No school Monday, Tuesday

SANFORD — There will be no school in the Seminole County public schools on Monday and Tuesday of next week.

Students and teachers will be off on Monday in celebration of the Martin Luther King holiday.

Teachers will return to work on Tuesday to wrap up the second nine week grading period. Students will have that day off as well.

Classes will resume for everyone on Wednesday morning.

Wild side at Fun World

SANFORD — Fun World, at Flea World, Highway 17-92 in Sanford, will present a free rare exotic animal show this Saturday and Sunday. The show, by Tiger's Eye Productions, will feature over a dozen animals, some of which are on Florida's endangered list.

Former Ringling Brother's Circus lion and tiger tamer David McMillan will headline the performance. Animals to be featured include a rare snow leopard, tiger, jaguar, lion, boa constrictor, wolf, tarantula, lizard and rare Florida panther.

"This incredible display of animals should continue to serve as a reminder to everyone that many of these exotic and beautiful creatures may soon be extinct," McMillan said.

Fun World at Flea World is open every Friday, Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. until midnight.

Trade deficit jumps in November

WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit shot up to $7.59 billion in November as American exporters suffered declines in nearly all categories, the government said today.

But in brighter news, the government reported that consumer inflation turned in its best performance in six years while the operating rate for American industry in December climbed to its highest level in 13 months.

The Labor Department reported that the Consumer Price Index for all of 1992 was up just 2.9 percent, the smallest increase since a 1.1 percent rise in 1986. The small increase reflected the fact that the country's prolonged economic troubles have at least had the beneficial side effect of keeping prices in check.

For December, prices rose a barely discernible 0.2 percent.

The Federal Reserve reported today that the operating rate at American factories, mines and utilities climbed to 79.3 percent of capacity, its highest level since November 1991.

Industrial production was up 0.3 percent in December, the third straight increase, with much of the improvement accounted for by a 5 percent jump in output at auto plants.

While domestic demand is rising, economists are concerned by the trend highlighted by the 5.1 percent jump in the trade deficit.

They are worried that spreading economic weakness in America's major export markets in Europe and Japan will make the deficit grow worse in coming months.

State: Trailer driver caused school bus stop tragedy

SANFORD — James Garner could spend as many as 15 years in jail as a result of the accident on Oct. 9 in which two Lake Mary boys were seriously injured and another was killed.

Garner, 29, of Sanford, was charged yesterday afternoon with manslaughter, vehicular homicide, culpable negligence and attaching a tag not assigned to his vehicle following a two and a half month investigation by the State Attorney's office.

He is expected to turn himself into authorities at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility sometime between now and Tuesday.

"We haven't gotten the paperwork on him yet," said George Proechel, public information officer for the Seminole County sheriff's department.

"As soon as we get it, he can turn himself in." According to Charlie Tabecott, of the State Attorney's office, the paperwork should arrive at the sheriff's department some time this afternoon.

Hagerty eyes year-round county high school by '95

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Heeding the advice of the high school review committee, Supt. Paul Hagerty said that he will recommend that the board study the option of converting Seminole, Lake Mary and Lyman high schools to the year-round calendar by the summer of 1995.

At yesterday's work session with the committee and the board, Hagerty announced that the district should hold off on building the seventh high school in the district on State Road 434 in Winter Springs as long as they could. They agreed as well that changing to the modified calendar appeared to be the best way to do that.

In addition to postponing the construction of the new high school, the calendar change would allow the district to eliminate the need to do the planned expansion at Seminole High School as well.

In addition to increasing the capacity of a school by at least 20 percent, the year-round calendar is being touted for its educational value as well. Students are able to retain more of what they learn by having short three week breaks spaced throughout the year rather than having the full summer off as on the traditional calendar.

All of the district's high schools and middle schools will be on the modified calendar by the 1995-96 school year.

SANFORD — The first step in finding a new police chief for the City of Sanford is under way. As of this morning, only one person, Acting Chief Ralph Russell, has applied for the job.

The position became vacant at the beginning of the year, following the resignation of former Chief Steve Harriett, who left to become second in command of the Seminole County Sheriff's Department.

Previously, Russell, a captain, had been second in command of the Sanford Police Department and has served as acting chief since Jan. 1.

I yam what I yam

Record set by Sanford man's yam

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A new state record appears to have been set by Eugene Williams of Sanford. Williams has grown a yam, which he originally weighed at approximately 32 pounds.

According to Assistant Center Director Dr. Marian White at the University of Florida IFAS Research Center on Celery Avenue, "We weighed Mr. Williams' yam, and it was 30.2 pounds."

He commented, "Dr. Jim Stephens at the University of Florida keeps the measurements of all fruits and vegetables. As of Jan. 2, 1992, the largest yam he has recorded in Florida so far was 30 pounds, grown in Duval County and harvested on Jan. 15, 1987."

He continued, "Unless someone has filed for a yam larger than that since last July, Mr. Williams does indeed have a new state record."

Williams grew the yam in the garden near his home at 2425 E. 21st Street.

"I planted yams in my back yard in July," he said. "I never gave them any fertilizer and didn't even bother watering them. I never thought they would survive."

In addition to the new state record yam, a number of others, larger than bowling balls were also dug up in his garden.

Agreement isn't ready, but city set to buy school land

By NICK PFEIFAU

SANFORD — The Sanford City Commission postponed again last night discussing the contract to purchase 10 acres of land currently belonging to the school board.

It has been scheduled for discussion during several meetings, but the complete agreement papers have not been finalized.

Yesterday the board announced that the matter would be held off from last night's agenda pending a finalization of the contract wording.

The item has now been moved to the last week of this month.

The land, located on French Avenue across from the Sanford Middle School, was originally proposed for a strip mall. The project was cancelled however, when citizens in the surrounding neighborhood objected. The city sub-

Secretly taping suspects illegal

WEST PALM BEACH — Secretly taping suspects sitting in a squad car violates their constitutional rights, a state appeals court has ruled in throwing out a drug conviction.

The Fourth District Court of Appeal said in its unanimous opinion Wednesday that the two men in the case had not been arrested at the time and had a reasonable expectation of privacy.

"When the police offer succor and shelter to Florida citizens ... we believe that the democratic society in which we live would expect that its conversations not be secretly recorded by law enforcement," the judges wrote.

But the judges decided to seek a Florida Supreme Court opinion on whether the procedure is legal. The Indian River County case involved two men driving on Interstate 95 who were pulled over by sheriff's deputies for driving 73 miles per hour in a 65-mph zone.

Sex operation closes child-care center

MIAMI — When the 1-900 phone sex operators upstairs took a break, they went downstairs and watched over the children at the Daniels Kiddie Kollege — and that's no way to run a day-care center, the state says.

On Wednesday, Dade Circuit Judge Maria Korvick issued a temporary injunction that will keep the Kiddie Kollege closed until it regains state licensing.

"Would you want your child in a day-care center where upstairs they were running a sex line? I wouldn't," said Laurie Rubiner, spokeswoman for the state Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

The judge said conditions at the day care center constitute a threat to the health and welfare of children placed at the facility.

The child-care center and the sex-talk operation shared a building and an owner, Lola Daniels.

Deputy pleads guilty to kicking suspect

JACKSONVILLE — A former Nassau County deputy has pleaded guilty to a federal misdemeanor charge of violating the civil rights of a burglary suspect by kicking him in the head.

Deputy David C. Barnes faces up to a year in prison and a $250,000 fine when he is sentenced March 19.

In federal court Wednesday, Barnes admitted kicking Ervin Francisco Pardo after Pardo fled from police into a wooded area in July 1989.

Barnes, 37, has a history of problems at the Nassau County Sheriff's Office, including a demotion from lieutenant to patrolman in 1990 for lying about firing a shot at another fleeing suspect.

Insurer insurance agent lashes back

BRANDON — An insurance agent bloodied by a brass-knuckle beating from an angry customer took the law and his own gun to hand and had his assistant at gunpoint until deputies arrived.

Authorities said Wednesday's confrontation began with Michael J. Wyporski, 18, storming into the Key Insurance office, angry that the policy on his Volkswagen Beetle had been canceled.

His anger led to an argument with agent Steven Taylor, then to blows with Taylor's assistant, said Hillsborough County Sheriff's Deputy Susan Beaudoin.

Taylor's assistant lunging down his fist toward both and splashing his shirt, grabbed a silver pistol kept in the office and pointed it at the parking lot until a deputy arrived.

Taylor was bound at the scene by deputies. Wyporski was taken to the Hillsborough County jail and charged with one count of aggravated battery, deputies said.

Real estate sale tops Madonna's

INDIAN CREEK VILLAGE — Madonna's no longer No. 1 — at least when it comes to having paid the most for a Dade County home.

A Mediterranean-style villa on Indian Creek Island, owned by a Hialeah car dealer, has been sold for $6.6 million. That makes it the highest price ever paid for a private home in Dade County.

The sale, which closed Dec. 31, topped the $4.9 million paid by Madonna for an estate last year and the $4.5 million she paid for a Philadelphia Eagles owner Norman Bramson paid in 1991 for a six-bedroom home.

Carl Sander Don Mackintosh and his wife, Gloria, bought the waterfront house on the Biscayne Bay coast and an adjoining tennis court for $6.6 million in 1992, according to county records.

Prisoners resentenced

Court overturns 3rd death sentence in 1974 murder

By JACKIE HALIFAX
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Florida is going to have to resentence some prisoners who got longer terms as career criminals, thanks to a mistake made by lawmakers four years ago, the state Supreme Court has said.

The goof-up involves the state constitution's requirement that lawmakers deal with only one subject per law and revisions the Legislature made in 1989 to Florida's habitual offender law.

The changes were supposed to take effect in October 1989. But because provisions detailing repossession of motor vehicles by private investigators were included in the 1989 law, the amendments to the habitual offender law weren't effective until May 1991, Justice Ben Overton wrote in Thursday's unanimous ruling.

"We realize that this decision will require the resentencing of a number of individuals who were sentenced as habitual felony offenders under section 775.084 as amended," Overton wrote.

Only those classified as career criminals under the changes between Oct. 1, 1989, and May 1991 are affected, he said.

"This result is mandated by the Legislature's failure to follow the single-subject requirement of the constitution," Overton continued. "Had the Legislature passed the habitual offender amendments in a single act, this case would not be before us today."

An assistant attorney general said he didn't think very many prisoners will get shorter sentences because of the decision.

"Percentage-wise, very few will obtain relief, I'm very confident of that," Charlie McCoy said.

Bob Macmaster, a spokesman for the state Department of Corrections, said Thursday that agency attorneys hadn't had a chance to review the decision and he couldn't say how many prisoners might be affected.

The amendments specified that convictions outside of Florida could be used to classify defendants as habitual felons and added "aggravated battery" as one of the violent crimes that would qualify criminals as habitual violent offenders, according to McCoy.

The case before the court involved an appeal by Cecil Johnson, who was convicted of the sale or delivery of cocaine in July 1990.

Because he had earlier been convicted of aggravated battery, Johnson was classified as a habitual violent felony offender and sentenced to 25 years in prison with a minimum guaranteed stay of 10 years.

A little R and R. Abby Perkins, Laura Robinson and Gwenn McCarter recently took a reading break at the school. The third graders took advantage of the class time in the library to read and relax while staying in tune with their ABCs.

Reporter granted reprieve

By Associated Press

STUART — Gov. Lawton Chiles issued a 60-day reprieve Thursday for a reporter who exhausted last-ditch appeals trying to stay out of jail for refusing to divulge a source.

The U.S. Supreme Court refused to consider Tim Roche's appeal Monday, and a circuit judge rejected emergency motions soon before Chiles intervened.

Roche, 24, was staying at an undisclosed location, awaiting word on whether he would have to report to jail by 5 p.m. Friday to begin a 30-day contempt sentence for refusing to tell a judge in 1990 who leaked a confidential child-custody order.

A circuit judge found Roche in contempt Nov. 2, 1990, for refusing to tell who let him see a court order terminating a mother's rights to a girl who was 4 months old when her 3-year-old half-sister was beaten to death in 1988. Under state law, the information in the order was confidential.

Roche's attorneys said he was thankful for Chiles' intervention.

"We are not home free yet," attorney Pat Anderson said. "This is a delay, but it certainly is not the end of it."

Chiles had the authority to grant a reprieve of up to 60 days while he and the Cabinet consider a pardon for the former Stuart News reporter.

The governor and Cabinet, acting as the state Clemency Board, also granted a waiver of clemency rules to allow Roche's case to be brought before the board's next quarterly meeting March 10.

The reprieve "does not have anything to do with the merits of the case. I have not had time to look at it," the governor said.

"It will take a great deal of political courage (not to pardon Roche) when the media is involved," said Richard Barlow, an assistant state attorney. "We'll see if that political courage exists."

Florida man released in murder case; spouse arrested in Aspen

By Associated Press

ASPEN, Colo. — An Aspen building contractor was arrested Thursday for allegedly killing his wife and daughter in Florida, and a mentally handicapped man convicted of the double murder last year was released.

Paul Hamwi, 47, was being held for extradition to Fort Lauderdale where he faces first-degree murder charges in the November 1983 deaths of Susan Hamwi, 26, and their infant daughter, 18 months old.

Also arrested on Wednesday was Paul Michael Hamwi, 45, a classroom teacher, in White Town, Fla., in connection with the alleged conspiracy.

Thursday night, John Purvis, a 58-year-old teacher of the victims serving a life prison sentence for the murder, was cited after being released from the Broward County Jail. A judge signed an order allowing Purvis to go free, pending a hearing in weeks on his sentence.

"I feel pretty good right now," said Purvis.

Purvis' release finally means an end to a case that has been described as murder by Mrs. Hamwi, but later proven to be innocent. He was convicted of first- and second-degree murder and sexual battery in early 1985.

"They just made me confess and badgered me and everything and just got something out of me that wasn't really true at all," said Purvis.

Purvis' attorney, Steven Wisotzky, said there was a reason for his confession.

"They told him that if he confessed to these crimes then he could go home to his mother, that's on the record," Wisotzky said.

Homicide officers admit he was wrongly sent to prison.

"A mistake obviously was made," Fort Lauderdale detective Bruce Smith said Thursday. "I wish those things hadn't happened. I wish he hadn't given a statement against himself."

Authorities said Mrs. Hamwi was stabbed to death and raped. The handle of a butcher knife was broken off in her chest, and a cord was wrapped around her neck, investigators said. The baby was found in her crib, dead of dehydration.

At the time, the Hamwis were separated and planning to divorce. Police in Fort Lauderdale said Hamwi was seeking to avoid paying his wife $180,000 as part of a divorce settlement.

Arrest made for lewd act

Jill Irene Lowmiller, 31, no known local address, was arrested on a charge of committing a lewd and lascivious act by an agent with the City-County Investigative Bureau Wednesday.

Agents, investigating reports of prostitution and drug sales at Midway Trailer Park in Longwood, reported knocking on the door to a trailer looking for another woman when Lowmiller answered. During this time, about 75 people gathered, he reported.

County ratifies contract

By J. MARK BARFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County firefighters and county officials will return to the bargaining table to discuss two outstanding issues, although both sides have now ratified contracts.

Tuesday, commissioners ratified a one-year contract to end Sept. 30, 1993. The county and 130-member union have been negotiating for 1½ years to adopt their first contract. Union employees are still operating under standard county rules.

Last month, union members voted to approve a new contract but deleted two clauses defining the county's management rights and wording specifying items that can be addressed when new contract negotiations begin in October.

Union president Tim Hickman said Florida laws establish the rights of management, but the county attempted to expand on those rights. German Romero, director of the Employee Relations Department, said the county did not seek to modify their rights and said the union did not formally notify the county the issue was unresolved last year.

Both Hickman and Romero called the modified contract duration language minor and said it can be quickly resolved.

Romero said the county will be willing to meet with union representatives to resolve the two issues. But Romero said the county reserves the right to file a complaint with the state Public Employees Relations Commission for union failure to vote on the two issues.

County firefighters voted to unionize under state PERC guidelines Sept. 29, 1990. The union represents non-supervisory personnel from the rank of lieutenant to the firefighter grade. Administrative personnel, such as secretaries, are not represented by the union.

Honor student slain in alleged robbery scheme

By LARRY GIBSON

ORANGE, Calif. — They seemed to be living the American dream: second-generation Asian high school kids with cars, money, good grades and promising futures.

Then it became the American nightmare: an alleged robbery scheme; betrayed trust; brokenhearted parents; and a dead 17-year-old, bludgeoned and dumped in a shallow backyard grave.

"This isn't just about Asian kids," said Cynthia Scheinberg, director of a counseling agency that helps Asians, Hispanics and others blend into the ethnic patchwork of Southern California. "It's about kids who have been under a lot of pressure to seek success at any price."

Stuart Tay, 17, came from a wealthy immigrant family from Singapore and wanted to be a doctor, like his father. An honors student, he hoped to go to Princeton University. Instead, he was given a funeral on Saturday.

Police have arrested five of Tay's friends, ages 16 to 18, in his slaying. One faces the gas chamber if convicted.

Their account, according to police and coroner's reports, amounted to this:

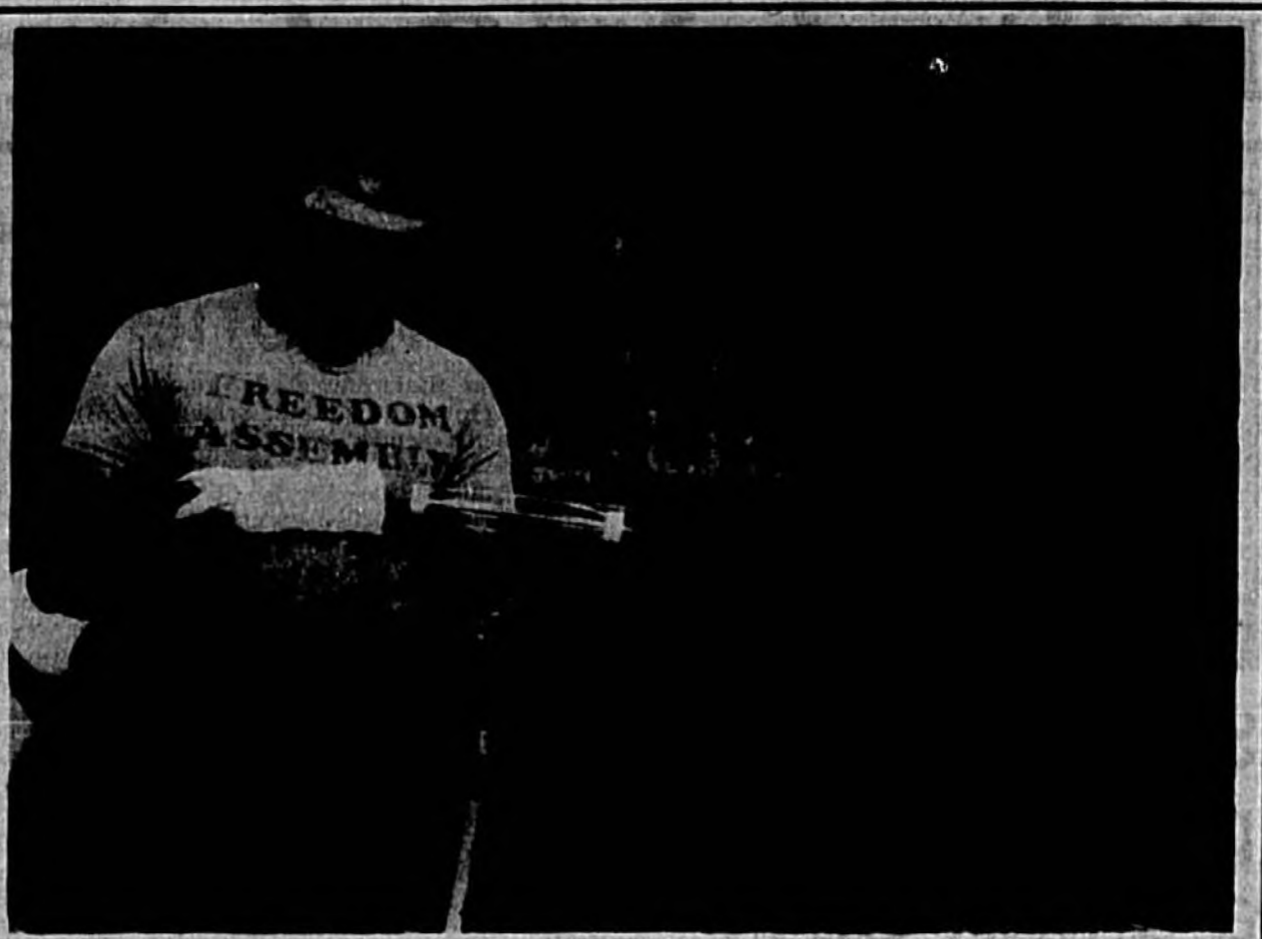

Tay, a whiz at installing and fixing computers, conspired with his buddies to steal computer parts from an Anaheim store. But Tay, who attended a different high school, used a fictitious name in dealing with the others. And when they caught on, they feared he would snitch.

On New Year's Eve, they lured him into a garage in suburban Buena Park on the pretext of selling him a pistol. As he bent over to look, they bludgeoned him with baseball bats and a sledgehammer. After 20 minutes, he was still alive.

Someone poured rubbing alcohol down his throat, then taped his mouth and nose. Others dragged him into a ready-made hole in the back yard and covered him with dirt. Sometime during the ordeal, he died.

Two of the kids ditched Tay's new car. Then they went to a New Year's party.

When Tay's body was found Jan. 4, police pulled 18-year-old Robert Chan out of his honors English class and booked him in the murder investigation.

Sanford's land purchase: Is it a smart buy?

The Sanford City Commission is completing plans to purchase 10 acres of school board property. Final papers are expected to be signed late this month.

Even though the matter has been presented to the commission on a number of occasions, there is still no indication of what purpose the land will serve.

On Jan. 11, the City Commission gave final approval to sign the purchase agreement. At that time, Commissioner Whitley Eckstein commented, "By the time this is over, from the five of us on the commission, we will probably have five separate ideas on how the land should be used."

The property, owned by the Seminole County School Board, is located on French Avenue across from the Sanford Middle School. It has been for sale for several years.

Several months ago, when Richard Hardwick of Clearwater announced plans to purchase the land and build a strip mall, residents in nearby neighborhoods rallied against the proposal. They said they did not want that much activity in their residential neighborhood.

In order to build the strip mall, Hardwick applied for a rezoning of a portion of the land. It was turned down by P&Z, and an appeal to the commission was also denied.

Ideas for the use of the land have been far-ranging. During various discussions, city leaders have mentioned the possibility of building a safety complex. Others have suggested a park or a water retention area.

One suggestion was that part of the land might be sold for some other commercial development.

"With the growth we have," Commissioner A.A. McClanahan said, "within a few years, the value of that land will probably climb quite a bit, and no telling what we may be able to get for it."

The total purchase price is $590,000. Money to be paid at the time of closing is roughly $132,000. City Manager Bill Simmons has suggested the initial amount could be taken from the Recreational Impact Fee.

He specified that if the fee money was used, it would be based on an intention to use the land for recreational purposes.

Unless another extension is granted in closing on the sale, the final papers are to be signed on Jan. 29.

Depending on how the land may eventually be used, there is a possibility that the same residents who rallied before, will do so again. This time they may attempt to avoid a possible safety complex with police and fire trucks and their alarms, or even a re-sale for some commercial development.

The citizens of that area, and the taxpayers of the city deserve to know how the land may be used.

$590,000, regardless of the fund from which it is taken, is still income from city residents. Yet the city is about to spend it to purchase 10 acres, for which nothing has been planned. Is this a smart move?

From one dad to another: Way to go

Consider the irony of the media's orgasmic reporting about a former Arkansas governor's decision to send his daughter to a racially integrated private school.

The irony actually began 36 years ago when nine black kids defied another Arkansas governor by trying to enroll in a segregated Little Rock public high school. The irony is compounded by the astonishing front-page coverage of the story by major newspaper reporters and editors, most of whom don't send THEIR kids to public schools and feverishly try to avoid living anywhere too close to the urban scene that houses their offices.

A tidal wave of idiocy greeted the decision of two parents named Bill and Hillary Clinton to send their daughter, Chelsea, to a private school. This statement by the executive director of Washington, D.C.'s Parents Union, Delabian Rice-Thornton, depressingly typified the average critic's reaction: "My son at Deal Junior High School is getting a good education. I don't think I'll vote for Clinton next time around." Martin Luther King Jr. had an answer for her: "Nothing in the world is more dangerous than sincere ignorance and conscientious stupidity."

If Rice-Thornton's son is getting "a good education," he is a lucky exception. Cases in point:

All D.C. school grade levels are reading below the national norms on the Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills.

Between eighth and 12th grades, scores in social studies, math and science are below national norms.

Dropout rates are among the highest in the nation.

Five different reports this past year, including a federal survey, castigated D.C.'s poor curriculum planning and its "unstable and miamanaged" school system.

Chelsea's attendance at any D.C. public school would not have made an academic silk purse out of the school system's sow's ear.

Hillary and Bill Clinton did precisely what

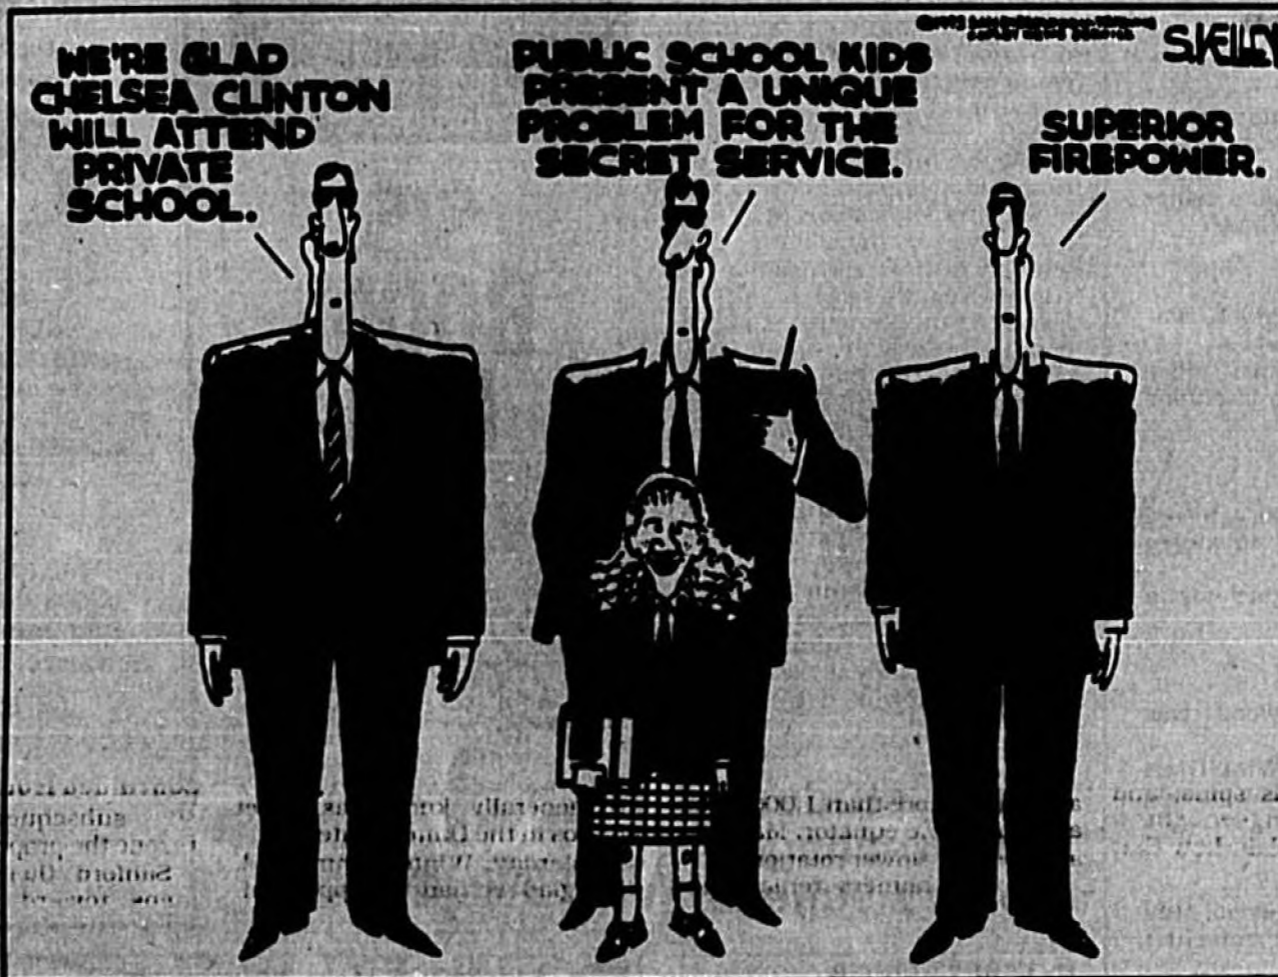

A tidal wave of idiocy greeted the decision of two parents named Bill and Hillary Clinton.

Louise and Chuck Stone did with our three children: At interludes during their education in three different cities, we sent them to Catholic or private schools. Two years in a Catholic junior high school enabled my son to enroll in a public high school that one survey rated as one of the 12 best in the country -- Philadelphia's Central High School.

Throughout the 34 years of our marriage, we have been passionate supporters of public education. But many public-school systems suffer from weak spots.

At the same time, parental influence cannot be discounted as a pivotal educational force. The cultural behavioral patterns of Asian parents, who encourage their children to study together after other tasks are completed, explains the consistently high normative performance of Asian students, most of them attending public schools. Certainly, the emphasis on achievement in the Clintons' home has contributed to Chelsea's high grades.

I doubt seriously if more than 10 percent of America's parents -- excluding politicians and journalists -- give a damn whether Chelsea goes to a private or public school. But the Clintons' decision as parents opened a Pandora's box of partisan sniping and journalistic hypocrisy.

Clinton's $35 million inaugural

WASHINGTON — The theme of President-elect Bill Clinton's inaugural is "An American Reunion — New Beginnings, Renewed Hope." However, the celebration — which will be the most expensive in inaugural history — will be largely closed to the public and is being funded by the very lobbyists Clinton campaigned so hard against.

Congress gives each incoming president $6 million for the inauguration. This does not include $5.5 million given to the District of Columbia for police overtime and other services, or the untold millions spent by the Pentagon through the Armed Forces Inaugural Committee.

This $6 million is supposed to cover everything from building the elaborate stage on the west front of the Capitol, where Clinton will take the Oath of Office, to the parade afterward (Congress pays for the lunch it throws the newly sworn-in president), to the traditional balls on the night of the swearing-in.

However, reviewing the last half-dozen inaugurations, $6 million only begins to cover the myriad expenses. The most lavish previous inaugural — George Bush's in 1989 — cost about $30 million. The Clinton gala was originally budgeted at $20 million, but inaugural spokesman Richard Mintz admits that the budget has been "adjusted upward." It is generally understood now that the actual cost will exceed the Bush total — perhaps by more than $5 million.

The financing of all this has raised more than a few eyebrows.

Most inaugurations have one entertainment extravaganza. The Clinton inaugural will have two: the "American Gala" two nights before the swearing in, and the "Presidential Gala" on the night before. Why two? More television rights to sell. Both galas will be shown on network TV, and the rights are worth millions to the Clinton-Gore Inaugural Committee.

Between TV rights and the sale of tickets to the gala, balls and almost everything else, the Inaugural Committee believes it will at least break even, and possibly run a small surplus. One problem — where to get working capital to stage the events until money started rolling in. The answer — obtain short-term loans. The source for some $18 million in interest-free loans — corporations and lobbyists that all but fell all over themselves to ante up the funds for the new president's committee.

While this fund-raising method has tried some, the biggest complaints have been registered over ticket distribution. Clinton promised the "most accessible" inauguration in history. Now it appears that access will actually be limited to insiders, the party faithful and corporate bigwigs.

Basically the inaugural is divided into two types of events: by-invitation events (which carry steep admission prices), and free "public" events. The latter, in turn, are divided into mass events like the two-day "America's Reunion on the Mall" — an in-tent and outdoor food, music and crafts "celebration" — and limited-access events like the salutes to children and youth at the Kennedy Center.

In December, some 400,000 of Bill Clinton's supporters received invitations to attend the inaugural. About 180,000 contained invitations to buy tickets to various events. However, as many as half the tickets to the by-invitation events went directly to insiders.

Then there was the major snafu of the inaugural: People receiving the special invitations that allowed them to buy tickets to closed events were given a special phone number in Washington to call. The calls were supposed to be made between Dec. 28 and 30, and Jan. 2 and 3. However, because not enough volunteers showed up, those phones largely went unanswered until Jan. 4, the day after the deadline.

The result has been many frustrated and furious Clinton supporters who have found themselves shut out of any inaugural event.

Many in the general public are complaining they too have been shut out of the more limited access "public events." Reportedly, many of the tickets to events like the children and youth salutes were never made available, going instead to insiders.

There are even complaints about seating for the inaugural parade. Anyone can come and stand along the parade route. But much of the route is covered by some 40,000 bleacher seats. In past inaugurations, half of these seats went to the general public on a first-come-first-serve basis. It was only after bitter complaints from all sides that the Inaugural Committee made 6,000 seats available, and they were able to do that only by adding extra bleacher sections.

However, reviewing the last half-dozen inaugurations, $6 million only begins to cover the myriad expenses.

'Wise-use' groups threaten environmentalism

WASHINGTON — If Ron Arnold is right, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt will be to the so-called "wise-use movement" what former Reagan administration Interior Secretary James Watt was to environmentalism: a fund-raising bonanza.

"They'll make us rich and famous," Arnold predicted. "I think he'll (Babbitt) be the perfect Darth Vader."

Arnold is one of the leading wise-use gurus, part of a growing nationwide coalition of landowners, farmers, ranchers and off-road-vehicle buffs seeking to roll back environmental regulations governing public and private land use. By stoking fear and resentment in depressed timber and mining towns, the movement has traveled like a prairie fire across the country. The environmentally minded Babbitt, who is Clinton's choice for Secretary of the Interior, is helping to fuel that fire.

The wise-use movement is like a church with different denominations, an array of preachers and pulpits glued together by a common gospel: Environmentalists threaten careers, communities and even Christianity. "It's really an extremist movement," former Interior Secretary Stuart L. Udall told us. "I think their use of religion to further their cause is absurd and dangerous."

Interviews with activists across the country suggest that no rhetoric is too inflammatory: "I just had a school teacher call me about the last sawmill to be shut down in her town," Arnold said. "Everybody was coming apart. Men were beating their wives, molesting their daughters. They can't sell timber because of the spotted owl. People are hurt, desperate and going to get even."

During a town meeting in Libby, Mont., a pro-development activist argued that a forest accord would cause 30 percent unemployment in the timber community, and added: "And along with that comes wife battering, child molestation and all the rest of it."

The Adirondack Council in Elizabethtown, N.Y. — a group advocating preservation of the Adirondack State Park — has been victimized by a string of violent incidents, verbally and physically. John Sheehan, the council's communications director, has experienced the threat firsthand.

"I can't tell from their rhetoric whether I'm Hitler or Lenin from one day to the next," Sheehan told our associate Dean Boyd. Last year, Sheehan was physically assaulted by a member of the Adirondack Solidarity Alliance, a property rights group whose opponents claim has ties to the far-right John Birch Society. Over the last two years, vandals have spread nails in the street in front of the council's office, sprayed the building with liquid manure and pelted their office with fruit laced with skunk-oil.

Adirondack Park officials have fared worse. One official had her barn burned down last summer. Two years ago, park officials found three bullets lodged in their car after they sped away from a Solidarity Alliance demonstration where shots were fired. "Town supervisors here are petrified that they're going to have their house burned down if they offend these people," Sheehan said.

Dale French of the Adirondack Solidarity Alliance denounces the violence. "All we're doing is trying to protect our property and have a future for our kids," he said.

Asked about outbreaks of violence like those in the Adirondacks, Ron Arnold acknowledges that he has had "groups calling me about armed insurrection. ... But I have to tell them that we won't be a party to any violence."

I think he'll (Babbitt) be the perfect Darth Vader.

 be in town to take part in the prayer breakfast, which will begin at 8 a.m.
 There will be representatives from all of Florida's 67 counties taking part in the prayer breakfast.
 "The idea is to show the unity for this celebration between all the counties in this effort by all people and all counties in the state," said Dorothea Fogle, chairman of the Sanford Martin Luther King Celebration Steering Committee.
 The speaker for the breakfast will be Willie E. Gary, a successful Martin County attorney.
 Tickets for that event are $5 for adults and $2.50 for children 12 and under. They may be purchased at the door.

Following the prayer breakfast, participants will begin gathering at City Hall for the statewide celebration parade.
 There will be political leaders from across the state, church leaders, Disney characters, the Bethune-Cookman College band, the Florida A&M Gospel Choir and other organizations taking part in the noontime parade which will move through the downtown area before concluding at the civic center.
 The parade will begin at City Hall at noon. It will move along the three mile route that will take them east on Seminole Boulevard to Mellonville Avenue, south on Celery Avenue, west on Sanford Avenue and north to the Sanford Civic Center.

Throughout the day, there will be a historical display at the Civic Center that has been put together by Dr. James Eaton. The display includes many artifacts of King's life and work that have been collected over the years by scholars who are studying King and his life.
 Beginning at 2 p.m., there will be a film festival highlighting films and documentaries that have been made about King.
 There is no charge for either of those events.
 On Sunday afternoon from 2:30 to 4 p.m., there will be an interfaith religious program at the Sanford Civic Center.
 Rev. Wayne G. Thompson, pastor of the First Baptist Institutional Church in St. Petersburg, will preside over the service which is open to all.

 The Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Celebration Choir, under the direction of Mary Whitehurst, will provide the music at both the unity prayer breakfast and the interfaith religious program.
 Celebration organizers are hoping that the people of Sanford will come out to some or all of the events this weekend.
 On Monday evening, the seventh annual commemorative banquet will take place at the civic center. Attorney Jesse McCrary will be the guest speaker at the event.
 McCrary was Florida's first African American secretary of state.
 Tickets for the banquet are $15 for adults and $7.50 for children under 12.

 Monday night, the City Commission approved starting the search process with strictly in-house advertising. Deadline for in-house applicants is close of business, Tuesday, Jan. 19.
 Russell submitted his application the following day.
 According to the job vacancy announcement, the job pays $36,558.30 per year.
 For qualifications, the Civil Service Board requires "a 4-year college or university degree with emphasis on criminology or police administration, and five years minimum police experience including administrative responsibilities."
 Russell application indicates he fulfills all of the requirements except for the 4-year degree.
 His educational background lists only an associate degree in police science from Seminole Community College.
 "Regardless of whether we have one or several applicants," City Manager Bill Simmons said, "I will be turning them over to the City Commissioners for their consideration as soon as the deadline is reached."
 "I don't immediately plan to put it on the agenda for the Jan. 25 meeting, but we could bring it up for discussion during the workshop," he added.
 Simmons explained, "The city will then have several options. They can decide they would like to have the Civil Service Board reevaluate its requirements that might allow for Capt. Russell's qualifications, they could decide to extend the advertising to outside, or anything else they may choose to do. It's all in the hands of the commission, which is the selecting body."

 As to whether or not the 4-year college degree could be waived, Simmons observed, "The city has its own civil service board, and it doesn't involve any other governmental bodies, so it will strictly be a commission and board decision."
 He added, "We had a 4-year college requirement for another department head position some time back, and the board changed the requirement at that time, so no telling what will happen in this case."
 In addition to graduating Magna Cum Laude at SCC, Russell has attended many training courses including those sponsored by the state, FBI and Treasury Department. They include classes in hostage negotiations, narcotics and dangerous drugs, fingerprinting, firearms training, defensive tactics, child pornography, criminal drug enforcement, advanced criminal investigation, and a number of others.
 Russell joined the Sanford police department in 1985 as a patrolman. In 1987 he became a detective sergeant. In 1972, he was promoted to lieutenant, and in 1987 he became watch commander.

Giant collisions set planets spinning

By JIM ABRAMS
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON — The Earth spins in a forward direction as a result of collisions with giant celestial bodies in the early days of the solar system, two astronomers reported today.
 The other terrestrial, or solid, planets — Mercury, Venus and Mars — also spin as they do because of stochastic accretion, or the random coming together of a few large bodies, said Luke Dones, a visiting astronomer at the NASA Ames Research Center in California, and Prof. Scott Tremaine of the University of Toronto.
 "The spins of all the terrestrial planets are entirely determined by these large impacts" coming within a few million years of when the solar system was formed 4.5 billion years ago, Tremaine said. Their conclusions were published in the weekly Science.
 Dones said the Earth collided with a body possibly as large as Mars, causing its forward or prograde spin. By that astronomers mean it turns counterclockwise, as the same direction the earth orbits the sun, also from that view.

 Dones said their study supports theories that the moon was formed in such a cataclysmic collision.
 All the planets orbit in a forward direction, dating back to the origins of the solar system when it was a disc of dust and gas rotating in one direction. Two of the eight major planets, Venus and Uranus, have retrograde or backward spins, and scientists have long sought a physical law to explain how that is decided.
 The two scientists concluded that at least for the terrestrial planets, the spin is determined randomly, depending on the nature of primordial impacts.
 Dones said it was "equally possible for a planet like earth to form prograde or retrograde spin." Man may one day discover a solar system where most of the planets have retrograde spins, he said.

 He noted that until the 1990s it was generally believed that the terrestrial planets formed in a smooth and orderly way when small bodies came together in a process called ordered accretion. Astronomers now tend to support the stochastic accretion theory.
 Dones said their calculations determined "the only way to make the Earth and Mars spin as fast as they do is large impacts late in their formation process."
 The earth rotates on its axis at a speed of more than 1,000 miles an hour at the equator. Mars has a somewhat slower rotation.
 "The astronomers remain uncertain about the origin of the spins of the giant planets — Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune. It is more difficult to determine those origins, because those planets are made up largely of gases rather than solids, they said.

 Science is the weekly journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

 this," Williams commented. "It's especially easy when you consider that I never had to do anything to take care of them."
 He said the yams were the only crop he planted this year.
 Yams are described as edible, starchy, tuberous roots, considered as a staple food in tropical climates. Grown mostly in the West Indies and Polynesia, they are generally known as sweet potatoes in the United States.
 "Yesterday, White commented, 'I'm glad we had the opportunity to weigh it when we did, because Mr. Williams indicated he was going to have it cut up and cooked by the end of the week.'" and Garner's attorney, Don West, has indicated that he will bring his client in as soon as that happens.

 "I think he will turn himself in later today," Tabcoot said this morning.
 Procehel said that because the department is closed on Monday in honor of the Martin Luther King holiday, Garner will have until Tuesday to turn himself in voluntarily. After that, he said, deputies will "go out looking for him."
 He will be held on $10,000 bond.
 Garner, who has a long list of traffic violations on his record, is accused of killing 11-year-old Jeremy Millhouse when the trailer he was towing behind his truck broke loose and careened through the school bus stop where Millhouse and other Lakeview Middle School students were waiting to be picked up for school.
 Two of his classmates, Arcadio Vergara, 12, and Michael Beckler, 11, were seriously injured in the accident. Vergara has returned to school, though he has not fully recovered from his injuries while Beckler is still recuperating at home.
 The investigation into the accident showed that the trailer had not been attached properly to the truck.
 According to Tabcoot, Garner can only be convicted on one of the felony charges (manslaughter or vehicular homicide). He is charged with both as a way of "hedging their (prosecutors') bets," according to Tabcoot.
 Tabcoot said that he expects that Garner will go to trial in two to three months.
 According to Procehel, Millhouse's parents as well as the families of Vergara and Beckler, have taken steps toward filing civil law suits against Garner as well.

Schools

 By postponing the construction of the new high school, which had been planned for the 1995-96 school year, the district will be able to save nearly $40 million.
 They will probably still purchase the land on which the school will be constructed this year at a cost of about $2 million. Even if all the district high schools are converted to the year-round calendar, the committee said, the district will need to build a new school by the year 2000.

 Hagerty is expected to ask the board to authorize the district staff to study the year-round calendar and the alternatives and report to the board by June.
 At that time, the board will have to either accept the modified school calendar for high schools or authorize the construction of the seventh high school.
 Hagerty will ask the board to vote on the matter at the next regularly scheduled board meeting on Jan. 26.

Land

 subsequently refused to rezone the property.
 Sanford then began to take steps toward purchasing the property from the school board.
 During last night's meeting, the board's Attorney Ned Julian explained that the document had been drafted and has been scheduled for Sanford approval on Jan. 28th, with the board to have it on the agenda Jan. 28th. "The final closing is still set for January 29th," Julian said.
 One of the sections in the purchase agreement pertained to what action the city could take, if the city defaulted on payment for the property at some time in the future.
 "The city can't get involved in a mortgage," Julian explained, "and they can't finance anything like this beyond one year without bringing it up in a public referendum."
 He continued, "So, the agreement would call for the land to be paid off in one year. But all the city would have to do is give an installment payment due on Sept. 30th of each year, and you could extend the matter into the next year."

 Regarding a default on the payment Julian told the school board, "Without a mortgage, you can't take the land back, so your two options would be to take it to litigation, or mediate on a solution."
 With the pre-announced cancelling of discussion, no members of the Sanford City Commission or staff were on hand during the school board meeting. The board gave a unanimous vote to hold the matter until the next regular meeting on Jan. 26.
 The purchase of the land was on the agenda for the Seminole County School Board meeting last night, held at the Lake Mary City Hall.

Clamor for inaugural tickets

By JAMES H. HUBBARD
 Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON — Inaugural fever is gripping Washington, with Americans hungry for passes to galas and receptions besieging President-elect Clinton's staff and any member of Congress who might have a spare ticket or two.
 Capitol Hill aides say home states are clamoring most for tickets to Clinton's swearing-in or one of the inaugural balls, while winners of an unusual lottery are being invited to the White House to shake hands with Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton.

 Hundreds of volunteers at a Navy base here have been handling calls to the inaugural committee. They say they are flooded with questions on everything from what to wear to a gala to the best way of getting to Washington.
 One aide to a Midwestern senator said a woman called three times and finally broke down in tears when told no tickets were available. The aide, requesting anonymity, said the woman "cried her head off. She said, 'I just don't understand this."

 "The demand is greatly exceeding the supply," said an aide to a Southern senator who added, "We've heard stories about people traveling here from their home states to beg for help."
 About 1,000 people have the chance to attend a White House reception Jan. 21, the day after Clinton is sworn in as the nation's 42nd president.
 Their names were among those picked Thursday by people who themselves were waiting in line for White House tours.

Army can't discharge lesbian officer

KANSAS CITY, Kan. — A federal judge has blocked the Army from discharging a lesbian officer.
U.S. District Judge Earl E. O'Connor granted the order Thursday, hours before Maj. Joyce L. Walmer's honorable discharge was to take effect.

The order remains in effect until at least Jan. 30 while the 35-year-old Fort Leavenworth officer pursues a lawsuit challenging the Pentagon's ban on homosexuals.

Walmer has acknowledged she had a lesbian relationship with a civilian for nearly a decade, but she said she admitted to the affair only a commanding officer threatened her with court-martial.

President-elect Clinton has promised to lift the ban on homosexuals in the military.

Hurdle removed in BCCI scandal

ALBANY, N.Y. — New York's highest court has removed another hurdle to the trial of Defense Secretary Clark Clifford's trial in the BCCI scandal.

The Court of Appeals on Thursday rejected a bid by Clifford and co-defendant Robert Altman to avoid trial, now set for Feb. 15.

Clifford, 85, and Altman, 45, are accused in state and federal indictments of accepting millions of dollars from the Bank of Commerce and Credit International's Arab owners to help them gain secret control of First American Bankshares, Washington's largest bank.

Attorney general: Computers purged

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Missouri's new attorney general claims office computers were purged of official documents before his predecessor left office, and he says federal prosecutors are investigating.

Attorney General Jay Nixon refused to specify what he thinks is missing.

In a letter Wednesday to Nixon, former Attorney General William Webster insisted that the only items purged were of a personal nature, such as Christmas card lists. He dismissed Nixon's allegations as "ludicrous and offensive."

Nixon, a Democrat, took office on Monday and made the allegations last week. Webster, a Republican, did not seek another term so he could run for governor. He lost on Nov. 3.

Clinton shifts positions

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — In the heat of the presidential campaign, it often seemed as if Bill Clinton had a promise for everybody.

He pledged to rescue the "forgotten middle class," expand Head Start to cover all eligible children, make health care and college available to all, "reverse" the Bush administration's Haiti policy, chop the deficit in half in four years and cut the White House staff by 25 percent.

But now, with his inauguration just five days away, the president-elect is retreating from some campaign pledges and finding out that others will be difficult to keep because of budget constraints.

Cabinet designate hired illegal aliens

WASHINGTON — Attorney General-designate Zoe Baird hired illegal aliens to care for her son after a lawyer advised that it was unlikely she would be fined for the technical violation of federal immigration law.

A Jan. 5 letter by attorney Thomas H. Belote detailing the advice he said he gave Baird and her husband says he told the couple that "civil penalties are technically applicable" for hiring illegal aliens.

But Belote added that "no employer sanctions have ever been applied as a result of the employment of undocumented domestic workers in Connecticut."

The letter by Belote, a Ridgefield, Conn., lawyer, was released Thursday by Clinton transition officials after it was disclosed that Baird and her husband had employed a South American couple illegally in this country to care for their son.

Letterman switches networks

NEW YORK — Sure, flinging toast, mocking guests and crushing a Mr. Coffee in a machine press works at 12:30 a.m. But will it go over with the 9-to-5 set?

David Letterman thinks so, and CBS is betting megabucks — a reported 14 to 16 million of them a year — on the idea. After months of negotiations, the "Late Night" comic has accepted a CBS offer to leave NBC and go into head-to-head competition against NBC "Tonight" host Jay Leno at 11:30 p.m.

At a news conference Thursday with his new bones, Letterman sidestepped questions about money, wisecracking: "I got enough for gum."

Man may have imprisoned other children

BAY SHORE, N.Y. — A man accused of holding a 10-year-old girl in a soundproof, subterranean chamber at his home for 16 days concealed a child-snatching conviction and offered himself as a "big brother" to youngsters.

Now investigators have begun searching for any evidence that 43-year-old John Esposito had imprisoned other children in the tomb-like cell he built 18 months ago under a converted garage attached to his bungalow on Long Island.

Forensics experts and detectives with dogs swarmed over the house's large, tree-shaded yard on Thursday. And police said they would dismantle the garage.

Haitian policy irks Aristide supporters

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — President-elect Clinton vows to work for democracy in Haiti, but supporters of Jean-Bertrand Aristide say their ousted leader has been weakened by Clinton's adoption of a quick-return policy for boat people.

Clinton's decision, announced Thursday in a Voice of America message to the Haitian people, came despite an earlier pledge to change President Bush's immigration policy. Bush had ordered refugees returned to their homeland without determining if they had fled political persecution.

In adopting Bush's tough policy, Clinton showed that Washington's most immediate goal toward Haiti has not varied: to try to keep Haitians from fleeing to U.S. shores. Bush had maintained that most Haitian emigrants were trying to escape poverty, not political repression.

Iraq vows revenge

Iraq has vowed to take revenge for the U.S.-led air raid — but announced it was giving in to the West on two of the issues that had pushed the crisis to military action.

Iraq said Thursday it would let weapons inspectors fly to Baghdad aboard U.N. planes and stop arms-gathering forays in the Kuwaiti border zone. Both were considered violations of the U.N. resolutions that ended fighting in the Persian Gulf War.

U.S. military officials said Thursday that only one of four targeted anti-missile batteries was knocked out in this week's raid and that allied warplanes would attack again if necessary.

Endeavour crew rings bells

By SUSAN NIGHTOWER
Associated Press Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Endeavour's astronauts today rang in the Clinton administration a few days early as scientists on the ground worked to salvage an experiment using a $14 million X-ray spectrometer.

The crew also planned today to show schoolchildren via a TV hookup the physics of toys in space. They planned to toss a ball around and play with windup bathtub toys and a toy car to show how objects behave in weightlessness.

Early today, the astronauts videotaped themselves delivering a brief message and ringing a small replica of the Liberty Bell.

The tape, which was sent to the ground but not broadcast, is the astronauts' contribution to President-elect Clinton's "Bells for Hope" inaugural ceremony, in which people across the country will set bells pealing simultaneously. Since Endeavour's astronauts will be asleep during the ceremony at 6 p.m. EST Sunday, their tape is being sent to the inaugural committee, NASA spokesman Jeff Carr said.

"It's not easy turning your bedroom, dining room, bathroom, into a recording studio," shuttle commander John Casper said during the taping.

He seemed a bit disappointed that the astronauts did not expect to speak to Clinton on Sunday.

"OK, I guess he's just too busy to give us a call. We understand that," Casper said.

The astronauts also beamed down some video of a cyclone moving across the Indian Ocean. Crew member Gregory Harbaugh said the massive storm was rotating subtly and looked "like a blob of clouds just hundreds, maybe, of miles across."

Ground controllers struggled to fix the main piece of scientific equipment aboard Endeavour, the X-ray spectrometer that shut down while scanning space.

The astronauts have little involvement with the spectrometer, which is operated by remote control from the ground.

The twin 500-pound X-ray detectors turned off automatically when they began picking up about eight times more radiation than expected, said Wilton Sanders, a scientist on the ground.

Controllers turned the detectors off and on Thursday to try to solve the problem. Data collection resumed, but the radiation count still was higher than anticipated, Sanders said.

The detectors may have been damaged by an overload of radiation, Sanders said, and he was unsure whether they could be fully fixed. However, he said good measurements were made Wednesday night before the trouble began.

The spectrometer is designed to measure low-energy X-rays emitted from the space between stars, or interstellar medium. Scientists hope to prove — or disprove — the theory that the solar system is filled with a hot gas produced by a nearby and fairly recent supernova, or exploding star.

In better news, all appeared to be going well with the $23 million toilet flying in space for the first time aboard Endeavour. NASA mission operations director Lee Briscoe said.

"The crew hasn't made any comments otherwise," he said.

The astronauts accomplished their main goal, releasing a $200 million satellite, shortly after liftoff Wednesday. The satellite will serve as a switchboard between spacecraft and Earth.

On Sunday, two of Endeavour's crewmen are scheduled to take a five-hour spacewalk. The six-day flight is to end Tuesday with a landing at Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

Lake Mary group lands Little League charter

By DEAN SMITH
Herald Sports Writer

LAKE MARY — There's a new youth baseball league ready to take its place in the competitive Seminole County market.

A group of parents from the Lake Mary area have acquired a charter from Little League Baseball, Inc. of Williamsport, Pa., (the largest sports sanctioning organization in the world) to begin a league for boys and girls ages 6 to 12 under the banner of Longwood/Lake Mary Little League, Inc.

"Right now, we are Longwood/Lake Mary," said league President Rick Shurla, who left the Longwood Babe Ruth program to form the new league. "But papers have been filed to change the name to Lake Mary Little League, Inc."

"This will give Lake Mary its own youth baseball league for the first time, giving the kids an option to playing out at Five Points (site of the Seminole PONY Baseball organization). Even though the name will be changed, our boundaries will still allow us to register players from Longwood, Lake Mary and Sanford."

All players must be between 6 and 12 years of age before August 1, 1993. Proof of age (certified copy of birth certificate) and proof of residence is required upon registration.

There is no registration or participation fees. A donation of $20 per player is requested but not mandatory.

"The major emphasis of our league is to let everyone play, not turn anyone away," said Shurla. "We are asking for the $20 donation, but if you can't afford it, we want you to register and play anyway. Anyone in the Sanford, Lake Mary and Longwood is free to register and all they need is a baseball glove. A full uniform will be provided."

The league will offer two types of programs. One for the 10 to 12 year olds, will be a competitive league that will choose an All-Star team and compete for a chance at the Little League World Series at the end of the regular season.

All of the other leagues, from 6 year old tee ball and up will be geared toward instruction with no scorebooks or league standings kept.

"We don't want kids who are playing just for fun to be intimidated by the ones who are playing to win," said Shurla. "We wanted to get rid of the incentive to win, hopefully encouraging the coaches to play every kid in every position. Maybe a kid will develop more of a love for the game or maybe they will discover that he or she is better suited to pitch than catch."

So far, the league has field space in Longwood (at Ryder Field) two days a week and at the Woodlands complex. Next week, the league will go before the Lake Mary City Commission to make proposal about using the new athletic complex on Country Club Road.

Registration has been going on in the Longwood area for the past month and will wrap up tomorrow (Saturday) at 1 p.m. at the VFW Post #207 on State Road 427.

Signups and orientation meetings for Lake Mary will begin tomorrow. See Lake Mary, Page 2B

Opening Day ceremonies for the 1993 Sanford Recreation Department youth baseball and softball leagues will be conducted March 13 and 20. The Pee Wee and Little Major Baseball leagues and the Junior and Senior Girls' Slowpitch Softball leagues all will open their seasons on March 13 at Fort Mellon while opening day for the Babe Ruth Baseball League will be March 20 at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

Sanford now registering players

SANFORD — With Opening Day of their youth baseball and softball leagues eight weeks away, the Sanford Recreation Department is now registering players at the Downtown Youth Center, located in the lower level of City Hall.

Players may also register the day of tryouts. The registration fee is $10 per player. There is also a $10 non-residence fee for those players who do not live in Sanford. For families with more than one child, there is a family non-residence fee of $15 that covers all family members.

For additional information, contact the Sanford Recreation Department at 330-5697.

BASEBALL

Boys between the ages of 7 and 15 can register to play in one of three leagues being offered by the Sanford Recreation Department.

The Pee-Wee League is for children who will be 7 or not turn 10 before Aug. 1, 1993. Children who will be 10 or not turn 13 before Aug. 1 can register to play in the Little Major League while the Babe Ruth League is for boys who will be 13 or not turn 16 before Aug. 1.

Tryouts will be conducted Feb. 13 and 20. The Pee Wee League will conduct tryouts on Saturday, Feb. 13, at the Fort Mellon Softball Field while the Little Majors will be holding tryouts at Fort Mellon's Roy Holler Field.

On Saturday, Feb. 20, Babe Ruth League hopefuls will try out at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

The tryouts will begin at 9 a.m.

Returning players need to register but do not need to try out as long as they are not moving up to the next age group. Returning Pee Wee players moving up to the Little Majors and graduating Little Major players going into the Babe Ruth League will have to try out.

All other returning players will be on the same team as they were last season.

Both the Pee Wee and Little Major leagues will conduct Opening Day ceremonies and begin their respective seasons on Saturday, March 13, at Fort Mellon Park. The Babe Ruth League will open its season with ceremonies on March 20 at Sanford Memorial Stadium.

SOFTBALL

Girls who will be 9 or not turn 13 before June 1, 1993, can register to play in the Junior Girls' Slowpitch Softball League while the Senior Girls' League is for girls who will be 13 or not turn 17 before June 1.

Both leagues will conduct tryouts on Saturday, Feb. 13, at the Fort Mellon Park Softball Field. The Junior Girls will try out beginning at 11 a.m. with the Senior Girls' tryouts scheduled for noon.

Returning players need to register but do not need to attend tryouts. Girls who played Junior League last year and are moving up the Senior League will have to attend the Senior League tryouts.

All returning players will be on the same team as they were last season.

Opening ceremonies for both leagues will be conducted on Saturday, March 13, at the Fort Mellon Softball Field.

Winning Super Bowl only challenge left for Marino

By STEVEN WINE
AP Sports Writer

MIAMI — Rather than devote every moment to beating the Buffalo Bills, Dan Marino found time this week for golf, charity work and an evening of TV with his family.

"If you thought about your job 24 hours a day, you'd go crazy, right?" Marino said.

But while the Miami Dolphins' quarterback may try to treat this week like any other, he knows it's different.

On Sunday, when the Bills visit Joe Robbie Stadium, Miami will play in an AFC championship game for the first time since 1986. That means it's been seven years since Marino had such a good shot at his first Super Bowl title.

As the Dolphins draw closer to their goal of an NFL championship, Marino tries to downplay the personal significance of the mission. Yet, at 31, he admits to a certain sense of urgency.

"Only in the fact that you don't know what the future holds," he said. "After 10 years, I feel healthy and I think I can play a lot longer, but who knows?"

This season Marino made the Pro Bowl, led the NFL in passing yards and brought the Dolphins from behind to win in the closing minutes six times. Just another ho-hum year.

He breaks records and performs fourth quarter heroics with almost numbing regularity. Such accomplishments make more glaring his one shortcoming — no Super Bowl title.

"If he can get there and win the game, that's the coup de grace for him," said close friend Don Strock, Marino's backup in 1983-87. "What else is missing?"

Not much, Marino could well break the NFL career passing records for yardage and touchdowns by 1993; he already holds the one-season mark in both categories.

Perhaps more remarkable is Marino's durability playing the game's most vulnerable position. A chronically sore left knee hasn't prevented him from making an NFL record 140 consecutive starts in regular-season non-strike games. Among active quarterbacks, Jim Everett has the second-longest streak at 80.

"I'm the last guy to start for the Dolphins — in '83," Strock said. "He has played ever since. That's really amazing."

Miami coach Don Shula, who was Otto Graham's teammate and Johnny Unitas' coach, knows better than anyone Marino is one of a kind.

"Dan makes practice exciting because he

It's about time...

January is the time of year to start all over

In January people think a little bit more about time than they usually would. I hope you enjoy the following article. Time is the fourth dimension which colors our perception of the other three. We pursue time in all things and perhaps no other time of the year are we more conscious of it than today.

Did you know that it takes:
 .02 of a second for a nerve impulse to travel from the toe to the head of a 6-foot man.

1 second for light to travel 186,282 miles through air and 124,000 miles through glass.
 1 second for the wings of a small hummingbird to beat 70 times.

1 second for the human eye to focus two to five times.

1 second for 8 million blood cells to die within one normal, healthy adult human.

1.35 seconds for light to travel from the moon to the earth.

2.5 seconds for an echo to leave the surface and return from the deepest known part of the ocean (35,000 feet).

4 seconds to say "Two all beef patties, special sauce, lettuce, cheese, pickles, onions on a sesame seed bun."

6 seconds to qualify in a rodeo by staying on a bucking bronco or bull.

10 seconds to dehorn dairy cattle by applying direct heat from an electric

 30 seconds for decay-causing acids to form in the mouth after eating sugar or carbohydrates.

1 minute for the brain of a newborn baby to grow 1 to 2 milligrams.

1 minute for the human heart to pump 12 gallons of blood during a period of physical exertion or stress.

7 minutes for the human brain to die without oxygen.

Schools lauded for activity in drug-free programs

DEAR READERS: We in Seminole County have reason to feel great pride in two of our schools, Lyman High and Lakeview Middle, who have been selected as finalists in the Florida Drug-Free Schools Recognition Program.

These schools have been recognized for their comprehensive approaches toward the National Education Goal of having every school in America safe, disciplined, and drug-free by the year 2000. Each school's program will now be reviewed by judges from the National Review Panel of the U.S. Department of Education for possible national recognition of their efforts.

Both Lyman and Lakeview utilize the Student Assistance Team model for working with students who are experiencing academic, social or emotional difficulties. These teams consist of teachers, counselors, administrators, paraprofessionals, and other support personnel who provide prevention, education, identification and intervention, referral and follow-up for students in need of assistance. The schools also network with and include community resources in their comprehensive programs such as School Resource Officers from law enforcement agencies, 12-Step Program support group meetings, and community volunteers as mentors. Each school incorporates a peer counseling program using the concept that kids can often help and understand kids better than adults. Selected teachers are also targeted to act as mentors/advisors for students experiencing difficulties. Both Lyman and Lakeview provide these services for our kids using volunteer time. No special stipends or monies are provided to fund these programs or their participants.

Our congratulations go to each of these schools and their staffs for state and possibly national recognition of their fine work, but especially we offer our gratitude for your gifts of your time, talents and interest in meeting the needs of our kids.

Parts are parts, male or female, in health care

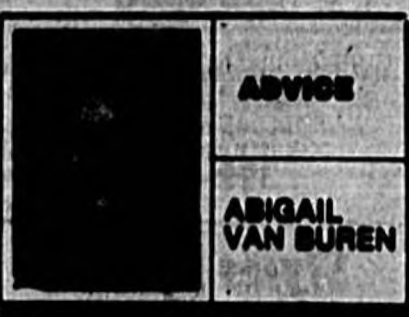

DEAR ABBY: In response to the radiology technician who was offended because someone referred to her work as "disgusting" — I have no objections to the work they do. They are performing a good service. However, I think it is extremely immoral for a woman technician to X-ray the intimate parts of a man's anatomy and it is equally immoral for a man to X-ray the intimate parts of a woman's anatomy. There are both women and men technicians in every hospital, so why can't the male technicians take care of the male patients, and the female technicians take care of the females?

Please publish this. I would like to know if other people feel as I do. I am signing my real name, but if you print this, please don't use my name. It is all right to identify me as a woman. Thank you.

A (FEMALE) READER IN LOUISIANA
 DEAR (FEMALE) READER: Where health and human life are concerned, professionals in the health care field do not have the slightest interest in whether the patient is male or female. Trust me.

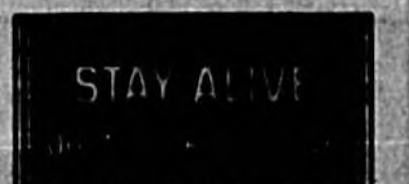

Furthermore, patients should be concerned only with getting the best possible treatment, and it matters not if the health care professional is male or female.

DEAR ABBY: I was amazed that you did not suggest that the teenaged identical twins, who were constantly mistaken for one another, wear name tags. If the relatives have a problem telling them apart, help them out. If engraved identification pins make them feel like hotel desk clerks, how about having some made from gold wire? I'm sure they could find a jeweler willing to solve their identity mix-ups in a beautifully creative way.

FRIEND OF A TWIN, DALLAS
 DEAR FRIEND: Name tags? I would much rather be called "Twin" or "Twinny," which is what Jean Fitzgerald and Bill Gleason kiddingly called both of us back in our high school days in Sioux City.

FROM THE PULPIT

By PASTOR N. T. PITTS

Peaceful minds in a turbulent world

We have entered into the year of 1993 of our Lord, and many of us are looking forward with great expectations.

We have elected a new president with the hope of changing our society. We must not expect president elect Clinton to bring about any miracles.

Each and every day we read our newspapers, turn on our television, listen to our radios and we hear of murders, rapes, child and spouse abuse, cheating and mistreating of seniors citizens and corruption in high places. We must admit that there is a serious problem of "troubled minds" among us.

But how can we maintain peaceful minds in the midst of such turbulence? No psychologist, no clinical analysis, and no sociological prognostication could give a better prescription for good mental health than that given by the Prophet Isaiah:

Thou will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed in Thee. Isa. 26:3.

All of us are born with a "Tabloid Rasa," a blank mind, knowing nothing. We come into this world "innocent" until we learn and practice how to become guilty.

"The trouble with our country is not the fault of government nor the courts, the trouble is with the family. We have become a Godless people."

—The Rev. N. T. Pitts

The trouble with our country is not the fault of government nor the courts, the trouble is with the family. We have become a Godless people.

The cause of so much deviant behavior, if it is not genetic, is plain and simple, we have failed to recognize that God is. When we leave God out of our minds, Satan steps in. None who have God on their mind could rape, murder, abuse, assault or rob another human being.

Every year during this time, we celebrate the birth of a man, Martin L. King. A man who marched, sacrificed and even lost his life for freedom and respect for all. Not only him but many others have suffered, sacrificed and died. It makes me wonder was all this for naught? Hatred is on the increase and there seems to be no end.

Some claim that taking prayer out of school is one major cause. I say it's prayer that has been taken out of the home. Prayer in the home, freethink chats and community involvement are the keys to a healthy society. Let us never forget, "Thou will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee."

The Rev. N. T. Pitts is pastor of the historic St. James A.M.E. Church, Cypress Avenue and Ninth Street, Sanford.

Delegation asks Clinton to form an advisory group

By Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A top-ranking delegation of the National Council of Churches has recommended that the incoming Clinton administration establish an advisory group for effective relations with the churches.

The delegation met with Vernon Jordan, chairman of the Clinton transition team, offering to seek appropriate ways for churches to relate to the new administration.

Underlining religious concern for "upbuilding life for all persons of America," the delegation said the "churches can be valuable resources in meeting the human as well as the spiritual needs" of people.

The council includes most major Protestant and Orthodox denominations. The delegation said its top concerns were rebuilding America's cities, providing access for health care for all persons and strengthening the partnership of churches in addressing the country's role in international affairs.

Jordan voiced appreciation for the council's "compassionate and courageous ministries over the years" and offered to facilitate an early meeting with President-elect Clinton and Vice President-elect Al Gore.

The 10-member delegation included the council's president, the Rev. Syngman Rhee, its general secretary, the Rev. Joan B. Campbell, and its immediate past-president, the Very Rev. Leonid Klakovsky.

Have you hugged your senior citizen today?
