POLICE BRIEFS

Loiterers charged

Sanford police arrested two men Tuesday near a pool room on Sanford Avenue. Charged with trespassing after warning, were David P. Willis, 23, 1403 Locust Avenue, and Hirtis Leonard Willis, 23, of 37 Castle Brewer Court. Officers said both men had been issued warnings the preceding day against loitering in the area. When they were found near the establishment the following day, they were both arrested.

Winter Springs arrest

Maurice Cherry Brown, 19, 112 Lakeside Circle, Sanford, was arrested by Winter Springs police Tuesday. Officers said they investigated when they saw his car parked on the shoulder of a street. During a check by an Ovideo K-9 dog, officers said they uncovered a 10 inch long knife and a bag of green leafy substance under the seat. Brown was charged with driving with a suspended/revoked license, having a concealed weapon, resisting arrest without violence, and possession of cannabis under 20 grams.

Burglary in progress

Sheriff's deputies arrested Rickey Wayne Johnson, 40, 3805 Pineway Ave., Sanford, near the intersection of Vilhen Road and Ruby Street on Tuesday. Deputies said they were responding to a call regarding a suspected burglary in progress. They reported finding a man and woman in the area, and following a check, discovered the man was in possession of a plastic bag containing items reportedly stolen from a nearby residence. Witnesses reported seeing the man enter and exit the building while the woman remained outdoors. Johnson was charged with burglary to a residence and criminal mischief. The woman was not immediately charged.

Theft solved

Sheriff's deputies arrested James Homer Bussard, 23, with no local address, in connection with a storage room burglary. According to the arrest report, on July 8, Bussard reportedly broke into a storeroom at a residence in the 600 block of Mimosa Terrace, and removed a surf board valued at $150. Deputies said he later pawned the item for $25. The report indicated Bussard had been arrested on an unrelated charge the same day as the reported burglary, and while he was confined to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. His connection with the case was not verified until Tuesday when the arrest was made for burglary and dealing in stolen property.

Trespasser arrested

Sanford police arrested Malcom Leroy Saunders, Jr., 50, of Hanahan, S.C., who was located in front of a business in the 2000 block of W. First Street Tuesday. The arrest report states that Saunders had been issued a warning against trespassing at the property on Monday, but they found him there the following day. Saunders was charged with trespassing after warning.

Warrants served

• Frederick T. Hendricks, 39, 218 Palm Drive, Sanford, was located by Sanford police in a parking lot on South French Avenue early Wednesday. He was wanted on a warrant for unemployment compensation fraud.

• Anthony Bernard Stewart, 30, 1216 Lincoln Court, Sanford, was located at the county jail Tuesday where he was being held on another charge. He was wanted on a warrant for violation of parole on a conviction of theft.

• A business burglary was reported Tuesday, also in the 3000 block of E. S.R. 46. A copy machine plus $906 in other items were reportedly stolen. Deputies reported several hundred dollars in damage was done during the burglary.

• A woman's purse containing an estimated $55 in property was reportedly removed from a store in the 600 block of Lake Mary Blvd. on Tuesday. Officers said the woman had left the purse on a copy machine to go outdoors and remove an item from her vehicle. They said when she returned, the purse was gone.

Incidents reported to Sanford police

• The southwest door of a restaurant was reportedly broken open in a burglary attempt early Wednesday at a restaurant in the 2700 block of Sanford Avenue. Police said an alarm apparently frightened the burglar, and nothing was reported missing, although $200 in damage was reported.

• A McIntosh computer, valued at $2,000 was reportedly stolen Tuesday from Hamilton Elementary School, 1501 E. 8th Street. Police said a door was pried open in a portable building for entry.

• A radio pager valued at $350 was reportedly stolen from a truck parked in the 1200 block of S. Park Avenue on Tuesday.

• A burglary was reported Tuesday in an occupied dwelling in the 800 block of Santa Barbara Drive. Police said entry was made through an unsecured front door. They reported a desk had been rummaged and $5 removed from a purse.

• Six truck tires with chrome rims were reportedly stolen Tuesday from the back yard of a residence in the 2500 block of El Portal Avenue. The tires and rims were valued at $200 each.

Abuse alleged: Brothers shoot dad

By ELLEN KNICKMEYER
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY — Lonnie Dutton's children stuck together, sometimes squeezing in four to a seat on the school bus.

This week, the two oldest boys, ages 12 and 15, acted as one again, deciding it was time to put an end to their father's alleged sexual abuse of their 10-year-old sister.

One held a deer rifle to his sleeping father's head, the other pulled the trigger, a lawyer for one of the youngsters says.

"Probably both were so scared neither one knew what to do separately," said Robert Perrine, the 12-year-old's court-appointed attorney.

Several times authorities had been to Dutton's rural home outside Rush Springs, a town of 1,200 about 50 miles southwest of Oklahoma City, to investigate relatives' allegations the unemployed, divorced man was abusing his three sons and his daughter.

On Monday, they found the 39-year-old dead on his couch, killed by a shot fired at close range.

The two boys are in the custody of juvenile authorities and probably will not be tried as adults, Assistant District Attorney Richard Van Dyck said. The state has turned their sister and 8-year-old brother over to an aunt.

Van Dyck said he could not otherwise comment on the case because it involved minors. But Sarah Evans, a lawyer for the 15-year-old, said the four were sexually, physically and emotionally abused, and the sexual abuse of their sister particularly disturbed the older boys.

The children were apparently too afraid of their father to say anything to the authorities who came to their home on a secluded, brushy piece of property to try to help, said Bill Chambers, the principal at the oldest boy's school.

A member of the football and basketball teams, the teen-ager gave no hint of problems at home, Chambers said. The principal said the only time he had to take the 15-year-old to task was when he heard the boy was throwing a basketball on the bus. The boy stopped.

"He was just an all-American, apple pie little boy," Chambers said.

The children had been isolated since school let out for the summer, forbidden by their father to bring friends over or to go to friends' homes, Chambers said.

"His dad taught him to stay to himself," Chambers said of the oldest boy. "I guess when it came to handling his problem, he solved it himself, just like he had been taught."

Life prison sentence commuted in slaying of husband

By CURT ANDERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Billie Jean Rains was released from state prison after Gov. Lawton Chiles and the Cabinet commuted her life sentence for the 1988 slaying of a husband who had abused her for years.

Mrs. Rains, 58, was freed Wednesday from Florida Correctional Institute in Lowell, where she had served nearly three years for fatally shooting 57-year-old Bill Rains while he was beating their son, Wayne.

Mrs. Rains, of St. Petersburg, became the second woman whose sentence was commuted under a new state program to take a closer look at convictions involving battered women's syndrome. The first, Kim Soubielle, was freed March 11.

At a June hearing before Chiles and the Cabinet, sitting as the Clemency Board, Mrs. Rains' daughter, Betty Metcalf, said her mother had suffered for years at the hands of a violent husband.

"I witnessed my mom being beaten many, many times," she said. "Bill was beating up my brother and choking him the night he died. My mother just flipped."

In a case analysis, Mrs. Rains told investigators she had been beaten for years by her husband. They were divorced twice but each time remarried.

"He would get me on the floor and kick me in the side until I would be so sore it would take three weeks for the soreness to go out," she said. "He would come in drunk and beat me. He would blacken my eyes."

Under the order signed by Chiles, Mrs. Rains must undergo a psychological exam and therapy if needed. Both must be approved and monitored by the Clemency Board.

"This case was pretty clear," Chiles said Wednesday. "It certainly appeared the battered woman syndrome was valid."

Chiles and the Cabinet, however, turned down a similar request from Rita N. Collins of Orlando, who prosecutors said had first tried to hire a hit man to kill her husband and then bought a gun herself six days before the slaying.

Although Mrs. Collins was also abused, the facts of her case were different, Chiles said.

Clemency staff had recommended against it, as did a special review panel appointed to examine claims of battered-wife syndrome. Testimony showed she had lured her estranged husband, John Collins, to her house and shot him.

"On the basis of the facts of that case, it did not appear to merit it," the governor said.

Mrs. Collins, 62, is eligible for parole in six to eight months anyway.

Fix it or demolish it

The City of Sanford has been very lenient in matters pertaining to the demolition of dilapidated buildings. Time extensions to repair buildings have been constantly granted at even the slightest sign of progress.

One residential home has been on the list of time extensions for over four years. A two-story unfinished business structure near a prominent intersection has also been on the verge of demolition for over a year.

The mayor and commissioners have publicly stated that the business structure has been an eyesore for a long time, yet time extensions have been given.

On the surface, Sanford may appear to be a city in the beginning stages of improvements. The Main Street program is working on refurbishing the downtown area, the Lake Monroe Waterfront committee is trying to improve that area.

Members of the Scenic Improvement Board are constantly awarding owners of remodeled buildings for their efforts. The Sanford Museum has been doubled in size and remodeled in keeping with the historical revitalization attempts in the city.

Yet the city commissioners continue to allow dilapidated structures to remain as eyesores. Most of them are off the tax rolls.

If progress in the physical appearance of Sanford is to be made, the city must tighten its requirements. If and when time extensions are granted once a building has been suggested for demolition, it must be for one specific time period with no additional extensions.

The owner should be required to have the house put back in livable condition and on the tax rolls. If not, either order the owner to demolish it, or have city crews do the work and place a lien against the property for the cost of the demolition to the city.

It sounds harsh, and may seem unfair to people who may not be able to afford restoring a house to meet city codes.

There may be some room for leniency, but only in a few cases. Most structures brought before the commission for demolition consideration are listed as vacant, open to vandalism, possible crack house, deteriorating, and otherwise unsafe.

If the people of Sanford are expected to work together in making it more attractive and a finer place in which to live, they need city commission support.

If the qualifications for building demolition are too weak, we urge that they be revisited and strengthened.

If they are already strong enough, we suggest the commission take off their kid gloves and put on their boxing gloves.

Thanks for display

What a beautiful display we saw on the Fourth of July. Everything was so exact, no one would have known the effort and time and devotion that went into making it possible. Only love for our country could have caused such devotion, to bring memories of our forefathers dying for the right to keep our land from ever having foreign blood spilt on our soil. Our history books tell of our American forefathers dying and finally winning on that glorious day. While looking out among the crowd I saw some eyes with tears, others with deep sorrow with memories of another era, another son, who also died to keep our shores free from gangs and violence.

Then I saw children with eyes bright and clapping of little hands. I wondered if their parents explained that it wasn't just a thing for fun, but also for the proud Americans who paid the supreme price for them to be there.

As I watched, something wonderful started to happen, a different look began to come across their faces. They also began to feel the love that was there all around them.

Now Orlando and Disney had larger displays but they didn't have what was here that made this the best in the world — we had love and devotion from a few men, working to put it on.

We are proud to have such dedication for our cause.

Thanks again for such a display of the American flag; people came to see just a display, but went away with respect for our flag and country.

Health care: the obvious solution

Ms. Rodham Clinton and her 500 little elves are still hard at work, secretly devising the health care plan that the Clinton administration intends to impose on the American people.

We are not being allowed to watch the process, presumably for the same reason that Bismarck warned sausage-lovers against watching the manufacture of sausage. But the Presidential Partner and various others in the know have said enough to make it clear that a huge new federal bureaucracy will be required to administer the program, and it will have to be paid for with upwards of $90 billion in new taxes — over and above the quarter of a trillion the Democratic Congress is already preparing to impose on us at Mr. Clinton's behest. In the unimprovable words of P.J. O'Rourke, "If you think health care is expensive now, wait till you see what it costs when it's free."

All this is necessary (allegedly) because of the oft-repeated assertion that "37 million Americans" (out of 250 million) "have no health insurance." When declaimed with a dying fall on the last word, that statement is easy to confuse with the very different — and totally false — proposition that 37 million Americans have no health care.

As Fred Barnes pointed out in The American

Spectator recently, "Everybody gets health care in this country — the poor, the uninsured, everyone..." Those without health insurance are treated free of charge by hospital emergency rooms. Federal law, Barnes goes on, requires "medical screening of everyone requesting care at a hospital emergency room. If treatment is needed, it must be provided." The chief reason the uninsured get less medical care per capita than average is that they are, overwhelmingly, younger than average and therefore need less.

But the socialized medicine fanatics have the bit in their teeth, and the American people are going to get a universal federal health care program whether they need or want one or not. The only question left is what kind.

Fortunately there is one alternative that has been widely and successfully tested, that wouldn't require a huge new bureaucracy to administer it, that wouldn't cost a cent in new taxes, and that would guarantee every American quality health care by physicians of his or her choice.

Proposed by the Heritage Foundation, it is based on the Federal Employees Health Benefits Program, which already covers 9 million federal employees and retirees and their dependents, including Bill, Hillary and Chelsea.

FEHBP allows those covered to choose among different health plans, with different premiums and services tailored to their specific needs. Competition among the providers keeps a downward pressure on costs. Heritage proposes to apply the same principle nationwide, by converting the tax break employers now receive for providing health care benefits into an individual "medical tax credit," which could then be spent by individuals on precisely the quantity and type of medical coverage they need.

If you think health care is expensive now wait till you see what it costs when it's free.

What the Perot Bloc really wants

On the playgrounds of Washington's strategists and pundits, the hot summer game is plotting the seduction of the Perot Bloc. It's fun to watch the thinkers ponder the polls, crunch the numbers — then miss the point.

Many mouth the neo-conventional wisdom: The party that pushes the most "centrist" policies will inherit Ross Perot's voters. Wrong. Others chant the mantra du jour: something about deficit cuts being our cure-all. Perhaps they've been smacked by too many pie-charts in the face.

Meanwhile, the Democratic Leadership Council and Progressive Policy Institute (where I recently co-edited a book of policy proposals) have come up with an impressive package. It's a new survey of Perot voters and a strategy of reforms by which Bill Clinton can capture them. Nothing short of reinventing government will do.

But then the leaders of the DLC and PPI explained their bold new strategy by using an old Nixon symbol. Their report likened Clinton's opportunity for forging a governing majority that includes Perot's voters to Richard Nixon's infamous "southern strategy," which lured southern Democrats and George Wallace voters of 1968 into Republicanism by promising to ease enforcement of civil rights compliance.

And that's unfortunate. Because that "Nixon southern strategy" comparison sends signals and symbols that are noxious, evocative of racial and regional hostility, and inviting a knee-jerk mischaracterization of a sensible effort to be responsive to right-thinking folks who backed Perot in '92.

Perhaps I can lend a hand here — for I first got to know the voters who are today's Perot Bloc and their antecedents way back in tumultuous 1968 — before Ross Perot had made himself a legendary business tycoon, let alone a full-blown political typhoon.

Alabama's Gov. George Wallace and his third-party presidential campaign were drawing huge crowds in the heart of Yankee land that autumn — and I'd begun asking people in his audiences: "Before you knew Wallace would be running, who were you leaning toward supporting for president?" The answer I heard time and again: "Bobby Kennedy."

At first it seemed to make no sense: Robert Kennedy was the liberal senator who advocated aggressive civil rights enforcement until he was assassinated that June; Wallace was the conservative governor who'd stood in the schoolhouse door to halt desegregation.

Then it made a lot of sense: These people told me, time and again, that they had viewed Robert Kennedy as a champion of folks like themselves, white middle- and lower-income Americans who were tired of being ignored by their government. Now Wallace was talking a similar line in his populist rant.

These folks would be destined to endure decades of disillusionment with government. They and newly eligible voters just like them would try Jimmy Carter in '76, Ronald Reagan in '80 and '84. And finally — deeply cynical and frustrated — Perot in '92.

News of the DLC-PPI report, including the reference to Nixon's "southern strategy," was carried in The New York Times alongside an interview in which Housing and Urban Development Secretary Henry Cisneros blasted "New Democrats," such as the DLC and PPI, for giving insufficient attention to the damage racism still causes in America.

Oddly, once you wade through the rhetoric, Cisneros is espousing much of the DLC/PPI program stressing family values and individual responsibility. But the juxtaposition of the "southern strategy" example unfortunately (and inaccurately) seemed to validate Cisneros' criticism.

As President Clinton studies the path charted by his old DLC-PPI colleagues, let him set his mind toward this goal: He must reach out to the sort of folks who, in another era, were fed up with government and embraced both Bobby Kennedy and George Wallace.

And here's a start: Let him announce that he is quadrupling his plan to cut the federal bureaucracy by 100,000 civilians in his four-year term. Clinton can cut 100,000 in each of his four years — and still do it all through attrition, without firing anyone.

It's fun to watch the thinkers ponder the polls, crunch the numbers then miss the point.

Punishment ought to fit the crime

First I have to tell you about Kirk Bloodworth.

In August 1984, the police in Baltimore County, Md., charged him with the sexual assault and murder of a 9-year-old girl. In March 1985, he was convicted of the crime and sentenced to death. The conviction was subsequently overturned and he was tried again. In April 1987, he was convicted for the second time and sentenced to two consecutive life terms.

In May 1993 a sophisticated genetic test determined that semen found on the victim's panties could not possibly have come from Bloodworth. An FBI test confirmed the finding.

On June 28, Bloodworth walked out of prison a free man.

Since that day, the liberals and I told-you-sos have been chewing on Bloodworth's case like a scrawny hound gnawing on a soup bone. "The fact that others like him may still be on death row remains the strongest argument against capital punishment," opined the Washington Post. "Let's imagine that he had been executed," wrote Baltimore Sun columnist Mike Littwin. "What would we be saying now that science has proven him innocent of a crime that 12 people ... twice found him guilty of committing?"

I intend to take issue with that sentiment, but first I want to make it clear that my strong opinions have nothing to do with Kirk Bloodworth. Hell, I know Kirk Bloodworth. I mean, I never met him, but I know him. He is from Cambridge, Md., the city of my birth. His first night out of prison, he went out for crabs. I know this man, and I am happy he is free.

But the lesson we should be learning from his experience, it seems to me, is not that capital punishment is stupid and should be banished, but that it is drastic and severe and irreversible and ought to be resorted to with great care and only when the person involved is guilty beyond any doubt.

I'm talking about sane people who do violence to others, particularly the innocent. I'm talking about terrorists, about thugs with machine guns who kill people willy-nilly from car windows, about bank robbers who take their swag and execute employees and bystanders before leaving, about utterly depraved miscreants who fire automatic weapons at swimming pools full of children.

People who do these things are not human. They have no right to be taking up space on the planet, and if we ever run out of executioners, I would be privileged to throw the switch.

I have similar feelings about all perpetrators of violent crimes. I believe we have been far too forbearant for too many years. I am up to my knister with lenient judges who favor light sentences and early parole. I am tired of hearing therapists babbling on about "low self-esteem" and social workers lecturing us about dysfunctional families and shrinks who believe an abusive childhood is an excuse for murder.

Poverty and bad homes and abusive parents exist. I wish they didn't, but they do, and they undeniably help to mold the criminal psyche. I believe that all elements ought to be studied and restudied and if we can eventually eliminate the factors that forge murderers, then by all means let's do it.

In the meantime, however, miscreants should be behind bars. When prisons bulge build more. They don't have to be expensive. Study the Mexican prison system — four walls and a bowl of swill a day — and maybe build walls around some federal land out west and put the most hardened criminals behind them and let them survive as best they can.

Since that day, the liberals have been chewing on Bloodworth's case like a scrawny hound gnawing on a soup bone.

Lake Mary defines department heads

By NICK PFERPAUF
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — Two revisions to the city code of ordinances will be considered during tonight's Lake Mary City Commission meeting. Both are the result of a citizens referendum on charter revisions approved late last year.

City Manager John Litton has explained that one of the charter amendments approved by the voters last year provided that the creation, elimination, employment, or termination of department heads shall be upon the recommendation of the city manager and the approval of the city commission.

"However," Litton said, "a department head was not defined."

One of the ordinances to be presented for second reading and public hearing during tonight's commission meeting will clearly establish department heads to be covered under the charter change.

They include: fire chief; police chief; finance director; Parks and Recreation director; city clerk; and Public Works director. According to the wording of the ordinance, "The creation, elimination, employment or termination of department heads shall be in accordance with the city's charter."

The document also indicates what departments constitute the city's operational organization. In addition to the departments governed by the specific department heads, the document also lists General Government and Public Works.

Part of the proposal for defining department heads has been stricken from the ordinance. It defined individual departments, but City Clerk Carol Foster had indicated they needed to be deleted because they are redundant or in conflict with other sections of the code.

Another change in the code of ordinances scheduled for second reading during tonight's meeting, has been slightly revised since it was first presented. It deals with clarifying the position of city manager. In establishing a strong city manager form of government, many of the changes involved fine-tuning some of the language originally presented, to make the document clearer in its intent.

Both changes are scheduled while he was preparing a barbecue grill fire and said "Give me five. Everything is alright," but then later again began asking if the youth was ready to leave with him. She demonstrated how Lopez stood over Mahone inside the house making faces and hand movements. She said her sister, Debra told her Lopez threatened to kill Enchano. Yvette said she did not hear Lopez make any death threat against Mahone.

Lopez chased the defendant around the car as he tried to leave with his aunt, she testified. As Debra and her sister tried to keep Lopez and Mahone apart in the street in front of the house, they were knocked to the ground.

"I didn't see what happened next," the woman said. "I sat up and all I saw was blue fire."

Under cross examination, the woman testified she did not hear Lopez say why he wanted the youth to go with him or what "it" meant when he said "it has to be done tonight." Further, when asked about a deposition statement in which she said she saw Enchano running one way, while Lopez walked back toward the house after the shots were fired, she said she did not see where her nephew went.

Late in the day, a Sanford Fire Rescue unit was called to the lobby outside the court to attend to Ms. Mahone after she testified. A court bailiff was told, Mahone had suffered an anxiety attack and requested not to be recalled to the court.

Earlier in the day, Seminole County Medical Examiner Dr. Shashi B. Gore testified Wednesday Lopez died of massive hemorrhage from wounds in his chest and abdomen. Using a clay and styrofoam human-like model, Gore used toothpicks to approximate the paths of the two bullets that struck Lopez.

Major internal organs including a lung and stomach were lacerated, according to the doctor. One of the bullets went through the victim's chest and out his back and was not recovered. A second bullet went through his left upper arm and entered his body trunk through the stomach and liver. It was recovered as evidence.

The site of the potential complex would likely be located at either the eastern end of First Street, where the County Services Building is located, or Five Points, on property currently owned by Seminole Community College. The downtown site would require buying lakefront property from Jeno Paulucci.

Commissioners Bob Sturm and Pat Warren endorsed the Five Points site, saying it would be more centrally located to more residents. Warren added she didn't want to take tax-rich lakefront property off Sanford's tax rolls.

But Sanford Mayor Bettye Smith told the group city officials prefer government operations to remain in the downtown area.

"I think I speak for the whole board when I say we can make up the tax roll loss," Smith said. "What's important to us is people. Having people here in downtown Sanford is important to us."

Smith said she would lobby Paulucci for his cooperation in negotiations.

County and school officials said any land negotiations may include land swaps from school and county inventories.

being in their vicinity."

Shupe submitted a letter regarding the situation to City Manager Hill Simmons. He reported having requested the maintenance department of the Seminole County Public School system to evaluate and repair the entire alarm system. He also said he had requested the Sanford Police Department to send someone out to examine the system.

In the meantime, Shupe requested an exemption of this policy for schools. "Remember," he wrote, "these fines are not punishing anyone but our students. If I were a private citizen, or owned my own business, these fines would come out of my pocket and your policy would have a direct impact on me."

He continued, "As it stands, we, as a school, have no monies for such expenses. Paying fines would be to deprive our students of items they need to further their education."

Shupe concluded, "I sincerely doubt that the tax paying public would appreciate their school dollars being spent on fines from the Sanford Police Department."

The letter was sent to Simmons on May 15, when the fines against the school totaled $105. They have since grown an additional $70 with an additional fine levied on June 30.

Simmons responded on June 7, explaining the structure of the ordinance against false alarms.

"While I understand your desire for a general exemption from the alarm fee for your school," he wrote, "I do not have the authority to provide such a waiver. City Commission action would be required and I suspect that staff recommendations would be for denial since it would become ever more dif-icult to draw a line regarding who might enjoy an exemption and who would not."

Simmons added, "To date, no exemptions have been granted."

"No matter how much we check into the system," Shupe said recently, "there are still going to be problems, and I hate to see school money used to pay fines against something which we cannot control."

"The only thing I could do," he added, "is disconnect the system to avoid a continuation of these fines, but that would be foolish as we would then be inviting burglaries and thefts to take place."

Strupe said he is presently looking into what approach to take next in the matter, while the school board maintenance people continue to examine the system to seek ways to reduce the false alarms.

Evidence of sick school syndrome

By The Associated Press

Florida health officials are averaging five "sick school" reports a day from schools requesting air quality investigations, a state toxicologist says.

Research into building-related illnesses is still evolving. But there is growing evidence that complaints of sick building syndrome in schools, homes and offices are valid, according to Dr. Roger Inman, head of toxicology and hazard assessment for the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Poorly ventilated indoor air can be tainted in two ways: from chemical vapors given off by building materials, cleaning supplies, even rugs or furniture, and from a variety of molds that thrive in high humidity.

Health officials are starting to recognize Florida as the nation's "sick building" capital because of its humid climate and rapid development since the early 1970s.

The dampness promotes the growth of molds and mildew, while the energy-efficient construction methods of the past two decades have created tight buildings that limit air circulation and magnify the effect of an indoor contaminant.

The seriousness of the problem was demonstrated in December, when a 16-month-old school in Pinellas County, Oldamar Elementary, was closed because of mold contamination. Also last year, almost-new courthouses in Martin and Polk counties were shut down for the same reason.

Park Ave., in part, based on a letter he said he obtained from Volusia County schools in which Howell stated he was a resident of Volusia County.

Kearney said she wrote the letter to Howell following a telephone conversation with Kirchner that day. She said Kirchner called to determine whether loss of homestead exemption was grounds for removal of a city commissioner.

"When I asked him if he would mind if I looked into it, he said no," said Kearney.

Kirchner refused comment this morning.

"I'd like to comment but I'd like to let the governor's office do his job," said Kirchner.

Howell did not return several calls left at his Sanford home Wednesday and Thursday.

Howell faced opposition from Kirchner during last year's commission elections along with Bob Church and Jordan Beckner. Kirchner actually edged ahead of Howell in the first primary Dec. 8 by slightly more than a percentage point. Howell spurred ahead of Kirchner to win the Dec. 22 runoff by more than 17 points.

Kearney described the inquiry as routine, but said if Howell is determined not to be a resident of Sanford, Gov. Lawton Chiles can declare a vacancy in his District 1 seat. The city commission, under their charter, would then decide how to fill the vacancy.

Howell has filed an appeal of Suber's decision, which will be reviewed by the county Value Adjustment Board later this year. The VAB is comprised of county commissioners Larry Furlong, Daryl McLain and Dick VanDerWeide and school board members Jeannie Morris and Larry Strickler. They hold their first, organizational meeting July 30.

Typically, appeals of property appraisal decisions are considered by an appointed special master, who then makes recommendations on dozens of appeals are routinely approved by the VAB in a single vote. Suber said he didn't anticipate Howell's appeal would be handled any differently, but said the final decision would be determined by the VAB.

Idle Illusions gets help in softball race

Beer 30 runner Jerry Dick has some fun with Sportsmart infielder Billy Warnock on a play at second base (top). But in the end Warnock got the last laugh as he made a tremendous diving stop on a ball in short center field (bottom left) and flipped the ball to the center fielder, who in turn fired to first base to pick off the runner (bottom right) who had made a wide turn.

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — Illusions is thanking its lucky stars after the two teams it is fighting for the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Wednesday Night Spring Showplace Softball League championship both lost at Chase Park.

Being Meyers and Playtime Darts both fell in the bottom of the seventh inning, putting Idle Illusions in a tie for first with Being Meyers (both teams are 8-3), while Playtime Darts (7-4) fell one game behind with one game to play.

Playtime Darts had a 4-1 lead going into the bottom of the fifth inning, but Sports at Touchdown (Tom below) Pohl came up with a run in the bottom of the fifth inning and then scored the game winner with two outs in the bottom of the seventh inning, with help of a two-out error on a single by Tom DeBartolo.

Being Meyers' crowd favorite, Michael "Big Red" Wagner, with a wild and boisterous 10 grand slam, was hit in an 8-1 effort during the bottom of the seventh inning. But Chris Beck's home run bases loaded single capped a comeback by the group (Crazy Wings 12-7) in the 7th.

The other game was one out, evening, as Sportsmart broke a 1-0 sixth-inning tie in the fourth inning, but had to bail out when Beer 30 had the tying run at the plate with two outs in the top of the seventh inning.

See a doctor about hyperthyroidism

MEDICINE

PETER GOTT, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an 18-year-old female. I sweat throughout the day and am nervous all the time. Therefore, I think I suffer from hyperthyroidism. Please discuss this condition and advise the proper treatment.

DEAR READER: Excess thyroid hormone (hyperthyroidism) speeds up the body's metabolism, leading to nervousness, sweating, intolerance to heat, weight loss, rapid pulse, fatigue, insomnia and many other symptoms. Some patients also exhibit prominent eyes (Graves' disease). Hyperthyroidism is caused by an overproduction of hormone due to thyroid nodules, inflammation or goiter. The diagnosis is made by blood tests and, if necessary, a thyroid scan to identify the location of the over-active tissue. The cause determines the treatment: medicine, surgery or radioactive iodine.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have trouble digesting dairy products. They cause severe bloating, cramps, pain in my lower stomach, and diarrhea. Lactaid hasn't helped. A gastroenterologist ran many tests, yet nothing was revealed to help me.

DEAR READER: Some people cannot digest milk sugar (lactose). This condition may be inherited (and present from childhood) or it may be acquired. Many adults develop lactose intolerance as they age.

The disorder causes the very symptoms you mention and is diagnosed by a test that analyzes the breath.

If your gastroenterologist performed this test and you do, indeed, have lactose intolerance, you should be helped by using pre-digested milk products, such as Lactaid. If these compounds are ineffective, you'll have to consider avoiding milk products altogether, and using calcium supplements (such as TUMS) to provide this essential mineral. If your hydrogen breath test was normal, the doctor will have to search for another explanation for your symptoms, such as irritable bowel syndrome or other causes of intestinal

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Aider
John Stuart Mill said, "I have learned to seek my happiness by limiting my desires, rather than in attempting to satisfy them." To me, that is a rather depressing, defeatist attitude. Why not fight to achieve ambitions, however extravagant?
Today's deal doesn't require anything quite so extreme. It just needs declarer to remember what didn't happen in the bidding, what did happen in the play and where his dummy entries are.
Against four hearts, West led the diamond king. East signaled encouragement with the eight, so West continued with the diamond ace and his third diamond.
Now it could easily be right for East to lead the 13th diamond. If West has, say, queen doubleton of hearts, this defense results in a trump promotion to defeat the contract. Here, though, the play is fatal. South discards his spade loser and has an easy ride home.

So let's suppose East switches to the spade 10 — not instantly fatal, but sufficiently revealing to a thoughtful South. As this switch marks West with the Q-J of spades, declarer has "seen" 10 points in West's hand. Therefore, as West passed as dealer, East must have the club queen.
Displaying excellent technique, South won the spade switch with his ace and drew three rounds of hearts ending in the dummy. He called for the club jack and finessed when East played low. Now came a club to the ace, a spade to dummy's king, and the club king, on which South discarded his spade loser.
Always remember what didn't happen, in both the bidding and the play.

HOROSCOPE

By Bernice Bede Osol
YOUR BIRTHDAY
Friday, July 16, 1993
In the year ahead patience and tenacity will be required to fulfill your ambitious objectives. If you persist, your rewards could be rather large and of an enduring nature.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) You might be asked to do something for someone today that you're even reluctant to do for yourself, yet the pride you'll derive from being helpful will be all the payment you'll require. Get a jump on life by understanding the influences which are governing you in the year ahead. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today by mailing $1.25 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N. Y. 10163. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Friends who seek your advice or opinions today expect you to tell it like it is. Be tactful and considerate of their feelings, but don't fail to lay all of the facts out on the table.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your energies, intellect and periods of opportunity will all have their limitations today. In order to perform with the greatest efficacy, you must keep your priorities in proper order.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Don't put any plans into practice today until you've taken sufficient time to study all of their ramifications. Eliminate guess work where the outcome is concerned.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be extra patient and realistic in all of your commercial dealings today. Insist upon full disclosures of pertinent information where others are involved.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Stand behind the promises you make to friends today, even if you're inconvenienced. Being a person of your word will strengthen your image and credibility.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Before putting out fresh funds today for something you think you need, check to see if you can make do with what you already have at your disposal.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19)

Situations that come under your direct control today might require a bit more attention than usual. Fortunately, you're likely to handle your responsibilities quite well.
PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Let a friend who has been helpful to you recently know that you are also an appreciative pal who can be called upon to help when he/she is in need.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't hesitate to question or ask advice about an issue for which friends think you already have all the answers. They'll admire you even more for revealing your shortcomings.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Protect your interests today so what is justly due you is not overlooked. Associates won't deliberately try to shortchange you, yet it could happen just the same.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Should you be faced today with a situation that requires special knowledge and know-how, you'll be grateful you once tackled and mastered this difficult subject.
