In the 14 governorships determined in Tuesday's election, there were nine Democratic victors and five Republicans, a split that represented a net gain of one Democrat and insured a 3-1 Democratic margin among the nation's governors - 37 Democratic governors, 12 Republicans and one independent. There was a major upset in Missouri, a heavily Democratic state, where incumbent Republican Gov. Christopher Bond was defeated. He had been heavily favored to win but campaigned

Thompson was propelled to political prominence in the state by his role as an aggressive U.S. attorney who successfully prosecuted more than 200 persons on government corruption charges, including more than two dozen associates of the mayor. Howlett, one of Illinois' biggest statewide vote getters in the past, won in a bitter Democratic primary over incumbent Gov. Daniel Walker, a longtime rival of Daley

Immigration Act Cuts Mexico Quota

There is much that is good in an immigration act President Ford signed into law.

It is the first major immigration legislation since 1965. It will make immigration from Western Hemisphere countries more orderly by establishing a seven-point preference system that has been in effect for the countries of the Eastern Hemisphere. It will allow natives of Western Hemisphere countries to adjust their status from nonimmigrant to permanent resident without first returning to their home countries.

But the bill was rushed through Congress just before the Oct. 1 adjournment without full consideration. And it imposes what seems to us to be an unreasonable restriction on immigration from

In effect, it will cut the flow of legal immigration from Mexico in half and increase immigration from other Western Hemisphere countries accordingly. Legal immigration under the 120,000 hemispheric quota was 40,000 from Mexico last year. Under the 1976 act, no more than 20,000 will be allowed to enter as immigrants in any year from any country in the Western Hemisphere.

Why should the immigration from Argentina, or Colombia, or Costa Rica, or any other Latin American country be increased at the expense of the many Mexicans who are seeking admission?

We have a large Mexican-American population. The largest group of foreign-born in this country are Mexican immigrants. We have a common border with Mexico. We share a history of close relationship and friendship across that

To cut the Mexican immigration quota in half will be perceived by the Mexican government and people as an unfriendly act. It will increase the pressures for illegal immigration from Mexico.

When the 95th Congress convenes in January, it should immediately consider legislation to make it possible for legal immigration from Mexico to continue at a reasonable rate.

These Americans are likely to seek some kind of collective representation, like other Americans in other groups with special interests in Washington. They may have a constitutional right to such representation.

between labor and management. They could jeopardize national security through erosion of military discipline.

Congress, when it meets in January, should give high priority to a study of the threat of military unionization, and should determine what if anything can be done about it.

'My Name Is...

Herald Staff Writer On Aug. 15, 1975, I walked out of the newsroom of the Evening Herald following an interview with an unknown named Jimmy Carter, turned to a colleague and said, "I think he's a nice guy, but I can't imagine why he'd want to

In fact that was one of the few questions Jimmy Carter on that day didn't have a ready answer for. When I asked why anyone would give up the down-home life of Georgia peanut farming, Carter at first seemed to wince. But then he smiled. And then he answered my question in the way most politicians answer all questions - with an answer they feel the news media wants to hear. Carter was cool on that day. His aides seemed nervous. They paced back and forth in the managing editor's office, where the interview was taking place. But Carter said he had come down to Florida to see about running for President to make this country "a nation of pride - instead of embarrassment." His stopover in Sanford marked the 178th city he'd visited in what he said was an effort to "find out what the people in this country are thinking.' Well, he must have found out because the nation's voters Tuesday elected the former Georgia governor the 39th President of the United States. "Can the government be honest and decent something all Americans wish it to be?" Carter asked. "Yes," was his reply. day, touching the clump of silver hair that persisted in falling over his forehead.

When he talked, his eyes and forehead turned into a sea of wrinkles. On issues, his voice became soft, persistent like a schoolboy wooing his first date. Former Sports Editor Tom Kaiser said Carter was a photographer's dream. And Carter was here to speak of dreams, his long-range

Teachers Clear Hurdle In Battle To Reclaim Jobs

Herald Staff Writer

Two former teachers who were dismissed from the Seminole County school system last spring cleared the first hurdle Wednesday in a legal battle to reclaim their jobs. Circuit Judge Dominick J. Salfi ruled that the Seminole school board violated its contract with the district teachers association when it refused to grant arbitration on a grievance filed by Jackson Heights Middle School librarian Lynette Cornelison.

Salfi rendered a partial summary judgment in favor of Mrs. Cornelison, a former media specialist who registered a grievance against the school board last May after learning that she would not be placed on continuing contract for the 1976-77 school year. The court decision clears the way for Mrs. Cornelison to go before an arbitrator with her grievance, which charges that she did not receive an annual evaluation from a superior and thus was denied "every reasonable opportunity of developing into (a) useful and productive teacher," as provided by the contract. In a related move Wednesday, Salfi withheld summary udgment on a joint complaint filed by Mrs. Cornelison, former Oviedo High School teacher Carol Edwards and the Seminole Education Association (SEA). That action had sought to have arbitration ordered on a grievance filed by Mrs. Edwards — as well as on the one lodged y Mrs. Cornelison — because the plaintiffs maintained that the 1975-76 SEA-school board agreement guarantees arbitration as he automatic final step of its grievance procedure. Mrs. Edwards was teaching French and Spanish and serving as assistant chairman of the language arts department at Oviedo when she was informed last April that she would not receive

A former resident of Paris who is certified to teach four subjects in Florida, Mrs. Edwards said she and Mrs. Cornelison were notified of their dismissal on form letters signed by their principals. She said the letters stated that the school administration was not renewing their contracts because it hoped to place "more experienced and better qualified" teachers in their slots. The women took their grievances through the first three steps specified by the contract, submitting them to their principals, then to School Supt. William P (Bud) Layer and finally to the Seminole school board. All three appeals were denied.

Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Cornelison were then told that are Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Cornelison were then told that arbitration — the fourth step in the grievance procedure — would not be granted in their cases because teachers on annual contract (without tenure) had no right to grieve status. Layer also said that his decision to support the removal of an annual contract instructor — or the denial of tenure to any teacher — could not be Wednesday refused to authorize When their application for arbitration was denied, the teachers Dec. 7 municipal election, and - backed by the SEA - filed suit contending that the 1975-76 also declined to move the city's The standby machines would teachers contract contained provisions for arbitration and asking single polling place from its the court to command the school board "to liveup to the present location at the civic stipulations of its contract." Sanford attorney Ned N. Julian, representing the school board, told Salfi Wednesday that "the subject matter of this contract was not intended to be affected by a grievance for arbitration. "The issue of continuing contract status is not within the purview of this contract," Julian argued. "The plaintiffs may have tried to get it in there through the back door, but if it's an elephant, you have to call it an elephant. You can't call it a tiger and then say, 'Well, it's really an elephant and we're allowed to

Gov. Reubin Askew is "looking into" recent campaign statements by Republican Seminole-Brevard State Atty. Abbott Herring that allegedly link Askew with a "political machine" in Seminole "responsible for 11 deaths" in a county jail fire in June,

Paul Schnitt, Askew's press aide, said today that the governor hasn't made a decision to investigate Herring's office but that Askew has received a transcript of an Orlando television newsinterview in which Herring "made some wild, unsubstantiated

Herring, contacted today at his Sanford office, said he'll stand behind his campaign advertising and statements he made to

"I don't remember the terminology I used in the television interview," Herring said, "but the report of the grand jury investigating the jail fire placed responsibility on the Seminole County Commission and the grand jury that probed the claypit deal returned indictments."

Meanwhile, State Rep. Bob Hattaway (D-Altamonte Springs) said he's sending Askew copies of Herring's campaign advertising in today's mail. Hattaway said he's talked to Askew twice-once on Tuesday night and again on Wednesday morning

Mr. Herring." Hattaway said Askew requested the news interview transcript from Channel 6, Orlando, in which Hattaway said Herring 'linked the governor with the 'Hattaway-Freeman' machine and claimed the machine was responsible for 11 deaths in the Seminole County Jail fire (June 9, 1975) and the claypit incident." "The governor is concerned about what's been going on in Seminole," Hattaway said, "and I would like to see him do something. There's no telling what Herring will do during the next

Lykkebak was in trials today in Orlando and unavailable for comment, but sources close to him said apparently he's not made a decision to take the job in Seminole. Cheshire reportedly is negotiating with an undisclosed North Florida law enforcement officer to take over the job now held by

Herring said today he'll meet next week with Cheshire to arrange a "smooth transition" when the prosecutor's office Herring may open a law practice in Sanford when he leaves the State Attorney's office. "That's what I have in mind right Herring recently moved to Geneva from Brevard County. Schnitt said today that Askew "doesn't intend to conduct an investigation of Herring's office at this time but this doesn't preclude that possibility in the future.' Askew blasted Herring for "abuse" of his office and threatened to send state agents to Seminole to investigate lerring's handling of a prostitution ring probe.

Askew, a Democrat, called the probe "very disappointing" and said that it appeared that Herring had disclosed part of the investigation to aid in his campaign for re-election. Herring sent his investigation results to the governor's office after he said he found evidence that a Casselberry city official had been "compromised" in connection with a prostitution ring. He said he sent the report to Askew "because there has been mention of the governor's office during the investigation.'

Williams Eyed As New Chief Of GOP-Heavy Commission

A few absentee ballots being counted today at the courthouse in Sanford will determine whether county government will be dominated by members of the Democratic or Republican party. If Republicans edge Democrats for the majority position, sources say Republicans will elect incumbent Dick Williams as Bob French, a Democrat, handily won his race against end of any three-to-two vote that splits along party lines. First, however, Williams must edge out Democratic contender 615 to Bassett's 369. Swofford won the election. Dave Gunter in a cliffhanger of a race where 2,505 absentee ballots will decide the election.
