BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

THE BURDEN BEARER Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee; he shall never suffer the righteous to be moved.—Psalm 55:22.

Stop us if you have heard this one "Do your Christmas shopping early."—Plant City Courier. It seems to us we have.

Don't spare too many domestic brooms, to holoes from the North, until you are sure that all the home folks are getting something to eat.

Judging from the results it would seem that most of these tax boards are composed of "pairless" dentists.

Most any unemployed can tell you how to put ten million men back to work, but mighty few of them can find a job for their selves.

Remember when they were saying that if the NRA failed it would be the end of our present form of government and spell the doom of the capitalist system?

Folks have peculiar ways of asking out an existence, and some of the most peculiar come to Florida during the winter season. Thisville Star-Advocate. He called on you, too, did he?

Those oil well drillers finally gave up and moved away from De Funiak Springs. They drilled a mile straight down but no oil worth mentioning. Learning Commercial. You can't dig no straight.

Most of our exchange, which through their well pocket advertising columns that merchants are going after Christmas income much harder than they have for several years.

The schemers with their catch penny ideas are showing up again. Turn them all down unless you know they are not false. Melbourne Times. They're coming in here, too, as thick as flies.

In Lebanon, Pennsylvania, a woman is near death from gun shot wounds after reporting an alleged violation of an NRA code. The proprietor, himself over 60, is accused of the crime. It is no wonder that the difficulties of enforcing Blue Eagle regulations have been insurmountable.

Dr. Tigert of the University of Florida joins Karl Lohmann in his prediction of an approaching Florida boom. Says the Gainesville educator, "It looks as if we are about to have another boom down here, which, of course, would be a bad thing." Yes, it probably would, but it would also be nice to be able to catch your breath, if only for a few weeks.

Leaving a note, "What's the use of carrying on?" Frederick Gebken, locked himself in the kitchen, turned on the gas, and soon died of asphyxiation. Strangely enough, he was only 21 years of age, with the whole world before him. But his family said he had been unable to find a job, was depressed. If he had kept trying, he might have found a job in a few months, or a few years. Now he never can.

A writer in the Tampa Tribune says that it is not fair for the government to pension everyone over sixty at the rate of $200 a month and not do anything for those who are under sixty. He suggests that those over sixty should be required to divide their pensions with those who are under sixty but over forty-five. Instead of paying all over sixty $200 a month, they all over forty-five $180. We would go one step farther, however, if we had anything to do with it, since we are much nearer forty than forty-five. We would have the government pay everyone over 40 years of age $75. Then they could be said that life does begin at forty.

Crime Prevention

The Federal government has been meeting with splendid success in its drive to clean up crime in this country. It has practically completed its campaign to eradicate the so-called public enemies, or outstanding criminal characters of the John Dillinger-"Baby Face" Nelson type. It has announced a new roundup of dope fiends and narcotic peddlers. It is combining its efforts to prevent bootlegging and moonshining.

That such a campaign was necessary, if our Democratic government was to be preserved at all, is shown by Department of Justice figures. From 1900 to 1909, 3,327 persons in every hundred thousand met death by crime. During the next decade this figure was increased to 6,884 for every hundred thousand. From 1920 to 1929, 9,564 persons in every hundred thousand were the victims of crime. By 1932 the figure had jumped to 11,443. It was 12,124 the next year. This year it is estimated at 11,502.

The Department of Justice records also show that crime conditions in the United States are worse than in any country of Europe. They are twice as bad here as they are in Greece. In Austria for every three persons who die as a result of crime, ten die in the United States from the same cause. Two die in Germany, two in Switzerland, one in France, Norway, Sweden, and Spain, and 8 in England and the Netherlands, for every ten who die from crime in this country.

Officials now name the following as topics under consideration at the Crime Conference:

- 1. Removal of police operations from the sphere of local politics.
2. Revision of laws relating to parole, penalties, probation, and the discussion of plans to make state and municipal statutes more uniform.
3. Measures which need to be taken by schools and other social agencies to reduce juvenile delinquency.
4. Revision of state laws to permit establishment of state police systems.
5. Establishment of a criminological institute at Washington for training local police leaders.
This is favored by Attorney General Cummings.
The Department of Justice has a collection of 4,500,000 fingerprints. It has 515 trained investigators, backed by the latest equipment, and by all facilities for crime detection. In each of the 30 offices of the Division of Criminal Investigation of the Department of Justice, there is a complete arsenal of weapons. Sub-machine guns, new type sawed-off shotguns, shooting shrapnel, rifles, armored cars, bombs, everything that might be needed, all are on hand. All of the investigators are expert marksmen.
But there is one other factor that explains why criminals fear Federal agents. It is in the record of court convictions. Thus during the fiscal year 1934, which ended last July 1, there were convictions in 93.81 percent of the cases investigated and brought to trial by the department.

Becoming Tax Conscious

The public generally does not realize how large a part of the price they pay for the things they buy is due to taxation. The taxes which a local merchant pays is, as much a part of his overhead costs as his rent, his lights, or his insurance. In figuring the price he can make on the goods he sells, he must take into consideration his taxes the same as any other cost, and pass them along to the consumer.

"Regardless of the fact that the burden of all taxation finally rests upon the individual," says the Tampa Times, "men and women in the lower financial brackets, as a rule, show little interest in public expenditures that eventually must be paid by the individual taxpayers. They whoop and hurray for candidates urging 'economy' in governmental affairs, then go to the polls and vote for candidates who have had little or no experience in handling large concerns and have made no conspicuous success even in managing their own business, if any."

"One New York firm, however, has inaugurated a campaign for creating tax-consciousness among its employees. Based on the idea that, after all, the taxpayers are the tax payers, this concern, Reynolds, Fish & Co., has displayed a woman and child pay the tax bill.

Taxes raise the price of everything. You pay the bill—directly or indirectly.
If you are employed: Reduce taxes and we can and will raise pay.
If you are unemployed: Reduce taxes and we can and will employ more people.
If you are a customer: Reduce taxes and we can and will reduce prices.

Fifty different taxes were paid last year by Reynolds, Fish & Co.
You support a huge army of political job holders. How many are really necessary?
What government services could be abolished without hurting you?

"The final two paragraphs of this interesting placard contain the meat of the whole. When people generally read, study and analyze them thoughtfully, tax reductions and general tax reforms will be just around the corner."

"After all is said and done, those who pay the taxes are those who lay them; and there is little point in this business of piling up governmental expense, which calls for steadily mounting tax burdens, and then complaining at what we ourselves have done."

THE BURNING QUESTION

BY MRS. J. C. HILLS

The severe drought of the past months has caused the Garden Club members concern about fire. As we drive along our highway, we pass miles of blackened woodland, or watch the gorgeous coloring of flames that eat their way across acres of land. 1500 fires yearly burn over 75 percent of our pine woods causing immense timber loss. Woods burning destroys the humus in the soil that the gardener cherishes, leaving it hard, dry, and unproductive. In this condition little seed trees do not survive, they blow up and die in the black sand.

So we have barren land or scrub oak because fire has made conditions too severe for nature to re-stock the land with desirable pine trees. The fire has burned the seeds in the soil and that today we have millions of acres of idle land not needed for agriculture which should be put to work growing trees. Our problem of financing schools can be laid largely to idle land. Many a child in Florida could be given a high school education from wealth that has been lost to Florida by timber depletion.

The hunters know that the future of their game depends on deer, quail, turkey having natural protection and food. Fire destroys the tall grasses, the brush, ground cover that drives quail to low ground where they are drowned in high water. Foxes, muntz, possum, deer are frequently killed outright. More game is killed each year in Florida than the hunters kill.

Our tourists come because of sunshine, fishing, hunting, golfing. Then because of flowers, birds, green grass, trees. We, too, love Florida for these reasons. As Garden Club members we again register our rebellion against woods fires, and look forward to the day when Seminole County will have organized fire prevention from the Florida Forest Service.

The Sanford Forum

Sanford Herald
At the risk of appearing to encroach upon your generosity as to space in the forum of your paper, I beg to reply to the question asked in a supposed news item in the issue of Dec. 4th.

It is asked "Why the Townsend Plan does not include orphans, destitute women, invalids and cripples of all ages and hundreds of thousands of others who for one reason and another are in a worse fix than many who are over sixty?"

Does not the very fact of admitting the destitution of the class of people mentioned, apart from the aged for whom the Townsend Plan is proposed, particularly, but the "system" that so complacently permits the outrageous conditions to obtain—condemned vested interests for selfish racketeering band that is so devoid of all feeling for their brother man that so long as they are apparently on easy street, recognize no such relationship as brotherhood? This plutocratic mafia that even now, in relief work and under a President who has only the welfare of the people at heart, are grafting and stealing right along. Right in our own town they are operating as in other communities this very minute. One cannot, by the most persistent effort, penetrate their lines. The one who tries—dies! He is simply squelched! He cannot get the thin end of a wedge in to have them investigated and fired. Evidence goes for nothing. The common man is downed as always by the powers of the professional who plays the "game" of the clique and stands by them in any presumption of interference with their method. Does not the costs of relief prove this in every section of the country? This class, on principle, always disapproves of any move for the betterment of the under dog. This, sir, is the reason that the Townsend Plan is proposed to ameliorate the condition of one class of destitute in the country, with the grand hope that in this way the other class of destitute, as admitted in the news item, will also be greatly helped through better business conditions induced by increasing the consumption of necessities which at present cannot be sold to the people who need them.

Democracy is not at fault. It is the manner in which the high handed ins have interpreted and run our government for so many years. A democracy should not be, as a recent writer proclaimed it:—"A rigid social structure beautifully designed to keep the ins in and the outs down" but to be good for all the people all the time. In a country so rich as this that will permit millions to be massed by others follows like a shadow. As I have already said in my letter to the forum of Nov. 23, last, and quoting Mr. Filene of Boston in a recent article in Liberty magazine:—"The new capitalism will do all this. The old capitalism has failed to do it." In other words, the new capitalism will interpret the constitution in such a way that the blot on the parchment of true democracy will be obliterated and become a government for the good of all and not for a selfish clique. "In our treasury," he continued, "we have $2,000,000,000 of metallic money—of gold and silver. Against this fabulous hoard there is nothing which prevents our issuing $27,000,000,000 worth of currency if necessary, whereas we ask for the issuance of only $10,000,000,000 of it.

Brooklyn Boasts Boy, 7 1/2, With Highest I. Q.

he was sent to the bureau on Sept. 15 by his teachers, who deplored of teaching anything to a boy who knew everything they told him. At the Child Guidance Bureau he was tested under the supervision of Dr. Morris Krugman. He was perfect in all the tests up to that for eleven-year-olds, and accumulated sufficient points in the older tests to give him a mental age of sixteen years and ten months. The IQ is reached by dividing the physical age, then seven years and four months, into this artificially determined mental age.

correctly in a six-line passage intended for "superior adults," of which the meat is that "the general mediocrity of life prevents it from being radically unjust." When Dr. Krugman had added up his results, he blinked, went over the figures once more, and concluded that the child could not be handled by the public schools. Dr. Augusta Alpert, psychologist of the Brooklyn Ethical Culture School, is a friend of Dr. Krugman, and he forthwith informed her of the child and asked her to take him under her care. Dr. Alpert, a psychologist with a Ph. D. degree from Columbia University, made the necessary arrangements and the boy was enrolled in the second grade. He has eleven small companions, all about his own age, in the class. Five of them are exceptional children, and although the nearest competitor has an IQ of 77 points lower than his, he gets along excellently with them. Since he is physically and socially not much older than his chronological age, the school regards it as most important to keep him with children no older than he is. No attempt is being made to push his studies, since it is especially desired to have him grow up a normal boy. "One is impressed by the boy the moment one sees him," Dr. Alpert said. "I have never seen a child that could compare with him in intelligence, and Dr. Krugman agrees with me. For example, when I first interviewed him I asked him what sort of thing he liked, and he answered 'the fight and arguments very much.' As a rule they are new, and quite peculiar, since nothing is ever settled by them. As you can see his vocabulary is astonishing for a child his age; he was using the words 'quintessence' and 'epitome' just for effect, but his conversational level is always considerably above that of the average grown man or woman."

"And he has an immensely quick, agile mind. While I was scribbling when he sat on a sheet of paper on my lap, writing excruciating and abstruse words, he was watching me. He was standing by me, but at an angle which made it most difficult for him to read, so when he said 'He is a genius, she is a genius.' His teacher is Miss Zora Eichenfelder, a graduate of the Ethical Culture Training School, who has been teaching for four years. With Dr. Alpert's advice, she has laid down a course of study for him, and she is showing especially the boy's character which were completely developed when he first went to the school. Physically, he is healthy and well grown for his age, but he shunned the more complicated play ground exercises which his class-mates and he are doing. In games he was likely to burst into tears if he was unsuccessful, and in all things requiring the use of his hands he was distinctly backward. His hygiene and exercises at 11:15 A. M. The first hour is devoted to hand work, modeling in clay, carpentry, painting, crayon drawing, paper cutting and so forth. At 1:15 there are fifteen minutes for orange juice and cranberry juice at 10 A. M. and 10:30 A. M. After a period of games and play on the apparatus begins. At 10:55 his classmate receives instruction in the three R's, but he and two or three other exceptional children go on with their own work, having an advanced class of knowledge in the school library. At 11:25 everyone has lunch and at 12:05 P. M. an hour's rest on mats in the schoolroom begins. They all rest and work at the end of the hour and at 1:00 P. M. a story telling quarter hour starts. In this he has distinguished himself not so much by imagination as by the maturity and clarity of his stories, which have mostly concerned experiences of his own. His last was a description of a trip to Washington, at the end of which he explained in detail the city's street plan and abstract system of street numbering. At 1:30 what the school calls "rhythms," which are simply marching or dancing to music, are begun. At 1:55 there is work in arithmetic and penmanship which is chiefly confined to penmanship in his case since he wrote a bad hand. At 2:30 there is more yard play. School is out at 3 P. M.

The studying is done in a pleasant school room with all the decorations children are taught to make for their environments by modern decoration. The walls are covered with little competitive lists and such things as a row of questions about where different articles of food come from. This is part of the "social work" Miss Eichenfelder explained that the second grade is "food and clothing year," when the children learn the origin of these useful articles.

Then there are quantities of crudely drawn, highly colored designs. Some of them are abstract, others are not. In the class recently one small boy was at work on a "palace" with the prince and princess who were to occupy it, and another little boy was painting a motorcycle with a companion with a compass. One whole shelf is taken up with crude painted clay objects, some, like a bowl full of fruit and a boat, quite elaborate. Miss Eichenfelder is not sixteen weeks, with an only about seven to nine years old. Of course his motor development also enters into such work as clay modeling, carpentry and so forth. Here again he is still a child of seven to nine years, as he is in his school work, but he goes along best with children of about his own age provided they are intelligent enough to understand his poly-syllabic English. For these reasons the school regards it as most important for him to be with children of his own age as much as possible, furnishing him chiefly with opportunities for work in the fields in which his accomplishment now far behind his academic achievement.

Miss Eichenfelder, Mrs. Newman and Dr. Alpert are all pleased with the boy. They regard him in every way as a perfectly normal child, and they wish to keep him so. Dr. Alpert explained that he could very well be in college in a short time, but he would unquestionably run his fingers forever. There is being taken to account growing him the impression that he is a prodigy, as educational pushing surely would do.

CHRISTMAS SPENDING INCREASES

is twenty percent above last year. Merchants reported that a striking feature of the season is the appeal of better quality goods has made to the customer.

San Francisco, where the gain has already been from 11 to 20 percent looked for a "buying boom" during the Christmas week. The gains reported by stores in other cities over last year were: Pittsburgh, 22 to 33 percent; Houston, Tex., 15 percent; Austin, Tex., 20 percent; Oklahoma City, 10 percent; Detroit, 12 to 15 percent; and Milwaukee, 20 percent.

Salt Lake City department store managers reported Christmas business was 25 to 40 percent better than last year, and that buying began 10 days sooner than in 1933.

Estimates of the gain this year over 1933 in Minneapolis ranged from 10 to 25 percent with all executives reporting stores crowded with shoppers.

The same story was told by Indianapolis store managers with a report that "luxury lines and toys are selling more readily than last year."

Many stores in Portland, Maine, were caught short of help in the unexpected increase in Christmas business, with estimates of the first week's buying set as high as 30 percent more than last year. There, too, store operators reported the demand was for better grade goods than last year.

He said he knew of this incident were reported company directors would have stopped all further sales.

11 KNOWN DEAD IN HOTEL FIRE AT LANSING

Kerns Building Guttled By Early Morning Blaze Which May Prove Fatal To 40

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 11.—(A.P.)—An early morning fire in zero weather turned the Kerns Hotel into a death trap today and with 11 known dead, police and firemen predicted the number of fatalities might reach forty.

Their escape cut off by flames, many guests jumped from upper windows, some to the street and others into the Grand River which flows at the rear of the hotel.

A score or more of the guests were state legislators here for a special session.

Five of the known dead were drowned. Five others died of injuries suffered in leaping to street.

Fleeing witnesses told of stumbling over the body of David Monroe, assistant hotel manager, who apparently died of suffocation or injuries.

The incomplete list of injured at hospitals, some of whom are not expected to recover, stood at 27.

No complete list of the missing could be compiled because hotel records, including the register, apparently were destroyed. Police and firemen, however, said they believed the hotel ruins still blazing, fitfully and too hot to permit an investigation, contained probably 20 bodies, and (Continued on Page Two)

Otis Curry Drowns In Lake Butler At Dunedin Sunday

Otis Curry, young pitcher who starred as a member of the Sanford Club in the Central Florida Baseball League during 1935, was drowned accidentally in Lake Butler near Dunedin Sunday afternoon.

Young Curry, 26 years of age, sank to his death after a stubborn battle against cold and exhaustion. With him went F. H. Marston, 58, Dunedin merchant, and his son, Clarence Marston, 25.

They were thrown into the water when their boat overturned as its occupants attempted to change seats. They clung to the slippery keel for two hours or more before releasing their holds and slipping to death before the horrified eyes of a fourth member of the party, Gail Wallace, 25, of Dunedin.

Wallace said that they dropped off one by one in the cold water. He could not recall which man disappeared first. Wallace clung to the boat for three hours before his yells for help were heard by Leo Patras, fishing camp proprietor on the east shore of the lake. Wallace was brought to shore at about 7:00 o'clock Sunday night.

The bodies were found at about midnight, Marston and his son clinging together. Curry found a few feet away.

Curry is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Curry, and five brothers, William, Bryant, Wylie, Ariel and Oren, all of Dunedin. He was well known in Sanford and Central Florida.

Dr. Dafoe, 'Country Doctor' Who Brought Quintuplets Into World, Visits New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the country doctor from the north woods of Canada who brought the Dionne quintuplets into the world, arrived yesterday on his first visit to civilization in many years.

The grey-haired little doctor accented with a calm smile the formalities of a New York welcome as he was shepherded out of the station by a squad of towering policemen who made him seem even smaller than he is.

The first thing he did, after reaching his hotel, was to take a Staten Island ferryboat and have a look at New York's skyline from the water. The second was to stroll in the subway, clinging to a strap even though the seat in front of him was empty.

He is going to spend the week here, in Washington, and at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, & he plans to return to Canada on Monday.

While in New York, he wants to see "all the things we don't have up North," the Empire State Building, the elevated, the zoo, and "maybe a night club."

Dr. Dafoe and the quintuplets are "all doing well, though it's pretty cold up there."

"They're well babies and happy babies," he said. "Pretty good. They're really handsome."

"They have increased their total weight from 9 pounds and 12 ounces a week after birth to 38 or 39 pounds. They are about normal weight now. They can raise themselves and wiggle around now, they have quite a lot of hair," (Continued on Page Three)

BABSON CITES 12 CITRUS INDUSTRY TRUTHS' ABOUT DEADLOCK ENDS U. S. BUSINESS BY AGREEMENT

Statistician Thinks Government Should Quit Its Meddling

JACKSONVILLE, Dec. 11.—Roger W. Babson, noted business statistician, in an address here last night before the Jacksonville chamber of commerce, cited 12 "truths about today's business" to show that prosperity is improving. He said all that is needed now is to Washington "to attend to its own business of running an honest and efficient government, and quit meddling up more with business until business has adjusted itself to the revolutionary change already put into effect."

His 12 signs indicating prosperity is returning were given as follows:

"Had business and financial nations were consistently being cleaned up. Private and corporate debts are being rapidly reduced. The debts are being cleaned for a return of good business as soon as political and labor leaders come to their senses.

"More money is available for expansion today than ever before in the history of this country. Some base for a great period of inflation.

"Total inventories have been steadily declining during the past 12 months. Any marked business pickup might easily cause a sharp rise in prices and retailers for more merchandise.

"An analysis of department store sales shows that the unit or quantity sales is increasing more rapidly than the dollar volume compared with a year ago.

"In October, 1934, 43 major companies declared dividends against back accumulations compared with only 18 of such companies declaring such dividends in October, 1932. A similar increase took place in the total number of dividend increases.

JOHNSON SAYS ROOSEVELT NRA IS DEAD ASKS FOR AID AS A DODO IN CRIME WAR

Former Chief Claims Co-Ordination Of All Law Enforcement Agencies Would Be An Immediate Need

NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—General Hugh S. Johnson, former NRA administrator, pointed out today, emphasizing his long fight for a co-ordinated law enforcement agency, to announce that the NRA is dead.

The NRA is "as dead as the dodo," he said, "and it is time to get on with the job of co-ordinating all law enforcement agencies."

Johnson still treated at the disarrangement between Donald Ruggles and himself, which preceded his resignation as NRA chief, Johnson said, the NRA simply is not a law enforcement agency.

What is needed, he said, is a law enforcement agency which is co-ordinated and centralized. What is needed is a law enforcement agency which is co-ordinated and centralized.

It was explained that Johnson, succeeded Johnson as NRA chief, and may be expected to take over the present position of the NRA in the United States.
