STUFF

Man gets by on the cheap

FORT LAUDERDALE — Roy Haynes is cheap and proud of it.

The man billed on the Joan Rivers show as the "Cheapest Man in America" buys the least expensive two-ply toilet paper and separates it into single-ply rolls.

He's so cheap that he hangs used paper towels to dry, then uses them over and over again.

Haynes buys clothes from clearance racks, spending no more than $10 on an item.

He'll walk to a nearby bank for a cup of free morning coffee. When he makes it at home, he'll usually mix used grounds with a little fresh coffee on top.

"You can't taste the difference," he said.

With his many money-saving tricks, he doesn't need a full-time job. He combs garbage bins for items he can fix, then sells them at flea markets or through classified ads.

He says he makes about $15,000 a year working about 20 hours a week.

Roy and his girlfriend, Lisa Handzel, just bought a new house in Tamarac.

"He was a big help in saving for the down payment," said Handzel, an insurance claims adjuster for The Travelers.

In the eight years they've been together, she said she's gotten used to his frugal ways. She knows that dining out usually means a free happy hour buffet.

Area stores pleased with holiday crowds

By GEORGE DUNCAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Area shoppers this weekend are sending economic signals much like the rest of the country optimistic for a strong retail holiday season.

Crowds were good at local stores although several managers said rain and bad weather reduced the number of customers.

Some upswings in economic signs across the nation have prompted retailers to predict a strong Christmas selling season. In a random survey, retailers locally are also optimistic.

Lisa Emerson, the senior merchandising manager for J.C. Penney, said the store's "gold ornament shopping spree" giveaway probably helped increase the after-Thanksgiving crowd at the store.

"We had a real good crowd. We were really busy from 8 to 11 a.m. It was pretty steady until the evening and was as good as last year. I'm pleased with the turnout," she said.

Shoppers bought a variety of items, with no one single item standing out as the choice of customers.

"Usually we sell a lot of sweaters this time of year but it hasn't been cool, but we did sell a lot of men's clothes," she said.

Patrick Reeves, the marketing assistant at the Sanford Kmart, said one of the hottest items this year is a Roller Blade Baby Doll. Unfortunately, he said, due to a manufacturing problem, it is one of the products the store is having a difficult time obtaining.

"We had a few and they're gone. Wish I had a million of them," he said.

Reeves said the store's sales were not quite up to the level of last year, but he attributed that to the bad weather.

"We almost made last year's goals, but the rain is what slowed it down. We did pretty good," he said.

The Kmart in Lake Mary reported sales at approximately the same level as last year's.

"We had a pretty good crowd, about average for this time of year. It wasn't an increase over last year, but about the same volume," said Assistant Manager Dan Crooke. "It could have been better if the weather had been better."

Perhaps the heaviest sales were in 'Aladdin' merchandise, which is tied into the new Disney

'Santa Claus' arrives in style to hear requests

By GEORGE DUNCAN
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — After asking about toys, local children's favorite question of Santa Claus and his operation concerns Rudolph, the red-nosed reindeer.

"Many kids ask about Rudolph. I tell them he's ready. With his red nose, he can show us where to go," said Santa Claus.

The ageless St. Nick spent the weekend at Fun/Flea World where he took requests from area children. More than 500 children saw his appearance Friday when he rode, not a sleigh, but a golf cart into the facility.

It was originally planned for Santa to ride in a T-bird but questionable weather caused the covered golf cart to be shifted into operation.

Santa said the requests for toys were running about this same this year, with most of the requests centering on Nintendo items, games, dolls, fire engines, trains and Barbie dolls.

However, although he told children he would be dropping in on Christmas Eve, he did lay down a holiday requirement.

Face-off: Sanford commission candidates

Beckner ready to serve city

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

- Candidate: Jordan Beckner
- Age: 34
- Marital status: Married, 3 children
- Residency: Sanford resident, 3 years. Central Florida, 14 years

Jordan Beckner says he loves Sanford. "I've been attending city meetings for over two years," he said. "I have always been interested in what is going on, and now I believe its time to become part of it."

"It's what I can do for the city," he said. "rather than what the city can do for me. I believe I can bring a fresh attitude to the commission, and do what is best for the future of the district as well as the entire city."

Kirchner says define needs

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

- Candidate: Bill Kirchner
- Age: 66
- Marital status: Single
- Residency: Sanford, 2 years. Central Florida, 11 years.

"I care about this city," Kirchner commented. "But I see its potential is not being met. I believe the best approach is to start establishing goals as far as 20 years in the future, then get everyone to work together on them."

"We need to establish the needs of our city," he said. "I am concerned about the next four years. I would like to see the commissioners get together with department heads and form a collective effort in accomplishing goals."

Among problems and needs for Sanford in the future, Kirchner sees problems in the historic district.

World War II bravery noted 50 years later

After Naval Air Station closed

Top O' the morn to you, folks! I'm still working on this ever growing stack of notes, calls and letters. But let me assure you I'm not complaining. Call or write to me anytime. I'm always glad to hear from you.

Regarding our recent articles about the Sanford Naval Air Station, we crossed paths recently with Mrs. Bobby Toeva, a licensed practical nurse. She reminded me that when the Naval Air Station closed in 1945 after World War II, Sanford's Fernald-Laughton Memorial Hospital, located for years at Fifth and Oak, moved to the base and occupied the Navy's vacant hospital facility.

When the base became operational again in 1950 our local hospital had to return to Fifth and Oak. A county-wide referendum to build a hospital failed. A second effort for a new county-wide hospital was successful and Seminole Memorial Hospital came into existence in the late 1950s.

Mrs. Toeva, originally from Philadelphia, came to Sanford via Tulsa, Okla. She was encouraged by T.E. "Gene" Tucker to seek employment when the local hospital was operating at the naval air station. At that time Tucker was

What do they do when they're not campaigning for mayor?

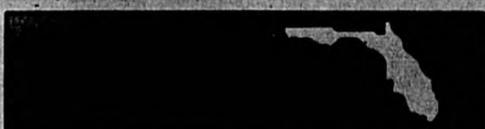

Sara Jacobson (seated) confers with Lucille Tarbert at the Country Courtyard, Jacobson's quilting shop in downtown Sanford. For over 25 years Jacobson has owned and managed several businesses in the area. She also enjoys mountain climbing, horseback riding, is a licensed airplane pilot, rides a motorcycle and is a sure shot with a pistol. She is making her first bid for elected office, but has served on numerous civic boards.

Bettye Smith, an accomplished pianist and singer, relaxes at home with some music. Smith currently serves on numerous government and civic boards along with her duties as mayor, wife, mother and grandmother. Smith returned to college when her children were grown, earning two degrees and establishing the first program for rape victims through the Seminole County Sheriff's Department. She is making her third bid for mayor.

Scholarship houses provide

TALLAHASSEE — From keeping up grades to cleaning up after meals, Andrew Watkins says the scholarship program that lets him attend Florida State University gives him some of his best learning experiences.

That's normal for students in Southern Scholarship Foundation houses that executive director Joseph Mizereck calls one of Florida's best kept secrets.

Watkins, a 21-year-old junior from Dallas, said the house he shares with 16 other students offers much more than free room and board.

"It's really great to be in a community of individuals who really have their heads screwed on tight," he said.

"It feels more like a sorority or a fraternity," said Andrea Losonky, 19, of Baltimore, a Florida State sophomore living in another scholarship house.

The program started 43 years ago when Florida State's acting education dean, Made Lu Stone, got permission to let several students live in a cooperative arrangement in an abandoned Dale Mabry Airfield barracks.

That evolved into the Southern Scholarship Foundation Inc., a private, not-for-profit corporation that houses 317 young men and women in 13 scholarship houses at Florida State, four at the University of Florida in Gainesville and one at Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona Beach.

Angry growers sue

ORLANDO — These Florida growers feel abandoned, insulted and angry. Some have seen their livelihoods destroyed, many are filing lawsuits, and some are threatening boycotts.

They are growers of indoor plants, foliage, trees, landscape shrubbery. Some grow strawberries, orchids or tomatoes. Their common link is that they sprayed the fungicide Benlate DF on their crops. Now they have been shut out of a claim-and-compensation process by which Benlate maker Du Pont Inc. paid out $300 million — $400 million in Florida.

Du Pont did an about face earlier this month and said new research shows Benlate did not cause the problems. The company stopped paying claims.

While most growers with losses were compensated and are back in production, a small number were left out of the process by Du Pont's Nov. 9 announcement in West Palm Beach.

Tax amnesty program is working

By The Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida's tax deadbeats have coughed up more than $823,000 since a state tax amnesty program began Oct. 1.

With billboards and ads urging laggards to pay up now or risk jail, the program already has been deemed a success by officials who predict collections will soar above the $900,000 goal when amnesty ends Dec. 31.

But some lawmakers and outside experts are much less enthusiastic, noting the money is only a sliver of the estimated $1 billion in state taxes that go unpaid every year.

"Every little bit helps, and this is a little Every little bit helps, and this is a little bit."

—Rep. Mike Abrams

bit," said state Rep. Mike Abrams, D-North Miami Beach, chairman of the House tax committee. "It's not an exciting number. I thought it would be higher than that."

John Long, D-Land O' Lakes, chairman of the House budget committee, said the best the program may do is raise awareness. "The thing is, we all just know there's a lot more out there."

University of South Florida political scientist Susan MacManus said the amnesty program, the state's third since 1987, may be sending the wrong message.

"Basically, we're saying to businesses that if you want to cheat, you can do it ... because if you wait, there will be another amnesty."

Instead, MacManus said, the state should target a few tax cheats, including large corporations, in each metropolitan area and make a high-profile example of them with tax charges.

The Legislature adopted the amnesty program last spring and gave the Revenue Department $350,000 for a hard-nosed advertising campaign to tell taxpayers about it.

The program allows people who knowingly or unknowingly skipped tax bills to make good and avoid criminal charges.

Marijuana-smoking AIDS victim: Let others inhale

By BILL KAGAN, Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY BEACH, Fla. — The nation's only AIDS victim who can legally smoke marijuana says he hopes President-elect Clinton will allow others to use the drug for medical reasons.

Kenny Jenks, who contracted the AIDS virus from hemophilia medication made from human blood, chairs the Marijuana/AIDS Research Service, or MARS.

"Our major goal is to have marijuana on a prescription basis like any other drug where the decision would be between the doctor and the patient," Jenks said. "It should be an option."

The group, an offshoot of the Washington-based Alliance for Cannabis Therapeutics, or ACT, disseminates information on how people can use marijuana in AIDS therapy. Jenks smokes it to alleviate nausea and vomiting caused by other drugs he must take.

MARS also is pushing for reactivation of a federal program that allowed marijuana smoking on a case-by-case basis as an experimental treatment for cancer, AIDS, blindness-causing glaucoma, paralysis, muscular dystrophy and chronic pain. The program stopped accepting new patients earlier this year.

"We've been in touch with some people and we are hopeful ... the Clinton administration can make the government keep its promise and open the program back up," Jenks said.

Jenks and others already in the program were allowed to continue legally smoking government-supplied marijuana cigarettes. Another 28 people who had been approved by the Food and Drug Administration were not allowed to participate.

"Some of those people went blind. I know some of them who died" from AIDS, Jenks said. "I really believe they'd probably still be here had they gotten their marijuana and been able to use it. They simply waste away."

That's what happened to Jenks' wife, Barbra. She acquired the virus from him and died March 28.

"AIDS can be real devastating toward the end," Jenks said. "You don't even recognize the people you once knew."

Jenks, 30, said they were married when he was 20 and she 15. They moved from Tucson, Ariz., to the Florida Panhandle so they could live in a home his father, a now-retired U.S. customs agent, owned in Apalachicola.

They moved to this resort city after he began studying horticulture at a vocational school in neighboring Panama City. He put his knowledge to use by cultivating marijuana in his yard before he found out about the now-canceled federal program.

Jenks credits marijuana with extending his wife's life three years after doctors gave her only a month to live.

"If we hadn't stopped the nausea and vomiting with the marijuana, certainly she would have died earlier," he said. "And in that three years a lot got accomplished. ... For us it really was a miracle, kind of."

Police discovered what Jenks was growing in his yard and arrested the couple in 1990. A judge convicted them but the sentence he ordered was to do 500 hours of community service by taking care of other.

The case attracted national attention to medicinal marijuana use and an appeal court reversed their convictions. The judges ruled their marijuana use was not criminal but an act of medical necessity.

In the course of preparing their defense, the couple found out about the federal marijuana program and both eventually were allowed to participate.

Armed robbery charged

Anthony Bernard Oliver, 39, of Richmond, Va. was charged with armed robbery and theft when he was arrested by Sanford Police on Wednesday.

Police said that he robbed a man of $10 at gunpoint in the area of 11th St. and Poplar, Sanford. They said that he attempted to put a gun into the victim's mouth in an effort to get the victim to turn over his wallet.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $12,000 bond.

Aggravated assault

Jennifer Lee McBriarty, 20, and Timothy Ellis, 19, 702 Osceola Dr., Sanford, were charged with aggravated assault when they were arrested by Altamonte Springs Police on Friday.

Police said that when another vehicle tried to pass their own, which was stopped on Montgomery Road in Altamonte Springs, Ellis threw something at the car when it stopped. Police said he started to punch the passenger of the car and both passenger and driver got out of the car to defend themselves.

The driver of the truck Ellis had been in (McBriarty) threw Ellis a bat which he used to smash the rear of the car, police said.

Police said the victims tried to retreat. They said McBriarty also drove away.

Police said when the victims came up to their vehicle, Ellis threw his bat at their car. They stopped again, police said, and McBriarty got out of the truck with an axe.

Police said McBriarty and Ellis threatened to get a gun and shoot the victims.

They were taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,000 bond each.

Disorderly intoxication charged

Stephen Lamar Haney, 36, who gave officers no address, was charged with disorderly intoxication when he was arrested by Sanford Police on Thursday.

Police said he was found sitting under a tree at Park on Park with his pants unzipped and his underwear exposed.

When they approached him for questioning, they detected a strong odor of alcohol on his breath.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $100 bond.

Trespass after warning charged

Steve Suk Lee, 28, 2107 Amelia Ave., Sanford, was charged with trespass after warning when he was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's officers on Thursday.

Deputies said he arrived at the victim's home and started throwing furniture around the residence.

They removed him from the home and tried to issue him a trespass warning, but he re-entered the home and started another verbal argument, officers said.

He refused to leave and was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $500 bond.

Aggravated assault charged

Emory Holmes, Jr., 59, 3424 E. 21st St. was charged with aggravated assault when he was arrested on Thursday by Seminole County sheriff's deputies.

Officers said his wife reported that she went to a neighbor's home and said Holmes had been threatening her life.

When she returned home she found him in the carport, holding a six inch knife in "a stabbing position," police reports state.

Police said he threatened to kill her.

Police found him hiding near an aluminum shed and found the knife nearby.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,000 bond.

Argument leads to charges

Theotis Williams, 52, 2250 Church St., Sanford, was charged with disorderly intoxication when he was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Thursday.

Officers said he had been sent out of the house by his girlfriend to "cool off and sober up" after an argument.

Officers said he had broken out a window and was standing in the yard cursing and that he appeared drunk.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $100 bond.

Drug charges filed

Howard Wayne Carter, 19, 3 Castle Brewer Ct., Sanford, was charged with the sale and delivery of crack cocaine when he was arrested on Wednesday.

Police said he sold two pieces of crack cocaine to undercover officers for $20.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. Bond had not been set.

DUI arrests

Charles Wesley Hatcher, 38, 613 Magnolia Ave., was taken into custody by Seminole County sheriff's deputies at U.S. 17-92 and Live Oak.

Thomas Anthony Richer, 23, 1320 Ridgelaque Cir., Longwood, was taken into custody by Seminole County sheriff's deputies at U.S. Highway 17-92 and Concord Dr. in Caselberry.

John Anthony Papineau, 23, 1104-B County Road 427, Longwood.

All were held in lieu of $100 bond at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Cops in Dahmer probe axed

By ANTHONY BRADIS
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE — The city was right to refuse to rehire two patrolmen who left a drugged, naked boy in the care of serial killer Jeffrey L. Dahmer, because the men simply failed in their duty, say relatives of Dahmer's victims.

"They didn't do their jobs so they deserve to be fired," said Shirley Hughes, whose son Anthony was Dahmer's 12th victim.

His remains were in Dahmer's bedroom and undetected by the officers who went to Dahmer's apartment May 27, 1991.

Joseph Gabrish, 29, and John Balcersak, 35, had pleaded guilty to an administrative charge that they failed to investigate when they encountered Konerak Sinthasomphone, 14, naked and incoherent outside Dahmer's apartment.

After his arrest two months later, Dahmer confessed to killing the boy hours after the officers left the two alone.

He is serving life in prison for 15 killings in Milwaukee County and one in Ohio. Police who eventually searched his apartment found human heads, torsos and skulls inside.

Police Chief Philip Arcoia fired the officers Sept. 6, 1991. He said they disregarded procedure, including checking the boy's medical condition and filing reports that would have alerted authorities that Dahmer had a sex-crime history.

The officers' attorney, Ken Murray, said they were "scapegoats" for a police administration that didn't have the "guts or courage to take the heat" over the matter. He said he would appeal.

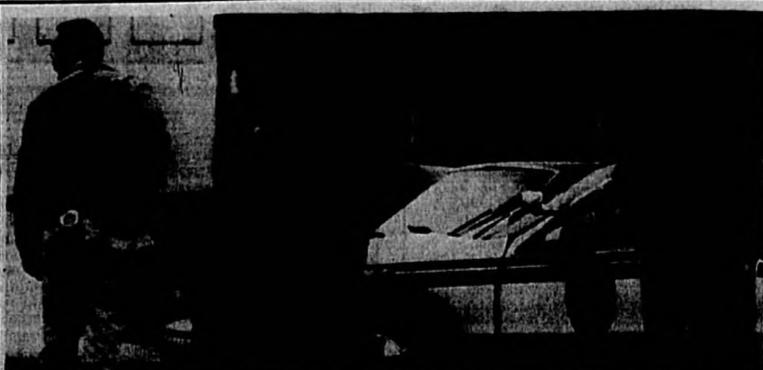

But Catherine Lacy, whose son Oliver was Dahmer's 10th victim, said she wasn't "doubting that they were good police officers, but they did not do their job."

A spokesman for relatives of some of Dahmer's victims said the decision eased tensions over allegations the officers showed racism and contempt for homosexuals.

Dahmer, 32, told police the officers accepted his explanation that the boy was his adult homosexual lover and had gotten drunk, and complaints by black neighbors about the officers' decision to leave were disregarded.

Transcripts also showed the officers joked about the incident during police radio transmissions.

Art Murchison, a counselor to victim relatives, said the decision "gave a strong message to the city of Milwaukee, black and white, Catholic or whatever, gay and straight, to put aside the prejudices."

All in a day's work

Sanford Police officers were just doing their job Friday when a suspect matching a description of a wanted person was spotted on French Avenue. The suspect was released after questioning.

Man kills self at home shared by ex-girlfriend

By The Associated Press

OAK HILL, Fla. — A man who served a jail term for beating his live-in girlfriend killed himself on her bed after she got a restraining order to keep him away, authorities said.

Kenneth Russell Johnson, 32, threatened to kill Verna Forgette early Friday, but she slipped out of the house they once shared.

Johnson fired five or six shots at Volusia County sheriff's deputies, who fired back over several hours with a shotgun blast and five canisters of tear gas.

Deputies found his body when they entered the house, and a preliminary report from the medical examiner's office said he died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

Mrs. Forgette, 46, said she was sleeping on her living room sofa when Johnson awakened her about 2 a.m. by tapping on the window.

He had been released from jail Nov. 13 after serving 135 days on an assault and battery charge filed by Mrs. Forgette, who said she obtained a restraining order to keep him away.

Johnson was in her house for three hours before pulling a gun, and Sid Parker, who rents a room from Mrs. Forgette, said he overheard Johnson's threats and sneaked out of the house to call for help. Mrs. Forgette fled when Johnson turned his back.

Deputies thought they heard a door slamming, but it apparently was the sound of Johnson's fatal shot.

Endorsing candidate for mayor

Sanford's mayor is a sea captain of sorts. She must chart a steady course, plunging through both calm and turbulent economic and social waves. She is charged with steering her crew toward precise decisions that affect her passengers. Her passengers may just be along for the ride, but more probably they expect a safe, comfortable voyage about which they can tell all their friends.

Bettye Smith has been the captain of this ship, Sanford, for eight years.

She should be re-elected to finish the trip toward a better city.

Among projects left to finish, according to Smith, are the Duany project and the Mainstreet Program. Implementation of both will mean a resurgence of Sanford's historic residential and commercial areas. When Smith originally took office eight years ago, the historic residential district was sordid multi-family and was a magnet for transients and crime. Smith admits vestiges of these problems still exist. Change comes slowly to down-on-their-luck once genteeled neighborhoods and within the confines of legal government and little money. During the past eight years, through citizens' efforts, the area was rezoned single family and placed on the National Register of Historic Places. The city has contributed funds to both the Duany Project, a master plan for the area, and to the Mainstreet Program, a vehicle by which state and federal grants can help rejuvenate the commercial area.

Seminole Towne Center, the regional mall on the brink of breaking ground, is another project Smith should finish. The mall will stimulate employment, sorely needed here. Despite the mall's problems, the mall's success will mean Sanford's success. After all, the mall owners could have been wised one exit either way, to Hawthorn or to Deltona.

Smith has also been involved in the planning stages of the Seminole County expressway, assigned now to the inevitable advent of the Greenway, she has worked in Sanford's interest establishing its route. Smith originally voted for the expressway, later admitting she had made a mistake and amending that vote. "I'm human," she said. "I made a mistake."

Perhaps Smith's strongest suite is her interest in people with a wide range of causes that meld into what Sanford is. The ubiquitous mayor serves on numerous government and civic boards and in several service organizations. She is the Martin Luther King chair, rings the bell for the Salvation Army Kettle Drive, sits on a new advisory board for Sanford High School's Health Care Services, pleads drug cases with a group of concerned citizens and even started the first rape crisis center as a victim's advocate for the sheriff's department.

Her opponent, Sara Jacobson, is back in the civic limelight. A founder of the Downtown Development Corporation, later renamed the Greater Sanford Development Corporation, Jacobson was very active in city-wide beautification efforts and with commercial development in the mid 1970s to mid 80s. Streetscape and facade improvements are largely due to her efforts. She was instrumental in the designation of the commercial area in the National Register of Historic Places. It's good to see her back, willing to lead her business acumen to building a stronger government. We hope her rekindled passion for positive changes here will continue to burn brightly.

But in the midst of many projects that she has nurtured and that will soon come to fruition under her stewardship, Bettye Smith should remain mayor.

The cruise into the next four years could well be the last leg of a journey to a revitalized and prosperous Sanford.

Now is not the time to jump ship.

State must deal with repeat offenders

In August 1992, research data became available about the application of Florida's Habitual Offender Statute. The research had been commissioned by the House Committee on Criminal Justice and Corrections.

Historically, in 1927, the Florida Legislature adopted its first habitual offender statute of general application. Provisions of the law called for enhanced minimum sentences for felony offenders. During the 1970s, various changes were made in the statute. The 1971 statute granted the court authority "to impose harsher sentences on habitual offenders if necessary for the protection of the public."

The year 1983 marked a landmark year in Florida's criminal justice system. Sentencing guidelines were introduced. Florida exchanged indeterminate sentencing that utilized parole and rehabilitation to determine sentencing with no parole and punishment as the primary goal.

Florida's Supreme Court rendered the habitual offender statute invalid in 1986 because it conflicted with the sentencing guidelines. However, in 1989, the Legislature passed laws re-establishing enhanced sentences for some defendants classified as habitual offenders. Persons so classified were automatically excluded from basic gain time and any type of sentence reduction geared to early release to decrease overcrowding.

Florida is divided into 20 circuits with 20 state attorneys. The authority for application of the habitual offender statute rests with each state attorney. The state attorney decides whether or not to designate an offender, who meets the statutory criteria, as a habitual offender. The Circuit Court determines that the criteria have been met or whether an offender is eligible to be habitualized, even if not recommended by the state attorney.

The research addressed three principal questions. Is the habitual statute being used selectively against the worst offenders? Has the application of the habitual offender statute undermined the goal of uniform sentencing? Has the habitual offender statute been applied in a racially disparate manner?

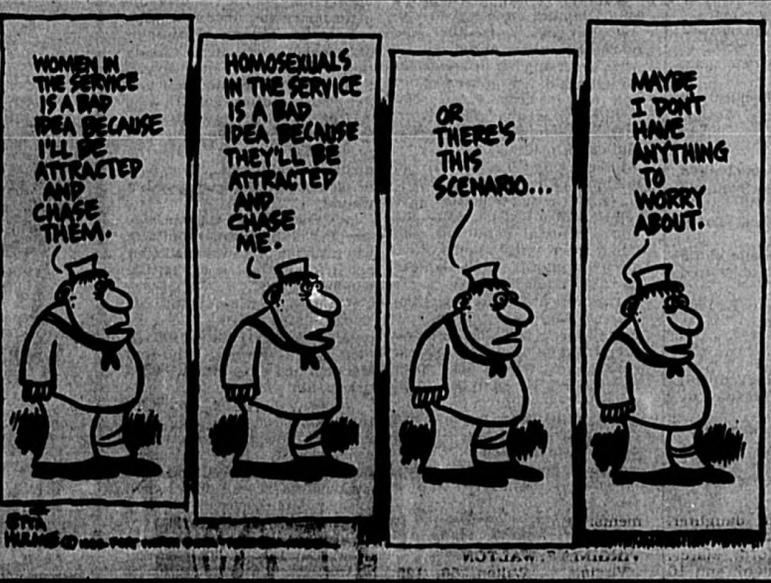

Research indicated that only one circuit, the eleventh (Miami) was using the habitual offender statute selectively against the worst offenders. Miami "habitualized" more high serious-level offenders than medium level offenders, and more medium level offenders than low level offenders." Consequently, statewide, there is a weak relationship between seriousness of primary offense and habitualization.

Relative to the second question explored by the researchers, the conclusion was that "Florida does not have a uniform statewide system of criminals designated as habitual. The 20 sentencing systems vary markedly in their treatment of offenders eligible for habitualization."

Research results relative to the final question, the application of the statute in a racially neutral manner, revealed that the race of the prisoner was a significant factor. The Eleventh Circuit (Miami) and the Twelfth Circuit (Sarasota) are the only two circuits in the state where the habitual offender sanctions were applied equitably to black and white offenders. It was also determined that prosecutors were more apt to use the statute against males than female offenders.

The growth in prison population because of the habitual offenders is a problem the state will have to solve. Habitual offenders accounted for 14.5 percent of the prison population as of June 30, 1992. Projections are that they will account for 47 percent by 1995-96.

Charting the course of aging

BOSTON — There is a condom on the coffee table. It's been there for weeks now, in a photograph, displayed genteelly between the manicured fingertips of Elizabeth Taylor, the way her grandmother might have held a teacup.

The image is meant to be startling, I suppose, the cover for a story about Taylor's gutsy work for AIDS. But whenever I glance down at the portrait I think more about the message in Taylor's face than the one in her hand.

This is what has captured my attention: Elizabeth Taylor at 60, airbrushed within an inch of her life. Elizabeth Taylor at 60, nipped, tucked, lifted — ? — out of her peer group. Elizabeth Taylor at 60 — not exactly "National Velvet" but somewhere between "Cleopatra" and "Virginia Woolf." Looking 35 and holding.

Is this what 60 looks like? At its best? Or at its worst?

In the past decade, we have charted the middle-aging of female models and role models. Women who are fortysomething are being allowed out in public although they almost always wear a label that reads: "still." Still attractive at 40. Still youthful at 45.

But gradually it has occurred to me that women are only being given an extension on aging. They are not being given permission to age gracefully. The culture is telling women they can be younger longer. It is not welcoming old women.

So, I wonder, is this progress for women or progress for the beauty business? Must we still want to be youthful at 65?

I belong to the generation that has made menopause a subject for best-seller lists and polite conversation. Sometimes, my friends sit at lunch unabashedly gossiping about the choices other women make, women who are older but not necessarily wiser, about how to age.

Did a slimmer, drug-free Lis Taylor buy a new face to go with her new life? Or to go with her new, younger husband? One friend calls it a positive act. Another calls it depressing.

Did Jane Fonda, physically fit beyond most women's dreams, buy new breasts? One defends her right to fight aging. Another cites her pursuit of youth as proof of low self-esteem.

When any television broadcaster or actress goes under the plastic surgeon's knife, one will defend it as pragmatic. Another will ruefully describe it as a disaster.

The other night, a friend called to read a line spoken by Carolyn Heilbrun, a scholar and detective story writer. "I used to be thin," Heilbrun told a reporter. "But after 55, I said, 'Oh, the hell with it.'"

My friend laughed with delight and promised to tape this remark to her refrigerator. But I know that her refrigerator holds nothing inside that could contribute to middle-aged spread.

This gossiping we do is not idle at all. It's a conversation, full of curiosity and anxiety, about age and power and invisibility. A conversation about the future.

What is it that Germaine Greer wrote in her great, sprawling, infuriating, and illuminating, unmade bed of a book, "The Change"? "There is no accepted style for the older woman, no way of saying through dress and demeanor, 'I am my age. Respect it.'"

"She has a duty to go on being attractive no matter how old she is with the whole business. She is not allowed to say, 'Now I shall let myself go.' ... For if a woman never lets herself go, how will she ever know how far she might have gone?"

How far to go? Anyone of us can come up with a handful of appalling images of old ladies from painter Georgia O'Keeffe to Gray Panther Maggie Kubie, to, of course, Katharine Hepburn. All women who went far. But it's hard to chart a path through that second awkward age between middle and old.

In the world we live in, and sex is more acceptable fare for a magazine cover than a 60-year-old face. In this world, it takes more confidence, more nerve, more power for a woman of a certain age to look that age, than to carry a condom in public.

But today, I will put aside the portrait of the movie star with the invader eyes and put aside those thoughts as well. A new issue of the magazine has arrived at my door bearing a new image. On the cover is Candice Bergen, 58, in a black, well-tailored suit.

Clinton must deal with a testy Iran

WASHINGTON — Three U.S. presidents have gone down in flames in a feckless pursuit of elusive "moderates" in the medieval mullah government of Iran. It cost Jimmy Carter re-election, Ronald Reagan the most serious scandal of his administration and George Bush a fatal political controversy on election eve.

How can President-elect Bill Clinton avoid watching his administration ship-wreck in that part of the world? Iran is already launching verbal torpedoes, marking the Clinton victory with "death to America" demonstrations, and shooting one across the bow of the incoming president.

Iran's spiritual leader, Ayatollah Khamenei, over Teheran radio, condemned Clinton's support of human rights as the "creation of the minds of the wicked analysts and political activists of the World Arrangement." Khamenei leaped out, saying:

"In a few days, the world will witness a repetition of this preposterous scene, with the new American president charging others with violations of human rights."

A variety of early signs point to the fact that Clinton and Vice President-elect Al Gore appear ready to join the bait. Their administration will suffer no shortage of institutional memory regarding Iranian mullahs masked as moderates. The foreign policy transition shop is stocked with former State Department officials from the Carter administration who bear deep scars from the 1979 U.S. Embassy hostage ordeal.

A Clinton administration might start by canceling the diplomatic search parties that have been hurrying for the elusive Iranian "moderates" for more than a decade, by harboring no illusions about converting radicals into moderates, and by extending a hand to Iran's growing opposition group, the People's Mojahedin.

Advisers to Clinton and Gore have conferred with People's Mojahedin officials to explore alternatives to the failed policies of their American predecessors, sources told our associate Dale Van Atta. A Clinton official confirms the contacts, but minimizes their meaning. He explains that the campaign was flooded with phone calls from attention-clamoring opposition groups from practically every country in the world, including the People's Mojahedin.

Still, the fact that Iran has undertaken an aggressive rearmament effort has apparently alarmed Clinton more than any other international development. If his relative outspokenness is an omen, he spoke by telephone after his election, for example, with Saudi Arabia's King Fahd and shared his concerns that "new hostile powers" could represent a regional threat. The Clinton-Fahd conversation went beyond the ceremonial calls made to dozens of world leaders.

Even though Clinton is playing his foreign policy cards close to the vest, spokesman George Stephanopoulos later revealed that Clinton told Fahd he is "committed to the security of the Gulf and Saudi Arabia." Defending U.S. interests in the Gulf will be infinitely more difficult as Iran grows more menacing as a military power, one bent on acquiring nuclear arms.

There are other tea leaves suggesting a sea change in U.S. policy. Just a week prior to the general election, Gore signed a letter urging such a shift in U.S. policy. The letter, dated Oct. 29, to the U.N. Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, was signed by a whopping 63 of the 100 U.S. senators in which they stated that previous condemnation of human rights abuses in Iran had been far too light, and more needed to be done. Gore is a key member of the Clinton foreign policy brain trust.

Three U.S. presidents have gone down in flames in a feckless pursuit.

Rockets unmanned after Discovery's next flight

By MARGIA DUNN
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL — The Defense Department, one of NASA's best space shuttle customers, is jumping ship and taking with it the secrecy that has veiled many shuttle missions.

Already gone are the secret conference rooms and safes in which secret flight plans were locked, and most of the encryption equipment.

Gone are the multiple security checks and badges that were required for several hundred people: only about 50 flight controllers will need special clearance for this week's flight by the shuttle Discovery.

Discovery is set to lift off this week with a secret military satellite, the 10th and supposedly last shuttle mission dedicated to Defense Department work. The countdown for Wednesday morning's launch was set to begin Sunday.

"This flight represents the end of an era for NASA and the shuttle program," said NASA flight director Rob Kelso.

After this mission, the military plans to rely solely on unmanned rockets to hoist major payloads into space.

"It's a combination of economic and national security requirements," explained Navy Capt. David Walker, commander of Discovery's flight.

It's also a way to assure access to space, Air Force officials said. Shuttles were grounded for 2½ years after Challenger exploded in 1986, and there's no telling how long shuttle flights might be on hold if another disaster occurs.

Discovery, with a five-man military crew, is being used for this last satellite-delivery job simply because NASA still owed the Defense Department a ride under an agreement transacted in the 1980s, officials said.

Everything about the satellite aboard Discovery — where it will go once it's deployed and what it will do when it gets there — is secret. But unlike previous classified military missions, almost everything else about the weeklong flight is wide open.

Complete secrecy would have cost millions more.

The Defense Department had been paying up to $50 million a year to maintain capability for classified shuttle operations, and that cost was expected to soar to $70 million, said Air Force Lt. Col. James McLeroy of the Defense Department's Space Test Program.

It wasn't worth the cost considering how few military shuttle missions were planned, McLeroy said.

For this last military mission, the public will see no television views of Discovery's cargo bay, even after the satellite is released. The mounting equipment remaining on the shuttle could give away the identity of the satellite, Kelso said.

Space policy analyst John Pike of the Federation of American Scientists believes the payload is a Lacrosse radar-imaging satellite.

The gear needed for secrecy could be reinstalled, of course, if the Defense Department wanted to another secret orbital flight, McLeroy said.

My Little Boy and Me

I dreamed I held you, just the other day.
You hadn't really changed, three years ago today.
I do remember laughing, as we began to play.
You held my hand so tightly.
And squeezed my face so hard.
That little boy that I so love,
was home, in my arms.
I told you how I missed you, and how very hard I've tried to carry on without you,
when it hurts so much inside.
You looked at me and smiled,
somehow knowing what I had said.
I remember, I started crying,
as the dream quickly fled.
My tears continued falling,
as I ask you, "Let him stay."
I awoke at that same moment.
The rain, had washed it all away.
I guess I'll never know,
why you had to leave.
But I thank you for that "special dream," of My Little Boy And Me.
I LOVE YOU AND MISS YOU JARED

Residency: Sanford, 8 years. Central Florida 84 years

Bob Church says he has been considering running for election since he first moved to Sanford. "I haven't tried to seek office up until now," he said, "but I believe this year, more than ever, new leadership as well as a better direction is needed."

"While I am running for district 1," he said, "I intend to make decisions that involve all of the city. I live here. I have the time, and want to be a full time commissioner, and not just available on the weekends."

Among the problems and needs Church sees for the city during the next four years, he lists improvement of city codes, continued development of historic homes, downtown improvements, crime, and drug abuse.

"I believe we can work with Chief Harriett to improve the networking with other law enforcement agencies in a massive campaign against drugs," he said. "Our goal should be to have the drug abusers put out of business. Let it be known we want no drugs in Sanford."

"We need more cooperation between people and neighborhoods," he projected. "The City Commission must no longer maintain an isolation attitude. It must continue to operate progressively and not become stagnant. We need input from the people in order to avoid racial prejudice and get the city into a new attitude."

Regarding code enforcement, he admitted some progress had been made recently. "We need strong codes and strong enforcement in both the historic residential and business areas," he said.

"We must be certain the historic homes are properly maintained. They could be the jewel in Sanford's crown if we managed to keep them attractive. As for the downtown area, it not only needs a great deal of rebuilding, but it needs a new spirit in order to start eliminating the growing number of vacant buildings we have," he said. "The downtown people are proud of the city, and I will do whatever possible to help keep the pride going, and improve the area."

"I want to be a full time commissioner," he concluded, "not just a person who is available at two meetings a month."

crime, and drainage problems. "I head my local neighborhood watch group," he explained, "and at a recent meeting with 30 families showing up, I found that 15 of them had been violated by the criminal element. This shows me how serious the problem is," he added. "Arrests have gone down since 1980, but crime is up. I think we need to work more closely with our law enforcement officers to make the fight against crime more effective."

"When I make decisions as a member of the commission," he projected, "I would take into consideration all income levels. If it's a problem that deals with many types of people, we should make contacts and get input from them before making a decision. A commissioner should also act as a liaison between the people and the government."

He continued, "I believe disagreements should be brought out into the open."

views out on the table and debate, then do what is best for the majority." He added, "I believe the majority should be allowed to change the various codes that protect the city."

"From what I know about them now, I would support the Duany project and the Mainstreet Project," he said. "I support any plan that will benefit the commercial or residential historic districts of our city, as long as they are well thought-out, a majority of people are in agreement over it, and it is financially realistic."

In conclusion he said, "My wife Laura grew up here, and her family are long time residents. I believe in the family and the strength of the family. I see a potential here greater than anywhere else in Central Florida. I don't want to see the potential squandered or lost. Sanford appears to be standing still at this time and it's a shame. It's time to get the wheels back into

Beckner

He continued, "But a person needs more than just a civic attitude. He needs to be a fighter for improvements all the time or nothing will be accomplished. I don't believe there has been much fighting for the people going on lately, and as a result, nothing tremendously good has been proposed for the city during the past years."

Regarding problems and needs, Beckner took the need to eliminate a small town approach to things, more communication between boards and the people, and the need to make decisions with an open mind.

"I don't want to see Sanford develop into a big city," he says. "We don't want problems like Orlando has, but we can't continue saying we are a small town either. That's not the attitude that will produce decisions that will affect our future."

On crime problems, Beckner sees Sanford being no different from other cities. "Crime is an epidemic across the nation," he said. "But the difference between us and other cities is that we are doing something while others don't. We are not just reacting to the problem, we are trying to prevent it."

"For the future," he said, "I see the future commission, the airport having transportation services, I envision the historic areas of both downtown and the residential neighborhoods improving and expanding."

"Just like Port Landwale emerged here in the big city of Miami," he said, "we can do the same thing near Orlando."

"I moved to Sanford because it wasn't a big city," Beckner said. "And I don't know if it will ever become that large, but I don't want to be caught off guard. People will be coming to Sanford and Sanford has got to be ready."

Residence: Sanford resident for 15 years

Lon Howell has served as City Commissioner in district 1 for the past four years. "I believe I haven't finished what I set out to do," he said. "The battle against crime, the conclusion of the Seminole Towne Center Mall, and a decrease in citizen taxes are several projects I want to see to completion."

"During the past four years," he said, "I have seen Sanford build a new fire station, get involved in a drainage project and complete a HUD grant to allow four new police officers to go into community based law enforcement."

"For the next four years," he said, "we shouldn't turn our backs on crime. People come into town looking for a place to live or establish a new business, and while the Chamber of Commerce and others may try to paint a rosy picture, they can't overlook our crime rate."

"I believe in the concept of the Duany Project," he explained. "But when it comes to allowing multi-family residences in the historic district, we may be opening a can of worms. This needs serious consideration and

Dec. 6 to receive the honor. Ryan said he was a little surprised when notified of the award.

"This is 50 years later. I had almost completely forgotten about it. Apparently the Russians hadn't. They finally recognized they wanted to do something along this line and began that program," he said.

Ryan sailed in a "Liberty" ship that hailed supplies to the northernmost port in the Soviet Union when the country was under assault by the German army.

Until recently, the Soviet government downplayed any American support during the war. Ryan said, but in the aftermath of the Cold War, Russian officials apparently have a different view of the war.

The awards will go to Ryan and other American veterans who participated in the Battle of the Atlantic while sailing as voluntary seamen in Allied convoys to the United Kingdom.

"I've said that it wasn't a very dramatic episode of courage and heroism under attack by German submarines and German airplanes when you get down to the coast," Ryan said.

However, seamen did not dwell on the constant danger, he said.

"This was something we had chosen to do and just accepted it as that way," he said.

An engineer while serving, Ryan said it was his function to make sure all the engines were functioning properly.

"Every seaman had a specific duty, mine was in the engine room. It was a four-hour morning, eight-hour rest, then four hours in the evening. That just repeated itself day in and day out until you finally got there," he said.

Ryan, who is a longtime resident of Seminole County, retired from the Naval Reserve in 1954. He later served for 10 years as the administrative director of the port authority in Seminole County and as president of the Central Florida Zoological Society.

study." Howell said it will take cooperation. "The Historic Trust needs to sit down and talk with people in the district," he said. "Some aspects of the Duany project may have advantages for the people while some may not. We must be certain the advantages outweigh the disadvantages before going ahead with the code changes he has suggested."

"I really believe we have growth ahead of us," Howell said. "I don't see the mall being a serious problem to the downtown area if downtown is associated with the Florida State Bank of Sanford headed by E.O. Kilpatrick. The bank was a part of the McNulty banking system based in Melbourne.

Mrs. Toews, or as she prefers to be called, Bobby, still does private duty nursing. But at one time she left nursing for six years to become — of all things — an aircraft mechanic. She did this at Blaine Airport in the Longwood area.

In recalling her experiences working at the local hospital at Fifth and Oak and at the base, she remembered how she enjoyed working with Pauline Lake, Helen Bradley and a number of others. I really enjoyed my chat with Bobby.

Writing about the former naval air base reminds me of a call I got recently. The caller wanted to know how much the airport operations were costing the Sanford taxpayers. He said he had read in The Herald that the Sanford City Commission had approved the Airport Authority's budget for the fiscal year 1982-83.

He specifically asked what percentage of his city tax dollar went to support the airport's budget.

I advised him that not one red cent of what he pays the city in taxes supported the airport's budget. That's because the airport is operated on fees from take-offs and landings, profits from the sale of aircraft fuel, fees collected from the rental of buildings and space to the various firms located at the base, and — among other things — grants for capital improvements from the Federal Aviation Administration.

On the other hand, if the airport turns a profit — and it usually does — the City of Sanford and its taxpayers do not realize a single red cent for the city's general operating fund or any other city fund. In other words, any receipts over and above expenditures generated by operations must be "plowed" back into the airport's capital improvement program.

Since the Navy left in 1966 "profits" have provided new taxiways, repaving of runways, new runway lighting systems, new control tower and things of that nature. Why?

You see, the airport and all the facilities there including the acreage, in the event of a national emergency could revert to federal control on a moment's notice.

And, that's why citizens of Sanford pay no taxes to operate the Central Florida Regional Airport and do not realize any of the net income it might produce. However, there is a provision that the City Commission has the responsibility of "revisiting" the CFRA budget. And, that's probably because members of the airport authority are appointed by the City Commission.

One of my recent columns about the Sanford Naval Air Station that explained the "politics" involved in the Navy's operations here being moved to Turner Air Force Base near Albany, Ga. generated several questions about the 800 or so homes Navy families left in the Sanford area.

Most of those homes had been financed with FHA and VA guaranteed mortgages. These two Federal agencies paid off the mortgages and acquired ownership of the houses. These structures were refurbished inside and out and listed with licensed real estate brokers in the area.

Buyers with acceptable incomes and credit ratings acquired these homes for as little as $8,000 with down payments as small as $100. Some monthly payments were as little as $70 which included principal, interest, taxes and insurance.

And, it's sort of ironic that some of these same homes today are being sold for prices running from $45,000 to $65,000.

Every now and then I encounter old timers who tell me they could give themselves a good swift kick in the posterior for not assuming the mortgages on some of these homes Navy families were willing to let them have without qualifying.

I recall one home in particular. A Navy officer and his wife couldn't sell it to realize any equity in what they had in the home. They simply decided the home to a local couple who assumed a mortgage of approximately $21,000. Today, I would estimate that particular home would easily be worth $100,000.

All I can say at this point is this: Those were the days "Way Back Then."

When asked whether they have been good during the year, a great many kids are noncommittal, he said.

Although Florida is a change from the North Pole, Santa said he likes the climate. "Although

Clinton gets tips from Reagan, offers of help

By KAREN BALL
Associated Press Writer

SUMMERLAND, Calif. — President-elect Clinton says he wanted to reach out to average Americans before his vacation at the seaside estate of Hollywood friends. He got both pleas for help and offers to pitch in.

And, as well, he received some warm advice from Ronald Reagan about ways to stay focused and keep his peace of mind as president.

"I didn't want to come to California just to see President Reagan and to have some private time without being out among the people that elected me," Clinton said as he weaved among a crowd of at least 30,000 at a suburban mall in Los Angeles on Friday.

Clinton said the shoppers — though there wasn't much shopping going on in the wall of people that crushed around him — repeatedly told him they didn't expect miracles. They urged him to improve education and offered to help him change the country.

"When you give your inaugural address or state of the union," Clinton quoted people as saying to him, "tell me what I can do. I want to help, because I know the president can't do it alone."

Clinton, who's pledged not to fall victim to insulation of the White House, visited the mall before heading on to Summerland, a community near Santa Barbara, for a long weekend with his family. Earlier, upon arriving in California, he chatted with former President Reagan over coffee about Reagan's takeover in Washington 12 years ago.

The scene at the mall was frenzied and chaotic, and an adoring welcome for the new president-elect. Much like a campaign stop, some people wanted to send him a message.

"Mr. Clinton, save our schools," one woman yelled as she shook hands along the storefronts.

"I need work," said a sign a man had made on the inside of a gift box. "I want to have some education," said another.

On the window of jewelry store read this one: "Bill, please repeal the luxury tax."

At several points, Clinton leaned over the balcony to the sea of fans and flashed a victory sign or a thumbs up, waved his hat and saluted.

Clinton's shopping visit in a middle class and racially mixed suburb came on the busiest shopping day of the year, and Clinton said he expected consumers to buy more this holiday season.

"I think they're very hopeful," Clinton told a crush of reporters and camera crews outside a J.C. Penney store. But he added that they don't expect an overnight economic cure from him. "They understand that there's only so much that one person can do."

Last year, President Bush visited a Penney's store the day after Thanksgiving and bought socks. He was ridiculed by critics who poked fun that it was his only answer to the economy.

At a woodcraft shop, Clinton purchased $143.56 worth of figurines, pictures and boxes, a salesman at the store said.

Meeting for more than an hour at Reagan's office, Reagan urged Clinton to make good use of Camp David, the presidential retreat in western Maryland.

Clinton said Reagan described Camp David as "about the only place where you can really walk freely, you know, and be alone, virtually unencumbered."

"He said it will help you keep your peace of mind," Clinton said. "He talked to me a lot about that. He said he felt very strongly, that that was important, in terms of keeping ... me focused on the job."

Clinton, 46, said he and the 81-year-old former president talked about Reagan's first year in office and the 1981 attempt on Reagan's life. They discussed holding down government spending and the deficit, the former Soviet Union, foreign policy and dealing with Congress, Clinton said.

"We talked about the transition, about the first six months of a year in office, how they did it," Clinton said. "We talked about that a lot."

Clinton said Reagan was pleased that he was supporting a line-item veto.

"He said that he hoped I'd have more cooperation from Congress than he did, and he thought I might. And I said I was working on it hard," Clinton told reporters.

The Clintons were staying in the shore community of Summerland at the rented, 4-acre beach estate of Harry Thomason and Linda Bloodworth-Thomason — two old friends and Hollywood producers. It was Clinton's first vacation of the year and he hoped to play golf and relax. They were staying through Monday, though planned a jaunt to Pasadena on Saturday.

Babies over abortions

More pregnant teens under 15 choosing to have baby

By CAROLYN S. CARLSON
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA — Pregnant girls younger than 15 increasingly are choosing to have a baby rather than an abortion, federal health officials say.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Friday the ratio of abortions to live births for girls under 15 was the lowest it had been since 1974 — from just under 1,200 abortions per 1,000 live births in 1974 to about 900 in 1989.

"It would be safe to say that an increasing number of them are opting either to keep the child or to have the child and make it available for adoption," said CDC spokesman Bob Howard.

But that age group's rate of abortions is still the highest, according to the CDC's annual report on abortion.

The group with the second highest rate is women over 35.

The number of legal abortions increased slightly from 1.3 million in 1980 to 1.4 million in 1989, while the rate of abortions among women of childbearing age (24 in 1,000) and the ratio of abortions to live births (348 to 1,000) remained virtually the same during the period.

The number of abortion-related deaths dropped dramatically from 1972 to 1987, in a trend researchers said mirrors a decline in illegal abortions.

In 1972, 24 women died from legal abortions and 39 from illegal ones. In 1987, the latest year death statistics were available, six women died from legal

Rock City barns almost extinct

By MICHELLE WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — Clark Byers spent three decades splashing the plea "See Rock City" on America's pitched-roof barns, but his life's work is slowly fading from the landscape.

The famous slogan for the Lookout Mountain attraction, hand-painted in white letters against a stark black background, could be found on more than 900 barns from Michigan to Florida, from Texas to West Virginia during the late 1950s. Now only about 80 of the barns remain.

"It was just terrible, that Lady Bird Johnson (Beautification) Act," Byers said from his home in Rising Fawn, Ga. "The barns weren't an eyesore. They were better than rusty roofs off in a field."

The 1965 act, which set standards for outdoor advertising, forced crews to paint over about 800 barns, said Bill Chapin, president of Rock City Gardens.

Barns not touched by the law fell to highway expansion or shopping malls, he said.

Those that have survived are found mainly on U.S. highways in the South. Many are designated as national landmarks, Chapin said.

Chapin's great-uncle and great-aunt, Garnet and Frieda Carter, opened the attraction in 1933.

The towering rock formations, estimated to be 200 million years old, 4,000 species of plants, caves and a view of seven states (on a clear day) interested Carter, yet few tourists knew of the attraction five years after it opened.

Byers, now 77, was working at Southern Advertising at the time as a sign painter when his boss, Fred Maxwell, asked him to meet Carter.

"They both liked to drink a little," Byers said. "So, they'd meet regularly at this lodge and drink. I guess it was there they came up with the idea of using barn roofs as billboards."

"They got to where they'd go riding and pick out these roofs that they thought looked good from the highway."

"Then they'd send me over to see if I could talk 'em into letting us paint their barn. When I knocked on the doors, sometimes I hoped nobody was there, you know what I mean?"

Byers said after a while he started finding barns on his own, and Carter would just pick a highway for him to canvass. He was paid $40 a job.

It was Byers who negotiated the deals — offering farmers a free paint job in exchange for rooftop advertising space. Some wanted more.

"Mr. Carter gave me an arsenal of souvenirs to give out," Byers said. "After a while, people got educated and wanted us to pay them something, usually about five bucks. Never more than 10."

The barnyard Rembrandt never used stencils. The rooftop was painted black and then he sketched out the saying in chalk and hand painted it in white. All the work was done with brushes.

The work wasn't always easy. Byers broke an arm, a leg and was electrocuted during his 34-year career.

"Once, when I was painting near Murfreesboro (Tenn.) on U.S. 41, a high-power line dropped down and a truck went by and blew it over against the metal board," Byers said. "It sounded like a shotgun. I thought I was dead."

Byers said his left side was paralyzed and the hair was singed off his head. "It laid me up for about a year, but I went back."

He started out with one assistant and ended up with three crews. His three sons also painted with him.

"We'd be out on the road for 10 days to two weeks and then home a week," Byers said. "We repaint our originals about every two years, so we'd work north in the summer and south in the winter."

Byers said he started out painting two or three barns a day, but he could do about six repaints a day.

If the roof was large enough, he'd expand the phrase to "See 7 States from Rock City" or "35 miles to Rock City atop Lookout Mt."

Byers now operates his own attraction, Sequoyah Caverns just east of Chattanooga in Valley Head, Ala. But, he said, he's thankful for his time on the road.

"I'm proud of the barns," he said. "Even with all the falls, I'd do it all over again. It was worth it."

IN BRIEF

Pre-term Labor Awareness class

SANFORD — HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital, along with Tokos Medical Corporation, is offering a free Pre-term Labor Awareness class in the hospital classroom from 7-8 p.m. on Dec. 1.

"This class will be of special interest to all pregnant women between 20 and 37 weeks of pregnancy," said Sue Boso, RN, who will present the educational program. "The focus of the class will be recognition of pre-term labor symptoms and the importance of early intervention by the patient and physician."

In addition to being a registered nurse, Boso is a Certified Nurse Midwife and Childbirth Educator. She has over 18 years of clinical and teaching experience.

To register for the free class, call 321-4500 ext. 5807.

Hospital celebrates the holidays

The Sixth Annual Love Light Festival will be held on Sunday, Dec. 6, at 6:30 p.m. on the front lawn of Florida Hospital Altamonte, 610 E. Altamonte Drive, Altamonte Springs.

The free family event will include the lighting of three large "Love Light Trees," as well as visits by Walt Disney World characters, 25 tons of man-made snow, holiday entertainment and refreshments.

Individuals can purchase a Love Light in honor or in memory of someone special for $10; proceeds will go to the Walt Disney Memorial Cancer Institute at Florida Hospital.

For information, call 897-1578.

Auxiliary offers health screening

SANFORD — The HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital Auxiliary is sponsoring cholesterol and blood pressure screenings on Friday, Dec. 4, in the CFRH classroom from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. The charge for the cholesterol screening is $4; the blood pressure screening is free.

The Auxiliary offers the screenings the first Friday of each month.

Order Santa Grams now

Santa Grams will send your child a personalized letter from Santa Claus and will help the American Cancer Society send some special children to summer camp.

Part of the proceeds from every Santa Grams order will be donated to American Cancer Society's Camp Rainbow, a special camp for children with cancer.

Santa Grams are beautifully written and designed letters from St. Nick, himself. The letters, complete with a North Pole return address, are mailed the week before Christmas. They are ordered by grandparents, parents, Godparents, aunts, uncles, and friends. There are also older child and adult letters available for innocent pranks.

To order a Santa Gram, send $5 check or Money Order, along with the child's or adult's name, sex, age and address to: Santa Grams, 850 E. River Place, Suite 304, Jackson, MS 39202.

All orders must be received by Dec. 10.

AMIGO to meet

Alliance for the Mentally Ill of Greater Orlando annual dinner and election of officer will be 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at Fellowship Hall of Asbury Methodist Church, 220 W. Horatio Ave., Maitland.

For information, call 647-4846.

Gout remains a problem

NEW YORK — Time was when cartoonists poked fun at people with gout by showing a character with a huge bandage wrapped around one of his large toes.

Time also was when people with gout, a form of arthritis characterized by severe pain, tenderness and swelling of the joints, had to stay away from a host of foods, including asparagus, beans, beef, chicken, gravy and oatmeal.

Those foods are high in compounds known as purines, which break down into a substance called uric acid.

Normally, the body dissolves uric acid into the blood stream, which is then filtered through the kidneys and flushed out in urine. In people with gout, however, either the kidneys can't get rid of the uric acid quickly enough, or the body produces too much of it.

Either way, the excess uric acid forms crystal-like deposits that accumulate in the joints — often in the large joint of the big toe.

Today, an estimated million Americans suffer from gout and are treated with drugs to reduce the uric acid buildup. But people who have suffered gout would do well not to overindulge in foods with a particularly high purine content.

And alcohol should be consumed in moderation, if at all, because alcohol can raise blood levels of uric acid.

It also should be noted that high blood uric acid levels have been linked to excessive weight.

Calcium lowers blood pressure?

Much has been said about the importance of calcium as a bone-builder. But can calcium also help lower blood pressure? Recent studies suggest it can.

One study found that people whose diets were low in calcium had a 23 percent greater chance of developing high blood pressure. And two other studies found that some people with mild hypertension lowered their blood pressure to normal with the intake of calcium supplements.

One study, in fact, disclosed that extra calcium in the diet can offset and even reverse the effects of salt on high blood pressure in some patients.

Men shy away from discussing health

A Gallup Poll last year found that most older men were reluctant to discuss touchy health issues with their doctors, issues such as impotence, prostate problems and depression.

The poll found that almost half the men surveyed may not acknowledge the warning signs for colorectal or prostate cancer, the second- and third-biggest killers of men over 50.

Older men not only need to increase their knowledge about health risks, but they also have to overcome embarrassment about discussing problems with their doctors.

There is much more to prevention than simply taking a physical examination or tests. It has to do with the establishment of a physician-patient relationship, it has to do with counseling, and it has to do with evaluation and management to improve the health and quality of life for the older patient.

Childrens' Village awarded grant

Seminole Childrens' Village, a service of Seminole Community Mental Health Center, has received $50,000 from the UPS Foundation, the charitable arm of United Parcel Service, to be used for capital improvements at the Village, according to Jim Berko, executive director of the Seminole Community Mental Health Center.

Seminole Childrens' Village is the only 24 hour emergency shelter and foster care program serving children from Seminole and surrounding counties, ages 4-17 years of age. The Village provides a home-like safe haven for 28 children who have been sexually, physically, or emotionally abused, and who must be removed from their homes because of unsafe conditions.

The $50,000 UPS Foundation Grant will be used for the purchase of "state-of-the-art" playground equipment, a new 15 passenger van, and improvements in the two home-like settings at the Village, Berko said.

"The children are so excited that a playground is on the way, and that they'll be able to take trips in the new van," said Chris Kulp, coordinator at the Village.

The Grant is part of a nationwide program implemented by the UPS Foundation in 1984. UPS district grant committees throughout the country identify urgent community needs and recommend for funding organizations, such as the Childrens' Village, which serve the most needy children. Grant determinations are made at the regional level, and then submitted to the UPS Foundation. This year, program funding totals nearly $2.5 million. In 1992, the foundation will distribute approximately $11 million to organizations involved in education and human welfare issues, with a focus on adult literacy and prepared food distribution programs.

Taking action against AIDS

World AIDS Day, observed annually on Dec. 1, is the only international day of coordinated action against AIDS. It serves to strengthen the effort to meet the challenge of the AIDS pandemic which continues to spread in all regions of the world. World AIDS Day aims to stimulate discussion and action among people not regularly confronted by AIDS and to enhance community support for HIV/AIDS programs.

The observance spreads messages of compassion, hope and understanding to every corner of the globe. Its goal is to:

- Strengthen the worldwide effort to stop AIDS by highlighting the 1992 theme "AIDS: A Community Commitment," and encouraging commitment among local communities.

- Support HIV prevention and AIDS control activities and programs.

- Promote support and care for all people with HIV/AIDS, their families and friends.

- Help foster sympathetic and respectful attitudes towards people with HIV/AIDS living in our communities.

- Highlight and enhance the impact of independent AIDS activities already established and to encourage the creation of new programs in those communities not yet mobilized.

Chiles names 11-member AIDS panel

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Gov. Lawton Chiles named 11 people Tuesday to an AIDS panel he formed to recommend bills dealing with the disease for the 1993 legislative session.

Former Rep. Lois Frankel of West Palm Beach, who lost a bid for Congress earlier this month, was appointed to chair the Governor's Red Ribbon Panel on AIDS. Its first meeting is set for Dec. 8 in Tallahassee.

"Today we stand at a decisive crossroads in controlling this epidemic," Chiles said. "We have no choice but to cast aside our ignorance, prejudice and unfounded fears and make the kind of informed decisions that will inhibit the further spread of this virus."

Lab tests show AIDS virus growth stymied

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Researchers reported they have found a way of preventing the deadly AIDS virus from reproducing inside its favorite blood cell target — at least in a test tube.

Three scientists writing in the journal Science said AIDS resistance could be inserted into the blood cells using another type of virus that carries altered genes.

Work is under way now to test the technique in animals. No human trials are planned until the animal experiments are completed, the researchers said in a statement.

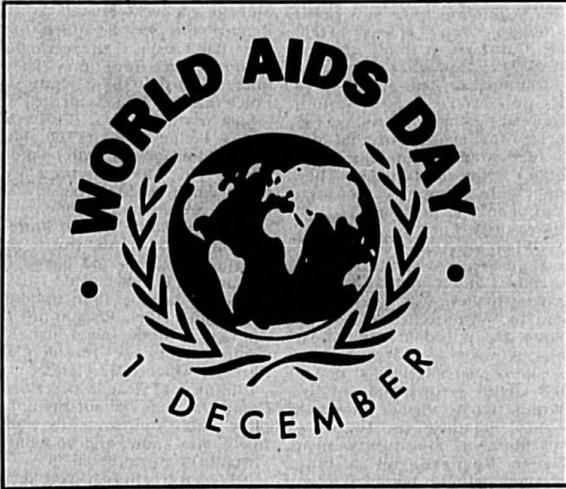

The scientists inserted into an infection particle called adeno-associated virus, or AAV, a gene that would stick to a specific part of the genetic pattern contained in the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS.

Healthy blood cells, called CD4 cells, that are the favorite target of HIV, then were infected with the AAV virus. This caused the new gene to be incorporated into genetic pattern of the CD4 cell.

When HIV virus was exposed in a laboratory culture to the altered CD4 cells, only a few of the viruses could grow or reproduce. In unaltered CD4 cells, cultured for comparison, the HIV was able to replicate, the study says.

Untreated CD4 cells reproduced about 1,000 times more HIV virus than the CD4 cells with the altered genetic pattern, the study said.

SOUND ADVICE

NICK SPINA

CERTIFIED HEARING INSTRUMENT SPECIALIST

In man the external ear (known as the pinna) plays only a small roll in hearing. Some animals, however, have very large ears that they use to hear at will. This allows them to turn their ears and determine more accurately from which direction sound is coming.

Actor, comedian, Art Carney is best known for his role as Ed Norton on the television show "The Honeymooners." But did you know that he has a hearing problem? Art now wears a hearing aid that helps him overcome his hearing loss. He has even used his hearing aid as a tool to help develop several very successful characters he has played.

Question - Is there any noise in space? Answer - No. Noise is transmitted when the air particles are set into motion by some vibration. Since space is a near vacuum, meaning no air particles, there is also no sound.

Hall of Fame adds Branch

Seminole High grad voted in on first ballot

File Photo

After graduating from East Carolina University, Reggie Branch was signed as a free agent by the Washington Redskins. Branch, who was the special teams captain, was a member of two Super Bowl-winning Redskins.

From Staff Reports

SANFORD — It didn't take long for Reggie Branch to become of the Seminole County Sports Hall of Fame.

Nominated in September by Wayne Alberi, Branch was elected to the Hall of Fame on the first ballot by the selection committee during its meeting on Nov. 19.

According to selection committee chairman Bud Layer, Branch — a 1980 graduate of Seminole High School who was the special teams captain of two Super Bowl-winning Washington Redskins teams — was an easy choice.

"When you're holding two Super Bowl rings, there's not much thought that has to go into it," said Layer with a laugh, who added that the Old Timers' Committee will meet sometime in December to decide if there is anyone who may have slipped through the cracks in the nomination process worthy of being inducted this year.

While Branch's election may have been obvious to the 12-member selection committee, the whole thing comes as a complete surprise to him.

"For one thing, I never thought they had a Hall of Fame," said Branch in a telephone interview from his home in Washington D.C. "My mom called me out of the blue and she said something about my getting into the Hall of Fame. I said that it sounded good, but I didn't give it any more thought."

Branch, 30, says he tries to get back home to Sanford once or twice a year. He said that he has already told Dave Farr of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce (which sponsors the Seminole County Sports Hall of Fame) that he will attend the induction ceremony, scheduled for Jan. 21.

Currently, Branch's professional football career is on hold because of a broken ankle he suffered last year in a game against Buffalo. Because he is still having trouble with it, he decided to sit out this year.

"I won't go back unless I have the pins taken out of my ankle," said Branch. "My doctor told me if I go back and break the ankle with the pins still in, I could be crippled."

"So I just decided to retire until I can get a second opinion on whether I should I get the pins out or leave them in. I'm still having some problems with the ankle and I think it's because of the pins."

While he's not playing for the Redskins this season, he's still working for them in another capacity.

"I've been doing a lot of personal appearances on behalf of the Redskins at charity functions and events for kids, that sort of thing," Branch said. "The public relations people at the Redskins are always calling me up do that kind of thing."

Branch is one of several Seminole High School graduates who continued their football careers at East Carolina University. According to Branch, he followed his uncle, Tony Collins, to ECU, which led to former Seminole Ernie Lewis and Jeff Blake being recruited by the Pirate coaching staff.

Long caps remarkable career

By BILL KERNIS
 Herald Correspondent

DELAND — It seems that Lis Long leaves her mark everywhere she goes. A former Seminole High School star athlete and honor student, Long recently ended her volleyball career at Stetson University holding numerous records, including most kills for a career.

"Lis is probably one of the best that ever played here," said Stetson volleyball coach Janiece Holder. "It's going to be tough for a lot of people to break her records. Actually, she was probably the best behind Peggy Machamer. She was very successful."

As a sophomore, Long established herself as a mainstay for the Lady Hata, finishing second on the team in kills. She enjoyed her best statistical season as a junior, and was named to the second team all Trans-American Athletic Conference squad.

This year, she carried the team through a difficult, injury-filled season and was named to the first-team All-Conference squad.

If there is a bug-a-boo that gripes Long about her career, it's that Stetson couldn't win its conference championship. In fact, Stetson's combined record the past four years is 53-87. But that doesn't diminish a remarkable career.

"I wanted to do more, team-wise," said Long. "I think we should have won the TAAC, at least. We had a lot of talent and potential and could have gone a long ways. At this point, I don't know how to assess my performance. It will take a couple years to reminisce."

The next task the senior has set her mind on is conquering the tight job market in public relations.

"Stetson has been extremely challenging," said Long. "It's a whole different ball of wax from high school. Education has been my No. 1 priority."

"I'm going to test the job market, if I can. Right now, my No. 1 priority is going into public relations. But I often joke that I'll be a truck driver."

Judging from her ability to improve and become more versatile with experience, as demonstrated by her in collegiate volleyball career, don't bet on seeing Long behind the wheel of a truck.

Not only did she dominate the net, finishing second in career hitting percentage and third in career blocks, but she developed unusual durability as a dangerous blocker and constantly improved her service game.

Last year, Long finished first on the team in kills, blocks, kill-percentage and kill-average, as well as third in digs and fourth in service aces.

"She started off slowly as a freshman and got better and better each year," said Holder. "She really added a lot of offense, making a lot of kills without a lot of errors. The best thing she improved upon was that she became more aggressive. She was a little tentative at first."

Holder added that Long's presence and character made her a leader in more ways than statistics could measure.

"One of the things we always tried to get Lis to do is celebrate more, because it fires us up," said Holder. "She's kind of quiet, getting the job done without a whole lot of fuss."

"There was one time when she just put the ball down on the floor and came running back with her knees flying high up in the air. Then, a few weeks ago, she hit the ball just inside the back line and the whole gym got quiet, because they couldn't believe how hard she hit it."

"We'll miss her a lot. We'll miss her on the front line especially, with her hitting and blocking. She's also improved on the backline, getting a lot more digs and service aces. But most of all, we'll miss her sarcastic humor."

For Long, the best memories come from her teammates.

"We're very close," said Long. "They're the best friends one could ask for. We had the best times on road trips. I can't really name a bad road trip, because we had such great times. The women's volleyball team is the closest knit team on campus."

Ward, No. 3 'Noles carve up No. 6 Gators

By BRENT KALLESTAD
 Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — Charlie Ward passed for 331 yards and ran for 70 Saturday as third-ranked Florida State overwhelmed No. 6 Florida 45-24 to snap the Gators' seven-game winning streak.

Tamarick Vanover caught a 7-yard touchdown pass and set up two other scores with long kickoff returns as the Atlantic Coast Conference champions won their sixth straight game. The Seminoles lone loss came Oct. 3 to top-ranked Miami, 19-16.

Florida State (10-1) has averaged 61.8 points in the last three games since going almost exclusively to the shotgun offense.

The Seminoles, who had 38 points by halftime Saturday, made coach Bobby Bowden the first major college coach to win 10 games in six consecutive seasons. He had shared the record with Alabama's Bear Bryant and Oklahoma's Bud Wilkinson.

Despite the loss, Florida (8-3) will play second-ranked Alabama next week for the Southeastern Conference championship and a berth in the Sugar Bowl.

Ward passed or ran for 147 yards in the first period as the Seminoles built a 17-7 lead. He scored one of his team's three touchdowns in the second quarter as Florida State took a 38-17 lead — scoring more in a half than Florida had allowed in any game this year.

Florida coach Steve Spurrier kept quarterback Shane Matthews on the bench in the second half after the Seminoles scored on the opening drive of the third period to take a 45-17 lead.

Florida State jumped to a 14-0 lead in the opening 10 minutes on a 10-yard touchdown run by Sean Jackson and a 7-yard scoring pass from Ward to Vanover, who earlier in the season scored on kickoff returns of 96 and 94 yards.

The Gators pulled to 14-7 with 3:22 left in the opening quarter on

B-CC upsets FAMU

Associated Press

TAMPA — Kelvin Daniels scored three touchdowns and Bethune-Cookman quarterback J.D. Hall set two Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference pass records as the Wildcats upset Florida A&M 35-21 Saturday.

The defeat cost the Rattlers (7-4 overall, 4-2 in the MEAC) a share of the conference title, which now goes to North Carolina A&T. Bethune-Cookman, with its fourth victory in its last five games, finishes 4-7 after an 0-6 start.

Daniels scored twice in the second quarter as the Wildcats turned a 7-7 tie into a 28-7 halftime lead. During the quarter, Bethune-Cookman was successful on three fourth-down conversions.

Hall gave B-CC a 14-7 lead on a 18-yard touchdown pass with 8:26 left in the quarter. Then the Wildcats capitalized on a Rattler fumble to go up 21-7 on Daniels' three-yard score with 3:39 left.

Daniels made it a 28-7 game with a 22-yard draw play on third down and thirteen. In the second half, Daniels scored on a 38-yard pass from Hall that gave the Wildcats their biggest lead, 35-7.

The Rattlers pulled to within 35-21 on two Keith Brown touchdown passes, but two turnovers late in the fourth quarter thwarted any further comeback.

Hall, a senior from Jacksonville, completed 19 of 32 for 273 yards. He set the MEAC career record for attempts, and completions in addition to going over the 7,000 yard career mark.

Sunshine, striped bass provide hot fishing in cooler weather

Largemouth bass fishing is "numero uno" in Florida waters, but as cooler weather moves into the state, sport anglers have a chance for some tackle-bruising sunshine and striped bass fishing.

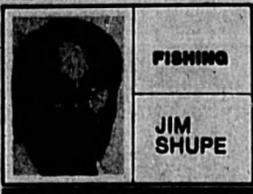

Some of Florida's striped and sunshine bass fisheries are known for huge fish and others for their sheer numbers. Anglers can find these cold-blooded bass in streams, below dams, and in larger reservoirs.

Not all Florida lakes and rivers support a striped bass population nor the related hybrid "sunshine bass" (a cross between white bass and striped bass which is produced by Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission biologists at hatcheries). But waters that have been stocked successfully by the Commission and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service provide excellent fishing.

The striper, the largest member of the temperate bass family, can reach weights of up to 60 pounds in Florida and is notorious for its pugnacious demeanor, and long, powerful runs. As a sport fish, sunshines are best known for their rapid growth and good fighting ability.

Striper populations in lakes Talquin and Seminole and the Apalachicola, St. Johns, St. Marys, Nassau and Ochlockonee rivers provide anglers with opportunities to catch trophy fish.

The St. Johns River provides the best striper fishing in the state. Hot spots during the summer include thermal refuges at Croaker Hole, Wekiva River, Silver Glen Springs, Salt Springs and Black Creek. Late winter and spring stripers can be found at the jetties and bombing range on Lake George, at the I-295 bridge (Buckman Bridge), and at the railroad bridge in Jacksonville.

Since 1976, when the Commission began stocking sunshines in the Apalachicola River system, which includes Lake Seminole, anglers have caught between 2,000 and 9,000 sunshine bass each spring.

Other popular sunshine bass fishing opportunities occur from the Escambia River in northwest Florida to Lake Osborne in West Palm Beach. The Commission annually stocks more than 3 million striper and sunshine fingerlings into public waters throughout Florida. Fishing is generally best during winter months and information on local conditions or "hot spots" can be obtained by contacting Commission regional offices.

SHUPE'S SCOOP
Shallow lakes are very dangerous in the winter time because cold fronts can stir up big waves in a hurry. Use plenty of discretion and pay careful attention to the weather forecast before planning a trip on any

FISHING FORECAST

Speckled perch fishing has been good in Lake Monroe in front of the power plant. Simply look for a large concentration of boats and start drifting in the same area with Missouri minnows for sure action. Steady rains have raised water levels, making bass fishing in the river a tough proposition. With no distinct boundaries, bass are out in acres of shallows and are hard to locate.

Sebastian Inlet has had steady action with snook and large flounder. During the daytime, live bait such as shrimp or finger mullet will draw strikes from finicky snook. At night, one ounce jigs or swimming minnow lures will work as well as bait. Big winter flounder are hitting finger mullet bounced slowly across the bottom.

Captain Jack at Port Canaveral reports that high seas have once again kept boats in port. The predicted cold front should keep seas high for days to come. Inside the port, look for bluefish and flounder action. On less windy days, trout and redfish have been active in the Banana and Indian rivers. The south end of Mosquito Lagoon is excellent for both trout and reds, but this shallow area can build up into some big seas during windy conditions.

Peace Inlet is still a little slow, but sheepshead and bluefish are biting steadily. Some nice flounder are biting finger mullet on the south side of the south jetties.

BA-Sanford to host Turkey Bowl

Special to the Herald

SANFORD — Beginning at 2 p.m. this afternoon, Bowl America Sanford, 180 Airport Boulevard West, will host a "Turkey Bowl" tournament.

The entry fee is $20. For more information, call 322-7542.

Last week's honor roll at Bowl America Sanford was topped by a pair of competitors in the Sun Bank league. Ben Stafford putting together a 719 to lead the men while the 610 effort of Ruth Rodriguez was tops among the women.

Also in Sun Bank league, Ben Stafford led a 589 effort while Ruth Rodriguez trailed with her 552.

Among the men, Kenny Davidson notched a 562 while Ben Stafford checked in with a 559.

Bobby Berry registered a 575 to top Marshall's

Ladies last week. Nancy Johnson was next with a 542 effort while Carol Slaughter and Joetta West each turned in a 508.

The Bowl America Classic league was led by Bobby Barbour last week. Barbour rolled a 685 to outscore John Pfader, who notched a 673, and Doug Barnell, who put together a 655 series.

Only six pins separated the top three marks in Beer: 30 City League play last week. Bob Bates was tops with his 620. Jim Morse was two pins back at 618 as Bob Lake Jr. rolled in with a 614.

Dev Westgaard edged Heather Ursvaen, 518-516, for top series laurels in the Wednesday Ladies League league. Pam Theles backed them up with her 502.

Deana LaFere constructed a 550 to lead the women in Porsag Realty league action. Phyllis Mett was next with her 523 effort. Among the men, Pete Campbell notched a 626 while Jerry Sprat came in with a 593.

SEC coaches pick Tide over Gators

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — South-eastern Conference coaches give No. 2 Alabama a sure edge over No. 6 Florida in the first league championship matchup next Saturday, partly due to the game being played at Legion Field.

"It's a great for Alabama," said outgoing Tennessee coach Johnny Majors. "It should be very exciting for Alabama and the Alabama people, to play in one of two home stadiums for the championship."

"That's a very definite advantage for a team, that is already good enough," Majors said.

Alabama (11-0 overall, 8-0 SEC) holds a 140-48-11 record in games played at Legion Field. The Crimson Tide has won its last nine games in Birmingham under coach Gene Stallings and is 12-1 in the past four seasons. Stallings said he doesn't really think of Legion Field as being "home." But some of his league counterparts think the Crimson Tide will have just as much of a home-field advantage in Birmingham as in Tuscaloosa.

"Ask any coach in the country if they want to play on their home field or a neutral site, and you always want to play on your home field," Georgia coach Ray Goff said. "I think it will be a great advantage for Alabama. When the game was voted to go to Birmingham, you gave either Alabama or Auburn a tremendous advantage. No doubt about it."

After Alabama defeated Auburn 17-0 on Thanksgiving Day, Tigers coach Pat Dye said he would vote the Crimson Tide No. 1 in the nation.

Florida coach Steve Spurrier said if the Gators lose they "have no excuses. It'll be because they are the better team." No. 3 Florida State beat Florida (8-3 overall, 6-2 SEC) 45-24 on Saturday.

South Carolina coach Sparky Woods told decisively to Alabama early in the season when his team was struggling, then narrowly fell to Florida.

"There will be a lot of great football players on that field," Woods said. "For me to predict a winner would be crazy."

"Certainly Alabama has fire power and the potential to score. I have great respect for Alabama. Their defense is the best I've ever played against. When we played Alabama, I thought their defense was just unmatched and offensively they were very sound."

Matthews' 8-yard scoring pass to Aubrey Hill. But Vanover took the ensuing kickoff 80 yards to Florida's nine, and Dan Morrey booted a 36-yard field goal to give the Seminoles a 17-7 lead.

Tiger McMillan's 3-yard TD run two minutes into the second period put the Seminoles ahead 24-7, but Matthews' then hit Charlie Dean on an 8-yard scoring pass to make it 24-14.

Vanover returned the following kickoff 78 yards to the 24, and Ward raced into the end zone four plays later on a 5-yard rollout as Florida State built a 31-14 lead.

Florida's Judd Davis kicked a 36-yard field goal with 2:05 left in the half. But Ward then drove Florida State 66 yards in a 16-play drive climaxed by William Floyd's 4-yard scoring run into the end zone to cut the lead to 31-17.

Floyd scored his second touchdown of the game and 10th of the season on a 1-yard run as Florida State took the opening kickoff at 11:00-11.

Terry Dean, who took over for Matthews, threw a 4-yard TD pass to Willie Jackson for Florida's final score. Matthews completed 15 of 30 for 175 yards and two touchdowns in the first half.

Ward, the ACC player of the year, set a single-season total offense mark at Florida State with 3,151 yards — an average of 266.5 a game. Peter Tom Willis had 3,004 yards in 1989.

IN BRIEF

Five added at Longwood Prudential

LONGWOOD — A number of new staffers recently joined the Prudential Florida Realty's Northside office in Longwood. They include Bill Martin and his wife Linda. Bill has 13 years experience in real estate sales and management. He has been selling at the multi-million dollar pace for many years.

Ron Rayburn and E. Mark Porterfield also recently joined the Northside office in Longwood. Although they have only been involved in the real estate profession for a short time, both men have become multi-million dollar sales achievers.

Another new addition is Page Holbrook. She has been in real estate since 1980 and is a million dollar sales achiever.

The Martins, Holbrook, Rayburn and Porterfield will all be operating from offices at 120 Crown Oak Centre Drive, Longwood.

White and Jannar at the top

LONGWOOD — Pam White, of Caldwell Banker Residential Real Estate, Inc., Longwood office, has been listed as one of Caldwell's top performers for the month of October, 1992. White was included in the list of Top Listing Associates. Joan Jannar, also of the Longwood branch office, was listed as one of Caldwell's Top Sales Leaders.

The Longwood branch of Caldwell is located at Sanlando Center, 2160 W. Highway 434.

BANKING

Barnett president retires

SANFORD — Charles K. "Pete" Cross, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Barnett Bank of Central Florida since 1974, has announced his retirement, effective next February.

Thomas H. Yochum, president and chief operating officer of Barnett Bank of Central Florida will succeed Cross as CEO.

"Under Pete's leadership, the Barnett Bank has grown from one office on Park Avenue in Winter Park, to a four-county bank headquartered in Orlando, and from less than $300 million to more than $2.7 billion in assets," said Charles E. Rice, Barnett Banks Inc., chairman and chief executive officer.

"A number of our current bank presidents have served under Pete," Rice continued. "We thank him for his role in building our central Florida bank into a strong force in the community and within Barnett Banks, Inc."

Cross is active in the Winter Park community, and has been chairman of many organizations including the Economic Development Commission of Mid-Florida, board of trustees of Georgia Tech University, United Way of Orange County, Florida Citrus Bowl, and University of Central Florida Foundation.

Yochum joined Barnett in 1970 as new accounts clerk. He served as president of Florida Coast Banks during the consolidation of that organization into the Barnett system in 1984-85.

Locally, Barnett Banks are located at 3094 Orlando Drive in Sanford, and 704 W. Lake Mary Blvd., in Lake Mary.

HOLIDAY NEWS

AAA toy donations

HEATHROW — AAA Florida is still seeking toy donations to help make the holidays special for the children of Hurricane Andrew. A toy drive is scheduled to end Dec. 4. AAA will take all donated toys to elementary school children in the areas of Dade County hardest hit by the storm.

According to Public Relations Manager Tom Schroder, "We still don't have enough toys for the children whose schools we plan to visit." He added, "These are our children who have been left with nothing. Our toy drive is for them."

Persons in the Sanford and Lake Mary areas wishing to donate may take their toy gifts to AAA headquarters, at 1000 AAA Drive, Heathrow. For further information, phone 444-4300.

American Express toy drive

SANFORD — American Express has launched a program to help disadvantaged children. For every purchase of American Express Gift Cheques at participating locations through Dec. 31, American Express will donate one dollar to Big Brothers/Big Sisters of America and its local affiliated agencies, up to a total of $100,000.

In the Sanford area, consumers can participate in the "Give the Gift That Makes A Difference" program at local American Express Travel Service offices at Great Western Bank, and the Central Florida Educators Credit Union.

Gift Cheques are available in denominations of $25, $50 and $100.

OTHER BUSINESS

TV exec. to speak to 4-C

Hebda Sharapan, associate producer of TV's "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood" will be guest speaker at the annual meeting dinner of Community Coordinated Child Care for Central Florida. The meeting will be held in Apopka on Dec. 3.

4-C provides training throughout Seminole, Orange and Osceola Counties. For further information contact Phoebe Carpenter, president of 4-C, 894-8393.

Ford official visits SCC

SANFORD — Lee Miskowski, vice president and general manager of Lincoln/Mercury division of Ford Motor Company, will visit Seminole Community College's ASSET program Tuesday, Dec. 1, at 8:30 a.m.

The visit is an effort of Ford to bring company officials in closer contact with other aspects of the automotive industry. Miskowski will be bringing with him the new Lincoln Mark VIII, to be released from dealerships by Christmas. For further information, contact Mike Griffin at SCC, 323-1450, ext. 331.

Gaines rejoins conservation

LONGWOOD — Gaines Funeral Home of Longwood has renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation efforts in Florida. The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Florida.

The memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall by local Boy Scouts. Family members will receive a certificate of the planting.

For further information, contact Bruce B. Hadlock, 1-800-533-7554.

Antique, art show to benefit many

By VICKI DeBORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — In conjunction with the Sanford Historic Trust's annual Tour of Homes on Dec. 5 and 6, the Park Avenue Antique Mall will present its first Winter Antique and Art Show.

Sica Nacu, owner of the antique mall, said she hopes the show will become a seasonal event with four shows a year.

The response she has had to the event has been good so far, Nacu reported, though she is still looking for about 10 more exhibitors to put up booths at the antique mall, she has already signed up 10 merchants in addition to the 14 who are already in the mall.

"We hope to have about 35 exhibitors in all which would give people a nice variety," she said.

Nacu said that a percentage of the proceeds from the booth rentals will be donated to the Sanford Historic Trust and to the Reviel Foundation, a medical organization which treats children with AIDS and with cancer.

"We want to bring attention to good things in Sanford," Nacu said. "We admire the work of the Sanford Historic Trust and all that they are doing for the city."

She said that she also wants to "promote the idea" of helping others through groups like the Reviel Foundation.

"And I want to promote the cleaning and maintaining of the place in which you live," she said. "That is very important."

Those who might be interested in reserving a spot to sell antiques or art at the Winter festival should contact Nacu at the antique mall (321-4356) before Dec. 5.

The price of renting an outdoor booth is $20 per day.

The show will take place from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 5 and 6.

Talking turkey

Ernestine Bush, 1105 First St., Sanford, accepts a $20 gift certificate for a Thanksgiving turkey. The award was given in a drawing of local policy holders insured by American General Gulf Life Insurance Co., in Orlando. Making the presentation were John Coffman, left, and Dinah Harmon, of American General.

Fewer seek workers' benefits

WASHINGTON — The number of new applications for unemployment benefits fell in mid-November for the sixth time in eight weeks, the government said.

Jobless claims fell to 374,000 for the week ended Nov. 14, down 12,000 from 386,000 the previous week, according to the Labor Department report, which was released on Wednesday.

Two airlines to increase fares

NEW YORK — Struggling to boost sagging revenues and profits, American and United airlines said they will increase their fares next month.

United said Wednesday it would raise fares between $10 and $30 for all classes of flights in the continental United States effective Dec. 9. The carrier said flights with longer mileage would get the higher increases.

Delta Air Lines, Northwest Airlines, and Trans World Airlines said they would match United's increase, although Delta said its Northeast shuttle service would not be included. Continental Airlines said it was studying both the United and American plans.

Home sales up

WASHINGTON — Improving consumer confidence and low mortgage rates helped boost sales of previously owned homes in October to the highest level in nearly four years, a real estate trade group said.

Sales of existing single-family homes surged 9.1 percent, from a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 3.3 million in September to 3.6 million last month, the National Association of Realtors said Wednesday.

But the group said in a separate report that the number of people defaulting on mortgages and losing their homes to lenders is on the rise.

IN BRIEF

MILESTONE

Ashby Jones, E.B. Stowe, Troy Ray

Friends honor artist

SANFORD — Edmund B. Stowe, prominent Sanford artist, was honored on his 98th birthday, Nov. 11, by artists Ashby Jones and Troy Ray who hosted a luncheon at Shoney's Restaurant.

Stowe, a resident of Hillhaven Healthcare Center, has painted most of his life and taught art at his home for a number of years.

Born in Mount Dora, his love of Florida landscapes and seascapes led him to painting these scenes which have won him national acclaim. His paintings grace local business, numerous homes and a gallery in Washington, D.C.

He is presently confined to a wheelchair but still paints in the center's activities room. His love of art and his humor have not abated with his loss of mobility and hearing. His humor is infectious and all his visitors are sure to laugh during their visit.

DISTINCTIONS

Darlene Pinto

Dazzler of the Week

Darlene Pinto, a senior at Seminole High School, has been selected by the school's Dazzler Dance Team as Dazzler of the Week.

Daughter of Alleia and Tony Pinto, Darlene has been a member of the dance team for two years. She says she enjoys singing, dancing, art and acting.

Darlene is a member of Mu Alpha Theta, Tribe, Destiny, a youth group at her church and she sings in the church choir.

Darlene said, "I keep involved and active. I like doing a lot of different things. I work hard on my grades and plan to attend college when I graduate."

Po earns honors at FSU

Po Inthirathvongay, daughter of Ernest and Pat Southward of Longwood, was one of three freshmen selected for the FSView Advisory Board at Florida State University.

Inthirathvongay, who was Miss Seminole High School 1992, was also elected as president of the Phi Mu sorority pledge class.

Prestigious award-winner

Cultural activist honored by Florida PR Association

By ED KORGAN
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — A prestigious award is the groundwork for a cultural revolution taking place in Sanford.

Kay Bartholomew was presented a well-deserved prestigious award that makes her only the eighth recipient in the 54-year history of the Florida Public Relations Association. The award recognizes Bartholomew's accomplishments in the field of public relations over many years of working for and with the state of Florida Public Relations Association. The presentation includes a lifetime membership in that respected organization.

Prior to this presentation, Bartholomew had received the "1990 Professional of the Year Award" which also recognized her efforts and accomplishments in the field of public relations. Her work had taken her from officer and board member in the Orlando association to president of the State of Florida Public Relations Association.

Bartholomew is known in the Sanford area as a catalyst to many of the cultural events that have taken place over the past years. The Seminole Mutual Concert Association, the St. Lucia Festival and First Street Gallery to name a few.

When asked where she got all the energy to put into these projects she exclaimed, "I have always been blessed with a high level of energy and I am slowing down, but I seem to keep getting into things. I love to create and pull things together, and maybe in a different way I have just been blessed with good health, a lot of energy and the ability to see ideas and how to put them together. I have just enjoyed it. It gets a little tedious but I enjoy it."

The problems are always lingering but Bartholomew likes to take care of them as they come up. She explained, "You get a lot of problems, but that is part of the challenge just figuring out how to take care of them. I found that a lot of people will call and ask me how do I get in touch with so and so. I remember people and am able to say, why don't you call them and see award, page 6B"

84-year-old crossing guard lends kids a helping hand

By ED KORGAN
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — His love for children is evident as this senior citizen continues to work helping young school children safely cross busy streets.

Robert Clarke, 84, of Sanford is employed by the Seminole County Sheriff's Department as a school crossing guard. He is a longtime resident having moved here in 1951. Clarke can be remembered by older citizens from working in many of the drugstores in town. After working in McReynolds, Touchton's and Fausta's, he retired, then drove a senior citizens' bus and delivered meals on wheels for many years.

His concern for children led him into his present job. Clarke has been at his crossing at Rock Lake Middle School, Longwood, for three and one-half years working 10 hours a week during school weeks. The job requires him to be on station in the morning for one hour and back again in the early afternoon when school lets out.

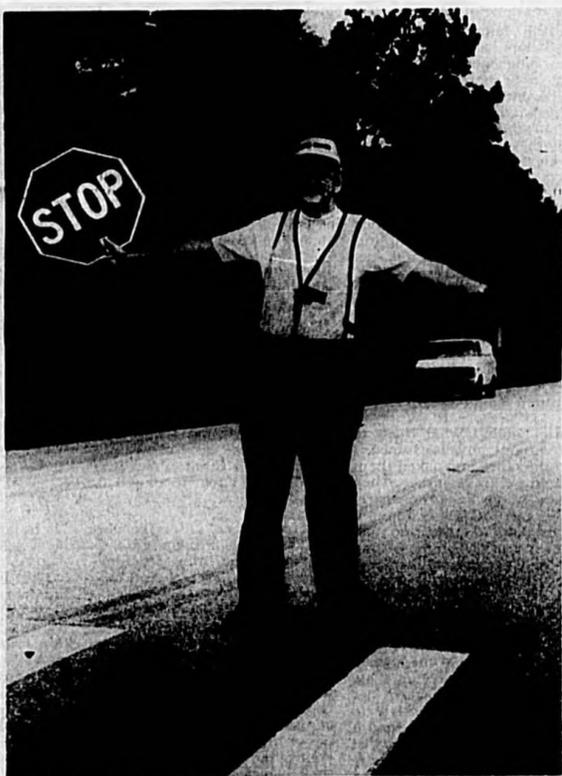

He explained his motivation, "I like the children, my preference is for the middle school children because they are a little bit easier to handle than the younger children. The street is so busy that I worry about them. I worry about getting them across the road safely." Clarke showed a genuine concern for the safety of all children crossing streets as he talked about how busy our city streets are becoming in the morning.

"The children are wonderful," he continued, "I don't know many of their names because they come and go so fast. Every once in a while I will get to know a child's name. One particular girl at my crossing last year was called Stephanie. I have seen her a couple of times this year but she is now going to high school. She was a very lovely girl, always friendly when she came by, just a wonderful child. This year there is a lovely girl, I don't know her name, but she is the sister of a girl that crossed with me two years ago. I always tell her to say hello to her sister."

This fall something new has come up, Clarke explained. "This fall when I was just getting on station, usually five to ten minutes early, there were two or three or maybe six children ready to cross at my corner. They come from another elementary school nearby. That worried the heck out of me

Professor—author addresses addiction for reading society

The Sanford chapter of Epsilon Sigma Omicron of the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs met at the home of Emy Sokol for the November meeting. Kay Hall was the co-hostess.

Vida Smith, chairman, presided over the business meeting and welcomed guests Jean Metts, president of the Woman's Club of Sanford, and two new members, Rose Terry and Jean Williams.

Charlotte Smith, program chairman, introduced the guest speaker, Professor Harold Douglas, a native of Mississippi. He has taught English in several universities including University of Tennessee, Transylvania University of Kentucky, Rutgers State University and Princeton University from where he retired.

After retiring from the teaching profession, Prof. Douglas decided to get involved in volunteer work at a nearby psychiatric hospital and later different races are addicted to different drugs depending on their location and ethnic background — for instance, opium is used widely in the Orient.

He also pointed out that there is no drug addiction in Saudi Arabia, mostly due to the laws of the land, and alcoholic beverages are prohibited. Explaining that each generation is different and has different problems, Prof. Douglas ended his address by telling the women that fewer people are drinking these days, but they are drinking more.

The ESO members were intrigued with the speaker and he was presented a gift memento of the occasion.

The hostesses served homemade pastries, coffee and juices from a beautifully appointed table. Hazel Cash poured the coffee.

ENGAGEMENTS

Brittany Grace Rockett and Wayne Anders Larson

Rockett-Larson

LAKE MARY — Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Rockett of Lake Mary announce the engagement of their daughter, Brittany Grace, to Wayne Anders Larson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Larson of Davie.

Born in London, England, the bride-elect is the granddaughter of the late Mr. Giles and Mrs. Anna Mae Chapman, formerly of Sanford. She is the paternal granddaughter of Mrs. Lola Rockett of Sanford, and the late Mr. Frank Rockett. She is the paternal great-granddaughter of Mrs. Eva Wynne, former resident of Sanford who now lives in Virginia Beach, Va.

Ms. Rockett is a 1987 graduate of Lake Mary High School where she was a cheerleader. She is a 1991 graduate of the University of Central Florida, Orlando. While there she was "little sister" to the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity. She is presently employed as fourth grade elementary teacher at Michigan Avenue Elementary School, St. Cloud.

Her fiancé, born in Trenton, N.J., is the maternal grandson of Mrs. Ruby Richardson of Miami, and Mr. James Richardson of Royal Palm Beach. Larson is the paternal grandson of Mrs. Ella Larson of Summit, N.J. and the late Mr. Edolph Larson.

Larson is a 1986 graduate of South Plantation High School, Plantation, where he was a member of the basketball team. He is a 1990 graduate of the University of Central Florida and member of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

Larson is special events coordinator for the City of Kissimmee.

The wedding will be an event of March 13, 1993, at 1 p.m., Markham, Woods, Presbyterian Church, Lake Mary.

Award

they can pull it together or they can do this and this. It's all a team effort and that's the beauty. I think of anything of any success. People working together because we all don't have a corner on talent or a corner on ideas — it's everybody working together that makes everything so successful."

St. Lucia provided a showcase of teamwork. The first two years it was rainy and cold and yet people pitched in and the festival has gotten its start.

Bartholomew commented on the teamwork it took. "The city of Sanford has been so cooperative down here. They just knock themselves out to work with us. The crews come down and work so hard. I just can't say enough about them."

She continued to talk about how teamwork and cooperation seems to get the job done and how her interest in culture spurs her on. "I worked very hard with the concert association many years ago. It took me three years but then we finally got standing room only. We did some big things, but there again, it was team effort. The thing about it is I have always been interested in culture."

"Take, for instance, the ballet company (Ballet Guild of Sanford-Seminole). They don't get enough recognition as far as I am concerned. I think we have an absolute jewel there. I would like to see our people see it more often. I think St. Lucia hasn't gotten there yet but it is designed to be a platform for local talent, as well as other talent and to develop that talent."

"It's the same thing with this gallery. Yes, it is nice to bring in, it gives us credibility, artists like this, but in the same token we bring in and develop and provide a space for local talent and talent that is developing and I think that's our goal. I think culture is just as important as sports in the community. Economically, it makes good sense to have a cultural environment that is growing and meets the needs of its people. This is just about the whole philosophy that spurs me on."

The First Street Gallery is Bartholomew's latest project. The artists in the exhibit are top-notch, nationally known, and she would match them up with any other showing in the country. A combination of unique circumstances helped her to get this exhibit in Sanford.

She explained it was not very easy starting the gallery. The initial investment was $1400 which is almost nothing these days. Since opening day over 8000 people have visited the gallery. The gallery has attracted many people from outside Seminole County interested in the exhibits on display.

"I think there are some very good positive things happening in Sanford," Bartholomew related. While talking with a supporter in town it was related to her that the supporter had felt some very positive vibes. She concluded, "I think we are on the threshold and I really think it is going to happen this time. We are working very hard in lots of ways and I think people are coming together. To me, I think that is important. That's teamwork."

NEW ARRIVALS

Concert presented

This season of Thanksgiving and harvest meditation gives us time to be thankful for our many blessings. The dynamic soloist Patricia Merritt Hitchmon, R. Bruce Brown, and the Seminole Community Boys Club were presented in concert at the St. Paul Missionary Baptist Church on Sunday evening with Gloria Williams and Lorraine R. Offer the accompanists.

The inspirational message in song is the means by which people communicate with their God. Today, our lives are richer and covered by a glorious canopy of hope woven from the fibers of ancestral experiences. The Negro spiritual will forever be remembered.

This harvest meditation service is held at this Thanksgiving season. The first meditation service was the brainchild of the late Julia Ray Merritt, mother of Patricia Merritt Hitchmon. The Choir No. One of St. Paul sponsors this evening of love and spiritual awakening.

"I have even stopped traffic for ladies walking their dogs and pushing baby carriages because I am just as concerned for their safety as I am for the children," Clarke mentioned. "The traffic doesn't even slow down for them."

The traffic at Clarke's location is very heavy. You can certainly tell of his love and concern for the children as you watch him work, trying to find a pause in the traffic to let the youngsters proceed safely on their way to and from school.

By Bernice Bode Deal YOUR BIRTHDAY Nov. 29, 1992

Joint endeavors could prove to be financially beneficial for you in the year ahead, and they can provide you with a real sense of achievement. It looks like you may become involved in two arrangements of this ilk.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't give up on your wishes and expectations at this time, because things could take a turn for the better today. What once was unattainable is presently reachable. Sagittarius, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-9428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You could be luckier than usual today in two critical areas. One pertains to your finances, the other to your reputation. Direct your efforts and intellect to these venues.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your personal touch enhances the possibilities for success in your endeavors today. Not only are you assertive and effective, you are also wise in your method of performance.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Greater opportunities for gains are likely for you today from resources you seldom tap, instead of your usual areas of strength. Don't put limitations on yourself, however. Use both.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Involvements you have today with people who have treated you well in the past should work out equally well now. Turn on the ditto machine.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An important objective you've already established can be expanded upon to produce even greater benefits. A significant break might develop today.

GEMINI (May 21-June 30) Try to participate in social activities today that have elements of competition. You should do well. You might even outshine one who usually gets the better of you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Fluctuating conditions over which we have no control often put us at a disadvantage. However, this pattern shouldn't be true in your case when encountering change today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have all the attributes of a good salesperson today. You're both a good opener and a strong closer. Try to use these gifts for a good cause.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Economic trends should begin improving for you as of today. Situations that once yielded usually your sense of timing can be relied upon, but today there is a chance you might try to push issues or projects forward before everything is ready.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Success in your endeavors is possible today, provided you stick to your original game plan. When you begin to make changes, they could have a negative affect on several factors.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This is not the day to offer unsolicited business or financial advice to friends. Even if your opinion is requested, you'll still be held accountable for your suggestions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Where your personal performance is concerned, you should do rather well today, but there is a possibility that your companions or associates might make mistakes that will affect you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 30) If your instructions aren't detailed and explicit, persons working for you are not apt to do tasks as you would like them done. The fault won't be entirely theirs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Today when you make a mistake you're more likely to compound it rather than correct or resolve it. This is because you might be too anxious to try to rid yourself of unpleasant tasks.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Restrict disagreements between you and your mate to your household today. Matters could get worse if they are discussed in front of in-laws or outsiders.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A serious problem could erupt between you and a co-worker today if you are too critical of his or her performance. If you can't say something constructive, it's best to say nothing at all.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) This might not be one of your better days for managing your personal financial affairs or the material affairs of someone else. Try to avoid involvements of this nature.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Self-interests can be advanced today and this is well and good, provided you don't step on anyone's toes in the process. Unfortunately, this might be exactly what you'll do.

IN BRIEF

World AIDS Day at Stenstrom

OVIEDO — World AIDS Day is being acknowledged at Stenstrom Elementary School in Oviedo on Tuesday, Dec. 1 at 7 p.m.

A video produced by the Pediatric AIDS Foundation will be shown. It will be followed by a group discussion led by Karen Coleman, assistant principal at Oviedo High School and an advocate for AIDS education.

There will be other experts on hand to answer questions as well.

For more information about the event, call Holly Scott at 679-7008 or Mari Ellis 365-4861.

Hamilton announces student council

SANFORD — The students at Hamilton Elementary School recently elected the officers for their student council.

The students elected to the top spots at the school are: Vanessa George, president; Katrice Parker, vice president; Erin Brown, secretary and Elisabeth Meisel, treasurer.

Oviedo gets three art awards

OVIEDO — Oviedo High School has received three awards from Readers Digest magazine because three art students were selected as finalists in the national PTA "Reflections" project.

The students who were honored with the award were Nicole Merryman, Renee E. Law and Jason Funderburk.

Each award included a book for the school's media center. A bookplate was placed in each book so that readers will be aware of the awards.

Lake Mary band plans garage sale

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary High School band will be holding its annual Giant Garage Sale on Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 5 and 6.

The sale will be in the front of the school campus at 855 Longwood-Lake Mary Road in Lake Mary.

It will include more than 100 families. On Saturday, the sale will be from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. and on Sunday, it will be from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m.

There will be a wide variety of items for sale, including household items, electronics, furniture and tools.

For more information about the sale or to find out about making a donation, call Jeanne Hammerberg at 260-5923 or Joan Bour at 774-1768.

All proceeds from the sale will benefit the band, which is raising money to travel to Washington, D.C. where they will perform in the Spring.

Keep us informed

We want to help you get the word out into the community about what is going on at your school and with your students.

If you've got news that you'd like to see on the Education Page, please send it to the Sanford Herald, P.O. Box 1667, 300 N. French Ave., Sanford, 32771 or call Vicki DeSormier at 322-2611.

Our fax number is 323-9406.

Our deadline is 11 a.m. Thursday before the Sunday of publication.

Cheers over, dance season kicks off

LAKE MARY — From August up until the end of football season in November, the freshman, junior varsity and varsity cheerleaders practice during and after school, working on cheers for Friday night football games.

Now that the season has ended, the girls will start preparing for competition and other performances.

Some have already pursued dance interests outside of school.

Senior Adrienne Nephew and freshman Kati Stephenson recently competed on Ed McMahon's Star Search 1993, along with team members from Oviedo, Seminole and Titusville high schools.

Together the five-member group called Hot Mix, tumbled their way through six levels of competition to the $100,000 finals, defeating Yamoto, the dance team representing Japan.

At a national cheerleading competition in Virginia last year, Nephew, Amy Moseri, Kristy Apfel, Becca Wheeler, Shannon Rauch, Laura Gufrida, Shelly Lipscomb, Christina Olson and Niki Letierio were selected to perform at the Hula Bowl in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Gufrida, Wheeler and Rauch are taking advantage of the opportunity and heading to Waiiki Beach from Jan. 8 to 17, 1993.

Moseri, Olson and Wheeler, along with Carly Rizzo and Angie White auditioned and earned the chance to perform at the Aloha Bowl in Hawaii, the St. Patrick's Day Parade in Ireland or the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York City.

Moseri, Rizzo and White will be leaving for the Aloha Bowl on Dec. 18. They will return on Dec. 27.

Seminoles ready for new seasons

SANFORD — Turkey season has now officially ended; never-the-less, two different seasons have begun: basketball and soccer.

Last week, the Lady Seminole Basketball Team opened their season by winning their own Lady 'Noles Invitational Tournament at Seminole High School. The Lady Seminoles beat Tavares in the championship game by almost 30 points.

The tournament consisted of other teams from Seminole County, such as Lake Howell, Lake Brantley and Lake Mary.

The Seminole team is led by the senior combination of Nikki Washington and Kaykay Mullins, while sophomore Tennesha Eason is also a prime contributor.

The girls basketball team is always ranked in the top ten among state teams and Washington is considered one of the best female high school players in the country.

After Tuesday's victory over Jones High, the girls are still undefeated with four wins.

Starting their young season on a positive note are the Lady Seminole Soccer team.

In their first two contests, they have outscored their opponents 11-0 and have allowed only one shot on goal.

In their jamboree, the Lady 'Noles manhandled the younger Oviedo team en route to a 4-0 victory.

On Tuesday, the girls soccer season officially began their season with a 7-0 romp over Evans High of Orlando.

The game was actually just a show case of Dawn Burks, Seminole's offensive machine. Burks had four goals and three assists in her offensive display.

The girls soccer team has steadily been improving the past couple of years and they are hoping this year's team will shine with greatness.

Explorers show off the SPD

SANFORD — The Sanford Police Explorers recently had the opportunity to show off their talents to tourists and Florida residents alike at the annual Law Enforcement Weekend at Sea World in Orlando.

As members of the Explorers, the young men and women, ages 15 to 21, study law enforcement with hands on training with the officers of the Sanford Police Department.

At the Sea World event last week, the Sanford group gave tours of the department's BATmobile (Breath Alcohol Test mobile unit).

They also handed out a variety of safety brochures and did fingerprinting for those that wanted it.

The fingerprinting was mainly done of young children.

Sanford Police Explorers showed off at the recent Law Enforcement Weekend at Sea World.

Aboard the BATmobile, the Explorers showed a film about the Sanford Police Department so that those in attendance at the event could learn about the department and the area.

The Sanford Police Explorers is headed by Officer Mike Taylor and Officer Randy Smith.

School thriving under Scott

SANFORD — Hamilton Elementary School prides itself on helping students achieve their fullest potential, principal Dave Scott said.

Scott, who was transferred to Hamilton from Longwood Elementary School in Longwood, said the previous administration laid a strong foundation on which he can continue to build.

Many of the student incentive programs, including pizza parties for the top students and awards for good behavior, have been continued. He is adding other programs, as well, he said.

With active parents and strong teachers they have been able to do that frequently.

"We like to build a positive self image within our students," Scott said. "We know that they will achieve more if they feel good about themselves."

The school has a strong incentive program for students who are shown to be at risk of dropping out of school later in life.

for these students which helps put them on a strong track, hopefully, to success," Scott said.

A group of volunteer parents organized a couple of years ago to plan, plant and build an environmental study center on the school's campus.

The parents, some of whom no longer have students at the school, have continued to help supervise the upkeep of the center.

Hamilton students often take part in community service projects, Scott said.

Recently they promoted American Education Week by decorating grocery store bags with pictures and book reviews. They often send the school chorus to sing at local nursing homes. And the school environmental center is available to the public as a learning resource.

"We have a lot of offer," Scott said.

Talking it up School speakers bureau kicks off

By Vicki Robinson
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Teachers, administrators and school volunteers are lining up to tell whoever wants to hear about the advantages of the Seminole County schools.

"We're very proud of what we have to offer," said Gretchen Schapler, principal of Seminole High School and one of the speakers who is willing to be on call as a part of the newly-formed school district speakers bureau.

Schapler will talk on issues regarding high school education, as well as public relations in a school, cooperative learning and vocational education, including the Tech Prep concept and the Academy School approach.

Other speakers will speak on subjects as varied as English for Speakers of Other Languages, psychological services, legal matters and employee relations.

"There's a wide variety of subjects," said Schapler.

The idea of the speakers bureau was introduced by Supt. Paul Hagerty and it was well-received by the various groups and individuals within the school district.

"I think there are people out there who want to hear what we are doing and we are anxious to spread the word about what we have to offer," Hagerty said.

Hagerty, himself, has made a commitment to go to each school in the district and conduct an open forum at which he will discuss the schools and answer any question about the district. He said he will do the same for any group that asks for his presence.

Hagerty said he is anxious to promote a more open policy between the schools and the community.
