

Joan Foster, Bride

By Alice Ross Colver

CHAPTER THIRTY ONE

JOAN put the box back in the corner cupboard with fingers trembling. "What a woman!" she thought. "Goodness, you certainly meet all kinds of people in this game. I guess you just have to get tough."

It was at that moment that she heard a faint crackling noise out in the kitchen. What was it? Had the water boiled off the soup kettle? Heaven forbid! But that was probably what it was because it was after twelve now. Oh, why had she forgotten it? Hurrying down the narrow hall, she sprang up the three steps at the rear and came into the old wing of the house.

To her horror, she saw flames leaping up the curtains that hung at the window next to the range. In a flash she knew what had happened. A dish towel had dropped from a rack above the stove down next to the boiling soup pot. She could see a charred remnant still burning. The fire must have spread from this across to the curtains. Perhaps the draft from the front door when Miss Slavovskis had slammed out had blown the burning rag and then sent the flames upward.

For an instant she stood paralyzed, thinking of all the valuable antiques out front for which she was responsible, and then of the small town fire department which was probably a volunteer one and which might take fifteen or twenty minutes to arrive.

"It's up to me," she knew swiftly, and she sprang forward, seized the curtains in her bare hands and jerked them hard. Red and all came tumbling down onto the linoleum at her feet. She bent at a crouch and then slipped to the floor. A kettle that had been left to cook stood there full of dirty water. She caught it up quickly and flung its contents into the burning pile. Black smoke curled up and an acid smell filled her nostrils. But the fire was out.

Joan cleaned up the mess. And afterwards she cleaned up herself. Then, feeling shaky, she sat down and had a bowl of soup and her sandwiches. "Why do I feel like this?" she thought. "I haven't had a day's sleep and I haven't dreamed that the antique business could be so exciting. Almost too exciting, she told herself. It had been too narrow an escape.

A quiet afternoon, however, helped to calm her down, so that when Mrs. Cochran came home at a quarter to one Joan could tell the incidents of the day quite composedly.

Mrs. Cochran listened, nodding. "Well, I think my lucky stars it was you here when this happened and not Mrs. Slavovskis. She loses her head too quickly. Besides she's a heavy woman and since she's so fat, she should never have been able to get that fire out before it spread. Like as not she'd have called the fire department and then my house would certainly have been a mess."

"She might have handled Miss Slavovskis better, though," Joan said with a smile. "I'm afraid she's a customer who definitely wasn't made to test the must come back. It's all my fault, I know. I never should have accused her outright like that. But I was so mad

I didn't think."

"Oh, she'll be back there forever trying things like that. It she gets away with them, she'll do it again. It doesn't matter, no matter. Better luck next time. That's her philosophy. Of course, she thought you didn't know anything. Well, she found out differently. Don't worry now. She'll be back all right. She likes my stuff." She nodded at Joan.

"A good day's work, my dear. But I don't believe you got any writing done."

"I didn't," Joan admitted. "However, I certainly gathered more material I can use."

Joan was late reaching home that night and she noticed with surprise, as she came up the drive that the whole house was aglow upstairs and down. What was going on? There wasn't any party that she knew about. Why then this extravagant display of electricity? Usually the Hunters were so careful about economizing on things like that.

She drove around to the back and it was then that she saw the dusty car. Todd! Oh, no! Todd! Nothing more must happen to Todd!

With her heart in her mouth, she hurried into the house. But it was not Todd, thank heaven. There was, coming to meet her, sound and whole, though his face was tense and anxious.

"Todd, what's the matter?" He took her arm and drew her toward his stairs.

"It's bad. He's had a bad heart attack. Mother called me home from school. 'Come up to our rooms and I'll tell you.'" adoption would be allowed 10 years in which to move.

Folios Chief Roy Williams was authorized to employ an attorney to prosecute criminal cases in Friday's session of City Court in the absence of Mr. Tappan.

The commission authorized the payment of $25,000 in an account to E. H. Holcombe, contractor, for work on sewer project A. Other expenditures included payment of $11,000 to the fiscal agents in connection with the recent bond issue for sewer and water improvements.

Two requests for traffic changes that have previously been referred to the traffic committee were acted upon by the commission. The committee suggested changing a request to the National Guard that diagonal parking be allowed in front of its quarters. A request that 18th St. be made through at Oak Ave. was disapproved by the committee and commissioners voted, on recommendation of the committee, that Oak Ave. which is a through street most of its distance, be made through at 18th Street.

Fish Men Don't Eat Fish

JACKSONVILLE (AP)—Members of the Southeastern Fishermen's Assoc. in convention here were reprimanded by their president, Harry E. Sahlinman of Fernandina Beach, for going to a restaurant and eating steak instead of fish.

Only one person ordered fish, he said—adding, apologetically, that the fish eater wasn't himself.

OPENING CELEBRATION

OF THE PRODUCE TERMINAL OF JACKSONVILLE

ATTENTION: Farmers, wholesale buyers, truck jobbers, truckers and all those interested in the produce industry. You are cordially invited to attend the gigantic opening celebration and big barbecue Wednesday, June 30 (barbecue 1 P.M.) at the nation's newest and most modern produce terminal — Old Kings Road at Edgewood Avenue.

LOCATION...

Produce Terminal of Jacksonville, Inc. is located at the intersection of Old Kings Road and Edgewood Avenue in West Jacksonville. Edgewood Avenue is U.S. Highway 17 Truck Route between North and South, crossing U.S. 1 North and U.S. 90 West. The location is convenient to buyers from stores, hotels, restaurants and chain houses located at Jacksonville, and is equally convenient for out-of-town buyers, farmers, truck jobbers and truckers. The terminal is along a unit of Jacksonville's express highway system and will eliminate delays formerly encountered by trucks having to go into the center of the city.

AREA SERVED

The Produce Terminal will serve growers and buyers in a 200 mile radius of Jacksonville. The terminal will handle daily the fresh produce needs of more than 3 million persons living in the wholesale distribution area.

FARMERS SHED

Modern 72 stall farmers shed for the convenience of growers and truckers. Rates are from 50 cents up daily.

FACILITIES

The Produce Terminal of Jacksonville is one of the largest general markets and the most modern anywhere in the nation. There's ample space for truck deliveries and pick-ups. Located on the North-South truck route, it is readily accessible from all growing areas in Florida, Georgia and Southeastern South Carolina. The terminal includes every convenience possible from covered loading and unloading platforms, farmer stalls, restaurants, service station, cold storage and icing facilities. Wholesale buyers will find all their produce needs will be available at the terminal, saving time and money with one-stop buying.

TB Is Not Among First 10 Causes Of Death In State

For the first time in the history of vital statistics records in Florida, tuberculosis, with a 1953 death rate of 9.7 per 100,000 population is not listed among the first 10 causes of death, State Health Officer Wilson T. Sowler said today.

Diseases of the heart and circulatory system account for the largest share of deaths, he commented, and continued:

"If a combined grouping is made of all cardiovascular-renal diseases, including vascular lesions affecting the central nervous system, rheumatic fever, all diseases of the heart, hypertension, arteriosclerosis, and nephritis, it is found that this group caused 15,321 deaths, or 50.2 per cent of all Florida deaths in 1953.

"Among the infectious diseases the respiratory ailments of influenza and pneumonia continue to present a major problem. Although generally transmitted in the same manner as tuberculosis these diseases are acute rather than chronic, and the control methods developed for tuberculosis are not applicable. Another communicable disease, poliomyelitis continues to be a major problem but the new Salk vaccine offers hope for its eventual control."

The 10 leading causes of death in order of importance and the number of deaths attributed to them in 1953 are as follows: diseases of the heart, 10,317; malignant neoplasms (cancer), 6,526; vascular lesions affecting the central nervous system, 3,499; accidents, 2,106; diseases of early infancy, 1,526; influenza and pneumonia, 1,041; general arteriosclerosis, 506; chronic and unspecified nephritis, 418; diabetes 417, and cirrhosis of the liver, 313.

Defendant Opens Mouth Too Much

OWOSSO, Mich. — John Penyska opened his mouth three times in Circuit Court yesterday. Each time it cost him 30 days in jail. Judge Michael Carland told him to pay his wife Sally back alimony or serve 30 days in jail.

Pants Maker Cited Under Wage Law

MIAMI — A permanent injunction has been issued in Federal District Court here against a Broadview County pants maker, Louis Reich Sportsman, Inc. of Hallandale. The order, signed by Judge John W. Holland, requires the firm to keep accurate records and pay its employees not less than 75 cents per hour under the Federal Wage and Hour Law.

Using an average of 34 employees, the firm is engaged in manufacturing sport slacks and pants on a "cut, make, and trim" basis. It was claimed that they had not paid many of the employees the minimum wage set in the Federal Wage Law, and that substantial portions of the slacks and pants produced by them were sent out of the State of Florida. The Federal Wage and Hour Law provides that employees producing goods for interstate commerce must be paid not less than 75 cents per hour.

The proceeding was based upon an investigation made by the U. S. Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division.

Parochial Schools At Nashville Open To Negro Students

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Most Rev. William Joseph, bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Nashville, has announced that parochial schools in the city opened to both Negro and white students.

The Rev. Charles M. Williams, chancellor of the diocese, which includes all of Tennessee, said the order applies only to Nashville. He said decisions on segregation elsewhere in the state will be made later.

The decision he said, was taken in accordance with the recent Supreme Court ruling against segregation in public schools.

Reported Use Of Grapefruit Nears Estimate

LAKELAND — If the government estimate is correct, 92,000,000 boxes of grapefruit have been used through Saturday. They estimated 1,630,000 boxes of grapefruit remained.

The federal marketing agreement committee reported that 92,000,000 boxes had been used through Saturday. They estimated 1,630,000 boxes of grapefruit remained.

The committees also reported addition of one more size, 112 in white seedless grapefruit in those which may be shipped from the state during July and August.

LETTER RETURNED

OWOSSO, Mich. — The Corona Milling Co. three miles away, sent a letter containing a $100 check to Dr. H. M. Allhouse, an Owosso dentist two months ago.

The letter was received yesterday after traveling 7,000 miles to Baltimore.

A brief note in Italian accompanying the letter said it was found in a newspaper mailed to Dr. Vincenzo Spatore by his parents in Owosso.

THE VEST
BALTIMORE — George Frantum, a service station attendant, told police he was washing a car yesterday when a man approached him from behind and said, "Gimme your money."

Frantum said he whirled around and squirted water in the man's face. The would-be holdup man gave a yell and fled.

Joan Foster, Bride

...need to be...
 "Darling, it doesn't matter," Joan looked around her and shook her head. "This old room of mine looks so bare with just this cut in it for you. We're the ones who should be here, not you. I really feel terribly guilty."
 "Joan, in an emergency like this nothing is important except doing the thing that's best for everyone. If I had another bed, you and Todd could have come in here that I didn't. And there was no sense in moving Jack's in here for you, because he so often gets some weekends and then you wouldn't be doing it. The cut is perfectly comfortable. I'll take one chair from my room, I think, and Todd can bring down from the attic that old chest that I'll use as a bureau. Then I'm fixed for as long as it's necessary."
 "I still think it's all wrong."
 "Joan, listen. I was considering moving in here, anyway. With Gram wandering about at night now, I feel better sleeping next to her rather than across the hall. I can leave my door open into her room and hear her if she stirs. All that's happened is that my plans have been speeded up by Dr. Hunter's illness."
 Joan's face brightened suddenly. "Okay! If you were coming in here anyway, then Todd and I will move your stuff over to you. Your own bed, your own bureau, your own pictures and rug—the works! And we'll take the make-shift pieces. Todd can have your other single bed if you don't mind, and I'll sleep on the cut. Now, not another word! It's settled!"
 This conversation was taking place a few days after Todd's father had had his heart attack. In that time much had happened.
 On Sunday night the doctor had pronounced Dr. Hunter out of immediate danger. "Not," he had added gravely, "that danger is past. Or will pass in an other time. From now on, Mrs. Hunter, your husband's life will have to be very carefully ordered."
 Todd's mother's reaction to the whole situation had surprised Joan greatly. She seemed to be a changed woman. A few days after the doctor had said this, she had asked Todd and Joan to come into the living room with her. She wanted to plan for the future. There was a nurse upstairs who would remain for another night or two, so she was free and things must be cleared up, she said.
 "Your father will resign," she had said. "In fact, he has already resigned. It must have been a premonition with him." Her eyes were a little brighter than usual, but no tears fell.
 "I found the letter he had written to the board, there on his study desk. Father will never pre-ach again."
 How must it be, Joan had thought, when you could no longer love when you could no longer love?

...bound to be quiet...
 She broke off again, with her first time tears seemed to threaten. Joan spoke quickly.
 "Mother Hunter, our apartment is available for anything that seems best. Todd and I can go over to mother's."
 So now here they were, with a quiet Christmas behind them. And into their own little nest at the rear of the manse would come next week Mrs. Harding and her two babies. Young Mr. Harding would have one of the two guest rooms in the main part of the house, since there would not be space for him in the apartment, with both children having to share the one bedroom there with their mother. But it was just that way. He ought to be near the telephone—and available at all hours, not only to his parishioners but in case he wanted to confer with his predecessor. Also—though no one said this—in case, after the nurse left, Mrs. Hunter needed help in an emergency.
 Without warning, she and Todd were having to give up their home and they would probably never get back to it. It was one thing living there while his father was the minister, but now that a stranger had taken over, it was quite another. The Hardings might not want them there. They might want the entire manse for themselves. Or what seemed more likely—Mrs. Harding might ask her mother and father to come there to live.
 Joan stood a moment on the threshold of the living room. All their expectations of a saving money! All the rent they were not going to have to meet for a year—two years—maybe three! Now, unless they remained at her mother's, rent would start them in the race for an inevitable part of their budget.
 "But I don't want to stay at mother's."
 "I won't think about it," Joan decided. "I'll take it for now. I'll accept it until the Hunters leave and we have to move our furniture out of here. Then we'll see."
 Two months, maybe—perhaps three. Doctor Rogers had said a spring. That was a vague term. Spring began in March and ended in May. This was January. It might be four or five months before she and Todd could decide what they would do. By that time he would have his contract for another year of teaching. Maybe that would come a raise. Perhaps enough of a raise for them to rent another little apartment somewhere. But would the raise be enough for eighty dollars or more a month?
 "Well," she thought, "maybe he'll get enough so we can pay the fifty dollars that the Hardings are paying mother now for the third floor apartment. Their lease is up in the fall. Maybe that's the solution!"

Congress Okays Appropriations; Deadline Nears

WASHINGTON — Hurrying to beat a midnight deadline, Congress today passed and sent to the White House the final three annual appropriations bills for the new fiscal year starting tomorrow.

The Senate completed action on the measures within an hour after the House had passed them.

The three measures provide funds for the State, Justice and Commerce Departments; the Labor and Welfare Departments; and the judicial and legislative branches of government.

The bills were compromises of different measures passed previously by the House and the Senate.

They make these appropriations: Legislative Department, $70,695,754; Federal Judiciary, $27,501,740; Labor Department and related agencies, $21,784,500; Welfare Department, $11,402,413,761; State Department, $114,110,000; Justice Department, $78,864,500; Commerce Department, $837,022,000; U.S. Information Agency, $77,111,000.

The total of $3,278,500,255 in the bills cleared today is approximately $100,000,000 less than President Eisenhower requested last January.

Trio Is Arrested After Woman Charges Attack

Sheriff's deputies late yesterday afternoon arrested three Seminole County men on charges of raping a 21-year-old Orlando woman in a field just outside Sanford, according to Sheriff's office reports.

The three men were identified by sheriff's deputies as Benjamin Caldwell, 22, of Paola, J. D. Cassidy, 23, and Cecil Brooks, 21, both living a few miles south of Sanford.

According to the reports, the three men picked up the woman and took her for a ride, "to get some air." When they had driven to the edge of the city, it is alleged that the three men forced her from the car.

According to the woman's statement, two of the men held her while the third attacked her. The woman's complaint alleges that she was assaulted eight times and then left in the field when the three men drove off in their car.

The three men, who deny that any force was used, are now held on a $1,000 bond, apiece, according to Deputy U. S. District Justice of the Peace Hugh Duncan set a preliminary hearing for July 21.

Company I Receives Top Award At Annual Summer Encampment

A salute to Company I, local unit of the Florida National Guard!

For the first time in its history, the local Infantry company won a "superior" rating at the annual two-week camp exercise held this year at Fort McClellan, Ala. This rating is the highest awarded.

In addition the company had 100 per cent attendance for the fourth straight year. That's going some, too.

Long-Time Proposition

No one minimizes the vast potentialities of production of electric power from nuclear energy. But all the discussion concerning it seems to have led numbers of people to believe that a miracle lies just around the corner, and that the market for conventional fuels will soon be sharply reduced.

It can be said unequivocally that the atomic authorities, both in and out of government, take a very different view. They have said time and time again that commercial power plants using the new energy lie far in the future. Many scientific hurdles must be surmounted, at heavy cost in time and money and effort before such plants will be practical on a stable scale. And the problem is further complicated by hard economic considerations — with present-day knowledge and methods, the cost of producing a given amount of power from the atom is a great deal higher than from the conventional fuels.

A leading expert, connected with a group which is thoroughly exploring industrial applications of atomic energy, recently discussed the situation as it exists today. In the course of his talk he said: "From the standpoint of electric power, the possible

Laraine Changes Mind About Leo

NEW YORK — The marital romance of movie star Laraine Day and Leo Durocher, manager of the New York Giants baseball club, is a victory of later love over dislike at first sight.

The first time Laraine, who looks like the girl every man hopes to wed, met Leo was in one of those velvet slip-dance Manhattan night clubs.

"Everybody crowded around to talk to him as if he were important," she recalled. "I didn't know who he was, but I certainly did dislike him."

The feeling was so strong that two years later, when Laraine says she was boarding a plane on which she was a passenger, she hoped he wouldn't sit by her because she dreaded having to talk to him. But Leo sat down and did most of the talking.

"I looked over at him after a while," said Laraine, "and suddenly thought to myself, 'This is the man I'm going to marry.' He didn't know it, but I did."

"Soon after that they were married."

As a girl Laraine hated baseball so much that she would umpire a game at school to keep from having to play it. But today she watches some 77 baseball games a year.

"It's making a nervous wreck of me," she said. "I don't feel like an average fan. Winning and losing affects our lives. It's our future."

"When we lose a game, I'm much more upset than Leo. He doesn't bring the game home with him."

"If the Giants win, we take in a movie. We never go out after he loses a game. But it's not because he feels miserable."

"He says, 'People always ask you how you lost—they never ask you how you won. But if you've lost a game, there is no point in losing it over and over again.'"

Laraine, who recently completed a leading role in "The High and the Mighty," has adjusted her film career so as not to let it conflict with the job of being Mrs. Durocher.

She makes a picture a year, acts in four television dramas, serves as a panelist on the TV program

"I've Got a Secret." But she goes to spring training with Leo, attends every home game here, and when the team takes to the road flies out to their California home to be with their children, Chris, and Michele.

"Before I married Leo I wanted to win an academy award," she said. "Now all I want is for us to win the pennant. My work is secondary."

Laraine has done a wonderful public relations job for her husband's ball club. She is popular with the players and their wives, and the wives of the sports writers like her, too, for her pleasant, honest, friendly manner. In the jealous world of baseball her task hasn't been easy. Laraine has won out by being simply what she is—a good wife who backs her husband all the way.

"People who meet Leo for the first time are always surprised to find out he isn't a roughneck," she said. "Why, Leo stresses beautifully, and he is always gracious and charming."

"That may sound like I'm in love with him. But I don't always agree with his baseball strategy. The thing about Leo is that he can talk you out of a game. He could be a success at anything he went into."

Laraine is credited by the sports writers with putting much of the present polish on her rhinestone-in-the-rough. She herself feels the many stories of his truculence are exaggerated sports world myths.

The answers to everyday insurance problems!
By ANDY CARRAWAY
CLIFF MCKIBBIN

QUESTION: I read an insurance ad the other day which mentioned Fire and Extended Coverage. The ad didn't explain exactly the Extended Coverage part and I'd like to know about it.

ANSWER: Space won't permit a complete explanation but briefly Extended Coverage is the grouping of a number of insurance protections that formerly were written separately and adding them to a fire insurance policy. Certain types of explosion, windstorm, hail, aircraft and vehicle damage are covered in addition to others. The premium is low and you should see a good insurance agent for full details.

"If you'll address your own insurance questions to this office, we'll try to give you the correct answers and there will be no charge or obligation of any kind."

Optimistic On Future

NEW YORK — The consumer and credit men all seem to be in a sunny view of the rest of the year.

It should be a little easier to find wages and fringe benefits in many cases will be a little higher. Work weeks should average about 40 to 42 hours, and therefore paychecks will be a little better. It shouldn't cost any more to live and bargain will be found for the looking. There'll be an abundance of things to buy and salesmen eager to get your trade.

Credit will be easier and money plentiful in the bank — meaning it'll be easier for you to get into debt. But the interest you pay should be no higher, if as high.

These prospects are based on the widely held belief that the life from the war of boom is about the bottom now, that after the usual summer doldrums, business in general will start up noticeably, if moderately.

The outlook that made the early months of the year a bad time for many American families are coming much less often now. The average work week has increased to 40 hours, and the number of workers is increasing.

If businessmen are right in their belief that inventory trimming is about over, a return to normal or better practices should increase factory production. This, they would mean you'll work longer weeks or go back to work if laid off.

Hourly wage increases granted this year in some industries will mean faster paychecks as working weeks lengthen.

So far this year the total cost of living has risen 10 per cent from a year ago. But personal income has stayed high nationally because of an increase in other forms of income. Dividend payments are higher, and unemployment and pension benefits have increased. Tax cuts also help sweeten take-home pay.

Prices are just as likely to drop as to rise. Merchants and industry factors have plenty of goods they'd like to sell. Rising cost problems may tempt them to hike prices. Competition and fear of your reaction is more likely to keep them from it. The majority opinion in business and industry is that the present price levels will be largely unchanged at year's end.

Verdict Will Have Lasting Effect

WASHINGTON — Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer will bear the mark of his forehead — the government verdict that he is a security risk who cannot be trusted with his country's secrets.

An ordinary man brushed aside like this, might disappear into obscurity. The 50-year-old Oppenheimer never can be a genius. He is among the top five or six theoretical physicists of the world.

He directed the making of a wartime atomic bomb. He is head of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton, N. J. He is known to scientists everywhere. Working with them and exchanging ideas with them has been his life. He can hardly begin another.

The drama of the rest of his days may not be as spectacular as the drama of the last 12 months, but it will be just as intense for him, but not so public because it will probably be more quietly personal.

It was almost 12 months ago, July 7, 1953, that Lewis L. Strauss, who only three days before had become chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) or headed a re-examination to determine whether the government should continue to trust Oppenheimer with some of its most vital secrets.

December Strauss informed Oppenheimer the reply was no. It wasn't final. Oppenheimer could ask, and did, for a hearing before a special board set up by the AEC.

Oppenheimer testified as did dozens of others. Most of the witnesses said he was trustworthy. A few said he wasn't. The board decided he was loyal but not a man to be trusted with secrets and re-salaries for management personnel is generally less than the cost of group life and health insurance. The success of American management has given us a steady rising standard of living. The average man a few years ago could change the value of about 200 days of work for a car, whereas now the average American exchanges approximately an income of 100 days of work for a much better car. In Europe today, the lowest paid "bantam" type car costs more than 400 days' pay. Management in America strives to improve the standard of living for their employees as well as themselves.

Most of us take for granted the benefits and various types of insurance that our Christian society and economic system have made available to us. In the collective and fascist state, the state is the sole manager in industry and agriculture. Only 1 per cent of Soviet citizens enjoy the standard of living which the American worker enjoys and the worker is frozen to his job by police state regulations. In Russia, under state management and a top-heavy bureaucracy, both quality and quantity of goods and services produced in industry and agriculture have declined since the Soviet regime. Good management, which leads to a higher standard of living for everyone, is found only in a free economic system with its competitive markets.

Normal, or regular, insulin was used for a number of years, but it had certain disadvantages. Its action is usually good for only six to eight hours. This means that the patient has to take frequent injections to keep his blood sugar at the normal level.

Later came the discovery of protamine zinc insulin which has a more prolonged action. It is given in the form of a single injection certain types of diabetes, but had its falling in many others.

Other Advantages
Glibin Insulin was still another important advance. This type has definite advantages for many diabetics who need insulin with quick and prolonged action.

Glibin insulin thus prevents the high ratio of blood sugar which remains immediately after injecting the slower acting protamine zinc insulin.

Various combinations of regular and protamine zinc insulin can also be used, and give excellent results in certain types of diabetes that are difficult to treat.

Recently the new N. P. H. type of insulin has been perfected. This is a stable protamine combination with insulin. It is similar in action to a combination frequently prescribed when patients require protamine zinc with regular insulin. Those with a transitory type of diabetes that is hard to treat are usually helped by this combination.

With discoveries such as these, the doctor of today can find the right treatment for about every type of diabetes and assure his patients a normal and active life.

QUESTION AND ANSWERS
Q: What foods should be avoided when ordering of the arteries?

Answer: There is no one definite food which should be avoided. However, it is believed by some authorities that the restriction of certain foods high in cholesterol or fat is of aid in preventing the progress of hardening of the arteries.

4-H Club Camps Providing Recreation For Young, Old

It won't be long before the summer camping season opens for Florida's 4-H club camps, and hundreds of rural boys and girls are looking forward to attending one of the camps for a week during the next two months.

The University of Florida Agricultural Extension Service, under the leadership of its state agent, has not overlooked the importance of recreation for boys and girls in its 4-H program. It has five of these camps.

Garden Therapy Now Widely Used, Value Recognized

Garden therapy is being used in state institutions and hospitals, military hospitals and convalescent homes, handicapped children's homes, and in hospitals and schools for exceptional children, day camps for the blind, local hospitals and homes for aged, individual shut-ins and for boys' and girls' clubs.

The therapeutic value of gardening and its allied subjects is being recognized more each day by medical science as of great value in the rehabilitation of persons who are physically or mentally ill, and to those who are physically handicapped. It will also result in the minds of the underprivileged youth an awareness of the natural things of beauty and their usefulness that inspire and encourage them to do fine things which in some cases may prove preventative of certain mental illnesses.

The garden clubs provide the materials and instruction for the programs, however, the therapeutic value is the result when the patient or child actually does the planting or re-creates with the material itself.

This service has been added to the Garden Club activities with in the past few years. This combined volunteer service with Garden Club work.

TV Viewers Bound For Planet Mars

HOLLYWOOD.—Want a trip to Mars? If you're a TV viewer, you'll find it on TV this fall.

The amazing Mr. Disney, whose wonders never cease, is preparing a TV series called "Disneyland" for the ABC network. A monthly feature will be "The World of Tomorrow," and one of the subjects will show the preparation and actual flight to Mars.

The real planet is a timely topic, since it is veering close enough to the earth this month for astronomers to get their best spurt at it.

To conduct this TV trip to Mars, Disney has hired Willy Ley, who knows as much about space travel as any human being. He formed a society for space travel in his native Germany in 1927, the same year Lindbergh made headlines with an earthly flight. He came to this country in 1933 and spent most of his flight into space by writing books and articles.

"A flight to Mars" asks Ley in Germanic tones "Of course it is possible. All it takes is time and money."

It could happen in 25 years, he said, or at least 25 years after the decision is made to attempt the project. He figures it would take a decade to establish the space stations, which are essential before the full trip can be attempted.

Then it would be another 15 years to build and perfect the rocket to travel to Mars," he said.

For Most Of Year World Is Divided Into Men, Women

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

During most of the year, the world is divided into men and women. But as far as the men and women are concerned, it is split another way: hosts and guests, weekend variety.

Millions of words are written annually on the craft—okay, make it art—of gracious entertaining without killing yourself from overwork. Thousands more are straining to end on how to conduct yourself as a houseguest so that you're still friends with host and family thereafter. Even a cursory reading of these treatises indicate what a delicate business weekend entertaining really is, and how fraught with peril.

But apparently it is an old American custom which decrees that as soon as the maple leaves are the size of a squirrel's ear, folks with a guest room and a half-acre of land or better receive contingents of city apartment dwellers for periods running from Friday evening through Sunday.

Personally, I've often thought that this charming custom might be the one dramatic factor which causes, each fall, on many country dwellers to put the house on the market and gratefully move back to cliff-dwelling where social debts are adequately repaid by dunes and cocktail parties.

Far be it from me to imply that city-type weekend guests aren't nice people. They are nice in the city. It's just that they have a tendency to complicate country life.

Most weekend guests arrive in neatly pressed tweeds and other definitely country clothes, determined to stock up on enough fresh local produce for the week. They want to go on walks, to play 18 or more and sun-bathe to last until they're 36 holes of golf, to indulge in a few sets of tennis, or lull on the back terrace and talk.

Meanwhile, the grass doesn't get mowed, the shrubs from the nursery don't get planted. Obviously, too, you can't go in for casual meals—there has to be definite planning for breakfast, luncheon and dinner, and something for a late snack after the country club dance.

The hardest guest to entertain however, isn't the one who can be thrown into a lousy sports-filled day. The really tough guest is the male or female who emerges brightly on Saturday morning full of a determination that you let him or her help you with your chores. This usually means that she carefully weeds out all the last-year seedlings and leaves the chickweed severely alone; that he ruins the blades of the powermower running over a bed of gravel, and that both of them pick up terrible cases of sunburn poison ivy or both.

For the host and/or hostess, often there's nothing but a mounting feeling of frenzy, frustration and fatigue.

Even one extra guest seems to use so many more dishes—obviously you can't eat salad off the meat plate when company has come.

BROWNIE SCOUTS AT CEREMONIAL—Eleven girls were formally accepted into Troop 4 and seven were promoted to intermediate Scouting at an investiture service held recently at the Christian Missionary and Alliance Church. Mrs. E. M. Blanton is troop leader. Serving as assistant leaders are Mrs. John M. Blanton Jr., Mrs. Charles Stafford and Mrs. Harry Robinson. The girls are (from left to right) Linda Messingham, Constance Robinson, Jean Fletcher, Jane Little, Lu Ann Childs, Doris Hill, Tom Betty Norris, Rosa Mary Flowers, Judy Carroll, Marvyn Little, Gail Eberly, Diane Robinson, Fern Brooks, LaVigne Little and Margaret Tracy. Second row (L to R) Sarah Blanton, Dora Blanton, Betty Smith, Lucy Eberly, Janet Ann Robinson, a table covered with refreshments, Barbara Mullen, Rose Stafford, Lewis Cooper, Barbara Kent and Cindy Lake. The service was the last meeting of the troop until next fall.

Bid Your Crew to a Barbecue

Everybody, grab your picnic gear and let's celebrate July! Take the crew on a grand picnic barbecue. No trouble now. Just plot the party so you don't have to lift a finger, once the fun begins. Food is either served in a buffet or served in a bowl with green, red, carrot, and radish for salad (tossed type) or cut up to nibble out of hand. Fill the jug with iced tea. Pick out a beautiful good watermelon. Add make with the chocolate cake mix. About that barbecue sauce, the lamb and you've got it. Plunk in brown sugar, mustard, vinegar, onion and garlic. Now taste that and cheer.

SOUP SCOOPS

Get Cool... With Chilled Soup! Eat soup to cool yourself! Yes, the trick is to chill soup and serve it cold when you want a refreshing meal. Asparagus soup is especially delightful this way. Mix 1 can condensed cream of asparagus soup with 1 can milk. Put this in the refrigerator to chill well before mealtime—about 4 hours will insure thorough chilling. Serve the creamy asparagus combination into cold bowls. Sprinkle top with chopped parsley or watercress. Tasty with cold sandwiches or pimiento.

Students Attend Summer School

Several Sanford College students have decided to make formal education a summer as well as fall, winter, and spring project and are currently attending or will soon attend summer schools in various institutions throughout the country.

Pre-Vacation Tasks Well Worth Doing

When you go away on a summer vacation make sure you cancel milk and newspaper deliveries; tell your postman about the temporary change of address; inform a neighbor of your plans and give him your vacation address and number; don't leave unprotected cash, gems or valuables in the house, securely lock all windows and doors.

Miamian Faces Jail On Vice Violation
 MIAMI (AP)—Johnny Demetree, 37, yesterday faced a year in jail for violating Florida's anti-prostitution laws at the hotel in downtown Miami.

A Court of 10 times jury needed only 20 minutes to convict Demetree. He was the first to be convicted in 10 months. He faced a fine of $1,000 and a year in jail. A grand jury indicted 29 persons on a vice law violation in Miami and Demetree was the first convicted. Miami Herald reporter, who reported on the case, said the grand jury indicted 29 persons on a vice law violation in Miami and Demetree was the first convicted.

I Lead The Parade...

I shop in Sanford

BECAUSE

I like to be first with the very newest and latest styles in everything I buy... and I find them in the stores of Sanford. It is a pleasure knowing that as soon as an article is on the market I will find it displayed here. I can be confident that Sanford offers me the same up-to-date merchandise that I would discover in any larger metropolitan shopping center... no matter where I looked.
