Christmas 'Tis The Season To...

By United Press International
Christmas 1984 is bringing out the best and worst in America, from happy children in New Orleans to brawling shipyard workers in Connecticut and from potholes for sale in posh Palm Springs to a Polish family celebrating freedom in Texas.

In separate statements issued Sunday, both Protestant and Catholic leaders urged the world to hold onto its hope.

Bishop James Malone, the president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, praised the public response to famine in Ethiopia, efforts to mediate a truce in El Salvador and the U.S.-Soviet arms talks.

"Although we recognize the vast agenda of unresolved problems, it seems the world is becoming, step by step, the caring place God means for it to be," he said.

Dr. Philip Potter, the general secretary of the World Council of Churches, said: "Today, in our world of nearly 5 billion people, the vast majority cry out in hope to be delivered from oppression within themselves and inflicted upon them. They yearn to be liberated from fear, death and the threat of death, from poverty and exploitation of every kind, from a loss of meaning in life."

For some, this Christmas season will hold grim memories.

New York police have charged Pedro Cortijo, 23, with homicide as a result of a game of Russian roulette at a Christmas party. Cortijo was arrested Sunday for shooting Wanda Torres, 25, at her apartment. Police said he pointed the gun at three other guests. The revolver "went click, click, click and when it came to Wanda it went off," police said.

In Groton, Conn., a fight broke out Friday after shipyard workers spilled into the streets after a Christmas party. About 500 workers were involved in the brawl near the General Dynamics Corp.'s Electric Boat Division yard. Two men were arrested, but there were no injuries.

In most parts of the country, however, the season is a little brighter.

There were lines outside New Orleans' Superdome as children from the poorest families lined up for a toy giveaway. About 12,000 children received a present, said the sponsor, The Times-Picayune/The States-Item newspapers.

In 21 cities the elderly were able to reach out with holiday greetings (thanks to Merrill Lynch and Co. The stock brokerage allowed the elderly to come into their offices and make free calls to anywhere in the world.

Among the first was a woman in St. Louis, who called her sister in the Soviet Union. She heard her sister's voice, squealed and then launched into rapid Russian. Another St. Louis call went to an island in the South China Sea.

"It was a 90-year-old lady calling her son at the Baptist mission there," said spokesman Arthur De Stefano. "She had not talked to him in 40 years. And guess who answered the phone? She burst into tears."

In Murrsville, Pa., people are looking forward to seeing Joe Hall and his green Cadillac this Christmas. Hall has decked out his convertible with stockings on the doors and a stuffed deer, complete with lit red nose and jingling bells. During the holidays, he also dons a Santa suit and beard and drives around town.

A dilemma confronts the Vic Lukaszewski family of Huntsville, Texas. They will set out their traditional "wilgla," a Polish custom of setting an extra place for the "homeless traveler," but this year they need more than one.

The Lukaszewskis are taking in Solidarity movement member Zbigniew Nieblezacanski, his wife and three young sons. Nieblezacanski fled Poland last January. He and his family arrived in West Berlin and were taken into a World Council of Churches resettlement program. The Huntsville First United Methodist Church agreed to sponsor the family in the United States, which led them to the Lukaszewskis.

Last but not least, last-minute shoppers in posh Palm Springs, Calif., can still get their loved ones that special pothole (for $50) or a personalized street barricade (for $250) or a new fire station (for $600,000).

Mayor Frank Bogert came up with the idea of having residents sponsor city works. One proud new owner of a pothole, however, said he just wanted to fill it to protect his $50,000 car.

Former DUI Prosecutor Jailed For Drunk Driving

By Deane Jordan and Rick Brunson

A Sanford-based assistant state attorney arrested over the weekend for driving under the influence and leaving the scene of an accident probably will not be relieved of prosecuting duties while awaiting the outcome of the charges.

Joe Flood, 27, of 1805-B Landings Drive, Sanford Landings, who until recently prosecuted DUI cases, was arrested at 12:34 a.m. Saturday in Sanford. Police were looking for his car after it was reportedly involved in a minor accident in the parking lot of the Buccaneer Lounge at the Cavalier Motor Inn, 3200 S. Orlando Drive.

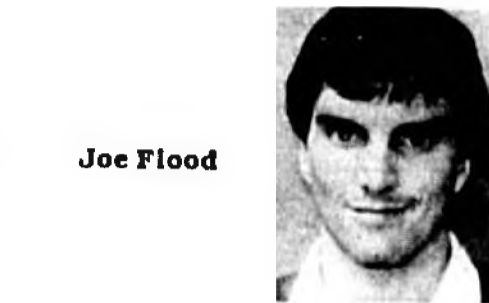

Police were notified of the incident and a short time later pulled Flood's car over into the parking lot at ABC Liquor, 2885 S. Orlando Drive.

According to the arrest report, Flood refused to take a roadside sobriety test. The arrest report does not state whether or not he submitted to a breathalyzer test.

Flood was released without posting the usual $500 bond after Seminole County Judge Alan Dickey called the jail and had him released.

Flood's lawyer, Jack Bridges, called Dickey and asked for the release.

Jail officials confirmed that it is not uncommon for individuals arrested for DUI to be released on personal recognizance if they are well-known in the community and are not a risk for skipping bail and a judge orders that release. Joe Jacobs, 26, a bouncer at the Buccaneer Lounge, said a man entered the bar at about 9:30 p.m. Friday, complaining about having to pay a $2 cover charge.

"He was wobbling around when I was talking to him ... and he had alcohol on his breath," Jacobs said.

During the 2½ hours he was there, the man was "staggering around," and was abusive to employees and customers, Jacobs said.

"He walked up to a member of the band and said, 'You know what your problem is? You're black,'" Jacobs said. He then wheeled around and told bouncer David Jackson, "You're nothing but a tall red-neck," according to Jacobs. After speaking to Jackson, Jacobs said the man told a friend of Jackson's who was standing next to him. "And you're a fat red-neck."

Jacobs said he decided to throw the man out after a waitress and two women customers complained that he "touched" them.

"He said, 'You can't do this to me. I'll prosecute you,'" Jacobs said. "I told him, 'I don't care who you are, you're going out the door.'"

A few minutes later, Jacobs said, the man returned by a side door saying he had to pay his bill. But after he paid, Jacobs said he threw him out again.

Then a woman came into the bar and said someone had backed into two cars and was getting away, Jacobs said.

Jacobs stayed at the door while Jackson called the police.

Flood was arrested about a half hour later after police followed his car up U.S. 17-92 and pulled it over near ABC. Seminole-Brevard State Attorney Douglas Cheshire said today he would wait until after Christmas to take any action in the case. But he said Flood would "probably not" be relieved of duty or reassigned to other cases since he no longer prosecutes DUIs.

"Our offices are not sufficiently staffed that a person can be suspended indefinitely," Cheshire said. "But I can assure you he will not be teaching any Counterattack programs."

Counterattack is a state-sponsored driving school for those who have been arrested for DUI.

Always A Scrooge

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — State police officials say a trooper who ticketed one of the area's most popular Santa Clauses for driving around in an illuminated car was not suffering from a "Scrooge syndrome."

For the past seven years, Bob Derzendezes, 27, of Rocky Hill has been decking his car with illuminated ornaments, donning a Santa Claus suit and driving around while blasting Christmas songs from a loudspeaker mounted on the roof.

This year, an officer identified only as "Trooper Shane" gave Derzendezes a $100 ticket in Wallingford for having the wrong color lights on his car and too many of them.

Police spokesman Adam Berluti Thursday defended Shane's action, saying Derzendezes' 1975 Chevrolet is a safety hazard.

"The law enforcement action was definitely justified. It's not part of a Scrooge syndrome. It's not in the holiday spirit to cause an accident," he said.

Small Derzendezes, who passes out small amounts of cash to street people during the holiday season, said, "We just go out and have a little fun, get into the Christmas spirit, and somebody doesn't like it."

"There's always a Scrooge," he said, "no matter what."

At Least 16 Dead In Terrorist Train Bombing

SAN BENEDETTO, Italy (UPI) — Rescuers searched the twisted wreckage of two express train cars today for survivors of a terrorist bombing that killed at least 16 Christmas travelers and injured more than 100 others, six critically.

Police said the attack was almost certainly the work of rightists, noting that Italy's left-wing terrorist gangs have always eschewed the use of explosives.

The Interior Ministry set the death toll for the Sunday night bombing at 16 and said a 17th person was believed dead. The ministry reported 116 people injured.

Hospital reports said 90 people were still in Bologna hospitals today — six in critical condition.

Police reports during the night put the death toll as high as 29 and listed some 200 injured. But a spokesman for the Bologna prefect's office, Carlo Testori, said the report was erroneous and blamed it on initial confusion resulting from the severe mutilation of many victims.

Many of the train's 700 passengers were southerners headed for the Alps for Christmas skiing holidays.

Testori said 325 rescue workers remained at the Apennine mountain tunnel where the blast ripped through the 14-car Naples to Milan express. But leaders of the operation said they did not expect to find more bodies.

All 14 cars were pulled out of the 12-mile tunnel north of Florence and one of two lines had been restored.

Firefighters, however, were still trying to get inside some compartments of the two cars that were virtually demolished by the blast.

Four right-wing terrorist groups telephoned newspapers and the Italian news agency

ANSA to claim responsibility for the attack. A fifth caller claiming to represent the Marxist Red Brigades attributed the attack to that group, but there were several disclaimers from other callers.

Police said they believed right-wing groups were responsible.

Italian President Sandro Pertini broke off a vacation in the northern resort of Val Gardena and traveled to Bologna's Maggiore Hospital to comfort some of the injured being treated there.

Authorities said they believed the explosion was caused by a single time bomb probably placed between the second-to-last and third-to-last cars. The blast triggered a second, smaller explosion in a fuel canister.

"It was tremendous," said one Italian woman heading north to spend Christmas with her sister.

"Smoke, flashes of light, then utter darkness and so many windows in shivers of glass."

"The first time we went in we couldn't get to the train because of the toxic cloud of smoke that made it tough to breathe," said Romeo Marchi, one of the first doctors to reach the scene.

Longwood Pedestrian Among 262 Killed Nationwide

29 Nabbed In Holiday DUI Crackdown In Seminole

By Staff, Wire Reports

A Longwood pedestrian was struck and killed in Longwood Sunday, the only traffic-related fatality recorded in Seminole County so far during the long Christmas weekend.

Nationwide bad weather and large numbers of drunken drivers have already pushed the number of traffic deaths during the holiday weekend past last year's figure.

Frank Armstrong, 54, of Wildmere Street, was killed at 3:05 a.m. while in the area of U.S. Highway 17-92 and Laura Street, according to Longwood homicide investigator Tom Jackson.

Jackson said the male driver of the vehicle — whom he would not identify — stopped and tried to give aid to Armstrong who was dead on arrival at Florida Hospital-Altamonte Springs. While the Florida Highway Patrol said the death was alcohol-related, Jackson said there was no indication the driver of the vehicle had been drinking.

Armstrong is the 42nd traffic-related fatality in Seminole County this year.

Nationwide, a United Press International count early today showed at least 262 people had died on the nation's highways since the Christmas weekend began at 6 p.m. Friday. Last year, 238 people died during a three-day holiday weekend.

The National Safety Council has said between 370 and 470 people may die in traffic accidents before the long holiday weekend ends at midnight Tuesday.

Florida led the nation with 28 deaths. Traffic accidents killed 22 people in Texas, 18 in California, 16 in Georgia and Wisconsin and 14 in Virginia.

Five people were killed Sunday when a 19-year-old Virginia Tech student fell asleep at the wheel in Southampton County, Va., and veered into the path of a car carrying six people. The student, who was leaving a Christmas party, died along with four people in the other car.

The following persons were arrested in Seminole County this weekend on a charge of driving under the influence during a special holiday crackdown on drunk driving:

—Daryl Kenneth Parkhurst, 21, of 251 Tradewind Road, Winter Springs, was arrested at 2:40 a.m. Sunday after his car was seen traveling 110 mph in a 40 mph zone on state Road 436, Altamonte Springs.

—David Torrance, 51, of 2500 Howell Branch Road #177, Winter Park, at 8:40 p.m. Sunday on Howell Branch Road, Casselberry, after a sheriff's deputy warned him not to drive.

—Tony Evan Jacobs, 27, of Brunswick,

IN BRIEF

Group Of Haitian Refugees Sneaks Into Wrong Port

MIAMI BEACH (UPI) — A group of Haitian refugees trying to sneak into the United States were apprehended after their boat lost power and was towed to a public harbor near the U.S. Border Patrol's local headquarters.

An unsuspecting crew on a pleasure boat spotted the stalled, overloaded 25-foot speedboat drifting about a half mile off Miami Beach and towed it to Pelican Harbor. A marine patrolman was there about to begin his rounds.

"The pleasure boat towed them without even knowing they were being smuggled in from Bimini," Perry Rivkind, District Director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Miami, said Sunday.

The marine patrolman notified the Border Patrol, which detained all 26 refugees, including an 8-year-old Bahamian girl and a Ghanaian man.

Rivkind said most of them would spend the night at the Krome Avenue Detention Center, where they would await deportation hearings.

Two others were identified as the boat's operators and said they had organized the smuggling trip for an employer they would not identify, Rivkind said. Both could be charged with transporting illegal aliens, a felony punishable by a maximum of five years in jail.

Hurricane Lili Loses Power

MIAMI (UPI) — A rare December hurricane, the first in 30 years, lasted three days before it was downgraded to a tropical storm and a hurricane watch was lifted from the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

Officials at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said Lili was expected to weaken rapidly today. Early today, the center of the tropical storm was about 100 miles north of San Juan, Puerto Rico, moving west at 23 mph.

"It was just a minimal hurricane," said forecaster Gil Clark. "It never was a very strong storm."

The storm's center was deteriorating rapidly under pressure from very strong winds in the upper atmosphere, and Clark said it could be downgraded even further to a tropical depression.

Maximum winds were estimated at 50 mph and gales extended out 100 miles north of the center and 75 miles to the southeast.

Fatal Copter Crash Results In New Safety Procedures

ORLANDO (UPI) — The Air Force, apparently spurred by criticism over the crash of a helicopter that killed five people and went unnoticed for 40 minutes during a Trident missile test launch in April, has made sweeping changes in air safety.

The Air Force says it has plugged holes in its launch communications network and ordered a halt to launch countdowns when it cannot account for all its aircraft and ships.

The Air Force and Navy, responding to a list of questions submitted last week, said the safety changes will include the use of a special radar balloon, a fulltime monitor of radio traffic, an increase in the number of people who need to know about secret missions, and mandatory training for those aboard helicopters on how to escape a sinking aircraft.

A CH-3 "Jolly Green Giant" helicopter went down April 7, about 50 miles off the coast of Cape Canaveral, during the Trident missile test launch, killing five crew members. Three others survived.

The Trident countdown continued despite eyewitness reports that an aircraft had gone down. There was a lengthy delay in mounting a rescue effort, even though the helicopter crashed only several hundred yards from the launch submarine and about 1,500 yards from the support ship USS Frank Cable.

A newspaper investigation after the crash showed that nearly 45 minutes passed as the crewmen struggled for their lives aboard the downed craft. Despite reports of the crash and sightings of flares, the newspaper said, the USS Frank Cable did not begin an active search until 40 minutes after the crash.

Bridge Contractor Cited In Faulty Miami Railway

JAMESTOWN, R.I. (UPI) — A federal report says the apparent low bidder for the new Jamestown Bridge over Narragansett Bay was responsible for numerous construction problems on a Florida railway project in 1982 and 1983.

Clarke-Fitzpatrick, the nation's 36th largest construction contractor, submitted an apparent low bid of $63.9 million last Wednesday to build a new bridge between North Kingstown and Jamestown. It was one of six bids submitted.

A 1983 federal Department of Transportation report said the apparent low bidder, then known as Edward B. Fitzpatrick after the company's owner, did most of the work on a $1 billion, 21-mile elevated railway in Miami. Various construction problems were later found, the report said, including poor workmanship and a failure to meet some bid specifications.

Lady Seminoles Open Play Thursday With Streaking Lake Brantley

By Chris Flister
Herald Sports Writer

After falling short in the finals of the Hoop-De-Doo Thanksgiving Tournament, Sanford's Lady Seminoles, the fourth-ranked basketball team in the state (4A) will go after the Lady Hawk Tournament title. The tournament begins Thursday at Lake Howell High and runs through Saturday.

"We've never won the Lady Hawk and this year we have a good shot at it," Seminole coach Ron Merthie said. "We lost in the finals (Orlando Evans) two years ago and in the semifinals (Orlando Edgewater) last year."

Merthie's girls first round opponent is the same team they faced the opening round of the Hoop-De-Doo Tournament, Lake Brantley's Lady Patriots.

The two Seminole County rivals will meet Thursday night at 6. In Thursday's first game, at 2 p.m., Lyman's Lady Greyhounds, making their first ever appearance in the tournament, go up against Evans. Lake Mary battles Winter Park at 4 and the nightcap pits host Lake Howell against defending champion Edgewater at 8.

Lake Brantley took an 11-point lead in the third quarter of that game but Seminole came back to win behind the impressive play of Mona Benton.

Since that game, Lake Brantley has won seven straight including an upset of then top-ranked DeLand.

"They're tough," Merthie said. "Their big girl (Kirsten Dellinger) gave us a tough time and they have some good shooters. We'll be in good shape if we play the way we did against Evans (10-point victory at Evans this past Thursday)."

Prep Basketball

Seminole has received outstanding play from Benton who is averaging over 20 points a game along with the backcourt tandem of Andell "Soul" Smith and Temika Alexander and the inside play of Catherine Anderson and Beatrice Smith. Bench strength for the Lady Tribe comes from Kim Johnson, Anika Mitchell and Revonda Wallace.

Dellinger, a 6-1 senior transfer, leads Lake Brantley in both scoring and rebounding. Starting forwards for the Lady Patriots are Michelle Brown and Cammie Twaddell and the smooth shooting guards are Sherry "Ice" Asplen and Kim Lubenow. Bench strength is provided by Angie May and Ashley Thomas.

Lyman will have a tough task going up against fifth-ranked Evans and senior center Cynthia Williams. Williams poured in 41 points in the Lady Trojans' loss to Seminole. Evans' only two losses of the season came at the hands of Seminole.

Leading the way for Lyman is junior forward Kim Forsyth who has a season high game of 29 points. She is joined in the starting lineup by center Kelly Carman, forward Denise Stevens and guards Latonya Johnson and Chandra Roberts. Bench strength comes from forward Kristie Kaiser and guard Kim Boyle.

Williams' supporting cast includes forwards Denise King and Elonda Elmore and guards

Carolyn Hightower and Denise Lee.

Winter Park's Lady Wildcats go into the tournament with just a 2-7 record, but a number of their losses were to ranked (4A) teams and most of them were close. Winter Park lost two point games to both DeLand and Seminole. Leading the way for Winter Park is center Tina Pinkney.

Lake Mary enters the tournament coming off a disappointing loss to Seminole in which coach Bill Moore said the Lady Rams played their worst game of the season.

Moore hopes the Lady Rams can come back after the holidays and be ready to go for the tournament. Lake Mary's starting five includes center Courtney Hall, forwards Karen DeShetter and Aileen Patterson and guards Kim Averill and Liz Stone. Bench strength comes from Larra Hall, Anquetette Whack and Terri Reynolds.

After losing five starters from last year's team, Lake Howell's Lady Silver Hawks have taken a beating at times this year but they have also beaten a few more experienced teams.

Leading the way for Lake Howell are forwards Jolee Johnson and Patti Rae, center Joyce Shaw and guards Malorie Osgood and Tammy Lewis. Bench strength is provided by Kellee Johnson, Erin Hankins, Kara Stanley and Sherod Keaton.

The Lady Hawks have a tough first round opponent in eighth-ranked Edgewater which has a 7-2 record. Center Tari Phillips and guard Renee Harrison lead the way for the Lady Eagles.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Seattle's Front Line Combines To Snap Clippers' Win Streak

SEATTLE (UPI) — Seattle SuperSonics coach Lenny Wilkens felt it would be smart to attack the Los Angeles Clippers with a strong inside game. Judging from the results he's a genius.

His front line of Tom Chambers, Jack Sikma and Tim McCormick combined for 71 points to lead Seattle to a 107-97 victory over the Clippers Sunday, snapping L.A.'s six-game winning streak.

"We wanted to go inside tonight. We played a smart game," said Wilkens.

The Sonics dramatically shifted the momentum of the game in the final five minutes of the third quarter when Wilkens went with his big lineup — Chambers at 6-foot-10, Sikma, 6-foot-11, and McCormick, also 6-foot-11.

Seattle outscored Los Angeles 14-8 to end the third quarter with a 77-69 lead. Sikma, Chambers and McCormick combined for 12 of those 14 points.

Kerr's Hat Trick Lifts Flyers

United Press International

Philadelphia Flyers coach Mike Keenan got a tie for Christmas.

But he can only wear this one with pride. His Flyers, led by Tim Kerr's fourth career hat trick, downed Washington 7-4 to lift Philadelphia into a first-place deadlock with the Capitals in the Patrick Division.

Both teams have 43 points, but the Flyers (19-9-5) have played two less games. Washington is 18-10-7. Only Edmonton (49) and Montreal (44) have more points.

Murray Craven added two goals to help Philadelphia snap the Capitals' eight-game unbeaten streak.

Elsewhere in the NHL, Boston edged Minnesota 4-3 in overtime, Buffalo nipped St. Louis 3-2, the New York Rangers tied Montreal 3-3, Winnipeg and Los Angeles skated to a 4-4 deadlock, Quebec trimmed Chicago 3-2 in overtime and Calgary eclipsed Vancouver 5-4.

Tribe Adheres To Golden Rule

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Pat Corrales says his Cleveland Indians' pitching staff needs "a veteran who can measure up." So, the Tribe went by the Golden Rule in signing an experienced right-hander Saturday night.

"I think this guy's the sort who'll bust his butt for us," Corrales said of Vern Ruhle, who agreed to a one-year, minor-league contract. "He didn't have a great year last year (Ruhle was 1-9 with a 4.58 ERA for Houston), but I've seen films of him, and I think his motion's good and his stuff's okay. He just had bad luck."

Ruhle, who will be 34 on Jan. 5, is 64-75 with a 3.68 ERA in nine major-league seasons with Detroit and Houston.

McDuffie Leads Jax By Bulldogs

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) — Point Guard Willie McDuffie scored 17 points as Jacksonville University coasted to a 71-47 victory over Mississippi Saturday night in the championship round of the Gator Bowl Basketball Tournament.

McDuffie was aided by Oviedo's Ronnie Murphy and Rod Kittles, each with 10 points. The Dolphins stretched their lead to as many as 26 points twice in the final half.

Jacksonville, 5-3, grabbed an early lead and moved to a 31-17 halftime margin.

Ross Keeps 'Em Crossed, Terps Pull Off Comeback

EL PASO, Texas (UPI) — Bobby Ross admits he wasn't quite sure if his Maryland Terrapins could pull off another comeback victory, so he just kept his fingers crossed.

The Tennessee Volunteers were showing every sign of recording an upset over 11th-ranked Maryland in the 51st Sun Bowl contest.

But Maryland overcame a 21-0 halftime deficit, two turnovers and a 100-yard kickoff return for a thrilling 28-27 victory over the Volunteers Saturday.

Football

"To be truthful, I didn't know if we could come back and win this time," Ross said. "I just told them they were not playing with the character they've shown in past games."

"This team kept coming back all season," he said. "I knew we were capable of playing better, but I didn't know if Tennessee was going to let us."

Abernethy Does It Again

Lady Greyhounds Apply Defense For OT Victory

By Chris Flister
Herald Sports Writer

Friday night, Karen Abernethy's defensive excellence led Lyman to a 4-1 victory over Lake Brantley, Saturday afternoon. It was Abernethy's penalty kick in the fifth overtime period that lifted the Lady Greyhounds to a 3-2 victory over Gainesville Buchholz' Lady Bobcats in the championship match of the Burger King Classic Tournament at Lake Mary High.

While it was Abernethy's penalty kick that provided the winning goal, it was a brilliant save by goalkeeper Sara Cobb on a Buchholz penalty kick that sealed the victory for the Greyhounds.

Although Lyman outshot Buchholz, 31-11, in regulation, the Bobcats managed to convert two of those shots into goals. Lyman also scored a pair of second half goals and the game went into overtime.

There were no goals in the first four overtime periods, the first two were 10-minute periods and the second two five minutes. So the tournament title came down to penalty kicks.

Abernethy was first up for Lyman and she sent a shot past Buchholz keeper Andrea Deyrup. Beth Severy then came on for Buchholz, which advanced to the finals by beating Lake Mary on penalty kicks. Cobb, who took over in goal for the injured Lisa Chatman, made a nice save of Severy's shot to give the Lady Greyhounds the championship.

In regulation play, the two teams battled to a scoreless tie in the first half and both scored a pair of goals in the second. The first goal was scored by Lyman's Kelly Straw on an assist from Bonni Steeves with 25 minutes left in the game.

The Lady Bobcats came back with a pair of unanswered goals to take a 2-1 lead. Sherri Erbes scored both goals, the first coming on an assist by Caren Henderson and the second on Cathy Schackow's assist.

Lyman came back to tie the score late in the second half when Sheila Mandy took a pass from Allison Wright and deposited it in the goal.

The Lady Greyhounds improved to 8-0 with the victory while Buchholz now stands at 6-2-1. Lyman's Dawn Boyesen was selected Most Valuable Offensive Player of the tournament while Deyrup was the defensive MVP.

BRANTLEY TRIMS RAMS
In the third place game Saturday, Lake Brantley played awesome defense en route to a 2-0 victory over Lake Mary's Lady Rams.
Led by junior defender Pam

Soccer

Anderson, the Lady Patriots held Lake Mary to just one shot on goal and that was saved by goalkeeper Leali Hubek.

On the other hand, Lake Brantley took 27 shots on goal and scored once in each half. The first goal was scored by Kristin Palne and the second by Katherine Hawkins.

Lake Mary goalkeeper Laura Hellegard came through with 23 saves Saturday but the Lady Rams couldn't get any offense going against Brantley's stubborn defense.

Lake Brantley improved to 5-1-2 with the win while Lake Mary fell to 5-4-2.

VERO THUMPS TRIBE
After battling to a first half tie Vero Beach exploded for four goals in the second half en route to a 5-1 victory over Sanford's Lady Seminoles in the fifth place game Saturday morning.

Kris Miller scored the first of her four goals in the first half to give Vero Beach a 1-0 lead but Seminole senior Janet Hauck came back to tie the score and it remained 1-1 at halftime.

The Lady Seminoles now stand at 6-2-2 after winning two and losing two in the tournament. Vero Beach improved to 10-1-1 with the win.

DELAND NIPS LYMAN
In boys' action Saturday, Lyman's Greyhounds didn't fare as well as their counterparts as they dropped a tough 2-1 decision to DeLand in the championship game of the Michael E. Keith Christmas Tournament.

Pat Howard booted in Lyman's score to give the Greyhounds a 1-1 halftime standoff.

Karen Abernethy turned in her second great defensive showing to lead the Lyman Lady Greyhounds.

He's 96 And Still Bowling

James Mason cuts a birthday cake in the presence of his bowling buddies at Bowl America in Sanford. Mason, who turned 96 on Dec. 7, is still an avid bowler who gets more than his share of strikes, according to his friends.

Eccentric Self-Denial Puzzles Mom's Family

DEAR ABBY: I just received a huge box from my mother. It cost her a small fortune to send it. In it were bags of potato chips, cookies, candy, cake mix, macaroni and cheese mix, and a pile of clothing she found at garage sales. There were also several books in Norwegian and toys for a baby's bath.

I am 45 years old and on a perpetual diet. Not one piece of clothing is my size or suits my taste. I don't read Norwegian, and my "baby" is a freshman in college!

My mother knows we're all on diets, none of us likes polyester tops or double-knit pants — even if they were the right size.

What can she be thinking of, sending my 150-pound daughter a pink knit suit in a size 6?

My mother is a widow living alone on a tiny fixed income. I've sent her checks, but she sends them back. (She does the same with my brothers.) It pains me to know that she has skimped on food for herself to send me this stuff. We've asked her to skip the presents and use the money to come for a visit, but she pays no attention.

She returns our lovely gifts for Mother's Day, her birthday and Christmas, asking us to use the money for our own families. (She thinks we're hard; we're not!)

How can I get her to stop? I'm really angry. Answer in the paper and I'll send her the clipping.

FRUSTRATED DAUGHTER
DEAR FRUSTRATED: Don't send her this clipping. Instead, have a meeting with your brothers to discuss what I perceive to be a serious problem. Your mother obviously is no longer able to make intelligent decisions. Please visit her as soon as possible and see how she is. Your letter suggests that perhaps the time has come when your mother should not be living alone.

DEAR ABBY: For the benefit of your female readers who are concerned about their privacy in the dressing rooms of department stores, this simple test will quickly determine whether there are two-way mirrors installed.

Place the point of an ordinary pencil to the surface of the mirror, and observe the reflection. If the reflection of the pencil point "touches" the pencil, it's a two-way mirror through which you can be observed from the other side.

If there's a distance of approximately 1/8 to 1/4 of an inch between the actual point and the reflected image, it's proof that it's a one-way mirror, and privacy is assured.

J. LOGAN, LOUISVILLE, KY.
DEAR J.: A big thank-you for the privacy test. It's a citizen's right to know whether he or she is being observed.

DEAR ABBY: Other than plastic surgery, what can you recommend for breast enlargement? I have always been flat-chested and would feel so much better about myself if I could add a couple more inches to my chest measurement.

I've tried creams and exercises, but they don't work, and I can't afford all these gadgets I see advertised. Besides, I heard they don't work anyway. If I had $2,000 to spare, I'd get the surgery, but that's out of the question. Please help me.

FLAT-CHESTED IN MOLINE, ILL.

DEAR FLAT: I know of no "gadgets" that will add inches to your measurements. Get a padded bra — it will solve your problem in nothing flat!

ESO Chapter Reviews Women Of The Bible

Members of the Epsilon Sigma Omicron Chapter of the Woman's Club of Sanford entertained Dec. 19 at the Laurel Avenue home of chapter chairman Pat Foster. Assisting hostesses were Corrine Campbell, Jean Marcel and Jane Pain. Upon entering the festively decorated home guests, immediately caught the happy Christmas spirit that seemed to prevail throughout.

Guest speaker Mrs. Carl (Mary) Williams entertained the group with her delightful description of the Women of the Bible. Chosen from the more than 1,000 women mentioned in the Bible were, from the Old Testament:

— Eve, the first woman created; Sarah, wife of Abraham; Hagar, Sarah's Egyptian handmaid; Miriam, sister of Moses and his watcher as he lay hidden in the bulrushes; Naomi and Ruth, mother and daughter-in-law, who returned to Bethlehem where Ruth worked in the fields of Boaz whom she eventually married; Queen of Sheba, who traveled 1,100 miles to learn from King Solomon; Deborah, Rebekah's nurse; Esther, a Jewess of the family of Kish.

From the New Testament: Lydia, Paul's first convert in Europe; Dorcas, through the prayer of Peter she was raised from the dead; Mary Magdalene, the first person Jesus spoke to after the resurrection; Wives of the Three Wise Men, two who were very charitable and one very selfish; Mary the Mother of Jesus, a 15-year-old girl who was chosen by God to be the mother of Christ.

The account of Mary appropriately ended the Christmastime review.

Mrs. Williams injected her imagination into the Biblical stories of these interesting women as she used modern day female situations for comparison, which added to the enthusiastic interest.

Holiday refreshments were served to the following: Carolyn Cornelius, Kay Hall, Florence Monforton, Charlotte Smith, Mabel Piety, Derry Harris, Edythe George, Beulah Wells, Louise Hayes, Kate Nash, Melba Cooper, Estelle Davis, Esther Penn, Virginia Burney, Bill Gielow, the speaker and hostesses.

Music To Watch TV Series By

NEW YORK (UPI) — Music written for television and films is no longer a perishable commodity.

That's what Mike Post said and he ought to know — individually and with veteran big band arranger Pete Carpenter or lyricist Stephen Geyer, Post has written more television series themes than anyone else working in the medium. His credits include "The Rockford Files," "White Shadow," "Magnum, P.I.," "The Greatest American Hero," "Hardcastle and McCormack," "Riptide," "The A-Team" and "Hill Street Blues."

"In the old days, music for television and films was perishable music," Post said. "It was unobtrusive — it just hummed along there and didn't hurt anybody. That's not so now. It's not unobtrusive anymore and I feel partially responsible."

The man who deserves most of the credit, Post said, is Henry Mancini.

"Mancini would find a musical signature and hang in there with it," he said. "not change the music every two minutes to fit the action. The music would play to an overall scene. All modern-day film composers owe Mancini a debt."

Post explained his own role, saying Mancini's orientation was jazz.

"I was the bridge because I was a rock and roller who learned to read, write and conduct," he said.

Post said he began his career as a rock guitarist when he was 19, took courses in music and eventually became a record producer. The first LP he produced was "The First Edition," featuring a then-obscure singer named Kenny Rogers.

He won a Grammy for best musical arrangement in 1968 for his work on "Classical Gas," and was offered the job of music director for TV's new "The Andy Williams Show."

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

It's right to postpone drawing trumps if you have some losers that you need to ruff. Another reason for waiting to draw trumps is that you need to set up a side suit fast to get rid of some losers. But it's unusual for a declarer to set up that side suit to get rid of winners that may otherwise turn out to be losers.

South won the queen of clubs in dummy and played a heart to the jack. West won the queen and returned a second club. Another heart was played, on which East signaled with the nine of spades. West won the nine of spades. West won the heart ace, played a spade to his partner's ace, and took the setting trick with the ruff of a club.

The hand would have been easier to play if the combined North-South holding in clubs had been weaker. Let's suppose that North's clubs were A-K-x and declarer had three small. Then it would have been easy for declarer to play a spade to the jack at trick two. After all, he would need to get rid of a club loser on a high spade.

The same play is right on the actual deal, even though there are no club losers. Declarer needs to play spades early. He will then be able to jettison his third high club on the third spade, thus depriving West of the ability to ruff a club.

Dreaming Of A White House Christmas

By Ink Mendelsohn
Smithsonian Institution

Santa must have had a hot time fluting a chimney to squeeze down on that first White House Christmas Eve in 1800. Every one of the mansion's fireplaces had been burning brightly — day and night — ever since President John Adams, his wife Abigail and their 4-year-old granddaughter Susanna had moved into the unfinished and bone-chillingly cold "President's House" a month before. The indomitable Abigail burned 20 cords of wood that season in a futile attempt to warm up the cavernous state rooms for two holiday parties.

Congressmen and their wives invited to Adams' Christmas reception fled early in search of more comfortable quarters. A party for Susanna was a great success, however, because the young guests kept warm playing games like Blind Man's Buff. In 1805, at a White House Christmas party honoring Thomas Jefferson's six grandchildren, the guests kept warm by drinking hot toddys and dancing to a hot fiddle — played by the president.

Presidents — and vice presidents — tried to forget the cares of state during the holiday season. Vice President Martin Van Buren, a guest at the 1835 Christmas frolic given by President Andrew Jackson's children for the capital's young set, had to pay a forfeit in a game of Spin the Plate. Standing on one leg, he chanted, "If you don't kiss me I'll run like a turkey." No child — or young lady — volunteered the kiss, and the future president of the United States delighted the children by doing a "turkey trot" across the room.

Refreshments at the Jackson Christmas party were served in the State Dining Room. Master Chef Vivart, hailed as the "Napoleon of Cooks," had concocted candies, cakes and confections of every conceivable design. In the center of the table was a pyramid of "snowballs" interspersed with colored icicles and topped by a golden game cock. Around the table were frozen marvels shaped like oranges, apples, pears, peaches, grapes, corn, carrots, beans, squash; a tiny frosted pine tree with toy animals beneath; and a miniature reindeer standing in a long, shallow goldfish-filled "pool."

After supper, the company retired to the East Room, and the children proceeded to pelt each other with the soft cotton snowballs from the centerpiece, distributed to them for just that purpose. Only the president and some older guests like Dolley Madison were spared. At evening's end, the band struck up a lively tune, and the children marched around the room, bowing to the president and blowing him kisses as they exited. Dolley was reminded, she told Jackson, of the fairy procession in "Midsummer Night's Dream."

A widower, the president had no natural children but was "Uncle Jackson" to four grandnieces and grandnephews, who lived in the White House, and grandfather to the two children of his adopted son. On Christmas in 1835, the children hung their stockings with care in Uncle's bedroom — including one for the president who had "waited nearly seventy years to hang up a Christmas stocking." On the great morning, he found a cob pipe and warm slippers beneath his stocking. The children found a saddle and a bridle, a hobby horse and a drum, dolls, tea sets and rattles beneath stockings groaning with fruit, candy, cakes and nuts. Hans, the German White House gardener, couldn't understand why the Christmas bounty wasn't hung on a beautiful

Holidays Can Be Weighty

NEW YORK (NEA) — More people gain weight during the last six weeks of the year than at any other time. Dr. Dennis Upper of the Department of Behavioral Medicine at Boston's Labey Clinic says, "Some people may add as much as 10 pounds between Thanksgiving and New Year's."

"Many people feel obligated to overeat during the holidays," adds Dr. John Heybach, a psychologist and research specialist in nutrition and health sciences. "They want to show their appreciation to the cook for all the work that went into preparing the meal. They think the best way to do that is by cleaning the plate and asking for seconds."

"Even the most conscientious dieters may rationalize overeating," he says. "They tell themselves they'll start dieting again after the holidays. But many also experience strong feelings of guilt, even as they go back for more."

Coping with the guilt can be trying, he says. "Guilt can lead to depression, anxiety and feeling out of control of your body."

Dr. Upper also says people are more vulnerable to their emotions during the holidays and may overeat to compensate for loneliness, depression or anxiety.

"People who are already overweight are more likely to overeat," he says. "Everyone is susceptible, though, because so much food is available."

Adds Dr. Tom Wadden, a psychologist and assistant professor at the University of Pennsylvania, "Tension can play a role, too. Dieters feel anxious about all the food they're going to be served. To relieve those feelings, they end up overeating. Then they're hit with guilt later."

Dr. Heybach says there is a way to enjoy the holidays without guilt or feeling out of control.

"Exercise shifts the focus away from food and provides a way to burn off extra calories," he explains. "And by tasting a little of everything, you won't feel like you're denying yourself or overdoing it."

Dr. Heybach says that by following a plan incorporating exercise and portion control, dieters can fully enjoy the holidays without emotional fallout. He has recently helped develop a diet based on these principles, called the Setpoint Diet.

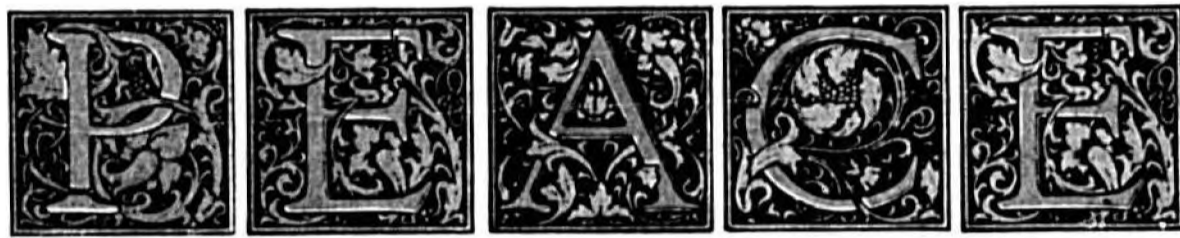

The experts suggest several steps that dieters can take to permit themselves the pleasure of holiday meals and parties:

— Try to plan ahead. If you have some idea of what will be served at the party, you can plan what you will eat.

— Practice portion control. Moderation is the key. Have a taste, don't go back for seconds.

— Snack before you party. Eat some fruit or cheese at home.

— Stop when you're full. Listen to your body. Don't feel obliged to have extra helpings.

Home Sweet White House

Editor's note: Ink Mendelsohn has been with the Smithsonian Institution's news service for some years now, and her colorful stories have been featured in this special Christmas section of the Evening Herald on several occasions. Some readers have asked how "Ink" came by her name. Ink says her name is Ingrid, but as a first-grader in San Francisco the other children had difficulty pronouncing it. "I came home crying and told my parents, 'They called me Ink,' and that was long before I began writing." Ink was in San Francisco in those early years having come to the United States as a refugee from Hitler's Europe. Children of the poor neighborhood in which Ink grew up had trouble pronouncing the "foreign" sounding name.

A sad little girl arrived in November of 1800 at the door of her new home, Susanna Adams, granddaughter of President John and Abigail Adams, was the first child to reside in the building known today as the White House. Abigail's son Charles lay near death. The sorrowing first lady decided to bring the 4-year-old to live in the "President's House" in the new capital at Washington.

The "first home" has sound sandstone walls that have withstood British enemy fire and the ravages of time, but they have not been thick enough to insulate its occupants, even the youngest, from the pain felt by ordinary mortals. Over the years, first families have harbored familiar heartaches and known familiar joys. But a White House child's birth, growing pains, peccadillos, grief, romances, marriage and death are shared with the multitude. The stone White House might just as well be made of glass.

Young Nelly and George Washington Parke Custis, grandchildren of Martha Washington "adopted to rear as my own" by the general, arrived in 1789 at the executive mansion in New York, the nation's first capital. The first "first children" were, according to Martha, "very little of being sick" from all the parades and public attention en route.

G.W. Parke, known as Little Wash and called "Tub" by his grandmama, was an 8-year-old free spirit and a bit spoiled. But his 10-year-old sister Nelly kept a rigid schedule of painting, language and music lessons. She frequently sang at state dinners and for "Congressmen who know not one note from another." Nelly was rewarded, though, by a doting grandpapa who took the children for rides around Manhattan in the elegant presidential carriage, to the theater, the circus and an occasional balloon ascension.

Nonetheless, Nelly was delighted to return to Mount Vernon. "I can hardly believe grandpapa is no longer in office — if it is a dream I hope never to awaken from it," she wrote to a friend. In later years, she would feel differently. "Many first children later found their time in the White House to have been the high spot in their lives," the Smithsonian's Margaret Klapthor observes. Klapthor, curator emerita of political history at the National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C., points out that "like after the

When It's Glittery Christmas On Broadway

The Neon Lights Stay Bright And Everybody Knows The Show Still Must Go On

By Alan W. Petrucelli

They say the neon lights are bright on Broadway. But all over New York City — from the Bowery to the Upper East Side — those lights seem a bit brighter during the holiday season. Whether they're miniature crystals glistening through Tiffany's store windows or colorful balls twinkling from the tree that towers over Rockefeller Center's ice-skating rink, lights help make a Big Apple Christmas something extra special.

Yet not every New Yorker sits around the tree on Christmas morning, slipping hot chocolate and unwrapping gifts. Yes, Virginia, some people actually — bah humbug! — work on Christmas Day. After all, the show must go on.

And it usually does. Christmas (and off) Broadway is rarely a vacation day for working actors and actresses. When the show does go on — and on Christmas, most shows go on at 3 p.m. — the holiday spirit fills the air backstage and on stage.

No show in town fills the air with a more festive mood than Radio City Music Hall's extravaganza, "The Magnificent Christmas Spectacular." Year after year, more than 500,000 people flock to the famous showplace to see the "Living Nativity" — complete with sheep, camels and horses — unfold before their eyes. They also watch those 36 tap-happy Rockettes recreate the popular story of "The March of the Wooden Soldiers."

There's a lot of fun on stage.

Rockette Catherine Beatty says the festivity continues offstage as well.

"We spend Christmas unwrapping gifts and getting ribbons mixed in with the mascara and makeup," she says. "It's crazy and hectic, but lots of fun."

The only thing Miss Beatty is not pleased with is this year's choice of yuletide dressing-room decorations. "White lights, putti snowflakes hanging from the ceiling and plastic holly around the mirror," she sighs. "Can you imagine anything uglier? The girls wanted to put tin foil all over the walls so everything would look iridescent, but I stopped that!"

And though Miss Beatty will be kicking up her heels at 4 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Christmas Day, she won't be too far away from her family. Her sister, Carol, is also a Rockette and their father, Norman, is a trumpet player with the hall's orchestra. "Since three-fifths of my family is here," Miss Beatty says, "we go out for dinner before we go home, open gifts and crash from exhaustion."

Sandy Duncan and her dancer-husband Don Correia will probably also crash from exhaustion, but not because they are performing The Correias, who are starring in the Broadway smash "My One and Only," are celebrating Christmas by throwing a party for the show's cast and crew at their Manhattan apartment.

Each Christmas season more than 500,000 people go to New York's Radio City to see the Rockettes perform "The March of the Wooden Soldiers."

"One of the actors will play Santa," Miss Duncan says, "and everyone is allowed to bring their kids. And though the holidays always make me loony, I'm going to have lots of fun. I'm handing out gifts for the cast, but I've warned Don not to buy me anything because," she adds with a laugh, "we've spent so much money refurbishing our upstate farm."

"My One and Only" co-star Georgia Engel, best-known for her portrayal of ditzzy Georgette Baxter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," will spend Christmas with close friends since her mother lives in Hawaii.

"The last time I had Christmas on Broadway was in 1970 when I was doing 'Hello, Dolly!' with Ethel Merman," Miss Engel re-

Corporations Package Yule Message

By Teresa Klink
Everyone knows Christmas is big business. But what exactly does big business do for the holidays?
Corporate Christmas traditions may not resemble a Norman Rockwell yuletide scene, but many customs begun by major companies have slipped into our repertoire of holiday symbols and traditions.
Take Budweiser's annual Christmas card to the American public, the "Clydesdales in the Snow" television commercial. The 30-second spot by Anheuser-Busch is "just one of those traditional things," says Jack Taylor, vice president of communications for Darcy MacManus Maslus, the company's advertising agency. "The public likes it and expects it."

The Anheuser-Busch name is mentioned only during the commercial, but no name is necessary because Clydesdales are to Budweiser what Rudolph is to Santa.
The giant horses have been Budweiser's symbol since the repeal of Prohibition, when August A. Busch Jr. surprised his father with the first Clydesdale hitch.

More conventional greeting cards have snowballed into a definite holiday bull market. This year about $2.5 million was spent on yuletide greetings, according to Bert Hobrath, supervisor of corporate relations at American Greetings Corp.
That figure doesn't include the hundreds of thousands of cards to be sent by American Greetings itself to customers, suppliers, dealers, media and friends. And to set an example, the company is mailed early — the first week in December.

hardbound version of "A Christmas Carol" and packages of English Christmas pudding — to appropriate members of the media.

What Christmas Means to Me

What does Christmas mean to you?
Does it thrill you through and through?
To hear the carols and the bells
And those cheerful children's yells?
Or does your mind wander back
O'er the hills and across the tracks.
As you think of years gone by
When as a child — you gave a sigh?
Christmas trees so bright and gay
In Grandma's parlor stood that day.
With candy, nuts and gifts galore
For happy children peeping o'er!
Ah! 'T was then our hearts beat fast
When each one of us would pass.
And guess to ourself alone
Who that package might be for.

But, now we're grown and have tots of our own
And planning Christmas in our homes.
Oh, we still have the cares of living.
But Christmas is still — the Art of giving!
Tonight, I remember Christmases past
Oh, my heart rejoices for I know at last.
The Bible story to me was taught.
The Babe in the manger — in this world was brought!
Now! I know in the fullness and richness see
What a wonderful Savior — He is to me.
His Birth means kindness, love and giving
I know this CHRISTMAS — I'M REALLY LIVING!

years spent in the President's House with their illustrious grandparents never again had quite the same glow for Nelly and Little Wash."

George Washington was not the only Founding Father who was a doting grandfather. Social chronicler of the day Margaret Bayard Smith described Thomas Jefferson's way with his grandchildren, who had come to spend the winter of 1805 in the President's House. "While I sat looking at him, playing with these infants, one standing on the sofa with its arms around his neck, the other two youngest on his knees, playing with him, I could scarcely realize he was one of the most celebrated men now living, both as a Politician and Philosopher." A widower, Jefferson entertained his grandchildren with poems and stories and sent his friend Dolley Madison out to buy them the latest clothes and toys.

Abraham and Mary Lincoln, the indulgent and adoring parents of 17-year-old Robert, 10-year-old Willie and 7-year-old Tad, came to the White House at a harsh time in America's history. Lincoln, commanding a disastrous Civil War, and his wife, a Southerner and therefore suspect, were attacked by a viciously critical press. Sweet Willie and wildly exuberant Tad were a solace in troubled times — in spite of Tad's constant pranks. "Taddy" would pile chairs on a sofa and when his unsuspecting father entered the room — heave ho!

"Let him romp," Lincoln said, thinking of serious-minded Robert, "he will get 'pokey' soon, enough." Tad, dressed in his colonel's uniform and spectacles purloined from his father, and Willie, wearing his mother's lavender silk dress, put on shows in the attic.

But after only a year in the White House, Willie fell ill with a fever and died. Mary was inconsolable. The press called her grief excessive. Lincoln, having lost the son most like himself, bore that burden, too, and went on struggling to hold a nation together. Then came the fateful night of April 14, 1865; when Tad rushed to his friend, doorkeeper Thomas Pendel, crying, "O Tom Pen! Tom Pen! They have killed papa dead."

The happy family life of the Grant, Hayes and Garfield families seemed to reflect a healing national life. Grant, the great Civil Warrior, walked around with tears in his eyes for days before his darling Nellie — the belle of the nation — was wed in a lavish and widely publicized ceremony. The Hayes' White House was always full. Son Ruddy reported that the president had to go into the bathroom to work on state papers.

First lady Caroline Harrison had a large family — four generations under one White House roof — and had to share her home with politicians and favor seekers. "I've been a show, the whole family's been a show since Mr. Harrison was elected..." The most famous household member — at least the most photographed — was Benjamin Harrison's grandson, "Baby" McKee. Amateur and professional photographers armed with the new easy-to-operate Kodak box camera, chased Baby, driving his own goat cart, around the White House grounds.

The only president to wed in the White House, 49-year-old bachelor Grover Cleveland married 21-year-old Frances Folsom in 1886. It was largely owing to false stories of Cleveland's brutality toward the popular first lady — which she decried publicly — that he was defeated in 1888. "Frank," as her husband called her, told the staff to take good care of the White House, "for we are coming back just four years from today."

And so they did — this time with little "Baby Ruth," who became the "nation's sweetheart."

Both press and public loved the youthful Theodore Roosevelt family, which set off what Ike Hoover, then chief usher, later called, "the wildest scramble in the history of the White House." Alice, 17; Theodore Jr., 14; Kermit, 12; Ethel, 10; Archibald, 7, and Quentin, 3, came to the mansion on short notice in September of 1901, when Vice President Roosevelt became president upon McKinley's assassination. Still, they brought along horses, dogs, cats, parrots, frogs, white mice, guinea pigs, a kangaroo rat and a blue macaw named Eli Yale. Alice went visiting with Emily Spinach, a green snake named for a thin aunt, Algonquin, the calico pony, traveled upstairs in the elevator to cheer an ailing Archie.

Naughty "Princess Alice" sped around in automobiles. Her parents forbade her to smoke under their roof, so she smoked on the roof. "I can do one of two things," the president said, "I can be President of the United States or I can control Alice." Alice wed Ohio congressman Nicholas Longworth in a spectacular White House wedding. The nation rejoiced.

In the summer of 1924, the nation mourned. Calvin Coolidge Jr. died at 16 of blood poisoning. "The power and glory of the Presidency went with him," his father wrote. Older son John tried to fill the void. "The unrelenting glare of the spotlight creates a great need for White House families to draw closer together," Margaret Klapthor says.

The White House staff affectionately called one close family the "Three Musketeers." Harry Truman didn't care what anybody said about him, but he got rather excited at occasional criticism of wife Bess, "the boss," and daughter Margaret, "the boss' boss."

"A grandchild has all of the pleasure and none of the pressure," Eleanor Seagraves, the first grandchild of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt, commented recently. Seagraves and her brother Curtis sometimes lived in the White House. "Sistie" and "Buzzie" were adored by the public but didn't have to campaign. "We were decorative pieces, like Fala the dog."

The White House was a second home for young David Eisenhower and his three sisters. Grandparents Ike and "Mimi" provided them with toys and gave them birthday parties starring folks like Roy Rogers and Dale Evans. Camp David was named for the well-loved grandson. The most important thing that happened to David in the White House, however, was meeting Julie Nixon. Both were eight. Married in 1968, they now have three children of their own.

The Kennedy family "set a new and dizzying high in First Family newsmaking," veteran newswoman Helen Thomas has written. Caroline Kennedy was barely three when she arrived at the White House in January of 1961. Her brother, John Jr., was two months old.

Everything they did or said was news. Caroline announced to reporters in the press room that her daddy was "sitting upstairs with his shoes and socks off not doing anything." From her mother, Caroline learned to say, "No photographers."

Yet, the Kennedys wanted a normal life for their children. Two small hobgoblins went trick or treating with mother — disguised as a demon. Jack Kennedy regaled the children with stories about the White Shark who dined on dirty socks. When Caroline was five, her father began to read poetry to her. Her favorite was this Edna St. Vincent Millay couplet:
Safe upon the solid rock the ugly houses stand;
Come and see my shining palace built upon the sand!

Tinseltown Christmas

Hollywood Wraps Up A Lavish Holiday

By Dick Kleiner
Hollywood is a town bounded on the east by television, on the north by movies, on the west by film and on the south by cameras. So even Christmas is all wrapped up in the entertainment business.

The big thing about Christmas in Hollywood is that it means some time off. The CBS show "Dallas," for example, shut down on Dec. 13 and won't resume shooting until Jan. 4. This gives the cast and crew a chance to celebrate, and everybody celebrates differently.

As an example, consider a couple of the stars of NBC's "Hill Street Blues." Betty Thomas will spend most of her Christmas holiday, she says, flying a helicopter. She got her helicopter pilot's license within the past month, and so, naturally, she is still intrigued. She says she plans to take her family on a series of short flights.

Then there is Barbara Bosson, who is married to the show's executive producer, Steven Bochco. The Bochcos will have an ordinary Christmas, at home with their family, then leave the next day for Park City, Utah, and a week of skiing.

Hollywood is a party town, so there are many parties during the holiday season - before Christmas and during the Christmas-New Year's week.

Tony O'Meara is one of Hollywood's busiest and best caterers, and he's booked solid for the Christmas season. He says Hollywood parties are "more contemporary, more casual, more outdoorsy" than parties in other sections of the country. And frequently the Hollywood parties have a Mexican flavor, because of Los Angeles' solid Mexican history.

A favorite Hollywood pastime just before Christmas is to go down to Olvera Street, where the original Los Angeles settlement was established, and have a Mexican meal and join some of the Mexican-American Christmas festivities.

Sometimes, O'Meara says, Hollywood people like to give their parties an Eastern flavor by importing snow or using snow-making machinery. He did a "Winter Wonderland Party" for CBS last year with artificial snow and flocked trees. The food was served under a tent, and there was an inch or so of artificial snow on the ground, and white balloons kept falling for a snowy motif.

The whole question of Southern California's generally balmy December weather often disturbs newcomers at Christmas time.

"I gave up Christmas," one Hollywood publicist said. "The first time I saw Christmas lights on a palm tree."

And yet Southern Californians insist that the local weather on Christmas is probably pretty much like what the weather was in Bethlehem the day Christmas was born.

"You never hear about snow in Bethlehem or the Three Wise Men on skis," says a Hollywood producer.

The traditional religious aspect of Christmas is observed here, just as everywhere else. Except there is a slightly Hollywood tinge to it.

Currently, one of the biggest Christmas attractions is "The Glory of Christmas," the Christmas pageant at the Cathedral, the huge allegorical church founded by Dr. Robert Schuller in Garden Grove, not far from Disneyland.

The pageant is so big that there are real camels and sheep and when the sun is spotted, it's a great big light in the sky. The angels actually fly, and there is a cast of 400. Gregory Peck is the narrator, and this year Cary Grant will be involved. Carol Lavelle plays Mary, and Russell Mars, who was part of "You'll Be in the PH with Me" years ago, is a leading shepherd.

The stars are connected with many of the area's Christmas activities. That began, Hollywood historians say, when Bing Crosby started singing every year for hospitalized children.

Now there are dozens of Christmas parades, and the big ones have the big stars and the smaller ones have the maker stars. It goes from Peck and Grant down to the Christmas Parade for the city of Covina. The grand marshal of that one is Patricia McPherson, one of the secondary characters on the "Knight Rider" show.

This year Michael Landon was the grand marshal of the Christmas parade in Hollywood. There is a special parade through the streets of east Los Angeles, where most of the area's huge Mexican-American population lives, and a Hispanic star is always picked to be grand marshal. This year, it was actress Carmen Zapata.

The "Knight Rider" star, David Hasselhoff, together with some others, including Mr. T, Jan-Michael Vincent and Ricky Schroder, will spend much of their holidays working with Make-A-Wish, a group which tries to make the wishes of dying children come true.

By and large, Hollywood's Christmas is like Dubuque's or Milwaukee's, only bigger. Even the gifts are bigger.

In the Neiman-Marcus store in Beverly Hills, you can buy a replica of the "Airwolf" helicopter and have it gift-wrapped and delivered for $2 million (plus tax).

Or, if you prefer, hop over to another Beverly Hills department store, Robinson's, and get your loved one the chance to be executive producer of a movie. Pegasus Group II pictures will let your giftee produce "Flint,"

Experts' Advice To Holiday Hosts: Take It Easy; Enjoy Party

By John DeMera
United Press International
Two experts on home entertaining insist having a dinner party - even an elegant one - during the holiday season is no reason to have a nervous breakdown.

Barbara Kafka and Arabella Boxer, authors of current books on the subject, stress that social customs have evolved toward low-key celebrations of friendship. And besides, they say, hosts and hostesses should enjoy the parties they throw.

Kafka, a New York food consultant, restaurant designer and veteran cookbook author, said there was a time when she drove herself crazy fretting over every detail of an upcoming soiree, letting cuisine get in the way of companionship.

She is entertaining even more these days - and enjoying it more as well.

"I think my friends and I eat better and have more fun with less demanding meals," said Kafka. "No longer does each course require, as it appears at the table, that conversation stop and the food be admired."

Boxer, a native of England, chimes in with a warning that people should not let themselves be bullied by food writers into thinking the favorite home dishes are not good enough for dinner parties.

She points out the French, who have been at it longer than anyone in the United States tend to serve simple but delicious dinners at home while leaving their haute-cuisine fantasies to restaurants.

An extremely casual elegance has replaced the formal dinners of the 1940s, the bring-your-own-bottle meals of the 1950s and 1960s, even the chic "nouvelle" gatherings of the 1970s, Boxer said.

In that light, she cautioned against fling apart because every detail doesn't turn out right.

"I see little point in striving for perfection," said Boxer. "When I produced a perfectly made apple tart some time ago, it aroused no comment, and I realized that my guests assumed I had been bought."

In "Food for Friends" (Harper and Row, $19.95), Kafka describes her own maturation from nervous young hostess to content master of her kitchen. The fact that her dinner guests often include the likes of food writers James Beard and Craig Claiborne suggests she does most things well.

Although she does not believe in planning every detail, Kafka says the first step toward successful parties is designing a kind of mental checklist that can go to work even while the host is at the office.

Questions on this checklist should include:
How many people are coming over and of what sex? How much time is available for cooking? What ingredients are available at home? What are the weather conditions that might affect the menu?
Are any guests allergic to potential dishes? Are there enough glasses to handle all wines without running the dishwasher halfway through? Is the first course fancy enough that a simple main dish is fine? What must be picked up at the grocery?
Kafka feels the atmosphere is actually more important than the food, something many restaurateurs learn too late - and others learn too soon.

She is unimpressed by roses cut from tomatoes, parsley hung all over plates, food made to look like anything but what it is. She especially hates little birds carved from butter, since she has to behold them in order to butter her bread.

Fresh flowers are the nicest touch, though fruits and vegetables can also be used to build a visual ambience. White, unscented candles are virtually a necessity, along with white linen and unobtrusive china.

In her "Book of Elegant Cooking and Entertaining" (Times Books, $24.95), Boxer gives great weight to the party shopping trip, saying it should be laid-out on general lines but retain enough flexibility for impulse purchases.

The entire operation, she says, requires a combination of "daring and common sense."

Rather than stunning guests with culinary fireworks, Boxer says she concentrates these days on creating a feeling of relaxation. She does this through comfortable chairs, resful lighting, attractive china and glassware, music and plenty of good smells from the kitchen.

Once this "sense of place" is established, the cook can concentrate on cooking - and on having a wonderful time.

Stories Of Christmases Past

Holiday Teaches The Importance Of Love

By George Plagens
We all have our favorite Christmas stories. These are mine.

Charles Howard was a department store Santa Claus who used to visit children in the hospitals after closing hours at the store.

One year, the week before Christmas he went to see Nancy, an emaciated polio victim who was being kept alive by motors and gadgets. Before Howard went into the room, the nurses told him it might be her last Christmas.

When Nancy saw him dressed in his Santa Claus suit, she quivered with excitement. "She wants to kiss you, Santa," said her mother, who read Nancy's lips. Howard leaned down and felt Nancy's one good arm around his neck.

"I wasn't worth a darn after that," he said. Before he left, Nancy gave him three sticks of candy for his reindeer.

That night Howard couldn't sleep. The next morning he wrote Nancy a letter. He told her how wonderful it had been to see her and how his reindeer made him divide the pieces of candy so each one of them could have a piece.

"When I tucked Dancer in bed," wrote Howard, "he had his piece under his pillow."

Several days later, a nurse called on Howard at the department store. From the instant Nancy read the letter, she said, a change came over her. "I think she is going to get well," said the nurse.

The next year, from his throne in the department store, Howard saw a little girl in braces running to him. It was Nancy.

"You can't always work a miracle like that," said Howard later, "but you can try."

AGNES'S HAPPIEST
Christmas was also her saddest.

She had always dreamed of opening her presents on Christmas morning and finding a fur coat in one of the brightly wrapped packages. But fur coats are expensive and Agnes knew her husband couldn't afford one.

On this Christmas she was more sure than ever that there would be no fur coat. Her husband had been ill with heart trouble for much of the year.

So after she opened a five-pound box of chocolates, a pair of fine kid gloves and a sheer nightgown ("John had never lost that gleam in his eye"), she went to put her arms around him and thank him.

"There's another box for you behind the big chair," he said as she hugged him. It was a big box - the kind a fur coat would come in. She knew it couldn't be. But it was. And it was beautiful.

"Put it on," he said. Agnes's hair was in curlers and she had a bathrobe on.

"Oh, not now, John," she said. "I'll wear it for you when we go out tomorrow night."

But he insisted. And so Agnes made breakfast that Christmas morning in her house slippers and fur coat.

She is glad she did. That was the only time John was to see her in the gift she had waited for so long - and the gift he had saved for so long.

Agnes took him to the hospital that night. He died the next morning.

THE LOUDEMILKS always had bananas in cream before they opened their gifts on Christmas morning. There was no reason for it. It was just the way they had always done it.

One Christmas, however, the gift-opening ban without the bananas and cream. Nobody remarked on the omission or even seemed aware of it.

But then the Loudermilk noticed Freddie was going around with a sad face. "It just doesn't seem like Christmas," he said. His mother couldn't understand. The tree and there were plenty of gifts and everything to make it seem like Christmas.

"Why, wherever do you mean, Freddie?" she asked.

"We didn't have our bananas and cream this morning," he said.

How you celebrate Christmas probably is as important as celebrating the same way each year. Christmas customs take on a hallowed association. Like other traditions, they give a sense of continuity and belonging, a feeling greatly needed in our world today.

We don't always realize the full impact these little things until our own children return home and comment on the good feeling these traditions gave them.

In "A Letter to His Daughter," William Butler Yeats writes, "May she live in a household where all is custom and ceremony."

Freddie's mother forgot how important a little custom can be, even if it's only bananas and cream on Christmas morning.

HER NAME wasn't really Penny. Paul didn't know what it was but as he told the story in later years that was what he always called her.

He was getting ready to lock the door of his little shop on Christmas Eve. Christmas was not the happiest time for him. He lived alone. The gay holiday shoppers who passed his window seemed only to add to the sadness and loneliness he felt.

As he was walking to the door to lock it, a little girl walked in. "I want to buy that string of blue beads in the window," she said. "It's for my sister."

As he looked into the face of the child, his heart stood still. There had once been a girl in his life - older than this girl - who had the same wheat-colored hair, the same sweet, innocent face and sea-blue eyes.

He had been in love with her but had let circumstances separate them and send their lives in opposite directions. Only later did he realize how much he had lost when she had gone out of his life.

While all this was flashing through his mind, the little girl spoke up.

"How much are the beads?" she asked. He watched her untie the knots in a handkerchief and pour a handful of pennies on the counter.

"I think you have just enough there," he said. He went to the window and took out the string of blue beads, being careful - as his back was turned - to remove the price tag ... $4.95.

green tree instead of stuffed in "ugly stockings."

The Christmas tree didn't really take root as a White House tradition until 1889, when President Benjamin Harrison and his family first decorated a yuletide tree in the mansion. The president helped himself to adorn it with silvery ornaments and real candles.

At the turn of the century, the White House Christmas tree tradition was nearly cut short when Theodore Roosevelt banned it from the executive mansion in the name of forest conservation. His son Archie, however, "surprised"

How A Television Star Will Be Celebrating His Christmas

By William Shatner
Written for UPI

Hollywood (UPI) - Apart from their religious significance, putting our lives into a larger perspective, the year-end holidays are really designed to celebrate life. Life in general and our lives in particular. In effect, we are not only supposed to take time to bring joy to the world. We are invited to take time to bring joy to ourselves, too.

That is not as obvious as it might sound. Too many of us (and I speak from very personal experience) get so caught up in the details and demands of our work that we don't take time during the year to accomplish the one thing for
