Animal shelter ready to open

By VICKI DeSORMIER

SANFORD — Like the phoenix, the Humane Society of Seminole County has risen from the ashes with renewed strength and beauty.

For three years, animals brought into the shelter have been living in makeshift housing in prefabricated buildings and wooden lean-to cages. In April 1993 a fire which started in a malfunctioning gas dryer, roared through the wood shelter buildings that had been home to an ever-changing group of several hundred animals for a decade or more. Dozens of animals were injured and almost 70 animals, mostly dogs, were killed in the fire. Related Editorial, Page 4A

Victim: Write judge to put shooter in jail for life

From staff reports

SANFORD — A Sanford woman touched by a plea from a shooting victim is asking citizens to support his request for letters to the judge who will sentence his attacker. Steven L. Schultz, 24, was paralyzed from the chest down on Oct. 29, 1994, after being shot by Vincent Kenon, 24, as he sat in his vehicle in crowded traffic in Tallahassee. At trial, evidence established Kenon was angry because he said Schultz cut him off in traffic, so he walked up to his car and shot him. Kenon was a senior criminal-justice major at Florida A&M University and Schultz, from Orlando, was a student at Florida State University at that time. Sanford resident Loretta Bellstein recently received a letter from Schultz urging the public to exert influence on a circuit judge regarding sentencing connected to a shooting. "For those of you who are ready to get tougher on our criminals and let them know they must pay for their crime, please write a letter to the judge," she urged. On February 14 of this year, Kenon was found guilty by a six person jury. Sentencing is scheduled for April 17. In addition to being found guilty of attempted second-degree murder, Kenon was also found guilty of armed burglary to a vehicle with an assault, using a firearm in the commission of a felony, and shooting into an occupied vehicle. In his letter, Schultz, a quadriplegic, urges persons to write to the judge who has been assigned to the sentencing, Circuit Judge Ralph Smith, and demand that the judge inflict a life sentence without a chance for parole. Susan Decker, 4, shows off the basket of Easter eggs she collected at the zoo Saturday.

Egg-ceptionally good time was had by all

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — A second generation of egg hunters made their way through the trees and grasses of the outlying areas of the Central Florida Zoological Park on Saturday morning. And at Sanford's Lee P. Moore Park, city recreation department organizers let kids loose to search for the proverbial golden eggs, leading to vast riches. Though there were other activities vying for the attentions of the younger people in the late morning hours, a sizable crowd was on hand to help uncover eggs at both events. The zoo's 18th annual egg hunt brought out a couple of thousand young people, with parents in tow. From those who could barely balance on their wobbly little legs to 10-year-olds with a decade of hunting experience, the crowd was excited with the possibility of finding the prize egg. "I'm gonna win this year," said Sharon Klinger of Altamonte Springs. "I'm gonna find the prize egg." The seven-year-old was supervising her four-year-old sister during an early hunt before going to the event for seven to 10-year-olds. This was her fourth year at the hunt, she said, and she had some words of wisdom for her sister. As the younger girl slipped under the orange tape that had separated the hunters from the eggs, Klinger called out: "Don't let them step on your fingers!" Spanky Hernandez, 4, of Deltona was not sure he wanted to go out into the fray with his crazed counterparts. He chose, instead, to watch others fill their baskets with eggs from behind his mother's right leg. "No go out there," he announced on more than one occasion. His mother, Maria, said she had come to zoo hunts at the zoo when she was a youngster and had the same reaction to the crowds. "It's OK," she said. "He really just wanted to come see the animals. I thought the egg hunt would be fun too." Shuttle buses provided by Lynx sped between remote parking areas in downtown Sanford and the zoo, but still hunters arrived late causing delays in the hunts, but while early-arriving parents rolled their eyes in mock annoyance, the youngsters were entertained by the Mystery Fun House Wizard and the kids from the Radio AAHS (AM 950) Air Force. Some youngsters at the city's egg hunt had to be held back to prevent them from getting an early start.

Today: Mostly cloudy with a slight chance of showers. Highs in the lower 70s. Chance of rain 60 percent.

Officials, residents of public housing talk, get acquainted

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Senior Staff Writer

SANFORD — A warm afternoon breeze sent leaves fluttering to the ground and rushed through the colorful clothes on the line behind the public housing units in Castle Brewer Court late last week. On the fenced playground and basketball courts, there's a game. Music blares from a corner of the complex and the smell of a homecooked meal permeates the air. "It don't seem like much of a party," said Donte Jones, slumping against the fence, taking a sip from a can of soda. "But it's early." The Housing Authority of Sanford hosted a Spring Festival for residents on Thursday afternoon which brought many residents out to meet with housing authority executives and with one another in a friendly environment. "I think it's nice," said Dantelle Morris. "We don't never get the chance to just come out and talk to the other peoples who live out here. We got our own peoples to take care of." New park announced

A new park with an old history has been announced by the Department of Environmental Protection. The park is to be dedicated this coming Saturday, April 20.

The site has African-American historical ties, and was originally settled in the community of Markham in the 1880s by turpentine and lumber workers.

The new park, located south of SR-46, west of Sanford, is the site of Markham's Oak Grove Missionary Baptist Church and Pinnie Ridge Cemetery. They are now part of the Wekiva Basin GeoPark.

Speakers at the dedication include Seminole County historian Alternese Smith Bentley and Larry Perry from the Florida Park Service.

Music will be provided by Sylvia Stallworth and the choir of Mt. Olive Missionary Baptist Church, in Longwood.

City replaces heat, air system

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

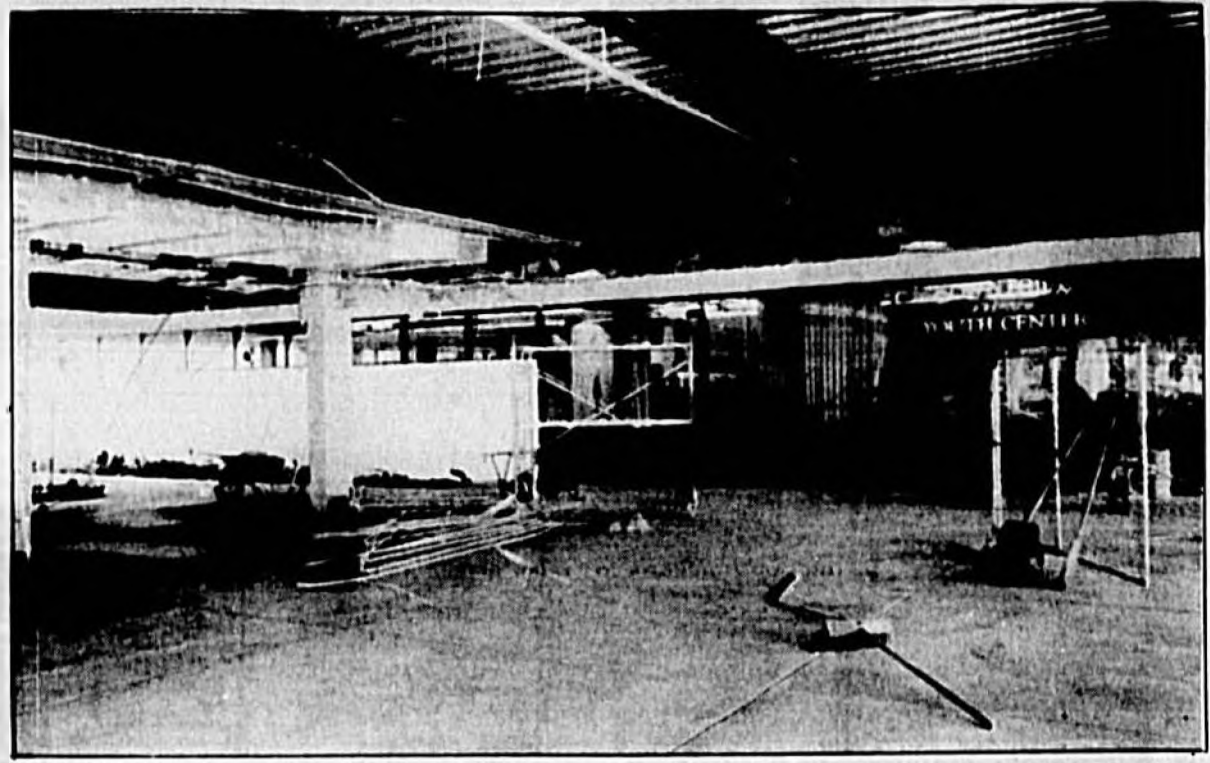

SANFORD — Things often get rather heated during Sanford City Commission meetings. Not necessarily with words however, but with the environmental temperatures in the various meeting rooms and offices.

Work got under way this past week to renovate and replace the City Hall's HVAC (heating, ventilation and air conditioning) system. Problems with rooms being too hot or too cool have plagued the City Hall staff and visitors for a considerable length of time.

Fencing was installed early last week in the breezeway area on the ground floor to prevent any harm to persons and reduce any hazards which may be caused by falling materials.

In both the lower and upper floors of City Hall, as well as in the recreation department area, ceilings are being torn out in order to make room for new installations and reach HVAC pipe and circulation areas where repairs are found to be necessary.

The need to replace the heating and air conditioning units has not come about recently. Problems have been reported for many months. As far back as last November, discussion was made about the HVAC replacement during a city commission work session. The matter has come up for additional discussion at practically every meeting since that time.

Bids were sent out early this year, and opened in February. The entire project was estimated to cost $891,500. The city presently has $500,000 allocated in the current budget for such work. There will be an incentive reduction of possibly as much as $50,000 from Florida Power & Light Company.

The remaining money will reportedly come from a previously budgeted amount being held to finance re-roofing of a part of city hall. It originally was considered to be done whenever the HVAC system was changed.

The re-roofing however has been found not to be required at the same time, and the city is reallocating $120,000 which had been reserved for that, two years ago, and transferring it to pay for the remainder of the HVAC project.

The re-roofing project has now been placed in limbo until the matter can be reconsidered in preparation for the fiscal year 1996/97 budget.

Longwood promotes events for Building Safety Week

From staff reports

LONGWOOD — The City of Longwood is joining other units of state and local governments in observing 1996 International Building Safety Week.

According to Mayor William E. Winston, during the week of April 7 through 13, Longwood will be promoting the theme of the observance, "A Safer World is on the Horizon," with activities planned for all ages.

Building official Bill Culbertson said that some of the activities include a model dwelling showcasing framing, roof design and coverage, safety tips for every home and safety coloring books for children.

The displays will be open to the public at the building department, 174 W. Church Avenue in Longwood, behind City Hall. Hours are 8:30 a.m.

until 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Observation of Building Safety Week began in 1980 to publicize and promote the use and understanding of construction and building codes and their administration by governments.

The week-long observation has continued in an effort to ensure construction of safe, sound buildings.

Culbertson commented, "The importance of construction codes and their regulation and enforcement is often overlooked until some catastrophic fire or other construction-related tragedy strikes, shaking people's conscience."

He added that steps are being taken by the City of Longwood Building Division to ensure the buildings in the community are safe, healthy and accessible places to work, play and live.

Longwood Mayor William Winston, left, and Building Official Bill Culbertson, hold a proclamation declaring April 7-13 as International Building Safety Week. Culbertson has arranged a display in honor of the event, open to the public, at the city's public works building.

The way we were: Fond memories of Sanford kids circa 1940s

More on Babe Ruth

According to Doug Stenstrom and Buddy Lake, John Krider was instrumental in bringing Babe Ruth to Sanford in 1948. Julian Stenstrom was the emcee for the special ceremony; Robert Williams was Sanford's mayor.

Some of the people who were given autographed baseballs were Frankie Stenstrom, John Lewis Salisbury and Nancy Williams. Probably Jimmy and John Krider were also recipients. Lera (Mrs. A.L.) Wilson recalled seeing her son, Freddie, take a new ball to be autographed, scampering among the crowd and out onto the field. Buddy

Lake says that Babe Ruth autographed balls are worth very big bucks now.

Buddy told us that he had received a Babe Ruth autographed ball earlier during his major league career and had kept it for years in a dresser drawer. It came up missing, though, and it wasn't until much later that he found out its fate. His son Kelly confessed after he was a grown man that he had taken it to elementary school one day and sold it to a classmate for 10 cents!

The Ritz and the Princess

Most of us remember going to

the movies a lot of years ago. I know that at the Ritz in the 1940s and 1950s there was a change of feature films three or four times a week. The more important movies were shown on Sunday and Monday, the "B" pictures were shown Tuesday through Friday, while on Saturday there was always a double feature. One would be a cowboy film starring Roy Rogers, Gene Autry, the Lone Ranger, among many others. The other was likely to be the Marx Brothers or the Bowery Boys. Then there was the serial which would end each week with a wagon about to go over a cliff or some such near disaster so you'd be lured back next week.

There was always a newscast, too; remember that there was not television. And the cartoons were great — Mickey Mouse, Elmer Fudd, Bugs Bunny, the Roadrunner, Porky Pig, Donald Duck and a host of others.

Cost at the Ritz during this time was nine cents if you were under 12, and 25 cents with a student card after that. I believe that adults paid 50 cents.

Doug Stenstrom and Buddy Lake recalled a time when Tom Mix came to the Ritz in person. He was able to bring his horse onto the stage from the side door so before the performance the horse was tied up near that door. While the horse was there, some kids came and cut off part of either his mane or his tail, they weren't sure which. Tom Mix was furious! And he never came back to Sanford.

The Princess Theater was located on West First Street in the building that Sanford Auto Parts now occupies. It showed silent pictures in the 1920s. Doug Stenstrom and Buddy Lake remembered that there was a concession stand on the right operated by Mr. Rubow, a very small man. He had a Model T Ford with a specially built up seat so he could drive. He later operated a grocery store on Sanford Avenue.

When William Jennings Bryant was a candidate for president, he came to Sanford and spoke at the Princess Theater. He was a great orator with a booming voice so doors were opened so that the people standing outside could hear him and also those across the street. See Stinecipher, Page 5A.

Emergency equipment won't cost Lake Mary

By NICK PFEIFAU, Herald Staff Writer

LAKE MARY — The city is getting some new equipment. Hopefully, it never has to be used for its intended purpose.

Fire Chief Duane Mehl has requested authority to purchase a gas emergency generator and 225 amp automatic transfer switch. After the purchases were put out for bids, the low price approved this past Thursday by the city commission, was $12,995.

What made commissioners most happy about the purchase was that a grant request was made to the State of Florida, Department of Community Affairs, Emergency Management, regarding the purchase. As a result, the state has agreed to refund the full purchase price to the city.

The generator and associated equipment will be installed at the Public Works building on Rinehart Road. From that location, it will provide a needed source of electrical power should the normal source of power be interrupted.

The need has been discussed for a considerable length of time. Last year, during hurricane season when there was a potential threat to the area, commission discussion, several times, centered on how the city's communications needs, especially those for police and fire, would be met in case of a severe emergency.

At one time, it was proposed that an emergency generator be installed at city hall, to serve as a communications center. This concept was abandoned however, when consideration was given to the needs of police and fire, which may be more intense during emergencies.

In its location at the Public Safety complex on Rinehart road, after it is obtained, as well as after the complex is rebuilt and improved, that area will become the center for any and all emergency operations during such catastrophes as hurricanes, including public works.

The city staff has a master plan which designates certain individuals to man emergency operations, especially in cases when power or phone lines are lost. It is predicted that a new Public Safety complex will provide for a headquarters room for such operations.

The successful bidder for the equipment was Florida Diesel-Diesel-Allison of Sanford. Delivery is expected in approximately three months.

Support the Humane Society

Jenny Boley's sleeves are always rolled up. Her silver, pixie-cut hair is often plastered to her head with sweat, which glistens on her intelligent and motherly face. Her jeans and T-shirt are mud-streaked and wet. And she doesn't get paid money to work as hard as she works.

Boley is a Seminole County Humane Society volunteer who personifies the spirit of those who work on staff and as volunteers at the animal shelter.

Visit on a busy Sunday and you're likely to meet Boley and many like her, all dedicated to making life for stray and abused animals a little happier. And they do. Clean towels and blankets are systematically installed in the dogs' makeshift lean-to cages, the best that could be done after a fatal fire demolished the kennels and killed 70 dogs three years ago. Boley's charges yip and bark delightedly when they see her coming. She takes time to speak to and pet each dog as she expertly changes bedding and fills water buckets. She has even been known to wield the clippers, grooming her dogs after their baths so they look perfectly presentable to those visiting, hopefully to adopt.

The pace is hectic on the weekend. A frantic woman inquires where a veterinarian might be found on Sunday to treat a neighborhood cat whose face is laid open in a fight. She is told to bring him inside and a Humane Society technician will see what can be done. Within two hours, four unwanted dogs are accepted into the non-profit shelter, which is sustained by contributions. No animals are put to sleep because they've stayed too long. Two volunteers change every litter box in the cat room, freshen water and food, and mop the floors, all the while talking to the animals.

Shelter Manager Betty Munoz can do three things at once: help with adoption papers, explain a cat's special needs to an inquiring visitor and dispatch a volunteer to get gas for the pump, needed to suck the muddy rainwater out of the current-parking lot. And she knows all the animals by name. She is elated when homes are found for them. Several would be on this Sunday.

The new shelter will open later this month. Past infighting among board members over its construction and shelter finances is hopefully over. Shelter Director Bruce Johnson says this is a new beginning and past negativity is past. And Boley is too busy to worry about others' egos. She has some hugs to give and get.

We commend those who make the Seminole County Humane Society a safe and happy place for unwanted animals.

Anything is possible

Easter Sunday, a day in which Christians throughout the world recognize the resurrection of Christ, and ponder on the meaning of the event. It is the most holy and revered day in Christian life.

Many people will have attended church this morning. Some may have gone outdoors to a church-conducted or private sunrise service. Others may have gone no further this weekend than to attend an Easter egg hunt. Still others will spend the day at a picnic, family outing or (weather permitting) going to the beach.

In effect, it's a great and glorious day for everyone who gives it the opportunity to be that.

Unfortunately, as the news stories will subsequently reveal on the pages of the Sanford Herald, there will be residential and vehicular burglaries, muggings, purse snatchings, retail and vehicle thefts, drug transactions, and many other crimes.

There may well be murders, rapes, domestic fights, knifings, and other acts of violence which cause damage, danger and death to other human beings.

While there may be fewer incidents on this religious holiday, we find it difficult to imagine a crime-free day. But wait....

Just imagine. If you will, what it would be like if every one of us could be free from crime for just this one day. If no wife or husband beat each other; if no person caused physical harm to another; if no one took the possessions of another person; if everyone drove safely and exercised caution and concern about others.

Could that happen? Do we think this could truly happen on just this one day, Easter Sunday, April 7, 1996? If it did, we would certainly consider it a major miracle.

But wait, wasn't the event we are observing today, in itself, considered a miracle?

Who knows, unexpected things have happened before. Especially on this day, we should know that anything is possible.

It's all about new beginnings

Often when I am asked to speak to organizations, I try to find a common theme, a message, a unifying device. So much of modern discourse is directed toward pointing out and exploiting the divisions among us so it is not surprising that we find ourselves in 1996 to be at a point of total disunion. It would appear in our society that there is no common ground on any issue. As the multitudes did after the destruction of the Tower of Babel, we run to and from, talking yet neither understanding our fellow man or being understood by him.

Far too often as human beings, we separate the haves from the have nots, the whites from the blacks, the farmer from the city dweller, the liberal from the conservative, the educated from the uneducated as if by dividing ourselves into thousands of categories and sub-categories, the constant differentiation from the rest of humanity elevates us in some fashion. Lost in all of these silly distinctions is the fact that we are all one people, if cut, we bleed red. If we die, we are missed, if tickled we laugh, and if injured, we cry.

Two events this week help bring these thoughts into perspective. First this week marks the end of Lent and Easter, the high holy day of Christianity, as well as Passover, a major and high holy day in Judaism. I have often marveled about the closeness, the similarities, the commonality in the three major western religions — Islam, Christianity, and Judaism, yet despite these similarities, the Christian, the Muslim and the Jew have respectively and interchangeably been at each other's throats since antiquity.

The second event related to the unfortunate and untimely death of Secretary of Commerce Ron Brown. I have often thought highly of Ron Brown and had followed his career from his position at the Urban League to his involvement in the 1988 Jesse Jackson Campaign, to his chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee. It was in the context of Ron Brown's chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee that my thoughts turned to Lee Atwater whose death, like that of Ron Brown, was both unfortunate and untimely.

These two men, Atwater and Brown, shared more than simply untimely deaths. Lee Atwater was a former head of the Republican National Committee who died of cancer in the prime of his life. He was credited with bringing a divided and fractious party together under former President Ronald Reagan and then holding it together for three successive presidential victories. Ron Brown, as chairperson of the Democratic National Committee, was credited with bringing a fractious and divided party, engulfed in a period of free falling decline, together to ensure the election of President Clinton. Both men were master strategists, and true patriots, sharing a love for the political and their country. In any encounter, both men could be counted on to fight hard, if not always fair. But with the fight in them, there was never a doubt about their devotion to their country and their belief in its political system.

The deaths of these two men provide a light for those of us who are left behind. Although they came from different sides of the tracks, adhered to different political philosophies, and were often at each other's throats, in the end, they share infinitely more in common than can ever be said to have divided them. Atwater and Brown represent two true American heroes.

In this season of Easter and Passover, it would do us well to remember those things that we share in common, one with another. The problem with disunity is that it prevents us from confronting our common goals, and is counterproductive. As Americans, we face many new challenges as we approach the next century and we will only survive as a nation if we come together as one country, black and white, rich and poor, urban and rural, to forge a new beginning. You know, new beginnings are what Easter and Passover are truly about.

ELLEN GOODMAN

There's much to be said for teamwork

WASHINGTON — On any Wide World of Sports scale, I weigh in as sports-orexic. The sound of football on television strikes my ear like a nail across a blackboard. I can't pick Marcus Camby out of a superstar lineup. I don't even use sports metaphors.

So how is it possible that I spent two nights last weekend with my game face on, watching the NCAA Women's Final Four basketball tournament? Who was this woman tuned to ESPN, counting fouls, cheering at turnovers and analyzing point guards?

Well, a funny thing happened during my winter sojourn at Stanford. Against all odds, I became a fan.

I wish I could say it was only because of the quality of game played by the University team that made it to the Final Four in a tournament that was finally, bountifully won by Tennessee. I wish I could say it was just the athleticism of Kate Starbird, who shoots like her name, or the leadership of Jamila Wideman, who plays the court like a conductor, or the aggressive intensity of Vanessa Nygaard.

When I was in college, sex discrimination was not just rampant; it was legal.

But that was only part of it. Frankly, I was converted the moment I entered Maples Pavilion for my first ever women's basketball game and saw a house full of students screaming and a scruffy band playing. For women athletes.

I was hooked when I sat down next to a 9-year-old girl with a Stanford Women's basketball cap and sweat shirt, a girl who could recite names of the players as if they were a rock group. I was delighted by the sight of women cheerleaders doing cartwheels for women players, my first long look at girlfriends and brothers rooting crazily for the success of these sisters.

This is old news to those who have watched college women's basketball emerge into the big time. Old news to the young players who are impatiently waiting for the bigger time — for parity or even pro ball.

But as a woman old enough to be the mother of these players, I brought to my first season a generational delight. Not the delight of an alumna of the university, but that of a loyal alumna of the changes that brought these strong and talented women to star status.

When I was in college, sex discrimination was not just rampant; it was legal. Title 9 didn't pass until 1972 and the seminal sports event of the early women's movement wasn't the Final Four, but — I blush to remember — the 1973 tennis matchup between star Billie Jean King and hack Bobby Riggs.

My generation operated on the belief that if we built it, they would come. If we made way for opportunities of all kinds, the next generation would grab the ball and run.

Every woman who played in Charlotte, N.C., last weekend was born after Title 9 had changed, if not yet leveled, the playing field. They are the next generation that mine counted on.

And they take it for granted. I know. It is axiomatic, a near-ritual of my peers to feel unappreciated. Veterans of earlier fights will tell you that the young women today have no idea of our struggle. On campus, I met teachers who sounded like grumpy parents talking about children who "take it for granted."

But I say, "Good." After all, we don't pay homage to our foremothers every time we vote. Nor does every African American feel grateful when he sits at the front of the bus.

Public waterways

My letter concerns Florida Senate Bill 602 and House Bill 606; what is portrayed as a simple bill to put aquaculture under the Department of Agriculture, is really a carefully crafted bill to take the use of public waterways away from the citizens of the state of Florida. This is an extremely bad bill that should be voted down! It is chock full of clauses and provisions which are all intended to force all involved agencies to comply with the theft of public lands (sovereignty submerged lands), and to prevent use by the people.

My letter is in reference to a scheme to disenfranchise the public use of sovereignty waters under a pretense of including aquaculture with agriculture in Senate Bill 602 and House Bill 606. Gov. Chiles, Sen. Charles Bronson, Reps. Burt Harris, Ken Pruitt, the former Rep. Marvin Couch, and others, plotted to create law which will deny the citizens of Florida the right to traverse our waterways as free navigational corridors. Under the guise of providing opportunity for a small minority of persons engaged in aquaculture, this law subverts the intent and meaning of nearly 800 years of common law assuring this. The concept of free and open waterways began in the reformation leading to the 13th century signing of the Magna Carta, which defined the rights of free men, and which has been passed down to us through both British and Spanish common law. In 1845, Florida upon becoming a state started on equal footing with the original 13 colonies, which included submerged lands to the ordinary high water line as being sovereign to the people of the state. In 1885, the governor and cabinet became the trustees of sovereignty lands in behalf of the people.

Gov. Chiles is violating that trust by his participation in initiating and promoting this law, and his intervention preventing involved agencies from opposing it. The bill includes: it is declared to be presumed to be in the public interest, have provided for the posting of and exclusion of public use from our waterways, have conditions that will require submerged land leases be granted, and propose mandatory exclusion from regulation for individuals engaged in businesses such as alligator farming on our public lands. In addition, is proposed funding for these individuals at taxpayer expense. Traditional use of our water corridors to their full reaches, and the protection of the wildlife and natural systems which enable them to be clean, productive, and enjoyable to every current and future citizen of Florida, is in jeopardy by these actions. Systematic use of regulation and tactics which deny public use and protection of our navigable waterways is unacceptable.

Family values

The murder rate in Orlando is down as is the rate of violent crime across the nation. This is a good thing. The country's law enforcement professionals agree with President Clinton's leadership that has banned assault weapons and placed more police on our streets.

Freshmen Republicans in Congress are bringing a vote to reverse the assault weapons ban and decrease the number of police officers on our streets. This is a very bad thing. Caving in to the NRA at the expense of innocent victims of violent crime including police officers is not my idea of family values.

Downsizing the nation

It's time to stop downsizing the nation. Here's some apt words that will apply to what's happening in America that's downsizing the nation indiscriminately by perceived inactions that can bring grief to untold millions. The bell tolls, the hour is now. Integrate or we surely will disintegrate. We scorn the advice that history could teach.

However, one man says it best (no, not Pat Buchanan) but Oliver Goldsmith, an early 18th century poet, to wit, "The Deserted Village."
"Ill fares the land to hastening a prey where wealth accumulates and men decay."

"Princes and lords may flourish or may fade,
"A breath can make them as a breath has made,

But a bold peasantry their country's pride when once destroyed can never be supplied."
This should give us pause lest we sink to the grave in unperceived decay.

The old facility had neither smoke alarms nor sprinklers. According to officials at the humane society, construction on the new facility should be completed before the third anniversary of the devastating fire. The new 11,950-square foot building has been carefully designed to maximize the safety of the animals. The new building will have 60 indoor-outdoor kennels, 40 more than they now have. The kennels are equipped with an advanced sprinkler system. In addition, a ventilation and heating system that has been specially designed for such buildings, was installed. The property, which is in a valley below U.S. Highway 17-92 and the Flea World complex, has often been a muddy mess after rains. Cars were often parked in deep, shifting puddles. The new facility has increased and paved parking facilities. Humane Society officials hope the modern concrete and steel building will be a symbol of a new and better humane society, free from the controversy that has dogged the organization since the fire.

As a result of the difficulties, donations to the facility have slowed greatly. "I hope this is a new start for us," said Bruce Johnson, executive director of the facility.

Throughout the rebuilding process there have been complaints of mismanaged funds, poor or non-existent record keeping and ill-will between two factions on the board of directors. Presently, the Seminole County sheriff's office is conducting an investigation into possible misappropriation of donations by a board member.

Neither sheriff's officials nor any representatives of the humane society would comment on the situation until the investigation is completed.

The grand opening of the facility won't take place until June, but animals will begin moving in by the middle of this month. Only the installation of some fences stands between the animals and their new home.

Once the 200 or so dogs and cats are in their new digs, Johnson said the old facility will be razed to make room for more parking and a retaining wall.

Housing

Some housing authority residents have been angered recently by the new federal policy which requires that families be evicted if any member of the household is arrested for violence or any drug-related crime. Executive director Timothy Hudson was accused of not having met with people to explain the order.

Hudson said he was making himself available at the Spring Festival to anyone who wanted to talk with him. "Anyone who wants to talk to me about what we're doing can talk to me," Hudson said. But with hot dogs on the grill, music in the air and games on the court, there was little interest in getting into discussions of controversial issues.

"He don't want to talk to us about that here," said one woman who didn't want to be identified. "I think he needs to come to each unit and talk to one family and then another family and tell us what this means to each family."

The woman, who said she is caring for her brother's children while he and his girlfriend are both in jail, doesn't think it is fair that she might lose her home if one of her nieces or nephews runs afoul of the law. Housing authority officials hope the Spring Festival will become an annual event.

Schultz's letter to Bellstein, prompted her to contact the Sanford Herald.

Bellstein writes: "On October 29, 1994, an innocent young man was shot as he sat in his car in traffic. He is now a C-6 quadriplegic and faces paralysis for the rest of his life."

Vincent Kenon, case # 94-3413, walked up to Steven's car and just shot him without even saying a word — just because he felt Steve cut him off in traffic.

Another senseless crime on yet another innocent victim.

Please write a letter to Judge Ralph Smith, Circuit Judge, 301 S. Monroe St., Tallahassee, FL 32301.

Vincent Kenon has been convicted of this senseless act of violence and Judge Smith has the authority to give him a life sentence without the chance of parole.

Please help us keep criminals off the street and let them know we won't take it anymore, by expressing your concerns to Judge Smith prior to Vincent Kenon's sentencing on April 17, 1996.

We feel like this is the least he should get for ruining Steven's life and the lifelong suffering for him and his family.

New drug improves blood flow

ORLANDO — A new drug that improves blood flow by preventing constriction of blood vessels to the heart could help a select group of patients at risk for heart attack and sudden death. University of Florida researchers reported March 26 at the American College of Cardiology's annual meeting.

Researchers found the drug Quinapril prevented constriction of the large, atherosclerosis-prone arteries on the heart's surface in patients with abnormalities of the vessels' inner linings. The drug had the same effect on smaller blood vessels. Study participants all had a condition called endothelial dysfunction.

Quinapril is believed to influence these large and small arteries by blocking the generation of a potent smooth muscle-constricting hormone called angiotensin II and preventing the breakdown of bradykinin, a beneficial hormone that improves blood flow.

Free brochure on back pain

HOUSTON — You don't have to tolerate back pain. Preventive measures can help. For example, when seated for prolonged periods, "sit tall" with your hips pushed back in the chair and your thighs parallel to the floor. This and other tips are in a free brochure available from Houston's Baylor College of Medicine. U.S. residents can obtain a copy of the brochure by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to: "Back Pain," Office of Public Affairs, Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, Texas 77030.

Sleepy drivers should watch fatigue

HOUSTON — A driver who falls asleep at the wheel may be out only two or three seconds, but that's enough to produce deadly consequences. According to the U.S. Department of Transportation, 58,000 sleeping-driver accidents occur annually, and 1,500 are fatal. Although micro-sleep episodes are brief, a fast-moving car could go the length of a football field during that time.

Drivers should watch for warning signs of fatigue: wandering thoughts and inability to concentrate, problems keeping eyes focused and head up, inability to recall the last town passed, frequent yawning, accidental tailgating, and car drifting between lanes.

Noxious apple weed returns

IMMOKALEE — As the weather warms, there may be bad news for farmers and ranchers, as well as anyone with a lawn. The dreaded Tropical Soda Apple Weed is back.

Public awareness spread last fall about the Tropical Soda Apple Weed — a thorny, noxious weed that overruns pasture grass and impacts the profits of Florida farmers every year.

The green, broad-leaved plant grows quickly — up to a foot tall in less than two months. It bears a small, seed-filled fruit that turns from green to yellow when it matures. For homeowners concerned about their lawn, the weed will not become a problem if the lawn is mowed every week or once every two weeks said Jeffrey Mullahey, a scientist at the University of Florida's research and education center in Immokalee. If the Tropical Soda Apple Weed does appear, Mullahey suggests that homeowners "dig it up and remove it that way, or spray it with a herbicide like Roundup."

Folic acid helps prevent birth defects

GAINESVILLE — Research by two University of Florida food scientists contributed to the federal government's recent decision requiring the addition of folic acid to some food products to help prevent birth defects, anemia and heart disease.

"Under new Food and Drug Administration regulations, folic acid will be added to enriched breads, flour, pasta and other grains," said Lynn Bailey, professor with the UF's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences. "We believe this new regulation will help women of childbearing age consume the recommended 400 micrograms of folic acid per day to reduce the risk of birth defects."

New clinic for spine care

GAINESVILLE — Nearly 90 percent of all Americans suffer a low back injury sometime in their lives. This type of injury can set off an often frustrating cycle of medical office visits — from the family physician to physical therapy, X-rays and sometimes a surgeon — often with weeks or months of waiting between appointments.

The SpineCare Center, a new program of the University of Florida College of Medicine and the UF Brain Institute, will put an end to the waiting between visits by housing all specialists in one place. The clinic is located in the Diagnostic Physicians II Clinic at the UF Health Science Center.

For more information contact Vicki Fooks, Health Science Center Communications at (352) 392-2621.

Healthcare system affiliates with clinic

ORLANDO — Central Florida Hotel Motel Association (CFHMA) Allied member HouseMed/Medi + Clinic has affiliated with Orlando Regional Healthcare System (ORHS).

HouseMed/Medi + Clinic has provided 24-hour hotel house-call service with Florida-licensed physicians for more than 11 years. Sandra (Sandi) L. White is president of both companies and is coordinating the expansion and relocation of ORHS' Buena Vista Clinic, now called Medi + Clinic.

"Sand Lake Hospital, a part of ORHS and Buena Vista Walk-In Clinic have enjoyed a close working relationship with White's companies, HouseMed and Medi + Clinic, for several years," says J. Michael Rowe, president and CEO of Orlando Regional Health Affiliates (ORHA). "With Orlando Regional's expansion and relocation of our Buena Vista Clinic, we have contracted with White to manage our clinics."

A headache? Is it all in your head?

Special to the Herald

Your head is pounding. Is it a migraine or tension headache? Perhaps neither. It could be sinusitis. Sinusitis is an inflammation of the nasal cavities located above, behind and below the eyes that can cause symptoms similar to migraines and tension headaches.

"The pain and discomfort caused by a sinus headache affects the entire head. Analgesics, such as aspirin, only provide temporary relief for a sinus-related headache, because they don't treat the underlying sinus inflammation and infection," explains Michael Kaliner, M.D., medical director, Institute for Asthma and Allergy at Washington Hospital Center in Washington, D.C.

Refer to the chart at right to help you differentiate among headaches.

There is no single cure for sinusitis. However, the symptoms of sinusitis can each be treated effectively.

A variety of prescription medications are available to help treat your sinusitis symptoms. Many physicians prescribe antibiotics to sterilize the sinuses and free them of infections and decongestants, such as Syn (trademark)-Rx to help relieve congestion, shrink swollen nasal tissue and promote drainage.

In addition, topical corticosteroids, for example Dex-cacor Turbinaire (trademark) can be prescribed to quickly reduce and prevent sinus inflammation.

Analgesics such as acetaminophen, aspirin or ibuprofen provide temporary relief of the pain associated with sinusitis.

If you think that you may be suffering from something more than just a headache, make an appointment with your physician, who can determine the cause of your symptoms and recommend an effective treatment plan.

HEADACHES

TYPE	CAUSE(S)	DESCRIPTION
Muscle tension	Headache due to muscle strain, stress or lack of sleep.	Dull, intermittent, mild to moderate pain to the forehead; general feeling of tightness or stiffness often felt in the back of the neck.

Easter goodies

Residents of Hillhaven Healthcare Center in Sanford hosted an Easter egg hunt for 25 children from the Sanford Child Development school recently. Residents hid over 300 plastic eggs. Leigh DeVane and Seminole High School student LaShonda Denmark assisted in the hunt. Pictured: Teachers Valorie McQueen and Sheryl Boykin congratulate students Shaquille Little, Malik Williams and Allisa Hayes, who found the three special eggs for prizes.

Long-time Sanford resident Henry Moore was the grand marshal of the Lakeview Nursing Center annual Easter Hat Parade. He was joined

"This is too cool," said Mark Johns of Deltona.

The eight year-old said he'd been coming to the hunt as long as he could remember and the addition of things like Radio AAHS made it "so much cooler" than before.

"I will definitely come back next year," he said.

Meanwhile, at Lee P. Moore Park, several hundred kids searched for about 3,000 brightly colored plastic eggs filled with goodies. Tired hunters were treated to punch and cookies.

Four happy youngsters in each age category found the special golden eggs, entitling them to go home with giant Easter baskets filled with toys and candy.

Golden egg winners in the egg hunt were Weldon Bridges, Nick Bryant, Rowdy Miller and Courtney Addington.

Software firm relocates

From staff reports

HEATHROW — Seagate Software, Storage Management Group (SMG), has announced it is relocating from Lake Mary to Heathrow International Business Center, and will add about 175 jobs during the next three years.

The storage management software and services company will lease a Class-A 100,821 square-foot office building at 400 International Parkway in the Pizutti, Inc., development.

Incentives offered by Seminole County totaled approximately $300,000.

"To maintain its leadership position in the backup and storage management software market, Seagate Software needed room to grow," said SMG President Kevin Assouz. "Heathrow, with its upscale amenities and ideal location, was the perfect solution."

Seagate Software, SMG, employs 225 people in Central Florida, and is expected to grow to 400 before the end of the decade.

"Pizutti is excited to add a high-profile company such as Seagate Software to the tenant mix at Heathrow," said Clifford D. Alken, Pizutti senior vice president of development.

Incentive requests rise

From staff reports

As growth continues in the area, two more businesses have applied to the Seminole County Commission for inclusion in the Economic Incentive program.

The companies have been identified as Laser Photonics, Inc., of Orlando, and Phoenix International, Ltd., of Maitland.

The requests are scheduled for discussion before the commission and planning and development officials Tuesday, during the regular County Commission meeting.

Each of the two companies has reportedly met all requirements for applications, including meeting certain employee salary levels, and the promise of new hires which can be made because of the expansion/relocation.

Laser Photonics plans to invest $1.5 million in a new development in Seminole County. With a recommended $75,000 of incentive funds, the county staff has estimated the county will have a return through ad valorem taxes within 3.8 years.

Phoenix International Ltd., has requested a total of $240,000, but the county staff has reduced the recommendation to $180,000. The company reportedly expects a capital investment of $8.7 million through the relocation.

County staff has estimated the capital investment represents a return on countywide ad valorem taxes within 1.1 years.

Sanford Navy Petty Officer Brown top performer on warship

By KEVIN COPELAND
Special to the Herald

ONBOARD USS MONTEREY — Navy Petty Officer Kenneth Brown, son of Marion Shaw of Sanford, was one of a few sailors on his Mayport, Fla.-based ship chosen to meet personally with Secretary of the Navy John Dalton during the secretary's visit to the Adriatic Sea.

Brown joined the Navy in 1983, six years after graduating from Sanford's Seminole High School. As a boatwain's mate onboard the guided missile cruiser USS Monterey, Brown keeps the exterior surface of the ship in good condition, maintains equipment on the ship's deck and operates small boats.

Monterey just completed the last stages of a six-month deployment to the Mediterranean Sea area. It was part of the aircraft carrier USS America battle group that supported NATO operations in the Adriatic Sea off the coast of Bosnia. The ship returned to Mayport Feb. 24.

Guided missile cruisers, such as Monterey, are one of the most powerful ships ever put to sea. They are designed to protect a battle group against all threats from above, on or below the sea. The computer-based AEGIS weapons system is the heart of the ship's war-fighting capability. It centers around a powerful radar that enables the crew to detect, track and fire on more than one hundred targets at a time.

The Secretary of the Navy, the civilian head of the Department of the Navy, is responsible for the operation and efficiency of the U.S. Navy and U.S. Marine Corps.

During his visit, he met with thousands of sailors and Marines on ships based off the coast of Bosnia on a variety of topics, and fielded questions from them. He emphasized his commitment to keeping deployments to six months in duration or less. The secretary closed his session by asking the sailors and Marines to remember two words:

Gratitude and pride. I'd like to express my gratitude for the great job you've done here. Thank you for the sacrifices you make for our country and the sacrifices you made for this particular deployment."

Senior Chief Kevin Copeland is a journalist assigned to Navy Public Affairs Center, Norfolk, Va.

Activities of neighborhood children

Joyntie Mae Jones DeFoor remembered the fun the children in her neighborhood had while she was growing up. This would be the area near Sanford Grammar School in the 1940s.

Since there weren't enough people to divide up by sex, both boys and girls would play baseball together. They also played German Spy, Rudolph Smith had his own chemistry set and would make the best dirt bombs.

The Smiths had a little house in their yard which was a sort of clubhouse for the boys. When they finally let the girls in, they tried to put curtains at the windows.

There was a park near West Side Primary that the children called "Suicide Park." According to Joyntie Mae, a couple was supposed to have committed suicide there, and the kids were sure that they saw bullet holes in a tree.

There was an old warehouse across from this park that was supposed to be vacant, but the kids convinced themselves that there was something going on as they would often see people going in and out of it at night. They believed it so strongly that they disguised their voices and called the police.

No jobs for girls

When trying to find an after school job, Joyntie Mae and Rosemary Salisbury found that there wasn't much that a girl could do. The Sanford Herald wouldn't let them deliver papers, giving an explanation that sometimes the paper was late and it wouldn't do for a girl to be out after dark. Also the bowling alley wasn't in the least in favor of girl pin setters.

Summer activities

Joyntie Mae remembered that quite a few kids would attend vacation Bible school at all the different churches throughout the summer.

She remembered the city's summer recreation program during which they made various crafts, were taken to Lake Mary for a swim, and sometimes the fire truck would turn on its hoses to give them respite from the heat.

Busby injured in Spring Game

TALLAHASSEE — Florida State's first team, dressed in Garnet, had little difficulty whipping the Gold reserves 31-0 Saturday, but the big news was an ankle injury to starting quarterback Thad Busby.

Busby suffered ligament damage to his left ankle on the second series after he had completed a 7-yard pass on a rain-slickened field to Andre Cooper and was tackled by Daryl Bush.

Team physician Doug Henderson scheduled x-rays later Saturday and said a decision would be made Monday on Busby's injury.

With Busby sidelined, placekicker Scott Bentley took over and actually handled both offenses for a while in the first half after No. 2 signal caller Dan Kendra missed part of the second quarter with a hand injury.

Kendra completed 3 of 9 passes for 100 yards, his biggest completion a 58-yard scoring throw to freshman Randy Moss in the fourth period.

Bentley, who also kicked three straight field goals from 55 yards during the halftime break, completed 4 of 15 attempts for 89 yards including a 40-yard scoring throw to Andre Cooper, who caught 4 passes for 131 yards.

Bentley, who kicked a 45-yard field goal in the opening quarter, and walk-on Corey Brooks each ran for 7-yard touchdowns.

SANFORD — Take that state baseball poll voters.

While not one Seminole County squad is getting so much as a vote in the state poll, the locals proved this past week in the Big Blue Bonanza baseball tournament at Lake Brantley and Seminole high school's that there is some pretty good baseball talent in the area.

The four county teams that took part in the event had a remarkable run as they combined to post a 13-3 record.

The host Patriots came out with the championship and a 4-0 record, while Seminole, Lake Mary and Oviedo all went 3-1 and knocked off several state ranked teams in the process.

Lake Mary closed out its four games in the tournament by edging past First Coast from Jacksonville 4-1, then blasting Fletcher from

Scholarship winner returns to thank woman's club

Poised and articulate, Patricia (Pat) Evans, MBA, told a poignant story about how a shy young woman got her start on the road to higher education through the Sanford Woman's Club when she addressed the club Wednesday.

She went on to relate how this woman, in 1986, was the recipient of the club's scholarship presented annually to a deserving woman returning to the classroom through a scholarship fashion show and luncheon.

The recipient, Pat said, received her AA degree at Seminole Community College and realized she needed more education to achieve her goal as a teacher and administrator. In 1988, this same shy woman applied for the annual scholarship again. This single mom, the winner, studied and worked hard for two more years toward her bachelor's degree. Not completely fulfilled with her bachelor's degree, she struggled and continued her education and earned her coveted MBA two years later.

"I am that woman," the attractive, humble, teary-eyed woman told the club members.

Pat explained to the clubwomen that today she is coordinator of the Community Education Programs at SCC and also teaches the GED classes there two evenings a week, thus reaching her goal as teacher, administrator, thanks to the woman's club.

At the conclusion of her inspiring address, Pat received a standing ovation from the members who were obviously very proud of their protegee.

Mary Anne Cleveland was chairman of the education committee at the time Pat received her scholarships. The annual scholarship will be awarded at the May meeting of the club. For application information, call Mary Anne, 333-0311, or Joanne Lucas Bourg, 333-2357.

DeLores Lash, club president, presided over the business meeting and heard routine reports.

Second vice president Faye Siler inducted the following into membership: Bunny Hardwick, Peg Jones, Judy Jones, Edith McNeill and Kathy Krasnoff.

Gail Hill-Smith, a club member who has served the Florida Federation of Women's Clubs as Director of Junior Clubs for the past two years, spoke on a children's program being sponsored by the federation. For information, call her at 539-2820.

Club members who have been recently hospitalized are Dorothy McReynolds and Winifred "Bill" Gielow.

Helen Kaminsky was recognized for having walked 108 miles since January with the Senior Friends program.

Kathy Krasnoff, senior club sponsor to the Junior Woman's Club, announced the juniors will host a Mother's Day Garden Tea honoring the seniors on May 11, at 2:30 p.m., at the clubhouse.

The president announced that the Lake Mary-Heathrow Festival of the Arts will present a scholarship to a senior at Seminole High School on behalf of the woman's club. This presentation is in recognition of the club's support during the festival last fall. She also announced that her Honorary Caring and Sharing Awards were presented to Winifred "Bill" Gielow and Minnie Meriwether. The president also informed the clubwomen

Director-musician honored for service

Fascination with the piano has been a major part of the life of pianist Gloria Barber Williams since the age of three. She was born in Chicago, Ill. to John and Christine Barber. Williams' obsession with the piano led her to pursue a music career. Williams' mother says whenever she saw a piano she wanted to just play, play, play.

Williams says it was "Amazing Grace" that led her mother to Earl Estes (during the '40s when segregation was rearing its ugly head). Estes was white, a retired concert pianist, extremely talented, and a kind, generous person. He wanted to meet this talented little girl. Being the incredible man Estes was, Williams said he made arrangements for her to travel 20 miles by bus to her piano lessons; she was only 5 1/2 years old. An old upright piano with a good tone started the practice sessions held at home for Williams. She is thankful to her mom for the lessons and tells her often how appreciative she is.

By the time she was 9, Williams said she was playing for her church, Second Baptist, Rock of Ages Baptist in Illinois. She was so good that her pastor was letting her play for other ministers to help them get their musical programs started. She received her basic musical foundation before the age of 13, the age when she had to stop taking lessons.

After moving to Sanford, and another 20 years after graduating from high school, Williams auditioned and won a music scholarship to attend Seminole Community College where she obtained her first college degree. She was married and the mother of six children and a widow at an early age. She has served and trusted her Master and has been able to incorporate her musical talents in Christian worship and with music lovers everywhere.

SANFORD

Highlighting her music career has been her teaching career. She is employed as music instructor at Spring Lake Elementary School where she was elected Teacher of the Year for 1991-92. The children love to go to her music classes. The faculty says she achieves love and respect from her students with her knowledge and enthusiasm for all types of music. Her wide variety of teaching techniques makes for a high-level and enjoyable method of learning in her classroom.

Williams' Christian/community involvement centers around her having been director/musician for several churches in the Sanford/Orlando area. She has served New Bethel Baptist, Mt. Moriah Primitive Baptist, First Shiloh Baptist Church, Trinity United Methodist Church, New Mt. Calvary Baptist Church, Sanford, Hurst Chapel AME Church, Orlando. She is presently director/musician for Progress Missionary Baptist Church. In March, she was honored for her outstanding service to Progress Church and for her eight years of service to the Martin Luther King Celebration Choir and for the two years she served as their director/organist.

Her involvement in civic opportunities has seen her compose original music for the Georgetown Folk Opera celebrating the life of blacks in Sanford.

Williams says because of her community and church activities, she has received many opportunities to meet and work with people from all walks of life. Because of this experience, she says, her horizons have been broadened and her knowledge expanded. She says she is thankful and blessed.

She will be among the 1996 recipients to receive the Central Florida Gospel Music Lifetime Achievement Awards to be presented by the Sanford/Central Florida Interdenominational Musicians' Guild on July 20.

This past January, during the city of Sanford's Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. celebration, Williams was honored for her outstanding service to the MLK Celebration Choir.

Sharing her musical talent is daughter, Andrea Hayes, who is soloist and director of the Young Adult Choir of St. John Metropolitan Baptist Church. Son Derrick Hayes lives in California; daughter Deandre Hayes resides in Sanford. Son Sgt. Michael Hayes is a flight medic for the U.S. Army in Texas. She shares her love of music with 19 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. Williams says, "To God, be the glory for her success in life."

The play will star local talent and music by the Saints under the direction of the Rev. Grant. Pastor Maurice Bennett portrays the father of the prodigal son.

Wolf hybrids will show wild genes sooner or later

DEAR ABBY: Recently my husband's sister told us she bought a wolf-dog puppy from a couple she knows who raises them. The pup is about 3 months old and is 75 percent wolf.

I have expressed my concerns to her about the safety of keeping such an animal as a pet. She has two sons who are 13 and 15.

She says a lot of people keep wolf-dogs as pets in her state (Arkansas), and there doesn't seem to be any problem with them.

She is open to any information I can find for her on the subject, and she's told her sons that if there is any problem with the animals, she will get rid of the puppy.

That's fine, but I'd hate to have one of her children attacked and injured.

I have children her sons' ages, and have told her they are not allowed to go near this animal. She's coming to visit us next summer and plans to bring her wolf-dog along.

Abby, do you have any information or advice on these wolf-dogs? Thanks for any help you can give me.

WORRIED IN VISALIA, CALIF.

DEAR WORRIED: Although owners may argue that some wolf-dog hybrids are less aggressive than some breeds of dogs, the experts are nearly unanimous that owning a pure wolf or a hybrid is a bad idea.

After reading your letter, I located an article by Jack Hope in the June 1984 issue of Smithsonian magazine. It states that as most wolves and wolf hybrids approach sexual maturity (at about 2 years of age), the vast majority begin behaving as the pack-hunting predators their wild genes have predisposed them to be.

"As all owners agree, the animals treat humans as other wolves. But, genetically programmed for the ongoing struggle with pack mates for food and leadership, they have no compunctions about challenging the dominant householder — usually the male — with warning growls and a flurry of bites (usually not deep bites) for his steak dinner or easy chair, or even for the attentions of his spouse.

"How to curb unwanted behavior is a subject of debate. When only swatted or yelled at, the wolves may not turn tail but years the family had duty at several ports of call before coming to Sanford in 1964 where Sam was stationed at Sanford Naval Air Station until his retirement in 1968.

Sam has an outstanding military record, having earned the Purple Heart and other medals. He came up through the ranks and retired as a lieutenant commander after 28 years in the Navy. He was a navigator and bombardier.

The Cobeaus began building their dream retirement home on the Suwannee River in 1970, and he is still working on the home. His Aunt Cece Whitten, formerly of Sanford, and her two cats also live with Bernice and Sam.

The couple have three children, Jo C. Dyer and Paula Adams, Sanford; and Bob Cobeau, New Smyrna Beach. There are six grandchildren.

Bernice and Sam still attend Navy reunions around the country. When the time is right, they plan to travel to New Zealand to celebrate their "many wonderful years together," according to daughter Jo.

Arrangements are being made for a grand group delivery of flowers to be delivered through a Brandon florist. Local friends and family who would like to participate in this delivery may get information from Jo at 682-0808.

Daughters meet

Martha Ashby was hostess at her Virginia Avenue home to the March meeting of the Norman deVere Howard Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy. Delicious refreshments were served to those attending.

A special guest was Emily Joyner of Geneva as well as Julie Wood and a friend, Barbara Sichel gave a report on the recent spring board meeting. Routine reports were given and members displayed Civil War mementoes from family ancestors.

Others, attending were: Carolyn Cornelius, co-hostess; Hazel Cash, Minnie Strickland, Lillian McCall, Jean Wheeler, Juanita Miller, Julia Sartin, Sylvia Myrick, Earline Reddenberry and Toni Hobson.

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

growl and bite instead. Disciplined with a severe beating, they'll retreat — but, wolflike, will attempt the same challenge an hour or a day later — in an endless contest for dominance.

"Banished to the back yard, the wolves or wolf hybrids usually break free of all but the sturdiest chains or enclosures. Without food, confused, they may prowl the neighborhood attacking cats, rabbits, goats, dogs, even horses, all of which they see as prey. Their predatory instincts can also be triggered by humans, especially if those humans happen to be small or infirm, or if they flee or emit a frightened sound.

"Since 1986, nine children in the United States, from toddlers to a 12-year-old, have been killed (and in one case, partially eaten) by wolf and wolf-dog pets. Many more people, both children and adults, have been maimed. While relatively few of these animals actually kill, most of the former owners interviewed for this article report having been bitten."

DEAR ABBY: The letters about tattoos brought back some painful memories.

The first tattoos I ever saw were on a young Dutchman who had come to America after World War II. He had three tattoos on his arm — one for each Nazi concentration camp he had managed to survive.

Years later, I went to Israel and attended a concert at the Mann auditorium. In front of me sat two very elegant, refined-looking ladies. Both were wearing white kid gloves. I can't tell you the horror I felt when I noticed that both of them had numbers peaking out over the tops of their gloves.

Cows add country charm to home

By SUSAN WENNER
Herald Staff Writer

LONGWOOD — A home with a bit of country charm and a lot of love has been the reputation of the atmosphere at Penny Moye's abode. She and her husband, Eric, have opened their home throughout their seven years of marriage to family and friends for a place of refuge or a temporary shelter but all must share some of that space with her cow collection spanning every room.

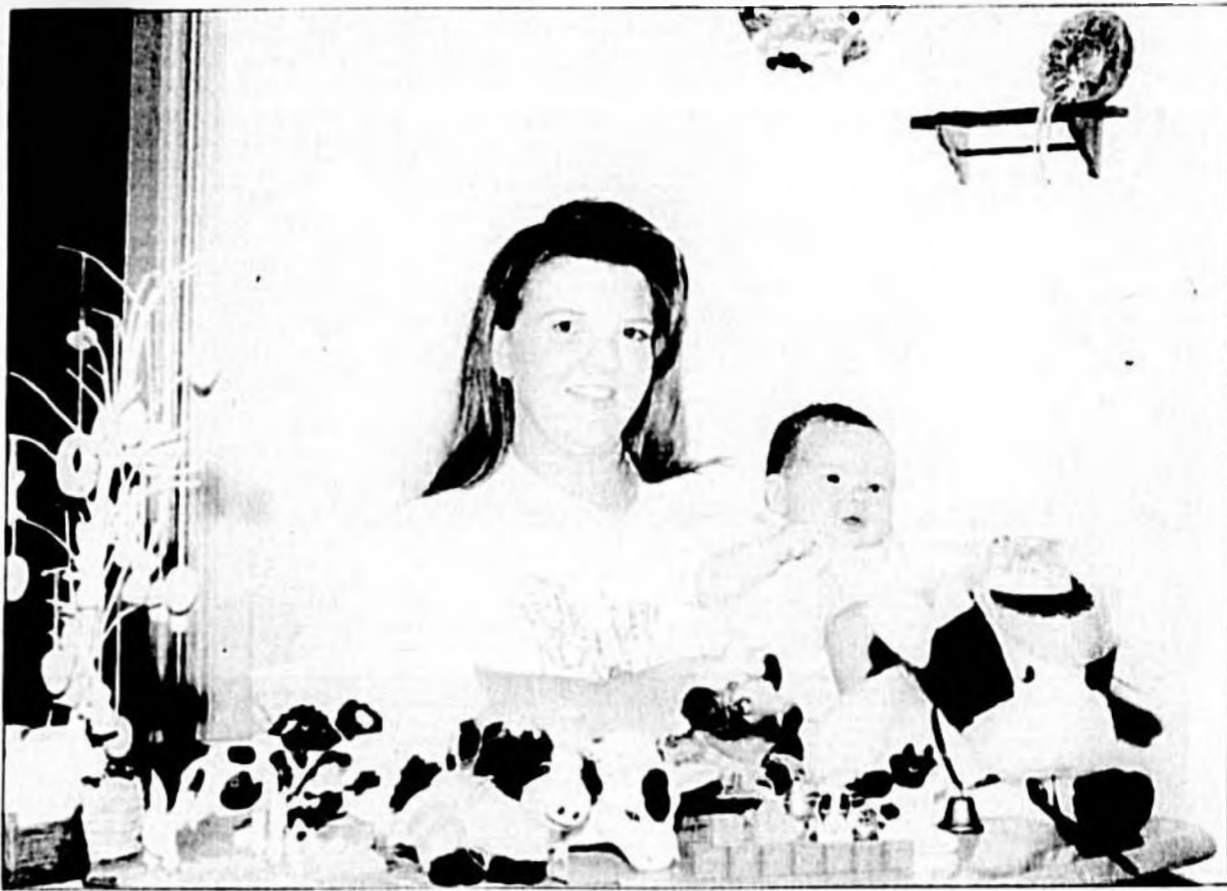

The crowd of lactating beauties has been "utterly" present with smiling faces and barnyard style. With wood, ceramic, stuffed and metal all obtain "top cow" status in this Longwood home.

Black and white hooved hefties range in size from two inches to 18 inches. After three years of collecting they now number as high as 80.

Even when cooking up a little steak and eggs, Moye has found that these dark cow eyes gaze from all around the kitchen from cow dish towels on the rack to placemats, magnets, toothpick holders, reflectors for the glass sliding door, salt & pepper shakers, napkin holders, coasters and her feet always cuddle warmly on the cow rug below.

The cows have taken over the Moye home with soft areas for rest on the master bedroom bed. "My favorite of all my cows is on my bed," she said. "My sister, Wendy, made that one for me. It is made out of a string mop head. It's kind of a pillow rest."

Her sister, Wendy, was named as the person that initiated her interest in cows too. "I mentioned to her I wanted to collect something different," she said. "I didn't want something that everyone else was collecting like ducks and geese. She suggested cows."

She continued by saying, "She made me my first cow. It's a stuffed cow that has a hat on."

Since cows also need a bit of water from time to time many have wandered into the bathroom. Towel holders and wooden figurines reside happily in that space.

Her new baby girl, Abby, has enjoyed that black and white charmers. Since studies show that young babies are very attracted to black and white combinations, Abby has kept her eyes moving in delight. Stuffed cows and a sentimental ceramic model of a mom and her calf set off the decor.

Moye herself has created a few additions of her own. Among the many wreaths and a basket with a cow was named.

Although the collection is yet to be complete, "I'd like to get a border for the kitchen," said Moye. "It has cows grazing by a farmhouse. I also want to make a red barnhouse shadow box shelf for some of my collection to sit in."

Although Moye doesn't have a lot of spare time after caring for her three children, Justin, Nathan and Abby, this housewife does savor a bit of time relaxing with counted cross-stitch and crafts.

Moye and her husband, Eric, and children all attend church at Church of the Good Shepherd in Mattland.

Olde Lake Mary Days 'best ever'

Despite the overcast day, the third annual Olde Lake Mary Days was the best ever. The worst of the rain held off until mid-afternoon. By that time, all of the chicken dinners, hamburgers and hot dogs had been sold. All of the artisans were happy with this year's turnout although the weather did seem to keep a lot of people away. The crowds were good, thanks in large part to the new signs on Lake Mary Boulevard and the Kids Club commercial that ran on WOFL-FOX 35.

This year, one of the best changes was putting the civic group booths in with the arts and crafts booths. It gave the festival a wonderful feeling of community and gave the civic groups more exposure than last year. The Kids Korner was a phenomenal success, thanks to all the groups who were there for the kids. Fox 35 Kids Club had a booth signing up members and giving away Easter videos. Covenant Community Church made everyone happy with a free train ride. Most of the kids got a chance to ride it more than once. And rumor has it that several adults were seen taking a ride with big smiles on their faces.

Girl Scout Troop 148 had a mini-carnival that quite a few kids enjoyed. Grace Christian Church had Easter cards for kids to color. The Easteraurus ones were a big favorite. St. Peter's Preschool had homemade playdough for all the kids in a rainbow of colors. Holy Cross Lutheran Church had crafts for the kids. The Boy Scouts had the biggest display with rope making for everyone to try and a raingutter regatta.

The entertainment this year was great. Among those performing were the Lake Mary Line Dancers, the Lake Mary High Drama Club and the Joyful Noise Choir. The cutest were undoubtedly the Brownies. Girl Scouts from Brownie Troop 512 entertained everyone with a Polynesian dance. Brownie Troop 1335 performed a Cuban dance dressed in Carmen Miranda hats. There were two Oriental dances. Brownie Troop 1050 did an authentic Japanese fan dance and Brownie Troop 629 did an authentic Chinese dragon dance.
