Recession could be long, deep

NEW YORK - Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, says the recession could be long and deep if the Gulf War lasts past

Just last week, he told Congress he expected the war's economic consequences to be slight.

In an interview published today, Greenspan said he expected a swift recovery from the recession if the war is relatively brief and Persian Gulf oil fields are not extensively damaged.

"But if you get beyond three months, you begin to risk consumer confidence croston and that would abort any meaningful recovery," he told The New York Times.

Greenspan said the optimistic assessment he gave Congress was based in large part on the assumption that the war would be short. He said last week that he expected the recovery to begin no later than summer.

Greenspan said the economy is in the "most confidence-sensitive cycle I've seen in decades. The risks that confidence will not come back sufficiently adequately to bring the economy out of its recession is regrettably higher than I would like," he said.

He refused to say what steps the Federal Reserve Board would take to ease the recession and strengthen banks. He also wouldn't say if he wanted to be appointed to another term.

The four-pronged Iraqi attack that began Tuesday evening and appeared to end today involved only about 1,500 ground troops and 50 tanks and was considered a probe to test allied strength.

SANFORD - Sanford business executives are disappointed businessmen from other parts of the county don't support tax breaks for non-aviation businesses at the Seminole County Regional Airport, but pledge continued cooperation for common causes.

"The next several months are going to be very busy and I expect 98 percent of the time we'll agree." said Daryl McLain, chairman of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce legislative affairs committee. "But every once in a while we'll have a parochial-type issue like this that we won't."

Tuesday, members of the Sanford, Greater Seminole County and Oviedo chambers of commerce legislative committees met to discuss whether they would jointly support property tax exemptions for businesses at the Sanford-owned airport. Voting 12-6, the combined-chamber committee voted not to seek the exemption and instead, seek a federal free trade zone classification for the airport.

The joint committee also voted to encourage Sanford to expand the Sanford Airport Authority to include a "more representitive countywide alroort authority through expansion of the authority membership."

McLain said the five Sanford chamber members who attended voted against the motion and were Joined by one Seminole County chamber member. The 12 votes in favor were all cast by county and Oviedo chamber members, said McLain.

McLain said the vote must be ratified by the directors of all three chambers. If Sanford chamber leaders oppose the action, they will pursue the tax-exemption in-Clee Airport, Page 5A

SANFORD - This morning, while law enforcement investigators try to identify the burned body found in a truck belonging to Beverly Hawkins of Lake Mary, her family, friends and co-workers are still holding out hope that it is not Hawkins.

"We are just trying to piece this thing together right now," said Don Browning. Hawkins' brother. "We're still waiting to see what we'll find out."

Hawkins, who has been missing since Tuesday, was a pre-kindergarten teacher of mentally and physically handicapped students at Winter Springs Elementary School, 701 W. State Road 434, Winter Springs. Yesterday, a crisis team, made up of three counselors and trained administrators from around the county, was on hand to talk with students and faculty members who were grieving or attempting to cope. The team will be at the school again today.

In addition to her pre-kindergarten students, Hawkins worked closely with many fourth and fifth grade students who served as peer tutors to her younger students.

"We've been bringing them in a few at a time and talking with them," said Dick Holmann, district director of community relations who was at Winter Springs Elementary yesterday to assist the crisis team. 'We're letting the students know that it's alright to express their fears and their emotions."

The school seemed exceptionally quiet yesterday. Everyone was busy, few were talking.

The PTA and LSAC groups have set up an area at the school where teachers can go to relax and have a soda

Poster child dies

JACKSONVILLE — The Northeast Florida Chapter of the Muscular Dystrophy Association will delay its search for a new poster child in memory of 10-year-old Twanna Abner, who died earlier this month days after being given that honor.

Heat wave' warms winter days

From staff and wire reports

The 'heat wave' continued in Central Florida and elsewhere in the state Wednesday, with summerlike temperatures reaching into the upper 80s, while record rainfall for the month was recorded in North Florida despite an ongoing drought.

The high in the Sanford-Lake Mary area yesterday, as recorded by the University of Florida Agricultural Research Center on Celery Avenue in Sanford, was 86 degrees. Orlando reached 87 degrees, which broke a record for that date of 85 degrees set in 1972, according to the National Weather

At least two other cities set record highs Wednesday with 87-degree readings in West Palm Beach and Daytona Beach. Other records included Miami and Hollywood, which hit 86 degrees; 83 degrees in Jacksonville and 85 degrees in Key West.

The unseasonable temperatures were due to a high pressure system south of the state. bringing winds from the south and southwest, said Jim Lushine, lead forecaster for the National Weather Service.

"For most of the central and east coast, the wind is coming from a land direction. which causes excessive heat," Lushine said Wednesday. "It's out of the ordinary, but nothing exceptional."

A cold front expected by Friday will bring cooler temperatures, Lushine said. Portions of the state drenched by heavy rains in recent days are still faced with drought, officials say. In Orlando, rainfall in January measured 3.2 inches, the National Weather Service reported. That measurement is up from the average January rainfall of 2.1 inches, a spokesperson said.

In North Florida, the problem is a combination of drought and possible flooding resulting from heavy rains.

The region normally gets only several inches of rain during a typical January, but the total is nearing 10 inches in Jacksonville, 12 inches in Live Oak, more than 16 inches in Pensacola and more than 18 inches in Tallahassee.

However, the drought conditions remain because it takes time for rainfall to seep into the aquifers, officials say.

"The water you drink is not the water that is falling from the sky," said Lytha Simoneux, a spokeswoman.

Derrick Robinson was set free Wednesday during a hearing in which prosecutors conceded he was not the triggerman in the slaying at a Miami apartment complex in 1988.

Leuthel Ramsey was shot twice in the face by a man with dreadlocks on Aug. 9, 1988, An eyewitness pinned the blame for her murder on Robinson, who a little more responsibly." But some representatives of the convenience-store industry said Attorney General Bob Butterworth hasn't sufficiently studied the safety measures he is proposing. Butterworth plans to issue the report next week, more than 11 months ahead of sched-

"I feel that a study needs to be completed before you can decide what measures are appropriate," said John Jaeb, president of Pick Kwik stores in Tampa. A national convenience store owners group is paying $400,000 for an independent study, Jaeb noted. That study should be used to shape the final decision, he and other store in Tampa, where the accused is owners say.

The attorney general's report says that for the 12-month period beginning Sept. 1, 1989, convenience store crimes in Flor-ida included 13 murders and 41 forcible sexual assaults. At least eight convenience store clerks were among those killed. By comparison, five police officers were killed in the line of duty during the same period.

Some communities and store chains have already adopted either the two-clerk policy or the bullet-resistant glass enclosures.

Attorney: C-15 deal still

By J. MARK BARFIELD Herald staff writer

LAKE MARY - Although Seminole County officials are objecting to provisions in a Lake Mary proposal to take over control of Country Club Road south of Lake Mary Boulevard, the city's attorney said Wednesday a deal can still be reached.

Failure to reach a compromise on Country Club Road may jeopardize the Lake Mary Boulevard gateway landscaping project. County commissioners had sought a trade of maintenance of Country Club Road and release from a $40,000 debt to pay for a Lake Mary Boulevard drainage pond to assist in the beautification of the road.

agreed to accept responsibility of Country Club Road as long as they could decide when to straighten a curve in the road near County Road 427 and not assume full liability for any accidents on the road.

Last week, assistant county attorney Lonnie Groot wrote Lake Mary attorney Ned Julian he could not recommend county. commissioners accept a gateway proposal that includes county liability for any lawsuits resulting from accidents on the Country Club Road. Groot said the county intends to turn all responsibility for the road over to Lake Mary, leaving no "remnants" tying the county to it.

The other area of disagreement lies in a Country Club Road curve near County Road 427. County engineering director Jerry McCollum said the curve should be straightened to allow for smoother flow of traffic. Julian said city engineers have examined the curve and determined the $160,000 project isn't needed.

McCollum said he will recommend the project be done to commissioners at their next meeting Feb. 12.

Manatee count high, but threat remains

From staff and wire reports

ST. PETERSBURG - An aerial search for manatees along Florida's coasts found at least 1,268 of the lumbering sea cows - more than has ever been counted before - but scientists warn they are just as threatened

Danny Paul, superintendent of Blue Springs State Park in Orange City, said park personnel last week counted all 54 manatees that frequent the springs during cold weather. Paul said manatees in the St. Johns River are attracted to the constant springs temperature of 72 degrees when river water stitute in St. Petersburg. temperatures drop below 68

Since the river temperature was 69 degrees this morning. only four manatee were counted at the springs, Paul said. Any participated in the two-day manatee sited near Sanford are either on their way to or leaving Blue Springs, Paul said.

Scientists say the. 1,268 count is no reason for relief.

Biologists emphasize the higher number probably resulted more from the expanded scope of the survey than from any real change in the manatee population," said Jamie Serino, spokesman for the statecoordinated count.

Record mortality rates for the last three years "strongly indicate that the population is decreasing," said Serino, coordinator of special programs at Florida Marine Research In-

He noted a record 205 manatees died last year and seven have died so far this year, most in collisions with boats. More than 30 biologists statewide count on Jan. 23 and 24, which was made from 25 planes and three helicopters.

Although manatee counts are made on a regular basis in several areas of the state, this was the first attempt to obtain a comprehensive picture by counting manatees in all areas of the state at the same time.

The latest tally of 1,268 manatees, released Tuesday, included 679 on the state's east coast and 589 on the west coast.

That compares to a limited count conducted during the winter of 1985-86, which estimated the manatee population to be about 1,200.

A second survey might be conducted next month to check the latest figures. That survey depends on cold weather that prompts manatees to congregate at warm water places, including water discharge pipes

Recovery in offing?

Some economists are, by nature, a pessimistic lot. At the first inkling of trouble say, a one-month decline in factory orders they predict recession. Such anticipation of a downturn can be significant, because it undermines business confidence and can become a self-fulfilling prophecy. Although virtually no economist disputes that the economy is now in recession, overly pessimistic forecasts can help prolong it.
That's why last week's testimony by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan before the House Banking Committee was important. As Fed chairman, Greenspan is widely respected as an authoritiative and objective analyst. And he stressed that, despite the pessimistic view of some economists, the economy really has not gone in the tank. In fact, he strongly suggested that the worst of the recession already has occurred.

In Greenspan's view, unless the Persian Gulf war lasts longer than expected, the economy should shake itself from the doldrums by the third quarter of this year. In historic terms, this would not amount to a severe recession. The last recession, in 1981-82, lasted approximately 18 months, or about twice as long as Greenspan expects the current downturn to last.

The Fed chairman has a number of reasons for optimism. Most important, perhaps, is the recent decline in petroleum prices, which reflects the abundance of supply on the global market. Of curse, this variable changes day to day, owing to the Gulf conflict. But if war is resolved within a matter of weeks, the resultant drop in oil prices would provide a tremendous stimulant to the economy later in

The specter of inflation, which crodes consumer purchang power, also has dis-sipated as a threat. Unless there is a steep run-up in domestic fuel prices, which remains a possibility. Greenspan predicts inflation should be no more than a manageable 5 percent this year.

As the inflation threat has receded, long-term interest rates have sharply declined.

This should provide a stimulant for new

This should provide a stimulant for new home construction, while has been anemic for the last two quarters. This is because lower interest rates would be a boon to consumers seeking mortgages for new homes.

Oreenspan indicated that the Fed's priority at the moment is to encourage growth in the nation's money supply. The Fed is concerned that, over the last three months, the sum of currency, checking and certain savings deposits scarcely increased. This trend explains the current credit crunch.

Oreenspan expects that, by increasing the Greenspan expects that, by increasing the money supply up to 3 percent this year, the credit crunch will ease and more banks will increase their capital.

It is not a certainty that the economy will rebound by mid-year. The Gulf war could ultimately have an adverse impact, especially if Congress rushes ahead to impose an income surtax to finance it. Greenspan argued persuasively that it is premature to consider a surtax, because the costs and duration of the war are unknown at this point. Moreover, it would not be prudent to impose a big new tax on a weakened economy still struggling to overcome a

There are enough indications of future growth to be optimistic. And insofar as anticipation of recession contributed to the current downturn, perhaps expectation of recovery can help shorten it.

Can WASP ideals save America?

America is indisputably a pluralistic society, composed of many racial, ethnic and cultural strands. But from the start it has had, and perhaps had to have, a model, a template: a standard way of living and behaving, to which those so inclined could conform, and from which, if they were not so inclined, the precise degree of their divergence could be measured.

This model was the lifestyle (to borrow a very modern term) of the earliest settlers to reach and populate these shores in substantial numbers: the white Anglo-Saxon Protestants who emigrated from northwestern Europe, Subsequent waves of European immigrants, eager to be assimilated by American society, quickly adopted the English language, subscribed to the (often, to them, quite language, subscribed to the (often, to them, quite novel) mores of the existing culture, and even radically adapted their ancestral religions to the Protestant forms of worship dominant here.

In this century, as fresh waves of immigrants from other regions — Latin America, the Middle East, the Far East — reached these shores, assimilation has begun to seem less imperative. Gradually the once overpowering drive to assimilate to the prevailing standards has weakened — mostly because those standards have widely ceased to prevail. The way of the WASP (the useful acronym for white Anglo-Saxon Protestants) has ceased, in important part, to be "the American way." This is the important development analyzed by Richard Brookhiser in his brookniser in his fascinating new book, "The Way of the WASP," just published by The Free Press (a division of Macmillan). Its subtitle continues, "How It Made America, and How It Can Save It, So to Speak" — thereby prefiguring Brookhiser's own ultimate conclusion. which is that WASP culture was valuable to this country, and that it can, and ought to be, restored to its pre-eminence, in preference to the "group-mindedness" he believes is currently debilitating us. (Brookhiser, by the way, is no WASP himself, being a lapsed Methodist descended from

has begun to seem less im perative.

German Catholics.)

"If the society the WASPs built weren't safer, freer and richer than any other." he demands. "if it didn't offer less likelihood of being arrested for voting wrong or praying oddly, or more chance of accumulating a nest egg and keeping it — would so many people want to come here?" And three pages further on: "The best favor America can do its newcomers is to present them with a clear sense of what America is, and what they should become.

Brookhiser identifies the cardinal WASP traits (conscience, anti-sensuality, industry, civic-mindedness, success and "use" — the latter being defined as a respect for a thing's usefulness), and traces the way in which WASPs themselves have strayed from their ancestral paths. Almost every statement in the book is supported or illustrated by some piquant example.

There probably aren't enough WASPs in our current mix of 250 million to save America all by themselves. But the way of the WASP has been whispered in many an alien ear, to the great benefit of the hearer — and, ultimately, of America itself. It may yet save this land, when WASPs themselves are rare indeed.

Christian Center fiscally OK

By my own words I have created a monster, I am afraid, in my news release I mentioned the concern that the Board of Directors of the Sanford Christian Sharing Center had concerning the distribution of USDA commodities to the hungry all over Seminole County.

In the same release I stated that the Sharing Center was fiscally sound, but could use extra income to keep up with the increase of clienta that appear at our door on a daily basis.

All of the above was construed by the person laying out the article (who shall go unnamed) to mean that the Sharing Center had problems; hence the headline Problems plague the Christian Center.

The only problem the Sharing Center has is caring too much; worrying abut the hungry in Seminole Conty who could be using that USDA surplus food. The Center already receives shipments of those commodities every two months based on the number of clients served months. We utilize this murrhy food to food monthly. We utilize this surplus food to feed the hungry who come to us every day.

Our concern is that there is much more surplus feed available, but our agency is too small to buccessfully administer such a county-wide program. Although sympathising with the plight of the hungry, no other agency in the county leels qualified to implement the program either. program either.

So what is the solution? It is the opinion of

So what is the solution? It is the opinion of the people involved in the Sharing Center that the County should be responsible for implementing this program. We recently delivered to Mr. Streetman, Chairman of the Seminole County Commission, a packet detailing what the program is and how it can be implemented using volunteers from throughout the community supervised by Seminole County employees. We will be following up with Mr. employees. We will be following up with Mr. Streetmen to determine how best to solve this

We reiterate: The Sanford Christian Sharing Center is not in financial trouble. We were only pointing out that with the increase in the unemployed, the demands on our pantry are tremendous, and a little more monthly help from persons in the county would be most appreciated.

Anyone who at thinks the Sharing Center has problems may stop by Monday through Friday, 9 s.m. until Noon, to peruse our books. Irene K. Brown Volunteer Managing Director Sanford Christian Sharing Center

Keep the fleg flying

Are you heeping the flag flying?
Difficult decisions have been made by the President and Congress. Opinion has been divided and demonstrators have voted both agreement and opposition. The new policies have opened the doorway to "war," and hostilities have begun. What abould we do

First of all, let's keep the flag flying! Let our neighbors — and the world — know we care about our country, we care about those called about our country, we care about those called to serve in "Desert Storm." Don't wait for a holiday! Get your flag out of mothballs — go out and buy one, if need be, but put it out and let it fly proudly. Back up your country with your flag, your voice, and your prayers!

But some may say, "We don't believe in war." Neither do I. Also I don't believe in sickness or in crime. But they occur, and we do the best we can to deal with the problems they create. We have doctors, surgeons, and hospitals to "war" against aickness and disease. We have police, sheriffs, jails, to "war" against crime.

By the same token, by decree of our Constitution, we have military forces to "war" against oppression, against tyranny, against imminent dangers which threaten our society. Even as we unite in the fight against sickness.

disease, crime and terrorism, so also we should unite in a "war" which threatens our American heritage and way of life.

If there were no doctors, plagues and disease would soon decimate our population. If there were no police, crime would fester, and our towns and cities would become "black holes" of corruntion, terror and anarchy. If we had no of corruption, terror and anarchy. If we had no military, aggressors would soon divide our democracy, bankrupt our industrial and economic institutions, and thrust us back into a primitive "jungle" of political existence.

Bhould we muzzle those who disagree?

Certainly not. Our Constitution guarantees freedom of speech and expression. Democracy thrives on exchange of diverse viewpoints. However, regardless of previous views, now that decisions have been made and we are at that decisions have been made and we are at "war," we all have a responsibility to support our nation and our military until the job has been finished, agreesion has been halted, and peace with honor and jutice has been achieved.

So let's proclaim our loyalty and support. Let's show our colors," let's "Fly the Flag!" Let our country and our military know that we are behind them, we're backing them up with our concerns, our volces, our prayers.

In the meantime, in these days of crisis, we have special need for divine guidance. May we as individuals, and as a nation, have the humility, patience, faith and courage to seek God's presence and direction. With our deepest prayers for the servicemen and their families of those in "Desert Storm."

Speaker's wife wields big power

WASHINGTON - On a quiet weekend before Christmas, Capitol police responded to an alarm that told them someone might have broken into a first aid station in the Capitol building. The "intruder" they found was Heather Foley, the wife of House Speaker Tom Foley. And she had just finished giving herself an injection of something.

Heather Foley was just as surprised as the police. The injection was her regular shot for allergies. Mrs. Foley didn't want to bother the resident Capitol physician on a holi-day weekend, so she did what comes natural to someone who is used to getting her way on Capitol Hill. She called on the office of the Architect of the Capitol — the full-time staff that oversees building work — and asked for someone to take her to the first aid station with a key. Neither Mrs. Foley nor the staffer with the key knew that the room was wired to an alarm as part of a system that pro-tects the offices of the Capitol physician.

Mrs. Foley, who is also the chief of staff for her husband's office, has her private doctor's permission to store her medicine in the first aid station where a nurse usually administers

The Capitol physician, Dr. Robert Kraaner, was reportedly upset to hear that Mrs. Foley had bypassed the nurse and the lock. Capitol Hill police did not arrest her and didn't file a report. The only evidence of anything ab-normal that day was a note that the alarm

In retrospect. Heather Foley now wishes she had handled it differently. It would have saved her some embarrassment. But it would have been entirely out of character. Heather Foley undoubtedly wields more power on Capitol Hill than any speaker's wife in congressional history. If she needs to get in a room, she makes a call and someone appears

Tom Foley, D-Wash., is the soul of tact and diplomacy, but his wife is the hammer. She is a tough, savvy tactician and a demanding boss, it is often Mrs. rather than Mr. Foley who members of Congress call on for favors

Mrs. Foley has little interest in political schmoozing and protocol. Her dress often can be called "casual" by fussy Washington standards. She rarely attends the gabby functions that attract congressional spouses. Other spouses choose do-gooder causes. Heather Foley gets down and dirty with the

And she speaks her mind, as former Speaker Tip O'Neill found out. Mrs. Foley doesn't like tobacco smoke, and she once stunned a high- powered leadership meeting on Capitol Hill by asking O'Neill to snuff out his trademark cigar.

Her blunt manner does not hamper her clout. She is considered by many to be the most powerful staffer in the House. Not only is she the speaker's gatekeeper, filter and adviser, but she also helps divvy up Capitol

Mrs. Foley works long hours. The day she decided to nelp herself to the first-aid room, the Capitol was a ghost town. It was the Saturday before Christmas and she was one of the few not on vacation. Mrs. Foley's malary makes her a bargain for the taxpayers. Her husband authored the anti-nepotiam bill and she works for free.

PASADENA. Calif. - Intenne squeezing, stretching, collapsing and bulging of Venus' landscape may explain why the planet is marked by an amazing network of faults and cracks, Magellan spacecraft geologists say.

Such geological forces deformed the planet's Alpha highlands so extensively that the region looks like "it's been kneaded, like making bread dough," said Steve Saunders, Magellan's chief scientist at NASA's Jet Propulsion Labora-

Magellan's highly detailed radar pictures of the cloudcovered planet are giving geologists clues to the formation of the cracked landscape.

The tesserae contain many criss-crossing faults - which scientista believe can cause "Venusquakes" - long moun-tain ridges and broad deep troughs resembling Africa's

The complex geology of tesserae indicates they were subjected to different forces at different times. That is true of the southern hemisphere's Alpha region.

Some fractured areas may have been created as cooler rock in Venus' crust slowly sank deeper into the planet, creating downward drag that squeezed overlying landscape together to form the faults, ridges and valleys.

Molten rock rising upward from deep inside Venus also may have created some tesserae by making the landscape bulge upward and stretch apart, Saunders said.

Saunders said that in a northern hemisphere area named Fortuna, gravity apparently made highland areas slowly slide and collapse toward lower elevations.

In addition to the ground fighting, battles flared in the seas and skies. British Jaguar fighter-bombers attacked a 300-foot Iraqi landing craft in the northern gulf, leaving it in flames and dead in the water.

But the commander also sounded a note of caution: "There's no way that I'm suggesting that the Iraqi army is close to capitulation and going to give up." The Iraqia, he said, "certainly have a lot of fight left in them."

That was more than clear when Iraqi forces backed by armored units slammed slammed into Saudi Arabia

MIAMI - Leaders of Miami's Puerto Rican community say they'll press Dade County's state attorney to file new charges against six police officers who escaped a second federal trial in the beating death of a small-time drug dealer.

U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen said Wednesday his office would not call for another trial in the case of the six officers of an elite police drug squad, whose partial acquittal in the slaying of a street dealer triggered a night of rioting last December in Wynwood, Miami's predominantly Puerto Rican and made 10 arrests. neighborhood.

Lehtinen said his office "aggressively pursued this case because of the principle that everyone — including police officers — has an absolute duty to follow the law."

But following a review of the case, he said a second trial would not be sought, and U.S. District Judge Stanley Marcus accepted the prosecution motion to drop the case today without prejudice, meaning it could be pursued again if new evidence Arinea.

The officers were acquitted Dec. 3 of 17 of 24 counts including conspiracy and civil rights charges, but the jury deadlocked on the most serious charge of civil-rights murder.

Reno said a prosecutor in her office would review the federal trial transcript before determining how to proceed.

Church changes name after crank calls

HOUSTON - The name of the Palestine Memorial Baptist Church was changed because of crank telephone calls inspired by the war in the Persian Gulf.

The Rev. Dorothie Callies Ward said the northwest Houston church received calls "that I found questionable, and some them were of anti-Palestinian sentiment.

The 300-member congregation voted unanimously Sunday to change the name to Holy Trinity Baptist Church, church officials said.

Supporters to make video for troops

BOSTON - Organizers hope more than 2,000 people will appear in "Operation Troop Support," a videotaped message for U.S. soldiers in the Persian Gulf.

"I was growing very frustrated by the negativity, by the anti-war demonstrations and I decided I really wanted to make a non-political, positive message of some sort for the troops," said organizer Dick Sorgi of Norwell.

Sorgi said gathering is not meant as a "pro-war" rally. The video will be taped Sunday at the Hanover Mail. "I just figure it is time to show the troops that we care and are behind them," said Sorgi, a Navy veteran.

Nevada governor not taking chances

CARSON CITY, Nev. — Gov. Bob Miller isn't taking any chances with terrorism. He's removed the distinctive "1" from his license plate so he's less of a target.

Lt. Gov. Sue Wagner also decided not to put a special numerical plate on her car and state legislators were told to consider similar precautions.

Miller's press secretary, Mike Campbell, said the governor wanted a less noticeable license plate because of potential terrorist attacks stemming from the Gulf War.

'Warthog' proves itself in combat

AN AIR BASE IN NORTHERN SAUDI ARABIA - The tank-killing "Warthog," maligned by some as the ugly stepchild among U.S. warplanes, has proved itself in the first ground battle of the Persian Gulf War, U.S. officials say.

The Air Force A-10 Thunderbolts swooped in to protect U.S. ground forces on Tuesday and Wednesday and destroyed Iraqi T-55 tanks and armored vehicles when Iraqi troops surged across the Saudi border from occupied Kuwait. The alow-moving but deadly A-10s are expected to play a major role in close combat in an all-out ground war. They are designed to fly low and close to friendly troops and destroy enemy tanks and other armor with great accuracy.

"The A-10 has been the red-headed stepchild of the Air Force," said Lt. Col. Dariny Clifton, 39, of Hopewell, Va., commander of A-10 flight operations at this base. "Others see us as second-class citizens. We don't see it that way."

Saudi's postpone protection

MANAMA, Bahrain - A shortage of oil booms and other cleanup equipment has forced Saudi Arabia to postpone protection of its wildlife from the world's largest oil spill,

All efforts are focused on saving vital desalination and electrical plants that provide two thirds of the fresh water and a large percentage of power to the 18 million people in the Arabian peninsula.

Reports of a second slick, pouring from oil wells off Iraq. could further tax Saudi abilities to cope with the spill, experts said. U.S. officials said the new slick, like the first, was intentionally started by Iraq.

Fear of terrorism clobbering travel plans

LONDON — Fear of Iraqi-sponsored terrorism is keeping vacation and business travelers at home, and it's clobbering the travel industry worldwide.

There have been several dozen relatively minor terrorist attacks around the world since the Persian Gulf War began but many people are travel-shy, particularly Americans,

In addition, many American companies, including IBM, have told employees to stay put or cut back on business trips.

Rescue fails but two marines safe

Associated Press

KHAFJI, Saudi Arabia - A daring attempt to rescur two U.S. Army soldiers missing in this border city failed after their vehicle was found - but not the men.

Later, the commander of American forces in the Persian Gulf, H. Norman Schwarzkopf, said the two were safe.

"I know of the status of some Americans. I don't want to get into it, but they're not in any danger." he told CNN today.

The attempt occurred Wednesday. Two humvees — the U.S. military's modern jeeps - took a wrong turn and ended up in the 30, of Great Falls, Mont., jumped out of his

"There were no bloodstains and no signs of them," said Marine Maj. Craig Huddleston.

Just then the patrol saw two BMPs, the Soviet-made armored vehicles used by the Iraqi military, sitting across the road. Three Iraqi soldiers stared at them.

"I think we were both surprised,"

Huddleston said. The Cobras moved in to destroy at least one of the BMPs.

War creates a boom for toy, game makers

By JOYCE M. ROSEN AP Business Writer

NEW YORK - The war in the Persian Gulf means increased sales for some toy and game manufacturers, especially ones who make sophisticated war games and models of military aircraft and weapons. After Iraq invaded Kuwait in August, TSR Inc., which makes the "Dungeons and Dragons" game, began work on "A Line in the Sand," a board game based on U.S. military operations in the gulf. Avalon Hill, another military game manufacturer, updated its "Gulf Strike" board game.

The latest edition of Strategy & Tactics, a magazine about war games, featured a pullout "simulation" called "Arabian Nightmare: Kuwait War." It included a detailed map of the Persian Gulf region and cardboard game pieces representing troops and weapons of the United States, Iraq, Saudi Arabia and other countries. Rules to the game take up most of the magazine's 60 pages. Retailers say the new games are selling well. "Gulf Strike," which now has a picture of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein on the box, sold out at The Compleat Strategist, a chain of stores specializing in sophisticated adult games and war games, owner Danny Kilbert said Tuesday. Military games are aimed at older players and are more complex than traditional board games such as Monopoly and Trivial Pursuit.

Threats prompt doctors to withdraw

NAIROBI, Kenya - Western doctors with the humanitarian group, Doctors Without Borders, have withdrawn from Somalia's capital after being threatened by armed men, a spokesman said today.

Radio Mogadishu, meanwhile, said a more than 80-member "reconciliation committee," including two prime ministers under Somalia's deposed President Mohamed Siad Barre, would meet today in the east African nation's capital.

The committee is a group of clan elders, government and rebel leaders that will act as an advisory board in forming a new government that has yet to be named by the new Prime Minister Omar Arteh Ghaleb.

Somalia's new president is Ali Mahdi Mohamed, a 52-yearold hotelier and businessman.

Stad Barre fled under fire last Saturday following a month of heavy street battles between loyalist government troops and United Somali Congress rebels who ended his 22-year reign. Military orders arrest of Croatian official BELGRADE, Yugoslavia - A Croatian official said his secessionist republic would defy an order from the federal army and refuse to arrest Croatia's defense minister, accused of plotting an uprising.

By issuing the arrest warrant, the military "wants to execute pressure" on Croatia ahead of a crucial meeting today of the leaders of Yugoslavia's six republics, said Slaven Letica, an adviser to Croatian President Franjo Tudjman. "Croatian police will not arrest Croatian ministers," he said, speaking from the republic's capital of Zagreb.

Gorbachev seen losing power

WASHINGTON - Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev is no longer in complete control of his government and is, in effect, sharing power with the military. according to knowledgeable Soviet officials.

Lithuanian president sees Improvement

By JOHN DANISZEWSKI Associated Press Writer

VILNIUS, U.S.S.R. - The absence of Soviet troops on the streets of Vilnius overnight signaled an improvement in relations with Moscow, Lithuanian President Vytautas Landsbergis said today.

Foreign Minister Alexander Bessmertnykh, in an interview with Pravda, said the West was reacting emotionally to unrest in the independence-minded Baltics and endangering superpower relations.

Government spokesman Audrius Azubalis said there was overnight following a pullout of Soviet troops Wednesday.

Landsbergis, noting the absence of military patrols, said, "perhaps this is a good sign ... this is a step toward a better situation."

But, the Lithuanian leader warned Wednesday that Soviet soldiers still occupied several republic-owned buildings and cautioned the West not to be taken in by Kremiin promises of a pullout.

Elimination of apartheid laws likely

By GREG MYRE Associated Press Writer

CAPE TOWN, South Africa -President F.W. de Klerk plans to strike down several more pillars of apartheid when he opens parliament later this week, but he's still battling to find a peaceful alternative to the egregation laws.

De Klerk, who began scrapping apartheid a year ago, wants a future founded on black-white power sharing, but he has yet to provide a blueprint for a new political system. Meanwhile, his rforms have unleashed a host ofproblems such as increased black factional fighting and a backlash among right-wing

Celtics embarrass Magic

BOSTON - Robert Parish will take the win even if "it's over a church league team."

Kevin McHale compares the Boston Celtics with a knocked down fighter and says "every game we play now is a must win for us.

Although Larry Bird still is sidelined with a bad back, the Celtics continued their personal comeback Wednesday night by routing the Orlando Magic 144-102 in their most lopsided victory of the NBA season.

Parish, bothered by two bad ankles, and McHale, a workhorse in Bird's absence, got unusual rest in Boston's third victory in nine games. Parish had just two points in 9 minutes. McHale eight in 22 minutes.

With their big three out of the lineup, other Boston players had a ball. Brian Shaw equalled his season high with 26 points while adding 13 assists and nine rebounds. Kevin Gamble had 23 points, and seldom-used Michael Smith came off the bench in the second half for a career-high-23 points in just 18 minutes.

A former Celtic, Sam Vincent, led Orlando. scorers with 20 points. Jeff Turner had 16 and Michael Ansley 14.

Majerie helps Suns top Heat

MIAMI - When Phoenix's Dan Majerle looked into the mirror following the Suns' win over the Miami Heat, it was a far better image than the previous night's contest against Orlando.

Majerle was 2.3 from the 3-point range Wednesday in the Suns' 115-104 victory over Miami. Tuesday night, he missed a last-second 3-point goal in the Orlando Magic's 114-112 victory.

Seven Suns scored in double figures, while Miami was paced by Glen Rice with 23 points.

GAINESVILLE - Charles Mayes scored 12 of his 17 points in the second half, including a 3-pointer and two foul shots in the final 1:48 to give Vanderbill a 60-57 win over Florida.

The Commodores (12-7, 6-3 in the Southeastern Conference) led by eight at halftime, but Stacey Poole railied the Gators (7-11, 3-6) by scoring 10 of his 12 points in the second period.

Renaldo Garcia led the Gators with 16 points and Livingston Chatman added 10.

TAMPA - Tampa Bay's bid to lure Bill Walsh back to football fell short Wednesday. Owner Hugh Culverhouse said the former San Francisco 49ers coach has decided to continue his broadcasting career with NBC.

Culverhouse said in a statement released by the Buccaneers that both he and Bucs administrator Phil Krueger had discussed the Job opening with Walsh, who led the 49ers to three Super Bowl championships before retiring after the 1988 season.

"Bill told us that he feels that to continue these discussions would not be fair to his on-going relationship with NBC," Culverhouse said, "We feel we have learned a great deal from these conversations, and we appreciate Bill's advice and counsel."

Team play helps Raiders hold off Daytona Beach

From staff reports

DAYTONA BEACH - The word 'team' returned to the Seminole Community College Raiders' repertoire Wednesday night. The result was a 68-62 defeat of the No. 6-ranked Daytona Beach Community College Scots in Mid-Florida Conference men's basketball action.

SCC was patient on offense, passed the ball well and communicated very well on defense as it broke a two-game losing streak and improved to 13-10 overall, 3-4 in the Mid-Florida Conference.

Daytona Beach (now 16-7 overall and 3-4 in the conference) took the opening tip and scored on a layup by Raymond Allen. After the Raiders missed a three-point attempt, the Scots went to their slowdown offense to try and pull SCC out of its zone defense.

But the strategy backfired as the | Dies Men, Page 22

DEAR DR. GOTT: My preg-nant daughter was told by her doctor that before her baby will be born, she should have am-niocentesis. Please explain what this is and what the dangers are associated with it. DEAR READER: During amniocentesis. the obstetrician introduces a long needle through the woman's abdominal wall and into the fluid in which the baby floats. The amniotic fluid is sampled and examined. The purpose of the test is to analyze cells that have been shed by the fetus into the surrounding fluid. Using sophisticated techniques. specialists can perform a chromosome analysis on these cells, yielding vital information about the baby's inheritance whether, for example, genetic abnormalities exist that indicate anomalous growth, birth defects or mental retardation. The purpose of amniocentesis is to document that the fetus is developing normally and has no genetic deficiency. The major complications of amniocentesis are infection (rare) and the stimulation of premature labor (more common). partner would open the bidding with a vulnerable pre-empt if he had a bad suit, so Willy redoubled when East made a takeout double. When three hearts came back to him, he bid three no-trump. So far, so good. He won the opening jack of hearts lead and went through his own special process of what might pass for thought. "Let's see," he mused. "East would not likely make a takeout double if he had as many as two diamonds, so he probably has a singleton. I'll just take a firstround finesse against the queen in the West hand. Even if East has a singleton queen, I'll have enough tricks to make my contract." Willy forthwith led a diamond and put in dummy's jack. East showed out. Willy now struggled as well as he could and wound up with eight tricks.

Willy's thinking was not all that bad; he just didn't carry it far enough. Of course East is likely to be short in diamonds, but declarer can ensure his contract if he protects against the possi-bility that West holds all four diamonds. He should lead a diamond at trick two and play low from dummy. When East shows out, declarer can win the next trick and finesse dummy's jack of diamonds to make at least nine tricks. Closed casket no comfort to friend tended the funeral of a friend who had been killed in an auto accident. I had not seen him in several years, and was dismayed to learn that the family had decided to have a closed casket. At first, I assumed that the body was not in condition for viewing. but then I learned that this was not the case; nor was his family carrying out his wish - they simply decided it would be easier this way.

Abby, my heart goes out to those people, but I feel that they made two mistakes (easy enough to do in their grief, I realize):

1. They presumed that no one besides them needed to see the loved one for a visual farewell. denying others the opportunity to cope better with reality. (To make matters worse, this man was an educator who had influenced the lives of many young people. The young people had no focus for their grief. If I can think, "Maybe it's all a mistake; I never saw him." what about

2. The family showed a lack of acknowledgment for the needs of dear friends, some of whom were far closer to the deceased than his kin.

I know that nothing can change this experience for me since I was denied my farewell, but I hope my writing can make a difference to another decision and others' grief.
UNFINISHED BUSINESS

DEAR UNFINISHED BUSI-NESS: The kin (regardless of how "close" or distant they were to the deceased) always have the final say in such matters which I believe is appropriate. Everyone does not need to view the lifeless body to "locus on their grief" or accept the fact that a loved one is dead. Some prefer to remember that person as he or she was in life.

His family, for reasons of their own, chose a closed-casket funeral. Please do not fault them.

person and would never intentionally forget a loan. Maybe he misunderstood and thought it was a gift.

He now has a Job that pays very well and has since bought a home, furniture, new cars, jewelry, etc. Mother won't mention the $1,000 for fear of hurting his feelings, and I don't think it's my place to mention it.

Our mother is divorced, retired and living on a fixed income. and could really use the money now. What should be done here? I really hope my brother reads your column.

DEAR HELPLESS: So do I.

DEAR ABBY: On Dec. 14, my husband and I were having dinner in a nice restaurant in Bakersfield, Calif. Across from us, at a table for two, a nicelooking, middle-aged man was sitting alone. We exchanged several friendly glances, and as he was leaving, he paused at our table, smiled, and said, "Good night." We replied in kind. A short while later, our waitress came to our table and told us that the gentleman who had just left had paid for our cocktails, steak dinners, wine, the tip everything! She then added, "He asked me not to tell you until after he left."

We were speechless! What a lovely holiday surprise. We have no idea why a total stranger would want to treat us. Have you?

If that gentleman reads yur column, we want him to know that we donated the money we would have spent at that restaurant to our favorite charity.
