Understanding

People in Sanford can well appreciate the predicament with which European nations are faced by the matter of war debts and reparations.

In some parts of this country it is perhaps difficult to understand the position of the debtor. Citizens elsewhere perhaps have forgotten that for one hundred and twenty-five years before the World War this country was a debtor nation under heavy obligations to Europe.

The present situation offers admirable opportunities for some box orators to gain popular support through their vociferously but uneconomically expressed demands of Europe to pay.

The question naturally arises whether it would be to the best interest of this country to cancel the war debts and allow European nations to regain their normal business activity, thus through increased international trade improving business in this country.

We do not believe there is anyone who can successfully predict the correct answer to that question. Just as there is no one who can accurately foretell just how far around the corner prosperity lies or when the world is coming to an end.

Because the problems are intricate, the answers obscure, our best leaders are those who appear most uncertain. In the midst of such puzzling complexities, baffling occurrences and aggravating tribulations, positiveness is the trade mark of the propagandist, certainly the proof of a fool.

The spirit of give and take, live and let live, a willingness to co-operate and a confidence in fellow men are characteristics which are needed most today.

Christmas Holly

With the approach of another Christmas season The Herald wishes again to remind its readers of a law enacted only a few years ago which prohibits the cutting of holly for purposes of decoration.

Florida holly, with its brilliantly green pointed leaves and bright red berries, most certainly is one of this state's most beautiful plants and decorations.

In such a state as Florida where shrubs and flowers of all kind grow in unusual abundance, there is no need of eliminating Christmas decorations in order to avoid exterminating one particular kind of plant.

Excellent substitutes for holly are found in Brazilian pepper, white tips of pine branches, sprays of ligustrum, and little porum make beautiful wreaths.

With such an assortment from which to choose there is little need for robbing the woods of its holly.

SANFORD, TWENTY YEARS AGO

Butter and eggs are selling in New York at the highest prices in the last 10 years. Eggs bring 44 cents to 50 cents wholesale, and 50 cents to 75 cents retail.

The Federal government has Thursday filed suit in the United States District Court against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, charging it with an unfair monopoly.

His charming and attractive young daughter, Miss Bertha, was united in marriage to Mr. Paul E. Miller, a prominent business man of Charlotte, N. C.

PEOPLE RULE MIAMI HERALD

Public opinion can be effective if it will only go into action. The people can rule if they demand proper performance on the part of their civil servants.

Philadelphia, the home of famous partisan bosses, proved that the other day when 19,000 citizens marched on and surrounded the city hall as the council met to decide on taxes and budgets.

As a result of the immense demonstration, the council abandoned its stand for a 38 1/2 percent increase in the 1932 real estate tax rate and a 50 percent increase in water rents.

With the crowd demanding economy, the council also killed the project for the purchase of a state senator's 95-acre farm as a site for a proposed municipal tuberculosis sanatorium.

A news story in The Philadelphia Record said: "Father Penn's children reclaimed their government.—From the dust of the battlefield, Philadelphia like a new Philadelphia spirit arose.

Editorially, the newspaper declared: "The power of the people is... proved.—But the council must be watched as it operates. There must be reform. Scurrying surrender is not enough. Always be organized."

It is a lesson for Florida, for all America. It is time the people took the government of the United States and all its divisions back into their own hands.

Too long has democracy operated by proxy. Too long have the people elected their so-called representatives and then forget government, except as they occasionally complained.

Right now, if all the people will shower their congressmen with letters setting forth that they demand economy, there will be results. Insist that appropriations be cut for any purpose whatsoever.

The people must reclaim their right to rule themselves unless they wish to see government and the nation go down in economic chaos. Philadelphia has shown that it can be done. Then act.

Otto Kahn Places Individual Debts Ahead Of Public's

Shanghai, China, Dec. 22.—(A.P.)—The fall of Chinchow before Christmas was predicted yesterday by Chinese sources here.

NANKING, Dec. 22.—(A.P.)—China decided yesterday to resist any Japanese thrust against Chinchow.

Dr. Wellington Koo, foreign minister, informed the League of Nations that if the Japanese attacked the city the Chinese army would be "compelled in self-defense to resist."

The foreign minister issued a statement interpreted as an appeal to the United States under the nine-power treaty and the Edgerton-Briand pact.

Dr. Koo said in his statement that Manchuria is an integral part of China—and he cited five American statements to support his contention that it should be saved from Japanese territorial aggrandizement.

CHICAGO'S CRIME HAS BEEN BROKEN BY 'SECRET SIX' Year-Old Drive Upon Lawlessness Is Attended By Success

CHICAGO, Dec. 22.—(A.P.)—Chicago's anti-crime campaigners looked back today on a year of work and pronounced themselves confident organized crime has been cropped.

To the Chicago crime commission and the "secret six" backed by wealthy and influential citizens, was given most of the credit. A vigilant federal government and a militant press were given as the other factors.

Reorganization of the Chicago police force, the conviction of Al Capone on income tax charges, and enactment of legislation directed against gangsters, said Frank J. Loesch, president of the crime commission, has left the criminal begging for quarter.

"Organized law enforcement has fought it out with organized crime," said Loesch, "and we have won. The gangster has been conquered."

The "secret six" backed by the vast resources of the Chicago association of commerce, agreed with the crime commission that a victory has been won. But, said Alexander G. Jamieson, head of the organization, the job is not finished.

"Al Capone is in jail, his brother, Ralph, is in jail," said Jamieson, "and so are Jack Guzik and others. They were the men most capable of leading, but there are others. We can get those remaining into prisons and we will."

The crime commission pointed with pride to the original list of 28 "public enemies," drawn up nearly a year ago. Five of them are in prisons, Loesch pointed out, two are under sentence, two awaiting sentence, one awaiting deportation, two involved in deportation proceedings, four fugitives from justice, one facing a murder charge and nine under police surveillance. Two were killed by their own kind.

"Public enemy list number 2" was drawn up about six months ago and the campaign against them has been almost as effective. Convictions were obtained against some of the force and public scrutiny was focused against all.

Those brought to justice the Capones, Goetz, Jack McGuffin, Terry Douglas, Frank Lafe, James "Far" Sammons, Tony "Mop" Volpe, Willie Nisomath and others were the leaders of Chicago's underworld.

"The press brought forth public censure and public indignity," Loesch said last night. "The federal government gave us the aid we needed. As much more will be accomplished in 1932—and our victory will be complete."

JOHNSON HITS DEBT DELAY IN SENATE TALK

ding action Johnson replied that he thought a roll call could be reached by tonight or Wednesday at the latest but he refused to enter an agreement to that effect.

He will resume the attack today but he believed that there were only two or three others desiring to join him. Proponents of the one-year debt holiday, confident of an overwhelming majority, rested their case on a five-minute talk by Senator Smoot.

For more than an hour Johnson lashed out his attack, time and again directing his appeal across the aisle to the Democrats who faced him.

Johnson said he was opposing the moratorium because it would determine the future policy of the United States in dealing with debtor countries.

Johnson contended the haste for action was because of the forthcoming report of the Bagli, Switzerland, conference which he predicted would recommend a two-year moratorium.

Senator Gore, (D. Okla.), offered an amendment to require a 20 per cent partial payment of the year debts to be set aside as a special fund for unemployment relief.

Johnson contended that the moratorium finally agreed to by the foreign governments was not the same as that to which 68 members of the Senate pledged support. He said subsequent negotiations with France had altered the terms of the original agreement.

Returning Expert From Russia Says 5-Year Plan Fails

contract provides for pay half in rubles, half in dollars; the Soviet now cannot find the dollars.

Having as yet only sophisticated technicians of her own products of two years' schooling, and without practical experience—the Soviet is faced with a grave crisis because of the flight of foreign experts.

It follows automatically that that thing which the world has viewed with alarm as an impending "Russian trade menace" is a "hoax," a thing of imagination, woven of propaganda threads.

The Soviet, perhaps, did not set out deliberately to build up this bogey man for the frightening of the outside world.

But the Soviet flooded the world with news of its projects. Things put down on blue print—seemed to Soviet leaders already to exist in fact. Their reports on conditions are misleading. They are the only ones needed.

Always hearing of the projects, and never getting what Americans call a "low down" on actual achievements, the rest of the world appears to have been thrown into a flurry of groundless fear.

I can give reassurance. Russia cannot menace world trade through productive efficiency and a ruthless export policy.

I returned recently from three and a half years' work as a mining engineer in charge of a very large property in Russia. Though my title was chief engineer, my duties were analogous to those of a general superintendent. One was a political officer, and neither an engineer nor industrialist. Productive responsibility was mine.

Before the World War an iron revolution the mines and mills at Ridder in Siberia were known as the Ridder property, of the great Russo Asiatic Corporation. In this corporation Leslie F. Uphart, famous British financier, was a dominant figure, and Herbert Hoover, as consulting engineer, directed the rehabilitation of the property after it had suffered through Russian mismanagement under the old regime.

During the period when I was responsible only for the Ridder mines and mills, with their 10,000 employees, I traveled extensively. During the last year I was used also as an adviser and consultant in developing many other properties, so traveled even more widely through this land about which Americans appear to know so few actual facts.

This personal interlude is deliberate and has purpose. Too many "investigators" have visited Russia for a few weeks, seeing what they wish to see, and then have presented the world with distorted pictures.

On my return I was at first mildly surprised at the misinformation existing here. That was followed by amazement at the general acceptance of Russian claims about "success" of the so-called industrial revolution.

Finally, I was astounded and incredulous in the face of the fact it seems to be a sober fact—that many Americans, including leaders in business and industry, fear that the Soviet has become a threat to our industrial prosperity and to the worker's wage envelope.

In this series of articles, therefore, I have been asked to give the true picture of the Soviet experiment which is driving a nation of 150,000,000 into hopeless despair.

The picture one gains from three and a half years' intimate association with all classes, from Moscow officialdom to the lowest working man and peasant, is made up of so many details that I attempt to simplify my problem in this introductory article by stating general conclusions. Facts, not conjectures.

1. The heralded Five-Year plan is not succeeding and is doomed to absolute failure. The reason is inefficiency.

Such inefficiency is widespread. It exists at the top. Politicians, who are industrial amateurs, are heads of industries. It continues through the entangled bureaucracy of politico-economic management. In this management there is no centralized control. No individual ever is given full authority or complete responsibility. No man is willing to risk taking either. The penalty for failure may be jail or the firing squad.

As to the inefficiency of workmen, there is no need to rely on my wide personal observation.

The Soviet government itself officially estimates that in productivity one American equals four and a half Russians.

This is not one of their fine-sounding theories. They use that calculation daily in their plans for rejuvenation. If they try to copy an American factory system they plan to use four and a half times as many men to get the same volume of product as the American plant turns out.

As for engineers, at Ridder I found them "pumping water down hill." From a source of supply already higher than the mill they pumped water to a hilltop reservoir at 1,000 gallons per minute, then let gravity carry it to the mill. It would have "run down hill" to the mill from its original source.

A final—and in an engineer's eyes most damaging—inefficiency is destructive use of equipment. Machinery, industrial or agricultural, which should last five or six years, may last a year, or less.

2. The Soviet is not producing nearly enough farm products to meet home needs.

Russia is, therefore, in no position to flood the world with farm surpluses. She has no surpluses.

The great agricultural program has not worked according to plan. The Soviet conceals from individual peasants a portion of their grain supposedly in excess of their own needs. They are paid a fixed price. The purchasing power of these rubles has diminished. Often it has vanished entirely. There is nothing much to say.

But suppose that a peasant needs and knows where he can buy a pair of shoes. They will cost him 100 to 150 rubles ($50 to $75), or as much as he'd be paid by the government for 100 to 150 bushels of wheat.

Peasants began resisting collections—until four or five successful village or town collectors may waste time making trips to collect a single lot, an average of 50 bushels of wheat, and now that the rubles which are forced on them are worthless, the peasants grow less produce. This downward trend in a peasant population of 125,000,000 means a staggering total agricultural loss.

The "collective farm" solution of the agricultural crisis has not worked as expected, despite its wide advertisement.

Peasants were induced to surrender their 15-acre plots and, several hundred in a group, to cooperate large communal farms. For countless generations these people had used only almost primitive hand tools. They do not use agricultural machinery efficiently; they abuse, even wreck it. And production falls off.

The peasants were lured into collectivism and co-operation in the Five-Year Plan by the promise that the new collective villages would receive from city factories manufactured necessities and comforts of life unknown in their thatched huts.

But the Five-Year Plan has not delivered these conveniences of civilization in the expected quantities. The "collectivized" peasants therefore lose enthusiasm or become sullen. Here again production falls, since real cooperation has gone.

Fighting to "dominate" (exterminate) the "kulaks," the independent, property-owning farmers, who have done better than their fellow-Soviet, has created great numbers of giant "kulaks" in these collective farms.

In whereas an individual farmer could be fought, shorn of his property, turned loose to starve, or driven away to forest-labor camps, a community of thousands of persons cannot so readily be coerced.

The spirit of the collectives is coming to be exactly that of the old individual "kulaks." They want goods for themselves, for their villages, for their schools. They want machinery for their farms, tools for their machine shops.

And if the factory sector of the Five-Year campaign cannot provide these things, as promised, then the collectives are in passive revolt.

The third major factor in the agricultural plan is, of course, the still more gigantic "state farms," of hundreds of thousands of acres. These are, theoretically, "farm factories"—but they do not live up to the blue-print plans. Chiefly because Russians cannot seem to master and use effectively and economically the most advanced types of machinery, either industrial or economic.

3. The railroads of Russia are breaking down month by month.

Several months ago Stalin, the dictator who rules Russia from outside the cabinet through his position as secretary of the Communist party, attempted to meet the railway crisis. He ordered that all men of any railroading experience, however short, must report for duty. They were to help rehabilitate the transportation system.

This emergency measure has not saved the railroads.

Bad management is a chief cause of transport collapse. Wearing out of rolling stock and other equipment is a second cause.

The Soviet is utterly unable to replace this shattered rail system out of the products of its own mills and factories. It has neither the "valuta"—foreign money—nor the credit standing with which to negotiate for supplies abroad.

As stated, this rail system is but a broken staff to lean on in time of famine. Also, as the national industrial plant closes, that slow-up becomes worse because the railroads cannot bring in raw materials and other supplies or carry away finished products on schedule. Here is a vicious circle of the most demoralizing type. Inefficiency breeds inefficiency.

It will be seen readily that this is not the popularly accepted picture of Russia that has been drawn. But, then, I have seen this speed fairly and of communal effi-

Objections Voiced To Cuts Curtailing Air Mail Operation

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—(A.P.)—Opposition to any reduction in postoffice department appropriations which would curtail air mail and air passenger operations in the South has been voiced by representatives in Congress of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

This group has decided to join other forces in a common effort to prevent any such curtailment.

Under the economy program of the administration, Postmaster General Walter Brown has announced it will be necessary for the southern air mail and passenger lines to take a cut in their government revenues during the remainder of the fiscal year, as well as in the next fiscal year, along with other air transportation companies serving the country generally.

The reduction in revenues for the whole system during the next six months has been estimated at $600,000.

Among those taking part in the recent meeting here were Representatives Clark of North Carolina; McMillan and Gasque of South Carolina; Crisp, Larsen and Parker of Georgia; and Drane, Green, You and Mrs. Owen of Florida. The meeting was also attended by M. O. Dunning of Savannah, as the representative of the newly formed Coastal Coordinating Association.
