Seminole may be last hope for Gore

By Joe DeSantis Staff Writer

SANFORD — Democratic contender Al Gore's last hopes of rescuing a Florida victory in the Sunshine state's controversial presidential election may well rest in a Seminole County absentee ballot case scheduled to be heard today in Leon County Circuit Court.

Judge Nikki Clark will hear arguments from attorneys representing Longwood personal injury attorney Harry Jacobs, asking the court to throw out some 15,000 absentee ballots. Jacobs alleges fraud and collusion on the part of Supervisor of Elections Sandra Goard. The suit contends Goard illegally allowed GOP operatives to enter her office and complete information necessary on absentee ballot requests that would have otherwise been tossed out. If the suit is successful it could result in a dramatic swing in Seminole County vote totals that would hand Gore enough votes to carry the state, and with it Florida's 25 electoral votes.

In a bazaar twist Tuesday, attorneys for Jacobs amended their suit. The complaint now asks that only 2,130 absentee ballot requests be tossed. Attorneys contend that by using a computer tracking system, statisticians, and hand writing experts, they can identify the ballot requests that GOP workers added voter identification numbers to. That figure still represents enough lost votes for George W. Bush to give Gore a Florida

UACF invites board to be trustees for $100,000 donation

By Joe DeSantis Staff Writer

SANFORD — The United Arts of Central Florida (UACF) extended an invitation to the Board of Seminole County Commissioners to become trustees Nov. 28. Now the board must decide whether that invitation's $100,000 price tag is justified.

Following an impressive pre-sentation by UACF chairman Harvey Massey, commissioners expressed support for arts and cultural programs in the Central Florida area, but likewise expressed just as many reservations about a degree of reciprocity and asked for more specific information about UACF's budget process and funded programs.

During the past year UACF raised slightly more than $7 million from public, private, and business organizations to fund some 37 programs in the Central Florida area. Trustee participation comes with a minimum commitment of $100,000.

Massey's presentation included a host of statistical and demographic information about the amount various counties and cities earmark for the number of ancillary dollars generated by various cultural and artistic presentations, and how incorporation of cultural and arts programs into the pub-lic school system has elevated test scores in math and communications sections of the Florida Scholastic Aptitude Tests.

Watson discovers massive bottle collection while digging in yard

SANFORD — Greg Watson is not an avid bottle collector, and he really didn't think a lot about the glass objects until last Monday when he found almost 1,500 of them in his backyard. The discovery occurred when Watson was building a fence on his property. While digging a hole for a post, he hit something hard with his shovel.

SEMINOLE SUMMARY

A GLANCE AROUND OUR COUNTY

Remembering Pearl Harbor

It's only fitting that Dec. 7, 1941, be brought up today. Tomorrow will be the 59th anniversary of what is known as "a date that will live in infamy," (FDR). Nearly 200 Japanese aircraft attacked Pearl Harbor, Hawaii at 7:55 a.m. The area had long been considered the United States' "Gibraltar of the Pacific." The raid, which lasted little over an hour, left nearly 3,000 dead. Nearly the entire U.S. Pacific Fleet was at anchor in the harbor and few ships escaped damage.

Several were sunk or disabled, while 200 U.S. aircraft were destroyed.

Pfeifauf

The attack on Pearl Harbor brought about immediate United States entry into World War II, with a declaration of war issued by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, and approved by Congress the following

A few of us have known former military personnel who were at Pearl Harbor during that attack. Some of the stories they tell have a tendency to bring a chill up one's back. Here we have soldiers in their barracks, sailors in their bunks aboard ships, when suddenly the morning is shattered with the

One of my old friends, (named Conrad, "Con"), no longer with us, was in his bunk when the attack occurred. In the movies, we have seen the men immediately rush outside, grab the nearest anti-alreraft gun and start firing at enemy planes. Or, if they were in the Air Corps, they would rush to the airfield and prep the planes to take off and fight the foe.

sound of bombs, low flying planes and machine gun

But the United States was unprepared. Many of the anti-aircraft guns were covered. Ammunition wasn't even nearby. As for the planes, the Japanese made quick waste of them, and we had hardly any which were capable of taking off. Even if they did, a few U.S. aircraft would be little match for more than 200

When I found my friend Con had been present dur-ing the attack, I asked him, "What did you do, Con?" His response, "None of us knew what was happening, but we could see explosions out the window and we knew we were under attack by someone. For awhile we didn't even know it was Japanese planes attacking us. I dove under my cot, pulled the blanket over my head, and stayed there for almost the entire attack. And, I wasn't the only one. Most of the men in the bar-racks were under their beds as well."

Con wasn't a coward. I suspect he did what many of us would have done under similar circumstances. What if you woke up early some morning, here in Sanford, looked out your window, and saw everything around you being blown up? You'd be trightened half to death. You certainly wouldn't run outdoors and try to fight whoever was causing the damage.

The mere fact that the United States managed to make it through the attack was probably due to the military officers who had, as their responsibility, the safety of the area and the lives of their troops. Of course as soon as the attack was over, Con, a supply sergeant, rushed to his post and said he had so much work, he didn't get any sleep for possibly three days.

The point here is that not everyone in a war is a hero as the movies might make you believe. But when our military forces are on the scene, and trouble arises, they come through with flying colors.

In this presidential election, we heard both candidates talk about beefing up the armed forces, including improved training and equipment. We hope whoever gains that top seat will follow through on the promise.

Pearl Harbor was a tragedy. Let's not allow it to ever

Keeping the magic alive

If you're a married man and are hoping to stay that way, I think it's a good idea to do everything you can to maintain your value in your wife's eyes. You should treat yourself the same way you would look after a car you plan to keep for a long time. Wash and wax as often as you can. Change the oil once a month. No quick starts or stops, and keep the mileage down.

That'll take care of your physical appearance, but to get to the heart and mind of a Green woman, you need to have a little mystique working for you. Instead of having an affair, just pre-tend you are. Have women call you at home and then hang up when your wife answers. Throw a tube of passion pink lipstick into your glove compartment. Speak French in your Life is an auction, and nothing increases the value of an item more than the fear that someone else is bidding. And when your wife finds out that you're actually not cheating on her, she'll have a huge victory cele-bration, and you'll be the guest of honor. Rest up.

An Extraordinary Man

I was watching one of those biography shows on television this week, and they called this particular guy an "extraordinary man." I was intimidated. But on the other hand, my wife says being a man isn't a particularly high calling.

So being an "extraordinary" one might be even worse. Break the word down — "extra," which means superfluous, waste, one too many (I've been there) and "ordinary," which means common, average, nothing special. When you put them together, you get "extraordi-nary," which must mean being completely average in a totally superfluous way.

So I've decided I am extraordinary too. And so are most of my friends. I'm just amazed that some-body like us became the subject of a television show.

Step Away From The Leaf Blower Attention ladies: Men are drawn to machines like moths to a flame. Especially if the machine is broken. It's fine if he's your husband or your neighbor, because you know they're idiots and you can keep them away. But with strangers, you just don't know. So here are signs to watch for that indicate this guy has no idea what he's doing:

- He stares at the machine for more than 10 minutes without moving or speaking.

— He tells you to shut the machine

He finds a control and turns It a little and waits. Then turns it a lot and waits. Then turns it back to its original position.

Monday, Dec. 4, at approximately 8:35 a.m., an 11-year old Sanford Middle School girl was standing at the school bus stop at Sewell Road and SR-46 in Sanford. A vehicle stopped and the male in the front seat passenger side said hello to the child. The subject asked the girl to get in and go to his house. The child refused and ran to a nearby residence.

The vehicle was last seen eastbound on SR-46. The subject did not edt the vehide and was described as wearing a dark colored jacket with a hood and dark gloves. The child was unable to see either of the two men in the vehicle, described as a small red pick-up truck, low rider style with dark tinted windows. The vehicle had a small black circular area on the right passenger side of the bed, which the child said could have been spray painted.

Armed Robbery Michael Antoine Edwards, 20,

According to the arrest report, a man wearing a hooded sweatshirt and carrying a hatchet, took cash from two registers at a convenience store on CR-427 in Longwood. Six minutes later, officers spotted a man on a bike matching the description of the robber, and apprehended him on North Street. The man was reportedly carrying a bag with $129 in cash, discovered to be bait money from the store. Edwards was charged with robbery with a weapon.

Stalking Randy Harold Jordan, 39, of

Grandview Street, Sanford, was arrested by deputies Monday. A woman reportedly phoned the sheriff's office regarding her estranged husband sitting on the steps of her apartment with a can of beer and a utility knife. "When the dust settles, Gore will lose." — Sen. Bob

Al Gore doesn't want to hear this kind of talk from prominent members of his own party. But the reality is that his fellow Democrats are breaking ranks. They recognize that their guy got not one, not two, but three opportunities to produce more votes in Florida than his Republican opponent. Yet, the Democratic Party standard-bearer failed to do

So now there are three strikes against Gore. And it is long past time that the recalcitrant presidential candidate took a seat on the pine to await his next chance at the plate in 2004 or

Joseph Alas, Gore refuses to take his strikeout, his defeat, like a man. Instead, he wants the umps Perkins that is, the Florida courts - to give him yet another strike, to negate the unfavorable results of his three — count 'em three — previous attempts to score an electoral victory in the Sunshine State. "If the people, in the end, do not choose me, so be it," said Gore, in a five-minute televised speech this week. "The outcome will have been fair, and the people will have spoken. If they choose me, so be it."

These remarks confirm the assessment of a very concerned Gore insider (as told to the Associated Press) that the vice president is a "lost soul." Gore's use of the present tense - "If they choose me" - shows that Gore doesn't even accept that the election has already taken place.

It seems clear that the vice president is in desperate need of an intervention. Maybe Sens. Durban, Dorgan and Torricelli should take Gore aside and gently break the news to him that the voters of Florida have made a choice. And it ain't him.

Unfortunately, Gore is being egged on by Democratic Party enablers such as Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle and House Minority Leader Richard Gephardt.

They assured the vice president, during an all-too-scripted televised conference call last week, that they stand four-square behind his campaign to overturn the certified outcome in

Of course, this places the vice president, as well as the Democratic leadership in Congress, completely at odds with the American people. An overwhelming 60 percent of the public says that Gore should concede, according to three separate polls this week by ABC News/Washington Post, CNN/USA

Today/Gallup and Reuters/Zogby.

When confronted with these polls, the vice president responded, simply: "The polls don't matter." That statement reveals that his profession's respect for and deference to "the will of the people" is just so much political sanctimony.

It is all too clear by now that Gore will not go gently into electoral history. He is determined, it seems, to be remembered as the sorest loser to ever stand for the presidency.

Indeed, now Gore has gone so far in his quest for the White House — committing every possible excess (political, legal and otherwise)— that he has obviously concluded that there is no turning back

So irreparable is the damage he has done to his name and reputation in the minds and hearts of his countrymen and women that he can never hope to get this close to winning the White House again.

That's why he's pulling out all the stops. He's on networktelevision almost as much as his anchor pals, Dan Rather, Peter Jennings and Tom Brokaw, trying to reverse public opinion.

He has his trial lawyer pals, who contributed millions of dollars to his presidential campaign, in Florida trying to get friendly Democratic judges to order yet anoth

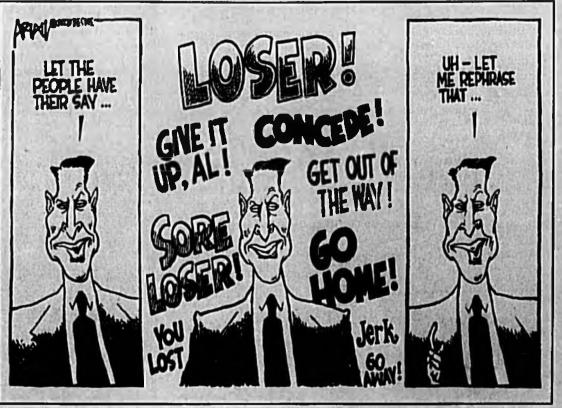

He has his rabble-rousing pals, such as Jesse Jackson, in Florida trying to stir up civil unrest among the masses, trying to persuade certain voter blocs - blacks, Jews and seniors that the votes they "intended" were somehow uncounted.

The time has come for Democrats who place the national interest above parochial party interest to tell Al Gore that enough is enough. The vice president needs to call off his lawyers. He needs call off his rabble-rousing surrogates.

Finally, Gore should make but one more appearance on national television. And that should be to concede defeat and extend his best wishes to the rightful president-elect, George W. Bush.

Flake upset with all the problems during election

To the editor:

To my fellow citizens of Seminole County and my fellow Floridians, it is with great chagrin that I write this letter. I do so only to express my disappointment with what is going on with the election and the voting problems in the county and state. You see, I was born in Leesburg, Florida, in 1960, and lived most of my life in Seminole County. I started school at Altamonte Elementary (where the Altamonte Mall now stands), lived for a period in Sanford and attended Sanford Middle School. I graduated from Lyman High School in Longwood. I worked at several local grocery stores and even DEK Industries in my youth. I grew up and worked with many of you; and have always considered Seminole County as "home." I still have family and many friends who live in Seminole County.

I joined the Navy after High School in 1979, and when I think of protecting my country, I think of you, my fellow citizens of Seminole County. I have continued to vote by absentee ballot for the last 20 years for local and state officials. I have followed the spectacular growth of Seminole County, and have often thought of retiring and moving back home to teach school, possibly run for some type of office, and continue my service to you, my friends and fellow citizens. I have also kept my home of record in Florida so I could be considered a proud Floridian.

This year I did something unexpected: I did not file for an absen-tee ballot. I went instead to a local voting booth and cast my vote in the state of my current residence. While my family and I watched the results on Election Day, my oldest son David, who is now 19, y said, "Dad, you should have voted by absence ballot this year and made your vote count in Florida." I agreed with him and said, "Yes, Dave, you're right. Maybe my vote would have counted." But after all of the absentee ballot problems, I understand that my vote would not have counted because of some minor mistakes that the printers made, and because one political party does not feel my vote is worthy of counting. I also understand that my fellow Sailors and Soldiers of Seminole County, those who have joined the military from Seminole County and are now serving you, my fellow citizens, are not able to have their votes counted either.

I think it is cruelly ironic that we military members from Seminole County are serving throughout the world, putting our lives in harm's way, and do not even get to vote for our "Commander-in-Chief," the guy who has the power to send us into combat to die. I personally have been there and done that. I was flying in a helicopter over Lebanon when the American Embassy was blown up. I was in the Marine Barracks in Beirut just two weeks before a crazed terrorist drove a van loaded with explo-sives into the facility and killed Marines, many of whom I knew and helped ship over to the Middle East from Moorehead City, N.C., their home base. I was in Puerto Rico when five of my ship-mates were shot, one of them mortally, simply because they were Americans. I served at a Reserve Center where I was able to assist in sending a lot of heroic reservists off to the war in Kuwait. My son played high school football with a young Sailor who gave his life for his country while serving onboard the USS Cole. I have served with many Sailors and Soldiers who have given their lives for you as well. I would do the same if called upon, not because it's my job, but because of the duty I feel toward you, my fellow citizens, and toward my friends and family in Seminole County.

I personally find it very offensive to hear about all of the problems in Seminole County on the news, and to hear all of the barbs and jokes about Florida. However, that is not my reason for writing. I'm writing, rather, to inform you that I no longer consider Seminole County my "home." I will certainly come and visit my family and friends in the future, but will no longer call Florida "home." I am changing my home of record and will vote henceforth where I am. I will not retire to Florida, either, where I feel as if I am not even considered worthy to vote.

The two toughest characters now on national display are the vice presidential running mates: Joe Lieberman and Dick Cheney.

The Democrat is espe-cially hard to nail. That tearful voice masks an engine of ambition. While still in college, he wrote a book about the crafty party leader John Balley. He won his Senate seat by running to the right of the Republican incumbent, Lowell Weicker, on

This is Joe Lieberman's chance to be vice president, his surest route to the presidency itself. He knows, if others don't, that he is unlikely to get another.

The same is true of Dick Cheney. As someone who has felt the savagery of his attack, his takeno-prisoners partisanship, I can attest to it personally. All those years I worked for Speaker O'Neill, Chency was one of the fleroest hardballers on the other world who celebrate Christmas, no other symbol of the holiday fills them with such joy as Santa Claus. This legendary figure, who supposedly flies the world in his sleigh filled with toys and drops down the chimney delivering gifts to good girls and boys, is a favorite of children, no matter that country they live in.

Santa Claus, a jolly, stout man with a twinkle in his eye, rosy-red cheeks and a cheerful laugh, is the American adaptation of the European legend of Saint Nicholas. He wears a bright red suit trimmed with white fur, a long red cap and shiny black boots. In England, he called Father Christmas. In France, children refer to him as Père Noël, which means Father Christmas. He wears a long red robe and white fur hat with wooden shoes. In Switzerland you see another variation on Santa. His name is Saint Nicholas, and he wears a long white robe and a tall pointed hat called a miter. There are numerous other counterparts of Santa Claus across names, to children of all countries his message is the same They peek out the windows and hope to catch a glimpse o this special man as he flies through the sky, delivering gif the globe, including the German Kris Kringle, the Italian Befana, the Swedish Jultomten and Russia's Babouschka. "Angela Anaconda" FOX Family; Dec. 23; "Secret

Santa," Dec. 20; "Chanukah," Dec. 15, 16, 21

Chanukah, which often gets short shrift around the Christmas season or else is treated in a way unappetizing to kids, gets its due in a special episode of "Angela Anaconda" that highlights both Chanukah and Christmas. (They air together as well as independently.)

In "Secret Santa," Angela picks the name of her nemesis, Nanette Manoir, and has to be her secret Santa. Worse, she learns that Nanette has picked HER name - and is planning on getting Angela something really great. How can Angela one-up her rival -- even though she can't stand her?

In "Hooray for Chanukah," the series takes an irreverent look at the holiday. The humor doesn't always quite come off, but the episode is sometimes quite funny. Angela and her friends help Gina Lash carry her grandmother's menorah to the town's Chanukah celebration. After they lose it en route, they must follow a trail that eventually leads to Nanette Manoir's home - where it is being used

Overall, the series take a fresh look at the two holidays, with a winning combination of heart and edginess.

"I liked this show, and I watch it even when it's not about the holidays," said Annie, 8. "Nanette is a real pain, but Angela is funny."

stubborn defiance and her loyal-While Thomas the Tank Engine and his friends often seem to spend most of their time traversing the Isle of Sodor and settling squabbles, they're not immune to the joys and problems of Christmas. Alec Baldwin takes center stage as he narrates a new story called "Snow," in which Percy finds himself stuck on the tracks when the snow reaches perilous depths. Thomas scoffs (one of the trains always seems to be scoffing), but also gets stuck. Percy remembers the worst winter he's ever encountered, when an avalanche threatened the engines. In the other five stories, narrated by George Carlin, Christmas and winter events are in full swing. Thomas wants to join the carolers at the big Yuletide party, but first there's work to be done. When he goes to collect the Christmas tree, he gets caught in a snowdrift. Luckily, Douglas and Donald rescue him in time to make the singing festivities in Thomas and the Missing Christmas Tree." In other stories, Tomas must rely on Terence the Tractor's caterpillar wheels to pull him out of a snowdrift after he's poked fun at those same wheels. In "Thomas & Percy's Christmas Adventure," the trains work together to get supplies to the villagers when they are stranded by an early snowfall. And in "Special Funnel" (what other series could get away with such a title?). Peter Sam's wobbly funnel is pulled off by an icicle.

As always, the mix of oldfashioned homeyness and the often sharp-tongued tartness of the engines makes for a mix that's both comforting and familiar, especially to young kids just starting to deal with social interaction.

"The stories are great, because they have two good things -Thomas and Christmas," explained Toby, 7. And indeed, for kids around the holidays, what could be better?

Ratings Scale: 1-10 (10 is the highest) Appropriateness: 7 -- Thomas fans will be pleased that there is a holiday offering just for them; the stories are cozy and reassur-

Visuals: 6 - The trains and setting are familiar, but with more snow and ornaments. Humor: 6 - The very mild humor and childish behavior is easily recognizable and almost always funny to young kids. Believability: 6 - The interaction of the trains is what gives the video its focus and its realism. Social Value: 6 - "Charming" and "old-fashioned" may be overused words, but they're true (and admirable) here. Fun Factor: 6 - The stories move along at an even, calm pace, which in itself is pleasant.

"It's about voting while black," Jackson said. "It's about police stopping our people on the way to the polls. It's about the fewest phone lines being available to the black community to take questions and answer problems. It's about black colege students registering to vote. but their names not being on the lists when the arrive at the precinct."

Jackson accused state Republican officials of not only blocking black voters, but also intentionally manipulating ballots in Republican counties like Seminole.

Though he's 81 years old, Sauls, until recently, has remained active in both his business, civic, and religious activities. Both he and Clara had planned to vote at their regular precinct, but the opportunity to take a long weekend trip persuaded the couple to vote absentee.

"It was the first chance we had to get away in quite away in a long time," Clara said. "We thought we might be back in time to vote, but we also thought we might stay a little longer. That's why we decided we needed to vote absentee."

Unfortunately, the couple were away from home much longer than they had planned. They stopped just outside of St. Augustine on their way to see friends in South Carolina. John wanted a cup of coffee and Clara needed a bathroom break. When she came out of the restroom, she noticed a man sprawled out on the floor.

"My first thought was of sorrow, and I thought 'Oh, no, someone's husband is having trouble," Clara said, "Then I recognized that it was my own husband on the floor. I knew right away he had had a Clara's intuition proved correct. John was sent to Flagler Hospital and remained their for several weeks. She was recently able to move him to a Longwood rehabilitation center and is hopeful John can come

"It's difficult right now," Clara said. "He can move his foot just a little, and they have to feed him with a tube, but his mind is as sharp as ever."

A long time activist in Republican politics, John is keeping abreast of the historical presidential controversy in Florida. "He keeps the television on Fox News, and he knows all the details of what's going on," Clara said. "That's what bothers him about this absence ballot stuff. We both know we fol-lowed the letter of the law. We did everything just right."

Clara explained the couple walked the two blocks from their office on Palmetto Avenue to the Election Supervisor's office to fill out the application for an absentee ballot. They were real strict with everything, which suited me just fine," Clara said. "We asked If we picked up the ballots there, since we were so close, but they told us, 'No, we have to mail them to you."

"Then, when we got the ballots, we filled them out, and sealed them just like the instructions said, and John walked back over to the election office to drop off both our ballots. When he got there they told him they could take his, put I either need to bring my own ballot or I had to fill out a pink sheet allowing my husband to bring it. So, he brought the plak sheet back and I filled it out.

"We did everything just right, but our vote may not count," Clara said.

John said he feels so strongly about his duty to vote because "it represents liberty, independence and freedom.

"Above all, it represents an inheritance that can't be taken away without due process," John said; "Many, many elections have hung on one vote, and it is my intention to vote, even if I'm the only one voting."

Attorneys for the GOP call the suit a "last ditch Hail Mary" play that won't survive legal scrutiny.

Meanwhile, a dozen Seminole County voters have joined the fight against the Jacob's suit, seeking to keep the judge from throwing out their ballots along with the rest of the absentee ballots.

On Monday, the Gore camp received two crushing legal blows in their fight to keep the contested election alive.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled unanimously to vacate the ruling by the Florida Supreme Court that allowed additional time for three South Florida counties to mount a hand recount. While not a total loss for Gore, the high court asked the state supreme court to clarify its ruling and cite whether its decision was based on federal statutes, state statutes or constitutional law.

Hours later, Leon Circuit Court Judge Sanders Sauls rejected Gore's legal challenge to Bush's certified victory. In a strongly worded decision, Sauls ruled Gore failed to provide the burden of proof for his two some 14,000 Dade County ballots would provide the vice president with enough votes to overcome Bush's lead, and that local canvassing boards in Dade, Broward, Palm Beach and Nassau counties abused their Massey told the board that demographic information per-taining to Seminole County runs counter to the majority of people who patronize cultural and aris programs.

"Statistically, Seminole County is more of a myth than a reality," he explained. "The statistics suggest that the majority of those who patronize the arts and cultural events are white, affluent, and highly educated. The reality is that the majority of those who take in events don't necessarily fit that demographic profile. Massey also pointed to results from test scores in his argument to persuade Seminole County to join the organization 1 COUPON PER PURCHASE as a trustee. Students involved in arts and cultural programs score higher in both math and verbal sections of assessment tests," Massey said. "The more years they are exposed to arts pro-grams, the higher scores they achieve. We are asking for one of your commissioners to become a board member on our board of trustees. We do want and need Seminole County to get involved in this."

While voicing universal sup-port for the arts, individual commissioners expressed various concerns about the required $100,000 commitment on the part of the county.
"Cultural and arts programs are something this county needs to look at because Seminole County is deficient in many areas," said commissioner Carlton Henley. "Our residents are concerned about the quality of life and I think that was illustrated in their desire to pass a $25 million bond referendum for trails. This proposal merits consideration.

Commissioner Daryl McLain likewise expressed support for involvement with UACF, but also had some pointed questions about equity,

"This county sent $1 million over five years to the very trou-bled Orlando Science Center and now we are not even sure If those folks are going to keep their doors open," McLain said. "Believe me, I'm a big supporter of the arts, but I'm more interested in becoming a part-ner and not an investor. What's in it for Seminole County?

What are the benefits our communities will receive from our involvement?

Commissioner Randy Morris likewise said he was a strong supporter of the arts but still had reservations about the price tag of involvement.

"I strongly support moving forward and becoming a partner, but $100,000 makes me question whether we should begin to walk before we run," Morris said. "It's a reciprocity issue where we have not seen much of a return in this respect. A lot of Seminole County dollars have gone into Orange County to support cultural and arts programs. I don't think that's been the case in reverse."

Massey told the commission that none of the funds generat-ed by UACF are used for capital projects and no money is used to bail out failed programs and

"Eighty to 85 percent of the funds go directly to arts and cultural programs," he said.

While making no monetary commitment to the organiza-tion, the board voted 4-0 to invite Massey back to its Jan. 9 meeting where he'll have an opportunity to present more detailed information about UACF's budget process and funded programs.

Partial solar eclipse will occur on Christmas

SCC Planetarium will provide safe view of last lipse of the millennium rent A. Pellerin, Jr. cial to the Herald

ANFORD — Have you missed ery solar eclipse over the last thou-

Well, don't despair, you have one t chance to see a solar eclipse before second millennium ends.

t won't be a total eclipse of the sun, it will be a great holiday gift for u and your family. That's right, the solar eclipse of the millennium will ur on Dec. 25, Christmas Day, and staff of the SCC Planetarium and mbers of the Central Florida ronomical Society will be here to p you and your family get an up se and safe view of this historical

So, what is this event all about? Why does it happen? What is the difference between a total and partial eclipse? Why won't this eclipse be a total one for anybody on Earth?

Most people by now, are aware that the Earth revolves about the Sun, and the Moon revolves about the Earth. As the Moon revolves about the Earth, you would expect it to pass between the Earth and the Sun each orbit (New

When the Moon passes directly between the Earth and the Sun it blocks the Sun from view here on the Earth. Actually it is the Moon's shadow hitting the Earth. But the Moon's shadow is pretty small by the time it covers the 250,000 miles to reach the Earth. By then it covers only a very small area of the Earth's surface.

If you happen to be in the path of this shadow as the Earth rotates under it, you will see the Moon completely block the Sun (most times) in what is called a Total Solar Eclipse. But if you are outside the actual path of totality, but within a few thousand miles of it, you can still see the Moon pass in front of part of the Sun. This is called a Partial Solar Eclipse.

So why don't we get a solar eclipse every New Moon? Well, the Moon's orbital plane is tilted 5 degrees to the Earth's orbital plane. This means that there are only two points, or nodes as they are called, in the Moon's orbit when it crosses the Earth's orbital

Most months, at New Moon, the Moon's shadow passes "above" or "below" the Earth. But about every six months, as the Earth revolves about the Sun, these nodes line up with the Sun as seen from Earth. If New Moon coincides precisely at the same time, a total solar eclipse occurs somewhere on the Sometimes, as in the upcoming case on Dec. 25, the timing is just a hair off. On Christmas Day this year, the Moon's shadow will pass just barely

"above" the Earth. So, no one on the Earth will get to see a total solar eclipse. But, it will be close enough that most people in the Northern Hemisphere, on the daylight side of the Earth, will get to see a partial solar

Here in Central Florida, the percentage of the Sun's diameter eclipsed by the Moon will range from 35 percent in Tampa, to 37 percent in Orlando, to 38 percent in Daytona.

While it won't be 100 percent, through a specially equipped telescope you will get to view sunspots as well as see the silhouette of Lunar mountain ranges. For the best and safest viewing of this Christmas Eclipse, come to the SCC Planetarium on Christmas Day from 11 a.m. until 2:05 p.m. where we will have specially equipped telescopes for you to use free.

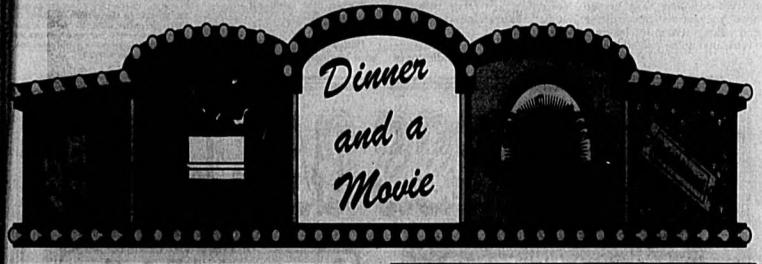

The Seminole Community College Planetarium is located on the main campus of Seminole Community College at 100 Weldon Blvd., Sanford, Florida with entrances off of US 17-92 (across from Bob Dance Dodge) and Lake Mary Blvd. (Exit 50 on I-4). Information for the public will be posted on our Information line at 407-328-

The SCC Planetarium will be issuing further press releases concerning the danger of improperly watching a solar eclipse in the coming weeks. We are also designing demonstrations of safe ways to view the eclipse as well as graphic demonstrations of what can happen when unsafe methods are

If your organization would like to video or photograph these demonstra-tions, please contact the SCC Planetarium by Dec. 8. We do not want any Central Floridians to get perma-nent eye damage as a gift this holiday season, and we are counting on you to help us prevent it.

Laurent Pellerin is the assistant director of the SCC Planetarium.

Mom irked sister-in-law has no desire to play aunt

Abby

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem with my sister-inclose, but got along fine until the birth of my son two years

She always said she didn't like or want children, but I never took her seriously. I thought she'd make an exception with her Doar own nephew. She's not nasty, but she takes absolutely no interest in him. She never wants to hold or play with him, and she's made it clear she's not available for baby sitting. At times, I think she resents the attention he gets from other members of the family.

My husband says not to worry about it, but I find her attitude offensive. My relationship with her has deteriorated. I'm upset that our sweet little boy doesn't have a normal, loving aunt.

My mother-in-law understands how I feel, but tells me law. We've never beenit's my sister-in-law's choice and that I shouldn't let it get to me. What do you think?

OFFENDED IN EAST BENTLEIGH, AUSTRALIA

DEAR OFFEND-ED: I agree with your husband and motherin-law. Not everyone is able to relate to small children. You'll gain nothing by continuing to personalize this. It has nothing to do with you or the child.

Perhaps when your son is a bit older and easier for your eister-in-law to communicate with, she'll be able to establish a relationship with him. However, If it doesn't happen, the loss will be hers, not the boy's.

Poinsettia: A Christmas flower tradition

The poinsettia, first introduced from Mexico in 1825, has become one of the most popular symbols of the Christmas season. It makes a great gift and is an inexpensive way to add festive color to your holiday decorations. After the holiday season, it can be used as a houseplant or placed in the landscape to be enjoyed for many more years.

Flowers

The poinsettia became a popular Christmas hol-Ferrer iday plant because it naturally blooms at this time of year displaying two popular Christmas colors, red and

However, the showy red parts, often mistaken for flowers, are not parts of the flower; instead, they are highly modified leaves formed below each flower. These specialized leaves are called bracts, and they can be red, salmon pink, or white. The true flowers are nothing to get excited about, they are very small, green and yellow in color, and barely visible among the colored bracts.

Once you get your poinsettia home it is important to care for it properly so you can enjoy it as long as possible. The poinsettia is especially sensitive to chilling temperatures. Prolonged exposure to cold temperatures will cause the plant to drop its lower leaves.

Excessive heat can have the same effect. The poinsettia should be placed in a cool place in your home away from extreme heat or cold drafts. This means plac-• • Ing it away from radiators, fireplaces and other heat sources. The ideal night temperature is between 60-70 degrees.

Watering

Watering practices are equally important and can determine the life expectancy of your poinsettia. Proper watering involves applying water in sufficient quantities to thoroughly soak the soil until it runs out the bottom and adding no more water until the soil feels dry to the touch. Your finger stuck in the soil a few inches is the best indicator of soil moisture. If your poinsettia is in a plastic sleeve, make sure the water does not accumulate in the Standing water, in a sleeve or drain tray, can cause root rot and should be emptied-out after each watering. Plants placed in the home can dry out quickly so check for moisture frequently. If your poinsettia suffers from lack of water, some of the lower foliage will yellow and die producing a leggy plant.

Cutting flowers
Poinsettia flowers can also be used as cut flowers. To have the cut flower stems last as long as possible, first you must seal the cut end of the stem to coagulate the milky sap and reduce wilting. This can be done by immersing the cut end of the stem in very hot water for about one minute, and then immediately into cool water. The poinsettia flowers should be cut at least 24 hours before they are to be used in arrangements and stored in a cool place after sealing them.

Poinsettias can be placed into your landscape after the holiday season. Cut off the faded blooms to about a 6-8 inch height and place them in a sunny area of your landscape about the end of February or when all danger of frost has passed. Keep in mind that Poinsettias are sensitive to cold and may be frozen back in some years. Poinsettias naturally bloom when the days are short (long nights) and flowering may be inhibited or prevented by artifi-cially extending the day length. Because of this, plant them in areas that receive little or no night lighting from windows, doors or streetlights.

Poinsettias grow well in a wide range of soils with good drainage. Fertilize poinsettias as you would other landscape plants. A complete fertilizer such a 6-6-6 will work fine applied in three, applications (spring, summer and fall) at the rate of 1 pounds per 100 square feet, per application.

Seasonal speed zones in effect for manatee migration

With the onset of autumn, Florida's waters cool down, manatees begin to move south or to the warmer waters springs Shupe and pawer Outdoors plants.

Manatees prefer water temperatures above 68 degrees F. Manatees exposed to colder temperatures for prolonged periods can become sick or even die.

Boaters should be aware that many waterways have seasonal speed zones that change during this time of the year. The speed zones reflect the seasonal migration of manatees.

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation (FWC) is cautioning bosters to abide by posted speed zones, stay in marked channels, wear polarized sunglasses and to pole, paddle or use trolling motors when over shallow seagrass beds during the migration period.

Kipp Fronlich, chief of the FWC's Bureau of Protected Species Management, said manatees tend to travel to the same areas each winter and know where warm

"If you boat near any of these manatee congregation spots or in known manatee travel routes, please slowdown to the appropriate speed for the area," Frohlich said. "Scan the water near or in front of your boat for any swirls that look like a huge footprint, a repetitive line of half-moon swirls, a mud trail or any breaking of the surface by a snout or a tail.

"If you see a manatee, give it plenty of room. It may have a calf or be traveling with other manatees that are close by."

As with other wild ani-mals, the FWC encourages passive observation.

"Please do not give food or water or attempt to touch a manatee," Frohlich said. Repeated human contact with wild animals often contributes to the animals' deaths. If you would like to see manatees, you are encouraged to visit places where manatees are in captivity for rehabilitation pur-

Several oceanaria facilities around the state have mana-

Frohlich said when boaters see an injured, dead, orphaned or tagged manatee, or one that is being harassed, they should notify the Florida Marine Enforcement Office on VHF Channel 16 or by mobile phone at *FWC. The Resource Protection Hotline number is 1-800-DIAL-FMP (1-800-342-5367). A marine law enforcement officer will assist with the rescue or recovery or provide the appropriate followthrough.

After 22 innings, final score 103-7!

Special to the Herald

DOVER - On Sunday, November 19, 2000, the 8-and-Under Warriors All-star team from Seminole Softball Club traveled to Dover to participate in a tournament with three west coast teams and came home with a four-game sweep.

The west coast teams never knew what hit

The first game was at 9:30 a.m. against the Tampa Heatwave. The Warriors made one spectacular play after another. After five-innings of play, the final score was 25-2.

The next game was against the Dover Challengers and once again the Warriors were unstoppable. The final score after six-innings of play was 27-1.

Then it was time to play the Crushers. Like their name, they got crushed! The score at the end of six-innings was 23-1.

" The Warriors showed no mercy in any game they, played as they were out to win.

The final playoff game was a rematch with the host Challengers.

The Challengers came out of the dugout swinging and scored three runs in the top of the first

The Warriors thought they had a battle shead of them, but it was just a mirage. After five-innings of play, the Challengers gave up the fight.

The final on that game was 28-3.

In 22 innings of play the Seminole Warriors scored 103 runs, many of which were home runs. Yet the defense was just as impressive, allowing only seven runs to their four opponents !

What a team! This is a group of league age 8year olds that got up at 6:30 a.m. to travel for 1-1/2 hours to play some hard-core softball. They finished up their games at 4:15 p.m. for the ride back home. Smiling all the way!

The team members that played these awesome games were: Marissa Blake, Gina Figliolia, Hayley Wilson, Bailey Wight, Katie Robinson, Sarah Canupp, Jordan Paolucci, Stephanie Fickas, Dani Wayt, and Brittany DeMaria. Pete Wilson, Fred Robinson and Mark Wight coach them.

The girls have one more tournament that will be played on December 16 and 17 in Polk County. It is the Youth Demarini Winterfest.

It will be the last tournament they will play in 8-and-Under together. Some of the girls will have to move up to 10-and-Under next year. So look out Polk County, the Warriors are coming!
