THE BUG "PROF."

By AGNES G. BROGAN.

"My dear," she said as a last effort at persuasion, "you might oblige your father in this, he is good to you, Sallie. And why you should have an absurd aversion to men of learning is more than I can understand."

"Professor Laidlaw, who is coming to have dinner with us tomorrow, is one of the nicest men I ever met. Your father has known him for years, and his judgment, where worthy men are concerned, is of the best."

"It is inviting this professor to dinner is a delicate way of bringing him to my attention as a possible husband," said Sallie. "I'd rather use my own judgment, and you can tell father so."

Again Mrs. Thayer sighed. "It is not exactly the idea of a husband in which we are interested, dear," she answered, a conscious flush coloring her cheeks. "It is just that your father and I wish to have you meet the right sort of men."

"The right sort being," Sallie crisply replied, "some old steady-going fossil. I won't marry a professor, mother, or any other kind of student. Mercy knows, I've had enough of them around all my life in this college town."

"Sallie!" her mother remonstrated, "when will you give up using those slang expressions? If Professor Laidlaw would hear you, your father would be mortified indeed."

"Small chance," Sallie murmured wickedly. "Mother, I will not be at home tomorrow."

"Sallie," Mrs. Thayer answered firmly, "I positively forbid your visiting any of your friends when your father has expressed this wish for your presence at home. Nothing but a good reason could excuse your absence to him."

Sallie turned her scarlet turban in her hand, considering. Presently her defiant face brightened.

"Well," she exclaimed, "here is a reason which will not only satisfy dad, but please him as well. I'm going to the public library to study up on natural history."

"Sallie," murmured her mother helplessly, but there was a tender light in her eyes, as they rested on her daughter's lovely, mischievous face.

Sallie, with a novel tucked under her arm, made her way up the marble steps of the library to the secluded gallery, where few were wont to be found.

Beneath the other arm was a beribboned box of chocolates—saved for some solitary occasion such as this. Upon the whole it appeared that Sallie would not have too dull an afternoon. But wonder of wonders, back upon the bench behind the cases of strange birds and beetles, sat a young man, absorbed in a book, and also helping himself generously from a box of candy.

As she hesitated, the young man, who had nice, friendly eyes, with a nice, friendly smile to match, looked up from his book, and said quite naturally:

"Do not let me drive you away. There is plenty of room here for both."

So it proved. Sallie had never before entered so easily into conversation. It began by their strange similarity of tastes, for in addition to the chocolates, to the young man was reading that very novel which Sallie had smuggled away under her arm. And when they had discussed, with the same points of interest, the novel, the delightfully unconventional young man drew Sallie's attention to the birds and beetles, and his talk concerning them was as interesting as real stories from a book.

Sallie could not believe that five o'clock had come and that she must hurry home to dinner.

"I'm coming down here again tomorrow," the young man announced carelessly.

"I have to come," Sallie told him. Then she explained about the visiting professor, and how "dreadfully tired" she was of professors and students in general, and the nice young man smiled.

"Fed up, eh?" he remarked inelegantly, and Sallie agreed.

She had the air of a joyous conspirator when upon the following day she bade her mother good-by, and started again for the library. The nice young man was there before her. He "had been there," he impatiently explained, "for three-quarters of an hour or more."

And today, the subject of the book being exhausted, the two spent the afternoon wandering about among the cases of animals and birds, while the young man talked in his original way about them all.

At five o'clock it was he who suggested that the time of departure had come.

"But I'm not going home," Sallie reminded him, "until after dinner hour when the professor will be back with dad in his study."

FIVE HUNDRED IN SUBS

A. P. Connelly Real Estate Co. Will Take That Many

A. P. Connelly, among the foremost boosters of Seminole county was the first man here to talk of a daily newspaper and offered to take $500 worth of subscriptions when it starts. He wants it distinctly understood that he is one of the first subscribers and certainly he is the largest subscriber for he is the first man to contract for $500 worth of subscriptions to the daily, although D. C. Marlowe did take the first individual subscription to the Daily Herald. And that reminds us that up to date there has been placed more than 100 annual subscriptions to the Daily Herald, and they have come in voluntarily as no campaign or canvass has been made as yet for subscriptions.

Aside from this twelve-live merchants have voluntarily come to the office and guaranteed a daily advertisement and no solicitor has made the rounds of the stores.

This makes the Daily Herald an assured fact but it will take an advertisement from every business house in Sanford to keep it going and we feel assured that all of the business men will take advantage of the Daily Herald from its first issue.

Sanford will have a Daily Herald.

Car Ditched

An automobile of Oviedo folks narrowly escaped death when it was ditched near here Saturday afternoon.

The car was occupied by Mrs. F. W. Swope, Miss Mabel Swope, Mrs. Swope's mother, Mrs. Pierpont, Mrs. Theo. Aulin and baby. The party were on their way to Sanford, when about three miles out of Oviedo a hog suddenly darted from the underbrush along side the road and its endeavor to cross in front of the car came in contact with the front wheels with such force as to make them uncontrollable, causing the car to leave the roadbed and turn turtle in a ditch full of water. Mrs. Pierpont and Mrs. Aulin were the most painfully injured, though all were given a most severe shaking up. It is not thought the wounds of any of the party will prove serious.—Reporter-Star.

SYMPATHETIC TIE

By MILDRED WHITE.

The girl came down the steps from a house on the south side of the street just as a young man opened the door of a corresponding house upon the north side of the street. Then across an avenue of slanting rain they looked at each other, and as suddenly, and consciously, looked away. For this mutual morning exit, though entirely a thing of chance, had become a regular occurrence.

If the little southern girl with the appealing black eyes had failed to appear precisely at 8:30 in the morning Jack Rensaler of the opposite house would have been anxiously curious. The maddening circumstance was that, not having been properly presented to Miss Kennedy Lee, walking at her side to the trolley instead of in cold aloofness upon his own side of the street was not to be thought of.

Jack's Aunt Beula, with whom he made his home in the city, had been communicative concerning this saucy pliant Kennedy Lee. Aunt Beula was friend and neighbor to the widowed Mrs. Humphrey, who considered her fair neighbor more as a ward.

Kennedy had left the sleepy little southern village, she said, in order to make her own way in the world as an artist. She had come to New York to continue her studies, and it was thought that she would marry Mr. Ed Travis of that city. But Mr. Travis being called at that seemingly propitious time to the service of his country Miss Lee had preferred to await his return in single blessedness. She decided to keep herself occupied with study, the marriage to be consummated upon her fiancé's return.

"Of course it was all foolishness," he told himself—this constant thought of a girl whose heart and promise were in the keeping of a soldier overseas and yet—Well, Jack couldn't dismiss his thoughts of her, and that was the trouble. So, on this particular rainy morning, both hesitated a moment before hurrying into the street.

Jack had gone half a block before he realized in the confusion of her nearness that Miss Lee was without an umbrella; also her dainty suit was getting wet. Then his heart beat high with hope.

"If you will let me take you to the car," he suggested, and his careful courtesy met with an agreeable response.

That was the beginning. Thereafter the morning meetings were not entirely accidental, and more and more Jack became enthralled. He had learned that the one unfailing subject to arouse Kennedy Lee's enthusiasm was war and their country's heroes.

"I've thought it over," she regretted, "and I am afraid that this friendship of ours is not quite loyal to Mr. Travis. We seem to have become such close friends, you and I."

Then Jack had his inspiration. A fleeting scruple was banished by remembrance that "All is fair in love and war."

"I don't think that Travis would consider a friendship with me disloyal," said Jack, "because you see, though I have not mentioned it, there's a Red Cross nurse over there who—"

Evident relief flashed over Kennedy Lee's expressive face.

"Who is engaged to you," she finished. "That simplifies everything. I'm so glad. Now we can be better friends than ever in our sympathetic understanding." And they were.

If Jack sat gazing dimly across at the window of Kennedy's room long after she was lost in slumber that did not disturb her pleasant dreaming. Sometimes she wondered what sort of woman had won her new friend's honest heart, and one day she asked him.

"She's dark," Jack answered her question, "and little and charming."

"Like me," Kennedy mischievously replied, "with the exception of the 'charming.'"

"Just like you," Jack repeated, his eyes wistfully regarding her.

But gradually a change came over Kennedy Lee. Her mischievous moods were no more, her black eyes seemed blacker still, because of darkening hollows beneath them. Her merry laughter was silenced.

Jack in his anxiety about it grew as grave as she. In desperation he broached the subject which fretted.

"Have you had bad news from France? Is he ill—wounded?" Kennedy's red lips closed in a firm line.

"No," she replied.

"Then," demanded Jack, and masterfully he swung the girl around to the light, "what is the trouble?"

"Ed Travis was married," she said slowly, "to a girl over there—a war worker."

"The—hound!" Jack exclaimed, his face was white.

"Oh, that," said Kennedy Lee, "is better as it is. When one has to try so terribly hard to be loyal to an absent lover, it's a pretty good sign— isn't it?—that he is not—the lover at all!"

AMUSEMENT

The Emotional Mme. Nazimova in
"Toys of Fate"

At the Star Theatre Thursday, June 6th

"Toys of Fate" What are any of except toys of fate? That's what a man says when he is blue when things will not go right—when destiny itself seems to balk him in every effort. But as Browning says,

"Sometimes the worst turns the best to the brave—
The black moment's at end."

Well, that is the way it is with Azah, the fascinating gypsy princess in "Toys of Fate," in which the great Russian artist, Nazimova, stars. When there seems to be no way out, when misery has taken possession of her soul—then comfort with its healing power revives and refreshes, and love gladdens her.

"Toys of Fate" is vivid, vital, dramatic. It is the story of a child of nature brought into contact with the ways of civilization. Azah suffers, rejoices and in the end finds happiness in her heart's desire. The great star is at her best in "Toys of Fate," a brilliant common-piece to "Revelation."

NAZIMOVA MAKES A BEWITCHING PRINCESS

Nazimova, the celebrated star, plays the role of a gypsy princess, with the fiery, untrammled nature of that picturesque race, in "Toys of Fate," a Screen Classics' super-feature which will be offered on the screen at the Star Theatre Thursday. Love and hate are almost equally developed in the gypsy girl, Azah, who is made the instrument of fate to bring to justice Bruce Griswold, aaire. Her life in the gypsy encampment, and in the caravan of her tribe is depicted in a fascinating manner, and gypsy customs and customs are reproduced.

George Keller's Alligator

While she Press Association was meeting at Leesburg last week a party was taken around the "loop of shady dells" and while enroute an alligator was seen in one of the orange groves. George Keller of Orlando caught the gator and a young lady in the party who was from Atlanta and had never seen a Florida gator before innocently inquired, "Is the alligator amphibious, Mr. Keller?" George replied, "Amphibious as the devil, bite you in a minute."

Holly's Hair

Jack Worthington, managing editor of the Tampa Times gets off the following in a write up of the meeting of the Florida Press Association:

"President Storrs announced the contest initiated by the Merganser company for the best-looking country newspaper and named Frank Anderson, Bartow Courier-Informant, R. J. Holly, Sanford Herald, and J. E. Worthington, Tampa Times, as judges. Bob Holly, by the way, is just back from service in the overseas transport department of the Y. M. C. A. where he has been for nearly a year while his son served in the Tank corps. Bob has been living on ship board during all of that time, having crossed the ocean many times. He has accumulated three more hairs and is training them to grow across his bald dome of thought. The effect is most beautiful."

Party at Daytona Beach

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Lake, Misses Serita and Maude Lake and Messrs. Tom Martin, Harry Lewis and Regina Holly motored over to Daytona Beach Saturday afternoon and spent Sunday there. They attended the opening of the new Casino and the dance and enjoyed the delights of the ocean to the fullest.

House Party Returns

The house party at Seabreeze broke up Thursday and the girls are glad to get back to Sanford after ten days of real fun and pleasure at the beach. Miss Bessie Zachary chaperoned the party and they rented a large house at Seabreeze where they could have all the pleasures of house-keeping and camping out combined and all of them enjoyed their stay to the fullest. The other members of the party were Misses Gladys Wilson, Margaret Zachary, May Holly, Sara, Wheelless, Lillian Shinholser and Marian Hand, Mina Howard

Golden Wedding

Prof. and Mrs. George L. Maris of Lake Onoro reached their fiftieth year of married life on Tuesday, June 17th. They were unexpectedly showered with letters and telegrams from relatives and friends in the north, and these evidences of love and esteem from old associations are much appreciated and added much to the happiness of the Golden Day.

The Father's Care

It is particular and it is universal, it extends to all living after its kind, and above all to those made in His own image. This will be the subject of the service at the Congregational church Sunday morning at 11: "John, or the Might of Love," will be the evening theme, service beginning at eight.

The usual choir and solo selections will be given.

Sunday June 23rd will be Communion Day.

Knockers and Boosters

When the Creator had made all the good things, there was still some dirty work to do, so He made the beasts and reptiles and poisonous insects, and when he had finished He had some scraps that were too bad to put into the rattlesnake, the hyena, the scorpion and the skunk, so He put all these together, covered it with suspicion, wrapped it with jealousy, marked it with a yellow streak, and called it a NOCKER.

This product was so fearful to contemplate that He had to make something to counter it, so He took a sunbeam and put in it the heart of a child, the brain of a man, wrapped these in civic pride, covered it with brotherly love, gave it a mask of velvet and a grasp of steel, and called it a BOOSTER; made him a lover of fields and flowers and manly sports, a believer in equality and justice, and ever, since these two were made, mortal man has had the privilege of choosing his associates.

Ain't it So?

"Speakin' of musical instruments," remarked the facetious feller, "there's no music as purty to the ears of a business man as hearin' 'Taps' played on his cash register."—Indianapolis Star.

Makeshift, as it Were.

A strange family had recently moved into the neighborhood. Robert had made the acquaintance of the small son and had learned from him that the man was only the boy's stepfather, and, in explanation to me, Robert said: "It ain't Jamie's own daddy, mamma; he's just a second-handed one."—Chicago Tribune.

Chevrolet Line Added by the Wight Tire Company

With the addition of the Chevrolet line to the Chandler and Republic lines there should be few buyers of motor vehicles who cannot find among the various models offered by the Wight Tire Company some car or truck that will probably suit his needs.

There has been an insistent demand for a light car which was rugged enough to negotiate the deep sand and mud and stand up to the work economically, and the Chevrolet answers the requirements.

The connection of the Chevrolet Motor Company and Wight Tire Company is a fortunate combination, as the firm has been assured a volume of cars sufficiently large to take care of the demand for this type, which at the present time is enormous.

Wight was the first house in this section to offer to the motoring public a complete line of standard make tires. This was many years ago, when our city boasted of nothing like the number of cars it does today, at that time they were users of a large number of both trucks and pleasure cars. With their past experience and present facilities they are in a position to accurately know the needs of every car owner and serve them accordingly.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Moffitt Entertain

One of the prettiest parties given of late was by Mr. and Mrs. Moffitt last Friday evening at their bungalow on Celery avenue.

The rooms looked unusually pretty with nasturtiums in cut glass vases placed here and there.

The dining room was in red and was made especially interesting with Mrs. Moffitt's great, great grandmother's home spun linen table cover with long knotted fringe. On this sat four brass candlesticks used by the same grand parent, holding red candles. In the center of the table was a round reflecting mirror on which was a beautiful cut glass vase of red roses.

During the evening Evelyn Cust and Elizabeth Shoemaker served the guests with ice cream and cake, candy and salted peanuts, the guests being entertained at that hour with some pretty music, made by a new Starr instrument.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Powers, Mr. and Mrs. Kent Rossetter, Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Pope, Mr. and Mrs. F. F. Dutton, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Shoemaker, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Thornton, Mr. R. C. Bradshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Bahitt.

Surprise Party

The O. E. S. of Sanford Monday evening, June 17th held a surprise party at the Gate City House in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bronson, the managers of the telephone system of our city. Our little farewell party was a success in every way; they tried wonderfully well to act the surprise that was intended and much enjoyment came from it.

The parlors were beautifully decorated with vines and pink and white hydrangeas, making you think you might be wandering in a beautiful garden. Miss Elizabeth Muston presided at the piano and with Miss Allen's solos helped so much to the enjoyment.

Laugh refreshments of cream and the best O. E. S. cakes ever eaten made the time fly. Then Mrs. A. E. Robbins came forward and presented Mr. and Mrs. Bronson each with a lovely napkin ring, marked with their initials. She cautioned them to remember they belonged to the best civilized band of Seminoles in the world. Also the rays of the order of Eastern Star encircled the world, and hoped at some future time they might find their way back to the wigwam and find everything ready for a powwow and the glad hand to receive them. Mr. and Mrs. Bronson have been offered big inducements to go to Key West. Our order and our city are losing two good workers for the betterment of mankind. Their places will be hard to fill. What we are obliged to lose Key West is very glad to gain.

The O. E. S. wish to thank Mrs. Parker for giving them the use of her nice home for their party and when we go to Key West we hope the surprise there will be complete.

NEW RAIL PLANS ON SOUND BASIS

Congress Determined to Make Certain Future Growth of Transportation Facilities.

PLANS AGREE ON PRINCIPLES.

Return of Roads to Owners With Assurance of Adequate Revenues.

Washington.—One of the big problems before the new Congress is getting the railroads back on a peace basis. These 260,000 miles of steel highways were taken over by the Government as an indispensable arm of the national defense; but now that their war service is over, there is a country-wide demand that the Government restore them to their owners to be operated on normal American business standards of efficiency.

But, as has been pointed out by President Wilson as well as by many men in public life who have given this subject years of careful study, it is not enough simply to say to the railroad companies, "Take these railroads and give the country the best transportation service that money and brains can provide."

Old Laws Obstruct Growth.
The President recently said that it would be a serious mistake to return to the old conditions of railroad regulation without reforming the antiquated laws that were obstructing the free development of transportation facilities. The Director General of Railroads has recently made an inspection trip from coast to coast, and he has been telling the people that the time has now come to put the railroads on a sound foundation.

The plans for a better system of national control of railroads are as varied as were the plans for banking and currency reform when Congress received a mandate from the people to provide insurance against financial panics. The public now demands insurance against a breakdown of railroad transportation, and the new Congress is undertaking this work as secondary only to insurance against international warfare. Congress solved the banking problem seven years ago as a non-partisan issue, in which all the people had a common interest, and Congress evidently is tackling the railroad problem with the same spirit.

While the many plans that have been proposed differ in the methods to be adopted in reaching the desired goal, it has been pointed out by Senator Cummins of Iowa that all these plans have really very much in common—so much so that he is confident that Congress will have little difficulty in framing a bill that will meet with popular approval, and that will take the railroad question out of politics for many years to come.

Many Plans With One Aim.
The Iowa Senator has a commanding position in this Congress because he is the ranking member of the Interstate Commerce Committee of the United States Senate, and it is in this committee that the new railroad bill will take final form. In an address before a national meeting of business men at St. Louis Senator Cummins stated that since the close of the war fully thirty complete plans for new railroad legislation had been submitted to him by business men, economists, bankers, railroad officials and owners, Government officials, railroad workers and just plain citizens.

The basic principles upon which all of these plans, with one exception, agree are as follows:

1. Private operation is more efficient and more economical than Government operation, and the public interest will therefore be served by a return of the roads to private management.
2. To make certain that new capital will be attracted to the expansion of railroad facilities, there ought to be greater certainty that a fair return will be earned on the investment.
3. The merging of weak and strong roads into large competing systems should be encouraged.

The making of a formula to provide a fair return on railroad capital seems likely to be the phase of the problem most thoroughly debated in Congress. The Director General has been urging that the Government ought to guarantee a certain return and share in any excess earnings. Leading bankers, especially some of the international bankers in Wall street, who have in the past marketed many hundreds of millions of railroad securities, also look favorably on the suggestion of a Government guarantee, which will make it easier to sell new securities, and will also stabilize the market for the old bonds and stocks.

Government Guarantee Opposed.
But the proposal that the Government shall guarantee the interest and dividends on private capital invested in railroads will undoubtedly meet with very vigorous opposition in many quarters. Even railroad executives, who might be supposed to take kindly to the idea of a Government guarantee against failure, have frankly stated that they do not want it, because they believe it is un-American in principle, would tend to lessen efficiency, and would involve the roads in a Government partnership that would inevitably lead to Government ownership.

BOY SCOUTS

Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America

WHAT'S IN A SCOUT'S HEAD

Among the ten things that even a second class scout must perfect himself in are these: Use properly a knife or hatchet. (This means that he knows how to cut and prepare firewood.) Prove ability to build a fire in the open, using not more than two matches. (If he can do this, he certainly can build one in the kitchen stove with ease.) Cook a quarter of a pound of meat and two potatoes in the open without any cooking utensils. (When he has got this far in his cooking training, he can certainly help mother out with a meal, and can even get the dinner for dad and the children when mother is away.) To become a first class scout, among the 12 things that he must know are the following: Prepare and cook satisfactorily, in the open, using camp cooking utensils, two of the following articles as may be directed: Eggs, bacon, hunter's stew, fish, fowl, game, pancakes, hoeecake, biscuit, hardback or a "twist" baked on a stick, and explain to another boy the methods followed. After he has become a first class scout it is up to him to get a merit badge for each of the following: Camp stow, two vegetables, omelette and rice pudding. Demonstrate ability to mix dough and bake bread in an oven; and also to make tea, coffee and cocoa. Carve properly and serve correctly to people at the table. The scout is taught to take care of himself and his fellows in the open.

SCOUTS W. S. S. CAMPAIGN.

The year-long War Savings stamp campaign of the Boy Scouts of America is going along very merrily. Indeed the local War Savings stamp committees throughout the country are enthusiastic in reporting on the splendid spirit and effective co-operative work of the Boy Scouts of America. Many scouts have already earned the Achievement button given by the treasury department when 25 sales are made to different people, and quite a few have the Ace medal for $250 in sales. Already 12,000,000 red post cards have been printed by the government printing office and distributed, and 8,000,000 more are now being printed, and if the demand keeps up as at present it will require at least 20,000,000 additional cards to take care of the needs of the scouts for the first four months.

The cards are now coming in to national headquarters at the rate of $2,000 a day.

SCOUT IS NOW AN AIRMAN.

A scout with nerve can accomplish anything he goes out for. This is proven by Clifton Penn Oleson, the youngest birdman in the service and one of the nerviest. Oleson is scarce eighteen years old, but he has gone through the rigorous training in aeronautics at the Curtiss school at Miami, Fla., and has been granted a commission by the war department at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., training other boys. When he was twelve years old, he saw the great Benchoy make his sensational flight at Dubuque. As Benchoy's plane at length swooped down to earth, Scout Oleson dodged

WHAT THE BOY SCOUTS DO.

The world interest in the boy scout movement challenges the intelligent understanding of every one, and yet many people still ask "What is scouting?" and "What do boy scouts do?" The boy scout idea is a movement rather than an organization. It aims to supplement existing organizations such as the home, church and school by engaging the boys' leisure energies in outdoor games and activities of cultural and practical value.

GOOD TURNS BY SCOUTS.

SCOUTS IN RUBBISH DRIVE.

A sanitary survey was conducted by the scouts of Portsmouth, O., at the request of the mayor. Deputized for this special work, 212 scouts took up city block work, being excused from school for this service.

They assembled at the city hall, where they received instructions. Then they scattered to their assigned blocks, made the inspection and returned with their reports to their troop headquarters.

The reports covered the condition of alleys, back yards and garages. The boys then took a census of weeds being planted. The survey was followed by general cleanup campaigns in which the bad conditions were discovered and remedied.
