Gorbachev lashes out at Reagan in post-Summit reception

MOSCOW (UPI) — Hours after saying goodbye to Ronald Reagan, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev lashed out at the president for his "totally unacceptable" lecturing on human rights in the Soviet Union.

"The U.S. president came to Moscow. It seems to me, entertaining notions of times past on some of the issues, including those of human rights in the Soviet Union," Gorbachev told more than 200 peace activists gathered for a Kremlin reception Thursday.

Gorbachev told the diverse group that he rejected Reagan's statements to 49 dissidents and refuseniks Monday that human rights is "absolutely fundamental" in U.S. relations with Moscow.

"We cannot (allow) the situation to arise where international relations in this far from simple world would be based on anything other than respect and mutual confidence," he said.

"If we do not accept the recognition of each people's right to make its own choice, ideological, political, economic, cultural and so forth, we shall never restructure our relations for the better, and we shall not change the situation," Gorbachev said. "This is a point of departure."

Shortly after saying farewell to Reagan, Gorbachev indicated that the president's statements about human rights during the Moscow summit showed a lack of tact.

"We shall do everything in our power to do our job as we see fit based on our values and our principles, and we do not impose what we are doing on anybody else, because this is our business," Gorbachev said.

"And we shall not accept any advice as to how to run our own affairs because this type of attitude to another people demonstrates lack of respect which is totally unacceptable in relations," said Gorbachev, who met with the guests in a large green-domed hall used as a government ministry building.

During Reagan's controversial reception for 49 dissidents and refuseniks and their families at the residence of the U.S. ambassador, the president said the Soviet Union had not yet fully complied with the human rights provision of the Helsinki Accords of 1975 or the Universal U.N. Human Rights Declaration of 1948.

Reagan said some 300 political prisoners had been released and noted greater freedom of travel outside the Soviet Union, but he said the ultimate goal should be freedom of worship, the right to leave the country of one's birth and to ability to speak without the threat of arrest.

Gorbachev said he told the U.S. president he did not agree with his assessments.

"The facts he cited do take place," Gorbachev said. "But this is not yet the full picture of Soviet society. Besides, I told the president we also have a point of view on the state of affairs with human rights in U.S. society and I named these problems and detailed them."

Reagan praises Soviet changes

LONDON (UPI) — President Reagan, reporting on his fourth summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, said today the world may be witnessing "a time of lasting change in the Soviet Union" that should be credited to the resolve of the Western allies.

Reagan painted an optimistic post-summit outlook for U.S.-Soviet relations in his speech to the Royal Institute of International Affairs, bringing to a close a trip that saw him set foot his first time in the land he once called "the focus of evil" in the world.

His report on the political implications of the summit was infused with personal observations on Gorbachev and the Soviet people and Reagan spoke with enthusiasm of the talk of "progress toward democratic reform."

"My personal impression of Mr. Gorbachev is that he is a serious man seeking serious reform," Reagan said.

His assessment of the Soviet leader seemed to echo an early — and much-criticized — remark from British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher that Gorbachev, then new in power, is "a man you can do business with."

Reflecting on what he saw and heard in Moscow, Reagan claimed some personal vindication from the implementation of the Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty, which built on a proposal he first broached amid criticism in late 1981, and cited "tangible progress" toward a 50 percent cut in strategic nuclear arsenals.

"Such a treaty, with all its implications, is, I believe, within our grasp," he said.

Further encouraged by the Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan and the domestic reforms undertaken by Gorbachev, Reagan declared: "This (INF) treaty, last month's development in Afghanistan, the changes we see in the Soviet Union — these are momentous moments. Not conclusive, but momentous."

Reagan spoke in Guildhall, a London civic landmark, shortly before flying home to Washington to wind up a 10,705-mile trip highlighted by four formal meetings with Gorbachev.

Contrary to those who considered the ascension of Gorbachev as the catalyst for domestic and foreign policy change in the Soviet Union, Reagan attributed the improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations to the political resolve of the West.

"Quite possibly, we are beginning to take down the barriers of the postwar era," he said. "Quite possibly, we are entering a new era in history, a time of lasting change in the Soviet Union. We will have to see. But, if so, it is because of the steadfastness of the allies — the democracies — for more than 40 years, and especially in this decade."

His salute to the allies was punctuated by a special tribute to Thatcher, a kindred spirit ideologically who he praised for "valor and candor" that helped maintained the strength of the West and a warning that optimism should not prompt the West to let down its guard.

"We have held fast to the faith," he said. "And whatever happens, whatever triumphs or disappointments ahead, we must keep to this strategy of strength and candor, this strategy of hope — hope in the eventual triumph of freedom."

As with other recent positive developments in the atmosphere in which the superpowers coexist and compete, Reagan said, "We look forward to this trend to continue."

"We must do all we can to assist it," he said. "And this means openly acknowledging positive change and crediting it. But let us also remember the strategy that we have adopted is one that provides for setbacks along the way as well as progress."

"Let us embrace honest change when it occurs, but let us also be wary and ever vigilant. Let us stay strong."

Listen, learn from teachers

What is one to make of the recent survey of classroom teachers by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching? On the one hand, it discloses that educational reforms during the last five years have resulted in a stronger curriculum, higher student test scores, and tougher graduation standards. Yet, 70 percent of the 13,576 respondents give low marks to the school-reform movement.

These mixed signals suggest that many teachers believe they have been bypassed for the most part in the drive to upgrade U.S. public education. Unfortunately, they have been.

Of the numerous education reports, none is more perceptive than the 1985 Rand Corp. study, which recommends that teachers play a major role in the reform process. It notes that teachers ought to be given a greater say in the curriculum and the actual running of the school. It also urges that classroom instructors be freed from such time-consuming and demeaning duties as lunchroom supervision and hallway monitoring so they will have more time to grade papers and prepare for their classes.

Make no mistake about the rigors of teaching. It is a demanding, highly stressful job. Although some teachers receive a respite during their summer vacation, many others are obliged to work summers in order to make ends meet. And even though teaching salaries have increased substantially during the last five years, teachers still earn less than most professionals who have a college education. Couple this wage disparity with poor working conditions, add paternalism on the part of many principals, and it's little wonder there is a looming shortage of teachers.

In a more perfect society, of course, extraordinary classroom instructors would receive the salary that is surely due them. We know that isn't likely to happen so long as teachers' unions gain lock-step wage increases for inspiring and indifferent teachers alike.

To their credit, many school districts recognize outstanding classroom teachers in special ceremonies. But money alone can never provide the answer. Conscientious teachers yearn to believe that they are valued members of a respected profession. School administrators and boards of education which really wish to improve the morale of their teachers can begin with an obvious first step, and that is to listen to what they are saying.

Back to future

There have been serious setbacks to the scheduled democratization of Nicaragua. After a brief flirtation with some of the principles of democracy, the Sandinista government reverted to type by taking a harder line with opposition groups and cracking down on press freedom. This was a blatant violation of the provisions of the Central American peace treaty and a direct contravention of the cease-fire agreement signed with the Contras at Sapoa on March 23.

The major new restrictions on free speech imposed by the Interior Ministry marked the end of a brief period during which political opponents of President Daniel Ortega and his Soviet-backed regime were granted the unaccustomed right to criticize the government as they saw fit.

Congress surely does not need to wait for more proof that its faith in President Ortega was misplaced, and that he will continue to rule Nicaragua with scant regard for human rights while seizing the opportunity, wherever possible, to subvert the fledgling democracies around him in Central America.

How in the world do you sum it all up?

My Harlem friend, Booker Lerol Jackson, hasn't usually prayed for divine intercession beyond his country's temporal borders. He is a stouthearted America Firster.

But this time, the Reagan-Gorbachev summit got to him. Not because he acquired a sudden interest in nuclear weapons control, but because he watches television most of his waking hours.

The networks saturated us with so many reports on Reagan-Gorbachev Summit IV that Booker Lerol was intrigued. He watched. He read. He got disturbed. Then he decided to pray.

He sent me a copy of his latest supplication.

Yo, Lord:
I'm back and I know what you gon' say. How come I don't check in with you more often? You know the answer to that, Lord. Prayer ain't an easy rap. And I don't be comin' to you less'n I got somethin' really on my mind.

Like my president who met in Russia with their main man who's got that Picasso mark on his head. That ain't no put down, Lord. At least, Gorbachev be havin' a mark on his head. President Reagan ain't got nothin' inside his.

But I'm prayin' to you, Lord, 'bout this summit cuz there was so much hypocrisy. Maybe, it couldn't be helped. Like how one of your messengers, Isaiah, put it, "every one is an hypocrite and an evildoer, and every mouth speaketh folly."

Sure sound like he be talkin' 'bout Reagan and Gorbachev.

Know what should of happened at that summit, Lord? When President Reagan leaned across the table and asked Mr. Gorbachev, "What are you doin' about human rights for the Jewish people what wants to leave Russia?" Mr. Gorbachev should have answered, "When are you gon' start doin' something 'bout human rights for your black countrymen what just wants to leave their second-class citizenship?"

Lord, wouldn't that have been hip?

President Reagan would have started stut-terin' and swallowin', and before he be sayin' anything, Mr. Gorbachev would of followed up like they be doin' at his press conference. "I just finished readin' that national report by a commission headed up by two of your former presidents and Ted Koppel about how things done got worse for minorities. Blacks is goin' backwards in jobs and education, specially in your presidency.

"Mr. President, you got a real human rights credibility problem with your black countrymen."

But my president be cool, even when his hypocrisy is exposed.

"Mr. General Secretary, you got a bigger credibility problem for the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces treaty."

"You sign it, but according to my Defense Department's annual report, the Soviet Union done built a huge underground structure to house thousands of people, including Soviet leaders, to protect them during the conduct of a nuclear war. How you explain that?"

Like this, Gorbachev would have said:

"Mr. President, you talk about how we be the world's two most important leaders. But you can't even get rid of a drug dealing pipsqueak general on your country's doorstep."

Hypocrites never get stuck for an answer. But treaties ain't answers, Lord. They be pieces of paper only as good as the sincerity in the hearts of men who sign them.

Ability to compete erodes

By David Vesey
UPI Business Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. ability to compete against major trading partners has eroded dramatically and dangerously over 15 years, according to a new index released Thursday by the Council on Competitiveness.

The council, a non-partisan research and education organization, unveiled its Competitiveness Index showing that American workers' standard of living since 1972 has increased only one-seventh as fast as that of Japan and one-half as fast as West Germany's.

The index also showed the United States lagging behind other major industrial democracies in trade, productivity and investment, three other major components of a competitive society. The index measures America's performance in all four categories against its past performance and against foreign competitors.

Among its findings, the index showed that:

—The U.S. standard of living per employee was $28,400 in 1987, well below West Germany's $34,400.

—The U.S. standard of living grew more slowly last year than any other of the seven major industrial democracies.

—The American share of world exports, despite an export boom in the past year, was only 10 percent in 1987 compared with 12 percent in 1972.

—Since 1972, Japan's productivity has risen eight times faster than the United States' while West Germany's productivity has increased three times faster than America's.

—Long-term U.S. investment in education, research and development and capital equipment has not matched investment expenditures by trading partners over the past 15 years, and U.S. investment levels in 1986 were actually lower than 1972 levels.

The Competitive Index, which will be updated every six months, was designed to fill a gap of knowledge and understanding that exists between anecdotal evidence and government economic statistics, which the council feels are often misleading or incomplete.

"We are awash in economic statistics ... that don't tell the story," said Michael Porter, the Harvard University economist who helped prepare the index.

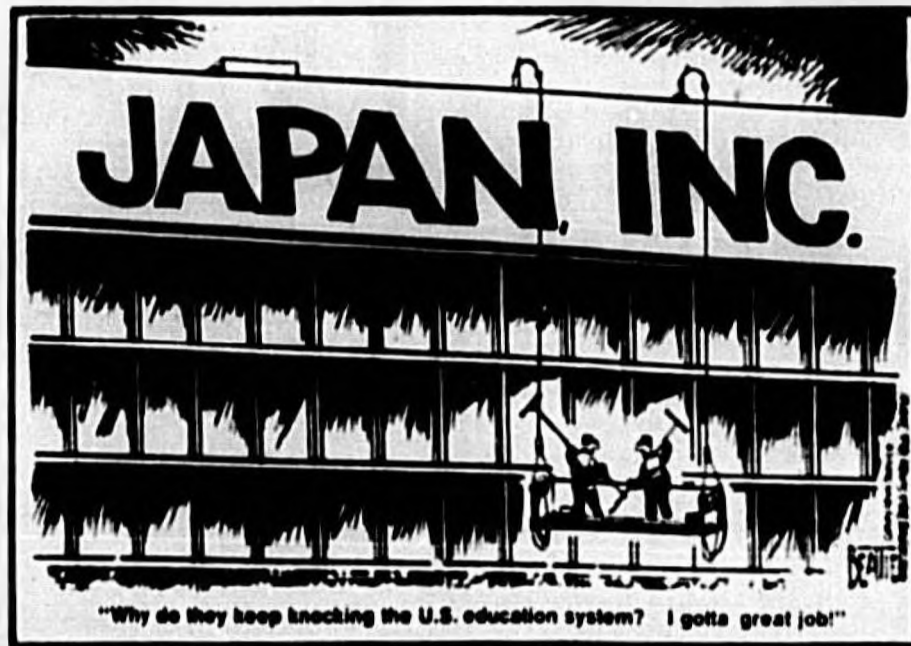

The standard of living index is the key indicator of a nation's ability to compete and prosper in the global economy, Porter said.

Hashish production runs rampant

HASHISH CAPITAL — The Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon, where Americans are being held hostage, is so lawless that hashish production runs rampant there. A secret report prepared by the Central Intelligence Agency and the Drug Enforcement Administration says four factors are responsible for the increase: There has been no serious law enforcement effort against hashish cultivation and trafficking; Muslims who cultivate cannabis took over the valley when Christians abandoned it; major Lebanese growers have made a big effort to renew ties with drug traffickers after a lull in the market; and there is increased demand from users in the United States and Western Europe.

Psychology of Riches

In a playful if learned essay in Time magazine, Michael Kinsey, editor of the "New Republic," meditates upon the fact that Leona Helmsley apparently bilked the government of some $4 million in taxes—a peculiar circumstance, in that so rich a person would risk prison for a sum so piddling, the Helmsleys being worth an estimated $1.4 billion. Mr. Kinsey correctly points out that the Helmsleys, whose wealth comes from real estate holdings and hotel chains, cannot possibly spend even a fraction of what the law possesses. Why cheat? Why even keep working and accumulating?

Kinsey considers the theory of "conspicuous consumption," as set forth by Veblen in his "Theory of the Leisure Class" (1899), to be, perhaps, somewhat out of date. Veblen thought that the very rich did not accumulate in order to consume, but consumed on a grand scale in order to advertise their richness.

There may still be something in this. Leona Helmsley, for example, has a $45,000 silver clock in the shape of one of her hotels, assorted swimming pools and other such luxuries, all of which say, "I am rich."

Yet the fact is that she goes to work, runs her hotels with a famously stern hand, and is nasty to her help. Probably what she enjoys is the exercise of her autocratic power, the sight of her chefs and clerks and bottle washers quivering before her basilisk gaze.

As Kinsey points out, some of the very richest people do not consume conspicuously at all. Sam Walton, the richest man in America at $8.7 billion, could buy out the Helmsleys in five minutes, yet he lives simply, works hard, and expects his heirs to do the same.

Mr. Kinsey coins a useful term, "competitive accumulation." Perhaps the rich keep striving in order to move up from 35th to 24th in the wealth contest. Both Fortune and Forbes magazines keep the charts on this, and you can check out your standing if you wish.

But "competition" may be more to the point than "accumulation." My paternal grandfather was nowhere near the Helmsleys in wealth, but as a self-made man he did very well indeed in the fine woolens business, making some $6 or $8 hundred thousand a year during the early 1920s. When he died, of pneumonia, in 1926 he was engaged in the project of attempting to earn $1 million during that year. He didn't need the million, but it was a sort of personal benchmark he set for himself, something like his golf score. Perhaps he knew how many men in New York made $1 million per year, and wanted to join that "Club." But I doubt it.

Kinsey thinks that the government should "take a large chunk" of the estates left by the very rich. Why he believes the government has any right to a "large chunk" of anything he does not bother to explain. My own presumption is that one's property is one's own to dispose of, in the absence of a demonstration of compelling public need for that "large chunk."

Indeed, it is part of my family lore that my grandfather was outraged when a small but graduated income tax was introduced. He considered it robbery, and an unconstitutional violation of the equal protection clause. The old boy was right on target.

Scientists challenge astrology

By Rob Stein
UPI Science Writer

BOSTON (UPI) — People from all walks of life, including the First Lady, consult the stars to guide actions on Earth, but scientists say repeated efforts to validate astrology have failed.

Study after study has failed to support claims astrology can predict the future or offer insights into personality, said Shawn Carlson, a physicist at the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratories in Berkeley, Calif.

"There is absolutely no merit to the basic claims that astrologers make," said Carlson, who made one of the most recent attempts to test the power of the stars.

Carlson asked 26 respected astrologers to match the personality profiles of 265 people with their astrological charts. They were right about a third of the time, which is about the same as chance.

"The astrologers can not provide the service that they are charging money for. Their claim is false," said Carlson.

That opinion is shared by most scientists, including Andrew Fraknoi, executive officer of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific in San Francisco, an international scientific and educational organization.

Astrology is based on the belief that the position of the Earth, relative to the stars, sun and other planets at the moment of people's birth influences their life and personality.

But astrologers cannot answer many basic questions, contends Fraknoi. For instance: Why is the moment of birth important, and not the moment of conception? What is the mechanism the planets use to exert their influence?

"The (gravitational) pull of the obstetrician is six times that of Mars," said Fraknoi. "The hospital building has 500,000 times the pull of Mars."

Fraknoi noted that everyone's astrological "sign" is actually wrong because the signs were set more than 2,000 years ago. Since then the position of the Earth relative to other heavenly bodies has changed, meaning all the astrological signs have changed.

"Right now everybody's reading the wrong horoscope," said Fraknoi, an astronomer at San Francisco State University.

Scientists acknowledge that most people's involvement with astrology consists of reading their horoscope in the daily newspaper for the entertainment value, and that is harmless.

Saudi's anti-Communist crusade possibly could be overcome by Gorbachev's charm. And the Soviet retreat could pave the way for formal diplomatic ties.

If that happens, it's likely that other Gulf states such as Bahrain and Qatar could follow.

MINI-EDITORIAL — The Moscow summit gossip about a rift between first ladies was demeaning, but we're not sure who was demeaned. If the rumors that Nancy and Raisa have their claws out for each other are true, their conduct demeans all women by its pettiness. This attitude presumes that the two first ladies have nothing better to do than to be well-dressed credits to their husbands. If the rumors are merely the creation of a shallow press corps that has to fill the pages with something, anything, from Moscow, then the stories demean the media. Both options are depressing.

Investigators give Eastern green light

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Transportation Department has given Texas Air Corp. and its Eastern and Continental Airlines subsidiaries a clean bill of health, revealing that an unprecedented investigation has found no "unsafe" conditions.

A report released Thursday cited some safety problems at Eastern but indicated that none were serious enough to lead to an accident and that the company had taken steps to alleviate them.

"The inspections reveal that an unsafe condition does not currently exist among the carriers," FAA chief Allan McArthur told reporters, lifting a dark cloud that had hung over Texas Air since the agency announced in April it would conduct ramp inspections of Eastern, Continental and various Texas Air commuter airlines.

The report also found that Texas Air is not threatened with financial collapse as some critics have charged. But it did conclude that long-standing animosity between Eastern and its unions could lead to safety problems down the road.

"In a company so divided the risk is increased that the labor-management discord will, at some time, either through inattention or design, have an adverse impact on public safety," it said.

Transportation Secretary Jim Burnley announced that former Labor Secretary William Brock has agreed to act as an intermediary to help ease tensions between the company and the unions.

Eastern Chairman Frank Lorenzo said he was "gratified" that report had found Texas Air's operations safe and that he feels vindicated.

"I'm glad it's behind us," Lorenzo said. Charles Bryan, president of District 100 of the International Association of Machinists, Eastern's largest labor union, denounced the report as the product of Lorenzo's influence peddling in Washington.

"I think it is probably the best possible report money can buy," Bryan said at IAM offices in Miami. "What we've got, in my opinion, is an absolute, clear whitewash."

Bryan said Lorenzo was able to influence the outcome of the report by hiring "heavy-hitting lobbyists" in Washington.

Bryan also said he agreed with the report in at least one respect — the current labor-management strife at Eastern could lead to serious safety problems, he said.

Unlike the report, however, Bryan sought to place the blame for that strife, and the likelihood of safety problems, squarely at management's doorstep.

Capt. Henry Duffy, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, said the report confirms the union's charges that Eastern does have some safety problems and that a breakdown in communication could lead to more.

House passes abortion bill

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (UPI) — Critics of a controversial bill that would require minors to inform their parents before undergoing an abortion charge the law would force troubled young girls into back-alley abortions.

But those arguments failed to move the majority of legislators and the House passed the bill Thursday, which supporters said would serve to strengthen the family.

They said it is unfair to let a child have an abortion without her parent's knowledge and consent.

"When a child must have parental consent to leave the school yard to get her ears pierced, surely a parent should be informed when a child is going to go through this serious and possibly life-threatening procedure," said Rep. Debby Sanderson, R-Port Lauderdale.

They noted the bill would let a child who cannot tell her parents avoid the parental consent requirement by obtaining an emergency court order.

But a court hearing, critics said, would only add to the confusion and fear felt by a pregnant teenager. In cases of incest or child abuse, the girls would be unable to go to their parents and unwilling to seek the court-ordered exemption, and would be forced into back-alley "abortion mills."

"When a girl has to decide she has to tell on a parent or an uncle or a grandfather, that will cause disension in the family, perhaps divorce," argued Rep. Elaine Gordon, D-Miami. "You are putting a burden on that child far, far beyond what she deserves."

They backed an amendment that would have allowed abortions without consent if two physicians agreed the abortion was necessary for the welfare of a pregnant minor.

That amendment was killed

Mavs take Lakers to the limit

By Mike Barnes
UPI Sports Writer

DALLAS (UPI) — Whether or not Dallas center James Donaldson actually blocked James Worthy's layup attempt with two seconds remaining Thursday night, one thing is certain: the Western Conference final is headed for Game 7.

Sparked by Mark Aguirre's 23 points and Donaldson's key defensive play, the Mavericks forced a decisive seventh game scheduled for Saturday in the Forum with a 105-103 victory over the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers.

"This is a situation where every player on our team would have died to win," said Aguirre, who scored 19 points in the second half. "That's how we were going to play it."

With Dallas leading 104-102, Donaldson — inserted into the game during a Los Angeles timeout with 11 seconds left — slid over to deny Worthy the basket as the Lakers forward drove the baseline.

NBA PLAYOFFS

The 7-foot-2 center received credit for a blocked shot, but was uncertain if he stuffed Worthy.

"I don't think I got a piece of the ball on his shot," Donaldson said. "I got over and he saw me there and had to alter his shot."

Donaldson then was fouled and made a free throw. After another timeout, Los Angeles' Magic Johnson took an in-bounds pass and hoisted a futile desperation hook from beyond the 3-point circle, but he was fouled by Rolando Blackman with one second left.

Johnson made the first free throw and intentionally missed on the second — but missed the rim in the process; a violation. Dallas received possession, rebounded the ball and walked off with the victory, their third at home in the best-of-seven series.

"When it was all on the line it was a real tug of war, and they got the last point," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said. "We had good opportunities, but with a 8-9 point lead (the visitors trailed 99-91 with 5:14 left) Dallas is too good to beat at home."

Despite the narrow defeat, the Lakers still appear in control. They play Game 7 in the Forum, where they have beaten Dallas in the series by margins of 15, 21 and 17 points.

The Mavericks, 0-9 on the Lakers' court in the postseason, will play the first Game 7 in their eight-year history. Los Angeles will participate in its second in two weeks, having defeated Utah in a West semifinal series that also went the distance.

In each of their victories, the Mavericks broke open a close game with a flurry in the fourth quarter. This time, the Lakers answered, only to be dented at the end.

Los Angeles led 84-82 only 52 seconds into the final period, but Dallas unleashed a 14-3 blitz for a 96-87 cushion. Aguirre began the spree with a 3-point play, and Derek Harper ended it with a free throw with 6:59 left.

Dallas then led 99-91, but Michael Cooper capped a run of 7 straight points with a 3-pointer to make it 99-98 with 3:38 left. The Mavericks got 2 offensive rebounds before Aguirre scored on a goaltending violation by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, and Harper hit a foul shot with 2:11 to play for a 102-98 edge.

Abdul-Jabbar, who had only 8 points, and Worthy scored around an Aguirre rebound basket to bring the champions within 104-102 with 1:08 left.

Blackman contributed 22 points for Dallas while Harper added 17. Byron Scott and Worthy led Los Angeles with 27 points apiece.

Aguirre had 13 rebounds and Donaldson 12 but Roy Tarpley managed only 7. Still, Dallas held a 47-45 rebounding advantage, winning the battle of the boards for the fifth time in the series.

First Federal rips DAV, 24-5

By Chris Pieter
Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — Darnell Jackson slugged two doubles and a home run and pitched a three-inning no-hitter to lead First Federal to a 24-5 rout of DAV in Sanford Little National League action Thursday at Fort Melon Park.

Jackson crunched an RBI double in the first inning and First Federal went on to score nine runs in the frame to take command. Dexter Graham's three-run homer was the big hit in the inning while Charles Reynolds had two singles and Terrell Jackson and Muleto Moore each had a base hit.

After Darnell Jackson set DAV down in order in the bottom of the first, First Federal added seven more runs in the top of the second. Graham hit his second homer of the game to start the rally and Moore, Tony Smith and Jackson later hit consecutive run-scoring doubles.

DAV scored all five of its runs in the second on six walks and an error. First Federal then tacked on eight runs in the top of the third with Jackson hitting at two-run homer and Graham adding a pair of doubles.

Graham had a big day at the plate for the Feds as he was 4 for 4 with two homers, two doubles and six RBIs. Terrell Jackson was also 4 for 4 with two singles.

Eric Roberts tossed a one-hitter and Andre Rawlings led the offense as SPBA upended Sunland in Little National League action. The only hit Roberts allowed was a third-inning inside-the-park homer by Ray June. Roberts had eight strikeouts and walked seven.

SPBA took a 5-2 lead after one inning and put the game away with six runs in the third. Rawlings had an RBI single in the second inning and added a run-scoring triple in the third for two of SPBA's three hits. Darius Beamon's double was the only other hit for SPBA which also took advantage of 11 walks and 15 errors.

Rinker 12, Railroaders 10
Don Hunt had three hits and was also the winning pitcher as Rinker Materials downed the Railroaders in Little National action at Westside Field.

Rinker built a 12-3 lead going into the sixth and final inning when the Railroaders made a late comeback. Behind eight walks, a hit batsman and Erick Johnson's single, the Railroaders scored seven runs in

Wilander downs Agassi

PARIS (UPI) — The skill and experience of two-time champion Mats Wilander helped him overcome Andre Agassi in five sets Friday, lifting the Swede to a 4-6, 6-2, 7-5, 5-7, 6-0 victory in the semifinals of the $3.9 million French Open.

Wilander, the No. 3 seed and favorite to take the title after the demise of defending champion Ivan Lendl, captured the French Open in 1982 and 1985.

Agassi, 18, has won three grand prix titles this year, but this was his first appearance in the semis of a Grand Slam event.

Agassi gave Wilander no time to get into his game as he won the first set 6-4. After the 17-minute rain interruption in the second set, Wilander began to assert himself.

"I think he surprised me a lot," Wilander said. "I didn't think he was this good. I've never played against a player who hits the ball that hard."

In the other men's semifinal, a revitalized Henri Leconte needed all the help he could get from the fiercely partisan Paris crowd when he took on Sweden's Jonas Svensson.

Svensson shocked Lendl in the quarterfinals Thursday 7-6 (7-5), 7-5, 6-2, to line up the clash with Leconte, the only Frenchman left in the draw.

Of his match with Svensson, Leconte said, "I shall have to be even more concentrated. I shall have to play very well."

Leconte said he was starting to believe this could be his year to keep the Roland Garros trophy in France.

"I'm playing well. My confidence is back. I played good tennis today," he said after defeating Soviet Andrei Chernenkov 6-3, 6-2, 7-6 (7-4).

"It is good to be back after my operation, and also to have my wife and the public behind me," said Leconte, who reached the semifinals of the French Open in 1986, but since has been plagued by illness and injury, and dropped in the world rankings from sixth to No. 14.

College World Series set to begin

COLLEGE BASEBALL

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — The coach of top-seeded Arizona State hinted he will open with pitcher Linty Ingram against California Friday night in the College World Series at Rosenblatt Stadium.

"I'm not sure, we'll probably dance with who brings us," Coach Jim Brock said Thursday at a news conference featuring seven of the eight coaches shooting for the NCAA baseball title.

In that case, Ingram probably will get the ball. A senior right-hander from Hallsville, Texas, Ingram went 17-4 this season with a 3.47 ERA. Conference coaches named him the Pac-10 Southern Division Player of the Year.

hander from Camarillo, Calif. Willis posted a 9-7 mark this season with a 5.13 ERA. Arizona State, 56-11, and California, 40-23, open the Series at 4:10 p.m. CDT. Wichita State, 54-14-1, and Florida, 47-17-1, are scheduled to play at 7:10.

In Saturday's group, Fresno State, 56-10, meets defending champion Stanford, 41-22, in the first game and Miami, 51-12-1, faces Fullerton State, 41-16, in the nightcap.

Each team may lose once in group play but, under a new format, the survivors meet June 11 in a single-elimination championship game.

"I really think a one-game (title game) is not that bad when you figure that two or three years ago and maybe more than that, both teams already had one loss," Milano said.

Arizona State and California met six times this season, with each club dropping three at home and both Willis and Ingram going 1-1.

"Now we'll find out how that equation comes at a neutral park," Brock said. Rosenblatt Stadium tends to favor speed and pitching, with dimensions down the lines of 343 feet, power alleys at 370 feet and center at 420.

Stanford won last year's tournament by downing Oklahoma State 9-5. The victory went to Jack McDowell, now with the Chicago White Sox.

Salvagio's cruises past Carli's, 22-9

By Mark Blythe
Herald Sports Writer

FIVE POINTS — Salvagio's Boys scored 21 runs in the first two innings enroute to a 22-9 victory over Carli's Hallmark Shop to advance to Sunday's Mustang division final.

Salvagio's, who finished with the league's third best record, now waits to find out its opponent as action resumes today at 6:15 with Dan's Restaurant squaring off against Schwinn. Schwinn finished with the league's best record and has lost only one game this season.

Carli's opened the game's scoring with one run in the top of the first inning with Tony Morgan leading off with a single. Morgan then stole second and third and scored on a single by Ryan Hall.

Salvagio's Shawn Burger, though, calmed down and after an error placed runners on second and third he struck out the next three batters to retire the side.

Salvagio's then established the lead with seven runs in the bottom half of the inning. Andy "Peanut" Neufold led things off with a walk and advanced to third on a single by Geoff Crawford. Crawford then stole second and Eric Frey singled in both runners to give Salvagio's the lead, 2-1, for good.

Burger followed with a double that scored Crawford as he advanced to third on the throw to the plate, after an out and an error scored Burger Mike Grandelli and Keith Tedesco both walked. Nathan Becker then stroked a run scoring single followed by a Neufold single that plated two more runs and up the lead to 7-1.

Carli's kept things interesting as it came back to score five runs in the top of the second. Joe Gilardoni led off with a walk and, after an out, scored off a Brian Stenarud double. Morgan then walked and a fielder's choice put Stenarud out at third. Travis Freeman then connected

Bell blasts Bosox

BOSTON (UPI) — George Bell hit a two-run homer with one out in the sixth inning Thursday night to break a scoreless tie and the Toronto Blue Jays held on for a 5-4 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Bell drove an 0-2 pitch from Bruce Hurst halfway up the screen in left field to score Lloyd Moseby, who had singled. The homer was Bell's eighth.

Hurst 6-3 entered the game 5-0 in Fenway Park this season, and was 48-31 lifetime in the ballpark, including 25-8 since 1986. Hurst worked 8 1/3 innings, allowing five runs on nine hits. He struck out 11 and walked one.

Royals 3, Mariners 0

At Kansas City, Ted Power pitched a four-hitter, his second shutout in 308 career games, to give the Kansas City Royals a 3-0 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Power 2-1 outduelled Bill Swift for his first decision in four starts since moving from the bullpen in mid-May. He walked one, struck out five and retired 12 consecutive batters through the middle innings.

Swift 5-2 yielded nine hits and one earned run, walking one and striking out two in losing for the first time since May 12. He had a three-game winning streak snapped, but pitched his fourth straight complete game.

Rangers 10, White Sox 2

At Chicago, Curtis Wilkerson went 4 for 5 and Geno Petralli and Pete Incaviglia each collected three hits and two RBI, carrying the Texas Rangers to a 10-2 rout of the Chicago White Sox.

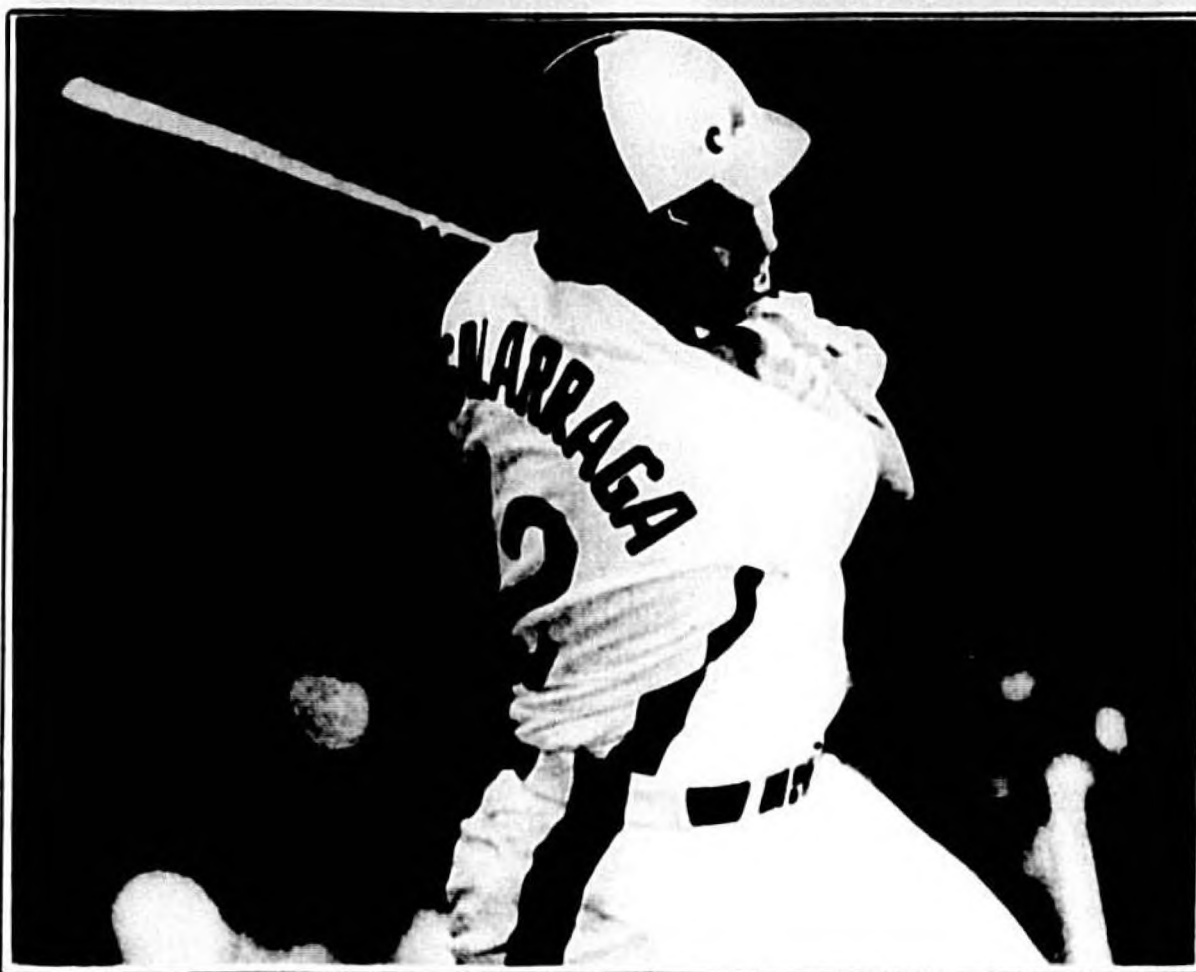

The Rangers tied a club record with seven doubles, with Wilkerson picking up three and Incaviglia two.

Charlie Haugh 5-6, allowed nine hits with a wild pitch and a balk in his third complete game of the season. Melido Perez, 5-2, took the loss.

Brewers 9, Angels 4

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Greg Maddux hit Bob Deer with a pitch with the bases loaded in the seventh inning and Glenn Hughes followed with a two-run double, highlighting a four-run rally that led to the Milwaukee Brewers to a 9-4 victory over the California Angels.

Don August worked two hitless innings for the victory in his major league debut. Dan Plesac threw two scoreless innings for his 12th save.

Andres Gallarraga takes a swing. Gallarraga drove in a career high five runs Thursday as the Expos beat the Pirates, 7-3.

Pena's hit gives Cards win in 14th

NATIONAL LEAGUE

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Tom Brunansky from second base with two outs in the 14th Thursday night to lift the St. Louis Cardinals to a 3-2 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Brunansky drew a one out walk from Danny Clay 0-1 and stole second. One out later Pena hit a grounder to second baseman Juan Samuel and slid into first, just beating the throw. Brunansky never stopped running and reached home about the time the throw reached first. Manager Lee Elia and first baseman Von Hayes argued with first base umpire John McSherry but the call stood.

John Costello 1-0 who pitched 1 2/3 innings in his major league debut struck out the side in the 14th.

The teams set a record for left 38 men on base to set a record for a 14-inning game with Philadelphia stranding 20. The previous record of 37 was set by Houston and Cincinnati on July 2, 1976.

St. Louis Tom Brunansky extended his hitting streak to 18 games with a fourth-inning single-to-let.

Mets 2, Cubs 1

At New York, Howard Johnson smacked a home run leading off the 13th inning, hitting the New York Mets to a 2-1 triumph over the Chicago Cubs.

Johnson's hit his ninth homer of the season on a 1-0 pitch 415 feet to dead center field off Frank DiPino 0-2, the third Chicago hurler. DiPino was starting his second inning of relief after striking out two of the three batters he faced in the 12.

Randy Myers 1-0 threw 1 2/3 hitless innings, walking none and striking out two. Myers had relieved Roger McDowell with one out and the bases loaded in the 12th. He struck out Manny Trillo on a 3-2 pitch and Vance Law was tagged out trying to steal home.

Damon Berryhill led off the 10th inning with his first major league home run, for a 1-0 scoreless tie in a pitching duel between New York's David Cone and Chicago's Calvin Scoburn. Both starters had allowed only four hits through nine innings.

New York tied the score on pinch hitter Lee Mazzilli's RBI single off Rich Gossage.

Expos 7, Pirates 3

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Andres Gallarraga drove in a career high five runs and scored the game winner to lift the Montreal Expos to a 7-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates, who lost their third straight game.

Gallarraga manufactured the game-winning run, which broke a 2-2 tie, without the benefit of any hits in the sixth inning. He walked with one out, advanced from first to third when Hubie Brooks hit a grounder to third base and scored on a wild pitch by losing starter Bob Walk, 5-1, who gave up just two hits in seven innings.

Gallarraga hit his two-run single in the third and smacked a three-run home run in the ninth.

The victory went to Neal Heaton 2-3, who gave up five hits, including solo home runs by Randy Milligan and Barry Bonds, over six innings. Joe Beske pitched the last three innings to earn his first save.

Baseball Central

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin suspended and fined Thursday for throwing dirt on an umpire, took some verbal swipes at the men in blue after the punishment was announced.

Martin, whose three-game suspension begins Friday, said umpire Rich Garcia, "being a crew chief with three young umpires, mishandled the incident that led to his suspension."

Garcia's comments concerning his child being upset at my throwing dirt makes me want to laugh," Martin said. "Because I have a grandchild, for whom I'd do anything, and didn't appreciate it either. And when he muzzles his umpires and doesn't allow them to talk to the media, you wonder what country he thinks he's in."

He doesn't let other people speak for themselves. That's not right either. This is America.

Martin said league officials use a double standard when dealing with umpires.

I think after 100 years of baseball, umpires should not stand on the fact that they are in the major leagues to do anything they want," he said. "They should be evaluated constantly, and if their performance warrants, they should be sent down or suspended like managers are. It should be a two-way street."

We never road around what happens to them, but the whole world knows what happens to me and it isn't fair. I should be public knowledge on both sides.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — The Kansas City Royals announced Thursday they plan to buy back the 1987 World Series ring, which was stolen Wednesday because of a malfunctioning train.

College game wants attention

By MIKE TULLY
UPI National Baseball Writer

SCOUTING REPORT

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — College baseball coaches have seen the fuss made over basketball's Final Four, and they can hardly disguise their envy.

Nor can you blame them. Right now, the College World Series hardly matches those Final Four games played in packed gymnasiums on national TV.

Why, the coaches reason, shouldn't baseball create similar interest? It's the national pastime. If the whole country pauses to watch the World Series each fall, shouldn't more attention go to the college championship?

Actually, the College World Series, which opens Friday night, is growing in stature. People recall seeing the likes of Roger Clemens, Greg Swindell and Jack McDowell play in it. This year, ESPN will televise all games except the last one, which will go on CBS. That's progress.

But coaches want more. First of all, they love the sport and want to see it appreciated. Furthermore, more fans can mean more money. More money means more fans. That new wave of interest, it does keep the No. 1 seed away from the No. 2 seed early.

No matter how you do this thing, everybody has to be involved a little bit with money. That's one of the reasons the format was changed in the first place.

Another idea to increase exposure comes from Wichita State Coach Gene Stephenson, who lobbies to play the college season later in the year.

"We feel very strongly it's something college baseball needs to do to continue to grow and showcase the sport for the entire nation," Stephenson said. "It's a great opportunity if we extend the college season to start later in the season when everybody has better weather."

"I think it would be a much better situation nationwide. You would see more teams with an opportunity to perhaps get to the College World Series and compete for a national championship. You'd also see more fan interest throughout the country at a time when baseball season is supposed to be played."

The alternative was to come in here with four teams, one plays four, two plays three, then you go home," said Fresno State Coach Bob Bennett. "And I didn't think that would have been very interesting. I think the fact that we have two divisions will create a

41 players invited to tryouts

OMAHA, Neb. (UPI) — Andy Benes, the top overall pick in baseball's amateur draft, heads a list of 41 players invited to try out for the 1988 United States Olympic team.

Benes, a right-hander from the University of Evansville, joins Jim Abbott, the University of Michigan product born without a right hand as potential hurlers for the U.S. squad.

Team head coach Mark Marquess of Stanford made the announcement Thursday before the NCAA College World Series.

Benes, 6-foot-6 and 235 pounds, became the top overall pick Wednesday when the San Diego Padres tabbed him. The California Angels made Abbott the eighth overall selection. In all, the United States Baseball Federation has invited nine first-round picks, but Marquess said he expects no players to turn pro immediately.

"I don't think we're going to lose anyone to the pros to be honest with you," Marquess said. "I think professional baseball has cooperated. A release has come from the Commissioner's office saying any young man who wants to play on the Olympic team can do so. He can still sign his contract as long as he doesn't get the money."

Drafted invitees include right-hander Greg Olson, who went to Kalamitome on the fourth overall pick, middle infielder Ty Griffin, Cubs, ninth, third baseman Robin Ventura, White Sox, 10th, left-hander Pat Combs, Philadelphia, 11th, first baseman Tim Martinez, Seattle, 14th, right-hander Charles Nagy, Cleveland, 17th, and third baseman Ed Sprague, Toronto, 25th.

"The real problem with selecting any group is you're going to leave some outstanding players out," said Marquess. "And there are a lot of outstanding players who aren't on this list."

After that series, Marquess will cut to the traveling level of 25. A decision on the final 20-man Olympic and World Championship roster comes in August.

St. Petersburg strikes out

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Boosters hoping to lure the Chicago White Sox to Florida need to come up with $15 million for St. Petersburg's Suncoast Dome after a Senate committee crippled a $30 million inducement package.

The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Thursday to provide only $15 million in state funds to rush local efforts to complete the new stadium in time for the Sox to open the 1989 season in Florida.

Sen. Curt Kiser, R-Palm Harbor, said there might not be time to raise the additional cash locally.

"We have to do a lot of scrambling here," Kiser said. "We don't have that much time."

Florida Sox boosters need an additional $15 million for artificial turf and other improvements, either by freeing the money from a Legislature that is already facing a lean budget year, or by raising local taxes.

The deal also depends on whether the Illinois Legislature approves an inducement package offered by Gov. Jim Thompson to keep the Sox in their home town.

The Florida House has already approved a package providing $15 million in equal installments over three years. The original plan would have allowed St. Petersburg's stadium authority to keep state sales taxes collected on ticket purchases as a guarantee against bonds that would have raised the additional $15 million.

An amended bill striking the bonding provision was passed 11-8.

GARDENING

Geraniums are worth the pampering

More than half of the flower growers and retail nurseries in the United States grow or sell geraniums. This indicates their wide appeal and range of climatic adaptability. Geraniums are popular for their continuous flowering throughout the summer and early fall. Geraniums take considerable greenhouse time and labor before reaching consumers, thus they are more expensive than many other bedding plants to produce.

Geraniums grow best in full sun. They will tolerate partial shade but will usually grow tall, producing fewer lateral branches and consequently fewer flowers. They should be spaced 18 inches apart in flower beds. To avoid disease problems and to give a well-groomed appearance, cut off all the old flower heads.

Geraniums grow best in soils that provide good drainage and aeration and have good moisture and nutrient retention capacities. Our sandy soils should be amended with organic matter. Incorporation of two or three inches of an organic material such as peat moss or corn post into the planting bed will increase both the water and nutrient holding capacity. The organic amendments should be thoroughly mixed into the soil.

Water geraniums during dry periods to prevent wilting and eventual yellowing and dropping of leaves. To determine the moisture content of the soil, pick up a handful and press it into your palm. If it crumbles, it needs watering. The soil should be kept moist but not wet. Keeping the soil wet encourages snail and slug populations that chew on foliage and invade root-rotting organisms. Avoid overhead irrigation when possible since wet flowers deteriorate very rapidly.

Garden soils, especially in new flower beds, are frequently low in fertility. Flower beds should be fertilized prior to planting or at planting time with a complete fertilizer like a 6-6-6 or similar analysis at the rate of 1 to 2 pounds per 100 square feet. It can be incorporated when preparing the beds or broadcast on top of the soil and watered in. Fertilizers should be applied once a month during the growing season.

Occasionally cutworms and caterpillars will feed on geraniums. They can be readily detected by the cut edges of the leaves where they feed. If you find that only a few caterpillars are causing the damages, you can hand pick them and destroy them rather than spraying the entire planting.

The most common diseases that attack geraniums attack other plants as well. Black rot caused by the Phytophthora fungus can be found mostly in younger plants and causes the plants to have a coal-black, slimy, wet appearance. The rot progresses rapidly often killing the plants within a week. Fungicides like Benlate can be used if the disease is in the initial stages. Decreasing your watering can also help.

Botrytis caused by the common gray mold Botrytis cinerea produces spores that are airborne and germinate when they come in contact with wet foliage and flowers. Infected Botrytis blight avoid watering the foliage and flowers, especially in the late evening and when the humidity is high. Watering in the early morning is the recommended practice. Botrytis also starts on older, decayed leaves and flowers, so it is important to remove and destroy them.

Stocks higher at opening

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stock prices moved higher in active trading today after erasing some minor weakness at the opening bell.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which fell 11.56 Thursday, was up 6.94 to 2059.39 shortly after the market opened.

Advances led declines 449-305 among the 1,257 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Early turnover amounted to about 8,480,000 shares.

Before the market opened, the Labor Department said the nation's civilian unemployment rate rose two-tenths of a percentage point in May to 5.8 percent from 5.4 percent in April, while non-farm payrolls rose 209,000.

Dollar hits 7-week high in Tokyo, slips in Europe

By United Press International

The U.S. dollar reached a seven-week high in Tokyo against the Japanese yen Friday but slipped lower at the opening of European foreign exchanges. The price of gold jumped $10 per ounce.

In Tokyo the dollar closed at 126.11 yen against Thursday's close of 125.68. Friday's close was the highest since April 14, when the dollar closed at 126.15 yen.

Dealers said the dollar's strengthening was in line with overnight rises on overseas markets where the dollar rose on speculative buying. There also were reports of West German and British central bank intervention seeking to cool the dollar's rise.

The dollar opened in Zurich at 1.4340 Swiss francs against 1.4415 in Paris at 5.8320 francs against 5.8455, in Brussels at 36.20 Belgian francs against 36.35, in Amsterdam at 1.9350 guilders against 1.9420 and in Milan at 1,283.82 lire against 1,288.

In London the pound opened stronger against the dollar at $1.8040 against $1.7977. At the Frankfurt exchange, which was closed Thursday for a holiday, the dollar opened at 1.7237 marks against Wednesday's 1.7210.

May jobless rate rises

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Unemployment rose to 5.8 percent in May — an increase of two-tenths of a percentage point — sparked by a jump in joblessness among adult men, the government reported today.

The nation's unemployment rate in April was 5.4 percent. The 5.8 percent for May returned the jobless rate to the same level as March.

The increase in joblessness reversed a general downward trend since last fall.

"Most of the over-the-month change in joblessness occurred among adult men, whose unemployment rate rose 0.3 percentage point to 4.9 percent," the Labor Department said.

Some 6.8 million people were unemployed in May, the Labor Department reported.

The department noted, however, that since May 1987, the unemployment level has declined overall by about 800,000 people — a reduction of 0.7 percent.

The employment picture deteriorated slightly in the finance, insurance and real estate industries.

Since January, 10,000 jobs have disappeared in the financial sector of the economy, the Labor Department said, a significant factor because finance had been "one of the best performers throughout much of the (economic) expansion."

MacDaniel said, "We have a need to either die or grow."

Greg Cohen, director of the Marianna Chamber of Commerce, said when he heard the bureau of prisons was seeking new sites in the southeastern United States, he wrote them in 1984 and offered Jackson County as a possible site.

Bouyed by near-total community support, the bureau agreed in 1985 to build the 700-man prison on land donated by the city. Construction on the $39 million complex was begun in 1986 and is expected to be complete by late July, he said.

When complete, the Marianna facility will house 406 males and 54 females in a medium-high security facility surrounded by fences and sharp-edged "razor wire." Wires running above and below ground warn correctional officers if they are crossed.

The facility will also house 148 females in a minimum security "camp," which is an open campus-like setting with no fences. The camp has basketball courts, a softball field, park benches with colorful umbrellas, and a beauty salon. The entire Marianna facility is made of pink stone and buildings have red peaked roofs.

McMahon said the proposed Sanford prison would be similar to the Marianna facility, except it would house only men and would probably follow a different architectural style. It would include an open camp for minimal-risk inmates, he said.

Marianna FCI Warden Sam Samples said that facility will have a $10 million budget during the first, start-up year, which will increase to about $11.5 million during the second year of operation. Salaries account for $6 million of the start-up budget and at least half of the employees will be hired locally, he said.

Earlier, the Seminole group had an opportunity to tour the 50-year-old Tallahassee FCI to see the impact of an established prison on the community.

The red brick structure stood in stark contrast to the new Marianna facility. A guard tower looms overhead and the solid-looking dormitories surrounding well-groomed grounds suggests a no-nonsense approach to incarceration.

Tallahassee FCI Warden Bob

Honsted said the medium-security facility houses about 1,000 to 1,100 male inmates who have average sentences of four years. The average stay for an inmate at Tallahassee is 14 months before they are transferred to another prison, he said.

The prison has 262 staff members and had an annual operating budget of $18 million last year, Honsted said. Of the total budget, about $8 million was spent on salaries and $10.2 million was spent for supplies and services, he said.

Honsted said about 70 percent of the $10.2 million was spent locally, including $518,000 for local physicians to provide care for inmates.

Four inmates have escaped in the last year and two were recaptured, Honsted said. Tallahassee Police Chief Melvin Tucker said the escapes cause no local concern because the escapees leave the area quickly to avoid capture.

Tom Hinson of Barnett Bank said the prison hasn't deterred growth near it and property values adjacent to the prison are increasing. He said a popular city-county park is also next to the prison and several schools are nearby.

"They (Orlando) have their own circumstances there that they are trying to find solutions for," said Latzenby. "There is enough air traffic for everybody."

Carol M. Fennell said the Greater Orlando Aviation Authority financed the study for three reasons: to identify potential search area sites for reliever airports to service areas east and west of Orlando; to coordinate efforts with existing plans with other airports; and to identify existing, efficient reliever airport in the area.

"Sanford is a good airport with reliever capabilities to take some of the activity from Orlando," said Fennell. "I'm positive that there will be growth at the Sanford airport just based on growth in Orange and Seminole County."

According to Robertson, the Sanford Regional Airport was identified as a reliever site for Orlando several years ago, qualifying it for federal dollars which are dispensed by the Federal Aviation Administration. The funds are used to maintain the reliever airport facilities such as runways and terminal buildings in order to protect capital investments at larger airports, said Robertson.

Currently, the Sanford Airport Authority is endeavoring to bring a commercial airline carrier to the airport.

J.S. "Red" Cleveland, Executive Director of the Sanford Airport Authority, said $20,000 was added to the airport's budget to help with the endeavor.

Previously, a $30,000 study financed by the Sanford Airport Authority indicated that there was a need for commercial carriers to and from Sanford with targeted destinations of New York, Miami, Atlanta, Ga., and Charlotte, N.C.

Cleveland said contacts have been made with several airlines and a formal presentation with one carrier is scheduled for July.

The Sanford Airport Authority has also formed a marketing committee to conduct its own survey into the feasibility of hiring an air carrier to the airport.

Cleveland also has plans to develop a helicopter service between the Sanford airport and Orlando International.

The commission also adopted a 6-month moratorium on construction along Lake Mary Boulevard within the 104-foot setback.

Commissioners amended the ordinance last month to account for the future alignment of Lake Mary Boulevard as decided by Seminole County. A shift in the 104-foot setback from the new centerline of the boulevard resulted.

Commissioner Thomas Mahoney voted against the moratorium. "This morning we had a 65-foot setback. This evening we have 39 feet, he said in a conversation after the meeting.

Mahoney has expressed concerns about a five-block section along Lake Mary Boulevard. That section, he said, is bordered by properties with shallow lots. Mahoney explained that the depth of the properties and the restrictions of the 104-foot setback have curbed development while issues such as the future aesthetic appearance of Lake Mary Boulevard are discussed.

However, amending the ordinance affected the north and south sides of the road differently, he said. Mahoney said the shift in the center point from which the setback is measured had a positive affect on the south side of the road by expanding the setback from 20 to 39 feet from the road to the property line.

On the north side, however, the ordinance effectively reduced the setback from 65 feet to 39 feet. "It may allow a developer a window of opportunity," Mahoney said about builders beginning construction. "I don't believe we're ready for that development," he said.

The commission voted 4 to 1 in favor of the moratorium and made plans for a workshop to discuss more specific issues like landscape buffers and cross access roads.

Officials probe Chicago fire

NORTH CHICAGO, Ill. (UPI) — With the removal of two more bodies from the rubble of a Traco Inc. plastics factory, officials say all employees are accounted for and now they can begin searching for what touched off a series of deadly blasts and subsequent fire.

State, local and federal officials were at the scene Thursday, sifting through the twisted steel and piles of concrete at the Coleman Industrial Complex, some 30 miles north of Chicago. Authorities said it could be days or weeks before a cause is determined.

David Morgan of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration said investigators would be looking at "what type of chemicals, if any, they were using, what precipitated the explosion and that sort of thing."

"But at this point and time it's just too early to tell what happened," he said Thursday. "I really have no idea."

Reports that employees were mixing silicone lubricant at the time of the first blast could not be confirmed by officials at the scene.

The late Wednesday afternoon accident killed three people and injured 10 others.

The bodies of two women, believed to be those of a mother and her stepdaughter, were pulled from the smoldering rubble shortly before 3 p.m. Thursday, nearly 24 hours after the initial explosion. The first body was recovered late Wednesday night.

Harriett would not release the nature of the evidence. "That information will be important when we apprehend him, and we will apprehend him. That is information we have to restrict."

The possible murder weapon, a knife, and an empty cash box were found by police a short distance from the crime.

Harriett said Colfed has been considered a suspect since the murder-robbery but due to the complexity of the investigation, a warrant was not issued until Wednesday.

Several pieces of evidence had to be sent to Washington, D.C., for analysis before a warrant could be issued, Harriett said.

Harriett also said he will contact the Federal Bureau of Investigation to determine whether interstate flight charges are appropriate.

Cop killer gets death penalty

BRADENTON, (UPI) — Daniel Burns Jr. was sentenced to death Thursday for the shooting death last August of Florida Highway Patrol Trooper Jeffrey D. Young.

Burns, 43, of Highland Park, Mich., was convicted of first-degree murder last month and the jury recommended death by a 10-2 vote.

Manatee Circuit Judge Stephen L. Dakan followed that recommendation Thursday and sentenced Burns to die in the state's electric chair. The sentence will be appealed automatically to the Florida Supreme Court.

Young, 28, was killed with his own weapon during a struggle after he stopped a car on Interstate 75 near Bradenton Aug. 18 and found crack cocaine in the trunk.

Pipe smokers are cool, calm, collected

Story and photos
By Susan Loden
Herald Staff Writer

With conflict between smokers and non smokers heating up, pipe smokers seem to be quietly in the sidelines, struggling to keep their pipes lit to continue a tradition that began among palefaces in 1492.

True, pipe and cigar smokers aren't any more welcome in no smoking zones than cigarette smokers, and they are feeling the brunt of a new 25 percent state tax on tobacco, intended to curb the habit. However, their minority status among smokers and the status of some well known pipe smokers add a touch of romanticism to pipe pulling.

Pipe smokers have a kindly intelligent image. After all, Santa Claus and super sleuth Sherlock Holmes are pipe smokers.

The sweet, fruity aromas of American tobaccos can draw admirers or detractors. European versions have a more "tobacco" smell, which doesn't appeal to most Americans' senses, while the sweet American blends don't usually appeal to Europeans.

When Columbus discovered America, he also discovered tobacco, and soon Europeans were "sipping" smoke through their own versions of the American Indian's peace pipe. In that era, because the smoker sipped smoke through the pipe, as if drinking through a straw, pipe smoking was referred to as "drinking" tobacco. As the smoke was exhaled through the nose, it was believed to clean the nasal passages and was seen as, believe it or not, a health benefit.

When Elizabeth I was queen of England, her favorite, Sir Walter Raleigh, so popularized the tobacco weed that the queen reportedly said, "Many alchemist have...turned gold into smoke, but Raleigh is the first to turn smoke into gold."

...Pipe

Europeans took pipe smoking to heart and craftsmen began producing fine examples of pipes in England, Italy, Ireland, and Spain. That pipemaking tradition continues today, with few quality pipes being made in the U.S., according to Tim Green, 29, of Sanford, who sells pipes and tobaccos in an Altamonte Mall shop.

About the only U.S.-made pipe with any continued status, be it ever so humble, is the corn-cob pipe. Green said, at about $3 each the corn-cob pipe is the life-time choice of many pipe smokers, despite the fact they wear out quickly. "They smoke well," as pipes go, Green said.

He pointed out that part of the aura of pipe smoking is packing the bowl with tobacco and then trying to keep the tobacco lit. A task, he said, no pipe smoker can accomplish, so only the calm and patient are successful pipe smokers.

There are contests, with prizes up to $15,000, Green said, for smokers to see who can keep their pipes lit the longest.

More enduring materials for the bowls of pipes are briar burl and clay. Value of a pipe can range from a few dollars, for a "drugstore" model, to several thousand dollars, depending on the carving, fine materials or other refinements associated with a particular pipe, Green said.

Some bowls, both of wood and clay may be elaborately carved with human, demon, animal or other forms. Others are smooth and sleek and there are a variety of shapes common in pipe form.

Green, who is a non-smoker, said, "You don't have to be pregnant to work in a maternity shop. You don't have to smoke to work in a tobacco shop. It just takes a little training."

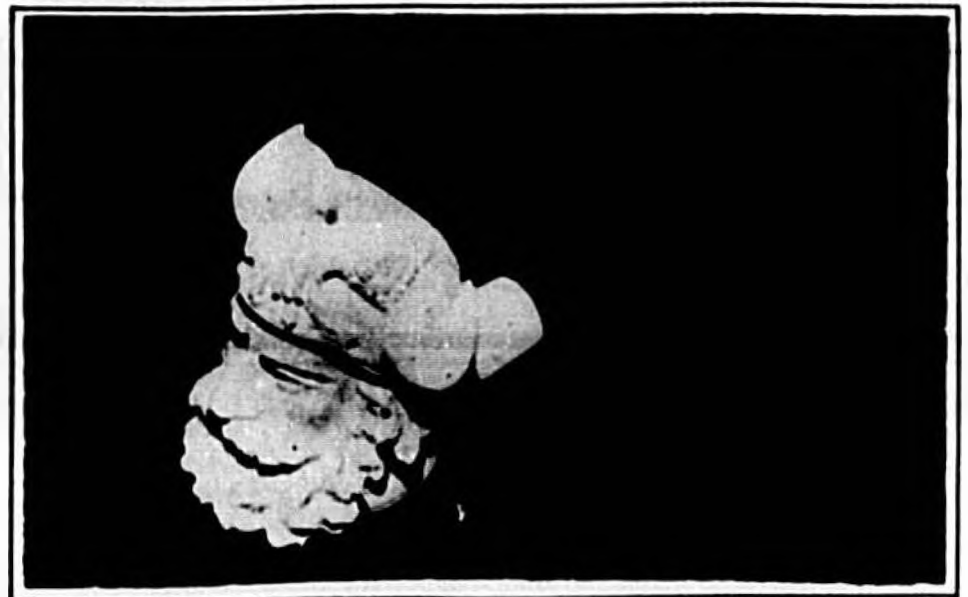

A part of his training has been in observing pipe smokers. That has led him to conclude that for them smoking is a leisurely pastime. "The old English style of pipe smoking can be compared to wine sipping. Cigarette smokers are guzzlers. Pipe smokers have a reputation as soft, easy going. Car salesmen hate to deal with a pipe smoker, because they can't make up their minds.

"They're calm and easy going. They'll wait their turn, when cigarette smokers are obnoxious," Green said.

Some try pipe smoking as a method to gracefully withdraw from cigarette smoking. For some it works, Green said, and they give up smoking after the pipe serves as a pacifying bridge away from tobacco. Others become pipe smokers, while some go back to cigarettes.

Pipe smoking isn't restricted by class, but Green said, the middle class seem to be drawn more to the pipe and may pay $300 for a fine pipe when they can't pay their rent. Men make up the majority of pipe smokers, although, Green said, some women are closet pipe smokers.

"We recommend a pipe smoker have at least seven pipes, Green said. "One for each day. Moisture builds up in a pipe and they need to dry out

A hand-carved meerschaum pipe by a European craftsman can cost hundreds of dollars.

Some own 40 or 50 pipes. Some buy one and smoke it to ruin and then buy another."

He recommends that novice pipe smokers start out in the evening, so they will have plenty of time to fiddle with the pipe, filling it, tamping in the tobacco and trying in vain to keep it lit.

"The tighter the grain and the older the wood, the better the better they smoke," he said of pipes. Some want to be true connoisseurs of pipes and tobaccos, while others want "to keep up with the Jones," and impress others with a fancy pipe and aromatic tobaccos.

Pipe shop tobaccos cost about $1 an ounce in Florida, and a decent pipe can be picked up for $15 to $20, Green said.

The earliest artistic depiction of a pipe smoker is a picture of a Mayan Priest found in a temple in Mexico. The work was carved around 100 A.D. and shows the priest puffing on a tube stuffed with smoldering tobacco.

It was the fate of the Mayans was to disappear. Would-be pipe smokers are cautioned they might face the same fate, since smoking is harmful. But perhaps it's a bit less risky for pipe smokers, who can't keep the weed burning as they slip away in a pacified state.

Making money on movie mayhem

By Vernon Scott

UPI Hollywood Reporter

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — What do Jason Voorhees, Michael Myers and Freddy Krueger have in common?

They are among the most popular characters in today's motion pictures, and they are all figments. But for sheer fan power, they are right up there with Dirty Harry, John Rambo and Indiana Jones.

Jason, Michael and Freddy are cult heroes on the grand scale. The world knows that Harry, Rambo and Indiana are ostensibly good guys who fight for justice, mom and apple pie in about that order.

But even these intrepid heroes would be hard pressed to deal with Jason, Michael and Freddy, a trio of mass murderers who decimate the populace of scantily clad, nubile young women every year or so.

This anti-heroic group of maniacs star in horror films that send kids dashing to the box office and their parents running for cover.

Jason is the menace of the "Friday the 13th" series. Michael is the resident homicidal killer of the "Halloween" thrillers. Freddy is the bloodthirsty weirdo of the "Nightmare on Elm Street" shockers.

There is also old Leather Face from the "Texas Chainsaw Massacre" mayhem movies, but this nameless numbskull who wields the lethal saw has only been to bat twice and may not have the staying power of the other gory geeks.

The amazing popularity of these murderers is testimony to the fact that audiences love to be scared witless once in a while.

The most enduringly successful of the bunch is the "Friday the 13th" series, which is estimated to have grossed more than $172 million for the first six movies going back to 1980.

"Friday the 13th Part VII," subtitled "The New Blood," opened a couple of weeks ago to a rip-roaring $9.5 million to lead all other money-making films for the week.

The amazing part of the "Friday the 13th," "Halloween" and "Elm Street" phenomenon is that there is no recurring actor or actress to provide a sense of continuity to the pictures. There is no Clint Eastwood, Sylvester Stallone nor Harrison Ford to entice fans to theaters.

The actor who plays Jason (Kane Hodder) in "Friday the 13th Part VII" is the seventh one to play the blood-soaked villain.

Robert Englund has played Freddy in all of the three "Nightmare on Elm Street" pictures and is playing the role again in the current sequel.

Behind the mask of Michael Myers in the first "Halloween," directed by John Carpenter, was Nick Castle who now also directs. In the second in the series Michael was played by Dick Warlock, probably the most appropriate name ever.

An important element of these films is the ever-present horror of the bad guy who is, by and large, unrecognizable.

Jason hides behind a hockey goalie's mask. Freddy's face is mostly concealed by scars, but everyone recognizes his knife blade fingernails. Michael is so disfigured he could be played by anyone from Brooke Shields to Woody Allen with the right makeup.

The heroes and heroines in these films are even more anonymous than the lumbering, apparently indestructible monsters who harvest a fresh batch of human flesh in every picture.

It is unnecessary for the audience to identify with any- thing but the horror of the mindless killers.

Even the old "Frankenstein" movies had a commonality and recognizable thread in Boris Karloff, whose very name scared movie patrons 40 years ago.

Indeed, Jason, Freddy and Michael are linear descendants of Frankenstein's monster, and like the old monster each of the anti-heroes is seemingly destroyed at the end of each picture.

They have been burned, blown up, drowned, shot, sliced and diced, decapitated and otherwise dispatched.

But in each new film they are somehow resurrected to go about their bloody business and the far more important job of earning big bucks at the box office.

A fascinating note: although the actors beneath the makeup are not really identifiable, any of these horror pictures made without Jason, Freddy or Michael are doomed to failure.

The plot of "Friday the 13th Part V" featured a Jason impostor and audiences expressed their displeasure through word-of-mouth, resulting in a drop in box-office receipts.

When "Halloween III" eliminated Michael from the script it met with disaster. "Halloween IV," now filming, has Michael safely back in the cast.

John Carl Buechler, a student of this film genre and director of "Friday the 13th Part VII," says comic-horror films have been and remain a staple of the motion picture industry for one basic reason.

They make money. Lots of money.

Most of today's cult horror films are made for about $3 million or less, as compared with the average mainstream film, which costs about $17 million.

Buechler is the sixth director of the "Friday" series. Sean Cunningham directed the original, with Steve Miner directing films two and three, Joe Zito directed No. 4, Danny Steinmann and Tom McLaughlin directed five and six respectively.

The bearded, balding Buechler is more than just another film director. He is one of the makeup magicians and special effects whizzes of Hollywood.

Buechler employs a dozen full-time artists to create new horrors. Sometimes, as on his assignment for the movie "Arena," due for release next year, he employs 65 workers.

Star Speak

Talking with Bette Midler

By Frank Sanello

Bette Midler marches into the Four Seasons Hotel in Los Angeles carrying her 18-month-old daughter, Sophie. Both of them are dressed to the nines. Midler is enjoying new-found confidence as the star of four hit comedies in a row for Disney's Touchstone Pictures: "Down and Out in Beverly Hills" (1986), "Ruthless People" (1986), "Outrageous Fortune" (1987) and this summer's "Big Business."

Q: How do you feel about being called Disney's biggest star since Minnie Mouse? A: I'm thrilled. I don't know how Minnie feels about it, but we haven't had lunch yet. Q: Considering Disney's G-rated past, did you ever think you and your raunchy brand of humor would ever find a home in the Magic Kingdom? A: Ironic, ain't it? But I loved Disney's view of the world, even though it was a narrow one. It did a service, yet a disservice, too. Let's face it: If Walt were alive today, they wouldn't let me in the front gate of the studio. Q: How do you rate the current management of Disney, which has turned out one hit comedy after another? A: They're so straightforward. There's no internal politicking or backstabbing or intrigue — which has not been the case with my experiences at other studios. I'm kind of easygoing. I don't like conflict. Q: After you received an Oscar nomination for your performance in "The Rose," were you surprised that your film career didn't take off? A: I wasn't surprised. I was hurt. And I'm still not all that secure. I don't feel like the reigning queen of the Magic Kingdom. Believe me, they can take it all away from you tomorrow, so I don't let it get to me. Q: Which of your Disney films is your favorite? A: "Big Business" is the "cleanest." It's PG-rated. It's the only film I've made that I can take Sophie to. And it's the only film I've done where I liked how I looked on the screen. Q: I notice you're smoking. Did you smoke when you were pregnant? A: No! I don't really smoke now. I just like to have something to do with my hands. Q: When you were making "Outrageous Fortune" with Shelley Long, there were press reports that you two didn't get along. A: Well, she had an agenda that was not my agenda. Her goals were often in conflict with mine, but part of an actress's job is to bring a beehive of creativity and thoughts on the set. Q: You told Vanity Fair in an interview that you're tired of doing comedies and long to do drama. A: That's not true. I'll do anything Disney gives me. I'm under contract. Frank Sanello is an entertainment columnist with Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Who in the world was Suzanne Caputo?

Dear Dick: I recently saw a real old "My Three Sons." There was a little girl that looked and sounded like Morgan Brittany. Her name, in the credits, was Suzanne Caputo. Was that Morgan Brittany? — Unsigned, Muskegon, Mich.

Dear Unsigned: Yes. When she was old enough to make her own decisions, she decided she was more a Morgan Brittany than a Suzanne Caputo.

Dear Dick: I remember somewhere reading that William Boyd (who played Hopalong Cassidy) was one of the only Oriental persons to become a hero of the old western movies. Please give us some information about his birth place and nationality. — C.L.B., Houston.

Dear C.L.B.: Whatever you read must have been in a Chinese fortune cookie. No, William Boyd was not an Oriental. He was born in Cambridge, Ohio, in 1895 — and he was as American as apple pie a la mode.

Dear Dick: Please help me win a bet with my fiancée. What was the name of the bridge that Robby Benson jumped off in the movie, "Ode To Billy Joe"? I say it was the Tallahatchie Bridge but she says it was the Tallahassee Bridge. A car washing and waxing is riding on this. — D.D.W., Friendswood, Texas.

Dear D.D.W.: Hand her the sponge. Tallahatchie Bridge is correct.

Dear Dick: Could you please answer some questions about the TV show "Dallas" during its early episodes? Before Bobby and Pam were married, didn't Ray Krebbs used to go with Pam? Also, wasn't Ray at one time fooling around with Lucy? Also, I have read that "Dallas" is a spin-off of "Knots Landing," but I always thought it was the other way around. — J.M., Reading, Pa.

Dear J.M.: The easy part: "Dallas" came first. In 1978, followed a year later by "Knots Landing." Bobby and Pam were already married when the show started. Ray, who had been Pam's beau before she met Bobby, then began a secret liaison with Lucy. Ray and Lucy — who fooled around with half of Texas in her early days on the show — were an item right from the start.

Dear Dick: Are Neville Brand and Jack Lord related in any way? — S.N., Clinchco, Va.

Dear S.N.: No. Dear Dick: Several years ago, I saw the last half of a movie on TV, "Queen Of the Stardust Ballroom." I would like to know who played in it, and is it on cassette? — D.R.M., Cheyenne, Wyoming.

Dear D.R.M.: Maureen Stapleton and Charles Durning were the stars of that delightful film, which is available on videocassette.

Dear Dick: Is Jeff East the boy who played Timmy on "Lassie"? I say he was, my husband says no. Who's right? — J.J., Gables, Mich.

Dear J.J.: This one time he's right. Jon Provost was the name of the young actor who was Timmy.

Dear Dick: Why, when showing the credits of cast members at the beginning of TV movies and programs, is there quite often one star who is listed last — along with the character name portrayed? Is this considered a better billing? — S.M., Kalamazoo, Mich.

Dear S.M.: Basically, that's it. The same thing applies to feature films, as well as TV films. Actors will often settle for special billing, as it's called, in lieu of more money. Any billing that sets a performer's name apart — such as being given a spot all to himself — is special, and supposedly important.

Dear Dick: Can you please tell me something about Alan Arkin of "Catch-22"? Where is he from? Age? Marital status? Real name? — Mrs. R.M., Houston.

Dear Mrs. R.M.: Alan Wolf Arkin was born in New York on March 26, 1934. He is currently married to actress Barbara Dana, who often appears with him. They have a son, Anthony. Alan also has two sons by his first marriage — the actor Adam Arkin, and Matthew.

Dear Dick: Can you please tell me the name of the girl who first sang the "Boop-Boop-Be-Doop" song? — Mrs. A.F.B., Newfane, N.Y.

Dear Mrs. A.F.B.: The voice of Betty Boop was first supplied by Helen Kane.

Dear Dick: Please tell me if Cheryl and Diane Ladd are related. Are they related to Alan Ladd? — E.M.M., Cheyenne, Wyoming.

Dear E.M.M.: Diane and Cheryl are not related to each other. Cheryl became a Ladd when she married David Ladd, the son of Alan.

Dear Dick: Could you please tell me about Bijou the little dog on "Hooperman"? What breed is she? Is it an A.K.C. recognized breed? — C.S., Nipomo, Calif.

Dear C.S.: Although the little rascal looks like a mongrel, she is a Jack Russell terrier, and the American Kennel Club does recognize that breed.

Dick Kleiner is the Hollywood columnist for the Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Fall TV season starts: Winter?...1989?

By Joan Hanner
UPI Feature Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The three television networks have announced their fall schedules, which could become their winter programming instead.

The major uncertainty about the 1988-89 television season concerns its starting date, which might be mid-November — or later.

The problem is the 13-week strike by the Writers Guild of America, with no end in sight. The strike is against the alliance of TV producers, not the networks which are uneasy bystanders.

Normal kickoff time is mid-September, and Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, has unilaterally announced that the fall season will start on Sept. 19, 52 weeks after the beginning of the previous television season.

Brandon Stoddard, president of ABC Entertainment, and his counterpart at CBS, Kim LeMasters, disagree. LeMasters and Stoddard give mid-October as the earliest possible starting date if the strike were to end immediately. Some gloom-and-doom experts talk about a starting date early in 1989.

Tartikoff and NBC can coast because the network will be broadcasting the Summer Olympics from Sept. 17 through Oct. 2, and the World Series starting Oct. 15. Tartikoff has added, however, that if the strike goes until Labor Day — as he believes possible — even the NBC season would start as late as mid-November.

All this is talk, of course, because it isn't the networks that decide when the season starts, it's a combination of the A.C. Nielsen Co. and Variety, the show biz newspaper.

CBS and ABC, and to a lesser degree NBC, will have to scramble for fall programming — LeMasters talked about the CBS movie inventory, programs from CBS News and purchasing third-run showings of series. Tartikoff said NBC could reactivate some past pilot scripts that read well but were poorly cast or executed.

Each network has a separate programming strategy in the schedules recently unveiled.

NBC wants to stay in command.

ABC must continue to upgrade the intelligence of its lineup to get away from prime time kid-vid.

CBS has to build its way out of the cellar, appealing to a younger audience than in the past and concentrating on the 8 p.m. time slot. Of the eight new CBS series, four have been appeal and two others are aimed at an upscale, young audience.

The week breaks down this way:

Sunday from 7-9 p.m. Eastern time remains with CBS, although "Family Ties" and "Day By Day" on NBC will continue to cut into the audience for "Murder, She Wrote" and ABC has high hopes for "A Fine Romance."

The movie competition from 9-11 p.m. will continue to be fierce. CBS made no changes on Sunday night and its rivals did, because CBS is the network to beat on Sunday.

On Monday night ABC and NBC have left their schedules unchanged. Monday is a movie night for NBC, which won more Mondays than it lost last year. ABC has football. CBS will gamble by moving the successful "Newhart" to the 8 p.m. slot to give the night a good start and has added two new sitcoms.

ABC is the network to beat on Tuesday, with only one new sitcom, "Roseanne," in its Tuesday schedule. The show is a favorite with many ABC executives.
