Text Of Message

By PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT To The Congress: It is essential to our recovery program that measures immediately be adopted aimed at unemployment relief. The first is enrollment of workers now by the federal government for such public employment as can be quickly started and will not interfere with the demand for or the proper standards of normal employment.

5 OUT OF SEVEN STATE GROUPS ASK MORE FUNDS

TALLAHASSEE, Mar. 21.—(A.P.)—Governor Sholtz yesterday said the biennial budget report, just issued, shows that five of the seven administrative departments have asked for increased appropriations amounting to $48,954 a year as compared with two years ago.

Increased Appropriation Requests Are $48,954 More A Year

He said that with the exception of the attorney general's office, numerous operations heretofore charged to the departments as "inspection" or "branch administration" had been listed in the budget report and gone into the appropriation bill that should have been charged direct to the departments. For this reason, he said, the 1933 budget in this respect only appears to be increased.

A Stronger Navy

To be receptive to the popular demand of economy and to the movement for reduced armaments among nations and at the same time to insure adequate protection for our commerce and our interests far afield is a task which must weigh heavily upon those who are confronted with it.

In the face of federal deficits, the present might seem to be an inopportune time to agitate a navy measuring up to the London treaty limitations, below which our sea forces have fallen so far that in the near future our right to trade in security with the four corners of the world may be seriously challenged.

However, unless other countries manifest a disposition to curtail naval expansion and so long as international relations offer such perfect settings for another world conflagration, any policy of further impairing the efficiency of our fleet would seem to come under the classification of being "penny wise and pound foolish."

But, in the opinion of Ernest Lee Jahneke, retiring assistant secretary of the Navy, our forces could be brought up to the necessary effectiveness, in large part, by the savings which could be effected by eliminating useless navy yards.

Mr. Jahneke reminds us that the government is planning to inaugurate public works programs to put idle men to work, and he suggests that these men might better be employed in our shipyards, adding that more than 90 percent of the cost of a battleship reverts to labor.

It does seem that every extravagance of our whole Naval Department should be eliminated for the general improvement of fighting efficiency and that if we are going to build public buildings to supply jobs, we might better put the men to work driving rivets into the hulls of battleships.

It is dangerous for the United States to be the only country that believes in disarmament and some day it may prove expensive, too.

Zangara

Giuseppe Zangara, whose stomach hurt him so badly and who hated capitalists so much, that he attempted to assassinate President Roosevelt and in doing so killed Mayor Cermak of Chicago, has paid for his crime in record-breaking time.

"Never before, in all Florida court procedure," says the Tampa Tribune, "has punishment so quickly followed crime and conviction."

"Following Zangara to the electric chair at Raiford will be Joffcoat, another murderer, whose case has been 'pending' nearly three years."

"While in Tampa, men who, in the perpetration of a deliberately planned robbery, killed a respected citizen, whose life was as dear to himself, his relatives and friends, his fellow-citizens, as was Mayor Cermak's to his, are unpunished, more than two years after their crime."

Justice moved expeditiously in Zangara's case because there were no motions for new trial, appeals to the Supreme Court, petitions for rehearing, applications to the Pardon Board, etcetera, ad nauseam.

"Yet justice in every other case in this state where there is no doubt of guilt should move with equal or approximate speed as it has moved in the case of Zangara, who had no funds to hire resourceful lawyers, no relatives, no influential friends."

WAR IN THE RUSSIAN VILLAGE

There is great significance in the recent Soviet decree giving local officials in the north Caucasus drastic powers of mobilizing the peasants to improve the land and threatening opponents of the government agricultural policy with extreme penalties.

Some recent measures of the Government, notably the substitution of a fixed tax in kind for this exchange, have been designed apparently to take the sharpest edge off the discontent of the peasants by removing some of their grievances.

During the last year there have been numerous reports in the Soviet press of slack work on the collective farms and of widespread neglect of the fields; this is one of the main causes of the food shortage in the towns.

While there is little opportunity under Soviet conditions for open resistance to government decrees, the peasants have recently re-

FARM AID PLAN OF ROOSEVELT HITS TROUBLE

Shortly after the House convened, the bill was introduced by Representative Fulmer, of South Carolina, ranking Democrat on the agriculture committee.

"I was much surprised when they took the civil service requirement out and allowed the appointment of deserving Democrats to thousands of positions all over the country. Instead, too that they raised the salary limit from $7500 to $10,000."

"It'll be more than spoils before they get through. It's the rawest piece of definite action ever presented to the House, but they've got the votes."

As for the bill itself, which is intended to increase farm prices by offering farmers an incentive to slash production, Snell termed it "a rainbow scheme."

"This is an awfully radical piece of legislation," he said. "It is evident that they are going to put it through by force and the devil take the consequences. "I don't see how the Democratic majority can swallow that rule. The only way is suggested by newspaper reports that the powers that be kept on their desks every morning the individual votes of party members."

"I cannot see but that this bill will take a lot of money out of the treasury. It provides that the Treasury must supply all the money needed by the secretary of agriculture. And apparently any deal with a farmer made by any of the various gents running around the country is binding."

Snell conceded the bill would get some Republican votes and did not question its ultimate passage by the House.

Promises Congress To Put 250,000 Men To Work By Summer If Authority Is Given

The day also saw the busy Roosevelt turning to the subject of railroads with a view to getting early congressional action on the ideas he has in mind to put the transportation system on a firmer basis.

He conferred at the White House with J. J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford; F. E. Williamson, president of the New York Central Cary Gray, president of the Union Pacific, and Prof. A. A. Beale, who has advised with him in the past in economic subjects.

The group was put to work whipping into shape some of the proposals which the President intends to make, including a promise of national reinsurance for the roads and consolidations and regulation of motor bus traffic.

All signals from the White House pointed to full speed ahead on the "consolidation of the railroads" legislative program with May 1 the goal for its achievement.

By the immediate savings he hopes to accomplish in government expenditures even before the end of this fiscal year, Roosevelt believes he is justified in stepping forward on the pending unemployment and distress problems.

The broad grant of authority to bring the government costs within range of receipts was signed by the President almost as soon as it belatedly reached the White House from Capitol Hill.

The new pay cuts, limited to a maximum of 15 percent, are to become effective as of Apr. 1. Perhaps a little more time will be required to sift the thousands of veterans' cases.

Those veterans actually suffering disability resulting from action in war will go untouched but the thousands of others receiving government attention and allowances for disabilities not traceable to war origin are to feel the effect of the economy drive.

To buttress further the government credit and bring the nation nearer a balanced budget, the President contemplates effecting new economies very shortly through wholesale reorganization of the government departments.
