Does Sanford City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan's recent Does Sanford City Commissioner A.A. McClanahan's recent opposition to projects, ranging from city financing of the Monroe lakefront lighting and the use of city money to aid in downtown development, reflect negative thinking or independent thought?

"I restrict my dreaming to the nighttime," said McClanahan, denying that he is negative. "When I wake up during the day I am living in a factual, practical world. Dreamers are fine, but they can't run a business with nothing but dreams."

McClanahan admitted he has voted against: — The lakefront lighting if it were to be continued with the city paying the bill while the lights are not within city bounds.

Of the lakefront lighting project, McClanahan said it was strictly a matter of economics. We were working on a budget where we had to raise the city resident's taxes to meet city needs and had to cut where we could," he said, noting that no residents live along the lighted highway and the lights are located in county

Hannan - "Mike" to his friends - killed himself by firing a shot into his chest Thursday night, about 13 hours after he commandeered a Frontier Airlines jetliner in Grand Island, Neb., and held 15 persons hostage at the Atlanta airport. None of the Hannan, 29, was a soft-spoken, heavy-set man, once a member of his high school Letterman's Club who eventually became involved in a homosexual relationship with George David Stewart, a self-professed anti-What went wrong?

By all accounts, Hannan was a "normal" teen-ager. He was active in high school athletics and was called "quite good looking" by a female friend.

Born in Sioux Falls, S.D., he lived there until 1966 when his father found work at an ammunition plant in Grand Island. Hannan enrolled at Central Catholic High School and graduated the same year.

The Debate On A-Power

The Rand Corp: of Santa Monica has come out with a series of reports that shed a clear light on a controversial subject. The subject is the nuclear power industry

Tom Wicker of The New York Times, has raised a number of questions about the future of nuclear power. He asks who is going to pay the nuclear piper and suggests that disposing of nuclear fuel waste, dismantling obsolete nuclear power plants and obtaining an adequate supply of uranium for nuclear fuel will pose serious problems for the nuclear power industry in the near future.

These are legitimate concerns, shared by many Americans.

But the overarching concern emphasized in the Rand reports made public recently is the unquestioned fact that the nuclear industry offers the only far advanced technology to supply energy to our industrial economy at a time when fossile fuels have become more expensive and difficult to

The large-scale use of solar power is in the uture but nuclear power is an accomplished fact. It is clean and efficient.

"Notwithstanding a succession of technical and institutional problems, the overall operational history of the large nuclear plants has been as good or better than large modern fossil fuel plants," the Rand study says.

The American nuclear effort has produced light water reactors which now generate more than 70 per cent of the world's nuclear power. The output of a single plant has increased more than six times, from a maximum of 200 megawatts of electricity for the demonstration era plants to almost 1,300 megawatts of the largest currently being built.
The industry has been beset by economic troubles since 1963, when the transition was made from demonstration to full-scale commercial operation. Another set of problems arose because the federal government did not assume responsibility to research vital questions of waste disposal, commercial reprocessing and the

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Wylene Griner, Sanford, and

Vergil Griner of Tomball, Texas. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Eugene L. Robinson of Madison, Tenn. Given in marriage by her cousin, Donald Markland, the bride chose for her vows a formal gown of white gossamer sheer over peau de soie, fashioned with a natural waistline and full skirt. Crocheted daisies and appliques accented the V-neckline, lantern sleeves, bodice and hem. The same trim was repeated on her floor-length veil of silk illusion which was secured to a pearl and crocheted daisy cap. She carried a cascade of white daisies and yellow roses showered with ivy and baby's breath. Tonda Pfeiffer Ray attended the bride as maid of honor. Her yellow sheer dotted swiss gown featured a scooped ruffled neckline and a ruffled hemline. Her headpiece was a white picture hat with a cluster of daisies and yellow trim. She carried a wicker basket of yellow and white daisies and baby's breath. Bridesmalds were Brenda Markland and Doree Rice, cousins of the bride, and Rhonda Henderson and Sally Gladwell. Their gowns were identical to the honor attendants. They carried wicker baskets with white daisies. Lane Trawick served the bridegroom as best man. Usher-

Question: Just recently I saw your television program about the new hospital you're building in Tulsa. Since I always thought you stood for healing through faith and prayer, I can't figure out why you want to build a hospital. Answer: I have always believed and always will believe in the power of faith and prayer for healing. I expect to lay hands on the sick and pray for them till the day I die. But I also believe in the mportance of medical science for healing. And I believe that all nealing comes from God. Whether through doctors, medicine, and therapy or through prayer and faith, the source of all healing is God. He is the great Healer, the only Healer. When I'm sick, I see my doctor and follow his advice, and I pray and ask others to pray for me. I don't care how God chooses to heal me. The important thing to me is to God's delivery system has different channels, but they all originate in Him. And these channels for healing will be brought ogether in the City of Faith. This will be a Health Care Center consisting of a hospital, a clinic, and a research center. The City of Faith will be built on the campus of Oral Roberts University and staffed with spirit-filled medical experts who love the Lord. The City of Faith will work closely with our medical school and theology school on the same campus. It's exciting to me that the different channels of God's healing power will be united in one

This union of medical science and prayer working together to heal the sick will be represented by the Healing Hands, a 60-feet gh sculpture that you will see as you enter the City of Faith. The right hand will represent the healing stream of God's power through prayer. The left hand will represent the healing stream of God's power through medicine. The joined hands will represent the union of prayer and medicine reaching up to God, the Great Physician, the Source of all health and healing.

Woman Arrested In Sanford Stabbing

By BOB LLOYD Herald Staff Writer

Seminole sheriff's detectives have arrested elen Pritchard, 21, of 146 Academy Ave., Sanford, on an aggravated battery charge in the Thursday night stabbing of 23-year-old Patricia Washington, of Sanford, in the face with a pocket knife in a disturbance at the DeLuxe Bar, Southwest Road, Sanford, Bond for the suspect was set at $5,000.

Another woman, Cherol Burke, 17, of Sanford, was shot twice in the abdomen during the same incident but, according to county jail records, no charges have been made in the shooting.

Casselberry police arrested four men Friday night on felony drug charges after officers reported they watched an exchange of hashish cubes in the parking lot of the ABC Lounge, U.S. 17-92 and SR-436. Police said a search of a car turned up "five more cubes."

Jailed in lieu of $5,000 bond each on charges

In other arrests, two Midway men turned themselves in at county jail at Sanford for arrest on a circuit court warrant charging aggravated battery. Held in lieu of $8,400 bond each were Eddie Lewis Day, 19, of Main St., and Eugene Chism, 23, of Jenkins Quarters, both Midway, east of Sanford.

Casselberry police arrested two men in separate incidents. Terry Lee Seyk, 22, of 1416-C Sundance Apartments, Casselberry, was jailed in lieu of $5,000 bond on charges of fleeing and attempting to elude police, resisting arrest with violence and driving with suspended drivers license.

Steven Curtis Fowler, 19, of 301 Sweetwater
