REPAIRS

DEAR ABBY: I have a 15-year-old son I am having trouble with. He keeps his bedroom door locked at all times, and does not let me in there alone to clean his room. I have to wait until he comes home from school to make his bed so he can go in with me and watch me.

He says he doesn't want anyone monkeying around in his drawers. I wouldn't look in his drawers anyway.

I haven't been able to give his room a thorough cleaning in over a year. Do all teenagers go through a stage like this? How can I get him to change his attitude? LOCKED OUT

DEAR LOCKED: If you are taking "orders" from your 15-year-old son, pre-pare yourself for some kingsized headaches in the future. All teenagers like (and deserve) some privacy, but your son has gone overboard. It is your duty as the mother of a minor to find out what he is going to such extremes to hide.

DEAR ABBY: I will get right to the point. My boy friend and I drove over the border to Mexico to get married. We didn't have any blood tests or anything. We went to a place and signed our names in a book, and the man there asked us our parents' names, occupations, ages and so forth. Then he typed out a so-called "license." That was all there was to it. It didn't seem like much of a wedding cere-

DEAR MARRIED OR NOT: Take the "license" to an attorney and ask him if it is legal in this country.

DEAR ABBY: What do you do when you must attend a social function, and proud parents TRAP everyone into watching their offspring perform for two solid hours? Send help fast! Another one of those evenings is coming up, and I don't think I can stand it.

DEAR NAUSEATED: If you MUST attend such a function, just grin and bear the boredom.
