A GLORIOUS TRADITION INSPIRES "KENTUCKY"

THE TECHNICOLOR cameras of 20th Century-Fox have focused on a setting of which the screen has shown all too little thus far—the renowned Blue Grass country of Kentucky. A colorful land of romance, tradition, and racing rivalry, the great State is the background of a great new picture "Kentucky," featuring Loretta Young, Richard Greene and Walter Brennan. It is scheduled for early local presentation. Photographed entirely in the jewel-toned hues of the new Technicolor under the supervision of Darryl F. Zanuck, the picture was directed by David Butler, a veteran of Southland productions. In the pictures on this page, taken during the filming, the story of "Kentucky" is graphically told.

1—In the magnificent Goodwin home in the heart of the Blue Grass land of Kentucky, Sally Goodwin (Loretta Young) relates as Uncle Peter (Walter Brennan) tells the story of the traditional enmity between the Goodwins and the neighboring Dillon family. The feud dates back to the War Between The States, when the two families differed in their loyalties and broke up a friendship of long standing. Yet, although the War-born strife is slowly being forgotten, the Goodwins and the Dillons have kept their enmity constantly alive.

2—One of the great traditions of Kentucky is the breeding and raising of thoroughbreds, for the great rolling blue-grassed plateaus are ideal for the purpose. Both the Goodwins and the Dillons share this hallowed love of horses, yet members of the two families avoid all social relationships. The only thing that will force one to talk to the other is a matter of business necessity, since Dillon is the head of the local bank. Sally, however, being a modern youngster, finds herself unable to take the feud as seriously as her Uncle Peter.

3—Sally meets young Jack Dillon at the track, but he conceals his identity with very good reason. Recently arrived from a long stay in England, he happened to see Sally out riding one day and was greatly attracted by her young beauty and vivacity. Also scornful of the feud, Jack phoned Sally's date, Uncle Peter, however, was furious at Sally's acceptance and forbade her to "trail with the Dillons." Jack, however, is still interested and to Sally's confidence he tells her he's a trainer employed by the Dillons.

4—Sudden tragedy strikes the Goodwin household. Sally's father was refused a loan from Dillon's bank and the shock of having to sell his home and stables proved too much for his heart. Jack was present at the bankers' meeting which considered Goodwin's application, and in hot-headed fashion he scolded the refusal in the company of the two families. Carried away by his own angry eloquence, Jack turns on his father and breaks with him.

5—With the home that sheltered her family for generations sold, and all the treasured heirlooms with it, Sally has hesitated to tell her mother the bad news. Mrs. Goodwin lies critically ill in the great house and when she senses the tragedy in the air she takes a turn for the worse. A winter storm has stalled all motor traffic, so Sally is forced to ride Beesie's Boy to fetch the doctor. Beesie's Boy, Sally's favorite in all the Goodwin stables, is the only horse she and Uncle Peter were able to salvage from the wreckage of their fortunes. But the long hard ride on the concrete highway to the doctor's home spells the finish of Beesie's Boy and with it their hopes for a comeback via a Kentucky Derby winner.

6—Sally and Uncle Peter and unexpected success—in a note signed by Banker Dillon, giving Sally's father his choice of any thoroughbred in the Dillon stables. The note is the result of a proposal Dillon made to Goodwin, shortly before the latter's death, that they cross the horses of the two stables. Goodwin suggested they gamble for it, and Dillon accepted.

7—Not sure whether "a Dillon would keep his word," Uncle Peter invades the Dillon property and demands his horse. Really a warm-hearted gentleman, the banker graciously gives him the run of his stables. Although she realizes that her Uncle bows to no one in his knowledge of horsemanship, Sally is shocked when Peter spurns Postman, a magnificent chestnut thoroughbred and pride of the Dillons, to choose an unprepossessing little black horse. Uncle Peter explains that his selection has the rare "look of eagles."

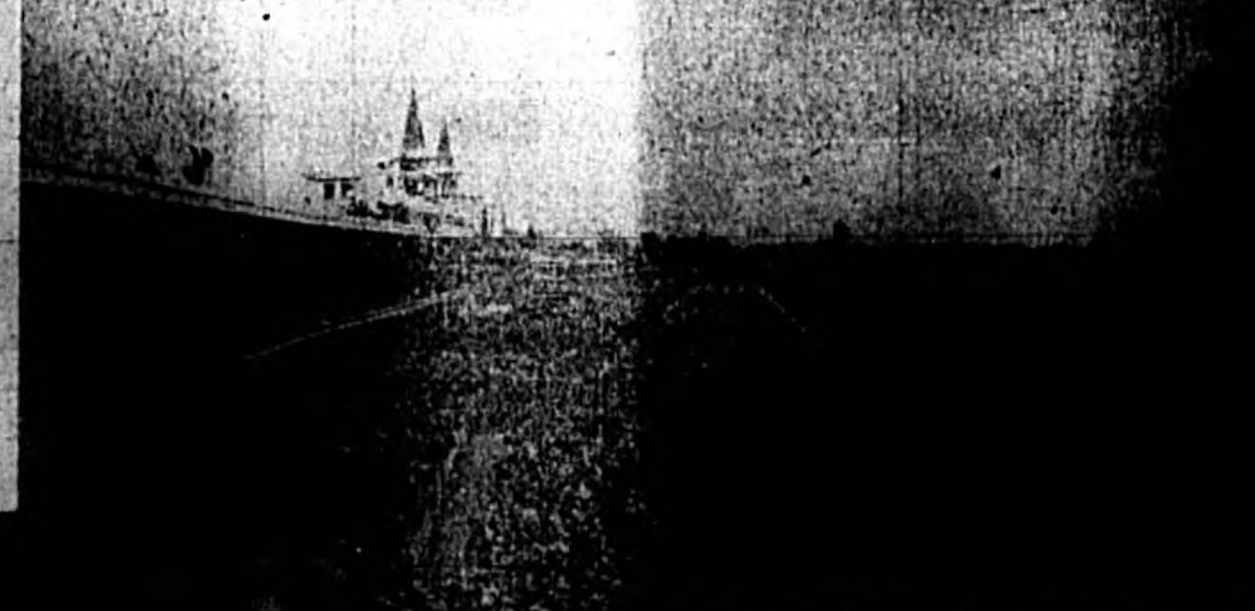

8—Since he has broken with his father, Jack tells the Goodwins he has quit Dillon's employ and induces them to take him on to train Blue Grass, the little black horse. He really just wants to be near Sally, of course, but he does a good job of training the colt. When Blue Grass wins his first race, Sally and Jack find more time to be together. One moonlit night under the Kentucky sky, Jack wants to confess his love, but finds it impossible to reveal his imposture. He is afraid of the power of the old feud.

9—But Sally accidentally learns Jack's identity and his worst secret. Suspecting that he is training Blue Grass to lose the forthcoming Derby, Sally forbids Jack to come near her again. Jack, however, will not be daunted by the vicious feud and its attendant misunderstandings. At the Derby dance he violates all precepts of Southern etiquette by cutting Sally repeatedly on Sally on the dance floor. Annoyed by his aggressiveness, Sally is nevertheless impressed in spite of herself by his evident sincerity. She tells Sally that Blue Grass must be hand-ridden if he is to win the Derby. The colt is sensitive and on no account should a whip be used. Jack...

10—It's Derby Day at Churchill Downs! For Kentuckians this is the greatest event of the year and it amounts to a statewide holiday. In the stables at the Derby track Uncle Peter gives Blue Grass' jockey his final instructions—to hand-ride him into the home stretch, then use the whip. But Sally's love for Jack forces her to do a daring thing: she overrides Uncle Peter's orders, despite the great faith she has in his ability. The jockey, too, obeys, but Sally insists that Blue Grass be ridden Jack's way.

11—Postman, the Dillon entry, is the favorite. But Uncle Peter's father in the stands (left) and both realize how foolish they've been. Sally sees the recognition and is dismayed. She thinks Jack has betrayed her but it's too late to warn her. The race is on! From the beginning it's apparent to the crowd that the odds are between Postman and Blue Grass. The Goodwin jockey follows orders to hand-ride and the little black lives up to the "look of eagles" for which Uncle Peter picked him. Postman and Blue Grass are shoulder to shoulder at the finish, when the Dillon jockey applies his whip and forces ahead. At this Blue Grass rider does likewise and the horse filters. Being his mistake the jockey discards his whip and hand-rides Blue Grass to win.

12—Having observed her jockey's action, Sally is convinced that Jack really was helping her all the time. She rushes to find him. When Uncle Peter is forced to reveal the case a Dillon was all right. The jockey saved the day for Jack and Sally in his arms. Later, when all the congratulations are at an end, Jack tells Sally that Sally all these thrilling and wonderful things he did in the memorable night of traditional Kentucky racing.

BIBLE VERSE FOR TODAY

PLAN FAR AHEAD: For we know that, if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.—2 Cor. 5:1.

TO HOLD SPRING

Why would you follow spring around the earth? Thus to possess it is to lose it surely. We must participate in that aboriginal birth. To hold spring even for a day securely. When April laughs are white with bloom we say, "Look how the cherry tree is wearing snow." When winter tears lean down on a snowy day we speak of blossoms. Spring winter? No!

Only The Best

As long as the grapefruit industry, as well as most of Florida's other agricultural crops, has tried, or is trying, every panacea for over-production known to man, even to the point of fixing the price at 32 cents a box when the trade won't take it at 20, it might be well to consider methods of reducing the size of the crop which might at the same time improve the quality of the produce actually reaching the market.

Why wouldn't it be a good idea to restrict the sale, or shipment, of grapefruit from Florida to only the finest quality? We have laws which restrict the sale of green fruit, and laws which prohibit the sale of arsenated fruit. Why not laws which prohibit the shipment of any fruit which is not up to the highest grade, or finest quality? If there is over-production, that would be one way of getting rid of it.

Last winter Sanford farmers spent a good deal of their time plowing under celery which had been grown to the point of maturity and which was ready for market but which the powers-that-be decided ought to be plowed under. Much of this celery was of the finest quality. The goal had to be plowed under with the bad. While at the same time some of the stuff which was actually going to market was hardly fit to eat. Certainly it was not of the best.

As long as we have over-production, at least are supposed to have it, as long as we are producing more celery than can be sold at a price for which our farmers are able to sell it, why wouldn't it be a good idea to offer for sale only that celery which is the best? If some of the celery has to be plowed under to bolster the market, why not plow under the worst celery? Why not make sure that whatever shipments of Florida fruits and vegetables do leave this state are of the finest grade and quality?

It seems to us that if this were done, Florida would benefit in at least two very important ways. The crop, of course, would be reduced. This would serve the purpose for which the Agricultural Adjustment Act was at first enacted and accomplish the thing for which the Celery Marketing Agreement was designed. And it would have the further advantage of assuring the housewife in the marketing centers of the country that when she buys Florida produce she buys the best.

As it is today, in spite of the fact that we raise plenty of good stuff, when the northern housewife goes to the market and buys fruits or vegetables from Florida, she is as likely as not to get something which isn't fit to eat. What a tremendous advertising advantage it would be for Florida, if it were made absolutely impossible for her to find in the markets anything from this state which was not of superior quality!

If we are going to restrict the sale of Florida products, why not restrict it to the very best?

What Did She Want?

A new slant on the psychology of the miser is given by the Key West Citizen which points out that while most people spend their lives trying to get rich, some of those who have money don't know what to do with it. Always, it seems, the things we want most are merely those things we don't happen to have.

The other day a 55-year-old woman died in a four-room shack in the outskirts of Tampa, the Key West paper says. "Her passing drew little notice in the newspapers, or among the neighbors, but it was discovered after her death that she left an estate of nearly $250,000, of which $200,000 was in cash.

To many citizens of Monroe county, eagerly looking for opportunities to increase their annual incomes, the case of this Florida lady presents a problem. While millions of her fellow Americans feverishly sought wealth, this lady, for 50 years, while in the possession of a comparative fortune, dressed like a charwoman and lived like a shanty-ropper.

"What is the answer? Did the dead woman know some secret method of living happily without money or had she a philosophy that satisfied her soul without expression in material things?"

MARKET TOWN NEWS

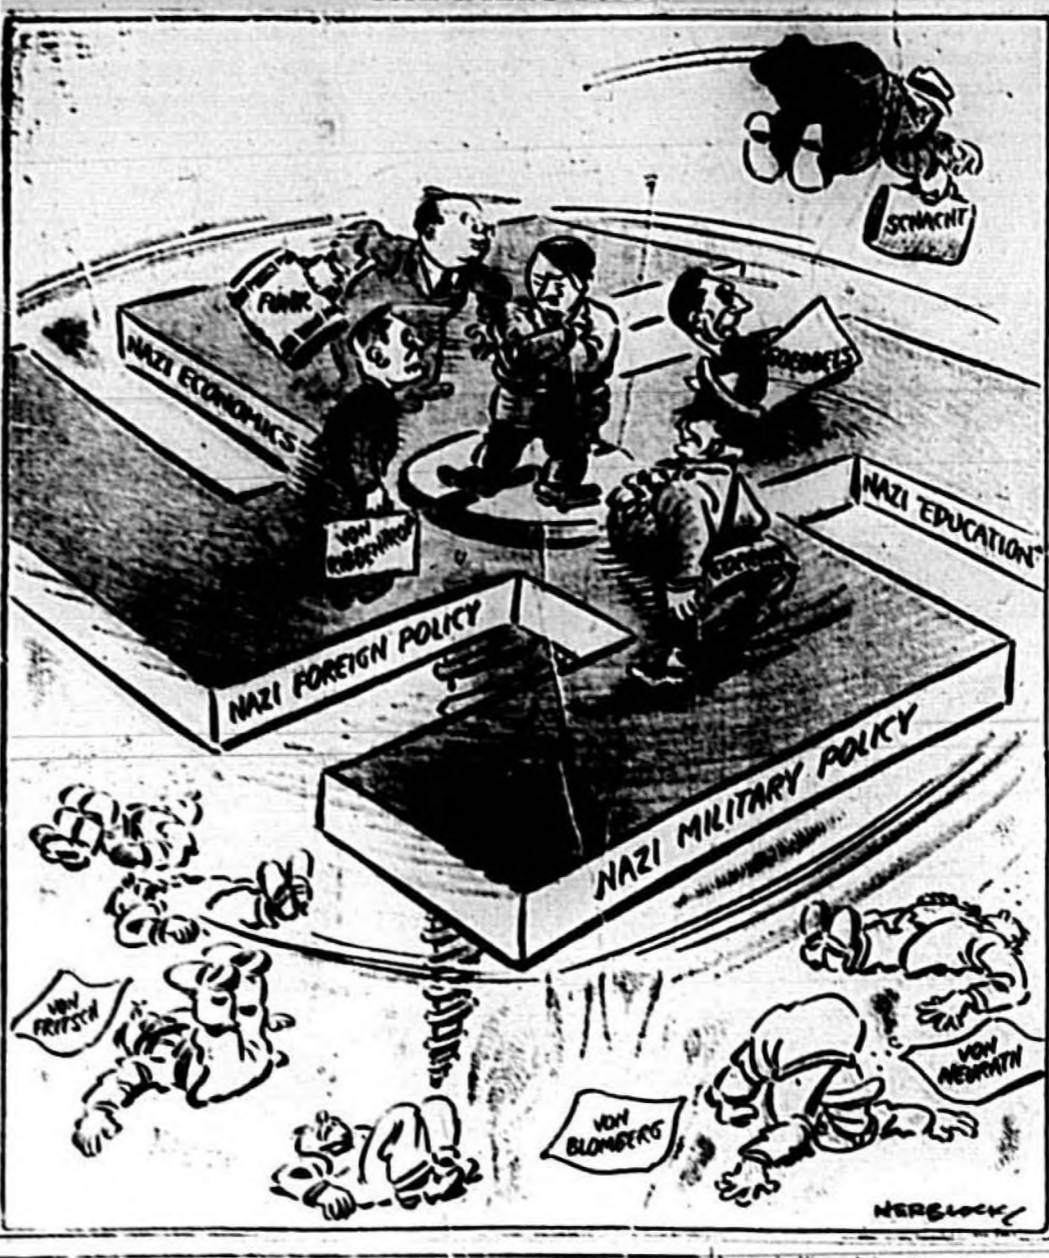

By BRUCE TUCKER
Sanford State Farmers Market

Walking down the platform Thursday just about from the following: plenty cool at Market Town, and all out there wrapped up in sweaters, sweaters, etc. Wednesday, Mr. Owen had to get out the five hose and try and get the deal, which the ole and was towing, did a good job too, hoping they get the coal fixed next summer. Mr. S. Brothman, Ramsey is certainly making his Diddy an able assistant, leading trucks, etc. also Max and Jean Adams called. Miss Genevieve "Gene" Webb, speaker for the Western Union, called at the Market Wednesday night, said hello to all out here, good for U. Gene. "Brother" Maxwell Stewart and "Doc" Brown from Illinois, a guest of Glenn Lynch, "broke down" and came out to Market Town, drink coffee, etc. (Gene Jack Max. Another "Auto" salesman, seen on the grounds was Grady Gallant from Strickland Motors, things look pretty good out here, eh? Grady? "The King Celery" is coming back into the scene on the market, approximately 1,000 crates having been sold since January 1st, 1939. And CABBAGE, approximately 1,500,000 pounds going over the platform for the same period. While cabbage prices are considerably off what they were, during the latter part of December, it is still bringing from $12 to $18 per ton, according to quality. Glad to see Homer Clause back on the platform today, after being ill for a few days, and also "Raiber" Carver is back. Still not enough lettuce lettuce in Sanford to take care of the trade on the platform.

About twelve hundred crates have had to be "dumped" from the platform section. THE DIZZY PACE

CANAL OPPOSITION RENEWED

TAMPA TRIBUNE

Opposition to the cross-state canal was not silenced by the project's long period of inactivity. Its revival by the President has reassured those Floridians, press and public, who are against the canal.

The Florida Canal Opposition League, which has opposed the canal because of the threat to the water supply, has renewed its opposition and has asked Representative Peterson to notify the Rivers and Harbor Committee that it desires to be heard.

The anti-canal press also has resumed firing. The Orlando Sentinel issued a note of warning. It says "all South Florida wants is assurance from the United States of America, in black and white, that all or any part of South Florida will be have indicated he does not expect foreign military threats to this country to be 10 or 15 years coming. By his own words, then, he discounts the military importance of the Florida canal and entirely removes it from the field of emergency. Inasmuch as the defense argument, if proved, would be one to force all patriotic Floridians to drop their objections to the canal, it is most comforting to learn from Mr. Roosevelt himself that the military question is not a significant factor. But then we already know that from the Army engineer board's late report. Has the President read it, by the way?

And the Miami Herald has this vigorous comment: "If the President desires to give Florida $200,000,000 to spend, we'd be much happier about it if he would divide it up among all the harbors of the state, or build us a lot of new roads, or just throw it in the air and let us catch as much of it as we can. It would serve a more useful purpose, if so distributed, than the canal ever would."

We note also that Senator Vandenberg, who led the fight against the canal in Congress, has again drawn his sword and has already engaged in a post-mortem at arms with Senator Pepper, who will be the chief spoke man for the project.

"TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY"

By RUSSELL KAY

Ferdinand, the famed bull who delighted in sitting by the cork tree and smelling the flowers, would have a delightful time in Tampa the week of Jan. 21 to 28. For during this period the gay and festive spirit of Old Spain will rule the "Cigar City" and in the neighborhood of 20,000 Latinos will give themselves over to merry-making, while gay cabareters and flower-decked señoritas will whirl joyfully to the tuneful rhythm of the tango and the rumba.

This is the time of the famed Latin Carnival held in Tampa each year and for many weeks the Latin citizens have been busy with preparations for this brilliant and colorful event, which is not only enjoyed by all Tamponians but annually attracts thousands of visitors and tourists from out of town and out of state.

These delightful fiestas are entirely different from any other carnivals or fetes held in the state and are well worth attending. The stage shows presented, most of the talent being imported from Cuba and South America; crack rumba dance orchestras, marimba bands, Spanish dancing troupes and many other features.

Both Latin and American dance bands are provided for the dances which are given by the public. One evening is given over to a downtown Fiesta, patterned as nearly as possible after those staged in Old Spain with open air sidewalk cafes, street dancing in areas especially roped off for the occasion, vaudeville and fireworks from platforms erected at downtown corners, and many other unique and interesting features.

Florida visitors should certainly make it a point to visit Tampa and enjoy the Latin Carnival next week.

Another event well worth your attention and equally interesting and unique is the Florida Orange Festival at Winter Haven, which opens Monday, Jan. 23, and continues for six days through Saturday, Jan. 28.

It was my privilege last week to make a tour of the Festival air and let us catch as much of it as we can. It would serve a more useful purpose, if so distributed, than the canal ever would."

We note also that Senator Vandenberg, who led the fight against the canal in Congress, has again drawn his sword and has already engaged in a post-mortem at arms with Senator Pepper, who will be the chief spoke man for the project.

Here will be found 21 modern exposition buildings teeming with marvelous exhibits of every kind and character. Numerous Florida counties will vie in presenting their resources and advances. The horticultural and agricultural displays are splendid. This year a great cattle and dairy show is an added attraction. It is impossible in the limited space at my command to attempt to tell of all the interesting and wonderful things you will see on these modern exposition grounds but I can assure you it is one show you don't want to miss—different entirely from all others and with the poignant "The Landing of Hernando Desoto," the capture of the city by Gasparilla, and numerous other features, you will find something to interest and entertain you every minute of the day and night, whether your stay is for a single day or for the entire festive period.

Congress Gets FDR's Proposed Health Project

 Despite the committee's action, administration leaders said they had hoped the senate would vote the amount asked by the President. In that case, the actual appropriation probably would be determined by a compromise committee of senators and house members.
 Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, asserted the bill as reported out "would do more than bring misery and privation to millions of American citizens—it would seriously threaten our entire recovery movement."
 Abandonment of the relief and recovery program voted by the last congress to stem the business recession which began in 1927, Wagner said, "would be a form of national economic suicide."
 He said the relief sum asked by the President contemplated a net reduction of 400,000 in WPA employment by June and was "based on the most optimistic estimates of business revival."
 The estimate assumed, Wagner added, that private industry would absorb 1,500,000 of the persons unemployed in the next five months.

Americans To Be Evacuated From Barcelona

 HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontiers, Jan. 23.—(AP)—Men and women last night worked feverishly on concrete gun pits and barricades in Barcelona's streets preparing to fight it out with rebel columns moving upon the town of Martorell, barely 10 miles from the capital's suburbs. A Catalanian decree closed all factories and most stores, cafes and business places, with the exception of war industries, and ordered all men under 55 and women from 18 to 40 to report to military authorities for assignments.
 General Franco's guns blasting a path into the city filled Barcelona with a constant rumble, drowned out at hourly intervals by his bombers which swept upon

Grapefruit Price Harmony Sought By Florida, Texas

 Texas the price has been set at $10 a ton for white grapefruit, $18 for pink seedless and $3.50 for fruit sold to the cannery.
 Many Florida growers shut down following the establishment of the minimum on Friday, saying they could not compete with the lower Texas minimum.

New Fast Freight Service Is Begun By ACL Railroad

WILMINGTON, N. C., Jan. 23.—A new, fast southbound freight service which enables 32 hours arrival time here than its previous freight service from the North to Sanford was announced by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad as having just gone into effect.
 Previously a car of freight leaving New York Monday, for example, was due to arrive in Sanford at 9:40 A. M. on Friday. Under the new schedule freight will speed southward so that a car leaving New York Monday will arrive in Sanford at 1:30 A. M. on Thursday. Freight deliveries to other points reached by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and its connections will be similarly expedited. This new fast freight service, it is claimed, will prove of large value over a wide territory to those receivers to whom rapidity of freight movement is of primary importance.
 The new service is a companion one to the already existing very fast northbound freight service earlier inaugurated by the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, and maintained most successfully, which is said to aid greatly the successful marketing in the North of products of this section requiring speedy transport.
 Those very fast freight schedules, it is said, are the outgrowth of a progressive endeavor to meet the business needs of the territory the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad serves. Rock ballasted, heavy-rail double tracking, automatic signals and train control, modern power and improved equipment, it is said, now make such rapid transportation possible with a degree of safety earlier unattainable at much slower speed.

OVIEDO

With the opening of processing plants for packing of citrus and celery in Oviedo, this Seminole County town is experiencing its usual seasonal pickup in business.
 Already the Lake Chirm Fruit Company and the Nelson Company packing house are operating full-time while Duda and Sons, the Florida Precooling Company and the Lake Chirm Precooling Company handling increasing amounts of celery which is resulting in increased employment.
 In addition, the setting of lite celery has added more workers to the weekly payroll and at present it seems that all those desiring jobs have them.
