New Sanford site may house school, county offices

By NICK PFEIFAU
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Imagine a building located in Sanford's downtown area or along the lakefront, large enough to contain both the Seminole County government offices and Seminole County school board facilities.

That is exactly what has been transpiring thus far: It has been "imagined."

“This will help bring people into your city.”

— Bill Kercher Jr.

Now, it is being brought into the open, with open discussion.

A meeting is scheduled for Monday to begin consideration of the pros and cons which may be associated with such a facility. School, county and City of Sanford officials are expected to be on hand.

The meeting will be held at Room 3000, on the third floor of the Seminole County Services building on East First Street beginning at 4 p.m.

SANFORD — Despite the best efforts of some employees of the Rivership Grand Romance in Sanford's Monroe Harbor Marina, a 17-year-old boy drowned not far from shore.

William Melvin Stricklin Jr. of Maple Avenue in Sanford was trying to load his boat onto the trailer on the rear of his vehicle when the boat slipped back into the water and began to float away. Sanford police Commander Dennis Whitmire said.

"It appears that he then took off his shirt and his shoes, put his watch and wallet on the trailer and then swam out after the boat," Whitmire said.

He said the boat floated slowly away just ahead of Stricklin's reach. He said he caught up with the boat once, but it slipped away.

Congressman's aide punched

PENSACOLA — A constituent who said he was frustrated over low military-disability benefits was free on bond Thursday after being accused of punching an aide to U.S. Rep. Earl Hutto, D-Pensacola.

The aide, Ben Collins, 64, was treated for minor injuries and released from Sacred Heart Hospital after being punched several times in the face and knocked over a desk at Hutto's district office Wednesday, police said.

Hamp Gould Jr., 52, of Pensacola was arrested at his home later Wednesday and then released upon posting a $2,000 bond.

Gould said he had been going to Hutto's office for 11 years, unsuccessfully seeking help to get increased disability payments for foot, ankle and heart problems he said he suffered while in the Army for nearly eight years until Aug. 11, 1982.

Brothers squabble over hot tub infection

ORLANDO — A Florida man is suing a brother in Wisconsin, seeking damages for a 7-year-old daughter he says contracted a bacterial infection from the brother's hot tub.

A similar federal lawsuit filed in Milwaukee resulted in an insurance settlement of $140,000 for Steve Collar and other members of his family, who live in nearby Apopka. The 7-year-old was not part of the first suit.

According to the negligence suit filed in Orlando federal court earlier this month, the hot tub was so poorly maintained that the child was exposed to pseudomonas, a bacteria that caused respiratory infections, mononucleosis and allergies.

The suit against Dale Collar of Elkhart Lake, Wis., seeks more than $50,000 in damages.

The exposures stemmed from two 1989 visits by members of the Steve Collar family to Dale Collar's home, the suit states.

Steve Collar's attorney, Robert Yingst of Barren Springs, Mich., said laboratory tests that showed pseudomonas in the family's blood led to the February 1993 settlement with American Family Mutual Insurance of Madison, Wis., which had the homeowner's policy for Dale Collar's home.

Coach: Officials had sex with students

WEST PALM BEACH — Authorities are investigating at least three high school officials who allegedly had sex with their students, a state prosecutor said.

Their names were provided by Thomas Lucky, a former William T. Dwyer High School athletic director who pleaded guilty Wednesday to having sex with two teen-age students.

In exchange for Lucky's cooperation, Circuit Judge Mary Lupo sentenced him to 10 years of probation. Lucky, 30, will serve the first 18 months on house arrest.

"My gut impulse was to say nothing," Lucky said after his release from jail. "After spending 31 days in jail ... I decided it wasn't worth putting my family through it."

In a written statement given to investigators last week, Lucky named three school officials he said were involved in similar relationships. Assistant State Attorney Scott Cupp said.

Cupp declined to name the officials, their positions or the schools where they work.

Cupp had not given the names to school administrators immediately, saying no students are in danger — but school administrators will be present Friday when Lucky gives a sworn statement.

"If I was a teacher who had sex with a student in Palm Beach County, I'd be nervous," Cupp said.

Lucky served 17 years in prison if convicted of having sex with the two students, aged 14 and 17 at the time of their affairs with Lucky.

School leaders, parents, Herald talk school progress

By VICKI DeBORNIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Some Sanford school principals, district administrators, parents and representatives of the Sanford Herald met Thursday afternoon to discuss the image of local schools.

Sanford schools have long had a poor reputation in the Seminole County community and the district would like to change that image.

"Certainly we have had problems," Jim Shupe, principal of Lakeview Middle School, said. "We just need to all work together to be sure the right information gets out there."

Shupe said he believes the media has a responsibility to the schools to make thorough investigations of all issues brought to them by parents or other sources before releasing any information to the public.

"We have to be sure the right information gets out there," he said. "The bad thing about the press is that once it's (a story) out there, it's out there."

Shupe believes negative publicity demoralizes a school to the point where progress becomes impossible.

However, district officials did not agree with that assessment.

Willie Holt, executive director of middle schools said the Concerned school leaders met at the Sanford Herald Thursday to discuss the media's role in aiding in school progress. Among those on hand for the discussion were Hamilton Elementary principal Dave Scott (from left); Mamie Bingham, principal of Midway Elementary; Jim Shupe, principal of Lakeview Middle School; Dede Schaffner, communications coordinator for the district; parents Connie Hall and Linda Johnson; and Willie Holt, executive director of middle schools for Seminole County.

"As long as people can ride through the Sanford community and see the environment, the poor housing and the poor people, there will be no progress anywhere, especially the schools."

Helen Stairs, president of Sanford Historic Downtown Waterfront Association and a local realtor, said that there would be no revitalization in Sanford until there was progress in education and in the way the high crime was handled.

"But it all has to go hand in hand," said Linda Johnson, a parent.

Capitol rally: No FAMU law school, no vote

By Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE — Supporters of a Florida A&M University law school must be ready to use their votes to achieve their goals, leaders told a crowd of about 400 at a Capitol rally Thursday.

"You must not vote for a candidate who cannot support the re-establishment of FAMU's law school," the Rev. R.B. Holmes Jr. said.

He urged the crowd to send a clear message to both legislative candidates and gubernatorial hopefuls.

"Jim Smith will come to you, Ander Crenshaw will come to you, Lawton Chiles will come to you and Jeb Bush will come looking for your vote," said Holmes, pastor of the Bethel Missionary Baptist Church.

"We must tell them no law school, no vote," Holmes said.

Florida A&M, the state's only historically black public university, had a law school until the late 1960s when it was moved across town to Florida State University during integration efforts.

Fewer than 1,000 of Florida's 40,000 lawyers are black. The state's 13 million residents include 1.8 million blacks. Only 4 percent of the state's judges are black.

In August, the Board of Regents, which oversees the nine state universities, approved a $4 million plan to provide scholarships to 200 minority students at the state's two public law schools and four private law schools.

A month later, the board approved a plan that said a third public law school would be built in South Florida — but not for at least five years.

3 buses hit; no injuries; 2 arrested

By Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Two kids were arrested Thursday on charges of firing at several school buses and cars, a police detective said.

Two of the three buses hit by gunfire Wednesday were carrying students, but no one was injured.

Two boys, ages 12 and 15, were arrested Thursday afternoon and both gave written statements to authorities, said Michael Herrington, a Jacksonville police detective assigned to the Duval County School Board. Police also recovered a .22-caliber weapon.

The shots were fired as the vehicles crossed a bridge in a wooded area of Jacksonville. Herrington said he didn't know if the youngsters were firing specifically at buses or just vehicles traveling along the road.

"The buses happened to be there and they were hit," he said. "But there were cars that were shot."

Herrington said police assigned to the school system worked very hard on the case because of the seriousness of the case.

"We got involved because buses were involved," he said. Information given to police led to the actual arrests.

The youths, charged with shooting into an occupied vehicle, were taken to a juvenile detention center pending hearings.

Scientists kill fruit larvae with fruit life spray

By Associated Press

ORLANDO — Federal scientists are developing ways to kill the pesky Caribbean fruit fly with harmless coatings now used on fruit to prolong shelf life.

Tests with Florida grapefruit have found that using such mixtures with heat kills the fruit of the larvae deposited under the skin by the fly. Researchers in Miami and Winter Haven will test such treatments on other fruits and vegetables infested by such pests. They hope they can eliminate the use of a chemical that harms the environment.

Japan requires that all of the Florida grapefruit imported into that country be treated for the Caribbean fruit fly.

Florida growers now use a cold storage treatment on the long ocean voyage to Japan, effectively eliminating the contamination. But much of the export grapefruit used to be fumigated by methyl bromide, which the Environmental Protection Agency is phasing out because of its threat to the ozone layer.

Other fruits, vegetables and ornamental plants are still treated with methyl bromide, however.

"One of our objectives is to develop a coating for killing insects first, and then also use it to preserve the shelf life of commodities," said Guy J. Hallman, entomologist with the U.S. Agriculture Department's Subtropical Horticulture Research Station in Miami.

Some of the fruits and vegetables currently being fumigated with methyl bromide for fruit flies and other pests around the country are blueberries, cherries, avocados, sweet potatoes and limes.

Some of these could be treated with a coating invented at the USDA research station in Winter Haven by chemist Myrna Nisperos-Carriedo. The coating, known as Nature Seal, was used in the grapefruit experiments by Hallman.

Together with heat, Nature Seal killed all of the Caribbean fruit fly larvae.

"Fruit coatings probably reduce oxygen levels and increase carbon dioxide and possibly other chemicals antagonistic to larvae inside fruit," Hallman said.

Surface pests also are killed, probably because their feeding and breathing holes are plugged up, he said.

Hallman is combining coatings with other treatments such as cold storage, irradiation and insecticides and is testing them on guavas, carambolas and mangoes, all grown in South Florida.

Any fumigation with methyl bromide will be banned by the EPA by the year 2000.

The number was found to be from a stolen card. An investigation is continuing.

Students promote random acts of senseless kindness'

By NANCY MAYER
Associated Press Writer

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. — "Random acts of senseless kindness" are breaking out all over since a college professor turned frustration into a class assignment.

Chuck Wall, human relations instructor at Bakersfield College, was listening to television when the phrase "another random act of senseless violence" got stuck in his mind like a bad melody.

Inspiration struck. The result was an essay assignment and a bumper sticker: "Today, I will commit one random act of senseless KINDNESS... Will you?"

Shane Gautreaux, 20, bought 30 blankets at the Salvation

Army and brought them to homeless people who gather under a bridge.

"After people hear that, they think, 'God, that didn't take a lot of time. It didn't take a lot of money, and if more people did something like that, just think what a nicer place the world would be,'" Gautreaux said.

Jessica Fredericksen, 41, pulled out of a parking space she had just pulled into, waving to a motorist who appeared frantically late for an appointment. Then, Fredericksen parked in the only other available space about a half-mile away.

Todd Madison, 19, encountered a homeless father and son at a convenience store and bought them the sodas and chips they wanted.

Eat Moon Pies, wade in grits at first BubbaFest

By The Associated Press

GREER, S.C. — Got a hankering for barbecue or just some down-home fun? Head down to the Squeeze Please Restaurant and Fishing Lake for BubbaFest '93.

The inaugural festival has everything a budding Bubba might desire: country music, sports, wading pools full of grits, a Moon Pie toas and the crowning of the royal Bubba and Bubbette.

"A Bubba is just a hard-working, family, patriotic type of guy who's very unpretentious and loves to have a good time," organizer Debbie Hoag said.

Planners hope Saturday's celebration will draw as many as 15,000 visitors and put the small community of Sugar Tit on the map.

The community of several hundred people near Greer grew around a crossroads in the northwestern part of the state but has never been incorporated. It got its name from an old-time pacifier, a bit of sugar wrapped in cheesecloth that mothers gave babies to calm them. Men would gather at the general store and their wives joked there must be "sugar tits" down there, organizer Toby Goodlett said.

The festival has grabbed some big-time attention: Pepsi and Wal-Mart are among its sponsors, and the sports cable channel ESPN said it would send a crew, Goodlett said.

Three teens arrested in armed robbery of Casselberry couple

By The Associated Press

TAMPA — Three juveniles were arrested Thursday and accused of robbing a couple at gunpoint at Busch Gardens and later robbing 14 people at a restaurant.

"One made a statement they went to Busch Gardens to start with because they were bored," said Detective Gene Strickland.

Charged in the two armed robberies two weeks apart were Ian Bernado Taylor, 17, and two 15-year-old youths, said Tampa police spokesman Steve Cole.

James and Charity Ann Golden of Casselberry were touring an aviary exhibit at the African theme park Oct. 10 when three bandits stole their wallet and purse. As the youths fled, one fired three shots at a security guard. He was not injured.

Authorities said the juveniles decided to bring a handgun to the wildlife and amusement park, and scaled the fence to ride the rides free.

On Oct. 24, four people armed with rifles and handguns and wearing Halloween masks stuck up an International House of Pancakes restaurant with 14 patrons.

Cole said later that night they found abandoned in a park a vehicle which had been stolen from a mall and used in the IHOP robbery.

The fourth person was iden-ified as Elston Ashton Nisbett, 23, an ex-IHOP dishwasher who had drawn a floor plan for the robbery. The sketch was recovered in his apartment, police said. He was not implicated in the Busch Gardens robbery.

Cole said investigators obtained fingerprints from the crime scene and recovered a handgun and the Halloween masks. "All of the suspects were interviewed and implicated themselves in the cases," he said.

Have a happy, safe Hallowe'en

It may not be a coincidence. October not only is the month for Hallowe'en, it is also Crime Prevention Month.

Hopefully, this weekend's trick or treaters will be out in smaller numbers than before. With the dangers posed by the criminal element walking our streets these days, parents should be extra concerned about what their little witches and goblins do.

If the house-to-house sojourn is something which cannot be avoided, safety should be practiced. One adult should accompany the children, and only in your own neighborhood. Another adult should remain at home to greet trick or treaters.

Outdoor lighting at the home is also recommended. It not only identifies a home where goodies are available, it also helps in preventing accidents and even thefts.

Dogs should be kept under control. But at houses where a watch dog is normal protection, restricting the animal will require additional precautions by home owners.

A party under adult supervision and control is the most recommended Hallowe'en function for children as well as adults.

Care should also be exercised regarding costumes. A face mask which covers the entire face is not recommended for safety purposes. Nor is a costume which doesn't contain some type of illumination. A black witch's costume is difficult to see from passing vehicles.

In years gone by, Hallowe'en was a great night for the youngsters. They would go door-to-door gathering candy, cookies and other delicious treats, and spend time trying to determine which friends may be in that odd costume.

Today, we have crime on our streets and in our neighborhoods. In some areas, children are hardly safe in broad daylight much less at night.

There are also dangers in some of the items which are occasionally handed out to unsuspecting children such as catables containing drugs or sharp objects.

The best move would be to ban all of these Hallowe'en activities. It has become a tradition however, and would be missed if it were not held.

On the other hand, with the safety problems the holiday is causing for our children, Hallowe'en may eventually disappear on its own accord.

Have a happy Hallowe'en. But let us see to it that it's safe for everyone.

Consider interchange

Not wishing to rain on anyone's parade, but concerning your editorial about the "46-A" interchange, a few facts ought to be considered.

Lake Mary Boulevard exchange is no more than one mile south of 46-A. The proposed interchange for the expressway is not more than one mile north of 46-A. The Highway 46 interchange is no more than one mile north of the proposed expressway interchange. In my opinion, the expressway will stop at Highway 17-92 and not be extended for several years due to funding problems, but, you never can tell.

So, I guess you favor FOUR major interchanges in a FOUR mile stretch of Interstate. Is that right? God help us all! Now I begin to wonder why I voted for Mica and McLain.

Incapacitate criminals, or politicians

Can America do anything serious about crime? Judging from the most heralded aspects of a new crime bill moving through Congress, based on what President Clinton and Attorney General Reno are promoting, the answer, alas, is No. But beneath the blather — pushed by the politics of fear — something is stirring, in both parties, that could help. It is "incapacitation." Remember this: A criminal in prison cannot shoot your sister.

It's not that the high-profile remedies are bad, but minimalist. Consider:

- "Brady Bill" gun-control legislation mandates a five-day waiting period for new gun sales — and still leaves 200 million weapons in circulation.

- Habeas corpus deals with new procedures for a limited number of Death Row appeals — for convicts who will remain incarcerated even if they are not executed.

- The new list of crimes subject to the death penalty deal with quite unusual federal situations, like "fatal violence against maritime platforms."

- "Boot camps" deal typically with young men who have not committed serious violent offenses.

- If the 50,000 more cops in "community policing" work out, and the new patrolmen actually arrest more criminals, where will they be put? Most states have court-defined "overcrowded" prisons.

But the idea of "regional prisons" could relieve the prison logjam, which is at the root of America's flawed criminal justice system. It would lead to greater incapacitation of hardened criminals. Putting very bad guys in prison stops them from committing very bad crimes outside. Such, at least, is the belief of Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., who has made the regional prison concept the centerpiece of a Republican "punishment strategy."

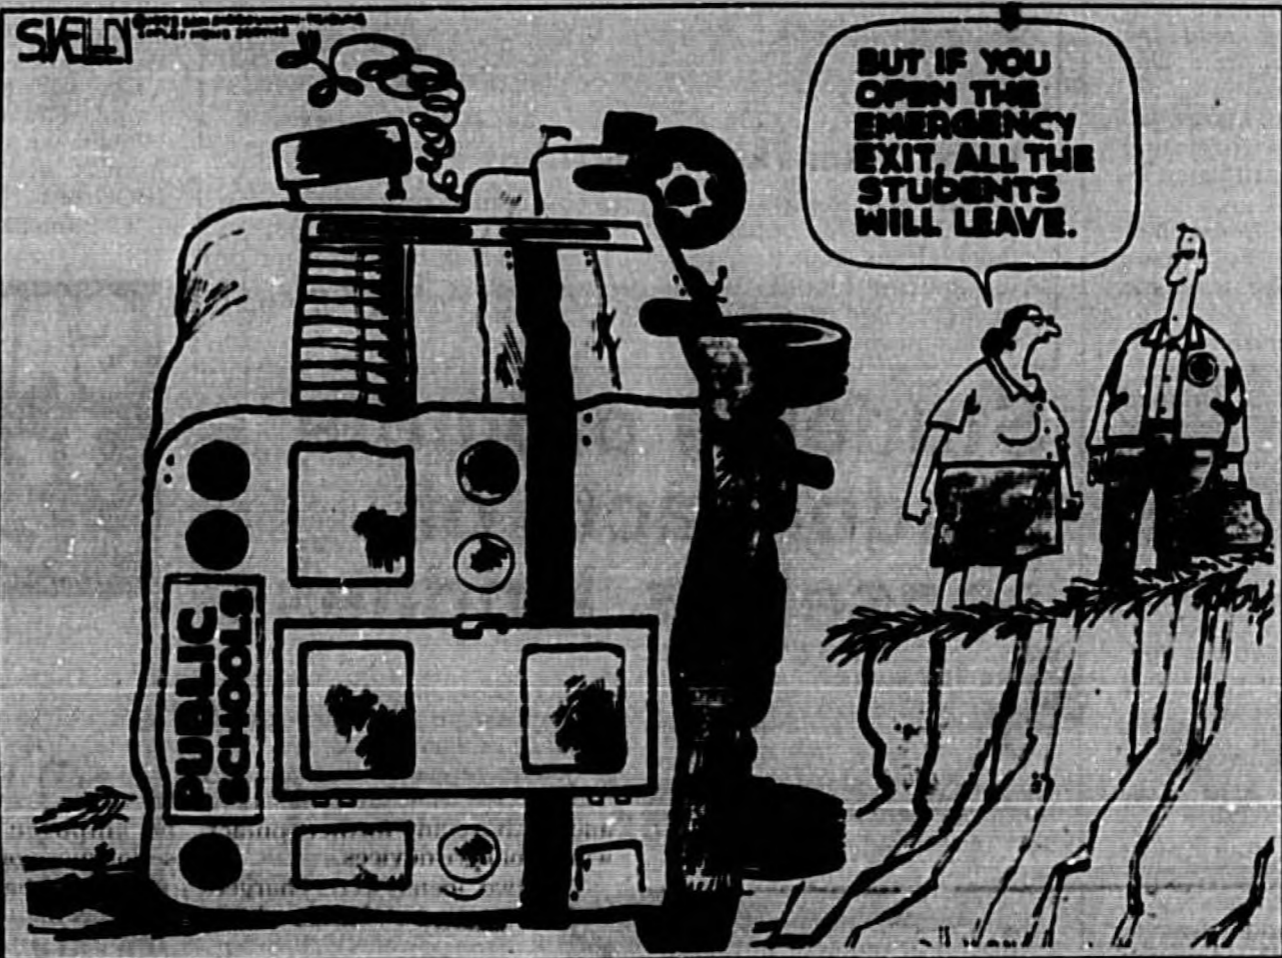

Can America do anything serious about crime?

Interestingly, McCollum's proposal has a Democratic big-government flavor. It may even tend to "federalize" state prisons, where most violent prisoners are incarcerated.

It works this way: The federal government would give $3 billion to states over three years on a 50-50 matching formula, to expand the supply of prison space. Such additional space could come from new prison construction, rehabilitation of existing facilities, or even by conversion of military bases. To get federal money, states would have to reform current procedures in a variety of ways, including mandatory minimum sentences for second-time violent-crime convictions, and a mandate to keep violent criminals in prison for at least 85 percent of their sentences. (The current rate is less than 50 percent.)

The need for more prison space is clear. About 75 percent of convicted criminals now under correctional control are not behind bars. Most are on probation, some on parole. Almost half get re-arrested within three years, after committing many new crimes.

Thus, there is hope for reform. Never underestimate the power of legislators fearing political incapacitation.

Poor planning led to U.S. deaths

WASHINGTON — Poor planning, poor intelligence, poor timing, poor training and just plain bad luck led to the deaths of 17 U.S. Army rangers and the wounding of 77 others in a bloody 16-hour firefight on the streets of Mogadishu. These are the preliminary findings of a Pentagon team sent to Somalia to assess the battle.

To review again what happened: On Sunday, Oct. 3, U.N. intelligence operatives reported that a meeting of high-level aides of warlord Mohammed Farrah Aidid would take place in a home near the Olympic Hotel, deep in an Aidid-controlled area of southern Mogadishu.

A quick search-and-seize operation was mounted: At about 3 p.m. some 80 Army rangers dropped onto the hotel site from helicopters and captured about 19 Somalis without taking any casualties. They and their prisoners then retreated to buildings across the street to wait for removal by ground vehicles, which were on the way.

As the ground vehicles reached the location, the rangers found themselves pinned down by very heavy fire from surrounding buildings. Three Black Hawk helicopters were sent in, but two were shot down and the third badly damaged. The rangers were left trying to rescue the crews of the downed helicopters.

The rangers radioed for help. At around 4:50 p.m. a relief column of U.S. quick-reaction troops left their airport staging area to attempt a rescue. They got less than a third of the way to the Olympic Hotel site when they too were turned back by very heavy fire. It was not until nearly midnight that another relief column of U.S., Malay, United Arab Emirate and Pakistani soldiers broke through: It was not until after 3 a.m. that the rangers were finally able to get out.

The initial report lays the blame on poor planning and poor intelligence.

There seems general agreement now that the United States — and the U.N. — badly underestimated the number of fighters Aidid commands and how well they are armed. The United States had believed that, altogether, Aidid commands about 800 men outfitted only with small arms.

Now the estimate has been doubled, and this still might be low. It is also now recognized that Aidid's forces have much heavier weapons than originally thought, including heavy machine guns, mortars with a 3-mile range, a plentiful supply of rocket-propelled grenades, which have enough explosive power to bring down a helicopter or to stop an unarmored Bradley Fighting Vehicle, and even several Soviet-made, jeep-mounted, anti-aircraft guns. It was one of these that brought down one of the Black Hawks.

It is believed that, at the height of the firefight, the 120 Army rangers were outnumbered by at least 4-to-1, and that Aidid's forces were at least as well-armed as the lightly equipped rangers.

The review group said that the surprise of the battle was that "only" 15 rangers died. Given Aidid's superior forces and superior tactical positioning, "the loss of U.S. life could very well have been much greater."

The report criticizes the planning done by U.S. Maj. Gen. Thomas Montgomery and his staff. Montgomery is the deputy U.N. commander in Somalia, and commander of U.S. forces there.

Montgomery is criticized for sending the rangers off on the mission without any contingency planing to get them out in case they became pinned down. Further, in sending in the Black Hawk helicopters, Montgomery ignored intelligence that suggested that Aidid's forces had means to bring them down.

Also, the U.S. command is being faulted for poorly training and equipping its quick-reaction forces for the kind of street-to-street urban warfare they are facing.

However, it should be noted that in September, after a somewhat similar street firefight, Montgomery requested heavy armor, including M-1A1 tanks and armored fighting vehicles. The request was denied by Defense Secretary Les Aspin on the advice of the National Security Council, which did not want to be seen as escalating the U.S. commitment in Somalia.

Aspin now concedes the refusal to send armor was an error in judgment, and President Clinton has ordered a heavily equipped, mechanized infantry company to the scene. Also, Brig. Gen. Carl Ernst, an experienced combat officer, is being sent to take over direct command of U.S. fighting units in Mogadishu. He will report to Montgomery.

The review also found extreme fault with the U.N. command structure. When the initial relief effort failed, Montgomery went to Turkish Gen. Cevik Bir, overall commander of U.N. forces, for help. But Bir could not order troops into the fight, and Montgomery's staff had to spend hours pleading with individual Pakistani and Malaysian commanders, who had armored vehicles, to deploy their forces. When they finally did, the relief effort was disorganized and took hours to succeed.

Poor planning, poor intelligence, poor timing, poor training and just plain bad luck led to the deaths.

Will governor make an impact

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — It's a wonder Pete Wilson is still smiling.

Since taking office in January 1991, the embattled Republican governor of California has watched his state suffer two large earthquakes, the Oakland fires, chemical and sewage spills, flooding, a drought and the Los Angeles riots. Some parts of the state even suffered an infestation of whiteflies and locusts.

"We don't call them disasters," quipped Wilson's spokesman Dan Schnur. "We call them plagues. We've had eight plagues now, just two behind Egypt. So far, we've missed frogs and boils."

Tragically for Wilson, California's natural disasters may be the least of his problems. As the governor of America's most populous state, which by itself ranks as the world's seventh-largest economy, Wilson is presiding over the worst economic times seen here since the Great Depression: More than 800,000 jobs lost in the last three years; one out of 10 Californians out of work; skyrocketing entitlement programs; a population that continues to grow by the size of Delaware each year.

Yet Wilson was smiling when our associate Dale Van Atta visited him in his office recently. Despite a tendency to tick off all the problems he has to deal with, not the least of which is projected deficits each year in the billions of dollars, he doesn't seem overburdened. He shrugs, even tells a joke or two with a wry, Midwestern humor.

This was not the so-called "Robopoi" of California we were expecting, judging from the local press. He's been portrayed as heartless, soulless, visionless; a sort of cross between George Bush and Michael Dukakis. He's nothing like advertised. His demeanor shows no visible scars from his pitched battles with the Democratically controlled California legislature and its dynamic speaker, Willie Brown. Last year, for 84 days, Wilson and Brown had a budget stare-down. In the end, Brown blinked. Although Wilson won, it was a brief victory.

His problems notwithstanding, the workaholic Wilson loves his job. It's the one he always wanted. "I've been a chief executive twice and a legislator twice," he explains. "What you do as chief executive has almost instant impact. What you do as a legislator is likely to have an impact in a very different way, and a very different time frame. You may not have a test of your legislation, either as to its efficacy or to its constitutionality, for two years or 10 years."

If Wilson seeks instant impact, he has plenty of places to choose. The state is broke, and citizens here are in a near-panic over illegal immigration. California is home to about 40 percent of America's undocumented aliens, and state agencies estimate it cost $3 billion last year just to educate the children of illegal immigrants.

Or, he could start with the tax system. California is hamstringing by voter initiatives that virtually block any attempts to raise property taxes, yet mandate that a specific, and growing, amount of money be spent on public education each year.

A pro-business conservative who prefers lower taxes and less spending, Wilson has found himself confronting fiscal chaos each year in office. His problems are compounded by a growing image here and abroad that California has an unfriendly business climate, and crime and taxes have taken their toll on the economy. Wilson will try to remedy that with a lengthy trade mission to the Far East later this fall.

It's a wonder Pete Wilson is still smiling.

Lake Mary students stay healthy and help school

By SARABECCA ROSSER
Herald Columnist

Lake Mary Elementary's week of Dolphin Games have reached a very successful conclusion. "Most students accomplished all 30 obstacles," said Dividend volunteer mom, Terri Uzel. Another Dividend volunteer mom, Sandy Lent said that "the coaches, Fiance and Covell have done a great job organizing the obstacles despite the daily changes with construction going on." All volunteer moms present fully agreed.

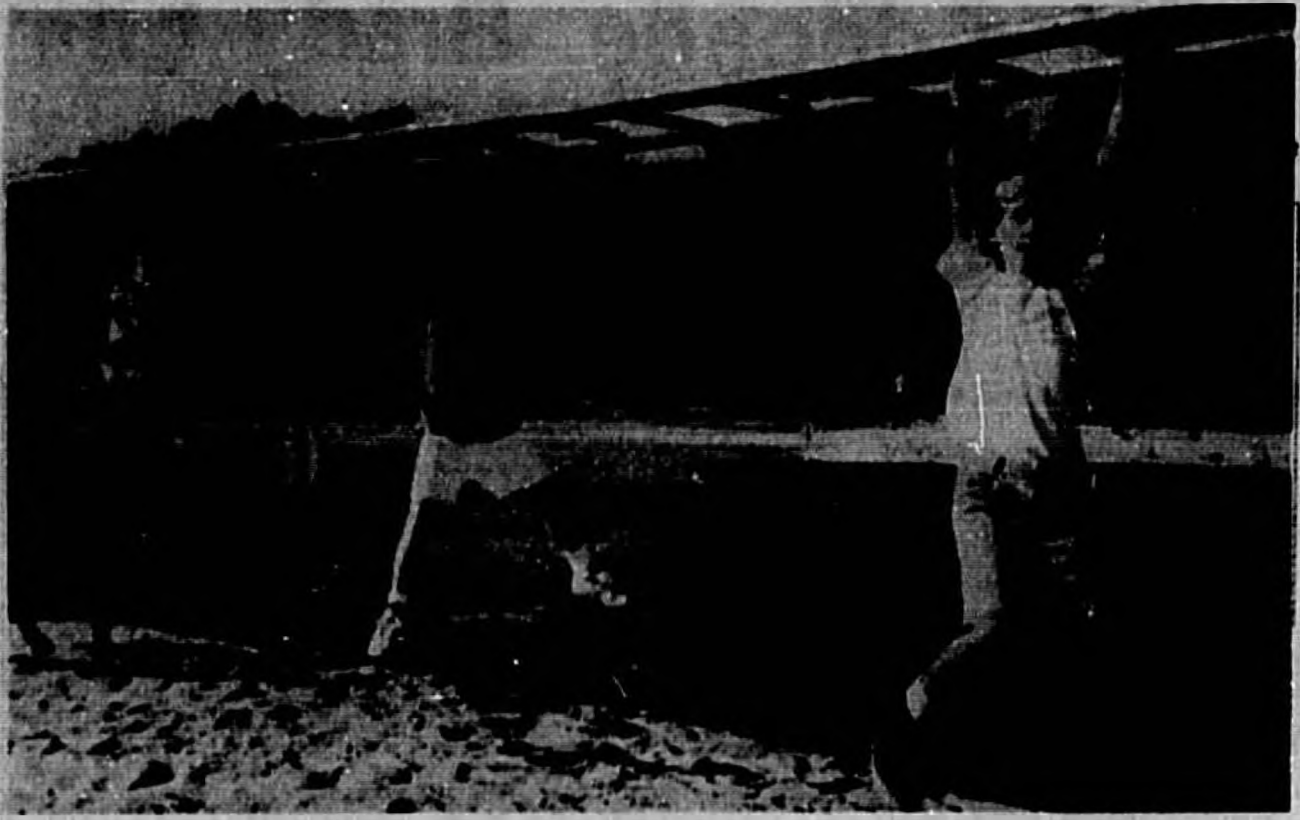

Coach Fiance and Covell indicated that these are obstacles designed to keep students healthy. "The obstacles test their agility, strength, balance, coordination, gives them exercise and helps their cardiovascular system," Covell said. The "challenges are well-rounded so that each child can do well within their own limitations. Each child can be successful in each challenge and the best part about it is they are having fun doing them. Everything they are doing during the Dolphin Games challenge-wise has been covered during their regular PE sessions," claimed Covell.

a bit muddy one day. Coach Fiance stated that this was not designed as a race, but as a challenge.

Previously called the "Great Obstacle Challenge," the games were held during the PE classes during the week of Oct. 25 through Oct. 28. The students had a series of 15 fitness challenges (such as jumping jacks, pull-ups, monkey bars, an agility run, etc.) which they may attempt. They were able to complete the course twice for a maximum of 30 events. Each student had an envelope to record pledges. The pledges must be in the school by the deadline of Friday, Nov. 5. Checks can be made out to Lake Mary Elementary PTA.

The Dolphin Games were run by the volunteers of the Lake Mary Elementary and the PTA with help from Coach Fiance and Coach Covell. All proceeds remain at the school to fund school enhancements. There was no management fees to drain the students hard-earned proceeds away from the school. Support for the students during this important fund-raiser is greatly appreciated.

Student rewards were: all students who participated receive a Dolphin Games ribbon; those students who raised $15 receive a bronze "medal"; those students who raise $25 receive a silver "medal" and those students who raised $35 will receive a gold "medal" and those students who raise $50 or more will receive a Dolphin "medal." Finally, the three students who raise the most amount of money will each receive one of three grand prizes.

American group asks for funds to build schools in Vietnam

By KIM I. MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — There is a desperate need for new schools in Vietnam, where the literacy rate has been dropping, according to an organization that hopes to build several schools to help heal wounds left by the Vietnam War.

"Those who want to heal the nation, those who want us to sit together — let us together build a living memorial," said Kieu Chihh, co-chair of the Vietnamese Memorial Association and an actress who stars in the movie "The Joy Luck Club."

Chihh, a native Vietnamese, was joined at a news conference Thursday by several well-known Vietnam veterans who also serve on the association's board, including former hostage Terry Anderson and Pulitzer Prize-winning autobiographer Lewis B. Puller.

The association is hoping to raise $100,000 by next spring to start building an elementary school in Quang Tri Province, in what was once the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam. One 12-room school, including desks, chairs and a small library, can be built for about $90,000, according to John Wheeler, president of the association.

However, adding in other costs such as architectural plans and travel brings the total to almost $200,000, he said.

"There is a desperate need for new schools," Wheeler said, noting that none of the schools damaged or destroyed during the war some 20 years ago have been replaced. Vietnam's literacy rate was once 80 percent but has declined since the war, he said.

Wheeler said the association hopes it can build more schools in Vietnam but declined to specify how many or over what time period. The group also wants to build a monument to Vietnam's 2 million war dead in that country.

Board members voiced confidence that they would be able to achieve their goals, despite the trade embargo the United States imposed on Vietnam in 1975. "There is almost no detail of this pilot project that hasn't got to be worked out in negotiations," said board member Patricia Derian, former assistant secretary of state for human rights. "We don't anticipate any immovable roadblock."

The Clinton administration has told Vietnam it must do more to help resolve the 2,248 outstanding cases of MIAs before it will fully lift the embargo and normalize relations.

Anderson, former chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press who was held hostage in Lebanon for 8 1/2 years, emphasized that the effort was not political: "This is about families and children. It has nothing to do with the state of relations between America and Vietnam. It is not an apology."

tification in it, so she called us immediately."

The man reportedly drove off in his car. "We believe he drove around for a short while, then returned to another trailer nearby, where he lived," Baker said. "That was where our officers found him."

Baker said his officers reported finding the suspect "downing pills in a large number," when they apprehended him.

"He was in such a bad condition that he required hospitalization, and as of 9 a.m. he was still at South Seminole Hospital, under guard."

Baker said he was waiting for some medical reports, and contacting the State Attorney's office to determine the next step.

"We haven't officially charged the man yet," Baker said, "but depending on what we find out later today, we may call the sheriff's office and ask them to take over custody while he's still in the hospital. At that time, we will probably issue charges against him."

Baker said the victim indicated to police that the man had a gun in his possession. "We've checked the trailer and surrounding area twice," Baker said, "and so far we haven't found any weapon, but the entire situation is still under investigation and more searches are being conducted."

Baker expects charges may be officially made and the identity of the man revealed by late today.

Drowning

It is believed that Stricklin just became exhausted and that he slipped under the water and drowned.

Steve Barnes, the ship's photographer aboard the Grand Romance, had seen Stricklin swimming after his boat, but gave it little thought.

"It wasn't that far out so I figured he was OK. It was, maybe, 20 feet out," he said.

He said that after boarding the ship he heard the waitresses calling out that someone was drowning. He and Jammie Brown, who works in the ship's kitchen, rushed to throw Stricklin a line, he said.

"We threw him a ring and a rope, but he was real tired, we could tell," he said.

Barnes and Brown jumped into the water, but Stricklin had already gone under, he said.

"We held on to our rings with one arm and kinda fished around for him with the other, but we couldn't find him," he said. "We held on and did all we could to find him."

He said the Grand Romance crew had been discussing the presence of some very large alligators in the harbor only hours before, but he and Brown didn't think about the reptiles until they gave up their search and were out of the water.

"All we thought about was getting that guy out of there," he said.

Whitmire said a police officer arrived on the scene within two minutes of getting the call, the fire department arrive a minute later.

But, he said, it was too late.

Whitmire said he believed Stricklin had been under water for nearly 13 minutes when he was recovered and rescue workers were unable to revive him.

During last week's Sanford City Commission work session, a proposal was made regarding the joint facilities, by Bill Kercher, Jr., president of Glatting, Jackson Kercher Anglin Lopez Rinehart, in Orlando.

"The firm deals with community development in the Orlando area."

"Kercher wrote an article which was published in the Florida Planning Magazine suggesting municipalities consider such a joint facility," said Sanfre Director of Planning and Development Jay Marder. "Although it wasn't directly aimed at Sanford, we felt his proposals had merit, and we asked him to meet with the city, and possibly other organizations, and discuss the concept."

Centering specifically on Sanford during the work session, Kercher commented on the value such a joint facility would have on the city. "With the location of this facility in Sanford," he said, "it will help build the community. You need to create a positive impact, especially in the downtown area, and this will help bring people into your city."

Members of the city commission asked many questions of Kercher. He was not able to immediately answer many of them.

Commissioner Whitey Eckstein asked "Where would you propose something like this be built?" Kercher said he had no specific area in mind, but suggested somewhere along the lakefront may be acceptable.

Commissioner A.A. McClanahan questioned, "Do we know if the School Board is interested in staying in Sanford? Is the county interested in keeping its facilities in Sanford? I've heard suggestions that one or both may consider moving to a more central area in the county."

Kercher said he had not made the presentation to other government bodies, but felt they would be in agreement to stay in the city.

"What would be the city's role in all of this?" Eckstein asked.

Kercher said that while it would be a joint venture between the county and school board, "The city would have to serve as the ultimate force, and probably be initially responsible for making the initial recommendation, and suggestions for a location."

Kircher said another area which might be considered is the land north of the present County Annex, at the eastern end of First Street. "You could expand that clear to the lakefront and have plenty of space," he suggested.

Mayor Bettye Smith commented that she didn't know of anyone who was dead set against the proposal, but felt more discussion with the various entities involved might be in the best interests.

School board member Larry Strickler and Facilities Director Diane Kramer were on hand to listen to Kercher's presentation. Seminole County Commissioner Larry Furlong was expected, but was unable to be on hand.

"I think it is definitely something to be considered," Strickler said yesterday. "I believe it's a concept which would be very beneficial not only to the city, but to all of the entities involved."

judication of delinquency of Lovasz. With his no contest plea to the charge, if he successfully completes the sentence, Lovasz will not have a criminal record.

In addition, the judge said Lovasz must graduate from high school, write an essay on the danger of destructive devices and not have any further contact with explosive devices.

The two teens were charged with possessing a bomb which exploded in the high school restroom when band director Donald Schmaus picked up a string on the floor.

Lovasz was also charged with a second count of possession of an explosive device which he sold to another student.

Assistant state attorney Carol Wilder requested adult sanctions be imposed because of the seriousness of the event and the possibility that existed for bodily harm. Schmaus was shaken but uninjured by the explosion April 2.

However, Judge Dickey imposed juvenile sanctions, noting the defendant has never been in trouble before and is a good student.

"He is a stranger to HRS, if you will," the judge added, noting that Health and Rehabilitative Services authorities had no contact with the youth prior to the court case.

Boykins was sentenced for manslaughter and shooting into a vehicle in the death Sept. 2, 1982 of Guy Taylor.

Assistant state attorney Carol Wilder said the motivation for the shooting is unclear, perhaps it was an act of random violence.

A witness said Boykins spoke to Taylor briefly and as Taylor pulled away in his car, Boykins shot him. Boykins was 15 at the time of the shooting. Initially, police speculated the incident might have been drug related.

Boykins also pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor battery in another case and was sentenced to 30 days in jail and given credit for time he has already served.

As special conditions of his probation, Judge Alan A. Dickey said Boykins must pay supervision costs, take vocational and aptitude tests, complete a Life Skills program and remain drug free.

Boykins was originally indicted for first degree murder, but was sentenced for manslaughter and shooting into a vehicle under a negotiated plea agreement between the prosecutor and defense attorney.

Dickey admonished the youth, who has an extensive record, that if he violates probation, he could be sentenced to 30 years in jail on the two charges.

After a decade, Brady bill moving through Congress

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — After a nearly a decade of campaigning by gun-control advocates, a proposed law imposing a five-day waiting period before the purchase of a handgun is moving through Congress.

Disentangled from a catchall crime bill that could have dragged it down, the so-called Brady bill was expected to win easy passage today from the Democrat-controlled House Judiciary subcommittee on crime.

House sponsors predicted that with Senate agreement the Brady bill will quickly find its way to President Clinton's desk. He has said repeatedly he is eager to sign it.

In votes Thursday, the full House Judiciary Committee approved Clinton's plan to put up to 50,000 more police on the streets.

And it endorsed other, separate crime prevention bills, including measures to help prisons provide drug treatment for inmates and to encourage the establishment of boot camps and other alternative forms of punishment for young first offenders.

All but one Republican joined Democrats in the 34-1 vote sending the bills to the House floor, but GOP members complained bitterly that the committee's Democratic leader scrapped the overall crime bill expanding the death penalty and limiting death row appeals.

Committee Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, said he acted to ensure that some crime prevention legislation would be adopted before Congress goes home for the year.

The failure of Congress to approve an omnibus crime bill last year also killed the Brady bill, which was part of it.

Democrats insisted that the only way to get essential crime bills on Clinton's desk before Congress leaves town was to drop controversial issues such as more death penalty laws and limits on death-row inmates' appeals.

"The number one thing this method will imply is that once and for all, Brady will be on the president's desk before we leave Nov. 22," said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., chairman of the committee's crime panel.

He urged Republicans to "avoid the gridlock" that tied up past omnibus crime bills.

Brooks said subcommittees would pursue the death penalty and death row bills and closely examine them.

"But I am not willing to see important, innovative crime prevention programs like cops on the beat be deferred at a time when the American public is clamoring for us to provide more protection against violent acts," Brooks said.

The Brady bill is named for James Brady, the former presidential press secretary who was severely wounded in the 1981 assassination attempt on President Reagan.

As agreed to during the Senate-House conference in the last Congress, the bill calls for a five-business day waiting period during which a background check would be conducted on people wanting to buy handguns.

Health plan: wealth of detail

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Employees whose health insurance premiums are deducted from their salaries before their income tax is figured would see that break disappear under President Clinton's health reform plan.

Affluent retirees — those with annual incomes at or near six figures — would have their monthly Medicare Part B premiums tripled.

And the price of those little 1.2-ounce tins of smokeless tobacco would jump by almost $1.

Those are some of the details emerging from the fine print of the president's 1,342-page Health Security Act.

Lobbyists, lawmakers and journalists are still poring over their copies of the 5-pound health-reform bill, searching for clues on how it would affect Americans from all walks of life.

Skeptical members of Congress already are finding things to worry about in the plan. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said Thursday that as many as 100 million Americans would have to pay higher premiums if the plan is enacted.

But administration officials replied that in the long run nearly 70 percent of Americans would pay less or the same as now, assuming the Clinton plan would hold down increases in overall health costs. In the short term, higher premiums would range between $100 and $500 a year for most people. Health and Human Services Secretary Donna Shalala said.

Shalala also said the revamped Clinton plan doesn't include "global budgets" that would put a cap on health spending, but instead relies on premium caps to keep spending in check.

Welfare recipients on Medicaid, who originally would have had to pay $10 to see a doctor and $5 for a prescription, fared better under the revised Clinton plan. Their copayments would be slashed to $2 and $1, respectively.

Several million employees would no longer be able to pay for health premiums with pre-tax dollars. The Clinton plan would remove health benefits from "cafeteria" benefit plans starting in 1997.

Big companies with cafeteria plans offer workers a menu of benefits from which they can choose, from health coverage to life insurance to child care.

Ken Feltman, executive director of the Employers Council on Flexible Compensation, predicted, "Since medical benefits are the cornerstone and normally the most expensive benefit, many employers would just close down their cafeteria plan."

Currently, these plans save a worker in the 15 percent income tax bracket $150 for each $1,000 taken from his or her salary to pay for health benefits; someone in the 28 percent bracket saves $280.

Workers could be taxed on the value of any health benefits their employers provided over and above the comprehensive benefit package guaranteed all Americans.

Total estimated number of office visits in thousands, by reason for visit, 1990, projected to 2000; and percent change, 1990-2000

Back pain	12,413	13,772	11.0%
Hypertension	9,716	10,630	9.4%

Allergy	4,393	4,264	-3.0%
Skin rash	11,068	10,640	-3.9%

Between 1990 and 2000, the biggest increase in office visits to physicians is likely to occur among those complaining of depression and back pain.

and people who like to chew tobacco would all have to ante up for Clinton's health reforms.

The bill includes not only a 75-cent increase in the current 24-cent federal excise tax on each pack of cigarettes, but also sharply higher levies on other forms of tobacco starting Oct. 1, 1994.

The tax on a 1.2-ounce tin of smokeless tobacco would jump 35-fold to 96 cents.

Small cigars, now taxed at one-tenth of a penny, would be hit with a 3.9-cent levy.

Big, fancy cigars — the kind Clinton himself likes to chew on but not light up — would be taxed at up to 12.4 cents apiece.

All the nation's elderly would pay $11 more a month for Medicare's new drug benefits that start in 1996. The elderly well-to-do would pay even more.

Seniors with modified adjusted gross incomes above $90,000 for an individual and $115,000 for couples would have their $36.60-a-month Medicare premiums tripled. They would be paying 75 percent of the cost of their so-called Part B benefits, which cover doctor bills and out-of-pocket expenses; others would pay only 25 percent.

The bill would bar doctors from charging Medicare patients more than an allowable amount for their services. Doctors who refuse to accept Medicare's fee schedule now can charge elderly patients 15 percent more.

Rival gangs lay down arms, pick up firefighting tools

By JEFF BARNARD
Associated Press Writer

SIERRA MADRE, Calif. — On the steep, chaparral-dotted slopes of the San Gabriel Mountains, the blue of the Crips and the red of the Bloods were joined in a painted band on the tools of a unique team of firefighters.

"It shows our bond of unity," Morris White said of the two stripes on the handle of his tool, a combination rake and hoe. "Out here, we are all brothers."

The 24-year-old member of the Four-Tray Crips took his place in the hot dust Thursday beside members of the rival Bloods and other gangs to dig a 2-foot-deep fire line against a storm of flames that gutted nearly 700 homes and burned across 187,000 acres.

Usually, red and blue mark the differences between the gangs and fighting can erupt if the wrong color is flashed at a rival member.

Gang members, former members and their neighbors form a U.S. Forest Service crew called the South Central Panthers, named after the Los Angeles neighborhood ravaged by rioting in 1992.

Formed in June to bring racial diversity to the Forest Service and opportunity to the inner city, the crew of about 20 has fought fires all over Southern California, said Mark Glos, an Angeles National Forest supervisor.

When fire inched down the slopes Thursday over the route of the Rose Festival Parade in Pasadena, the Panthers were dispatched to stop it before it reached the homes below.

In the Forest Service's fireproof yellow shirts, green pants, hardhats and high leather boots, the Panthers lined up to get their tools.

Two flashed gang hand symbols and banged their fists against the other's. Others raised their fist in acknowledgment of the call for unity before the crew filed up the Little Santa Anita Canyon to fight the fire.

"All right, South Central No. 1, baby," yelled Jeffrey Williams, 26, a former member of the Black Peestone Bloods.

Williams was arrested for looting on the first day of the riots that erupted in South Central after four white policemen were acquitted on most state charges in the beating of black motorist Rodney King.

He spent 30 days in jail, though he denies stealing anything. Resolved to change his life in some way, he joined the Panthers.

"Now a lot of young brothers ask me how they can do it, too," Williams said.

Helicopters roared overhead, sounding sirens before moving in close to drop fire-retardant foam on the flames as the Panthers dug their line.

"We're more into each one helping one another instead of gang violence," said Andre Rainey, 31, a former member of the PJ Watts Crips.

Lake Mary wins 5A-4 title

By TONY DeSORMIER
Herald Sports Editor

LAKE MARY — Except for a couple of momentary lulls, the Lake Mary High School girls volleyball team swept uncheked to the 5A District 4 championship Thursday night, defeating the Oviedo Lions 15-9, 15-9 in the finals.

In the semifinals, Lake Mary eliminated Lyman 16-11, 15-9 and Oviedo bounced Deltona 15-8, 15-8.

Lake Mary (23-1) advances to the 5A Region II game next Tuesday night at Jacksonville Beach Fletcher, which won the District 4 title Thursday with a 15-9, 15-11 victory over Jacksonville (11-5, 10-15).

Oviedo looked like it would give top seeded Lake Mary some trouble taking a 3-1 lead on the strength of a five-point service run by Kristie Freeman. But the Rams outscored the Lions 11-1 to win the game and take control of the match.

"I know that I'm nervous coming out here and I've been coaching for 16 years," said Lake Mary coach Andy Berry. "You go into a different mind set when you play in tournaments. They were a little bit nervous out there at the start, but then they got it together."

In the match against Lyman, we had a letdown. We were way up in the first game, then we started to let up. Next thing we know Lyman has tied the score and we had to get it back together. That's when I like about this team. They don't quit."

The Rams rode the momentum of their first game win against Oviedo to take a 1-0 lead in the second game. Lake Mary suffered another momentary backslide as the Lions inched their way back to 1-0.

Finally, Angie Snow served out the match for the Rams, captain Jennifer Greissing having a set from Lindy Longstaff for the game and match winning point.

According to Oviedo coach Anita Carlson, the match got away from the Lions in the first game.

"We stopped hitting the ball in the first game," said Carlson. "You have to keep hitting the ball against a team like Lake Mary. That's the only way to stay with them. But we didn't hit the ball the way we should."

SANFORD — Sanford First Baptist got some help and some breathing room in the Sanford Recreation Department Men's Fall Thursday Night Slowpitch Softball League at Pinehurst Park.

Understanding disposal fees

Foods in non-metal containers taxed on store bill

If you eat peanut butter or mayonnaise, like to drink out of a bottle or use plastic containers of motor oil, get out your pocket change.

Beginning Oct. 1, those products and hundreds of others are costing a little more. That's when a new one cent state fee on glass, plastic and paper containers takes effect.

The tax, called an advance disposal fee, is aimed at increasing the use of recycled goods while funding state environmental programs.

It applies to virtually every non-metal container that holds between five ounces and one gallon although certain containers like margarine tubs, flexible bags and containers that hold medical items are exempt.

The fee is expected to generate about $24 million in state revenues in its first year, the state Department of Revenue estimates, all of which is earmarked for Department of Environmental Protection programs.

But the intent of the law is not to raise revenues says the Department of Revenue. The whole intent of the law is to change the habits of manufacturers to use material that is being recycled. By using more recycled goods, manufacturers ultimately can avoid passing the additional cost of the fee along to the customers.

CONSUMER FOCUS

The state estimates at least half of all aluminum cans used in Florida are recycled, thus aluminum cans are exempt from the fee.

The state Department of Environmental Protection will review exemptions annually, and exempt any container that is being recycled at a rate of 50 percent or better.

Distributors and wholesalers are responsible for collecting the tax as are bigger retailers that have their own distribution centers. Some are preparing to make sure customers know the money is going to the state and not to their coffers.

The advance disposal fee stems from a 1988 attempt by some legislators to create a so-called bottle bill. That bill would have resulted in redeemable deposits being levied on things like drink bottles.

What's included? All bottles, jars, plastic or paper containers containing food and drink items, and containers holding things like motor oil and cleaning supplies.

What's exempt? Cans made of aluminum or steel, along with tubs, cups, blisterpacks, flexible bags, tubes or containers holding medical items.

So, check your grocery bill and see if you can figure out your advance disposal fee. Some area grocery stores will be putting it at the bottom of your receipt, others will just incorporate it in with the price of each individual item.

Sisters need a meeting of the minds

DEAR ABBY: I have a younger sister who is 18 and very naive. She has lived with me since our parents died seven years ago.

One night, she went out on a blind date and came home with a hickey on her neck. The next night, she had her boyfriend over, and they were watching TV. I was sitting in a chair, but she and her boyfriend were on the couch, kissing and lying all over each other.

After he left, I told her how embarrassing her behavior was for me. Then she told me flat out that her behavior was none of my business, to which I replied, "When it is happening in front of me, it is my business, and if you don't have any respect for yourself, you should have a little for me."

Abby, I don't know how to handle this.

PHILADELPHIAN DEAR PHILADELPHIAN: You are on the right track. As long as your sister lives under your roof, her behavior is your business.

She is heading for trouble if she's necking with a blind date (a stranger) one night and lying all over her "boyfriend" the next. I think you and she are overdue for a serious talk about how to make mature decisions and how to protect oneself from sexually transmitted disease. Don't postpone it.

ADVICE

DEAR ABBY: As more and more people leave their hometowns and relocate across the country, this important question is usually put "on hold" and is rarely resolved.

When a family member dies, where should that person be buried? Should the grieving spouse bury her husband where she is living now, or take his body back to where his parents and grandparents are buried? What are your thoughts on this, Abby?

NEITHER HERE NOR THERE DEAR NEITHER HERE NOR THERE: The "right" answer to that question varies from family to family. Because the majority of people find the subject of their own mortality so unpleasant to face, that issue remains unresolved in many families.

Since none of us has a contract with God, the subject of mortality should be discussed with spouses, parents and children long before the need arises — so their wishes can all be taken into account. Of course, the final decision should be our own.

DEAR ABBY: In reference to the letter about the bridesmaid who forgot to put the information about the bride's gifts on the shower invitation, I can top that!

When my friends gave a wedding shower for me, they forgot to put my name on the invitation! I'm sure the invitees were scratching their heads in puzzlement until they received a second invitation that read:

"Have you ever heard of a surprise birthday party? Well, how about a surprise shower where the name of the bride is the surprise! The name you are searching for is Lisa Johnston. Hope you can come."

LISA JOHNSTON, HOUSTON

DEA ABBY: My husband and I wanted so much to have this child, and we almost made it, but I miscarried a baby boy in my sixth month and he couldn't be saved. This tragedy was heartbreaking enough, but some of the comments from well-meaning friends made it even worse.

Abby, please ask your readers never to try to comfort a woman who has lost a premature baby with any of the following comments — and if you must add anything, please do:

- "Cheer up, you're still young. You can try again."
- "You have one child already. Be thankful for what you have."
- "It was God's will. Praise the Lord."
- "You could have been lucky; it might not have been normal."
- "Don't be so downhearted — it isn't as though you lost a child."

GRIEVING

DEAR GRIEVING: To the above well-intentioned but inappropriate comments, I can repeat some advice I have frequently offered: To parents, a miscarriage is the loss of a child. They have anticipated, planned for and prepared for this child, which they will never have. (Regardless of how many other children they may have, one child will never replace the one who was lost.)

If a friend loses a child through miscarriage, express your feelings of sorrow as though she had lost a "living" child. Because she has.

Beer can cause alcoholism

DEAR MARY: I'm worried about how much my husband is drinking. He seems to have to have several beers every evening, and on the weekend he'll put away close to a case. He says it's not a problem because he only drinks beer and you can't become an alcoholic if that's all you drink. It also makes him mad every time I bring it up because he says I'm nagging him. I've promised that I will keep my mouth shut about how much he drinks from now on if it is true that beer can't cause alcoholism.

NAGGING WIFE DEAR NAGGING: The bad news is that a person can become an alcoholic by drinking

DRUG COUNSELOR

MARY BALK

"any" beverage containing alcohol. That means that a person is just as likely to become an alcoholic drinking beer as he/she is by drinking wine or liquor. As a matter of fact, as alcoholism gets progressively worse, the person may switch from more expensive forms of alcohol to beverages such as beer and wine because they're cheaper and more accessible. It is the alcohol in the drink that a person gets addicted to, not the kind, taste or price of the particular alcoholic beverage.

However, instead of nagging your husband if the situation continues or worsens, you may want to find an Al-Anon support group to learn more effective coping techniques. Look in the phone book, or call 407-898-4929 for more information.

(Mary Balk is a Certified Addiction Prevention Professional and counselor. Write her at the Sanford Herald, or call the Seminole County Schools' Drug Prevention office, 322-5558.

Autumn Magic

As I drove through the countryside on that bright and brisk day in late October, the swirling leaves fragmented my view, so that I slowed to a stop alongside the road where I perceived a most fantastic vision...

Spanning the horizon was a stage, and on that stage was a myriad of majestic dancers adorned in their festive fall finery of orange and red and gold, swaying to and fro, keeping time with the woodwinds as they swept melodically through the trees, reflecting the brilliant light from above.

Moments later, I blinked back to reality and resumed my travel through the colorful autumn countryside. I marveled at the power of the imagination as it had influenced my perception of what I had "seen" seconds before.

God, the ultimate Creator, has given us the gift of imagination. He has also given us the gift of choice...of how we choose to perceive our world. Let us worship God each week, opening our hearts to the power of the Master, in order that we shall be influenced to perceive our lives as more positive and meaningful.

Church organizers send messages on life to teens for Halloween

By RAY WADDLE
The Tennessean

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Hell is a room of fog and darkness filled with constant screaming, while heaven is a perpetual party of dancing, embracing and angel food cake.

At least that's been the interpretation at Two Rivers Baptist Church's emotional "alternative" Haunted House.

Thousands of teenagers, many of them crying by the end of it, have filed through the church's Judgment House drama, a series of skits designed to drive home the point that hell awaits them if they don't embrace Jesus Christ in their hearts.

"The hardest part was walking through hell," Allyson Haynes, a student at Riverdale High School in Murfreesboro, said sobbing after the 30-minute event.

"If my friends don't get to know the Lord, they're going to hell," she said.

The skits of Judgment House, a series of converted rooms in the church annex, aim for high-pitched emotion and realism to underscore to teenagers that God has a plan for their lives, but they are doomed to eternal suffering if they wait too long to accept Christ.

Judgment House's 11 scenes include witnessing a teen suicide, a post-sex break up between a high school couple, a crushing mother-father argument, and fanciful depictions of heaven, hell and the moment of judgment.

"This was real life. These things really happen," said Ben Gambill, a Riverdale High School student who accompanied 20 other youths from Mount Herman Baptist Church in Murfreesboro.

"The whole thing was so emotional." Especially intense, he said, was the suicide scene, which opens the drama.

The character Jonathan is seen composing a suicide note in his bedroom to his best friend, Blake, coolly outlining his reasons for "doing what I'm about to do," summing up life as a meaningless cycle that has no point.

As the audience watches in the cramped room, Jonathan pulls the trigger and the hammer clicks — but no bullet fires. Only after the room goes suddenly dark and the audience is directed to move to the next scene does the deafening shot go off.

The story follows his friend Blake, who time-travels with a divine messenger to heaven and hell to sort out his emotions about his friend's death and what salvation means.

In one scene he is shown the judgment room, where a line of now-dead teenagers wait their turn before an angelic receptionist who searches a computer screen for their names.

When Jonathan's name does not appear, he is whisked away to hell by a black-caped grim reaper.

Judgment House organizers said they received some criticism from those who wondered at the wisdom and the message of dramatizing suicide. Was the message that people who kill themselves go to hell?

"No, I don't believe people who commit suicide go to hell," said Mike Cowart, one of the organizers. "Jonathan goes to hell because he doesn't accept Christ."

One actor portraying Jonathan said he believes it's an effective presentation.

"In today's society we've been numbed to a lot of things, so sometimes it takes a shock like that scene to get people thinking again," said Chris Maddox, 19, a Vanderbilt University student.

Native American views of religion and ethics shared

Dr. Zug G. Standing Bear, associate professor of sociology, anthropology and criminal justice at Valdosta State University in Georgia, will share a Native American view of religion and ethics at 10 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 3, in Elizabeth Hall, 421 N. Woodland Blvd., DeLand, auditorium at Stetson University.

Sponsored by Stetson's program in Religion and Ethics, Standing Bear will discuss the diverse cultures of Native Americans, some typical unifying views in ethics and religions, traditional criticisms of Christianity, and common religious concepts and religious differences.

Standing Bear holds a doctorate in criminology from Florida State University, Tallahassee, and master's degrees in forensic science, education and public administration. At Valdosta, he is coordinator of criminal justice programs, and a member of the graduate faculty and the Center for Professional and Applied Ethics.

The program is part of Stetson's weekly Encounter Series, which is free and open to the public.

On the road again

The Lord makes miracles happen. The latest in His long list of blessings was bestowed on J. Morris Moore, a graduate of Teen Challenge in Sanford. A 1985 Olds Cutlass Ciera was donated to Moore by Family Autos, Inc., on French Avenue. The Rev. Randall Hall-Walker, pastor of Freedom Assembly of God, was instrumental in helping Moore, a member of his congregation, in getting the transportation to get him back and forth to his job. Jeff Ball, left, presents the keys to the car to Moore as the Rev. Hall-Walker, Kelly Ball, and Jerry Nance, right, executive director of Teen Challenge, look on.

Herbal remedies not medical substitutes

DEAR DR. GOTT: Why do you constantly put down proper diet, nutrition and herbal remedies? For 15 years, I suffered from stomach ulcers, spastic colon and hemorrhoids and was hospitalized constantly. After my last discharge, I was totally bedridden with no hope of leading a normal life. I lost my insurance coverage and couldn't afford expensive prescriptions. My doctor refused to see me because I owed him a great deal of money. As a result, I turned to folk medicine and diet. Four months later, I was out of bed and back to work. Now if herbs and a proper diet are not recommended by you, how did I cure my disease in four months, which was something numerous specialists couldn't do in 15 years?

DEAR READER: I am a constant supporter of proper diet and nutrition -- and I certainly have no objection to herbal remedies, providing they are effective. Where you and I part company is in our definitions of diet and nutrition -- and the fact that herbal treatments are no substitute for traditional medical therapy. I consistently urge my readers (and patients) to establish a balance between controlling their own health and seeking appropriate medical attention when necessary.

For example, stomach ulcers usually respond satisfactorily to H2-blocking drugs, such as Tagamet or Zantac; resistant ulcers can be cured with special antibiotics, because they are often caused by infection with H pylori, a bacterium. Spastic colon is a harmless but annoying condition that is associated with bloating, diarrhea or constipation. Because it frequently results from stress, counseling or anti-spasm medicine, such as Donnatal, are usually effective treatments. Hemorrhoids? What can I say? This ubiquitous swelling of veins around the anus needs no treatment, except for suppositories to aid evacuation and hot baths to relieve itching and discomfort. Large hemorrhoids or piles that bleed briskly may require surgery.

WIN AT BRIDGE

By Phillip Alder

On some days we exclaim to anyone who will listen how glad we are to be alive. Yet on other days we mutter darkly about wishing we had stayed in bed. Why is this? Biorhythms? Genetics? Planetary alignment? Who knows? But on today's deal, the wind was blowing favorably for North-South — and for South in particular. It occurred during the match between Poland and Iceland at the 1963 European Championships in Baden-Baden, West Germany.

Something went badly astray with the Polish auction. Let's leave speculation and fact in the mists of antiquity. If West leads the club king, even four spades will be defeated. After winning trick two with his ace, East plays a third round of clubs, and West must collect two trump tricks. However, against a slam West wasn't going to be so brash as to lead from king doubleton, especially as it was dummy's first-bid suit. Hoping he had two trump tricks coming, he sought safety in his heart sequence. Declarer won with the ace, ruffed a heart in the dummy and cashed the three top diamonds lying there, discarding his club losers. Next came a club ruff, a heart ruff, a club ruff and a heart ruff, bringing everyone down to four cards. West and South had only trumps remaining. Declarer led a club from the dummy and ruffed with the spade eight. West overruffed with the nine, but now he had to lead away from his Q-10-7 into South's A-K-J. Six spades bid and made! Is it fair to say that the South Pole was hot that day?

YOUR BIRTHDAY
Oct. 30, 1993
In the year ahead an important endeavor might go off in a direction you didn't anticipate. Let events have their own way, because everything should work out to your ultimate advantage.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Avoid dictatorial types today, because you're likely to feel a strong need to express your independence. You'll resent being bossed around by anyone who wants to rearrange your agenda. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, N.Y. 10163.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Those unfinished tasks or assignments you've been sweeping under the rug since the beginning of the week might vy for immediate attention today. Get them out of the way.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan.

19) if you participate today in games that are socially competitive, you'll be judged more by your sportsmanship than your playing skills. Whether you win or lose, do it with grace.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Objectives that are of importance to you today might not be of equal interests to your mate. Don't be disappointed if he/she doesn't share your enthusiasm.
FISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You should be able to get along with almost everyone today, with the exception of a know-it-all. Characters of this ilk may exceed your patience and tolerance.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) You might experience a trifle more stress than usual today in areas that affect your material involvements with others. Don't let small misunderstandings get blown out of proportion.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Persons who do not usually oppose positions you take might offer unexpected opposition today. Analyze your actions to see what you are doing different.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The control of something personally important to you might be in the hands of others today instead of with you. If you're patient this will work itself out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Pressure from your peers today might try to induce you to do something that does not necessarily serve your best interests. Be firm and stand your ground.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Your chances for achieving your objectives today may not be as good as they could be, because persons with whom you're involved may think you're too self-serving.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Someone who knows how to get you to talk without revealing things he/she wants to keep confidential may successfully interrogate you today if you don't watch everything you say.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your probabilities for personal gain look extremely good today. Don't feel you have to share what you acquire with someone who was physically present but didn't make a contribution.
