Davis Reaffirms Preston's Death Sentence

By Deane Jordan Herald Staff Writer

Death in the electric chair creeped a step closer Thursday for a Forest City man convicted of murder after nearly decapitating his victim in 1978.

Robert Anthony Preston Jr., 29, had his request for post conviction relief denied by Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis Jr.

"I'm very happy with that," said Ester Sams, the victim's mother.

"If I had any doubts that he didn't do it I wouldn't say that. He had a fair trial, and he needs to pay for it. Some day it will catch up with him." she said referring to his appeals.

Preston is the only person Davis has sentenced to death during his six years on the bench. Preston was convicted of killing Earline Walker, 46, of Winter Park, on Jan. 9, 1978.

Preston had been scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair Nov. 4, 1985. He got a stay from Davis just three days before the 7 a.m. execution by asking that certain aspects of his trial be reviewed in hopes of having the death sentence reduced to life or to possibly have a new trial ordered.

Preston's attorney said Davis' Thursday ruling "is indeed most unfortunate."

"We're very disappointed," added stateappointed attorney Larry Spauftling. He said they had hoped that questionable testimony from a hair analysis expert would be enough to alter the sentence or prompt another

He said the case will be appealed within 30 days to the Florida Supreme Court. If the case is lost there, it goes to the Federal District Court in Orlando, then federal court in Atlanta and lastly the U.S. Supreme Court in Washington D.C.

Preston had raised 14 issues in his bid for conviction relief, from discrediting hair analysis testimony to drug abuse to a discriminatory death penalty. Davis rejected all of the points in a seven-page order.

Preston, 6-foot, 6-inch, 200-pounds, abducted

Ms. Walker in the early morning hours from a Lil' Champ store on Springs Oaks Boulevard in Altamonte Springs, according to court records.

Preston, whose history of drug use reads like a pharmacy inventory, was high on the animal tranquilizer PCP at the time of the crime. He took the woman to a field and nearly cut her head off when from behind he slashed her throat from ear to ear. When officers found her body, she had been stabbed 20 times and raped with a knife.

Preston, already well known to the police, was arrested the day after the murder. A jury of seven men and 5 women recommended the death penalty 7 to 5.

Fans Jam Station To Glimpse Stars

Several thousand fans of the popular television game show Wheel of Fortune jammed the Amtrak station in Sanford Thursday afternoon to get a glimpse of the show's stars. Pat Sajak and "letter-turner" Vanna White.

According to Sanford Police Chief Steve Harriett, who was in the welcoming party, Miss White was the focus of the crowd's attention. "She's a nice lady," he said. "She was personable and pleasant."

Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce Executive Director Dave Farr said an Amtrak official told him the Sanford crowd was larger than those who turned out in Orlando. In fact some of those in the crowd said they were from Orlando and came here because they though the crowd would be smaller here.

Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith presented Ms. White with the key to the city and Farr gave the celebrities Golden Age Games T-shirts and hats.

Also in the welcoming party boarding the train in Sanford were Doris Thomas, wife of City Commissioner Bob Thomas, State Rep. Art Grindle, Seminole Community College President

County Adopts 'Innovative' Land Use Code

By Kathy Tyrity Herald Staff Writer

When it comes to wetlands, Seminole County is "breaking" new ground.

The county has a new code, called the Land Development Code, that incorporates a first-of-its-kind wetlands overlay zone map done with infra-red aerial photography by the St. Johns River Water Management District.

"This is the most extensive wetlands mapping effort done so far," said county Planning Director Tony Van-Derworp. "No other county has these overlay zoning districts. It is the first of its kind that has a zoning overlay district that also has detailed performance standards for development of wetlands."

The county approved the code this week on a 4-1 vote, with Commissioner Barbara Christensen the lone dissenter. She had some "technical problems" with it and thought it too strict on preserving trees.

One of the code's requirements is that developers preserve 25 percent of trees larger than six inches in diameter. Mrs. Christensen thought that should be 15 percent.

The guidelines, written originally by the University of Florida Center For Wetlands, say exactly what is appropriate in each wetland zone, VanDerworp said. They say also that developers can disrupt no more than 10 percent of the wetlands on a given site.

And the object of the wetlands code with accompanying Planning Guidelines for Natural Resources is to see that the county collects its run-off and land water in a most natural way — no concrete canals and weirs "like they have in South Florida," he said.

"We want to continue to do our drainage in a most natural way, and these wetlands can be nurtured by developers as scenic and recreation areas," he said. VanDerworp said he suggests to developers that they incorporate boardwalks, docks, gazebos, trails and scenic features in their developments.

He said the county saves building costs by maintaining a natural wetlands system, "and we maintain water quality better, plus preserving wildlife, recreation and the scenic beauty of the county."

Natural systems, he said, "do a real good job cleaning the nutrients — it acts like a kidney — and it just works great."

Fire Destroys Antiques Shop

The antiques shop an elderly Seminole County couple operated for the last four years was destroyed today in an early morning fire that investigators say was caused by an electrical short.

Harold and Marjorie White housed the antiques in a barn behind their 1120 Paola Road home. A fire that smoldered for two to three hours before firemen arrived left the 60-foot by 50-foot barn gutted by 1 a.m. In addition to the shop, White, 68, also lost his woodworking shop, which was also set up in the barn. His woodworking equipment, kept in an adjacent lean-to, was also lost.

Structural damage was put at $10,000 to the barn and $20,000 to its contents by Seminole County fire investigator Bob Christian.

White, however, said the loss is incalcuable in terms of the time and energy he and his wife spent collecting and selling their antiques.

"We had mostly country pieces, like oak roll top docks, tables, glassware and such," White said this morning. "All that's left are pieces of metal on the floor."

"There's not much we can do now, it's all gone, all down the drain," Mrs. White added.
White said he and his wife don't plan

White said he and his wife don't plan to open a shop again. They've been collecting antiques for the last 40 years, as a side-line to his regular work as a building contractor, he said.

A short in a florescent ceiling light caused the fire, according to Christian. The fire travelled along wooden roof beams that fell onto the floor, igniting it as well, he said.

White questioned the cause, saying no lights were on in the barn when the fire began. White also said he saw a car leaving his property soon after he heard noises in the barn area. Christian, however, said investigators feel it was the vehicle's occupants who made a 911 emergency call to the county fire department from a convenience store about a mile from the White's home.

It's On City Property

Sanford Employees Bid To Rent Home

By Karen Talley Herald Staff Writer

An abandoned three-bedroom home in a remote area west of Sanford has become a hot property for six city staffers who are literally bidding to move in.

The home lies on a 12-acre parcel Sanford commissioners bought last fall for development as a well site.

The wells' development within the next few years won't affect the home, which city officials say may ultimately be used for parks and Until a permanant use is determined, city commissioners have endorsed staffs' proposal for an employee to rent the home.

Other agencies such as the Seminole County Commission have made similar arrangement with employees for rentals at "remote sites," according to Engineering and Planning Director Bill Simmons.

Simmons is holding an "open house" for the six interested city employees this afternoon, it will be followed with an invitation for them to submit confidential rental bids and the highest bidder receives a lease from the city, he said. The lease will be for a year, with probably an option to renew, he said.

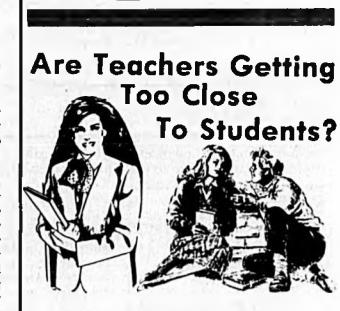

"The rental is a way for the city to protect its investment," according to Simmons. "You could pretty well write the home off if you let it sit empty for three, four or five years."

The rental arrangement was initially discussed with one employer in January, then opened to others as word of the home's availability got around city hall.

The six staffers have all been recommended to Simmons by their department heads, he said. The tenant will provide on-site security in exchange for a relatively low rental fee, initially estimated by City Manager Frank Faison at around $225 a month. Faison offered the estimate to commissioners when he and Simmons received their nod to work on the rental arrangement last month.

The rent bids will be opened by Simmons at city hall Monday afternoon. A proposed lease agreement will then be worked up and presented to commissioners in regular session the following week. Simmons said.

Sentences Meted In 3 Drug Cases

A Longwood man who gave agents permission to search his car was been sentenced to five years of probation. It was one of three cases heard recently.

Calvin Britton, 34, of 339 Longwood Ave., Altamonte Springs, was also ordered by Circuit Judge O. H. Eaton Jr. to complete 100 hours of community service.

According to an arrest report. agents of the City-County Investigation Bureau reported finding a match box containing several pieces of crack cocaine in his vehicle, which had been stopped on Marker Street near Altamonte Springs in early September. Britton had been charged with possession of cocaine with intent to distribute but pleaded guilty to the lesser charge of possession of a controlled substance.

In a second case, a Sanford man was sentenced to 120 days in jail and five years probation for possession of more than 20 grams of marijuana.

Michael Muscato, 19, of 5636 Deer Path Lane, was given credit for five days already served. Two codefendants await final disposition of their cases.

According to an arrest reprt. Muscato and the other men were arrested after agents spotted a greenhouse from the air. The agents. from several law agencies, had received a tip that marijuana was being grown in the area.

They confiscated more than 100 pounds of the illiegal plant, some of them up to seven feet

The greenhouse was near the Deer Path location, behind 13 Oaks Campground in the Seminole Woods area off State Road 46, records show.

A man questioned in connection with the return of an overdue vehicle then charged with possession of cocaine has been sentenced to a year of probation and three weekends in

Ronald David Haywood, 25, of 305 Wymore Road, Altamonte Springs, was sentenced by Circuit Judge S. Joseph Davis

According to an arrest report. police determined that the rental car Haywood was driving in July had not been returned to its owner in Lee County in May and had been reported stolen. Police stopped the vehicle because it had an expired tag. During a search, police reported finding a small container of cocaine in the glove box of the car.

Also dismissed by the board was a charge against the Seminole County School Board because of a violation charged against it - involving debris and garbage accumulations -- was corrected before Tuesday's enforcement hearing.

The debris had accumulated in an alley behind the Manna Haven soup kitchen, which is housed in a building owned by the school board. The 519 Palmetto Ave. school board property also had litter on it, city building inspectors said after a visit last month. The conditions had been corrected when the site was visited Tuesday morning. City Building Inspector Dan Florian said.

The report prompted dismissal of the violation charge.

The city's charge against the visited the store and was told its restroom was not open to the public.

The violation was filed "when the general manager said they didn't allow people to use the store restroom, because access to it is through a storage room." Florian said. City ordinance requires businesses to have public restrooms. Complaints from the public are checked out and shopkeepers told of the requirement if they are not providing the facilities. Florian said.

While most business owners comply without their cases having to come before the code board. General Nutrition Center first wanted to check with their attorney before allowing the access. Florian said.

Word that the restroom would be open to the public came at Tuesday night's code board General Nutrition Center came hearing from Marie Jones, manin January when Florian said he ager of General Nutrition Center.

Rights Issue Scuttles 2nd-Degree Murder Case

By Deane Jordan Herald Staff Writer

Constitutional rights were the foundation of a decision to dismiss a second-degree murder case against a former Altamonte Springs man accused of shooting his "buddy" between the

James Carmine Palazzo's rights were violated when officers began a homicide investigation at the scene of a shooting that appeared to be a suicide. court records show. The case was dismissed Friday by Circuit Judge O.H. Eaton Jr., three days before the time ran out to try Palazzo, 38, formerly of 109 Larkspur Drive. Eaton was the last circuit judge to handle the case. It initially appeared before Circuit Judge Robert B. McGregor, then before the justices of the 5th District Court of Appeal, and then back to Eaton, who took over McGregor's docket when McGregor started hearing juvenile

The dismissal of the case connected with the death of Robert DiSano, 24, on May 10, 1983, in Altamonte Springs. leaves his family feeling as if there is nowhere to turn, according to comments made to reporters at their home in Rhode Island.

The Palazzo case was one that took almost four years to resolve. The sheriff's department did not finish its investigation until almost a year after the shooting. The state did not take up the case until almost two years after the incident. Two and a half years after the shooting the state was appealing the suppression of evidence. The dismissal was three months shy of four years after the fact.

DiSano, a handsome 200-pounder and star football player, had been a "guest" at Palazzo's home for a three or four weeks before he was shot, according to court records. He didn't smoke, didn't use drugs, and had no girlfriends, according to reports. He and Palazzo were both from Warwick, R.I. In December, Palazzo received permission to leave the state to visit relatives and get married.

The two points the dismissal rested on were improper search and violation of Palazzo's Miranda rights, that is the right to remain silent and to have an attorney present while being ques-

Palazzo's attorney. Leon B. Cheek III. of Casselberry, successfully argued that much of the physical evidence officers collected after the near 3 a.m. shooting could not be admitted into evidence because the sheriff's department did not have a warrant or cause to believe when they began the investigation that a homicide occurred.

When McGregor agreed with Cheek.

he gutted the state's case. Assistant State Attorney Kurt Erlenbach said the case was an arguable one with all the physical evidence and not much of a case without it.

According to court records, when officers arrived they had no reason to believe a homicide had been committed. They had received an anonymous call that there had been a shooting. They were met at the door by Palazzo who said his "buddy" had been hurt and he needed help, records show.

The officers found DiSano in the hallway of the home, a gun in his right hand, a bullet hole between the eyes.

McGregor ruled that the things the police could readily see near the body could be entered into evidence but not other evidence they sought out.

Allowed into evidence was the murtler weapon, a .25-callber semiautomatic and tennis shoes, apparently worn by DiSano and seen in the hallway. Ruled out: a spent cartridge on the kitchen floor, a shirt, a holster, a bloody face towel, what ever may have been on the edge of the bathtub or in the kitchen sink, tissue on the dining room table. Also knocked out were comments Palazzo made before being read his rights sometime between one and 11/2 hours after police arrived and long after the body had been removed.

The police had some right to be at the home until the emergency passed but if they had suspicions after that time that DiSano had not committed suicide they should have obtained a search warrant. records show.

The undisputed facts in the case are that Palazzo bought the fatal weapon in 1973, that he had a split lip when officers arrived and there were no gun powder marks about DiSano's wound. That indicates, according to sheriff's records, that he had been shot from at least four feet away. He also had a small cut on his right hand, according to the autopsy. The last undisputed fact was that Palazzo told the first officer on the scene that there was no one else in the house, though court records say he lived in the home with a girlfriend and

While the police were there Palazzo was seen washing his hands in the kitchen sink and tending the split or freshly cut lip, records show. He was "very much in control, not excited." He was also called "calm but very cocky." and polite, according to the court records. He did tell investigators that he and DiSano had been fooling around. That was before he was read his rights.

"The police presumed that they could come in and look around. There's no authority to do so in a person's 1983 and $10,000 in 1985, the year of home." McGregor wrote. The Fifth DCA the arrest and appeal.

in Daytona Beach agreed.

Cheek wrote in his motion for dismissal Friday that "the undisputed material facts fall to discount reasonable hypothsis consistent with innocence." He said the shot could have been self-inflicted, there could have been a third person involved or it could have been in self-defense. He said there was "no evidence to prove criminal

Palazzo was free on $5,000 bond during the legal punting. Cheek said he does not know where Palazzo is. A bondsman who's company is listed in sheriff's records as ball Palazzo out of iail said he didn't recognize Palazzo's name and particulars about the case. He recommended a call back in a week or so after he checked company

According to court records, Palazzo turned the Larkspur Drive home over to his father, Angelo A. Palazzo of West Warwick, R.I., in August, 1985. The transfer was for money James Palazzo received from his father on five occasions since August 1979, the same month Palazzo bought the house.

Records show Palazzo got $15,000 in 1979 from his father, $7,000 in 1980, $15,000 the month of the shooting in

America's Fiscal Predicament

After a year in which the Consumer Price index rose only 1.1 percent, a revival of rapid inflation might seem unlikely. But prudent people will at least consider the possibility.

Several negative factors are at work. Oil prices are on the rise again, after having contributed heavily to last year's gains against inflation. The money supply has grown a whopping 17 percent in the last 12 months, a development that normally would generate inflationary pressures. The dollar is rapidly losing value against foreign currencles, a change that eventually will make many imported products more expensive.

Moreover, once the inflation rate starts rising substantially, it will tend to feed on itself as labor unions become bolder about trying to recoup lost purchasing power.

The sad part is that the United States has few short-term options for dealing with inflation if it does become a major problem. The Federal Reserve Board could tighten up on the money supply and raise interest rates. However, that probably would push the fragile economy into a recession.

What the Fed seems more likely to do is try to tread a narrow path between recession and inflation. But that becomes very difficult when the government is more than $2 trillion in debt and Americans are consuming vastly more than they produce - the difference roughly consisting of imports purchased with money borrowed abroad.

It's little wonder, then, that Treasury Secretary James Baker is trying hard to get West Germany and Japan to pump up their domestic economies. The hope is that increased Japanese and German domestic spending will head off a global recession, giving the United States a chance to deal with its debt problems without throwing the economy into a tallspin.

Even if Baker gains the foreign cooperation that he seeks, it won't count for much unless he also gets the cooperation of his boss. President Reagan's opposition to a tax increase and insistence on excessive military spending are two of the main reasons for America's fiscal predicament.

Furthermore, unless Americans sharply increase their investment and productivity, they cannot expect any long-term relief from the inflation-recession dilemma. Devaluation of the dollar and stimulation of other countries' economies are, at best, temporary remedies.

$9 Billion Lesson

What a costly economics lesson the 1983 Emergency Jobs Appropriations Act turned out to be. Congressional leaders touted the $9 billion program as a means of providing hundreds of thousands of jobs to help pull the United States out of its worst recession since the Great Depression.

But 15 months and $3.1 billion later, the program had produced only 35,000 jobs at a cost of $88,571 each, according to a report from the General Accounting Office. During the same period, from March 1983 to June 1984, private enterprise created 5.8 million new jobs as the unemployment rate dropped from more than 11 percent to 7.4 percent.

Why didn't the jobs bill work? For the same reason most federal job programs fail. The government reacts too slowly to changing economic conditions and then wastes valuable time and money implementing its

The GAO report should dispel the notion that federal job programs are a cost effective way of combatting unemployment. If it does, the 1983 act will have served a useful purpose, after all.

Parking Bill: Maybe Reagan Will Veto It

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Although both houses of Congress voted against raising the pay of lawgivers, the salary increase presumbly became effective last week anyhow.

Still pending, however, is a bill to broaden their parking privileges in the District of

The pay raise, proposed in President Reagan's new budget, presumably became effective because the House voted against it a few hours

Thank goodness, the resolution gave other public servants a pay boost as well. Otherwise, in the case of the federal judiciary, we maight have been treated to continuation of the spectacle of lawyers making money more than judges.

It remains to be seen whether our senators and representatives will be equally selfsacrificing with respect to parking legislation offered by the District's non-voting delegate. Walter Fauntroy.

Fauntroy introduced the measure while the Capital was still recovering from two snowstorms that dumped up to 24 inches in the

The snowfail, which unfortunately covered Capitol Hill as well as the rest of the city, may have pointed up the need for looser parking restrictions.

Other motorists, stalled in traffic, need to encounter the auto of a congressman, snowbound but ticketless, in a no-parking zone, making driving conditions worse.

Then they could get behind Fauntroy's bill to lift restrictions on congressmen with respect to rush-hour parking, building entrances and other no-parking areas.

Talk about pressure! If senators and House members, in the face of administration efforts, voted against Reagan's move to raise their annual base pay from the old level of $77,400 to the new $89,500, you can imagine the president's reaction if they started turning down 'perks" as well.

Make no mistake about it. Fauntroy's measure clearly comes under the heading of perquisite.

At present, members of Congress and certain of their aides can only park free at such places as the Capitol and airports.

They still would not be allowed to park in the district's fire or loading zones. But the proposal definitely makes it easier to find a place to put the car when they want to stop at some spot for a quick one before heading home. The rest of us would continue to risk fines. wheel "boots" or towing if we parked in a restricted zone while frequenting a bar in the neighborhood.

If they turn their backs on Fauntroy, the next thing we know members will be repealing the provision that allows them to keep 30 percent (House) to 40 (Senate) percent of the fees, also known as honoraria, they receive for speaking or writing. Should that happen, there surely would be internal attacks on other congressional perks we want our lawgivers to have, such as travel and mail allowances.

Who could blame the president, confronted by such provocations, with feeling a bit itchy to wield his veto pen? He's supposed to look after our interests, isn't he?

VIEWPOINT

Illogical Political Thinking

By Marvin Alisky

TEMPE, Ariz. - In a recent New York Times poll conducted in Mexico, 48 percent of the population stated its opinion of the United States government as favorable; 27 percent reported an unfavorable opinion, and 25 percent had no opinion either way.

Consider this finding against the Mexican mass media that build liberal bias into most reports about the U.S. And consider the typical posture of Mexican politicians, who frequently take cheap shots at Washington.

President Miguel de la Madrid has cracked down on the worst of the Mexican wheeler-dealers who, during the time of his predecessors, drained away billions of national treasury dollars for personal use. Active under President Luis Echeverria (1970-1076) and President Lopez Portillo (1976-82), some of these corrupt Mexicans are now

Yet, de la Mardid has blamed U.S. creditors for Mexico's economic woes rather than those who misappropriated the large sums. In matters of foreign policy, de la Madrid still plays to the crowd. He praises the contadora process, which is merely a fig leaf covering the naked repression inside Nicaragua.

The Contadora verbiage is an endless, mindless babble about bringing peace to Central America by having all parties sit down and talk things out. It never mentions the deluge of Soviet weapons pouring into Nicaragua. Though Mexico's leaders frequently criticize a U.S. presence in Central America. they are silent about the 6,000 Cubans training the Nicaraguan army and conducting propaganda classes as they run the Nicaraguan adult literacy campaign.

In the face of such one-sidedness from Mexican politicians and their resulting media-hype covered by Mexican newspapers, magazines, radio and television, the New York Times poll is indeed encouraging. The Mexican people have managed to resist the anti-Yankee onslaught. They continue to admire U.S. freedom for residents and the flexibility of the U.S. economy to provide for those who work in a privateenterprise system.

Those surveyed were mostly in cities, for Mexico's population has become 67 percent urban. To reflect the views of rural Mexicans, the Times added a supplement of Interviews in communities of under 2.500 people.

DON GRAFF

U.S. Dollar Dilemma

"General Motors and Toyota are turning out identical cars on their Joint venture assembly line in 17 percent since the yen has been alfornia, but the GM car has to be priced hundreds of dollars less in the showrooms because it's got an American name.'

That comment, by an employee at a foreign car shop in the Washington, D.C., area, is borrowed from a recent New York Times story headlined: Trade Desicit Persistent Despite Dollar's Fall.

That is not, of course, what was supposed to be happening about now. The virtual free fall of the dollar against the West German mark and Japanese yen during the past half year or so was supposed to make 1.) American products comparatively less expensive and therefore easier to sell on world markets, and 2.) foreign products more expensive in this country, thus curbing the American appetite for Imports.

But despite a December narrowing of the monthly deficit, which engendered muted optimism in some quarters, the indications are that it is not likely to work out that way in the long run.

Why not is implicit in another recent Times story, with the emphasis again on autos. The problem is not confined to this one industry - Americans have also taken foreign-made clothing, electronics and a host of other consumer goods. But Detroit does provide an especially vivid example of how not to go about dealing with the problem.

The three major U.S. producers are now warning that despite the cheaper dollar and more expensive yen, the automotive portion of our trade deficit with Japan is goingt to show another steep increase this year - up to a predicted $40 billion from $33 billion in 1986.

Although the tags on Imports have gone up an overall average of appreciating, the Detroit Three want Washington to put the arm on the Japanese to charge even more because, complains a Chrysler executive, "the pricing mechanism Just isn't working."

He is wrong. It is working more or less as could be expected, despite the best efforts of Chrysler and company to rig It otherwise.

A bit of history: A quarter of a century ago, the American auto industry deliberately wrote off the low end of the American auto market. It chose not to compete in small, economy models where the profit margin was insignificant compared to what could be realized on the option-loaded road cruisers. Some 10 percent of U.S. buyers were abandoned to the foreign "tin cans" - Volkswagen, Honda and the like.

You know what happened. Within a few years, 10 percent had risen to 30 percent and more. Worse, customer loyalty came into play. Americans liked the performance of their tin cans. When they began buying up, they continued to buy foreign. Toyota no longer stood for economy alone, but also reliability.

Detroit was now alarmed. Next came the quotas on Imports, with predictable results. In shorter supply, Japanese cars became even hotter Items. Bargains disappeared. Nissan and Mitsubishi could sell every vehicle shipped here, and used the opportunity to move into Detroit's chosen upscale preserve.

Now, Detroit wants another self-defeating quick fix. But again, it's got the problem wrong.

It is not primarily one of price. By now, as the Times noted in the first report cited above, foreign cars have "a cachet of quality,"

WASHINGTON WORLD Welfare

Week For Reagan

By Ira R. Allen

WASHINGTON (UPI) - This is "welfare reform week" at the White House, in which President Reagan made a lofty speech about ending the cycle of dependency addicting millions of poor Americans to a welfare system he calls a "poverty

Reagan's stated goal is to put the responsibility for helping the "truly needy" on the states and localities. which, he believes, can better serve the poor than the federal govern-

Although he is talking only about state-run experiments that would get the same level of federal money as now, what Reagan may be alming for down the road is a system under which the states spend what they want to on welfare - based on a level of taxation they feel they can get away with - and hope that corporations, churches and private donations take up the

That was the system that existed when Reagan grew up in the early part of the century. But when it falled, the New Deal brought forth a system that provided Depressionera jobs, income and a sense of self worth to two people in Illinois named Reagan - the future president's father and the future president's brother.

"The issue here is really compassion," Reagan said in his speech this week.

But in his decades in public life as spokesman for General Electric. governor of California, candidate for president and finally as president -Reagan apparently grew distant from his roots. He derided welfare and its recipients, although he did. with substantial Democratic help. streamline the California system when he was governor.

When Reagan says he wants to reform welfare out of a sense of "compassion" for the poor, a look at the record is justifled.

He campaigned in 1976 about a "welfare queen" in Chicago who didn't exist. He told a "joke" about how an employee went to his boss to demand a salary cut so he could be eligible for welfare. He told an apocryphal story about a man who bought vodka with food stamps. And more recently, he told visiting members of Congress a rambling story about a homeless family being put up in an expensive New York

JACK ANDERSON

Turks Diligently Guard Soviet Border

By Jack Anderson And Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON - The Soviet soldiers down in the valley at the Arrpacay dam were so close that their facial features and their foggy breath in the nippy air could be made out through low-grade binoculars from the Turkish side of the

No magnification was needed to identify the face painted in red and white, nearly 14 feet high, on the side of the Soviet protocol building. It was Lenin, and when it appeared some years ago, the Turks responded by painting a portrait of equal size on their protocol building of modern Turkey's founder,

Aside from the artistic competition, there was a deceptive feeling of tranquility when Dale Van Atta made a rarely permitted visit to this key position on the 378-mile Turkish-Soviet border. He interviewed Turkish soldiers put there to block what has been a traditional Russian invasion route over the centuries.

"Because it's the border, we're proud to serve here," said a 21-year-old soldier who had been on duty there for a year, one of 500 at the post overlooking the shared dam in the valley.

There is a border fence - on the Soviet side. "We have no concern that Turks will escape to the Soviet Union," an official explained with a smile. Once a month, the Soviets and Turks have a protocol meeting at one or the other of the border bulldings. There is no camaraderic between the two opposing forces. A 20-year-old Turk explained that his standing orders were to arrest anyone who crossed the border from Soviet Armenia. If the intruder opened fire, the Turk had orders to shoot back.

What If a full-scale Soviet attack came? "We will try our best or die in the attempt," said a 32-year-old tank commander calmly. Under questioning, he conceded that the Turkish border force wouldn't stand much of a chance.

Tactically, the best bet would be to fall back on the nearby town of Kars and then to Erzurum, where NATO nuclear weapons are deployed. Retreat would be in order because the Turks' weaponry is antique by military standards. Their principal tank, the U.S.-made M-48, dates to the Korean War era. No tank traps have been constructed, even though the Soviets have a contingent of some 5,000 modern T-64 and T-72 tanks ready to roll less than 30 miles away. And a chemical attack preceding a Soviet invasion would wipe the Turks out," according to an American official. "They have hardly a gas mask among them," he explained.

But the Turks are not taken lightly by the Soviet high command. Their ferocity and determination in defense of their eastern border near Mount Ararat includes the do-or-die sacrifice of an entire Turkish division, which froze to death, legend has it, rather than retreat in the face of Russian invaders.

"We know that from the lowestranking general, they will fight to it."

the last man," said an American colonel in the capital city of Ankara. "They'll do it. They are exactly the kind of ally we need on that front." Then he added with some exasperation: "But we expect them to fight with slingshots and crossbows in this modern era."

The Turkish military is not so pessimistic. They understand that they would not fight alone - that America would be with them. They count on U.S. nuclear deterrence to keep the Soviets from invading. "If there were a war with Russia, it is going to be (in alliance) with the United States," a Turkish intelligence officer said.

The Turks know it would be no picnic, though. Standing in the office Florence Nightingale used in Istanbul's Schmiye Barracks during the Crimean War, the same officer was asked if the barracks would again house wounded in a future war. "We won't have time to think about it," the Turks said. ranking private to the highest- won't have a chance to think about

Probes Seen For Possible Iran-Contra Perjury, Cover-up

WASHINGTON (UPI) - New twists in the Iran-Contra plot have drawn a call from Capitol Hill for a probe of possible perjury by U.S. officials and reportedly have led the president's own special review board to study whether a cover-up was attempted.

Still another report has revealed President Reagan and White House chief of staff Donald Regan held personal briefings for private citizens who donated millions of dollars to a project code-named "Toys" that bought weapons for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The specter of perjury was raised Thursday by Rep. Lawrence Smith, D Fla., a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee that conducted early hearings on the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the scheme to divert profits to the Contras.

The specter of a cover-up was raised by The Washington Post, which reported today that the special three-man panel Reagan set up to review operations of his National Security Council has moved beyond its original mandate to explore any attempts to hide what has erupted into Reagan's worst political crisis.

Klan Ordered To Pay $7 Million

MOBILE, Ala. (UPI) - An all-white federal jury made "civil rights history" by ordering an Alabama Ku Klux Klan faction to pay $7 million to the family of a black man who was beaten and hanged by Klansmen, the family's

The jury deliberated about four hours Thursday before making the award to the family of Michael Donald, which had sought $10 million from the United Klans of America of Tuscaloosa, Ala., one of the oldest and largest Klan

The suit was filed on behalf of the family by Morris Dees, head of the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., who said it was aimed at bankrupting the Klan and setting a precedent for holding the group liable for its members' actions. He told the jury a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs would "make civil rights history."

Donald, 19, was abducted while walking to a store to buy cigarettes and was beaten with a tree limb, slashed with a knife and then hanged from a tree in a racially mixed neighborhood near downtown Mobile in 1981.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - Israeli gunboats and helicopters pounded suspected Palestinian guerrilla bases for the second straight day today and Palestinian fighters nearby gave up disputed hilltop positions in a bid to end a Shitte Moslem slege of Beirut refugee camps.

A spokesman for the Shitte militia Amal said the Palestinian withdrawal from positions near the village of Maghousheh was not compelete and no emergency relief supplies of food and medicine would be allowed into Beirut's beleagured Burj Al Barajneh camp, where refugees face starvation and rampant disease.

The Palestinians accused Amal of shelling Burj Al Barajneh today, killing five children and seriously wounding 15 other people.

Islamic Jihad Claims Kidnapping

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) - The Moslem terror group Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for kidnapping an adviser to Christian President Amin Gemayel and demanded the release of "Moslem detainees" in exchange for his freedom.

A man claiming to speak on behalf of the Moslem extremist group made the claim in telephone calls to two radio stations hours after Jean Obeid was seized Thursday by nine gunmen in west Beirut.

Obeid, a foreign policy adviser to the Maronite Catholic president who frequently ventured into anarchy-plagued west Beirut for meetings with Moslem leaders, was abducted after meeting with House Speaker Husseln

"In the name of the Almighty," the telephone caller said, Obeid "will not be released unless all Moslem detainees in the jails of the Phalangist forces and their followers in east Beirut are freed."

Martinez' School Budget

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Union officials gave Gov. Bob Martinez high marks for his plans to boost education spending next fiscal year, but questioned whether his proposed 7 percent salary increase for teachers would be enough.

Officials of the Florida Education Association-United and the Florida Teaching Profession-National Education Association, the two rival unions, doubted the $220.3 million in raises would lure enough out-of-state teachers to meet the demands of Florida's growing population.

"The problem is that 7 percent is not going to make us any more comptetive than we are right now - and that is not very competitive," said Steve Geiger, vice president of the FEA. Martinez revealed his plans for Florida schools, colleges and universities Thursday in one of several planned previews of priority items in his $17.9 billion budget proposal. The budget will cover fiscal year 1987-88 and is due Feb. 20.

The raises would take effect July 1 and would also benefit librarians and other support staff. The money would be specifically earmarked for across-the-board raises - with details subject to collective bargaining - and Martinez promised similar increases next year.

Teachers who hoped for even larger increases under the state's career ladder above the level Martinez proposed.

incentive plan would have to wait until next year, however. Martinez said the $90 million program could wait until money becomes available from the new state lottery, which has not yet started.

Geiger said the plan will fail unless it is implemented immediately. Leroy Wilson, president of the FTP, said the plan was not a priority. "Teachers salaries are number one. then we can consider the career ladder" Wilson said.

The spending plan repudiates the "upper quartile" goals Democratic leaders announced for education several years ago. but have been largely unable to meet. The goals would rank Florida schools, colleges and universities among the top 12 states in terms of salaries, test scores and other measures of performance.

"When you start playing statistical games, I don't believe you're going to accomplish much," Martinez said. "I'd rather say we have not yet reached a point where we are paying teachers enough to hold them and to recruit the right amount. When we get to that balance, we know we are doing a good Joh.'

Commissioner of Education Betty Castor said she will continue efforts to bring salaries to the national average this year and was expected to seek raises worth an additional $170 million - about 5 percent

Push For Contra Aid Unaffected By Scandal

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Administration officials say the Iran-Contra crisis will not delay a request to Congress for $105 million in new aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, but the nation's top military officer warns U.S. public commitment to the Contras is in jeopardy.

Both the White House and the State Department denied a report Thursday that the administration is postponing its formal request for more Contra aid until September. Elliott Abrams, the assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, had said previously the request would not come until about then.

'We're not delaying anything," declared department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley. "It's simply that we have not made up our minds about when. ... We're not displaying weakness by waiting to choose the most appropriate moment."

Oakley said the $105 million request, included in President Reagan's fiscal 1988 budget proposal, would be made so new money can get to the Contras when the current $100 million in ald expires Sept. 30, the end of this fiscal year.

Strong congressional opposition is expected to the request because of the furor over U.S. arms sales to Iran and the scheme to divert profits from the deals to help the Contras at a time when it was illegal to offer U.S. military aid directly or indirectly to the rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist regime.

Congress Criticizes Health Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Prestdent Reagan's proposal for catastrophic-illness care is faulted by conservatives and liberals alike, drawing imoffering "far too little" to Americans facing huge medical bills. After weeks of withholding judgment, Reagan embraced the bulk of a proposal by Health Secretary Otls Bowen and told Congress Thursday he wants to expand Medicare coverage for catastrophic illness at an extra premium cost of $4.92 a month. The plan also would limit to $2,000 the out-of-pocket expenses paid for services now covered by both parts of Medicare. The Health and Human Services Department scheduled a news conference today to explain the legislation. A department spokesman said, "Now that Reagan has finally accepted a plan, we want to tell people the nuts and bolts of it."

In announcing his decision. Reagan said the plan offered 30 million elderly Americans "that last full measure of security" against the grim choice of bankruptcy or death.

Members of Congress in both parties were not so sure.

Hopson Derails Apopka

By Mark Blythe Herald Sports Writer

Junior Walter "Dunkman" Hopson scored a career-high 20 points and pulled down a career-high 15 rebounds to pave Seminole to a 66-46 hammering of Apopka in prep basketball Thursday night before 202 fans at the Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium.

The Tribe improved to 21.5 and will host Oviedo tonight in Seminole Athletic Conference play. The Blue Darters dropped to 8-14.

"Walter had a real good game tonight." Seminole coach Bill Klein said. "We have a lot of players on the bench who can come in and produce. I almost expect them to come in and play that way.'

Hopson who received more playing time with the absence of 6-8 Craig Walker, who is sidelined with stitches in his mouth, came in with 4:56 to play in the first quarter and immediately became a factor. Playing down low for the missing Walker, the junior forward was a major force for the Apopka offense and defense.

"This is my first real good game of the season." Hopson said. "Without Craig (Walker) in the middle things were a lot clearer and I could move around

Hopson scored eight out of the Tribe's 13 first-quarter points with his last hoop a vicious two-hand slam with 18 seconds

In the second quarter, Hopson picked up a pair of fouls and Klein was forced to bench the 6-4 leaper. Seminole changed gears with Jerry Parker reentering the game and began speeding by the Darters with Roderick Henderson hit a layup off a nice feed from Parker. The Tribe continued to play a scrappy defense which came up with three consecutive steals following the Henderson hoop.

Andre "Smooth" Whitney

converted on a reverse layup to up the Seminole lead to 17-13 with 6:52 to play. Brad Baird then connected on one of two from the line after Apopka's Robert Hardwick was called for an intentional foul.

Seminole was unable to take advantage, though, and the Darters' Leslie Pierce scored the games next four points to cut the lead to 18-17 with 4:24.

The Tribe turned on the juice again, however, and went into the intermission with a comfortable 31-22 lead.

Hopson brought Seminole back to life with another slam with 3:35 left in the third. After trading a pair of baskets with the Darters, Michael "Spud" Edwards came up with a steal and had Henderson on his left and Hopson on the right. Brian Burgett was the lone Apopka defender who leaned towards Henderson after Edwards made a fake. Edwards then sent a bounce pass to Hopson who went flying under the basket. dunking the ball on the opposite side for the bucket.

"The guy had his hands up so I did a reverse slam," Hopson said. "I'm just happy we won. It was important and proves to us we can play well without one of our top players in the game."

Hopson then scored the next four points and the Tribe took a convincing 43-29 third-quarter

"They (Seminole) are a real good team, with or without Walker," Apopka coach Oscar Howard said. "They are still as good as they were since the first time we played them."

Seminole came out very lethargic in the fourth quarter and Apopka scored the first eight points before Parker put down a jumper with 5:18 to play to lift the lead to 45-37. After the teams traded hoops Henderson was whistled for an intentional

Coach Dale Phillips and his Lions seek the answer to that question tonight as Oviedo invades Bill Fleming Memorial Gymnasium to battle Seminole Athletic Conference leader Seminole. Tiposf is 8

The Lions, 14-7 overall and 3-4 in the SAC, are the last team between the Tribe and a second consecutive conference championship. The Seminoles, 21-5, are 7-0 in the SAC and a victory tonight would put them beyond approach. They walloped Apopka. 66-46. Thursday as Walter "Tipman" Hopson poured in a career-high 20 points and pulled down a career-best 15 rebounds.

Lyman, Oviedo, Lake Mary, Lake Brantley and Lake Howell are each saddled with three or more losses. And, after tonight, there will be just two conference games to play.

Although the Lions were shocked by Lopez Wednesday. Phillips is far from intimidated heading into tonight's biggie. He points to a 22-point victory over Lyman and a 17-point victory over Lake Mary as confidence builders.

"We'll play a better game Friday than against Lopez. We better, if we want to stay within 30," he laughed.

Phillips admits his Lions are a little "up and down." He said, however, they have been more up recently because his guards and big men are starting to play bail.

Like Seminole, Phillips employs a three-guard attack. Terry Campbell, a starter last year, has moved into the lineup with Garth Bolton and Brian Wilson. Campbell has been in double figures several times as Oviedo has turned it around.

"We're getting better performances from the guards. Campbell, especially, has come in and done a good job."

Basketball

Phillips said. "Robb Hughes' play has picked up tremendously inside, too. And (6-6) Dana Hill is playing better, too.'

Phillips said his guards will have to outplay Seminole's guard for the Lions to win. "We will have to contain Seminole's guards offensively and defensively to beat them." he said. "I know (Roderick) Henderson will get his points inside. We will have to beat them on the perimeter."

Which means keeping Andre "Smooth" Whitney from 10 points, six assists and four steals; holding Jerry "Stick" Parker from 15 points and two steals: checking Michael "Spud" Edwards from five assists and three stcals.

"We are playing much better in the SAC." Phillips said. "But we have played a lot of games. Our scheduling is ridiculous. Friday will be the fifth game in eight days. We're not great physical specimens.

It is Seminole which has the specimens and Klein figures 6-4 Henderson. 6-8 Craig Walker, 6-10 Brad Baird, 6-4 Walter "Tipman" Hopson and 6-5 Steve Hathaway should be able to bang away against the lighter Lions inside. Henderson reverted to form against boards and five assists. Parker has been very consistent scoring-wise, accounting for 15-29 points each time out. Whitney has hit the boards with authority (five rebounds), too, but has been bothered by fouls. Edwards has played a steady floor game. Walker has been inconsistent. He leads the county with 9.8 rebounds and 3.9 blocked shots but his scoring (seven points) is below par.

Klein, who attained the 20-victory plateau against Lyman, said he would like a few more. "If we get to 30 (wins) we'll be all right," he said. "That puts us down at the state tournament. "We can do it if we play ball. But if we come out and play like goofs: the season will be over in two weeks."

The members of the team were shocked, saddened and angered when coach Bill Moore informed them of the news. What was most disappointing to the Lady Rams, though, was that they were knocked off their lofty perch not by a hard-playing opponent but by a bureaucratic decision they had no power to do anything about.

"I don't think it was fair to us," senior guard Tonya Lawson said. "I don't understand the ruling. She (Olden) is from another country and laws that regulate students in the U.S. should apply to students only in Oviedo, 12-6-3, advances to the tournament final Saturday night at 12 noon against Bishop Moore at Bishop Moore.

Brick's first PK came less than three minutes into the game Thursday after he was taken down in the penalty box. Oviedo made it 2-0 before the half ended when Scott Walsanen scored on an assist from Brick. Allen Tuttle, the author of a brilliant 81-18 won-loss record during his three years as Lake Mary baseball coach, does not offer an outrageous prediction concerning his '87 squad.

"I'd like to play the same amount of games as last year," Tuttle said Thursday afternoon. And win one more.

Tuttle's Rams marched to Seminole Athletic Conference, district and regional championships before losing to Gonzalez Tate club in the finals of the Class 4A State Baseball Tournament. All told, the Rammies dominated in Central Florida, finishing 32-3 while setting a county record for victo-Tuttle said two important graduations were pitcher Mike Schmit (Florida State) and third baseman Mike Pinckes (Indian River Community College). Pitcher-first baseman Neal Harris (Florida Southern) and outfielder Brett Molle were also key losses. Schmit was a perfect 15.0 while Pinckes carried the hot stick during the playoffs. Both led by example.

Wilson Qualifies, Crash Stops Sacks

DAYTONA BEACH - Ken Schrader might have won the first Twin 125 mile event at Daytona International Speedway Thursday but two local drivers did right well themselves.

Rick Wilson of Bartow started in the fifth position with a speed of 206.247 mph and Greg Sacks in the Winter Park-based Dingman Brother Pontiac started 18th with a speed of 201.428.

Parsons' Contingent Gains On The Fords

DAYTONA BEACH (UPI) -Benny Parsons headed a contingent at the Daytona 500 that says it is gaining on the Fords.

Parsons, winner of one of Thursday's twin qualifier races, gave General Motors drivers optimism for Sunday's Daytona 500 when he captured the second of the 50-lap, 125-mile races. Ken Schrader beat Bill Elliott by four inches to win a battle of Ford Thunderbirds in the first race.

Both Parsons and Schrader won $22,000. The time of the first race - which had three caution flags for 17 laps - was 57 minutes, 31 seconds, with an average speed of 130.397 mph. The second race took 41:02, with an average of 182.778 mph.

Since the first wave of qualifying Monday, it appeared the Fords - which had the three fastest qualifying times - were faster than the rest of the field. Many drivers had commented that the Thunderbirds were just too strong.

By winning a race that included Davey Allison — Sunday's outside polesitter in a Ford - Parsons said he removed some kinks from his car and is ready for the Daytona 500.

Parsons is driving Tim Richmond's Chevrolet for Owner Rick Hendrick while Richmond recovers from pneumonia. Parsons said he did little work on the car in practice.

The twin qualiflers determined the third through 30th starting positions for Sunday's race. The first two positions were determined in qualifying Monday. Elliott will start on the pole and Allison will be on the outside pole. The final 10 starting positions were determined using qualifying times of cars that did not qualify Thursday, and two provisional starters were added to make a 42-car field.

Parsons edged Bobby Allison. driving a Buick, by one second. Defending Daytona 500 champion Geoff Bodine was third in a Chevrolet, followed by Sterling Marlin in an Oldsmobile and Harry Gant in a Chevrolet. Darrell Waltrip finished third in a Chevrolet in the first qualifying race, followed by Buddy Baker in a Chevrolet and Rick Wilson in an Oldsmobile.

Gardening

Don't Forget To Feed Hungry Landscape Trees

Sometimes, we forget that our landscape trees get hungry. It seems that we make sure our azaleas, hedges, shrubs, and lawns get their fair share, but completely forget about our beautiful shade trees. And, this is a good time to get this chore out of the way.

The only way you can properly feed your trees is to know about the different fertilizers that are available. Most of our landscapes contain an assortment of trees. And, to simplify the job, you can generally use a complete fertilizer - one containing the three major nutrients needed for best growth. This means for most trees you can use a 6-6-6 or 8-8-8 all-purpose garden

To calculate the correct amount of fertilizer you need for a tree, you need to know the diameter of the trunk. This should be measured four feet above the soil level. For trees with trunk diameter of six inches or less, apply three pounds of fertilizer for every inch of trunk diameter. For trees with trunk diameters larger than six inches, use five pounds of your complete fertilizer for each inch of diameter of trunk.

The best way to apply the fertilizer that you have weighted out for each specific tree is to punch holes in the soil about a foot deep with a crowbar, jack handle or similar tool. Space your holes out about 18 inches apart throughout the area beneath the leaf canopy of the tree. Then, pour your fertilizer into each of the holes until the correct amount has been used up. Now, if you can't use this system for one reason or another, you can divide the total amount required for a particular tree into three parts. Broadcast one-third of the amount on top of the soil beneath the tree now, make your second application in mid-June, and a third application in early October. This is not as effective as the hole punching method. particularly if you have grass growing beneath the tree - It will grow like crazy!

Friday, Feb. 13, 1987-9A

Alfred Bessesen Urban Horticultrist 323-2500 Ext. 181

But the broadcast system is much better than no feeding at all.

Don't neglect your palms, either. They, too, need their fair share of fertilizer. You can use a special palm fertilizer mix or a regular all-purpose complete fertilizer with a high percentage of nitrogen, such as a 16-4-8 or 12-4-8. If you can get a complete fertilizer with additional minor elements. the palms will certainly benefit.

Young palms with no clear trunk need about one to three pounds of fertilizer for each feeding. Palms with clear trunks should receive one-half to one pound of fertilizer per inch of trunk diameter per feeding. Feed your palms three times a year. Make your first application now, another in mid-summer, and a third in early fall. The fall feeding will help increase cold tolerance and reduce the chance of nutrient shortages that may occur when the roots are less

Your palms can be fed by the same method described for your shade trees, or you can simply broadcast the fertilizer beneath the normal canopy.

When we consider fertilizers, the word "complete" comes to mind first. A complete fertilizer is one containing nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium — the three major elements needed for growth of any

But in our sandy soils, sometimes we have a shortage of some needed "minor" elements. These minor elements are needed in addition to the three major elements. Many of the all-purpose fertilizers contain these needed minor elements. You can tell by reading the contents on the fertilizer bag. These minor elements can also be applied in the form of a liquid spray. The all-purpose fertilizers containing the needed elements for plant growth including the minor elements may be a little more expensive, but from the plant's nutrient needs, the extra cost is well worth it.

On many of our soils, iron is deficient. And, you'll find this is an added minor element in many fertilizers. Iron deficiency symptoms appear on many landscape plants where the soil pH is high, either naturally on some soils, or where someone has limed the soil thinking that the poor response of plants is due to a low pH usually without having the soil tested before

Additional iron can be applied when needed by using iron sulfate or chelated iron mixed with water according to the instructions on the product label. No matter which fertilizer product you choose to use, always follow the manufacturer's instructions right

After making your fertilizer applications to your shade trees and palms, be sure to give them a thorough, deep watering. This activates the nutrients in the fertilizer and the tree's roots will be able to readily assimilate them. Our landscapes are fairly dry now, unless you're fortunate to have an irrigation system and have been watering about once a week or so. If not, better drag out the old hose and give all of your landscape plants and trees a good, deep drink. They'll love you for it. Happy gardening!

Have A Heart, Lend A Hand On This St. Valentine's Day

DEAR READERS: Don't tell me tomorrow is St. Valentine's Day again! We just finished with Christmas. Well, it's true, so be a sweetheart and call someone you love and say, "I love you." Make two or three calls. Who sald you can't love more than one person - in different ways, of course.

Go through your closets and get rid of all those clothes you've been saving until you lose 10 pounds. Your favorite charity can turn those good-as-new garments into money.

Visit someone in a nursing home and take him or her for a ride. Forgive an enemy, hug your children, neuter your cat, spay your dog, listen to a bore. tell your parents you appreciate them, send a donation to CARE. the Salvation Army or your United Way, fix up a date for someone who doesn't get many, quit smoking, get some exercise, count your calories, pay your dentist, donate some blood, return the book you borrowed, update your will, drive carefully. and if you're walking, thank God you're able to, and watch where you're going. And don't wait until next St. Valentine's Day to be a sweetheart again.

"I'm sorry" absolve a person from any further responsibility? I was wearing my best dress at a formal affair when a man I did not know accidentally spilled a drink on it. He said, "Oh, I'm sorry," then I pleasantly - not rudely - told htm I was sure he was sorry, but it would cost $10 to have the dress cleaned, and I thought he should pay for it.

He said he was not that sorry, and turned away. I might add that I then spilled my drink all over his tuxedo and told him that we were even now.

My question: Is saying "I'm sorry" enough? If he had hit my car, he would have had to pay for the damages — sorry or not. Isn't spilling a drink on someone just a smaller accident?

BOCA RATON ACCIDENT

DEAR BOCA RATON: A gentleman (or lady) who accidentally spills a drink on someone DEAR ABBY: Does saying should not need to be asked to pay the dry cleaning bill - it your hand, deftly move so that should be offered. The man who rebuked you was no gentleman. and repaying him in kind as you did was somewhat immature but that's another letter.

is saying "I'm sorry" enough? Certainly not. One puts his money where his mouth is.

DEAR ABBY: I could have written that letter signed "Touch-Me-Not." I was glad to see it because I thought I was the only person in the world who did not like to be touched by people I don't know very well. I am a woman, and I particularly do not like to be touched by men.

Now, please tell me - and other women like me - how to signal the touchers of the world to please keep their hands off me? I am not a cold person, but here's the way most men operate: First, they touch your hand, then they place a hand around your shoulder and tend to draw you closer, and unless they are stopped, before you know it, they have their arm around your waist, and so on. So how do I handle that situation? INDIANA TOUCH-ME-NOT

DEAR TOUCH-ME-NOT:

When a man whose advances you do not welcome touches you are not within his reach. If he repositions himself and touches you again, move - but not so subtly this time. If he either doesn't get the message or chooses to ignore it and places a hand on you, don't rely on body language - get verbal. If that falls — leave.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from "Perplexed in Washington State" who wanted to preserve her husband's tattoo for posterity: She should find a good taxidermist and stuff her husband in toto with tattoo bared for all to see. He would make a great living room conversation piece.

After all, the leg of some Union general is on exhibition in the Medical Museum in Washington, D.C., for visitors to ogle.

JIM GRIFFITH, CINCINNATI

DEAR MR. GRIFFITH: I thought you were pulling my leg, but my research disclosed the following: After Maj. Gen. Daniel Stickles' leg was shattered by a cannonball during the Battle of Gettysburg in 1863, the general himself sent the flesh and bones to the museum in a little black "coffin." He frequently went there to visit his leg, and even brought visitors to view it. There is even an example of the cannonball that did the

Court Upholds Death Sentence

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - The murderer of a Marion County retiree failed to prove his claim of inadequate counsel and does not have grounds for a new trial, the Supreme Court says.

Because of that, the court refused Thursday to overturn the death sentence given Dan Edward Routly for the 1979 killing of Anthony Bockini.

NEW PORT RICHEY, Fla. (UPI) - Two Orange County men were in the West Pasco Detention Center today on bank robbery charges, partly because one of the robbers wore a T-shirt advertising a motor company.

Jailed on three counts of bank robbery each were Timothy Whigham, 28, of Ococe, and his cousin Terral Lee Whigham Jr., 19, of Winter Garden.

Virus Found In Cats Causes AIDS-Like Disease

WASHINGTON (UPI) -California researchers have discovered a virus that causes an AIDS-like disease in cats, but claim in a report published today there is no evidence it can be transmitted to humans.

But researchers said the afflicted cats could be used to further study causes and possible cures for AIDS in humans.

The virus impairs a cat's immune system, producing symptoms ranging from swollen lymph glands to a variety of infections that eventually kill it after a few years.

"The virus, although it's in the same family as the human AIDS virus and has a lot of very close similarities, is distinctly cat. We have no evidence of transmission for anything but cat-to-cat," Dr. Nells Pederson, a professor of veterinary medicine at the University of California-Davis, said in a telephone interview Thursday.

"What we did not want to happen was a great deal of fear on the part of humans as to cats being a cause of the disease (AIDS). They're not," said Pederson.

Although the AIDS-like disease is probably fatal to a cat, immunologist Janet Yamamoto urged people not to kill their pets if they show signs of an immunodeficiency. Once word gets around about the virus, she said, veterinarians will be able to diagnose the disease and may be able to treat some symptoms.

"Please consult your vet before you do anything drastle to your cat," she sald.

Pederson said the team was contacting laboratories in the United States, Europe and Japan to find out how widespread the virus is.

The cat virus attacks T-cells, white blood cells that are crucial to defense against disease. These are the same cells attacked by the human AIDS virus, called HIV for human immunodeficlency virus.

new virus, christened FTLV for feline T-lymphotropic lentivirus, is also related to feline leukemla virus, which causes a form of leukemia in cats and for which a vaccine has been devel-

A problem in research on acquired immune deficiency syndrome has been that there is no way to cause the disease in laboratory animals for testing of treatments and vaccines.

Yamamoto and colleagues said the cat syndrome might be an easier model to work with because cats are cheaper than chimpanzees, the animals now used, and because the disease appears to mimic human AIDS more closely.

Stocks Open Mixed

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices opened mixed today in active trading of New York Stock Exchange

The Dow Jones industrial average, which fell 6.18 Thursday, was down 3.65 to 2162.12 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 479-430 among the 1,355 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape.

Early turnover amounted to about 10,996,200

The stock market posted modest losses Thursday in heavy trading, pressured by profit taking and news that three Wall Street professionals had been charged with insider trading. "The market was a mixed bag," said Dennis

Bid Ask

Jarrett, technical analyst at Kidder, Peabody. "It was volatile and vacillating, but underneath the surface, it maintained a pretty even keel.

Control of the contro

Stocks headed higher in morning activity but abruptly sold off at midday. Traders said some of that weakness emerged on news that the SEC had charged two Kidder. Peabody executives and the head of Goldman. Sachs's risk arbitrage department with insider trading.

Profit taking in two key groups of stocks pressured the market throughout the day, said Hildegard Zagorski, analyst at Prudential-Bache Securities. Oil issues retreated as the price of oil slipped below $18 a barrel. Semiconductor issues suffered when strength in a report on January orders disappointed some of Wall Street's more optimistic projections.

The decision now lies with Attorney General Edwin Meese amid the disclosure by the Simon Wiesenthal Center that another 74 suspected war criminals are believed to be living in the United States.

Jules Bergman, Network Science Editor, Dead At 57

Science Editor Jules Bergman, who died in his Manhattan apartment at age 57, became as "much a part of the space program as those ... who ventured to the moon" through his coverage of every U.S. manned spaceflight.

Bergman, who joined ABC in 1953, was found in the bathtub of his apartment at noon Thursday by a mald, police spokesman Louis Llanes said.

An autopsy was ordered. Bergman recently underwent surgery for a brain tumor and had cut back on his broadcasting duties, said Carol Olwert, a spokeswoman for ABC News.

Born in New York March 21, 1929, Bergman gained fame for his coverage of the NASA space program for three decades.

Starting in 1961 with the Mercury flight of Alan Shepard. Bergman covered every U.S. manned spaceflight, including the Challenger disaster last year. Olwert said.

He was named science editor in 1961, becoming the first full time network science editor in the nation, she said. He was

"Jules was probably the most knowledgeable broadcaster when it came to the space program," said Robert Siegenthaler, who produced the network's coverage of most spaceflights through the 1960s and 1970s.

"(Former CBS News anchorman Walter) Cronkite got most of the ink but Bergman did it all," he said.

As part of his coverage of the space program, Bergman underwent the same training as astronauts and visited Star City. the training center for Soviet cosmonauts outside of Moscow. Stegenthaler said.

In addition to the Challenger disaster, Bergman reported the deaths of three astronauts in 1967 and covered the explosion in 1970 as Apollo 13 headed for

"When the astronauts said they had a problem, Jules recognized it was much more of a problem than any other nonastronaut would have," Siegenthaler said.

"He was an accomplished pilot and covered the first flights of most military and commercial planes, often flying them himself," Olwert said.

Astronaut Eugene Cernan, who flew in space three times and walked on the moon, once -said Bergman "was as much as a part of the space program as those of us who dared venture to the moon.

"He lived the adventure of every step we took and found joy in sharing it with all Americans," Cernan said.

Bergman also covered medical breakthroughs such as heart transplants and cancer treatment. He covered the search for the cause of Legionaire's dis-

His last network broadcast was Jan. 22 when he covered a symposium on the future of space, Olwert said.

Bergman began his career in journalism at Time magazine in 1949 and soon moved to CBS. In 1950 he joined radio station WFDR in New York as a newscaster before moving to ABC.

He is survived by his wife, Joanna; two daughters, Karen and Beth; and a son, David.

It Looks Like A Duck, But Doesn't Quack Like A Duck

Duck Decoy Hunters

There are duck hunters and then there are duck decoy hunters. Yes, these lures to wildfowl are more sought after than the real birds, which are targeted only during hunting season.

Old, hand and machine carved wooden decoys, which are considered one of the first American folk arts, are tracked down not only by duck hunters, but by those who want them as a decorative touch for their homes, or as an investment.

Ronald Zeinick, 24, of Longwood, is a duck hunter who at age nine, under the influence of his duck hunting and duck decoy collecting father, became a decoy collector. He said that the value of the old decoys can range from $10 to tens of thousands of dollars.

Zeinick owns about 175 of these collectibles. He said he gambies and sometimes invests about $100 in a decoy that has been repainted. "It hurts the value if they've been repainted. There's two things you can do, leave them like they are, or you can gambie and try to take it down to the original paint very slowly, very carefully.

"I've been able to do that with about 15 birds. They turned out pretty nice. I've had about 20 that I tried stripping down that wouldn't do anything. It can be a waste of time. I might pay $100 for a good bird that's been repainted and hope that it turns out to be a $1,000 bird. You get lucky, but if it stays repainted and it's nothing, it's only a $100 bird. Those are the only ones I can afford. I can't put out $1,000 for a good quality bird.

But, some other collectors, many of whom only buy one or two decoys as decorative items, can and do pay thousands of dollars for them. About $0 percent of the old decoys available have been collected and the remaining 20 percent are still in the hands of hunters who haven't switched to the 1950s' innovation, plastic decoys, which have no collectible value, Zeinick said.

"Only 20 percent are out there waiting to be found. So, that makes it hard. Most of the birds that are out on the market have-started to change hands from dealer to collector to dealer. Prices are pretty well established," Zeinick said. And over the years, he said, many decoys that would be prized today have on cold days fueled home fires of hunters who didn't want to go outside to get fire wood. "They were wood, so they'd just throw them in the fire."

Others who have come across old decoys in barns and garages didn't appreciate their value and have thrown them in the trash or into bonfires, he said.

These decoys were seen as purely functional until they caught the eye of William Mackey Jr., in the 1920s and he started collecting them as a folk art. In 1925, Zelnick said, Mackey publish the first book about decoy collecting and in 1927 in New York, held the first public showing of decoys as folk art.

Indian ways they too began making decoys, carving them from wood and painting them to resemble the hunted fowl.

Decoys became very popular around 1870, when as "market hunters," marksmen might each kill 400 to 500 ducks a day to sell for from 50 cents to $4 each. "That's when the predominant decoys came around. After market hunting was made illegal in 1917 decoy making declined, until "some factories started making them for the sportsman," Zelnick said.

"Mason and Stevens were two of the earliest lactory birds. Stevens started making birds in 1870. Mason went into business about 1902. They went out of business in 1924 and Masons are among the more colletible birds."

Handcarved birds are highly prized as well, he sald, but factors, beyond the beauty of the decoy, come into play when establishing the value of these birds.

For a carver's birds to be highly collectible, he would have had to have been prolific enough to have created enough birds that today's collectors would have a reasonable chance of finding an example of his work. Those old decoys carved by more prolific carvers, who have established a reputation in part based on the volume of their output, outrank the work of carvers who perhaps were more artistically skilled, but who only made about 80 birds for their own use, Zelnick said.

"While they're nice birds they won't bring as much as those of carvers who made enought to get famous. Those that made quite a few birds, all of their birds, even in poor shape are worth over $1,000," he said.

The collector has to watch for contemporary craftsmen who are creating new birds, but expose them to the elements to give them the appearance of age. There are also craftsmen who are creating decoys today strictly as art. The top carvers competed for prizes for their works, which are made with great artistic skill.

The most colorful North American wildfowl, the woodduck, was rarely the subject of old-time decay makers, because woodduck, unlike most other birds, can be attracted by decoys of other types of birds. Zeinick does have an old woodduck decoy and he said their attractive. coloring, green, red, white and brown feathering, makes them a favored subject of today's carvers.

"It's hard to judge decoys," he said. "It's got to strike you. Each person has individual tastes in decoys." His most prized are a green winged teal hen with it's original paint from around 1904, and a little goose, in execelent condition, both made by Mason.

Zelnick said some believe that a name or initials on a decoy are those of the carver, but that most often isn't the case. The owners of the birds, who wanted to be able to identify their decoys after a hunt would put their own names or initials on the birds.

You Win: He Was 'The Real McCoy'

Dear Dick: I have a bet with my husband on the two following questions. I say that Richard Crenna is the same person who played on "The Real McCoys" as Luke. My husband says he isn't. Also, on "Lost in Space," is the father the same person who was Zorro on the original TV "Zorro" series? I say yes. My husband says no. -C.K., Ashland, Ohio.

Dear C.K.: It's not a good day for Mr. K. Crenna was Luke when he was much younger. Guy Williams did play Zorro, as well as John Robinson on "Lost in Space."

Dear Dick: Would you please tell me if I can buy the theme song from Bob Newhart's show. -G.D.M., Westerly, R.I.

Dear G.D.M.: As far as I can determine, that is not available on any record or tape. It probably will be, because it was written by Henry Mancini, and he usually records an album of his TV and movie themes every year or so. It's called "The Newhart Theme."

Dear Dick: I hope you can settle a bet for me. My brother says that the little boy who used to play in the series "Gentle Ben" has since grown up and committed suicide. I contend that not only is he alive, but played the part of a nursing home orderly in the movie, "Cocoon." Who's right? - T.G., Houston, Texas.

Dear T.G.: You contend accurately. Clint Howard is the person in question, and he did have a small part in "Cocoon," which was only fair, because it was directed by his brother, Ron.

Dear Dick: I would like to know if any of the following are alive: Mary Brian, Jean Arthur, Joel McCrea and his wife, Frances Dee, Esther and Jobyna Ralston, Ruby Keeler, Colleen Moore, Gwen Lee, Richard Arlen, Gene Nelson, Bessie Love, Anita Page and Charles King. They may be before your time. - K.F., Amarillo, Texas.

Dear K.F.: Very little is before my time any more. Of your list, these are still with us: Brian, Arthur.

McCrea, Dee, Esther Raiston, Keeler, Moore, Nelson and Anita Page. Jobyna Ralston died in 1967, Arlen in 1976, Love in 1986, Lee in 1961 and King way

Dear Dick: I would like to know if Mason Adams, formerly the managing editor on "Lou Grant," and now on many commercials, ever played on the radio show "Pepper Young's Family" as a young man. The voice seems the same. -Mrs. C.R.J., Clinton, Tenn.

Dear Mrs. C.R.J.: You have the ears of an eagle. There is no mistaking that voice. Adams was a "Pepper Young" stalwart for many years.

Dear Dick: Many years ago, Loretta Young hosted a weekly TV program. She opened the program by walking down a staircase in a beautiful ball gown. The background music was always the same. What was her theme song? -M.J.H., Broaddus, Texas.

Dear M.J.H: Loretta tells me she thought it was "interesting" that anybody would care about that song at this late date, but she says she appreciates your interest. She tells me that theme was written for the program by Harry Lubin and was just called "The Loretta Theme."
