Less than two months later, on Oct. 20, 1925, the secretary of war ordered a court martial to try Mitchell for "violation of the Ninety-sixth Article of War, which prohibits conduct prejudicial to good order and military discipline." He was found guilty, sentenced to immediate suspension from his rank with forfeiture of all pay and allowances for five years. President Coolidge upheld the suspension but restored part of his pay and allowance.

Mitchell resigned the following day. He retired to obscurity as a gentleman farmer, but his interest in aviation never waned.

BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

SERVANTS FIRST: And whoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all.—Mark 10: 44.

Congress is going to investigate the Townsend Plan, but isn't it funny they passed up the dime letter crisis?

GItalans are as worried over the crisis as a bird dog about to have his bone taken away from him.

Almie Semple McPherson is being sued for slander. . . and she said "You're a devil out of hell." "You can't do anything with anyone as coarse and common as she is."

Congressman O'Connor apologizes for threatening to kick Father Coughlin from the Capitol to the White House. It seems that Father Coughlin is something of a kick himself.

Samuel Lebowitz, New York lawyer who gained fame in this section as one of the Scottsboro attorneys, walked out on Bruno Hauptmann, indicating that in his opinion Bruno is guilty. And when Lebowitz admits they're guilty, they're pretty guilty.

"Funtle" Reed of Kissimmee has announced his candidacy for congressman from the Fifth (Central Florida) District. Funtle is well known in Sanford where he frequently visits not only the American Legion but also the members of the Ball family, one of whom he married.

We see where the London Naval Conference is deadlocked over a dispute between France and the United States about the size of their future battleships. But it isn't the relative size of French and American battleships that count, it is the relative size of Japanese and American battleships that may cause headlines in the future.

Visiting in Sanford yesterday in the interest of his candidacy for re-election to the office of State Treasurer was W. V. Knox, who has held the office since 1922. Mr. Knox says that during this period he has received and accurately accounted for the sum of $238,000,000 of public funds, amounting not only to his efficiency but also his honesty.

Adolf Hitler has banned pictures of Charlie Chaplin in Germany because of his funny little moustache which looks so strangely like that of Adolf Hitler. But after all, Charlie Chaplin was making people laugh with that little old moustache long before Hitler was ever heard of. It should be Adolf himself who should be banned.

Representative Lammeok, a Democrat from the State of Ohio, says "There is no agricultural over-production when 50,000,000 Americans are hungry, when at least 200,000,000 Chinese are starving, and 100,000,000 Russians go without food." And that it seems to him is one of the more logical arguments that has been reached by the House of Representatives in recent years.

It is just as well, that Italy, France, and America have formed the League of Nations, for it will be a disaster if Japan is allowed to get the rest of the world.

Everyone Pays

The average family supported by a salary sufficient to place the wage earner in the income tax paying group, paid in 1934-'35, directly or indirectly, more than thirty levies to the federal government, according to an analysis by the Merchants' Association of New York of Internal Revenue collections for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1935 and published in the New York Herald Tribune. The analysis also indicated that the imposition of taxes on commodities and their manufacture and sale boosted the cost of retail purchase not less than 5 percent in 1935.

The study showed that the government collected sixty-seven different taxes, including twenty-six different manufacturers' excise taxes, and that in order to collect them, 131 separate levies were imposed. The tax on distilled spirits, wines and beer, for example, was imposed in nineteen different forms, it was said.

The analysis revealed that in the year under review there were collected $1,781,000,000 in what was described as "concealed taxes." These were defined as commodity taxes, included as a general rule in one form or another in the purchase price of commodities, the payment of which may or may not have been indicated to the purchaser.

Federal taxes on commodities in the year ended June 30, 1935, were listed as follows:

Liquor, wine and malt beverages	$ 411,021,772
Tobacco manufactures	459,178,625
Manufacturers' excise	342,274,677
Crude petroleum	1,759,789
Cococanut and other vegetable oils, processed	24,457,091
Oil by pipe line	9,479,721
A. A. A. cotton ginning and tobacco sales	826,222,368
Playing cards, stamp tax	4,351,299
Narcotics	580,813
Under national firearms act	8,015
Adulterated butter	3,922
Process butter	4,928
Oleomargarine	2,048,976
Filled Cheese	1,003
Mixed flour	4,525

Total commodity taxes $1,781,597,890

The survey was prepared under the direction of Laurence Tanzer, chairman of the committee on taxation and public revenue of the association. Commenting on its disclosures, Mr. Tanzer said:

"The results of this inquiry demonstrate clearly the extent to which the average man, and even the poor man, is called upon to support the expenditures of the federal government. While it is true that taxation falls most heavily on the rich, there is no one who can escape the increased costs of living brought about by the multiplicity of federal taxes.

"There were at least eight taxes collected in 1935 which even those on a bare subsistence level could not avoid. Probably even in the case of most of the families living on funds provided by local or federal relief agencies their cost of living was increased by more than eight taxes levied by the federal government."

Every Man His Price?

The cynics say that every man has his price. If an apparently honest man turns down a bribe of a thousand dollars, it is only because the offer was not for two thousand dollars, or five, or ten. It is assumed that nobody ever does anything for the mere principle of the thing, but only because whatever he does, whether it is honest or dishonest, is to his own self interest. Make the offer interesting enough, and it will be accepted.

Such a cynic, apparently is Dr. Ernest F. S. Hanfstangl, a former Harvard student, but more recently world famous as the chief foreign propagandist of the German Nazi party. Two years ago he offered his old alma mater a contribution of $1,000 for the campaign fund in connection with that university's three hundredth anniversary. It was presumed that this display of generosity on the part of one so intimately connected with the things that Adolf Hitler is doing in Germany would help to establish a spirit of at least tacit approval in this country.

But Harvard University heads turned the offer down. "The corporation," wrote Dr. James Bryant Conant at that time, "are unwilling to accept a gift from one who has been so closely associated with the leadership of a political party which has inflicted damage on the universities of Germany through measures which have struck at principles we believe to be fundamental to universities throughout the world."

But Dr. Hanfstangl would not accept that answer. He simply raised the ante. If they would not accept $1,000 on account of their straight-laced principles, perhaps they would accept $10,000. But he reckoned without the moral strength of character of Harvard heads. If it was wrong to take a thousand dollars it was just ten times as wrong to accept $10,000. So reasoned Dr. Conant at least.

For when Dr. Hanfstangl renewed his offer to contribute to Harvard's tercentenary fund, and this time made it ten instead of one, Dr. Conant replied simply: "Harvard has not changed its position in regard to accepting a gift by Dr. Hanfstangl."

Lucius Beebe, Famed Author and Gourmet, Praises Citrus
By NINA OLIVER DEAN

"Grapefruit juice is the best pecker-upper I know. I drink a quart of it every morning," said Lucius Beebe, famous gourmet, author of the New York Herald Tribune's column, "This New York," one of the freshly-published books, "Boston and the Boston Legend," associate publisher with Harry Ben- nister and John Krinsky of the current play, "Border at the Old Red Barn," the mad tea party that goes on nightly in an old Sweden's Church and has set the town by the ears, Manhattan's latest impecberily tailored man-about-town, the white tie journalist who doesn't have to work but took the silver spoon out of his mouth, got himself a type-writer, and consistently turns out such sparkling copy that it lends additional glamour to the brightest of the "glitter folk" he writes about. It ought to mean something in the life of any Florida grapefruit to be praised by Lucius Beebe because he knows his "gastronomic glories" from quail in aspic to perfumed Burgundy, from terrines of foie gras ornamented with Fergured truffles to snails in butter at the Renomme des Escarvagues, from green turtle soup and grouse rushed fresh from the moors of Scotland to sauce made of black oil-seeds cherries flavoured with brandy.

"You know I can't believe it's really you," I said as I sat in his office at the Herald Tribune staring at this amazing tall blond young man who had just rushed in coatless with his sleeves rolled up apologizing that it was his day in the composing room. "I suppose, I should have known you didn't work in the checked trousers and tail coat you always wear in the pictures in 'Town and Country' and 'Spur,' but it is rather a shock to find you coatless and with your sleeves rolled up." I finished a bit naively. It was an exciting moment for me. When you are a struggling young journalist and you meet your favourite columnist, a man you had rather be able to argue like than anybody, a man whose stuff you have read since it first began to appear in fugitive articles in the Herald-Tribune, and then every week since his column began in 1935, a man you have followed faithfully about Manhattan for years, quite decorously in print of course, a man who does not know you from Adam but whom you know so well, every odd quirk of his mind, his pet words, his favourite dishes, his habit of greeting the first snow storm with a sleigh ride through Central Park, and the other slightly crazy things he does that have made Lucius Beebe a legend as well as a writer.

Suddenly I remembered that I wasn't there to gape but to get a famous gourmet's slant on citrus for the Florida Exhibit at Rockefeller Center. "Mr. Beebe, what do you think of the citrus?"

"The daquiri, the Manhattan, and the Martini are the three classic cocktails, and the daquiri is one of the best—man and Florida limes make a perfect combination, a fresh clean taste. How's that for your story?" Then, he added with a dazzling smile, "As it happens I really mean it."

As some one has said, "there are countless stories about this man, but the most fantastic leaves a great deal unaid." Although he is so young, the Beebe legend has attained amazing proportions. It dates from preparatory school days at St. Marks, from escapades at Harvard and Yale, for paradoxically enough he attended both of these colleges. He comes from old New England stock. His father was a banker and founder of one of the larger leather and cotton firms in the East, his grandfather a professor of philosophy at Harvard, an inmate of Emerson and Thoreau. He was born in Wakefield, Massachusetts, and still owns a hundred acre farm there. It seems impossible to think of a Pan with Puritan ancestry, but with this Beebe, nothing is impossible. I noticed his ears set right to his head, not exactly pointed as the top but with and "Spur," but it is rather a shock to find you coatless and with your sleeves rolled up." I finished a bit naively. It was an exciting moment for me. When you are a struggling young journalist and you meet your favourite columnist, a man you had rather be able to argue like than anybody, a man whose stuff you have read since it first began to appear in fugitive articles in the Herald-Tribune, and then every week since his column began in 1935, a man you have followed faithfully about Manhattan for years, quite decorously in print of course, a man who does not know you from Adam but whom you know so well, every odd quirk of his mind, his pet words, his favourite dishes, his habit of greeting the first snow storm with a sleigh ride through Central Park, and the other slightly crazy things he does that have made Lucius Beebe a legend as well as a writer.

"The house Beebe is a school of New York society. The New York limes have come to be used up all the garden before Christmas because afterward, everything goes to Florida."

"Just as I was leaving to go back to Florida in New York at Rockefeller Center, I called Mr. Beebe about his show and he said you had to see it, and so I did. He said that the all in the Herald-Tribune was right when it said, 'If you want to go place-placements, go to the Old Red Barn.'" It's a rich people's world, with all the trimmings and the audience is the most important actor as it has been the villain occasionally and hasn't advened to the horizon. Between the acts, there is a waiting show and the Six Dances come down, and do tumbling and appear as at having."

I suddenly felt to thinking of all the adventures in seeing that Mr. Beebe must have had. In his new book, "Boston and the Boston Legend," Walter Prichard Eaton says that Mr. Beebe recalls the school of the Boston diet with the scholarly affection of an epicure. In the book, which a commentator described as "citrus and grape," and the author himself defines as "a chapter study of the city." Mr. Beebe says that he is tired of appearing for Boston and appearing himself for being a Bostonian, that he has had many a good time in Boston, and that "what's so good as appearing as at having."

Lucius Beebe, famous gourmet, author of the New York Herald Tribune's column, "This New York," one of the freshly-published books, "Boston and the Boston Legend," associate publisher with Harry Ben- nister and John Krinsky of the current play, "Border at the Old Red Barn," the mad tea party that goes on nightly in an old Sweden's Church and has set the town by the ears, Manhattan's latest impecberily tailored man-about-town, the white tie journalist who doesn't have to work but took the silver spoon out of his mouth, got himself a type-writer, and consistently turns out such sparkling copy that it lends additional glamour to the brightest of the "glitter folk" he writes about. History Of Panama, Once Born In Uncle Sam's Side, Recounted By Marine Corps

Sanford, Feb. 21.—Panama's stormy history has been so closely connected with the United States that the Central American country is known in the side of Uncle Sam's side. According to Lieutenant Colonel William T. Hoadley, commanding the Marine Corps, the United States has been in Panama since 1823. Col. Hoadley said, "It is necessary to intervene in Panama several times. The present day on these occasions, usually the U. S. Marine Corps is sent. These interventions were made in conformity with the policies of the Monroe Doctrine." Panama's stormy history is involved with that of its neighbor, Colombia, as Panama was a department of that country until 1903. As early as 1860, marines from the sloop St. Mary's were landed there to protect American interests and to quell a revolution. This was not the first rumbling of political disturbances which were eventually to split Panama and Colombia into two nations. Twice before, in 1841 and 1857, Panama had attempted to secede, but each time returned to its association with Colombia. But in the years between 1860 and the eventual separation, marines were landed on the isthmus from American naval vessels to protect Americans and to establish peace on at least five different occasions. Serious disorders occurred when Panama finally withdrew from Colombia in 1903, and the U. S. Marines were landed there once more. From that year, with the exception of brief intervals they remained on the isthmus until January, 1914, guarding American interests until the canal was built. "While all branches of the service have certain of their units stationed at Panama today," Col. Hoadley said, "as a matter of fact the U. S. Marines were the only troops occupying the isthmus when the United States signed the treaty in 1904 and pushed the canal through to completion. "Today the Panama Canal is perhaps the most marvelous engineering work made by man. A five-mile strip on either side of the axis of the 50 mile waterway is owned by the United States, and the U. S. also owns and operates the railway which spans the isthmus. "With the exception of the newly-built Normandie and some other liners under construction, the canal probably can accommodate any vessel afloat, as the lock chambers have a usable length of 1,000 feet and a width of 110 feet. Depths vary, but are not less than 42 feet at sea level sections. "Yet even with these huge locks there is little clearance for our larger naval vessels, the airplane carrier Saratoga, for example, with its beam of 105 feet has less than a yard leeway on either side when she passes through. "It is expected that eventually a third set of locks will be built of larger dimensions and greater depth than the present locks. It is believed that the additional set would enable the canal to handle all the traffic to be developed in the next hundred years. "The Marines' campaign in Panama are now past history, but today they are guarding the submarine base at Coco Solo, near Colon, at the Caribbean end of the canal. They have been there since 1922. "This final landing was, of course, entirely peaceful and the last of many occupations of the isthmus, so many of which were made during earlier and more turbulent times."

Tomasello Says That Number 13 Is A Lucky One

ORLANDO, Feb. 21.—The number 13 is considered a lucky omen by Peter Tomasello, Jr., former speaker of the Florida House of Representatives and now a candidate for governor. Boom For Landon Has Become Major Discussion Topic

Some Believe He Has Chance If Care Is Used In Campaign

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—(AP)—The Landon presidential boom which has attained proportions which qualify it as a major topic of discussion wherever politicians are gathered together.

Opinions still differ widely as to how the boom may happen between now and the Republican convention time. There are those who contend that Landon himself will be nominated; and there are those who are inclined to put the emphasis on the pitfalls he still faces. It is believed that the boom already has made its mark on the situation as it stands at the moment there is far less dispute. Politicians generally are agreed that, as of February, Governor Landon is a figure of importance in his party, to be reckoned with by every group which aspires to party control.

That situation involves both advantages and hazards for the Kansas governor, and undoubtedly is receiving the most serious consideration on the part of those friends who want to see him in the White House.

Actually, measured by all past standards, the Landon boom would seem to be entering for the first time on its critical stage.

Up to the end of January, or thereabouts, Mr. Landon was just another state governor, with a good record as a vote-getter, praised by his partisans for his executive abilities and for his management of state finances, and well thought of by various eastern business men for the general qualities he had shown as governor.

Now, by reason of the formal launching of his presidential candidacy, he becomes not only a national figure, but one whose friends are actively seeking something for him.

He has made a speech or two on national issues, he will be called upon to make more, and it is well established that speech-making is hazardous.

Also, the search for delegates is beginning actively. And that always means a battle.

From what has been said by those inside the Landon organization it appears that the business of enlisting delegates strength is going forward in Oklahoma, Nebraska, Missouri, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Texas, Washington, Oregon, California and elsewhere. The claim is disputed, but some Landon supporters say he is assured today of more convention votes than any other aspirant.

The dangers which beset Governor Landon, or any other candidate, as his campaign spreads out on a national basis, are well known to every experienced politician.

It is inevitable that any such campaign must collide at various points with the campaigns of others who also seek party leadership. Already some of the partisans of Senator Borah have selected Landon as their special target. Already there are evidences of resentment in the ranks of those who have been working for months for the nomination of Col. Frank Knox.

If Landon is as "far out in front" as some of his friends say he is, the natural thing is for the friction caused by his campaign to increase as the convention nears.

In more than one similar case in the past, the ultimate power of that friction has been fatal to the man who was No. 1 on the first ballot. Seldom has any principal figure in a deadlock emerged as the nominee.

The governor's friends manifestly are making a conscious effort to minimize antagonism of this sort, and to keep on good terms with all factions. The coming weeks will see what success they have. Upon this one thing the outcome at the Cleveland convention might easily hinge.

NORRIS' TVA DREAM UPHELD

Status Of Queen Marys Changed By Death Of King

More Quiet Life Is Faced By Widow Of Ruler Of Britain

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The quiet, conservative family life which she and King George VI. struggled to maintain amid the pomp and circumstance of a royal court, is a promise of the future for Queen Mary.

The year of mourning for months of it "ful" decreed by her son, Edward VIII, has reduced to the minimum of necessity the public appearances of the bereaved royal family. Once that time is over, the king, his brothers and their families probably will be plunged into a strenuous round of social and official affairs.

Not so their "queen mother." In her new status she will no longer be required to attend court and stand while long lines of ladies, ladies and maids stand before her, curtsy and retire.

Vista from official and royal of other nations, opinions of parliament, trooping of the colors and all the other official "occasions" at which the queen was expected to be at the side of a reigning sovereign, will no longer require her presence.

She went through many years of this, determined to be a real queen to her people and a genuine help-mate to her husband. How she succeeded has to be recorded by British records and contemporary historians.

Henceforth she will be "at large" to pursue her own quiet life. Needlework and the collection of antiques, and especially ferns, have been her chief avocations. She could seldom relax the obligation to look into every nook and cranny to which she came.

Also she has been a "woolies" shopper. Her husband, a few years back was reported around the world. Her habit to dress in bargain was known, and her name, decorated by shopkeepers and clerks. A sign in a window upon "buying British" applied articles and articles had full appeal to her either as an English woman or as the thrifty soul she always was.

Attorney General Has Had Unusually Busy Four Years

More Cases Handled Than At Any Other Period In History

TALLAHASSEE, Feb. 21.—Attorney General Cary D. Landis said today that his department has handled more important cases during the last four years than during any other four-year period in the state's history.

General Landis also said there are more cases of major importance now being handled, or which have been disposed of during the last six months, than ever before.

Topping the list of major cases around through the mills of the attorney general's office is the 1935 chain store tax case, involving annual tax revenue originally expected to total $4,500,000 of the $10,000,000 a year appropriated for schools by the 1935 Legislature.

In the court cases, seven in the Supreme Court, and four in the federal courts, all involving the chain store tax law, with the high court participating, set the high water mark for attacks on any Florida legislative act.

In addition, General Landis said, his office has handled a large volume of criminal cases, including the case of the "Long Last Day" of the 1935 Legislature. The attorney general's office has been engaged in an unusually large number of court actions in the past year involving the constitutionality of laws.

Management of her household was trained into her in the office. Her parents, the Duke and Duchess of Teck, were far from wealthy, frequently were hard put to maintain their social position. "May" therefore helped her mother, not only in paying the family expenses, but also by undertaking some duties that ordinarily might have been performed by secretaries.

She has some favorite charities, of which she has given both money and inspection. They may be expected to continue to receive her support.

Finally there is her church. She is a member of the Church of England, but prefers "low" services to "high church" rites.

Safety Official Urges Daily Use Of Common Sense

Average Caution Will Reduce Auto Toll, W. L. Hays Declares

ORLANDO, Feb. 21.—Education of motorists through full-driving-time observance of "common sense" traffic rules was urged upon Florida motorists today by Walter L. Hays, chairman of the safety committee of the Florida Junior Chamber of Commerce and member of Governor Sholtz's 1936 committee on safety.

"Nearly every organization in Florida is joining in the movement for greater highway safety," Hays said, "but all of our efforts will have no avail unless the individual motorist exercises caution and care in his driving."

"There are but a few motorist accidents or fatalities that can be classed as unavoidable, even in the common understanding of the word, and the exercise of common sense by motorists in observing written and unwritten rules of the road will eliminate this class of accidents 100 percent."

Hays cautioned drivers to increase care in driving during the winter season, because of the much greater number of automobiles and trucks plying Florida roads.

Dr. Townsend To Tell Committee Of Plans

(AP)—Dr. F. E. Townsend and the man who will head the House investigation of his old-age pension movement agreed yesterday on one point—the California will have a major role in the inquiry.

A spokesman for the co-founder of the plan to pay $200 a month to the aged, said a request that the investigation be delayed for two weeks so that Townsend, who is ill, could be on hand.

Colonel McMullen Found Guilty By Army Honor Court

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—(AP)—An Army "court of honor" last night found Col. Joseph I. McMullen, legal advisor to the Assistant Secretary of War for 15 years; guilty of dishonorable conduct and sentenced him to demotion, to partial forfeiture of pay, and to official reprimand.

McMullen was found guilty on two of the four specifications brought against him, all centered upon the charge that in 1934 he accepted two round trip railroad and Pullman tickets from Washington to San Francisco, both valued at $89.70, from Joseph Silverman, Jr., New York dealer in "old cloth."

Silverman's companies, purchasers of enormous quantities of surplus Army goods, were then seeking favorable changes in their war department contracts.

McMullen was accused of having "wrongfully, dishonestly and to the discredit of the military service" accepted the tickets as a gift from Silverman while negotiations were still pending in which his advice was sought.

The court-martial, presided over by Maj-Gen. Upon Birnie, Jr., chief of field artillery, and composed of 10 other generals and colonels wearing full uniform and swords, found McMullen "guilty" after four days of testimony and more than three hours' deliberation on the evidence.

He was sentenced to be demoted to the bottom of the list of colonels, forfeit $150 per month for two years, and be reprimanded by Secretary of War Den.

3 Million Spent In Improvements At Landing Fields

TALLAHASSEE, Feb. 21.—Aviation improvements in the established landing fields of the Florida State Road Department, have reached a total expenditure of $3,194,779.85 of federal, state, county and municipal money.

Chiefman C. B. Treadway of the road department said today.

The establishment of the department's aviation division Apr. 15, 1935, Treadway said, aviation facilities have been increased from 28 landing fields to 106 usable airports in the state.

Total expenditure on airport improvements by all governments in the state was $2,403,214.85 up to Dec. 15, 1935.

In addition to airport improvements, a statewide system of airway marking has been developed to include painting of towns on the roofs of approximately 500 large buildings over the state and the erection of several thousand roadside direction markers along the highway for direction of automobile traffic to airports.

This year's marking cost $4,611.00 to the end of 1935.

The federal government has allotted $635,855.43 active WPA projects in airports in the state, which had not been expended at the first of the year, Treadway said.

TALLAHASSEE, Feb. 21.—State Treasurer W. V. Knott reported today that $131,208 was received from life insurance companies and agents during the period of the fiscal year of 1935-36.

This showed a slight increase over the $129,440 received during the same period of 1934-35, according to Knott, who, as treasurer, also is insurance commissioner of the state.

The bulk of license money is received during October, November, December and January. October, 1935, topped all other months with $85,846, while the same period of 1934 was next with $78,799.

A total of 10,835 agents paid $3,803 during the four high months of this fiscal year, while 6,280 paid $62,344 in the four months period of the 1934-35 fiscal year.

A sum of $67,400 was the amount of license money turned in by 287 companies in the first month of this fiscal year as against $67,100 from 335 companies during a similar period of the previous year.
