Film Head Today

Jears ago fanded in America from Germany alone and friendless, is calebrating here today the twentieth anniversary of his entrance into the motion picture business.

The young immigrant Carl found odd jobs and eventually landed in Chicago. There, on February 26, 1906, he opened a small place of exhibition known as the White Front, devoted to the ten newangled moving pictures. Through any vicissitudes and much selection and make the first san to the land another than the first san.

NEW YORK, Mar. 1.—A plump, amazingly poised girl of 19 from Kansas "corn belt" crashed the gate to stardom at the Metropolitan Opera House the other day and a considerable portion of this nation stood on tip toes to peep every scene of her romance.
All the world loves a Cinderella story, of which Marion Talley's is the latest version. Millions read of her rise from a church choir singer, of her dad who had tapped a telegraph key for 18 years, of her will to succeed, and of the accident of her discovery. Such was the foreground which the public might peep.

Sometimes on Saturday afternoons, for hours, Will Smith, with his hands crossed on the top of his bamboo cane, sat on the white stone of this coping, watching the lovely things go by.

There came one day, out of the great hotel, two girls with the kind of perfume to them that Saturday after Saturday could make Will Smith close his eyes and whiff of heaven as the stream of girls passed him by. They came straight toward the fountain and up on the click of their tall little heels to the coping beside where Will sat, and with little squeals and little giggles and the most adorable little noises that doves make, they peered into the bowl of the fountain and then drew back again,

Saturday half holiday was Will Smith's salvation. It meant his escape from reality. Will Smith, with the soul of a cavalier, and the squash face.

A little squash-face fellow who dreamed. And every Saturday at one o'clock Will Smith set forth in search of adventure. Suppose-well, stranger things had happened. Princesses had tallen in love with commoners.

And poor Sadie Bemis, who kept Will's ties in a straight row at her sister's boarding house-Sadie Bemis saw Will as a Prince.

big orchid corsages that hali cencealed their little bleuses, opened a package and, with more cooings and more bleatings and more merriment, drew forth a crystal bowl.

The dear, the silly things. They had brought a gold fish to the fountain! An offering to the crnamental waters. The one who held the bowl was blonde and, by the most irresistible of contrasts, the lashes that half concealed, half revealed blue eyes, were dark. That to Will Smith was the most tantalizing contrast he had ever beheld in woman's eyes.

He waited. For what, he scarcely knew. And then this happened: Because of the merriment, no doubt, or because of what seemed to him the curving of her glance, the blue-eyed one fell in. Gold fish bowl, flare of pretty skirts, flash of ankles and all. Quickly, like the dart of a wing. So quickly, that when Will Smith jumped to his feet to grasp after the little ankle as it flashed by him, there she was, immersed, struggling, even strangling a little.

Adventure had tapped Will on the shoulder. The black and white checked shoulder. And so, black and white checks and all, Will went in after her, into the fountain.

Not that there was much to do after Will had walked in, except to lead out a very blue-eyed young lady laughing up to the point of being hysterical, and climbing out over the coping with her and standing respectfully by while she wrung her little skirts.

Romance had prompted Adventure to tap him on the shoulder.

The pretty things. They stood there giggling. They stood there thanking him with shy, sweet eyes and rosebud mouths.

"Shall we?" they said, and whispered more together and threw him more darting glances and Will Smith, standing there dripping, raised his hat and smiled and stood expectant.

And then it happened just as Will, with his lifted hand, took his step forward as if to acknow edge an introduction.

With a flash of gold-mesh bag and more adorable smiles and thank yous, suddenly there was a ten-dollar bill in Will Smith's hand.

When Will Smith reached his boarding house in his soaking-wet black-and-white suit and his feet in the socks that squached of bubbles, he didn't care who knew it or saw it. He had been crying, great big blubbering tears of disillusionment, self disgust, hopelessness-of-spirit, and chagrin-of-heart.

He had been crying. Because life had handed him a squash profile and the heart of a prince. Cruel, ironical quirk.

There were no boarders on the front stoop, for which he was grateful, but up in his room, standing beside the broken wash bowl in which he had recently washed his hands before leaving the house, was Sadie Bemis, who had smashed it while cleaning his room.

Poor Sadie. She tried to stifle her sobs at his coming. The ugly broken thing lying there in chunks on the Axminster carpet. "Don't cry, Sadie," said Will Smith, handing her a twiste anger-tortured, all-but-torn-in-two object in his hand—a ten-dollar bill. "Take that, Sadie, and buy a new wash bowl. That's all it's good for, Nice Sadie, don't you cry."

"Oh, Mr. Smith," said Sadie, and placed her robust, her tear-splotched face against his slightly damp bosom. "You're a prince," she kept reiterating between gulps of sobs.

Suddenly, as he held her there, the dream came flowing back to Will Smith and, on that dream, the realization.

He WAS a prince. To Sadie. He wanted to go through life being a prince to dear, adoring

NEGRO BUS BOY TAKES RANK AS AMERICAN POET

Lad Is Discovered By Vachel Lindsay In Washington Hotel Dining Room; Poems Being Published In Book

WASHINGTON, Mar. 1.4 (AP)-Vachel Lindsay, American lyric writer, was dining at a local hotel before his lecture, on American poetry when a young negro bus-boy came up to him and put some sheets of paper on the table, as he cleared away the plates.

That was how Lindsay came to know Langston Hughes, whom Carl Van Vechten vanks with the best of the younger American

"I couldn not then talk to Linda rule of the house that bus-boys say," said Hughes' "because it is must not hold conversation with the guests. I did whisper to him that I liked his poetry and hoped he would think well of mine." To his great surprise, Hugheslearned from the newspapers next morning that Lindsay not only liked his work but also found it good enough to read wth the verses of other American poets. first and third prizes in a contest ship to Lincoln College, where he will continue his education with

"So That the World May Know"

Florida is full of tourists as evidenced by the fact that it is difficult to get hotel, apartifient, or room accommodations in any city of the state, and March is expected to be an even greater month for the tourist business. It is officially reported by the Florida East Coast railroad that it has for months been carrying an average of 2500 passengers a day South, and only 1500 are leaving.

Sanford has a message to the hundreds of thousands tourists that are in the State and to the permanent residents, and that message is embraced in the "fourteen points" that make Sanford the city of safe investment, the city of opportunity, the ideal city in which to live.

The "fourteen points" have been translated into a series of strong advertisements, written by trained advertising specialists, and this series is now ready to be run in the great cities of the state. Over 1,000,000 people will have an opportunity to see the facts of Sanford set forth in attractive form.

Plans are also completed for a comprehensive direct mail campaign to certain classes in northern states. This is expected to be just as effective as the great newpaper campaign.

Other plans for advertising the community along these special lines are also ready.

The carrying out of this comprehensive plan depends, however, upon the results of the effort to be made this week to raise the necessary funds. The money must be obtained first-so that there can be no deficit-before the word will be given to the newspapers to start the advertisements, or before the direct mail campaign can start.

The plans have been heartily endorsed by every meeting to which they have been submitted, and it is our hope that when the campaign for funds starts tomorrow, Sanford citizens will respond as they have in the past, and make a grand success of it.

"So That the World May Know"

Florida is full of tourists as evidenced by the fact that it is difficult to get hotel, apartment, or room accommodations in any city of the state, and March is expected to be an even greater month for the tourist business. It is officially reported by the Florida East Coast railroad that it has for months been carrying an average of 2500 passengers a day South, and only 1500 are leaving.

Sanford has a message to the hundreds of thousands tourists that are in the State and to the permanent residents, and that message is embraced in the "fourteen points" that make Sanford the city of safe investment, the city of opportunity, the ideal city in which to live.

The "fourteen points" have been translated into a series of strong advertisements, written by trained advertising specialists, and this series is now ready to be run in the great cities of the state. Over 1,000,000 people will have an opportunity to see the facts of Sanford set forth in attractive

Plans are also completed for a comprehensive direct mail campaign to certain classes in northern states. This is expected to be just as effective as the great newpaper campaign.

Other plans for advertising the community along these special lines are also ready.

The carrying out of this comprehensive plan depends, however, upon the results of the effort to be made this week to raise the necessary funds. The money must be obtained first-so that there can be no deficit-before the word will be given to the newspapers to start the advertisements, or before the direct mail campaign can start.

The plans have been heartily endorsed by every meeting to which they have been submitted, and it is our hope that when the campaign for funds starts tomorrow, Sanford citizens will respond as they have in the past, and make a grand success of it.

Treasury Experts Speeding Up Drafting Of Regulations To Guide The Taxpayers; Law Is Effective Feb. 26

Auto Tax In Effect At Midnight, Mar. 28

Other Taxes Including Those On Capital Stock And Auto Builders Effective June 30

WASHINGTON, March 2.—(P)
With the time within which the public must file its tax returns rapidly expiring, the Treasury Department experts are speeding up the drafting of regulations to guide taxpayers.

As the first step, new revenue law is declared effective as of 10:25 a. m., as of February 26, when President Coolidge siguned the measure. The changed inheritance tax rates also are effective as of that hour, as are many other re-pealed or modified taxes, while the income tax provisions are applicable to incomes of last year, on which payments will be made this mptions on admissions, which thereafter will include tickets of 75 cents and less. On that a. . also repeal of the taxes on deeds of conveyances and custom warehouse catries and withdrawals will go into effect.

Repeal of the taxes on capital will be effective June 30.

The new act leaves room for a more scientific advancement, but still promises a material contribute tion to econômic advancement the opinion of John W. O'Len president of the chamber of commerce of the U.S. In a statement he expressed regret at the "very undesirable increase in corporation income tax, as well as the failure to eliminate the estate tax."

Mr. O'Leary warned that unless fects of the high rate will continue to be felt in the cost of living."
