalizing them. His proposal would give parents tax and insurance breaks. That's precisely what I would want if I were a working parent: Just a hand up, a way to stay at my job and provide the best quality child care I could find, and not be punished for trying to rear the next generation in today's economy.

I'll also admit to a certain liberal bent when it comes to child care. My parents both worked, and I liked nothing better than to get away from them for an afternoon at my teenaged baby sitter's house. My parents found good, competent care for me when the idea of child care being a problem wasn't something you read about in every women's magazine.

Orrin, you did good. You have an understanding that is simple, pragmatic and appropriate for the times. If there's one economic principle that holds true no matter what the conditions, it is that qualified people don't want to work for nothing. And they won't. Good care providers won't provide care unless we pay them enough to go into the business, and many of us can't afford them without some economic help.

OUR READERS WRITE-

I have read with great interest all of the news items on Rebecca Paul's Lottery which is just getting started in Florida, and as a businessman, business leader, taxpayer, and one who is extremely interested in how events affect people's lives (because in the end that is what it is all about), I want to go on record privately and publicly as being 100 percent against the new Florida Lottery for the following reason From an early age, from elementary school on through high school and then into college, students are taught (or they certainly were when I was in school) not to gamble-not to gamble at cards on the school grounds, not to gamble playing marbles and not to gamble on sports events. In essence, we were taught the shortfalls and evils of gambling

ing to raise money, with a majority of it going for education. In other words, it doesn't make sense to me to take money from gambling to educate children not to gamble.

Minors are not permitted to accompany adults to dog tracks, horse racing tracks, Jai Alai, etc., which is a good law. But they accompany adults to the various 7-Elevens, etc. and watch the adults gamble their hard-earned money away on the lottery. This is not the way to rear children. This is not the influence that is needed.

Unfortunately, the majority of people who purchase lottery tickets are the ones who can ill afford the loss: That money is needed for food, medical, dental, clothes and, in many cases, education. The lottery is simply a surtax on the poor who get caught up in the gambling spirit hoping to get something for nothing. You don't have to be a psychologist to realize how dangerous and contagious gambling can become to most people who start it. It is a whole lot like alcoholism. One never knows where you are going to end up when you start, and take the first drink.

While the public education system in the State of Florida needs money and will always need money, the following would be a better way to support and raise money for the education system than gambling:

Let the schools start operating like any other business, that is, on a 12-month basis. Second, that the paddle be brought out again and discipline be installed in the schools. Third, that some type of entrance or matriculation fee be charged for all new out-of-state students and, more importantly, a surtax be charged on beer, alcohol, wine and cigarettes.

Florida Lottery Is One Of The State's Biggest Mistakes Sufficient monies can be raised using the above taxing program without the Florida Lottery. The Florida Lottery is going to be the cause of many poor, uneducated people remaining that way, not being able to properly support their children, and the cause of many domestic problems and will definitely increase the crime rate, and in all probability be the forerunner of legalizing casino gambling in the County Still Interfering With Annexation

According to the Jan. 26 Sanford Herald. Seminole County continues to interfere in city business and againis protesting an annexation into the city of Sanford.

The owners of a large parcel of land on the north side of 25th Street directly across from the city airport applied to voluntarily annex into the city in order to be able to develop the land and have water and sewer available to them.

Monday night, at taxpayer expense. Assistant County Attorney Lonnie Groot appeared on behalf of the county commission to protest the annexation. He was accompanied by a court reporter, again at taxpayer expense, to make a record of the city commission action so that the county could go to court against the city if the annexation was approved. Court costs are paid by the taxpayers in every case between the county and a

The county is protesting that the annexation will create an "enclave" of the area of Roseland Park. This is an area of the county which was developed some time ago and has no water, sewers or paved streets, which would be required if it had been developed in the city.

The county admitted that it does not have, nor intends to provide these services to those citizens of Roseland Park, but used that subdivision as an example of the city "enclaving" county areas.

The county admitted that the annexing of the large parcel would have no impact on Roseland Park and would not affect it in any way. So what is the "real" reason to oppose the annexation? It would appear that if the county commission has any concern for the health, safety and welfare of the people who live in Roseland Park, the county should be urging those people to annex into the city and obtain the benefits the city can give them.

The annexation was tabled to be heard at a meeting in the future. It was neither approved nor denied. If the property owners do not withdraw their petition to annex, the city will have another hearing and again the county will send an attorney and a court reporter to record the meeting—at taxpayer expense!

It is time the taxpayers demand that the county commission stop these actions. The county never shows that it, or the citizens, will be damaged. The objection can only be to retain POWER and CONTROL over masses of land and property owners even to the point of denying the right lawsuits against ourselves and should be upset over this ridiculous waste of time and money.

If the general public would start attending some of the county commission meetings and then attend city meetings where the county attorney or staff voices objections, they would get a terrific education.

Sex Education Classes Should Provide Information

With state after state finally recognizing the need for comprehensive AIDS education in our schools, the decades-long debate over whether schools should provide sex education may finally become bleseedly moot. After all, it is hard to educate children about AIDS without educating them about

But just as we approach the end of that seemingly endicas debate, we are confronted by a far more difficult, but closely related, question: Should public schools become involved in the business of providing birthcontrol devices?

Remember, before screaming. that we face another epidemic that has been with us longer than AIDS, and may ultimately pose a greater threat to the fabric of our society.

Like AIDS, this epidemic is spread by sexual intercourse. and it knows no social boundaries. Like most AIDS cases, it is directly related to personal behavior and life choices. As with AIDS, this epidemic takes an enormous toll each year - it destroys lives, shatters families, taxes the social welfare system and has a major impact on the economy.

Unlike AIDS, however, this epidemic is an entirely heterosexual problem.

The epidemic I'm talking about is not caused by a virus or bacterium: It is caused by sex. It is teenage pregnancy, which is sweeping suburban and inner-city neighborhood alike, striking "good" girls and boys along with the "bad." It ruins the lives of more than 1 million children every year - children having

It's certainly true that today's pregnant teenager has far more options than her sister of a decade or two ago. Abortion is now safe, legal and inexpensive. There are numerous programs designed to keep pregnant teenagers in school so that they do not have the double burden of having a baby while in their teens and not having a high school diploma. And last, but certainly not least, social attitudes have changed to the point where having a baby in know they are less likely to know, sex education is very high school at least does not achieve what may have been personal and can best be pro-that it makes any sense for cycle of poverty. teenagers to have children. A involved - the life of the young mother (and in some cases the father), her parents and the Perhaps. Maybe. Who knows?

There have been enough studies for us to know that teenagers who give birth are far less likely than their peers to harm, it's hard to argue that it complete their educations. We mean being branded with a their life's goals. We know that if vided by parents in the home.

they are poor, giving birth less-None of that, of course, means ens their chances of escaping the

We also know from numerous 17-year-old may be biologically studies that sex education does ready to give birth, but in many not cause teenage pregnancy, respects she is not ready to leave nor does it make teenagers more her own mother, much less sexually active. However, when become one herself. We know we look at the data in an attempt that having a child as a teenager to determine if sex-education dramatically alters the lives of all classes cut down on unwanted pregnancies, the answer becomes much more equivocal:

> But if the role of public schools is to educate, and we know that this particular form of education helps and certainly doesn't doesn't belong in the schools. (I

That's true, if only parents were providing it.)

But providing sex education and providing birth-control devices are two very different things. To educate, to give infermation about basic biological functions, about emotions and ethical choices, and about the facts of preventing pregnancy, is one thing. Providing such education is clearly the duty of the school as part of its job to supply health education.

However, actually dispensing birth-control devices in schools is another thing entirely. If a school takes this next step, it is clearly acquiescing in, if not encouraging, the teenagers' sexual activity. And that, quite clearly, is a far cry from providing information.

Shirley Strum, who studied baboons in Kenya in the 1970s. published her observations of a 61-member group that was approached by a huge, healthy male baboon nicknamed Ray.

Ray did not strut into the middle of the throng and challenge the nearest male, as Strum expected, Instead he stayed on the edge of the group. trying to look unobtrusive and making friendly overtures to several females of the group. who finally accepted him as a member.

Only then did he struggle with the males to establish his rank.

Untangling old myths about male-female relationships in humans has been more difficult than understanding primate behavior, researchers said.

"By the time anthropologists started studying cultures seriously. Western cultural standards had already pervaded so many societies that it was general division of labor. We hard to measure traditional women's roles," said Fisher.

She cites studies of North African communities that indicated males held all economic. political and religious power. But the old studies did not take into ssure account the fact that British colonialists had established judicial systems and local governments in which only men-were allowed to serve. A British plan to tax men as if their wives were property prompted a turn of the century Algerian rebellion in which women marched on British garrisons. British historians incorrectly reported the men had engineered the rebellion and sent their wives and daughters. on a rampage because they believed the colonialists would not shoot at women, Fisher said. "In reality it was a profest started and carried out by women who owned their own property and were outraged," she said.

It was during this same time. that people in Western societies were misinterpreting Charles Darwin's "survival of the fittest" theory to justify the domination of upper class whites over other classes and races.

"The beltef was they were superior and the belief was that men had evolved to be superior to women," said Fisher of the early 1900s

Now anthropologists have determined that almost all of the physical differences between men and women boil down to the fact that women bear children.

"If you took that away, we would be the same," Lancaster

Fisher, who lived with and studied the Navajo while a 23-year-old student, said in many native American Indian tribes women had considerable power until tribal communities were reorganized by government officials.

"Anthropologists are beginning to realize this phenomenon and take it into consideration," she said.

Fisher said early anthropologists also measured the status of women in different cultures based on Western perceptions of power.

"Do they hold office, do they mint, do they own property?" she said. "That does not always give us an accurate reflection of what is going on.

"An older Chinese woman in the home can dominate a whole patriarchal line," she said.

"It used to be thought that an arranged marriage was a sign that women had little say in their future," Fisher continued. "But for every arranged marriage there is a young boy who is being traded off without any SHY-SO. Anthropologists said that a woman's role as bearer of children often prevents her from physically working to provide food from a hunt or from the family farm. But, in most societies, she is a vital contributor to the overall economic well-being of the society. During a tour of the museum, Fisher paused before a diorama of African pygmies that showed a male shooting at game while a woman with a baby on her hip and a basket on her back foraged for edible plants.

"A hunt may bring in meat only every few days or once a week," Fisher said, "Without the food brought in by the women. they would starve.

Book On Picasso Reveals Great Artist

Picasso Theatre, by Douglas Cooper; Sketches and Paintings by Pablo Picasso

Pablo Picasso remains at the pinnacle of modern art and this gorgeous volume. relanued after many years out of print, reminds us why. The collection of 500 prints, drawings, photographs and full color plates of a number of Picasso's best works dramatically reveals the artist's love for and involvement in the theater in all its guises. including the circus, dance, music and cafe entertainment.

One might say that for Picasso, the theater was a metaphor for life, and it is a motif that runs through all of his work. As Douglas Cooper notes in his long, informative essay introducing the volume, it even touches the "Guernica," one of Picasso's most famous and most powerful works, the anti-Fucist painting done following Franco's bombing of the Spanish city of Guernica. In a way that makes one look at the painting in a new light. Cooper argues that "its visual and emotional effect is largely created by theatrical means."

But the theater animated even Picasso's earliest work, which is studded with chareterizations of actors and other theater or circus people, especially the harlegutn.

Beautifully composed and lovingly produced, "Picasso Theatre" belongs in the collection of all who care about the best of 20th century art.

The New Chinatown, by Peter Kweng

(Hill and Wang, 198 pp., 516.95)

Peter Kwong sets out to strip away the popular American image of the Chinese in our midst. He wants us to know that while the Chinese as a class are hard-working and ambitious, a majority have little chance of climbing out of Chinatown and into the mainstream of American life.

Kwong, a political science teacher at SUNY-College at Old Westbury, Long Island, distinguishes between the Uptown Chinese - educated professionals who have assimilated and succeeded, and the Downtown Chinese - the economically depressed minority. But while he may be correct in saying the general view of the Chinese fails to take into account the latter group, Kwong does not examine what this means for the Chinese and the Americans with whom they interact.

Instead, he takes the reader on a fairly interesting tour, using New York Chinatown today as a model for such communitles in America. And while various stops along the way - especially his look at trade unionism in Chinatown - are fascinating, the book is episodic and meandering. The reader is often left to wonder what it all means and wonder where he is being taken. Kwong's academic writing style, and his editor's insistence on using sub-headings every page or so, also help to bleed the life. out of the important insights he seems capable of making. Mark Del Vocchio (UPI)

These seven short stories and one letter show Ferrol Sams' wide range of understanding of the human condition and the evil that lurks within us all. They are, however, sensitive stories, without malice, because of the large doses of humor administered by this Georgia doctor. There is one exception in "Saba," an open letter to children of a friend that is a loving commentary on the community of man.

Sams has a keen car for language, and leaves no doubt that to live among the lift of the Southern tongue is something special. Most of his stories deal with common folk and their common language. which is to say it is down to earth, if not downright coarse.
