Utility worker joited again

JACKSONVILLE - A utility worker nearly electrocuted in 1967 was jolted again Monday by 26,000 of volts of electricity.

Champion was an apprentice lineman in 1967 when he had his first brush with electrocution. He came in contact with a 4,200-volt line and dangled upside-down from a pole unconscious as a co-worker gave him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

County bucks vexed residents, votes 4% tax

By J. MARK BARPIELD Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Beginning Nov. 1, residents of the non-city areas of Seminole County will pay a 4 percent tax on utilities.

A divided county commission voted 3-2 Monday afternoon to impose a tax on the water, electricity. heating and cooking gas, local telephone service and fuel oil of unincorporated residents. The proposal was a scaled-down version of a 10 percent tax commissioners defeated July 30. County officials estimated the 4 percent tax will cost the average resident less than $50 per year.

Commissioner Jennifer Kelley, who made the 4 percent proposal, and commissioners Fred Streetman and Bob Sturm supported the tax. Streiman and Sturm had supported the 10 percent tax proposal.

Commissioners Larry Furlong and Pat Warren opposed the tax. Warren said she opposed the tax because unemplyment is increasing as are foreclosures and other signs of a weak economy show the residents can't afford any more taxes.

But about 50 residents voiced their opposition to the tax Monday, saying they couldn't bear another

$50 a year. "You are taking away my freedom," said Grant Maloy, of Winter Park. "When I pay this bill, that is less that I can do. Soon will come a time when my wallet is empty and I become a slave." "We're going to need a Boston tea party, because it's tax, tax, tax," said C.J. Mexier. "I don't think it's the right time," said Tom Watkins of Geneva.

Roy Rice, of the Loch Arbor subdivision west of Sanford, recommended commissioners drop the tax on fuel oil and gas.

Chase family offers gift to city

By NICK PFEIFAUF Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD - The family of Sydney O. Chase Jr., has offered to donate $380,000 to the City of Sanford. The money will be used for a Chase wing in the present Henry Shelton Sanford Memorial Library and Museum.

Through his Winter Park attorney, Raymer McGuire, Sydney O. Chase III reported the donation of the money and the family papers to the City of Sanford were stipulated in his father's will. Chase presently lives in Europe, but serves as his father's personal representative for the Chase family estate.

The Chase family, consisting of brothers Randall, Charles, Sydney, Joshua, and their sister Anna Lucia, were all prominent business and social leaders in Sanford and throughout Central Florida for the first half of this century.

mission workshop and meeting held Monday evening. An agreement to accept the offer will be drawn up for final commission approval.

Mayor Bettye Smith said. "We are extremely delighted in this most generous offer, and we look forward to working with the Chase family on these arrangements."

The proposal requests the city accept the Chase Family papers, for inclusion in the proposed new wing of the present library and museum at 520 E. First Street. One stipulaup during the Sanford City Com- tion that has been requested, was for the city to name the wing after Chase. The remainder of the facility will continue its present name.

The city must also enter an agreement with the University of Florida for cataloging and indexing of the papers, described as consisting of several truck loads. Of the total amount of money to be donated to the city, $140,000 would have to be donated to the University of Florida Foundation. Most of the papers are currently housed at the university in Gainesville.

Many of the papers are records of Chase and Company, a prominent citrus growing and shipping firm which had its beginning in 1884. The records extend from the company's earlist activity through growing, packing and shipping fresh citrus produce, and the improvement of methods in each process. Many of the other papers include correspondence used in developing and improving citrus;

Topping the public agenda. Robinson said, was the increasing number of students in each classroom.

"That really worries everyone," she said. "The teachers wanted to know why we couldn't just hire more teachers. Parents were con-cerned about the decreased effi-ciency of a teacher burdened with so many students."

Robinson said that recent attention focused on the expanding Year Round Education program, has brought parents to "a nervous frenzy."

She said that a large portion of

Home burglarized

The residence of Walter Leon Lemon, 2201 Celery Avenue, east of Sanford, was reportedly burglarized during the weekend. Seminole County Sheriff's deputies reported entry was apparently made by breaking open the kitchen window with a brick.

Officers said the person or persons possibly knew the home's residents were gone for the weekend, and spent a considerable time going through almost every room in the house.

Items taken were estimated to total over $3 thousand in value. They included a great deal of audio, video, cassette and CD equipment, a cellular phone, and many other items. An investigation into the incident is continuing.

Parole violator apprehended

Longwood Police officers stopped a vehicle near Springwood Village Sunday afternoon, for a minor traffic violation, improper display of the license tag. When officers checked the identity of the driver. Frank Anthony Guerciohi, 28, of 141 E. Springwood Circle in Longwood, they discovered he had been wanted since August 15 of this year, for violation of parole, on a mansiaughter conviction. Guerciohi was arrested and taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility.

Stolen truck and ATV located

A Seminole County Sheriff's deputy, while on a routine patrol Sunday, located some stolen property in the 2100 block of Granby Street in Midway. The Items were a 1987 Nissan Truck, and a Yamaha all terrain vehicle, reportedly stolen Saturday night, from the home of Gary D. Wallace, 1098 Worthington Drive, Deltona.

Another ATV, reportedly stolen during the same incident on Saturday, has not been located at the present time. An investigation into the thefts is continuing.

Woman robbed at home

The Seminole County Sheriff's office is investigating a burgiary at 3121 Bungalow Boulevard Saturday. According to the resident, Barbara Thomas, two men entered the home through an unlocked door, while she was sitting on the living room sofa, and asked where she kept her money. A report on the incident said she took the two men into the bedroom and indicated money was in the dresser.

She said the pair took approximately $100 in cash and left. Although the same home was robbed in March of this year, she reportedly told officers she did not know if they might be the same robbers. She indicated the two did not display any weapons during the robbery.

DUI arrests

The following persons were charged with driving under the influence of alcohol during the past weekend.

George Frye, 33 of 31, N. Devon Street, Winter Springs, was stopped by Lake Mary Police, on the east bound entrance to Interstate 4 Saturday morning. Officers reported his vehicle was being driven in an improper manner, and was clocked.

Street by any other name is not 13th Street

By MCK PFEFAUP Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — A proposal to rename 13th Street in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was turned down by the Sanford City Commission last night. The decision was split with a 3 to 2 vote.

While two commissioners continued their opposition to the change. Mayor Bettye Smith cast the final negative vote.

Arguments began during a work session prior to the regular commission meeting. Commissioner Bob Thomas reiterated his original suggestion that the street be renamed from Dixie Way to Sanford Avenue. "I know Commissioner Howell wants to know the cost, and Commissioner McClanahan wants the change to stop at Highway 17-92," Thomas said, "But a lot of people, both black and white. benefited from Dr. King's work, and I think it would be a shame to bring up the problem of the continuity of the street."

Thomas added, "If it were to be named in honor of anybody else, I don't think we'd have this problem. I think it's sad. If the commission wants to do what is right, let's extend it to Sanford Avenue."

Avenue."

City Manager Bill Simmons reported he had received the cost of the renaming from the Public Works Department. "They estimate it will cost $568.01," he said.

Commissioner Howell said he had discussed the matter with people in the black community. "They think renaming 13th Street is a disgrace." he reported. "If we want to name another street in his honor, I'll go along with it, but not 13th Street."

Thomas asked who Howell had spoken with, but Howell responded that he would not make their names public.

Commissioner McClanahan restated his remarks made when the proposal was first advanced two weeks ago. "I have no problem with the renaming, as long as it's from French Avenue west." He continued, "No one spoke to me about that area, but several have commented about the problems if it would be remained to the east of French Avenue."

While the proposal was not on the official commission agenda, it was brought up near the conclusion of the regular meeting. The same positions expressed earlier by Commissioners McCianahan and Howell were restated. Howell said, "If it were any other street, I will favor it."

Mayor Bettye Smith. In explaining her negative vote, agreed with the concept that the renaming should only be accomplished to Highway 17-92.

Wetlands

Wetlands, including those in Florida, once were considered stinking bogs, forlorn marshes or mosquito-infested swamps where man dare not tread. They were only deemed good to be drained and rendered into 'usable" land for farms or cities.

More recently, scientists have convinced lawmakers that wetlands are much more important than we realized. Indeed, life begins in wetlands, which support species ranging from microscopic phytoplankton to deer and bears — and, ultimately, man. They also prevent flooding and purify our nation's water.

The Clean Water Act of 1972 required a federal permit for filling a wetland. But it wasn't until 1989 that government scientists agreed on a definition for wetlands, which included certan soil and plant types, and saturation for at least seven consecutive days a year.

After intense lobbying by developers, oil companies and farmers, the Bush administration recently decided to change that definition to allow development of millions of acres of wetlands.

The scientific community is outraged, and EPA Administrator William Reilley opposes it. The new definition, 21 days of saturation, has no scientific basis, experts say.

It's important that politics not be allowed to overshadow scientific knowledge. Scientists know that destroying wetlands is not only biologically dangerous, but economically as Besides supporting the food chain, wetlands prevent floods. Destroying wetlands upstream worsens flooding downstream. But the developers or farmers who fill in wetlands don't pay for the flood damage, the public does.

Destruction of wetlands is linked to the decline of aquatic life. Destruction of coastal marshes and lagoons on the West Coast is linked to the decline of halibut. On the East Coast, destruction of eel grass beds by upstream wetland development has led to the decline of shrimp and crab.

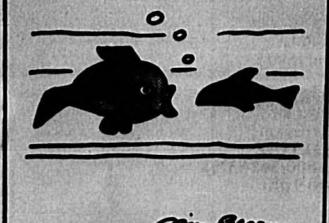

Politics and science always are uncomfortable bedfellows. But in this case, politicial expediency has completely undermined a scientific decision. Wetlands are too important to allow that. An unbiased scientific definition of wetlands must be made, and the government should stick to it.

Who judges court nominee judges?

Brent Bozell is a young conservative activist with a red beard and a temperament to match. When President Reagan nominated Judge Robert Bork for the Supreme Court in 1967, Bozell watched the liberal left mow him down with the most vicious barrage of lies ever directed against a court nominee, while the White House stood silently by, appalled but paralyzed. Bozell privately swore that he would never, if he could help it, let that happen again.

Now the Senate Judiciary Committee is holding hearings on the qualifications of President Bush's nominee, Judge Clarence Thomas, for a seat on the Supreme Court. Chairing the hearings is Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del. Dominating them is Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. Both are expected to oppose Thomas. And Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., too impatient to wait for the committee's conclusion, has already announced that he will vote against Thomas.

Out in the swamps, the liberals, outraged at Mr. Bush's choice of a highly competent black judge not under their ideological thumb, have amassed a $3 million war chest to fight Thomas tooth and claw — or, in the words of one of their feminist Furies, Pat Ireland, to "Bork him."

So Brent Bozell scraped together $100,000 and launched a pre-emptive strike. On TV stations in Washington, two of Bosell's organizations (Conservative Victory and Citizens United) are running a commercial that asks, "Who's judging the judges?" A highly relevant point, one would think. After all, Kennedy, Biden and Cranston will shortly be called upon to pass judgment on Clarence Thomas. Just how good. Bosell wants to know, is their judgment? His commercial points out that Joe Biden, as early as his days in law school and as late as his last campaign, has secretly plagiarised the writings of others. Doesn't that tell us something ominous about Joe Biden's judgment?

Or shall we discuss Ted Kennedy? Let's pass for a shange, the condition above of Chappaover, for a change, the sordid story of Chappa-quiddick. Michael Kinsley, defending Kennedy demanded to know why Bozell also alluded to Kennedy's recent behavior at Palm Beach, since "Kennedy hasn't been accused of any crime" there Well, the grand jury's still out on that one, Mike. There are those who believe that Kennedy conspired to obstruct justice by hiding in the Kennedy mansion and sending a flunky to tell the Palm Beach police that he had already left for

But forget that. Here is a U.S. senator, a supposedly devout Catholic from Massachusetts. who chooses the darkest day in the whole Christian calendar - Good Friday, the anniversary of the day on which Christ was crucified and died - to go on a stag pub crawl with his son and nephew.

Bozell wanted to know what sort of judgment a man with Kennedy's record will bring to such sensitive matters as (for example) Judge Thomas' views on the natural law.

Finally, Bozell pointed out that Alan Cranston had the bad judgment (at least, in the opinion of the Senate Ethics Committee) to accept millions of dollars from savings and loan kingpin Charles Keating while running interference for him with doubtful federal agencies.

Summers past reflect demise

Summer is over, a statement of bittersweet reality that this year was punctuated by an end-of-August story in The New York Times lamenting the "fading to black" of New Jersey's last drive-in movie. Drive-ins were born in the Garden State when Richard Hollingshead Jr. of Camden opened one on June 6, 1933. New Jersey's last, the Route 35 Drive-in closed just the other day, which gave many of us at least momentary pause, Unlike the drive-in, however, the social revolution that Mr. Hollingshead's inspiration reflected and served shows few indications of dying out. That ought to give us all the chills.

That social revolution was — is — the demise Summer is over, a statement of bittersweet

That social revolution was - is - the demise of the family unit or the center of life for most voting Americans. The product of many causes, from industrialization and urbanizacauses, from industrialization and urbaniza-tion to the automobile and the personal mobility it created, its effects have been devastingly simple. The time that families spend doing things together has declined to the point of near extinction. The forces that pull families apart and individual family members into sensors orbits have multiplied members into separate orbits have multiplied in numbers and power. As with so many other components of this particular social revolution, the drive-in was particular social revolution, the drive-in was not initially a centrifugal force, tearing youngsters out of the family orbit. In fact, it functioned as a great family diversion, an outing that all could enjoy at a relatively modest cost. While there were always movies aimed directly at the younger set, and the occasional movie deemed unsuitable for them as well, most were intended for a general audience. The family car became the family theater.

At the height of their popularity in the 1950s, there were over 4,000 drive-ins out of 16.354 total movie acreens in America. the 16,354 total movie screens in America, the Times reported. This year, there are less than 1,000 drive-ins while there are almost 50 percent more screens overall. As a child of the 1950s, I can attest to their former appeal. Even now, I associate "Singin' in The Rain" with a teen-ager's aching true love and fogged-up windows in an old Buick parked in a drive-in just outside Rockport, Maine.

But the 1950s weren't the 1930s, and the 1960s were even less so. The drive-in like the

But the 1950s weren't the 1930s, and the 1960s were even less so. The drive-in, like the car upon which it depended, had become an avenue of escape from the family — and its rules. What is more, Mother and Dad didn't need the car to create a family entertainment center anymore. Television had become the diversion of choice; perched in the living room or den: As cars got smaller in the energy-conscious 1970s, television sets got larger. Who wanted the hassle of loading up all the kids, messing up the inside of the car with soft kids, messing up the inside of the car with soft drinks and popcorn and fighting off the bugs for the privilege of an uncomfortable night of cramped entertainment? Particularly so while your sofa and recliner sat empty at home, the boob tube's free fare available for the saking?

For teen-agers, the drive-in became the place to go to be with your peers, your special turf. You could always get there since just about everyone knew at least one person who had "his own wheels," thanks to a part-time job or indulgent parents. The drive-in showed movies your parents wouldn't have wat-ched on a bet and encouraged experiments with drink, drugs and sex they would never have condoned. When you weren't at the movics, you were cruis-ing by and pulling into the other kind of drive-ins, the ones that served up curbaide hamburgers, fries and Cokes. "Happy Times" is one way to recollect those days. A less sentimental and more accurate tag would be "Separate Times. Mind you, the youth culture was not actually created by youth. It was partly a mass-marketing device and partly the result of technology. But it flourished because too many parents of all economic classes were only too parents of all economic classes were only too happy to have the kids off their hands. "Doing your own thing" was a phrase that applied with a vengeance to the folks as well as to Junior and Sis. Barrely encountering each other at meals, spending little or no time at home actually talking rather than watching and listening to television's insidious pap. family members became so many ships passing in the

All of which probably seems to be a far leap from the closing of New Jersey's last drive-in, and it is, except for one point. The drive-in is dying nationwide because it can't even hold the young customers on whom it had come to rely and it can't hold them because there are so many other commercial attractions competing for their attention. None of those attractions — from VCRs to malls — has anything to do with the family unit. Few have any enduring value. They are the cotton candy with which our society stuffs its young in place of more nutritious fare.

Small wonder that the phrase you hear so often from America's teen-agers is "There's nothing to do." Surrounded by "things to do," they are starving for direction.

Yeltsin has heard it all before. The pre-coup KGB was supposed to be new and improved also. And its leader, Vladimir Kryuchkov. liked to pretend that he and his agents were kinder and gentler spies.

During Yeltain's first visit to the United States, he was dogged by the KGB and its rumor machine. We had encouraged Yeltain to make the trip and speak directly to the American people. Stormwater fees addressed LAKE MARY - The Lake Mary City Commission will hold a two part meeting tonight. The main emphasis will be on the Stormwater Management Utility proposal.

This will be the fifth meeting of the commission in five weeks, with the sixth, the regularly scheduled meeting, planned for next Thursday.

The stormwater programs to be brought up tonight, are the result of considerable work and study by the staff and various consultants regarding ways to protect drainage ways, wetlands and associated stormwater management feetilities. Each single family residential unit will be billed at a flat fee, based on one EDU per dwelling. For multi-family residential developments, the property owner will be billed a fee yet to be established by the city, based on one EDU, multiplied by the number of residential units.

For a non-residential property, the number of EDUs shall be determined based on such factors as size of the building. the amount of paved parking areas, and other factors.

The charge per EDU will be $3 per month, and will consist of a base fee of $1.45 per EDU, plus a contribution fee of $1.55 per EDU. Non-residential property with site mitigation facilities, where stormwater runoff is similar to that of vacant property. will not pay the contribution fee.

The first part of tonight's meeting, will be a joint session with the city's Business Advisory Board. Board chairman, Craig Spearman, will present a number of plans and facommendations for the commission's consideration on future development of the business growth in the city.

Among items to be discussed by Spearman and the board will be planned land usage, recom-mended floor areas, busine footage comparisons for future commercial and business building, and processes that might be used for site plan approvals.

Approximately 100 Sanford residents crowded the commission chambers to object to taxation, with 15 stepping forward to voice their opinions.

Prior to the public hearing. Seminole County Tax Appraiser Bill Suber explained his as well as the County's opinion on the taxes. Commenting on the large number of citizens complaining about extremely high tax bills. Suber told the Commission:

'I want you, as a taxing authority, to know I am very upset over events which have occurred in the last few days and weeks." He continued, "I accept the responsibility of increas valuations in your jurisdiction and a portion of the increase in taxes. I will not, however, accept the responsibility or ir-responsibility of the actions of a taxing authority who slone has the power to budget and the power of taxation to fund that Commissioner McClanahan commented, "From these higher taxes, the city will only receive 12 percent, 6 percent more than last year. Yet taxes have increased 100 to 200 percent. Some taxes must have gone down, or we (the City) would have had a windfall. Why are certain taxes increasing while others apparently went down?"

Suber explained, "The majority of people in the city experienced an increase of 20 to 70 percent, but there was some property where taxes didn't go Commissioners Lon Howell commented to Suber about certain Sanford business establishments. "Their taxes are much lower, yet you want to put taxes on houses higher." He brought about a round of applause from the audience when he added, "It seems as though you want to put the blame on the city when you haven't been doing your job for the past few years."

Suber ended his comments by telling the commissioners, "You alone have the authority and the power to reduce your budget to a level which is facally responsible, which will, in turn, reduce the taxes on your citizens.

McClanahan responded, "We don't have the capability of solving your tax problems. In this proposed budget, we didn't give anyone raises, and we didn't hire any new people." He continued, "We didn't even call for an increased miliage that would allow us to do some of this." McClanshan concluded. "If I had the authority to do something about this. I would."

Citizens however, aimed their objections to the city, with many demanding the city accept the roll back miliage rate. A.C. Forecasters track two tropical storms

Associated Press Writer

MIAMI - Forecasters were busy today plotting the possible paths of tropical storms Danny and Erika as Hurricane Claudette was downgraded to Danny appeared to be the only system that could possibly threaten the United States, but it was too soon to tell if it would.

"That is a possibility several days from now, but the most likely possibility that we're looking at here is that it will not affect the United States." Miles Lawrence, a forecaster with the National Hurricane Center in suburban Coral Gables, said early today.

At 6 a.m. EDT, Tropical Storm Danny had top winds near 50 mph and was centered near 18.5 north latitude and 48.1 west longitude, or about 885 miles east of the Leeward Islands.

Danny was moving toward the northwest at nearly 20 mph and forecasters said it was expected to gradually turn more to the northwest and decrease in forward speed today.

"We think it's going to deflect away from the Leeward Islands by Thursday," forecaster Hal Gerrish said early this morning. "It looks like it's running into a stone wall."

Gerrish said it was too early to tell if Danny would eventually touch ground.

At 6 a.m. EDT, Erika had top winds of about 60 mph and was moving northeast at about 29 mph. The center of Erika was located near 33.7 north latitude, 46.8 west longitude, or about 925 miles southwest of the westernmost Azores

A turn toward the northeast and decrease in forward speed was expected during the next 24 hours, although little change in strength was likely, forecasters said.

Claudette was downgraded to a tropical storm at 6 a.m. EDT, with her center located near 35.4 north latitude, 55.6 west longitude, or about 650 miles northeast of Bermuda.

Forecasters said Claudette was moving toward the northeast near 18 mph and the motion was expected to continue throughout the day, although weakening was expected to continue during the next 24 hours. Top winds were down to 70 mph.

There is still some concern that Erika could churn near Claudette.

"That has been a concern and it's still a possibility," said Gerrish. "But Claudette is possibility," said Gerrish. "But Claudette is weakening so rapidly we expect it to dissipate in the next couple of days and Danny to be the dominant storm as it approaches the Azores."

Claudette began as loosely organized thunderstorms last Wednesday evening, developed into a tropical storm Thursday and grew to a hurricane Friday with 125 mph winds.

At its peak, the storm was similar in caliber to last month's Hurricane Bob, the second-costliest in terms of insured property damage in U.S., history.

Labor Day week is the traditional peak of the Atlantic hurricane season, which runs from June 1 to Nov. 30. The only other storm of the season. Ana, died in the north Atlantic without ever coming close to land.

New program will serve as watchdog

ATLANTA - Pollution is threatening the Gulf of Mexico, and an environmental program seeks to raise awareness of what Americans stand to lose if waste and chemical runoffs are not

The Gulf's vast expanse with its 615,000 aquare miles of water touches beaches that stretch from Key West to Brownsville, Texas.

"The Gulf of Mexico is not in great shape, and that's an understatement," Barbara Sheen Todd, chairwoman of the Pinellas County Commission. told the Sun-Sentinel in Fort Lauderdale. "It's been abused."

The program, which will be launched later this year, will include a presidential proclamation and a congressional resolution about the pollution, garbage and neglect that threaten the Gulf of Mexico.

"It's basically a P.R., public education, environmental outreach effort," Lloyd Wise, who is working on the program for the U.S. Environ-mental Protection Agency regional office in Atlanta.

Ships discard, tons of trash, which washes ashore and endangers the Gulf's $20-billion-a-year tourism trade. Red tides and fish kills this summer have closed beaches on Florida's Gulf Coast near St. Petersburg. Excess nutrients caused an explosion of seaweed that clogged the cooling systems of two Florida power plants, forcing them to shut down.

Further, scientists have documented a 3.000-square-mile "dead sone" in the Gulf — an area spreading westward from the mouth of the Mississippi River where there is so little oxygen in the bottom waters that plants and fish no longer can survive.

Asked whether effective regulation might be more important than public education, Wise said, "You have to develop the political climate for that to occur. Regulation is required and enforcement is required, but there needs to be a sense of purpose and a mandate for that to go into place."

Touting the importance of the Gulf to those who live along its shores is preaching to the choir. Wise said. The challenge, he said, is to convince those who live in America's heartland that they, too, have a stake in the health of the Gulf.

Water from two-thirds of the continental United States, that area of the country between the Rocky Mountains and the Appalachians, drains into the Gulf of Mexico. The fertilizer that an lowa

Summer Thunderstorms Cause Havoc On Pump Systems

Summer is a busy season for Jim Smith Well Drilling because of frequent afternoon thunderstorms. Unfortunately, lightning and water don't mix and many pumps are damaged because water conducts electricity. While many pump companies leave their customers without water for several days. Jim Smith Well Drilling strives to provide same day service because of their up-to-date hydraulic equipment, specially designed for deep well retrieval. Companies with outdated equipment can take up to four days to do repairs and often don't do the best job in that amount of time.

Jim Smith Well Drilling, a complete well and pump service, is owned and operated by Bill Dearolf. The company is a licensed water contractor by the St. Johns River Water Management District (state license #7103). Bill is also factory certified and trained by the Sta-Rite Pump Manufacturing Co., which is the most common pump used in wells.

Bill Dearolf has been a resident of the Longwood area for more than 40 years.

Bill works along side of his servicemen Howard and Larry. Together they have 35 years of experience in the well and pump business. This experience is what makes the difference. If you are considering the purchase of a well system, make sure that "terrific deal" is really terrific. Bill says the quality of the products and work is the first thing that is cut when a company quotes you a low price. You also need to consider who is going to give the best service after the sale. Bill really understands all the aspects of electricity and water and the relationship between the two during summer thunderstorms. Lightning usually strikes the highest object in the area. That is why people are warned not to take refuge under lone pine trees on golf courses during storms. But what Bill knows is that well pumps are one of the best lightning attractions there is even in the ground. Lightning will follow power lines to the metal pump and through the welded metal pipe leading down beyond the water table of your well. Bill says he spends a lot of time in Volusia County making service calls after big storms. Most homeowners insurance policies cover the cost of pump repairs.

Bush backs Thomas nomination

WASHINGTON - President Bush is proclaiming that "no litmus test" was used in Clarence Thomas' nomination to the Supreme Court as the Senate Judiciary Committee launches confirmation hearings.

Making a fresh appeal for Thomas on the eve of today's opening hearing. Bush exhorted lawmakers to "preserve the independence of the court" by avoiding asking the nominee how he would vote on legal issues.

The president's statement came as the 43-year-old black conservative braced for tough interrogation on such volatile subjects as abortion and affirmative action. "There's a fight on," Bush acknowledged. But he said, "I'm confident we're going to win it."

The commencement of the hearing part of the advise-and-consent process follows two months of campaigning by supporters and opponents to influence the senators who will pass judgment on Thomas, a federal appeals court judge.

Lamb Industry under fire

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department is investigating the lamb industry as skidding wholesale prices push thousands of sheep raisers out of business and lawmakers say the market hovers on the verge of collapse.

Struggling sheep raisers are coming forward to cooperate in the antitrust probe after initially fearing retaliation by the few remaining packers who buy their lambs, said Stan Cannon, a spokesman for Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.

At the heart of the issue is the steady decline in prices received by sheep producers for lamb on the hoof and retail prices, which have either held steady or increased slightly.

"Currently, a rancher in Texas gets 53 cents a pound for his lambe, while we pay $6.99 a pound for leg of lamb at the grocery store," said Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas. "Somebody is making a lot of money out of these kinds of transactions and it isn't the ranchers, who are having trouble covering production costs."

Miami hopes home-field will bog down Houdton

By STEVEN WINE AP Sports Writer

MIAMI - Miami Hurricanes coach Dennis Erickson fears his team's home-field advantage won't be enough to slow down the Houston Congars on Thursday night.

"Watching Houston, it seems like wherever they play, they still can throw it and catch it.' Erickson said.

The 10th-ranked Cougars will be trying to snap Miami's 38game winning streak in the Orange Bowl, Houston quarterback David Klingler discounts any disadvantage in being the visiting team.

"Although the crowd has a little bit to do with it, more than anything, what wins games is the players." Klingler said. "I feel like we're just as good a team on the road as at home."

The Hurricanes, naturally, are eager to prove Klingler wrong. "He's never played in the Orange Bowl," cornerback Ryan McNeil said, "The Orange Bowl has a mystique about it."

McNeil remembers his first game there, a 1988 thrashing of No. 1-ranked Florida State. "That place was like ... I really can't explain it, it was so wild." he said. "I knew I wouldn't play. but inside my heart I was so fired up I couldn't believe it. I think if we have close to that type of atmosphere, then Miami will be successful.

McNeil and his teammates refer to the 54-year-old stadium as "our house," and with good reason. The Hurricanes last lost there in the 1985 opener, 35-23 to Florida. Miami's victims since then have included Notre Dame and Florida State three times apiece, as well as Oklahoma and Nebraska in the Orange Bowl Classic, when the Hurricanes officially were the visiting team.

With a victory over Houston in this year's home opener. Miami would lie Notre Dame for the second-longest winning streak at home in NCAA history. The Fighting Irish won 39 in a row from 1907 to 1918. Alabama holds the record with 57 consecutive wins on its two home fields from 1963 to 1982.

ACROSS

DEAR DR. GOTT: Will you please list the symptoms of glaucoma and cataracts? I am sure there are other elderly people who, like myself, want to know about these serious eye diseases.

DEAR READER: Glaucoma, a pressure increase of the fluid within the eyeball, is a major cause of blindness. Its cause is unknown, and it is more common in the elderly. Treatment with drops, pills or surgery is almost always successful. Symptoms include headache, halos around lights, impaired dark adaption, blurred vision and frequent change of glasses.

Cataracts, progressive opacity of the clear lens in the front of the eye, also affect vision. They are painless. Cataracts are due to the aging process, diabetes, exposure to X-rays and infrared. inflammation and certain drugs (notably, cortisone).

Treatment, with lens extraction or other surgery, is curative. Symptoms include progressive nearsightedness and loss of vis-

DEAR DR. GOTT: I suffer from panic attacks and anxiety attacks. Recently during my attacks I've experienced throat constriction and a burning in my chest. On speaking with my emergency room doctor, he says it's all in my head, yet my psychiatrist says the condition is real. Please explain anxiety and real heart pain symptoms in your column.

DEAR READER: Panic attacks are real (not imagined) for the people who have them. These attacks are marked by an irrational dread or fear of a nameless, imminent catastrophe. They are often associated with throat constriction, chest pressure, nervousness, anxiety, rapid pulse, trembling, sweating and nausca.

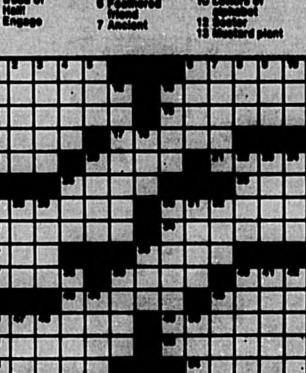

The cause is unknown. Panic attacks can successfully be treated by counseling in associa-tion with anti-anxiety drugs.

(C)1991 NEWSPAPER EN-

By Phillip Alder For today's deal, put on your defender's cap and then cover the East and South cards.

Sitting West, you make a weak jump overcall of three clubs over South's one-heart opening. It isn't an ideal bid: the suit is fine, but the hand is playable in three suits, not just the one your partner will assume. However, experience has shown that it pays to make life tough for the opponents. North has one of the worst 10-point hands you will ever see, but he must bid something over three clubs, and he does have four-card heart support.

Against four hearts, you lead the club king: four, six, ace. Declarer draws four rounds of trumps ending in hand, partner following throughout, and then leads a club toward dummy's jack. You rise with the queen. What do you do now?

It seems to be a guess between spades and diamonds. Because your spades were shorter than your diamonds, you probably decided to switch to a spade. But in today's deal, it isn't the winning play. Declarer discards one diamond loser on the club jack and claims:

How could you know? Only if your partner knows how to put those "useless" trumps to work.
If he wants a spade switch, he plays his trumps in descending order: seven, six, five, four. Here, though, he wants a diamond switch, so he follows in ascend-ing order: four, five, six, seven. With no preference, he plays his cards in some random sequence.

Experts often make suit-preference signals with low trumps. They work well — if you play with a partner who watches your cards.

Fear of pets disguised as dislike

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I frequently entertain at home. We have a dog and a cat that we love like members of our family. When we have guests, we always confine our pets in another area before our guests arrive. Many of our friends have told us that they appreciate this because they have a fear of dogs, or cats or both!

Our veterinarian told us that when some people say they "dislike" animals, they actually fear them. For example, if a person who is not used to having pets around entered someone's house and was greeted at the door by a hostile dog barking angrily or a cat that curled around his leg, he could have an anxiety attack!

I happen to have a terrible fear of snakes. I know that not all snakes are poisonous, but just the sight of a snake terrifies me. Yet some people have snakes as pets — but I cannot imagine a host or hostess allowing a pet snake to slither freely among the guests. Well, the fear of dogs and cats is every bit as terrifying to some people as the fear of snakes is to me.

Our animal-loving friends didn't believe us when we brought this up in conversation. They thought it was an exaggeration, but after questioning others whom they thought merely "dislike" animals, they finally admitted that they were acutally afraid of them.

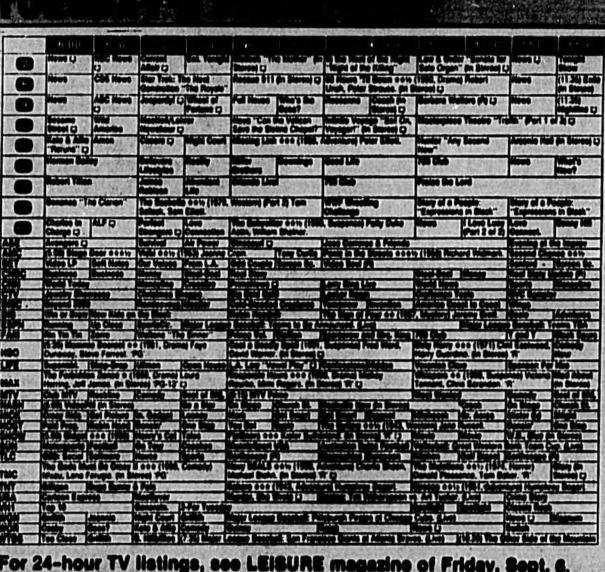

What do you and your readers think?

A new rage

Health food for pets often unnecessary, experts say

By LEANNE WAXMAN Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK - Fido or Fluffy feasting on pulverized chicken feet and fish heads may rankle "health" food enthusiasts, but experts say those and other unsavory-sounding tidbits are just as nutritious and usually cheaper.

The dog and cat food industry - approaching sales of $7 billion a year - has exploded with new offerings that tout more natural ingredients. lower fat and fewer calories.

There's Alpo Lite, "now with garden vegetables," Nature's Course, "free of beef and chicken by-products," and Purina O.N.E., for "optimum nutritional effectiveness." And there's higher priced food to be had in catalogs and at veterinarians' offices and pet shops. More hype than health?

Regulators, veterinary nutritionists and others say most foods are the same nutritionally adequate. Anything more, they say, is often unnecessary and a waste of money, though pet food makers and health-food enthusiasts disagree.

"The very best cat nutrition would be to go out and find a mouse and grind it up. It has the right kind of protein and everything is balanced," says Joan Wastlhuber, chairman of the Health Committee of the Cat Fanciers' Association, a large registry of breeds.

But the people are the ones that buy the food and open the cans and serve it, and it would look gray and ugly," she says.

Assessing the nutritional value of pet food is difficult because regulators have no accepted method for it, says Richard Sellers of the American Association of Feed Control Officials, a group of industry regulators that sanctions nutritional standards and promotes uniform labeling rules.

In addition, most regulators don't have the budgets or the facilities to do feeding tests. depending instead on manufacturers, he says.

That gives me heartburn," says Seilers, who supervises product regulation for Texas and chairs AAFCO's Pet Food Committee. "There's always this element of doubt. If you know what you're doing you can fake that data real easily."

Sellers' group lends its name to labels that meet its definition of "complete and balanced," meaning AAFCO endorses the food as adequate. So what about foods promising higher, or

"optimum," nutrition? They're probably unnecessary, says Dr. Francis Kalifels, a professor of veterinary nutrition at Cornell University. "The grocery store variety of pet foods will essentially do the same job in almost any circumstances."

Pet owners buying specialty foods often don't realize they often should feed pets less of it, Kalifelz says. "The danger with these premium type products is high nutrient density, high caloric density."

So when Fluffy gets fat, her owner turns to low-cal food. There's no way to determine how a dog or cat uses calories, so AAFCO doesn't back calorie claims on labels, Sellers says.

"It's a victous cycle. If you want to make sure you're dog fan't fat, feed it less, but that doesn't capture the marketing imagination." he says.

Dr. David Dzanis, a veterinary nutritionist for the Food and Drug Administration, and Sellers say some specialty foods, like low-fat types, can harm pets.

And consumers sometimes don't realize that 'natural" preservatives shorten foods' shelf life. A key preservative is animal fat. Without it, food spoils faster and can make a four-legged loved one stek.

The most commonly used sources of protein and energy-producing ingredients in dog and cat food are grain, and meat and poultry by-products. Sellers says. That, Dzanis says, can include thoroughly ground and cooked concoctions of beet pulp, wheat middlings, corn meal, fish heads, chicken feet and animal organs.

To counter those and other ingredients that may not sound so great to humans, many pet foods tout "real" beef and chicken and fewer by-products, grain and vegetable-based protein. Grain, by-products and such proteins as soyhean "are perfectly acceptable nutritionally" and cost less, Dzanis says.

Pet food marketers object to the all-are-created-equal claim and defend the ingredients in specialty brands as higher quality and more easily digestible.

Specialty foods are worth nearly $1 billion of the market, says Glenn Williams, manager of marketing communications for The lams Co., which puts out food sold in vets' offices and pet stores.

"As the specialty pet foods have grown and grown, a lot of grocery people are casting an eye in our direction and trying to recoup the lost sales," he says.

Patrick Farrell, a spokesman for the nation's largest pet food maker, Raiston Purina Co., says premium brands "deliver a more effective form of nutrition."

"it's a matter of offering the consumers a variety that they've told us and showed us with the success of these products that they want in the marketplace," he says.

Jan Salimbene, an animal rights activist and owner of Wow-Bow Distributors Ltd., offers one of a growing number of catalogs featuring vegeterian and chemical-free pet foods.

We're bombarded with chemicals every day. If there's a niche that you stay away from them, I'm for staying away from them," Ms. Salimbene lams came out in January with canned cat food free of "flavor enhancers," including onion, garlic and sugar.
