POLLUTION STUDY EXONERATES OUTBOARD MOTORS An independent pollution study of two Florida lakes has shown that no contamination exists in the waters tested due to exhaust gases or liquids from marine engines.

The survey was conducted by Environmental Engineering of Gainesville, Florida, at the request of Kiekhaefer Mercury, manufacturers of Mercury outboard motors and MerCruiser stern drives and marine inboard engines.

Sites of the study were Lake X, and Cat Lake. Lake X supports a continuous 24-hour test program involving the use of outboard, inboard and stern drive marine engines. Company officials believe the lake carries the most concentrated boat traffic of any lake in the world. Since the test center was officially opened 10 years ago, approximately 3 million gallons of fuel and oil have been used in normal operation. Two surveys were made. One was completed near the end of May and another in early August. Cat Lake, inaccessible and never used by powerboats, was included in the examination as a basis for comparison. Results announced by Dr. H. D. Putnam, Professor of Environmental Engineering Sciences at the University of Florida, and a member of the regearch firm, indicate "no observable effect on plankton or bottom organisms in the lake." In another paper of the two-part presentation, A. T. DuBose, Analytical Chemist for Environmental Engineering said, "Numerous samples from both lakes were collected by our team and analyzed for organic compounds known to be found in exhaust emissions of internal combustion engines. Neither Lake X nor Cat Lake were found to contain any of the organic compounds found in gasoline and oil." DuBose went on to say, "These organics are readily broken down into harmless material by the bacteria already in the water, or are in such minute quantity our best equipment cannot detect them."

In summary, the six month research program conducted by Environmental Engineering disclosed no hydrocarbon contamination from engine exhaust after exposure to 3 million gallons of fuel and oil used at Lake X in 10 years. Lake X is noted for its prolific black bass and is part of a conversation and wildlife refuge included in the programs of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

SAIGON STREET VENDORS are plentiful in the South Vietnamese capital, where a notorious black market continues to thrive despite intermittent crackdowns by the government. Most of the peddlers are selling Americanmade goods which previously were stolen from military PX shipments. Many are so well organized they have a "legal services" department at their disposal.
