CHAPTER 24
 A WARM chinook wind came in carelessly from the west, melting the high drifts of snow and sketching in large patches of bare, brown turf around Fort Butlerfield.
 Zack told Chad that the Indians were still around. They were keeping their distance, but the post was under observation. "I dunno what they'll do," he said, "but I don't figger they'll tackle the fort. Chances are they'll pick off anybody they catch. That means I ain't fittin' in no game. Maybe they'll starve us out. Might even keep a boat from gittin' up here, some spring."
 Colonel Randall did not mention the "vengeful Beavias" again, but Chad had no doubt that the report which would go downriver next spring would show him as incompetent and insolent, and would ask for his recall. He didn't care, he told himself. He would rather resign from the Army than go through another winter under Randall.
 To add to Chad's unrest, Christmas was at hand, and he could not keep Elizabeth out of his mind. He kept thinking of the holidays they had spent together last year. The war had ended the previous April, so Christmas, 1955, had been celebrated as the first Yule holiday of "peace" in five years.
 What a temporary peace, Chad thought bitterly. One Christmas with no war. And now... He couldn't even sit down and write to Elizabeth. There was not the remotest possibility of sending a letter anywhere.
 Randall put the men to work repairing the sawmill, hoping to continue building within the stockade when the weather improved enough to resume logging. One morning as the repairs were being completed, Randall stopped to talk with Chad, who was supervising the work.
 "Good morning, Endicott," Randall said with great heartiness. "Is the sawmill almost ready for us again?"
 "Almost, sir," Chad said, pushed by Randall's manner. This was the first effort he had made at being friendly since Chad had asked him about his war record. "The Indians didn't do much damage."
 "Fine, fine," Randall said. "Actually there is no real hurry. We're snug enough. But I would like to get up one more storehouse and a shop or two before another storm hits." He stared at Chad and glanced obliquely at Randall. "I thought we'd give the men a little rest over Christmas."
 Chad was surprised at this glimmer of charity in the man's soul, but he merely said, "They'll welcome it, sir."

 "By the way, Lieutenant, Mrs. Randall comes from a family that sets great store by Christmas. Big dinner and all. Of course we can't be very festive, but she would like a guest for dinner. Will you join us?"
 "Why, thank you, sir. Tell Mrs. Randall I shall be very happy to accept her invitation."
 He sounded pleased, but he was bothered. There was pleasure in the anticipation of eating at a table set by a woman, and having a chance to come as close to "dining" as any man in Dakota could that day. But it would bring him into close contact with Mrs. Randall, something he had carefully avoided. He was well aware of the Colonel's insane jealousy. And Randall would certainly seize the holiday as an excuse to get drunk.
 But Chad had no choice. It was a command dinner. No one refused a dinner invitation to his superior officer's house, a fact of which Mrs. Randall was perfectly aware.

As Chad left his cabin for Randall's quarters on Christmas afternoon, he was far from happy. When Randall answered the door, his face had that familiar flush which clearly indicated he had already begun to partake of the traditional Christmas cheer.
 "Come in, come in, Endicott. Merry Christmas."
 "Merry Christmas, sir," Chad said with forced spontaneity.
 Mrs. Randall turned from the fireplace where she had been turning a browned piece of buffalo hump that dripped stultantly into the fire below. She called cheerfully, "Merry Christmas, Chad."
 He responded without hearing his own voice. It was "Chad" to her; it was "Endicott" to the Colonel. This was the first time she had ever called him by name. Randall gave no indication that he noticed the familiarity. He was rummaging in a small closet across the room. Then, with a grunt of satisfaction, he found the object of his search.
 Holding a dusty bottle high, he smiled almost leeringly at Chad. "The last of Randall's private wine cellar," he said. "Been saving it for just such an occasion as this! When it's all gone, I'll have to fall back on Injun whiskey, rotgut, just rotgut."
 "Make mine a small one, Colonel," Chad said.
 "Why don't you make them both small ones, gentlemen?" Isabelle suggested. "Dinner is nearly ready."
 Chad accepted his glass from Randall and clicked it against the

Macmillan, President Discuss Sputnik, Syria Challenge Today

By DONALD J. GONZALES
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan joins President Eisenhower today in summit talks on Russia's challenge of Sputnik and Syria.

Macmillan flew from London (arriving about 9:45 a.m. e.d.t.) to confer with the President on Soviet gains in space missile development and the Soviet Middle East offensive. The three days of talks were scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. e.d.t.

Both Eisenhower and Macmillan gave advance signs of offering concrete proposals to strengthen the West's position. Macmillan is expected to present new proposals for Anglo-American scientific cooperation, centering on nuclear weapons development. Eisenhower has indicated he will seek better scientific teamwork between the two nations.

Missile Fired
A cheering note was supplied on the eve of the talks in the firing of a U.S. Jupiter 1,500-mile ballistic missile at Cape Canaveral, Fla. The administration grabbed the offensive in the propaganda war with Russia over space rocketry by informing the world for the first time that one of its intermediate range ballistic missile tests was successful and had hit the target.

Both American and British officials hoped to capitalize on the goodwill created by Queen Elizabeth's visit to this country to hammer out important new Anglo-American accords on major world issues.

British Foreign Minister Selwyn Lloyd, who has been here several days, and U.S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles were scheduled to attend tonight's opening meeting and an informal dinner to follow.

Macmillan's visit was arranged soon after Russia's earth satellite was launched Oct. 4. It was announced while Britain's Queen Elizabeth II was visiting North America.

While the "big two" talks were expected to place considerable emphasis on speeding Western military and scientific advances in the light of the Soviet achievement, the occasion will give the two leaders and their advisers a chance to canvass the explosive Middle East situation.

Weather
Partly cloudy through Thursday.

Demo, GOP Parties Playing Politics With Negro Vote

United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP) — That question about who makes official policy for the Democratic Party keeps bobbing up for answers as the politicians maneuver for the favor of Negro voters in the 1958 and 1960 elections.

Butler's latest maneuver brought here the members of the Democratic Advisory Council, an organization he created last year after President Eisenhower's lopsided reelection. Senate and House Democratic leaders refused to join.

Butler's vote appeal, however, still is strong. Republicans now offer firm localized enforcement of racial integration of the public schools.

A Grain Of Sanford Conquers The World In One Realm!

Once upon a time there was a minnow that learned to squirt a drop of water into the air from the surface of his pond. Having accomplished this, he swam around boasting that he had penetrated the heavens. The other minnows agreed this was indeed a momentous achievement. "Minnow," they said wisely to one another, "has conquered outer space!"

"The conquest of outer space" is a fine, resounding phrase that trips lightly from many tongues these days. But while we are oh-ing and ah-ing, it might not be a bad idea to keep in mind that man, at this stage of the game, is not much closer to the conquest of outer space than the talented minnow was to the conquest of the sky. This is not said by way of minimizing the feat of hurling rockets hundreds of miles beyond the stratosphere. It is just that a little humility seems not amiss.

Nothing so fosters humility as a few

A Plan To Consider Wisely!

One does not have to be an expert in either agriculture or economics to realize that the row most American farmers are hoeing continues to be weedy. The farmer is still caught in the squeeze between the prices that he can get for his products and the price of the things he needs to keep going. There is a wide gap between farm prices and consumer food prices.

Just ask any farmer around Sanford who "used to" operate a farm and attempt to make a profit.

These facts keep up a steady pressure on Congress to do something more for the farmer, to give him a greater share in the prosperity which most Americans are enjoying. Widespread recognition of the farmer's plight also increases the chances that unwise remedies will be tried in an effort to solve farm problems.

Secretary of Agriculture Benson recently commented on what he considers to be a proposal in this category. This is the direct-payment plan, of which a new study has been made by the Department of Agriculture. Under this plan, the prices of basic farm commodities would be permitted to rise and fall in the market, and whenever prices fell below support levels the government would make up the difference.

The secretary of agriculture believes that full-scale operation of such a plan would cost the government about seven billion dollars annually. He thinks that it would greatly increase farm production; this in turn would increase the already disturbing problem of surplus disposal. Benson also

Push-Button Grocery Counter Bag-Filler-Upper

WASHINGTON (AP)—Here's a gadget to uncork the bottleneck at the supermarket cash register. It's a push-button grocery-counter bag-filler-upper.

Its promoters claim the mechanical bagger can save one-third of the time now required to check out and load up a grocery order. This not only saves the shopper's time, but enables each checker to handle more orders, they said.

The automatic counter has a conveyor belt with a rectangular bin at the end and a compartment beyond that holding empty sacks. The checker picks up each grocery item from the conveyor, rings up the price and drops it into the bin. When the bin is full, the checker pushes a button. In one operation a sack lying on its side opens automatically, the food slides in, the sack flips up and moves onto a rack, ready for the shopper to pick it up.

The mechanical bagger can fill small, medium or large sacks. The checker presses another button to get the proper size for each order before starting the loading mechanism.

The new gadget is being displayed by the Union Bag-Camp Paper Corp. at the National Association of Food Chains convention. It is now being tried out at some chain stores in Cincinnati and Bethesda, Md.

Foreign News Commentary

By CHARLES M. McCANN
United Press Staff Correspondent
President Tito of Yugoslavia may have blundered in recognizing the East German puppet government.

In recognizing a regime which owes its continued existence solely to a Soviet Russian army of occupation, Tito deliberately affronted West Germany.

He helped Russia and indirectly helped Communist Poland, which now occupies 40,000 square miles of German territory and wants to keep it for good.

Tito also, by recognizing the puppet regime as a legitimate government, dealt a blow to the hope of reunifying Germany.

Just what Tito's motive was remains uncertain. One thing is sure, however — he did it in what he thought was his own interest.

West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's retort to Tito's action was to break off diplomatic relations with Yugoslavia.

Reactions in Berlin

In doing this, Adenauer made good his threat, which he had made known to the world, that he would break relations with any government that recognized the East Germans.

But it is evident that Tito did not expect Adenauer to make good his threat. This has been shown clearly by the pained surprise with which his action was received in Belgrade, Tito's capital.

Now Tito seems to be worried about the future of Yugoslavia's trade with West Germany and the substantial trade credits which have gone with it. West German-Yugoslav trade totaled $66 million in 1956. He is worried also whether West Germany will annul the agreement under which it contracted to pay Yugoslavia $72 million for damages that country suffered in World War II.

Incidentally, it was reported from Washington immediately after Tito's recognition of East Germany that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles intended to make a reappraisal of his policy of granting aid to Tito.

Some Question Move
There are some in West Germany who question Adenauer's decision to break relations. But it is hard to see how he could have avoided it.

The position of the West German government is that any country which recognizes the East German regime is recognizing the existence of two German governments and thus making unification harder. Adenauer also was afraid that if he let Tito get away with it, other countries might follow suit, including especially the Asian "neutralists" and some Arab countries.

Adenauer's breach of relations certainly seemed to make it likely that these countries would think carefully before they followed Tito's example.

West Germany is the most properous country in Europe. Its trade and its ability to grant trade credits to needy countries are important.

However, slowly it is rearming. West Germany also is potentially the most powerful country in Europe outside of Russia.

Tito is a smart man. It remains to be seen, however, whether in recognizing East Germany he hurt Adenauer more than he did himself.

Today's Sports Parade

By OSCAR FRALEY
United Press Sports Writer
TOKYO — Bill McDonald, widely international sportsman from Miami Beach, Fla., has discussed that on his return to the United States next week he would like to obtain an International League franchise in Brooklyn.

"International League officials contacted me just before I left to attend the International Trophy and Canada Cup gold matches in Tokyo this weekend," McDonald revealed. "I am sure that I am definitely interested."

Everything would depend, he said, on whether he could make a deal with Walter O'Malley of the Los Angeles Dodgers, who still holds a two-year lease on Ebbets Field.

"I'm not certain that I can, and if I can make a sensible deal with O'Malley, there will be baseball in Brooklyn next spring," McDonald asserted. "But I am not going into this thing to use or be used as a club to set up somebody financially."

Brooklyn hero
McDonald, who owns the Tampa team in the Florida State League, said that if his plan went through he probably would hire "one of the old Brooklyn heroes" as manager. It gave rise to speculation that he might make an offer to Jackie Robinson, who at Brooklyn became the first Negro to play in organized baseball.

McDonald, who has made a tremendous fortune in mobile housing, said that he was prepared to finance the whole venture himself. "I don't need any financial support but, even if I did, there are a number of people with whom I have talked who would like to take baseball back into Brooklyn," McDonald announced. "But I want to do this thing myself."

McDonald asserted frankly that the main question in his mind was whether the people of Brooklyn would support a major league team.

Best Available
"The only thing I could tell them is that this is the best minor league ball available, that the International League plays fine baseball and actually is only one step from the majors and that I would give them a winner if money will produce one," he said. "Then, too, who knows what might happen in the future?"

There always would be a possibility that Brooklyn might move back into the major leagues, he intimated, in any future realignment or the possible expansion of the major leagues.

"But right now," McDonald said, "it looks as if there may be a general realignment in the minor leagues and Brooklyn could be one of the strongest spots of all. I am ready to take a chance with my money if O'Malley will go along with me."

That put it squarely in the lap of the man who left Brooklyn stranded on the basepaths and made it a possibility that the baseball tree which once grew in Brooklyn may flourish again next spring.

SEC Backfield Stars

By UNITED PRESS
Monday, the day when attention switches from last weekend to next, also was a day for talk of Southeastern Conference backfield stars, and how they run.

Kentucky Athletic Director Bernie Abirvly, for example, had something nice to say about Billy Cannon of LSU, whose booming helped hand Kentucky its fifth straight loss Saturday. "He is without a doubt the fastest back in the conference," Abirvly commented.

Coch Coach Woodruff of Florida, who made out this weekend what he'll like to do with the boys Tiger, mentioned another LSU player—quarterback Win Turner. "The most underrated signal caller in the SEC," is Woodruff's feeling.

One of Woodruff's own boys, Gator halfback Jimmy Rountree, was honored in home territory, the Florida Sportswriters Assn. choosing him as "back of the week" for his performance in a losing cause against Mississippi State.

Easy Day
On the practice field, meanwhile, there was little activity. Monday, Tulane's Greenies were the only players to get a full-scale workout. The time was divided evenly between offense and defense as the Green Wave prepared for its final home game of the season against Georgia Tech Saturday.

It was a lousy day for the first two games at Georgia Tech, but the reserves battled it out in scrimmages. Sophomore quarterback Walter Howard was back in action after a knee operation. Vanderbilt, idle until the LSU contest Nov. 2, took the day off and Coach Art Guesse said he plans to take it easy on his boys the rest of this week.

Mississippi State's varsity ran in sweat clothes while the third and fourth squads scrimmaged against the redshirts and freshmen. Coach Wade Walker announced heavy contact work today.

Rough Weekend
Alabama, the Maroons Target Saturday, held a light practice and heard Coach J. B. Whitworth warn that Mississippi State is the toughest outfit the Crimson Tide will meet this season.

Heavy knocking resumed at Auburn today following an extra day's rest. Coach Ralph Jordan told his unbeaten crew that the University of Houston will make it "another rough weekend."

Coach Bowden Wyatt was alarmed Monday, drilling the Tennessee ends and backs in a long passing session. He said Maryland, next on the Vol schedule, "is plenty big and we'll have to spread them with passes to give our backs an opportunity to run." Mississippi had a fairly strenuous session, concentrating on offense. The Rebels are working this week on Arkansas formations and with the thought in mind? A Razorback on the comeback is more dangerous than a Razorback undefeated.

Georgia, Louisiana State, Kentucky and Florida got back into full swing today after light sessions Monday to keep limber.

Red China Sports Adjustments Being Made In Seminole Lineup Program Underway

LONDON — Red China's giant, Russian-inspired program for the development of sports is producing its first fruit.

This year, for the first time since the Communists grabbed power, Red Chinese athletes have performed creditably. If their progress continues on the same lines, Red China might be a major power in sports by the 1964 Olympics.

A Communist Chinese basketball team, under-size, but cat-quick and perfect ball-handlers, made its first appearance in the West in the recent Paris World University games. It breezed past a number of highly regarded European teams before its players—apparently unaccustomed to tight Western tournament schedules—tired and faltered in final-round play.

In athletics, weight-lifting, swimming, gymnastics and soccer the Chinese have also approached top international standards this year.

Good Performers
International Olympic Committee President Avery Brundage, after watching a group of Red Chinese athletes perform in the recent International Track and Field Championships of Romania at Bucharest, said: "They have made very good performances. I can see a very great deal of progress in a short time."

Star of the group was 20-year-old Peking University student, Miss Tsien Fu Yung, who cleared 3 feet, 8 1/2 inches 1.74 meters in the high jump—only three-quarters of an inch less than the world record of America's Olympic winner Mildred Denalio.

Chinese sports, according to Communist sports magazines reaching here, is patterned entirely on the Russian setup. The buildup began in 1949 when an "All-Chinese Council for Physical Culture and Sport" was created by the Communist regime and given almost unlimited funds, vast powers and orders to make sports popular in China.

Trained By Russians
During the first years, the council's main activity was to build up an army of coaches and instructors. According to Communist reports, thousands were sent to the Soviet Union to learn from the Russians. Supreme direction was then taken over by the "Research Committee of Sports Scientists," all of them Russian-trained, and some of them possibly even Russians.

According to the Communist sources, Red Chinese athletes have set 19 national records in track and field alone this year. Here are some of the records, and in brackets, the place it would have earned the athlete in last Olympics at Melbourne.

Men—High jump 6 ft. 9 1/2 in. 2 meters by Ma Hsing Lung (4th place); pole vault 14 ft. 2 1/4 in. 4.32 meters by Cao J. Shu (5th); long jump 24 ft. 3 in. 7.39 meters by Hao Shu Kuei (5th); hop, step by Li Chun Ho (12th).

Women—80 meters hurdles; Liu Yu Young (11.2 seconds (5th)); 100 meters; Chen JI Min (18 seconds—1:20 meters; Miss Chen 24.8—1: high jump; Miss Tsien 5 ft. 8 1/2 in. (2nd).

By JERRY COVINGTON
With the first approaching 11 with Walter Pate just two days away coaches Pate and Lunde are busy making alterations in the Seminole's lineup to overcome the many sicknesses and injuries that have plagued the team in the last few days.

It was reported Tuesday that Gerald Jones, offensive standout at right end, is definitely out for this game and possibly the next. He has developed complications that require at least two weeks rest and possibly more. It is hoped that Gerald recovers soon and is back in there fighting with the rest of his teammates as soon as possible. Gerald will be missed greatly in the pass receiving department as he proved very capable in this job when the Seminoles played their last contest against Apopka.

To this point of the week the possibilities of Claude Hittell being out for this contest are very probable. However, his head is swelling very rapidly and it is hoped that he will be able to see limited action. If he is able to play, his chances of receiving names are practically out because of the extent of the hand injury.

The end problem is further plagued by the fact that Allen Davis is the only person out and it is hoped that an extra good defensive game will overcome this handicap. Billy Tyre, Tommy Brown, David Stanley, Tobby Walker, and Jack Stotney seem to have shaken the flu and are in condition again. They have looked good throughout the week and will be able to go 60 minutes if called upon to do so.

The offensive backs continue to run hard and show that they aren't going to let anything upset the Seminoles' "offense." Eddie Barber, Johnny Teschke, and Quarterback Cecil Desbriens have worked hard on the passing game and are hoping to click in this department when they come against the Wildcats.

Despite the things that have marred the scene at SEM the possibilities are still 50-50 for a victory. The spirit remains good and the boys are determined to win so it should be a top-notch ball game. Plan to be around this Friday night when the Fighting Seminoles play their second OBC game of the season. Let's make this one number 4!

RENPRO MAY PLAY
CLEVELAND — First halfback Ray Renfro, who suffered a finger injury in Sunday's game with the Philadelphia Eagles, may be able to play for the Cleveland Browns next Sunday against the Chicago Cardinals, according to team physician Dr. Vic Ippolito. Ippolito said Renfro's finger was dislocated and not broken as originally feared.

Is Sputnik Spy?

By RUTHERFORD FOATS
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON 10 — Is Sputnik a spy?

American scientists didn't think so at first. Now some of them are not sure.

A pile of tape-recordings of the Russian satellite's coded messages are piling up in the U. S. Naval Research Laboratory and other radio-monitoring stations.

So far they are "just a meaningless collection of squiggles on tape," said one official of Project Vanguard, the U. S. satellite program.

Speculation has ranged over the possibility that Spunk may be an eye-in-the-sky, recording coastlines and even islands and lakes through photographic or infrared devices and radiating the information back to Moscow.

Accurate Mapping

If so, it could be a military tool of vast importance. If such methods produced a clear definition even of continental coastlines, Sputnik would give Russia a far more accurate map of the world than anyone now has. This could mean the difference between hitting and missing a U. S. city with a Russian missile.

A spokesman for Project Vanguard said its scientists doubt Sputnik contains instruments which could have any practical value in revising maps.

"This is only an opinion, however. We don't know," he added. "We do know that it is sending coded signals of some kind. We don't know what it is sending."

These unexplained signals, the great weight of the sphere and Russia's secrecy about Sputnik's instruments and reports have left the question in doubt.

Information Exchange

Why don't we ask the Russians what instruments Sputnik is carrying and what it is reporting?

The official position is that Russia has promised to furnish information on IGY experiments and is expected to do so. The Russian delegation voted for a resolution at the rockets and satellite conference here Oct. 5, the morning after Sputnik shocked the world, calling for full exchange of satellite findings and plans.

It was announced Monday that American and Russian scientists have agreed to exchange information gathered on Sputnik. But the announcement appeared to limit the exchange to observations of the Red Moon's progress through the sky rather than any data obtained from signals.

Russian scientists have implied Sputnik's reports may not be disclosed. They said it was not launched as part of the IGY exploration of the earth's upper atmosphere.

Now Hear This!

JACKY FENWICK

This is another one of those days when I have waited all day for SOMEONE to call with some kind of news, but all my waiting was in vain! Evidently we are living in a town where no one does anything but sit home and twiddle their thumbs!

Marge Hill, in charge of the tickets for The High Fever Follies, has been organizing her teams so that come next January, things will be ready to "roll", and all the preliminary work will be finished. Last year, people weren't sure what the "Follies" were all about, and many people didn't think far enough ahead to purchase their tickets before they were all gone. I think the story will be a little different this year.

Water May Be Top Internal Problem Within Few Years

CHICAGO 10 — Interior Secretary Fred A. Seaton has predicted that by 1972 some cities and industries will be meeting their mounting water demands by converting sea water to fresh water at a price they "can afford to pay."

Seaton, who spoke at the opening session of the Indiana Daily Press Assn. annual meeting, warned that within a relatively few years water could be America's top internal problem.

He outlined a number of the Eisenhower administration's programs for trapping and conserving rain water, which now runs largely to the sea unused.

Among these is the Upper Colorado River storage project which should be completed in the 1960s and will provide irrigation for 364,500 arid acres and 1,200,000 kilowatts of generating capacity for residents of Arizona, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and New Mexico.

But he said even these "massive efforts" will not be enough to meet the water needs of the future.

"We must go to the sea itself and bring back from it fresh water to make life possible on the land," Seaton said.

He said private research, conducted under contract with the Interior Department, has brought the cost of converting salt to fresh water down to 60 cents per thousand gallons. The cost is expected to drop even further "in the near future."

"Where the mastery of this problem will ultimately lead—worldwide—has almost limitless possibilities," Seaton continued.

River deltas are so called because their triangular shape resembles the Greek letter, Delta.

for now people are aware of just what the "Follies" are, and those who attended last year will surely want to do so again this year, and those who were unfortunate enough to miss out last year will be sure not to let the same thing happen this year!

This really will be a short column, because I can't even think of some topic to stretch this with! I can usually manage to dig up something out of this poor feeble brain of mine, even if it bores most of you! But if the old machinery won't work... it just won't work!

Margaret Milton came over for a cup of coffee, and as she was going out the door, Jimi Gold walked in. So nothing would do but that I sit down and have another cup!

Guess I'll give in and admit defeat. This rambling isn't getting me anyplace, and nothing has occurred to me since I started it. Do with some of you people sitting at home reading this, would take pity on me and think of something that's printable, and give me a call about it.

Well, if I didn't almost forget the one thing I did want to remember to put in today! Sonny Haskins, a former neighbor of mine, has found a class-ring that some unfortunate person lost. It IS NOT a Seminole High School ring, and for obvious reasons I can't tell you what school it is from. It was found a week ago last Sunday at Crow's Fishing Camp, and the Haskins have been watching the paper in hopes that some one would advertise that they had lost such an item. The owner can have the ring by calling FAIR-fax 2-6165 and identifying it. The school name is on it, as well as the year and I believe some engraving, though about that I am not certain. Perhaps you know of someone who has recently lost such a ring, so you could be a GOOD Samaritan and pass on this information.

Well, this is it... and no two ways about it! Hope that next time I will have something of interest to write about.

Raceway Names Officers, Directors At Annual Meet

Stockholders of Seminole Park Raceway voted to amend a charter providing for issuance of $100,000 in additional B stock at their annual meeting this week.

A general outline of the progress of the track was made and a new Board of Directors and Officers elected which include Earl Higginbotham, director and treasurer; Randolph Y. Matheny, Orlando attorney, director and secretary; Harold Scott, director and vice president; Glenn Norman, Longwood, director and vice president; and W. E. Kemp, director and president.

The meeting received enthusiastic response and enthusiasm from stockholders that were present.

Announcement was made that the clubhouse will be known in the future as the Turf and Paddock Club, with Tom McInnis of Miami new manager and operator. The club will have its formal opening about Nov. 1.

Kemp revealed that many horses for the training season are coming in now and that reservations have been made for all stalls available for the coming season.

He concluded that it is hoped "that the litigation which has retarded the development of the regular racing season will be solved at an early date and the racing with pari-mutuel could be looked forward to very shortly."

DANIELS PLEADS GUILTY

NEW YORK (AP)—Singer Billy Daniels pleaded guilty Monday to illegal possession of a pistol. He was convicted after testimony from the shooting of boxing trainer James R. Jackson in an after-hours bottle club last year. Daniels, 42, was indicted for felonious assault in the shooting. A general sessions judge set Dec. 3 for sentencing on the gun possession charge.

my new york

BY MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—In beginning his new book, Subways Are for Sleeping, Edmund Love mentions the case of the seven old ladies who not long ago were found to have lived in the Pennsylvania station rest rooms for three months. Love wonders why everyone was so surprised. "It is not only possible," he says, "but the accepted way of life in certain social circles. I know of two men who have been living in Grand Central Terminal for almost 10 years. . . . Unlike the seven old ladies, they have not been found."

This old man lives off the contents of his book—and a fascinating wad of contents it is. Love is a Flushing, Mich., man who once taught school in Flint, saw action as a War department combat historian in the Okinawa campaign and, a few years ago, was caught up in a whirlwind of my "new york" life. He explains his whirlwind no further—but when it ended, Love was walking the street of New York as the newest recruit to the small army of men and women who live by their wits and on virtually no money in Manhattan. It is of this army that he writes and writes well.

HE WRITES, FOR INSTANCE, OF Henry Shelby.

Shelby is a middle-aged, young-looking man, a University of Michigan graduate with a master's degree in economics, who is a bum. Love prefers the term vagrant. Occasionally Shelby works for a day or two as a dishwasher or mow-shower but he never has enough money to sleep regularly in, say, a hotel room—so he sleeps in subway. "Usually the Eighth or Ninth Avenue subway. The other lines, the IRT and B-MT, he describes as too noisy and carrying "an undesirable clientele."

Shelby's train, Shelby will ride from Manhattan to Queens to Brooklyn and back again, for four and a half to five and a half hours. He does this beginning at 12 or 1 a. m. and, because he falls asleep quickly—and awakes just as quickly, to avoid being picked up by police—he gets four hours' sleep. He also sleeps in Central park or Prospect park in Brooklyn, in good weather, or in an occasional hotel lobby. All-night movie houses, he avoids. The pictures are too noisy for sleep and Shelby can't keep from watching them to see how they burn out.

Shelby is, thus, an odd sort of man to be bumping around New York. "I don't know how long I'll live this life," he told Love, after four years of it. "Maybe something will happen that will force me to change, one way or another." When that something happens, Love adds, "he will either go back into the world from which he came or seek out a life in the morass of alcoholism or despair that has engulfed other vagrants."

LOVE ALSO TELLS OF Charles Kautson,

an Iowa man aiming to be an opera star, who lives in other people's apartments. Not illegally. He has a list of some 50 friends with whom he is in constant touch. At least one of them always is out of town—so Charles sleeps in his or her flat.

A charming and gracious man, Charlie eats free in the same fashion. He's invited to dinner every evening and has a long waiting list of people who want to invite him to dinner. He knows seven different penny scales around town where he can weigh himself free. Charlie will work at a job and frequently does—but if the firm isn't close enough to his newest home, he's apt to quit it shortly.

There's Ernie Clay, a Phi Beta Kappa from Oregon State and a sometime Chicago detective, who spends his time challenging errand boys in Union Square. "He is," Love declares, "a bum by preference. Although he drinks and has gotten drunk on occasion, he is no alcoholic. I just want to be free to live, say, and do the things I want to," he says. "As long as I'm doing what I'm doing now, I've got that freedom." Ernie makes a little money shining shoes and once in a while paints a portrait.

"This," Love concludes, "is a book without an end. Who can say—certainly not I—where my friends will be, what they will be doing tomorrow? They may give up their twilight society and live the convention describes as 'normal' lives. They may not. But of one thing I am sure. They will change, as all people must, as long as they have life." Subways Are for Sleeping is the story of Love's strange and wonderful friends. You should know them.

Taxpayers Appear To Want Rocket Program Pushed

By TOM NELSON
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP)—If the Defense Department's mail is any clue, American taxpayers want the nation's rocket program pushed vigorously regardless of cost.

The citizens' viewpoint of the defense money question, even here, seems so far as to stand Defense Secretary Neil H. McElroy small cash contributions to help finance missile and satellite work.

The Pentagon has received more than 125 letters, cards and telegrams from private citizens on the successful Russian satellite launching Oct. 4. With few exceptions they urged McElroy not to spare the horses in the missile field.

Reversal Of Trend

That is a complete switch from a month ago — before Sputnik. Then the bulk of Pentagon mail applauded economy steps by Congress and Charles E. Wilson, McElroy's predecessor.

To hell with taxes," wrote a Danbury, Conn., couple. "Give us the moon."

A Charlotte, N. C., man sent a $1 money order to help organize clubs to stimulate thinking about satellites. From Oakland, Calif., came a $5 check to help assure that the United States is first with a space platform and "ultimately, to the moon."

A man from Pierre, S. D., sent a poem about "Little Ivan Sputnik" with these final verses. He caused a great commotion. He's really just a blur. He travels in one motion At 18,000 per. Little Ivan Sputnik Is a lonesome little man. But soon he'll have a partner By the name of Uncle Sam.

Agriculture Dept. Recommends Cut In Potato Acreage

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department has recommended cuts up to 15 per cent in acreage of spring crop potatoes in 1948.

The department, in an acreage-marketing guide report, recommended the acreage reduction be confined to Florida, North Carolina, Arizona and California for early spring and late spring potatoes. There is no compulsion for producers to follow the recommendations.

Florida producers were urged to cut acreage of early spring potatoes practically all of the early spring crop. The Florida acreage this year was 21,700 acres. The recommended cut was 9 per cent in North Carolina.

Farmer Finds Bull Asleep In Bedroom

AVINGHAM, England (AP)—Farmer William Bowers climbed upstairs, went into his bedroom, yawned — and did a quick double take.

There was an 18-month-old Friesian bull in his room. Apparently it had nosed open the french windows of the farm house, climbed the stairs, and settled down happily to sleep.

Bowers couldn't believe in neighbors. They couldn't budge the animal.

An hour later, it stood up, sighed, lumbered down the stairs, and returned to the cold farmyard.

THIS IS a glimpse of Princess Margaret in her new and shorter hairdo. The picture was taken when she attended memorial services for King Haakon of Norway at St. James' Chapel in London. It was her first public engagement since her return from a vacation in Scotland. The new hair style drew adverse criticism from one London paper.

World War I Veterans Facing Problem

World War I veterans holding term GI life insurance might well ponder the experience of nearly 20,000 veterans of World War I who didn't convert their term policies to permanent GI insurance.

That's the advice of Benjamin S. Beach, Officer in Charge of the Veterans Administration office in Central Florida.

Having carried their term GI policies through as many as seven renewals, these 20,000 World War I veterans now face an almost insurmountable problem, Beach said.

Averaging 62 years of age, with their earnings generally declining they are finding the renewal cost of their term policies so high that many of them are being forced to drop their GI insurance. Even those who can afford to renew currently may not be able to do so in another five years, Beach pointed out.

Comments On Philippine Scene

ROYAL PAIR GET WHALE OF A FISH: Governor General of Canada Vincent Massey (left) joins Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip in a hearty laugh over a giant sturgeon presented them at Government House in Ottawa. Under an old law, all sturgeon and several other varieties of fish automatically belong to the crown once they are hooked. The amusement came when the visiting monarch was actually present to claim her fish. (International)

Editors Note: November 12 will be national election day in the Philippines. The main attraction is the contest for the presidency. In the following dispatch, United Press Correspondent M. F. Sarmiento gives a picture of the latest developments on the Philippine Political scene.

By M. F. SARMIENTO
United Press Staff Correspondent
MANILA (UP) — The Philippines' 71 million qualified voters go to the polls Nov. 12 to pick the man to run the 11-year-old republic for the next four years. But the voters will have a difficult task in making the choice. For never in the Philippines post-war history have they been called upon to exercise their right to vote amidst such confusion as exists in the current political campaign. In addition to seven candidates for the presidency, the voters will have to pick a vice president from among five candidates, and eight senators from 48 candidates put up by six political parties—for a total of 80 aspirants for national offices—plus the entire membership of the 104-seat House of Representatives.

Follow U.S. Form
The Philippines have modeled their governmental system after that of the United States. But there is one big difference. In the Philippines, candidates for the presidency and the vice presidency run separately. Hence, a president may have a political enemy as his No. 2 man.

Running for president are incumbent Carlos P. Garcia, and Jose Yulo, Claro M. Recto, Manuel P. Manahan, Antonio Quirino, Valentin De Los Santos and Fernando U. Gonzales. The last two, however, are completely unknown to the people and probably can be written off.

For the ruling Nacionalista Party (Np), the standard bearer is 61-year-old Garcia, who succeeded to the presidency after the death of President Ramon Magsaysay in a plane crash on a Cebu Pretty Mary Lou Gonzalez, popular vocalist from Tampa, is among the entries in the Tanager Queen Contest being held at Cypress Gardens on Nov. 2.

Mountain peak last March 17. Representing as he does the administration majority party, Garcia has all the advantages.

Pledge Magsaysay Policy
Basically, the NP claims to have been chosen to carry on where Magsaysay left off. It also claims the Philippines never had it so good, with bigger employment, peace and order, low prices, land for the landless, booming industries, cooperatives, producer incentives and higher food production. Economically, the NP says the country is strong, the peso is stable and trade is being developed outside the U.S. market.

It adds that roads are being built everywhere, especially Barrio (village) roads, and artesian wells, a pet project of the late Magsaysay, are sprouting everywhere.

Strongly Oppose Communism
Garcia himself, like Magsaysay, believes in the regeneration of the masses as the "true salvation" of the Philippines from the clutches of Communism. Under his administration, the Philippine Congress approved a law outlawing the communist party of the Philippines.

The former vice president and foreign secretary pledges closer cooperation with the non-communist world, particularly the United States.

He was the Philippine delegate to the founding session of the United Nations in San Francisco in 1945.

His bettle cry is simple and direct: elect Garcia President in November and assure yourselves of the solution of urgent problems facing the nation today.

'Feelies' Are Coming

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD — Take cover, men, the "feelies" are coming: "Feelies" are a new kind of movies with an added dimension. You not only hear and see them, you also feel 'em.

This is accomplished by beaming messages to the subconscious mind via a process called Precon for preconscious. First experiments, with these subliminal suggestions were made in theaters where management flashed signs pushing popcorn — and popcorn sales soared.

The messages are invisible on the screen because they are beamed too fast for the conscious eye to see. But they register on the subconscious.

Shivering Audience
For example, should the characters in a picture experience severe cold, precon could flash on and off with "you're freezing to death," and audiences would literally be shivering in the aisles.

First movie to be made using the "feelies" technique is "ESP" extra — sensory perception which goes before the camera this month at Westin — Rush productions.

C. W. Westin, president of the outfit, says the picture will be a scientifically controlled project, under the supervision of Dr. Robert E. Corrigan, inventor of Precon.

It's a good thing, too. No telling what might happen if Precon got out of control.

Company spokesmen say any emotion can be evoked by the process—best, envy, lust, fear, though creepy feeling to know that the individual without his knowing it. Just think what might happen if precon enticed audiences to go jump in a lake. Then what?

Rich by A Landslide
Or consider the reactions in a political situation if the message "vote for Zileh" was working on the subconscious. Zileh would win in a landslide.

How about "don't pay taxes?" The country would go broke.

"Feelies" could even cause a mass evacuation. It would not take long to make a ghost town of Hollywood by using Precon to warn "the Russians are in Pasadena" or so the promoters hint.

Dr. Corrigan is aware of the social implications of Precon. He says "there is a definite need for monitoring and controlling it by responsible authorities."

Nevertheless, it gives one a

NEEDS IDEAS
VIENNA — Czechoslovakia's Communist government appealed to all citizens today to come forward with ideas for "improving the country's living standard."

First Deputy Premier Jaromir Dolensky said measures to improve living conditions would include surpassing the five-year plan goals in industry, transportation and building, increasing the number of collective farms and their output, and decentralizing the nation's economy.

Eisenhower-Macmillan Talks Resume In More Hopeful Mood

By DONALD J. GONZALES
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—Talks between President Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan resumed today in a possibly more hopeful mood due to a sudden burst of U.S. military achievements including a 1,000-4,000-mile rocket shot.

meanwhile, that the two leaders are considering asking other nations to join in pooling scientific military information as a truce card in the East-West race for nuclear and space superiority.

Eisenhower and Macmillan began talks Wednesday night on scientific unity. Their first conference began at 8 p.m. e.d.t. and concluded at 9:30 p.m. There was no announcement of what took place. Further talks were scheduled today.

Close attention is being paid to the war-jittery Middle East and a careful review of Soviet intentions around the globe, as well as the issue of East-West military and scientific supremacy.

May Discuss Red Move
Russia's decision to send one of its top military commanders to take charge of Soviet troops on the Russian-Turkish border, announced Wednesday, was considered likely to come up in the discussions. British diplomats were reported gravely concerned about appointment of Red Army Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky to what previously was deemed a minor border post.

The dramatic firing of the Air Force rocket to 1,000-4,000 miles over the Pacific was almost certain to create a new surge of optimism in the ability of the United States and the West to match or outstrip Russia in the race for space supremacy.

Added to this was other announcements of new U. S. strides in the modern weapons field. These included the successful testing of a 1,500-mile Jupiter missile, disclosure of an atomic depth charge for combating Soviet submarines and the test firing of a Vanguard missile which eventually will carry a U.S. satellite into space.

Administration officials said Eisenhower is emphasizing two basic points concerning closer scientific cooperation:
1. Russia's advances in the scientific field require greater efforts in the same field by the free world.
2. The administration will ask Congress next session to revise the closer scientific cooperation on nuclear energy act to permit clear matters with British and other nations.

Collins Says Assessors Must Up Property Values

ORLANDO (AP)—Gov. LeRoy Collins told tax assessors in an uncertain time today that they must for neglecting their constituents home counties or face the music for neglecting their constitutional duty.

"I do not say this in any spirit of antagonism," he added, "I am examining what each of you has done this year, and I am anxiously watching your plans for next year."

The Constitution requires that property be assessed at full value, but recent surveys show that only about three counties are assessing at 100 per cent value and some are assessing at as little as 5 to 20 per cent.

Collins told the assessors that unless counties make a property contribute more to the tax coffers, particularly for schools, there is going to be pressure for state taxes in 1959 in addition to the 100 million dollars put on the books by the last session.

"I am definitely opposed to this but we will find it difficult to avoid increase unless the counties put themselves in a position to finance their own reasonable needs without having to turn to the state to do their tax collecting for them," he said.
