Suspicious house fire

SANFORD - An unoccupied home at 100 Monica Court, in Lake Mary's Cardinal Oaks off C.R. 427 burned yesterday. Fire units were called when smoke and flames were sighted around 3:32 Sunday morning.

Seminole County Fire Investigator Bob Christian said the home was one of the largest and oldest in that area, approximately 46,000 square feet. "We believe it may be valued at around $523,000," he said. "and we have estimated the fire damage at about $200,000." Christian said the fire is still under investigation. "We haven't determined the cause yet," he said this morning, "and it's being classed as suspicious." The owner of the home reportedly moved to South Florida several weeks ago and no one was believed to have been in the structure.

Fire fighting units on the scene in addition to Seminole County, were those from Sanford. Longwood, Winter Springs and Lake Mary.

The fire was contained by 4:39 a.m. Sunday morning, but firemen remained at the scene for the better part of the day.

School complaints probed 2 departments vague on civil rights charges

By VICKI DASORNIER Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The U.S. Department of Justice and the U.S. Department of Education will combine their resources to investigate complaints of civil rights violations against the Seminole County school district. Meanwhile the Department of Justice has received an additional civil rights complaint against the school district. Representatives of both departments were unwilling to give details of why they were combining forces to check into the complaints flied here. "Both departments are looking at the same details."

said Roger Murphy, a spokesman for the education department. "Both departments are conducting an ivestigation into possible civil rights violations." Luverta York, an investigator for the justice department, declined comment at all, refusing to even confirm if a joint investigation is being made. Another investigator with the Department of Justice, who did not want to be identified, confirmed that the investigation was being conducted in conjuction with the Department of Education. He added the joint investigation is not "ganging up" on the school district. Rather, he said, it is an attempt to streamline the investigation.

The complaintants in all three cases contend that financial inequities between schools in Sanford and in other parts of the school district has resulted in an Infertor education for Sanford students.

Minorities, especially blacks, are more predominant in Sanford than in other parts of the school district. Some who have flied complaints believe that the financial inequities are related to the racial make up of ☐ See Schools, Page 5A

125 volunteers help family get dream home

By VICKI DeSORMIER Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - More than 125 volunteers pitched in to help a Seminole County family realize their dream.

Last week, the volunteers many of them employees of Home Depot - converged on the Johnson property on Water Street in Sanford to help build a home made with donated mate-

Robert and Janet Johnson's new house was built as a part of the "Blitz Build." The program was sponsored by Habitat for Humanity, Home Depot and WESH-Channel 2.

Robert, a farm laborer, and Janet, who attends re-training school, have both done a great deal of volunteer work helping to build homes for others through Habitat for Humanity. "We've dreamed about having our own home for years," Robert Johnson said.

He and his wife will share their new home with their three children and a grandchild. "The Lord has helped us in our turn." Janet Johnson said.

The Blitz Build at the Johnson's home was part of a two-county effort locally. Five other houses were built in Orange County as well.

Emily Furlong, vice president of the Seminole County chapter of Habitat for Humanity said the Johnsons have worked "long and hard" for others and their time had come to be rewarded.

"We have been hoping to get a home for them for some time now...several years, in fact." Furlong said. "They've worked hard for it."

In fact, not only have Robert and Janet worked hard on Habitat for Humanity projects. their children have all spent many hours in service to the projects of building homes for others.

"It has always been a family effort for them," Furlong said. Don Noit, president of the local Habitat chapter said he believes the family has been waiting for a home of their own long enough.

"They have certainly earned the right to have their own home," he said. "We are very, very happy for them."

Holding on to his own home, Robert Johnson, center, rests for a moment while Lambert Mills and Johnson's son Robert Jr. continue to work on the Johnson house.

Woman awarded millions in shooting

WEST PALM BEACH - Kmart Corp. must pay more than $11 million to a quadriplegic woman shot by her drunken boyfriend with a rifle he bought at the retailer, a jury has ruled. The $12.5 million verdict against Kmart and Thomas W.

Knapp, who shot Deborah Kitchen in the neck on Dec. 14. 1987, sends a message to gun retailers, said Kitchen's attorney, Gregory Stine.

Kmart attorney Amy Smith said the company will appeal Friday's verdict.

"We are not at fault," Smith said. "I don't know if that's enough to overcome the sympathy factor." Kitchen, 40, of Grand Rapids. Mich., was not in court when the verdict was read. Sitting in her wheelchair at a hotel, Kitchen said it's about time gun retailers were held responsible for the actions of gun buyers.

Knapp shot Kitchen once in the neck shortly after buying the rifle at a Kmart in Tampa.

Knapp told police he drank a case of beer and a fifth of whiskey the day of the shooting and probably shouldn't have been driving when he rammed the car Kitchen was riding in and forced it off the road.

Although named in the lawsuit, Knapp didn't attend the trial. The jury found Knapp, who is serving a 40-year prison sentence for the shooting, partially responsible for Kitchen's injury. He must pay about $1 million of the total verdict.

Owens retracts accusations

TALLAHASSEE - The state official who told investigators former Public Service Commissioner Thomas Beard falsified a drug test has retracted his story and is now himself the subject of an investigation, a newspaper reported Saturday.

In July, Jim Owens, communications officer for the Florida Marine Pairol, gave sworn testimony to the Florida Department of Law Enforcement that Beard avoided a random Florida National Guard drug test in 1991 by asking Owens, his former neighbor, to provide him with a urine sample, sources told The Palm Seach Post.

The state Department of Environmental Projection has conducted an internal investigation into whether Owens violated state law, said DEP spokeswoman April Herrie. The report is expected to be released Monday.

Leon County State Attorney Willie Meggs said his office is working with FDLE to determine whether to charge Owens with giving false information to a law enforcement agency.

Beard resigned in August, following the release of an FDLE report that concluded there is "credible, consistent and corroborative" evidence that Beard faked the drug test.

Cable Spying

State abuzz with allegations of cable spying on utility regulators

By CURT AND ERSON
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE — The mundane world of utility regulation has taken a cloak-anddagger turn in Florida, where a criminal investigation is under way into spying on state officials and private individuals by the cable television industry.

It's pretty bizarre," said Public Service

Commissioner Luis Lauredo, who was among those under surveillance.

The Florida Cable Television Association, locked in a multibillion-dollar struggle with telephone companies over uses of emerging technology, spent $40,000 over the past three years digging up dirt on members of the PSC and utility employees and lob-byists, according to FCTA President Steve Wilkerson.

"We were very concerned we weren't getting a fair and objective hearing at the PSC," said Wilkerson, whose association represents 165 cable systems in Florida.

Either they wanted to try and get somebody or somehow influence and control

-Thomas Beard

Wilkerson and a consultant, Steve Hull, hired a private investigator to spy on PSC members Thomas Beard and Lauredo and telephone company lobbylats and employees. The surveillance included watching their cars and contacts with other people, tracking down public records such as license plates and investigating longdistance calls.

If the spying found evidence that PSC members were hanging out with telephone company executives while phone cases were pending before the panel. Wilkerson and Hull would let the press, legislators and law Beard and Lauredo.

enforcement officials know about it.

"We would pass it along to these individuals, let them develop the informa-tion." Wilkerson said. "I was trying to build awareness about the PSC."

Beard has since resigned from the PSC following disclosures that he had dated two women who work for Southern Bell, Florida's largest telephone company. The surveillance included watching Beard socialize with company employees, but it isn't clear if the spying led directly to Beard's resigna-

"Either they wanted to try and get somebody or somehow influence and con-trol you." he said.

The criminal probe involves the longdistance records. The Florida Department of Law Enforcement and federal prosecutors are examining whether any laws were violated when the private eye, Richard Lund of Miami, obtained the toll call records on

PRINTING COMPANY

Way Back When

Way back when local businesses and professional offices once looked forward each month to getting a blotter from a local printing firm. The company was first known as Haynes and Ratliff, owned and operated by Walter M. Haynes, Sr., and Zeb Ratliff. Haynes, who before that was business manager for The Herald when it was owned and edited by R. J. "Bob" Holly, handled the front office for the local printing company and Retilff was in charge of the printing plant. Haynes later sold his and the name of the firm was changed to Celery City Printing Company and it is still known today by that name. The original firm was located on the eastside of the 100 block of South Park Avenue, right next door to Rockey's Tire Shop. The firm had three "slogans" it used constantly in its advertising, flyers, brochures and even in the late 1940s when it sponsored the broadcasting of baseball games played by the Sanford Giants of the Florida State League. One of the slogans was "if it's worth printing, it's worth printing right." The second was "Your printing troubles are a burden to you, a pleasure to us." The third was "We can't do all the printing so we only do the best." message similar to the one seen here for the month of November, 1956.

Prison has country club look, but it's still prison

W BILL KACZON Associated Press Writer

PENSACOLA - One of the first things new inmates see upon arriving at the Pensacola Federal Prison Camp is a golf course.

But they needn't bother to bring clubs. The course is off-limits to prisoners unless they are working on the grounds. The 530-bed camp is on Saufley Field, a naval installation with grounds neatly maintained by the inmates. The landscaping is lush with flowers and plants grown in the camp's greenhouse. The golf course, just outside the main gate, is strictly for Navy use. But inmates can use handball and tennis courts, a gym, weight room and softball-soccer complex. Those and other amenities have prompted critics — unfairly, prison officials say — to label Pensacola and similar minimum-security camps as "country club prisons" or even "Club Feds." "It's hard to explain when you try to talk to the public," said Warden John Fanello. "They see that they eat pretty good and they get treated pretty good. We have to treat them good. You don't want to come to prison, and the fact that you've been sentenced to a term of incarceration is ... the punishment you've received."

There is no need for additional punishment, he "We want to treat them how you and I would expect to be treated in any job: with dignity and respect," Fanello said. About 300 inmates work for the Navy. primarily doing groundskeeping at Pensacola area installations. The rest have maintenance, food preparation and other jobs at the camp. Saufley once was a flight training base, and student pilots from Whiting Field, about 30 miles away, still do touch-and-go landings on its runways in small white and orange turboprops. But the base's main function is to serve as home of the Naval Education and Training Program Development Center.

By combining all of these items, a person can early get the idea that government. whether local, state or federal, is constantly restricting personal freedoms. However, good government is charged with looking after the safety, health and welfare of its people.

The good each of these matters will accomplish is singular. It alone, if given serious thought, outweighs them all.

Photo horrifying

On Oct. 5. The Orlando Sentinel published a photo on the front page in living color that just horrifled me. This particular photo depicted several Somalian citizens drayging a dead unidentifled American soldier through the streets of Mogadash!. That scene consumed my thoughts all day, and I kept asking myself "Why was that photo published?" Within hours I learned that this photo was taken by the American Protection. was taken by the Associated Press and basically hundreds of major newspapers all over the country had published this same photo and that many publishers and radio stations were swamped with callers responding to this scene splashed on the newspapers and televisions all over.

What has happened to reporting the "news"? Has the media become so desensitized that depicting a mother's son, or a grandson, or even a young child's father in this fashion clearly sends the message that they don't care who it hurts as long as it "sells"? This is "not" news reporting, it's exploitation and sensationalism in the cruelest way. Does the media think we are that stupid...that the only way to convey the news is to exploit the truth. That photo was unnecessary and in poor

It is sad to think that so many journalists have become so hardened by this cruel world that they would compromise their integrity just to make a buck. They have no regard for human life and they disregard the pain that it causes the survivors, and in this case, the loved ones of this soldier.

God bless this soldier and his family.

Anyone can have middle-class values different ways of learning. The research director

New York City has the nation's largest school system and now has a new chancellor of the chools - Ramon Cortines, most recently in impressive charge of the San Francisco schools. lie was greeted with an attack by Victor Gotbaum, a former powerful labor leader and currently on the New York Board of Education.

What Gotbaum said gets to the core of the battle for the future of public education in this country. He represents all too many principals, teachers and taxpayers who believe that the poor, particularly the children of single parents, are "different" than middle-class kids because their parents do not have middle-class values. Cortines' middle-class values, Gotbaum charges. "are not representative" of what's in New York's school system.

in attacking Cortines. Gotbaum said that the majority of the board of education, who selected Cortines, were "enamored of middle-class. two-parent families with children who don't have sex." And so is Cortines.

(Everything else aside, the notion that teen age children of middle-class, two-parent families don't have sex indicates that Gotbaum has been watching too many reruns of 1950s TV sitcoms.)

Ramon Cortines answered Gotbaum in his customary civil manner: "I do believe that the parents of our children in the schools, regardless of their cultural or socioeconomic background. do believe in values and want their children to be taught values that are shared by other parents. We get caught in the wrong place when we think that because someone is poor they have a lesser value system. All parents want their kids to read, to write, to learn discipline and proper work habits and how to cooperate and work with others. To be participating citizens."

The patronizing Golbaum concept that poor parents and their children have 'different" values sometimes leads some educators to insist that those kids have

What Gotbaum said gets to the core of the buttle for the future of public education in this country.

that "any tests that emphasize logical, analytic methods of problem-solving will be blased against minorities."

of a big city school system has said, for instance.

If certain teachers believe that certain kinds of kids cannot learn in a logical, analytic way, those children will be foreclosed from careers that require this approach to problem-solving. Such limiting of children's futures is done not only by some white teachers, but by a number of black teachers as well. Unwittingly, both white and black teachers who do this are racist because they are stereotyping children because of their color and class.

As for the focus on how "different" single parents are, it is both patronizing and destructive (the two often go together) to say that single parents have values that are far from those of two-parent families.

I have been reporting on schools for some 40 years and it is utterly clear to me that the vast majority of single parents do not expect different kinds of achievement from their kids than other parents. At school board meetings, I have heard single parents who are locked into low-level jobs demanding better education for their children so that those kids can move up in the society.

The future starts to look lean

My generation, which came of age in the 1950s, is on a downhill economic alope and sliding fact. That may not sound surprising to younger Americans, who read the actuarial tables and misread the past, but it is a shock to us. What is even more important is that our situation is fast becoming the national rather than the generational norm.

Everyone who reads the newspapers or watches television knows the raw facts and figures. America's giant corporations are "downsising." going "lean and mean" to increase efficiency in order to meet foreign competition in the new global economy.

With manufacturing employment dropping by 3 million workers between 1979 and 1992, blue-collar employees were the first to go. Then white-collar, middle-management types began to feel the ax. Today, it can be safely said that the only people who feel secure about their future are the super-rich and those who don't keep up with the news.

Rolling adjustments to changed economic circumstances are nothing new in American or world history. Revolutionary changes in employment patterns and working conditions have been wrought periodically since the dawn of the Industrial Revolution.

But to understand history is not to minimize its effects in the here and now. As trends forecaster Gerald Celente told The Orange County Register, "The Industrial Age is ending. All the systems are breaking down and that means disappointment and disillusionment for the people who grew up in the 50s. These people believed in the Ozzle and Harriet way of life. That concept is dead."

Just how dead was illustrated in a recent membership surrest but the American Membership surrest but the American Membership surrest but the American Membership membership survey by the American Management Association of New York. It found that almost half of its 870 member companies had cut their workforce this year, with the reductions averaging 10.4 percent. According to the association, more than half of those laid off were middle managers, supervisors and technicians, the kinds of workers traditionally protected from layoffs in past downturns.

Move up the income scale a notch and the story is no less startling. As class secretary of my college class. I hear regularly from classimates around the country. Three who have been evicted from what had seemed to be nafe perches in upper and middle management wrote within the past two months. Eight have done so over the past year. The following excerpts from one letter are illustrative (names are changed for obvious reasons):

"As a result of the restructuring of US Widget, I left Widget on Aug. 31, 1993. Since the merger of Engulf and Widget in April 1992, 12 of 13 Widget vice presidents are gone..."

"Ain't we got fun," my classmate concluded. It's a kind of "fun" which has become very familiar to my structure. There are just over familiar to my generation. There are just over 21 million Americans aged 55 to 64. Of these, 13 million are working, 3 million are retired and about 5 million are in "other activities." "My generation will be the permanent victims of the restructuring of the American economy." a California man told his local newspaper. That helps explain why the United Auto Workers Union is concentrating its current contract talks with the big automakers on pre-serving the jobs and salaries of its current members rather than on preserving jobs for the next generation. Labor's crisis is in the here and now. as Detroit's Big Three keep shedding workers in a neverending struggle to become more competitive with Japan. Detroit is not alone. Manufacturers cut those who don't keep up with the news. 275,000 workers over the past year. according to recent studies. Thanks in part to such cuts, with an attendant investment in new equipment and better methods, manufacturing productivity rose at a rate of 5.3 percent, compared to a fall in the overall business productivity rate of 1 percent. And thanks to those productivity gains, American products are competitive in world markets

The only people who feel secure about their future are the super rich and again. Against that background, more downsizing is inevitable.

In the face of such projections, it is tempting to emulate the Luddities, those 19th-century Englishmen who believed the solution to their job woes was to wreck the machines which had displaced them. That wasn't and isn't the answer, but answers there must be. Throwing people on the ash heap while they are still productive is not morally or politically acceptable. If loyalty up no longer implies a reciprocal loyalty down in the job market. government must do more to take up the slack. In part, that is what a national health care system is all about. But there should also be other guaranteed bridges between forced early retirements and the kick-in of Social Security. The integrity and vesting of private pension. The integrity and vesting of private pension systems must be more thoroughly insured or guaranteed by government than they are now. More attention and funds should be allocated to the retraining of displaced workers. Why? Because a nation that claims to care about all its people cannot stand by as millions are doomed to irrelevancy and despair.

Brownie recipe needs reinventing

WASHINGTON - Inside the Pentagon it's known as file "MIL-C-44072C." After six months and 175 work hours, the final product emerged:

The Pentagon's official fudge brownle recipe. in all, the 22 pages of specifications for chocolate covered browntes and oatmeal cookies are more than an overwritten recipe. Officials describe it as a rallying cry for Vice President Al Gore's National Performance Review. During one of the group's meetings, there were gasps of disbelief when the specifications were distributed. One NPR official told us he literally slapped his forehead with his palm when the file was passed to him. "I said, 'how in the world could we have gotten to this point?" the official recalled.

Dealing with such Pentagon's official fudge directives, even when it comes to brownie recipe sweets for troop rations, underscores how sour the experience can be for the private sector. Before doing business with Uncle Sam, companies first have to crack Pentagon-speak: "The texture of the brownie shall be firm but not hard."

After beginning by instructing the reader "to whip eggs in large bowl on high speed until light and fluffy." the specifications turn

"Pour batter into pan at a rate that will yield uncoated brownies which, when cut such as to meet the dimension requirements specified in regulation 3.4f, will weigh approximately 35 grams each," reads the recipe. "The dimensions of the coated brownie shall not exceed 3-1/2 inches by 2-1/2 inches by 5/8 inch."

Regulation "3.2.5.3", meanwhile, goes to great lengths to specify the acceptable size of the walnuts in the brownies.

"Shelled walnut pieces shall be of the small piece size classification, shall be of a light color, and shall be U.S. No. 1 of the U.S. Standards for Shelled English Walnuts. A minimum of 90 percent, by weight, of the pieces shall pass through a 4/16-inch diameter round hole screen and not more than 1 percent, by weight, shall pass through a 2/16-inch diameter round hole screen."

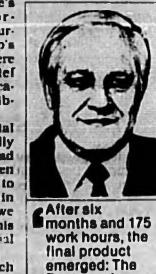

According to regulation "3.3.8", the moisture count of the oatmeal cookies shall be not more than 3.5 percent" of the cookie bar. The oatmeal, meanwhile, has to "have natural rolled oat flavor and odor and shall be clean and free from burned particles, runcid, musty, sour, or other undesirable flavors and odors.

Then there's the cooking oil: "The shortening shall have a stability of not less than 100 hours as determined by the Active Oxygen Method (AOM) in Method Cd 12-57 of the Commercial Fats and Oils chapter in the Official and Tentative Methods of the American Oil Chemists Society."

The paper trail for the specifications, which were written in 1987 and updated in 1990. went through 10 different layers. Harvey Keene, the director of public affairs at Army Natick Research. Development and Engineering Center, explained that the ingredients have to be precise because rations need a three-year storage life. While Keene agreed that the specifications probably seem "completely inane to the average person," he said there was a rational.

"If you don't write everything exactly to the letter, somebody is going to cut a corner so that they can save a penny," said Keene. "You have to make them so tight and detailed that contractors can't cut a corner on it."

But Phil Lader, the director of management at the Office of Management and Budget and a key member of the vice president's NPR. thinks that excuse is half-baked.

WASHINGTON - Housing Secretary Henry Claneron Is putting forth an ambitious agenda aimed at stamping out inner-city discrimination and eliminating racial barriers to decent housing and safe, clean communities.

The one-year campaign, to be announced this week, is the type of approach that has continually put Ciancros at odds with some of President Clinton's advisers. who prefer solutions to the urban problem that are based on economics, not race.

He has forged ahead on that philosophy, most recently by sending in investigators to monitor public housing integration in eastern Texas, and disciplining housing officials in Vidor, Texas, for maintaining an all-white housing project.

"I have set personal priorities that specify what I hope we can

Despite the disagreement over the role of race in urban reform. the White House last month cited Cisneros' fair-housing work on a fact sheet of "the many examples of steps President Clinton has taken to fight for the country's future." This list was released in conjunction with the Congressional Black Caucus' annual meeting, and amid a chorus of complaints from black activists that the president is doing too little about racism.

HUD's plan includes stringent enforcement of fair-housing laws and aggressive attacks on mortgage and insurance redlining "in order to combat the spatial separation by race and income that now polarizes many of America's cities." Redlining refers to the practice of refusing to do business in certain neighborhoods.

The plan also calls for a National Fair Housing Summit. by Jan. 1, 1994, to develop a fair-housing agenda.

The deadline for implementing the bulk of the plan is Sept. 30. 1994. By then, HUD plans to:

Find ways to close pending fair housing cases. Improve the way it processes housing discrimination complaints.

 Cut the number of discrimination cases closed administratively by 10 percent.

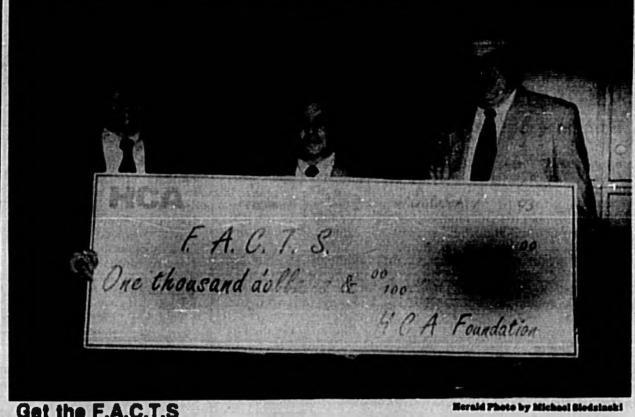

• Create a new unit to deal with insurance redlining, and hold a public hearing on the aubject.

Female agent says FBI retaliated

WASHINGTON - A female FBI agent says she was placed on unpaid leave for complaining to Congress that the bureau ignored her longstanding complaint that a superior had sexually attacked her.

Although the FBI "didn't provide a reason" for its action. Susane J. Doucette said she believed she was taken off the job last week in retaliation for her May 26 testimony before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Doucette, 39, who scheduled a news conference today to discuss her complaint, said she was planning to amend her sexual discrimination lawsuit against the Justice Department to include a claim that the latest action amounted to a wrongful discharge.

FBI spokesman Pete Ginieres said "the bureau has taken a position that we will have no comment on that at this time."

"We don't have a comment because it's an ongoing action,"

During her appearance before Congress, Doucette testified that in late 1988, an FBI superior, whom she didn't identify at the time, placed a choke-hold around her neck and touched her "in ways that are very sensitive."

Doucette said she suffered on-the-job harassment and retaliation for complaining to FBI authorities.

Farmers' errors increasing food costs

WASHINGTON - Farming practices that actually hurt the environment are being encouraged by government subsidies worldwide even though these mistakes drive up food prices, a study says.

Many governments pay farmers to kill useful insects, force crops from soil that needs a rest or try to grow rice in the desert, said the report by the World Resources Institute.

"All over the world, farm policies to date have not encouraged sustainability. Quite the opposite," Paul Faeth. project director, said in an interview.

Farmers in both developed and developing countries are unwittingly using methods that multiply the long-term cost of their produce by barming the earth and sometimes endangering humans, said the report by the international research organization that is financed by grants from governments and private sources.

A farm that is earning for its owner $75 an acre may actually be making only $2 an acre when soil depletion and crosion are taken into consideration, it said.

Actress defends Danson against critics

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. - Whoopi Goldberg scolded critics who attacked her boyfriend Ted Danson for appearing in blackface at a Friars Club roast, saying they should have expected tasteless, vulgar humor.

We were not trying to be politically correct. We were trying to be funny for ourselves," she said at a news conference

Danson wore blackface makeup and huge white lips at Friday's closed-door roast in New York. The "Cheers" television star also used the word "nigger" several times and toked about his sex life with Miss Goldberg.

The actress attacked talk show host Montel Williams for lashing out at Danson. She said Williams should have been familiar with the private club's 89-year history of ribald roasts and expected jokes to focus on sex, gender, bodily functions, religion and race.

'Perhaps Montel's show is not doing as well as it could be and this was his way of drawing attention," Miss Goldberg said. She said if Williams were a real man he would have talked to her before going public with his criticisms.

A spokesman for Williams or his syndicated series could not be reached for comment Sunday,

Edward Kennedy Jr. weds psychiatrist

NEW SHOREHAM, R.I. — The bride was late, the groom couldn't wait to kiss her and camera-wielding journalists chased the guests across the church lawn.

The spectacle was everything one would expect from a Kennedy wedding.

Edward Kennedy Jr. on Sunday married Katherine Anne. Gershman, who kept the son of the Massachusetts senator waiting at the altar for nearly 20 minutes.

When Gershman finally arrived at the church Sunday and started down the aisle, an eager Kennedy rushed to meet her halfway, and gave her a kiss.

The 34-year-old bride, an assistant professor in clinical psychiatry at Yale University, has a reputation for running late, said Melody Miller, a spokeswoman for the Kennedy family. The groom, the 32-year-old son of Sen. Edward Kennedy, arrived shortly before the scheduled 3 p.m. ceremony with his brother and best man, Patrick. Hundreds of well-wishers greeted the bridal party and members of the Kennedy family, including the Massachusetts senator and his ex-wife, Joan; Robert Kennedy Jr. and his family: Patricia Kennedy Lawford, an aunt of the groom; and William Kennedy Smith, a cousin of the groom.

Another cousin, John F. Kennedy Jr., and his girlfriend. actress Daryl Hannah, were chased across the front lawn and into St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Church by dozens of Robert Oakley's arrival in the Somalicapital Sunday coincided with a demonstration by thousands of Somalis shouting angry slogans against the United Nations and the United States.

Oakley met Sunday with elders of Aidid's clan, The New York Times, citing an unidentified State Department official, reported in today's editions.

Maj. David Stockwell, the U.N. military spokesman, said about 2,000 people took part in Sunday's demonstration. Paul Scoffeld, a Mogadishu-based reporter for the Australian Broadcasting Corp., estimated the crowd at 4,000.

British, American gene researchers win Nobel Prize By LAURINDA KEYS

Associated Press Writer STOCKHOLM, Sweden - Richard J. Roberts of

Britain and Phillip A. Sharp of the United States won the Nobel Prize in medicine today for a genetic discovery that advanced research on cancer and other diseases. Roberts, 50, who works at New England Biolabs in Beverly, Mass., and Sharp, 49, who works at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Center for Cancer Research in Cambridge, Mass., were honored for their discovery of split genes.

"The discovery of split genes has been of fundamental importance for today's basic research in biology, as well as for more medically oriented research concerning the development of cancer and other diseases," said the Nobel Assembly of the Karolinska Institute, which awarded the $825,000 prize.

Sharp said he learned of the award from a telephone call that woke him up about 6:30 a.m. "It was a surprise." he said, but added, "I knew it was very important work and very interesting

"No one had anticipated that it was ... one of the discoveries that come, really, once in a lifetime, where dogma is completely over-Roberts told AP Network News this morning.

A simple picture of gene structure was completely changed in 1977 when Roberts and Sharp independently discovered that genes could be discontinuous, each present in several. well-separated DNA segments.

Before that, scientists thought a gene was a continuous segment within the very long, double-stranded DNA molecule, the chemical substance of heredity, the award committee said.

"Roberts' and Sharp's discovery has changed our view on how genes in higher organisms develop during evolution," the Nobel Assembly said. Their discovery led to the prediction of a new genetic process - splicing, the assembly of information from the gene segments, which is essential for expressing genetic information.

The prize-winners' work has applications to research on hereditary diseases in which there are errors in splicing. The most studied of such diseases is beta-thalessemia, an anemia prevalent in some Mediterranean countries. The splicing also plays a role in creating a form of leukemia.

Roberts was working at the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory on Long Island, New York, and Sharp was at MIT when they found that an individual gene can comprise more than one DNA segment.

"Such discontinuous genes exist in organisms more complex than those studied earlier," said the assembly.

The scientists were studying the genetic material in adenovirus, a virus that causes the common cold. The genome of that virus consists of one long DNA molecule, and Roberts and Sharp were trying to determine where in the genome different genes were located. They found that the genetic information in the gene was discontinuously organized.

"The discovery immediately led to intensive research to find out whether this gene structure is present also in other viruses and in ordinary cells." the assembly said. "Soon after the initial discovery, several researchers could show that a discontinuous (or split) gene structure was ... in fact the most common gene structure in higher organisms."

Everybody thought that genes were laid out in exactly the same way, and so it came as a tremendous surprise at the time," that they were different in higher organisms, such as humans, Roberts said.

Roberts, born in Derby, England, has been research director at New England Biolabs since 1992. He also worked at Cold Spring Harbor from 1972 to 1992 and was a research fellow at Harvard University. He holds bachelor of science and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Sheffield, Britain.

Sharp, head of the biology department at MIT. was the director of its Center for Cancer Research from 1985 to 1991. He studied at Union College in Barbourville, N.Y., before getting his doctorate in chemistry at the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana, and was a postdoctoral fellow at the California Institute of Technology before moving to Cold Spring Harbor. He stayed there until 1974, when he joined MIT.

The other prizes established by Alfred Nobel in his 1896 are the physics and chemistry prizes, to be awarded in Stockholm on Wednesday; the Nobel Peace Prize, to be awarded in Oslo, Norway, on Friday; and the literature prize, won last week by Toni Morrison of the United States.

The Nobel Memorial Prize in Economic Science. established by the Central Bank of Sweden in 1968, will be awarded Tuesday.

The prizes are presented in Stockholm and Oslo on Dec. 10, the anniversary of Nobel's death.

"The girls ran well, but we have no idea of where we finished as a team." said Lake Howell coach Tom-Hammontree, "Avon Park was supposed to run in the invitational race. But when they got there, they decided to run in the open event

When they turned in their results, it crashed the scoring computer. On top of that, there wasn't enough numbers to hand out to the runners when they finished, so they couldn't come up with a raw score for everyone. We scored 185 points. which should have put us third or fourth out of 44 teams.

Completing the team score for the Silver Hawks were Beth Whitchead (23rd, 13/32). Tamara Salaman (32nd, 1340), Winsome Clarke (52nd, 14.09), and Amy Fitch (71st, 14:26), Isabelle Cheng (88th, 14:46). and Erin Gerber (95th, 14:51) also represented Lake Howell.

"On that course, those times are good," said Hammontree. "The See Cross Country, Page 2B

One-time doormat turns into stumbling block Leesburg on Nov. 5 to qualify for the

Welcome to Death Valley, a k.a. the Spruce Creek High School Don't laugh: the Ovtedo and Lake

Howell High School football teams

For much of the last decade, the Spruce Creek Hawks have been the perental 5A-District 4 football doormat, no matter where they played (before this year, the Hawks) played their "home" games either at Daytona Beach Municipal Stadium or at New Smyrna Beach's Airport Field).

But this year, with their oncampus field outfitted with lights and seating, the Hawks are able to play their home games at home. And it must make a difference, because Spruce Creek (2-3 overall) is 2-1 at home so far this season, the wins coming over Oviedo (on Sept. 24) and Lake Howell (this past

So far, that's Oviedo's only district loss this year. Lake Howell's loss, its second in district play, putsthe Silver Hawks in a deep hole heading into the second half of the season. Currently, there are four teams in front of Lake Howell (including Oviedo) with only one district loss, Actually, Seminole County schools haven't fared very wellanywhere in Volusia County this season, going a combined 1-3. The only win came on Sept. 17, when Lyman defeated Mainland at Daytona Beach Municipal Stadium

With that in mind, it'll be interesting to see how things pan out over the final five weeks of the regular season, when each of the five 5A Seminole County schools has to make at least one trip across the St. John's River, Lake Brantley plays at Mainland (Oct. 22). Lake Howell has to go to Deltona (Oct.)

22). Lake Mary travels to Mainland (Oct. 29), Lyman visits DeLand (Oct. 22) and Spruce Creek (Nov. 5), and Oviedo visits DeLand (Oct. 29).

Speaking of the football playoffs. Seminole took a huge step toward qualifying for the Class 4A playoffs with its win over St. Cloud Friday night. The Tribe's chances were aided considerably by Cypress Creek's victory at Leesburg Friday.

Currently, Cypress Creek leads the 4A-District 6 race with a 2-0 mark while Seminole is 1-0. They're followed by Leesburg (0-1) and St. Cloud (0-2).

The 4A-District 6 race could be cleared up considerably on Oct. 22, when Cypress Creek visits Seminole and Leesburg plays at St. Cloud, but its not likely. Regardless of what happens between Seminole and Cypress Creek, if Leesburg beats St. Cloud. Seminole will have to beat plyoffs.

Fortunately for the Tribe, the game against Leesburg will be played at Thomas E. Whigham Stadium. The only problem with that is that Seminole will be celebrating its homecoming that night, an event that can impair a team's concentration with all of the surrounding activities.

Best line of the week: While at a Sanford Recreation men's softball game at Chase Park last week, I swear I overhead the following: "Didyou see what Levi's brother did last

To clarify, the Levi in question was Levi Raines, older brother of Chicago White Sox outfielder Tim Raines, who set an American League Championship Series for most hits in a series with a ninth-inning single Sunday night. Only in Sanford.

Beware of poisonous plants

Some of the most common plants are toxic

Some of the plants used in the home and landscape can be poisonous if eaten or irritating to the skin. Under normal circumstances most adults wouldn't eat these plants, but they can be accidently eaten by children.

Most gardeners and homeowners are not aware that some of our most common plants are poisonous. Many of them have such an unpleasant taste that you would be unlikely to chew them for very long or swallow them. Some, however, do not taste bad and may be eaten by accident.

Children may eat small amounts of almost anything accidently. As soon as possible, children should be taught not to put anything in their mouths except food. Adults too should refrain from putting leaves and twigs in their mouths while they work out in the garden or hike through the woods unless they know what the plant is and if it is poisonous.

Mushrooms can be particularly poisonous, so unless you are extremely positive about the identification, don't eat wild mushrooms. Currently there isn't a satisfactory guide for edible mushroom identification for Florida.

The Castor-bean is one of the plants that ingested, can cause burning in the throat; has poisonous properties but is used in the landscape and is found growing along roadside and ditches throughout Florida. It is a tree-like shrub sometimes reaching 15 feet in height. There are green and red varieties of the Castor-bean plant. The leaves can be 8 to 18 inches across and are green or dark purplish-red. The flowers are ivory with yellow or red centers. The fruits are borne in spikes bluish-green or bright red. They dry to light brown and split open scattering the seeds.

The seeds yield castor oil which was used as a househid medicine, but now it is mostly used for industrial and cosmetic purposes. The seeds also contain ricin which if violent vomiting and diarrhea; rapid pulse: duliness of vision; severe cases can cause convulsions or circulatory collapse. The number of seeds required to produce serious illness varies greatly. Children have died from eating as few as two or three; adults can survive ingesting greater amounts. The plant in bloom may also cause respiratory

Other plants commonly found in or around most Florida homes that are considered to have poisonous properties include: Brazilian Pepper, Poke Weed, Angel's Trumpet, Poinsettia, Dumb Cane, Rosary Pea. Poison Ivy, Elephant's Ear and Balsam

Some of the above-mentioned plants are poisonous only if eaten, while others cause skin irritation. While proper identification is essential if ingestion occurs, consider all unfamiliar plants as suspect.

For more information about poisonous plants around the home, drop by the Cooperative Extension Center or give me or the Master Gardeners a call. There is a complete listing of poisonous and irritant plants of Florida available at the Extension

Stepparenting 5 'most difficult situation'

DEAR ABBY: Your letters regarding jealous women and stepchildren have prompted me to write to you regarding what seem to be several misconceptions concerning stepparents. I am now the stepmother of five children, and it is the most difficult situation I have ever had to deal with in my life.

I fell in love with the father of these children - but had I fully realized what was involved, I would have left the country and changed my name. I expected to be chief baby sitter, entertainer, chauffeur. nurse, counselor and caretaker of these five children - with none of the say as to how they are raised or disciplined.

These particular children are I'd attempt an exorcism if I thought there was a priest who could survive it. I have tried my level best as a dutiful stepparent. but these children would kill Mother Teresa in a day!

Taking care of them has landed me in the hospital three times in the last two years. I don't like being treated like dirt in my own home by a bunch of kids who have never been taught manners. I did not allow them to throw food at the dinner table which made me about as popular as malaria.

When these spoiled children are all 18 and scatter to the four corners of the globe, their father will be lucky to hear from them on Father's Day (they don't bother with it currently). All they want is money, more money and things.

As soon as I can scrape the about as lovable as Satan, and funds together, my bags are packed. Am I alone, or have other stepmothers experienced

Skin sensitivity can be challenging

DEAR DR. GOTT: My whole back, torso and left side have a came to me a year or two ago burning, hurting sensation that with a similar problem. His chest has lasted for three months. My wound was draining pus and clothes hurt me and I feel terrible. One doctor I've seen thinks it's fibrositis, but one symptom doesn't fit. I get bad chills when removing or putting on clothes. Blood tests and X-rays are all negative, and I'm fit to be tied. The quality of my life has deteriorated, and I don't know where to turn.

NEEDLE CONTROL DE CONTROL DE LA CONTROL DE C

DEAR READER: This is truly a challenging problem. But I agree with you that fibrositis, a peculiar affliction causing only muscle aches, is probably not to blame.

Have you considered stress? Emotional tension can cause bizarre skin sensitivities. Perhaps you are reacting to a particular life situation, such as a trying job or family problems. Ask your doctor whether some counseling might be in order.

To give you more information. I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Mental and Emotional Illness." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long. self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 75-year-old father had quadruple bypass surgery four months ago. His chest wound has been slow to heal, oozing pus and having a foul odor. He's been back to his surgeon, yet the wound continues to ooze and looks as it did following the procedure.

DEAR READER: Your father's wound should have healed weeks ago. He may be suffering from a post-operative abscess or he could have a suture that hasn't dissolved and is causing infection.

To a degree, post-operative patients are like squeaky wheels: Those that squeak the most get the oil. You and your father may have to badger his surgeon to resolve this issue.

I remember a patient who was obviously infected, although his surgeon had pronounced him fit. I had the sense to refer him to another surgeon who removed an infected stitch, under local anesthesia. The patient's wound healed in a week.

the arrival of Christopher Columbus on these shores. There are certain bridge deals that make you wish you were a navigator, because you have to steer a careful course through the icebergs of distributional destruction. One false tack and you sink to defeat.

On today's deal, you reach three no-trump after a simple Stayman auction. West leads the diamond six: how do you plan the play?

First, count your top tricks. Here there are six: two spades, one heart, two diamonds and one club. If either the club or the heart finesse wins, immediately you have the extra three tricks you need.

So there is a natural reaction to grab the first trick and try one of the finesses. But which finesse it loses, your contract is safe. Today, in the United States, do you take? You must consider lead. Is the six West's fourth-highest diamond? Very unlikely. If he had, say, G-10-9-6 of diamonds, probably he would lead the 10, not the six. So it looks as though he has attacked from a short suit. perhaps because he has length in both majors. If this is true, East is the danger hand. So you must drive out his potential entry first.

You should duck the first trick. It cannot cost, and when East puts in the nine, it confirms your reading of the suit. You win the second diamond with dummy's king, play a spade to the king and run the club queen.

East may win with the king and return a diamond, but you cross to dummy with a club and take the heart finesse. Although
