Yankee Lake Lawyer: City Violated Charter

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer
(Second of two parts)

Defense attorneys in the Yankee Lake suit have charged Sanford city commissioners and administrators with violating the city charter when they met on Nov. 8 to sanction a condemnation effort to obtain the property for the city's wastewater management program. The challenge will be heard by Seminole-Brevard Circuit Judge Tom Waddell in a Melbourne courtroom on Feb. 3, defense attorney Mack Cleveland said today.

According to Cleveland, "procedural improprieties" the defense has uncovered could derail Sanford's suit. "We're challenging the actions taken to arrange the (condemnation) meeting and the resolution adopted by the city commission," Cleveland said.

The attorneys have concentrated in part on an error the city made when issuing notice of the 12 p.m. Nov. 8 meeting and arguments will include, according to Cleveland, information received during the depositions given this month by Sanford administrators and commissioners.

The testimony, however, indicates that during their verbal parry with defense attorneys, Sanford representatives have not only firmly supported the Nov. 8 special meeting's propriety, but its timeliness as well.

During their depositions, both Frank Fulson,

Sanford's city manager, and Henry Tamm, the city clerk, told defense attorneys that after the first condemnation meeting agenda was sent out on Wednesday, Nov. 6, with the wrong date (for Thursday, Nov. 7), a corrected follow-up agenda was issued in time to comply with state law requiring 24 hours advance notice for governmental meetings.

The statements have been supported by city commissioners during their depositions, although, according to Cleveland, "some of them don't remember exactly when they received the (second) notice."

According to Tamm, the date error was discovered early Thursday morning, and city maintenance employee Josie Beall was directed to immediately hand-deliver the amended roster to city commissioners.

"She was back before noon (on Thursday)," Tamm said. "So I know the commissioners received twenty-four hours notice before the Friday meeting."

Cleveland, however, contends "it's hard to pinpoint a specific time (when the agenda was delivered) because no receipts or registers were issued" to the commissioners.

He said the defense may attempt to gain "further insights" regarding the Thursday delivery by soliciting the testimony of Ms. Beall. See YANKEE LAKE, page 12A

Dedication Set For Jan. 3

Lake Mary Water Plant On Line

Lake Mary's new $1.4 million Harry Terry Water Treatment Plant will be dedicated by Mayor Dick Fess Jan. 3.

The plant, which handles 350,000 gallons per day, or 3,200 gallons per minute, went into full time service December 18.

If sufficient water were available and the pumps ran 24-hours a day, the plant could handle 4.5 million gallons per day, said Superintendent of Public Works Jim Orioles. The plant is rated to serve 7,000 residential units or the equivalent, he said. The city's water demand is estimated at 1,200 residential units, so the plant is prepared for population and industrial growth.

The facility is named in honor of former long time Lake Mary City Commissioner Harry F. Terry, 77, who retired from city government in September. Terry served on Lake Mary's first commission when the city was incorporated in 1973.

The ten-acre plant site, located on Rinehart Road near Lake Mary Blvd., gives the City of Lake Mary independence from Sanford-supplied water, which it has used since 1976.

In recent years, Sanford and Lake Mary have been at odds over the water situation due to growth in both cities, which taxed Sanford's water supply. The issue came to a head in June of 1984 when Sanford threatened to cut off Lake Mary's water.

Construction on the plant began in March.

Jim Orioles, Lake Mary Superintendent of Public Works, keeps a watchful eye on the pressure and flow of water through the city's Harry Terry Water Treatment Plant.

Water for the plant is supplied by two 600-foot deep wells located 1,000 feet on each side of the structure. The water is pumped from the wells and into the plant, where it is aerated, chlorinated, and fluoridated, before being pumped into the water lines which serve the city.

The most noticed benefit since operation began is increased water pressure.

"The pressure has increased 30-40 percent in fire hydrants," Orioles said, "and there is a difference at home taps as well, especially in the south end of the city. People have called to say their lawn sprinklers are working better, and even notice the difference in their sinks and showers."

Technology has been built into the plant to avert and correct trouble. Any type of malfunction at the plant is reported to Lake Mary Police by an automatic telephone alert system. An electric generator automatically provides power to keep the plant in service 20 seconds after a power failure.

The dedication ceremonies will begin at 9 a.m., and most city government officials are expected to attend.

16 Dead In Two Airport Attacks

Casualties Include Americans

By Paula Butturini
United Press International

Terrorist teams opened fire with submachine guns and grenades in near simultaneous attacks on El Al Israel Airlines passengers at crowded airports in Rome and Vienna, leaving at least 16 people dead and more than 50 wounded.

At least 13 people, including an American girl, died in the attack by terrorists at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport, which was packed with travelers returning from Christmas visits. Three people died in a similar assault at Schwechat Airport in Vienna.

Israeli officials said the Palestine Liberation Organization may be to blame for the attacks and vowed reprisals.

"Israel will do its duty," said Deputy Prime Minister David Levy. "This organization will not get away without punishment."

A White House spokesman said the United States "deplores" the attacks.

At da Vinci Airport, the terrorists opened fire at 9:15 a.m. in a departure area filled with passengers preparing to board a flight for Israel. At least one hand grenade was thrown at the crowd.

Airport police said three terrorists were killed and one was wounded in an ensuing gun battle with Israeli and Italian security agents.

Nine passengers and an Israeli security agent died. At least 30 people were injured.

The dead included a Mexican diplomat and Natasha Simpson, 12, the daughter of Associated Press correspondent Victor Simpson. Simpson, and a younger son, Michael, were wounded.

The Simpsons had been standing at an adjacent ticket counter to check in for a flight home to New York on home leave.

At Schwechat Airport, three gunmen attacked passengers with automatic weapons and hand grenades at about 9:40 a.m., killing two people and wounding 20 to 30 others. See AIRPORT, page 12A

Boys' Backyard Find Brings Bomb Scare; No Explosives

The Seminole County Sheriff's Department bomb disposal technician has determined that a military explosive carrying case found by two Sanford boys in their backyard Thursday afternoon was empty.

Doug Isbell, 8050 Via Hermosa Road, called the Sheriff's Bomb Disposal Unit Thursday, after his 12-year-old step-son Brandon Ward found the military-looking tube in his back yard while playing hide and seek with another son, 8-year-old Jason Isbell.

The elder Isbell said Brandon was hiding in the back yard, when he noticed two metal handles sticking out of the ground. Brandon started digging around the cylinder, and discovered the military green cylinder with the phrases "highly explosive" and "handle with caution" and numbers stenciled on the side.

"He's seen all those Rambo things, and he's a real Rambo fan, so he knew what something military looked like," Isbell said.

The excited child told him of the find.

Isbell called the Sheriff's department to report the object after noon Thursday.

The department's bomb disposal expert Marty LaBrusciano was dispatched, and he unearthed the device. According to Sheriff's Department Captain Roy Hughey, "It appears to be a cylinder carrying tube, like a carrying case. It's 50 inches long, and nine to ten inches in diameter."

The words "This container is reusable" are on the side, according to Hughey. LaBrusciano lifted the tube and placed it in a Bomb Disposal Unit van for removal to the Sheriff's Department.

"It does not appear to have explosives in it," Hughey continued. The department x-rayed the device, and checked the weight, to determine if it contained explosives. After consulting with the U.S. Army,

Increased Demand Suspected Cause

Hospitals Lose Power, Traffic Signals Out

A power outage early this morning in Longwood, coupled with a backup generator that failed, left two hospitals without electricity for an hour and knocked out some signal lights on State Road 434.

Jim Poucher, administrator for South Seminole Community Hospital, Longwood, said that power went off at his hospital and West Lake Hospital, an adjacent psychiatric facility served by the same emergency diesel generator, at 4:55 a.m.

"We lost everything, but the phones," he said, "including the heat, but it stayed pretty warm during the outage."

David Waldrop, Florida Power Corporation Public Information Co-ordinator, said the power outage was caused when an insulator in an electric feeder at a substation malfunctioned for undetermined reasons, "but a reasonable assumption would be that the problem was caused by increased demand (for electricity) because of the cold," he said.

Waldrop reported that the area affected was in the State Route 434 corridor in Longwood. There were 920, mostly retail, customers without power for about an hour.

Traffic signals were out at Palm Springs Drive and Tollgate Trail intersection on SR 434.

At South Seminole hospital there was one patient in the intensive care ward on a respirator who had to be helped to breathe with manual equipment for an hour and five minutes until power was restored, according to Poucher. He said most patients slept through the outage and there was no surgery going on at the time.

When the generator, which Poucher said is checked regularly and has functioned during previous outages, failed to start the fire alarm went off and the Longwood Fire Department responded. The backup generator failed to work due to a burned out solenoid, a cylinder-like coil that carries power.

The fire department was able to supply enough power with their generator to light the halls and there were plenty of flashlights on hand for just such an emergency, Poucher said.

Ambulances were rerouted to other hospitals in case of an emergency.

Poucher said Coastal Power Co. repaired the generator this morning. —Jane Casselberry

City Hall Workers See End Of 'Icebox'

For the first time in five days, many Sanford City Hall employees received a warm welcome when they arrived at work this morning. Second floor staffers were told they would be able to remove their coats and portable heaters this afternoon — and let the building's newly repaired heating unit take over.

Icy winds blowing off Lake Monroe this week sent temperatures plummeting to the low-50's in city hall's administrative services, finance and management offices. And although it's been business as usual, City Manager Frank Fulson summed up the sentiments of staff and administrators alike by saying, "We're freezing. It's like an icebox up here."

The city hall cold snap resulted when five fan blades came unhinged from one of the building's three rooftop heating units, according to Director of Public Works Bob Kelly, who said the situation made him "a pretty popular guy" this week.

"Staff has been calling me every day," he said, "wanting to know when the new parts were coming in."

They arrived this morning and will be installed in time for staff to drink their coffee during afternoon breaks, rather than using the cups to warm their hands.

Kelly said he discovered the broken unit last week, when from the rooftop there arose such a clatter. "I took a look up there to see what was the matter."

"It sounded like a freight train was rolling across the roof," he said. "The fan blades had vibrated right out."

The heating units look like exercise wheels for very large gerbils, with 1-foot long and 2½-foot wide fan blades attached to a metal spool. The system was installed when city hall was built in 1977 and the other two units "are just fine," Kelly said.

The public works director also said he didn't know what had caused the unit to fail, although he estimated it would cost the city approximately $1,000 to have it repaired.

Power System For The Birds

ALAMEDA, Calif. (UPI) — A falcon with a chain around its neck broke loose from its master's home and hit a power line, blacking out the entire city of 74,000 for about a half hour.

The bird was electrocuted in the incident Thursday night, police said. Some areas of the city, across the bay from San Francisco, remained in the dark for an hour or more.

Officials Question Use Of Social Security Trust Funds

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Treasury Department violated federal law by using Social Security trust funds to keep the government operating while Congress delayed action on raising the debt ceiling, a congressional official says.

But Comptroller General Charles Bowsher, in a letter released Thursday to Rep. James Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Social Security subcommittee, said Treasury Secretary James Baker had not "acted unreasonably" in what he described as an "extraordinary situation."

The letter was in response to questions submitted to the head of the General Accounting Office by Jones regarding the use of Social Security funds to meet government costs in September, October and November.

"We conclude that, although some of the secretary's actions appear in retrospect to have been in violation of the requirements of the Social Security Act, we cannot say that the secretary acted unreasonably given the extraordinary situation in which he was operating," Bowsher said in a cover letter to a GAO report on the matter.

Reagan Goes To Sun Country

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan put his stamp of approval on a slimmed-down 1987 budget before his departure today from the wintry chill of Washington to the balmy sunshine of Southern California.

The process by which budget director James Miller told Cabinet departments and other agencies how much and where to cut was unusually placid, an administration official said.

Reagan was beginning an annual weeklong New Year's vacation in Los Angeles and Palm Springs, ending Jan. 3 with a meeting with Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid in Mexicali, Mexico.

Minister Turns Other Cheek

BOSTON (UPI) — An elderly minister who was mugged and robbed on Christmas Eve has turned the other cheek, offering to help his assailants "learn a better way" if they will come to his church for help.

"I wouldn't turn them in to police if they came to me for help," said the Rev. James K. Allen, pastor at the First Parish Church, the oldest in Boston.

Allen, 77, was attacked outside his church when he took a break from officiating an "Aleathon," a marathon to help members of Alcoholics Anonymous make it through the holidays without drinking.

Resolutions Made To Be Broken

SCRANTON, Pa. (UPI) — People who resolve two minutes before midnight New Year's Eve to quit smoking or lose weight might want to think twice about making such a commitment, a University of Scranton researcher advises.

John Norcross says about 70 percent of the people who make New Year's resolutions will break them within a month, and he believes making no resolution may be better than making one you do not seriously intend to keep.

Mexico Pleads For World Help In Locating Art Treasures

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Federal police questioned eight guards on duty at the time 140 priceless art treasures were stolen from Mexico City's National Anthropological Museum, and the Foreign Ministry asked for international assistance in recovering the artifacts.

"The established (security) system was one of the best and had no problems," Museum Director Enrique Florescano said Thursday. "We're going to see what went wrong."

However, museum guards told United Press International there was no alarm system and security was provided by the Mexico City police department in two 12-hour shifts.

Florescano charged the robbery was linked to the international black market of world art treasures "that constantly threatens all museums of the world."

In another development, the Foreign Ministry instructed its embassies overseas to ask for international help in confiscating the archaeological objects.

Death Toll Rises In Tribal Clash

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police today said at least six blacks were killed in political violence in black townships while the death toll from tribal clashes in the remote hills south of Durban has risen to 59.

In another development, authorities Thursday denied black nationalist leader Nelson Mandela was being held in solitary confinement in Pollsmoor prison, where he is serving a life sentence for treason and sabotage.

Durban police said Umbumbulu, where 2,000 Zulu and 3,000 Pondo tribesmen armed with axes, spears, sticks and homemade guns, fought pitched battles late Tuesday and early Wednesday, was quiet but tense Thursday. At least 59 warriors died.

Riot police who have patrolled the area for three weeks said they expected to find more bodies, although the two tribes traditionally take their dead and wounded with them as they withdraw into the hills.

Israel Seeks To Reduce Tension

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Prime Minister Shimon Peres said Syria has moved more missiles into Lebanon, an act that could easily lead to confrontation, but stressed Israel does not want tension to escalate.

"There has been another deployment," Peres told newspaper editors in an interview Thursday. "But Israel does not want escalation and confrontation."

He said a recent deployment of missiles into Lebanon can "easily deteriorate into a confrontation" between Israel and Syria.

Syria beefed up its surface-to-air defense systems along its border with Lebanon after Israeli jets on a reconnaissance mission over Lebanon shot down two Soviet-made Syrian warplanes Nov. 19.

Israeli officials said Syria moved sophisticated Soviet-made SA-6 anti-aircraft missiles into Lebanon but withdrew them several days later to the border inside Syria, where those missiles remain.

For New Headquarters

Rich Plan Zoning Change Ok'd

By Karen Talley
Herald Staff Writer

The Sanford city commission has approved a zone change that will enable the Rich Plan Corporation to locate its administrative headquarters in a predominantly residential area of the city. The move, taken by commissioners during their Monday night meeting, is in direct conflict with the Planning and Zoning Committee's Dec. 5 decision to deny the request due to neighborhood opposition.

However, according to city commissioners, the P&Z was in direct conflict with itself when denying the request to convert Joyce Nicholson's home into a small business office. Commissioners pointed out that the property, which is located at the intersection of West 13th and Myrtle Avenue, will go from multiple family residential to general commercial, in accordance with redistricting contained on the P&Z's new interim land use map.

On Monday night, commissioners cited the P&Z map as one of the reasons for approving the request, although they also questioned why the P&Z had not considered its own map when refusing the rezoning.

P&Z chairman John Morris said today although the map was presented to city commissioners in November, it had yet to be formally adopted by his commission on Dec. 5, when the rezoning was denied. He said the P&Z officially approved its interim map on Nov. 19.

However, according to Morris, the main reason for denial lay with neighborhood opposition to the proposed zone change. "We considered what residents had to say and weighed that against what Rich wanted to do," Morris said. "A lot of people in the area didn't want Rich to move in, so we turned the request down."

Rich Plan's current administrative headquarters is located in downtown Sanford on Third Street, while its plant is on W. 13th Street. Rich Plan President W. E. "Duke" Adamson told city commissioners he had been looking during the last few years for a way to move his company's business headquarters closer to the plant. Purchasing Mrs. Nicholson's property, he said, would enable this. Adamson said the home would not be torn down, but rather converted into four offices.

On Monday night, however, neighborhood representatives turned out to again express their opposition and they faced proponents of the rezoning during lengthy and often emotional presentations to the city commission.

In a voice that cracked at times, the 71-year-old Mrs. Nicholson told commissioners her husband's death last year had left her unable to properly maintain her 50-year-old home and the land surrounding it.

This had prompted her decision to sell, she said, and Adamson "has assured me he'll beautify the property."

The Rich Plan president told commissioners he would be true to his word and his statements were supported by Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce President

Jack Horner. Describing Rich Plan as "a fine corporate citizen of the city," Horner said, "the rezoning would be for the betterment of Sanford and the citizens living near Mrs. Nicholson."

Neighbors, however, viewed the proposal as harbinger of subsequent downzoning that would serve to drive families from the area. "Consider the families now," Theresa Ponzello told the commissioners. "Because if you don't, they're going to end up being pushed out."

"If you allow this commercial rezoning, what will prevent you from approving another and another? If it's allowed to continue, Sanford is going to look like Orlando within the next five years."

Commissioners assured the neighbors that they would not stand for "rampant commercialism" in Sanford. "We're of the same mind on that," Mayor Bettye Smith told the residents.

They also said Adamson's commitment to maintaining the home and its land was a means of avoiding a detrimental end for the 13th Street property.

Commissioner John Mercer pointed out that because the land is in a multi-family district, "The house could be torn down and an apartment building put up without a zone change. I think the alternative offered here tonight is a better one."

"I can think of a lot of worse uses for the land under its present zoning," concurred Commissioner David Farr, who offered the motion to approve the rezoning.

Police Free 4-Year-Old Hostage

LONDON (UPI) — A crack police squad stormed a London apartment with their guns blazing and rescued a 4-year-old girl taken hostage by a knife-wielding man who fatally stabbed her mother in a bloody Christmas siege that lasted nearly 30 hours.

In a drama watched by millions of television viewers, officers of Scotland Yard's Blue Beret squad stormed the apartment late Thursday 29 hours after handyman Errol Walker, 29, threatened to kill Carlene, 4, with a kitchen knife.

The siege, attributed to a domestic dispute, began about 10 a.m. on Christmas Day, a Scotland Yard spokeswoman said. Police were called to the scene Christmas morning after Carlene's mother, Jacky Charles, 22, staggered from the third-floor apartment after being stabbed in the neck. She died later in the hospital.

Police said Walker's wife, Marlene, managed to get out of the apartment and that a fireman snatched their daughter, Patricia, 6, through a window.

"It was at this point the siege proper began," the police spokeswoman said.

It lasted all through Wednesday and most of Thursday.

Then, as television cameras focused on the scene, Walker made a five-second dash from the door to pick up a police shield lying on the balcony. Officers tried to grab him without firing any shots, but he got inside again.

"He shouted to us that he was going to kill Carlene. We decided that her life was in immediate danger and made the decision to storm the apartment using distraction devices," she said.

Police said three shots were fired. Walker was hit in the head and shoulder. The little girl was taken to a waiting ambulance with a knife wound to the neck and a stab wound in her arm.

Police said both were in the hospital in satisfactory condition.

"We decided in the beginning to try and wait this one out and negotiate it through. The negotiations lasted 29 hours. There were periods of considerable instability and periods of calm," a police spokeswoman said.

"From the outset, the police intention was to prevent further injury. But he was armed with a long-bladed kitchen knife and showed considerable instability and irrational behavior," she said. "In the end we had to storm in."

American Indians On Warpath

By Paul Walsh
WASHINGTON (UPI) — American Indian activist Russell Means, who led the militant uprising at Wounded Knee 12 years ago, is taking a band of "warriors" to Nicaragua to support a confederation of three Indian tribes fighting the Sandinista government.

Means, a Sioux Indian, told United Press International Thursday night he will have "upwards of 100" members of the New American Indian Movement in Central America "by the first week of April."

Once there, they will help the Costa Rica-based MISURASATA Indian organization and the U.S.-backed Contras in Nicaragua battle President Daniel Ortega's government.

MISURASATA is an organization representing the Miskito, Suma and Rama Indians who live in Nicaragua and Honduras. The Indians were forced off their land during the 1979 Sandinista revolution.

Means said MISURASATA has been fighting the Sandinista government for nearly five years and its cause is "unstoppable."

"They are self-sufficient people and you don't fool with self-sufficient people," Means said during an interview Thursday night on Cable News Network.

"We're going down there as Indian warriors. We are going to assist the Indian people in rebuilding their villages, replanting the fields, rebuilding their canoes so they can fish and we will defend ourselves at the time."

Means, who led the seizure of South Dakota's Wounded Knee reservation village in 1973, said he and two associates will leave for San Jose, Costa Rica, today from Washington, D.C., as an advance team.

Once in Costa Rica, Means, 45, said he will join the Contras and Indians in Nicaragua, but he did not specify when or how he would enter the country.

He said the effort is being funded by himself, Hank Adams, director of the Survival of American Indians, Olympia, Wash., and actor Marlon Brando.

Brando, who also was at Wounded Knee, created an uproar at the 1973 Academy Awards when he sent a Mexican actress dressed as an Indian princess to pick up the Oscar and read a statement from Brando on behalf of American Indians.

Means said he is expanding his Indian activism from North America because "it involves our spirituality as Indian people."

"I come from an organization that one of its axioms is 'we refuse to turn the other cheek and bend over and get the other two kicked.' When my people are maimed, massacred, imprisoned and jailed anywhere ... all I can do is support those who are in the struggle," he said.

The American Indian Movement occupied Wounded Knee for 71 days seeking an investigation into the ouster of an elected tribal leader of the Oglala Sioux. They also wanted an investigation into charges of mistreatment of Oglala Sioux.

Means and Dennis Banks were tried for conspiracy, assault and theft in 1974, but the charges were dismissed because the FBI was suspected of planting an agent on the Indians' legal defense committee.

WEATHER

NATIONAL REPORT: Blinding clouds of wind-whipped snow blamed for five deaths shrouded roads today from the Plains to the Great Lakes, while a record-setting blast of frigid air in the Southeast made it colder in central Florida than in Alaska.

Travelers advisories for dense fog today were posted in northern Nevada and northern and central California. Fog in Anaheim, Calif., was blamed for the death Thursday of a man who was hit by a car while crossing the street. At the southern tip of Florida early today, the temperature in Key West dropped to a record 46 degrees. Elsewhere in the state, it was 38 degrees in West Palm Beach and 32 in Orlando, compared with 33 in Anchorage, Alaska. Early today the temperature dropped to 7 below in Boise, Idaho. Snow fell from Nebraska and the Dakotas to the Great Lakes early today. Gale warnings were issued in the Great Lakes, and travelers advisories for blowing and drifting snow reached from Wyoming to western Maryland. Winds up to 58 mph swept across Wisconsin Thursday. Gusts of 55 mph raked Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where Highways 2 and 53 were closed Thursday because of blowing snow and were only open to one lane of traffic early today. "You couldn't see at all because of the blowing snow. They had about 3 inches, and with that the winds kicked up pretty good and cut the visibility right down to nothing," said Dubuque County sheriff's dispatcher Pat Pfohl. "As fast as they plowed it, it would blow shut again."

Blowing snow was blamed for the deaths of an Ohio couple in an accident in Michigan Thursday. John and Mildred Keeton of Elmore, Ohio, were killed in Saginaw County, Mich., when their car was hit from behind by a semitrailer truck. The truck driver said he did not see the car because of blowing snow. Snow was also blamed for the deaths of two other people in separate accidents in Michigan Thursday. Robert Beckwith Jr., 47, Goshen, Ind., was killed near Big Rapids when a truck slid out of control and hit his car, and an unidentified woman died in a car crash on a snow-covered road near Detroit. A traffic death also was blamed on icy conditions in Rochester, Minn. A near-blizzard that swept into Michigan Thursday along Lake Michigan dumped up to 14 inches of snow on Muskegon and Oceana counties by this morning. High winds blew the snow into deep drifts. "Oh, it's really bad," Muskegon County Sheriff's Deputy Bruce Raymond said. "Virtually all of our cars are tied up assisting stranded motorists. ... We're begging people not to try to travel." In the South Thursday, the temperature in Tallahassee, Fla., fell to 13 degrees, breaking the record of 14 set two years ago. Citrus growers said temperatures below freezing were common, but reported no damage. "It was very borderline and a little bit scary," said Ernie Neff, a spokesman for Florida

Citrus Mutual. "We are not aware of any crop damage, and if there was it would be very insignificant." The fog in the West forced officials at the Los Angeles International Airport to divert incoming flights and delay takeoffs early Thursday.

Neighbors Break Up Break-In

Two men who surprised burglars at a Jamestown grocery were beaten by the bandits before they fled with no loot Wednesday night.

Joe Long, 19, and Dennis Allen Shattuck, 21, were in Long's mobile home located behind the Old Timer's Grocery, 2400 State Road 426, when they heard breaking glass at 8 p.m. They rushed to the store to investigate, and were jumped by two to four black males, according to a Seminole County Sheriff's Department report. Long and Shattuck, 536 Third Street, Choultota, were beaten but not seriously injured before the intruders escaped in a red Ford Pinto. They were last seen driving toward Red Bug Road on State Road 426.

THEFT FROM OFFICE
Thieves made off with a telephone answering machine valued at $100 after breaking into the offices of Stoneledge Stables, 100 North Oregon Avenue, Sanford. The burglary occurred sometime between 11 a.m. Monday and 10 a.m. Tuesday, according to manager Jerry Lee Conine of Apopka. The office has been burglarized several times in recent months according to the Seminole County Sheriff's Department report.

PARAPHERNALIA ARREST
A Sanford man was arrested and charged with possession of drug paraphernalia at the Sanford Police Department Wednesday. The man was taken to the department following a disturbance. Officers believed the man to be armed, and the search found no weapons, but two marijuana pipes.

HELD FOR BROWARD COUNTY

A 26-year old Casselberry man wanted in Broward County on felony burglary and grant theft charges appeared in Seminole County Court Thursday morning, charged with resisting arrest without violence, possession of marijuana, and criminal mischief, following his arrest by Casselberry Police Tuesday night.

Police responded to a report of domestic disturbance at 1041 Wingo Trail at 7:40 Tuesday evening, where the man had argued with his girlfriend over his threat of "going out to steal" before he left, according to a police report.

After the officers returned to the police department, a routine check of the man's identity, police found the man was wanted in Broward County.

Upon returning to the man's home, the officers observed him sleeping on the living room couch. The man opened the door when the officers knocked, and he was asked to produce some identification.

The man fled the home through a rear door after telling the officers his I.D. was in a rear bedroom. Police captured the man in the back yard of the home and placed under arrest, according to the report.

A search of the man at the department revealed a plastic bag of suspected marijuana. The man then became belligerent, and was placed in a holding cell, police officers said.

He was taken to the Seminole County Jail, where the officers advised he was a suicide and escape risk.

Arrested was Dale Vernon Peacock, who had recently moved to Casselberry from Ft. Lauderdale. Peacock pleaded guilty to the resisting arrest charge, and was sentenced to time already served, while the two other charges were dropped.

He is being held in the Seminole County Jail, awaiting extradition to Broward County to answer charges there.

Miamian Held

MCALLEN, Texas (UPI) — A federal magistrate ordered a Miami, Fla., man held without bond pending a detention hearing today on a charge he attempted to smuggle 106 pounds of cocaine across the border at nearby Hidalgo.

German Antonio Ocampo Gutierrez, 30, who told authorities he was born in Tulua Balle, Colombia, made his initial appearance before U.S. Magistrate Sue Williams Thursday.

Drug Enforcement Administration supervisor Bennie Pierce estimated the cocaine was worth $2.5 million.

Two Officers Arrested In Theft Of Cocaine

By Les Kjos

MIAMI (UPI) — Two former Miami police officers were arrested Thursday and charged with stealing 150 pounds of cocaine while on duty last May in another in a string of drug-related scandals that have been plaguing the department.

The two officers were accused of stealing a portion of what had been a seizure of 850 pounds of cocaine from a boat docked in the Miami River May 31. Both had been fired since then because of suspected drug use.

Arrested without incident before dawn Thursday were Armando Lopez, 24, and Felix A. Beruvides, 28. They were charged with one count each of conspiracy to traffic in cocaine, armed trafficking in cocaine, armed burglary of a conveyance and first-degree grand theft.

The announcement was made by Miami Police Chief Clarence Dickson, who said the arrests were part of a continuing investigation. He declined to provide any further details of the theft.

Dickson said the charges marked a big step in efforts to clean up the department, which has been under fire for other drug scandals.

He said when he took the job as chief last year, "I made a promise to the citizens, police officers and the community to quickly eliminate the corruption in the department."

"We can attribute part of the success in moving toward our goal of cleaning up our department to other agencies — the FBI, the FDLE (Florida Department of Law Enforcement) and the Dade County police department," Dickson said.

Still pending are investigations into the drawings of three drug suspects in the Miami River July 29. Five other Miami police officers have been relieved of duty with pay while that investigation continues.

Witnesses have said the three suspected drug dealers were last seen alive talking to men in police uniforms.

The state attorney's office is investigating the theft last summer of $150,000 from a safe in the police headquarters building. The cash had been intended for a drug as "flash money" in a drug investigation.

Dickson said the pressure generated by the investigations had cut down on illegal activities within the department.

"There is less of that going on now because of the heat," Dickson said.

He said the two former officers arrested Thursday had been dismissed for refusal to take drug tests. He said Beruvides, a five-year Miami police veteran, had been seen using cocaine and his refusal to take a urinalysis resulted in his dismissal in August.

Dickson said Lopez had been ordered to take a urinalysis and refused after a traffic incident in which a Dade County officer had smelled marijuana in his car. Lopez, who had been on the force for three years, was fired last month.

He said a court had ordered the department to reinstate the two officers before their arrest, but that order was under appeal and there were no plans to give the men their jobs back.

Pirates Attack Refugee Ship

By Paul Wedel

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Pirates attacked a Vietnamese refugee boat in the South China Sea, throwing about 40 bound men overboard to their deaths and then raping and abducting 10 women, refugee officials said Thursday.

Surviving refugees told international refugee officials in Malaysia their boat from Ho Chi Minh City was carrying about 80 people when it was attacked by pirates in two boats at about midnight Dec. 16.

They said the pirates tied up all males over 17 years old and threw them overboard, according to a refugee official contacted by telephone.

Two of the men survived. One was able to reboard the boat after the pirates left and the other clung to empty fuel cans until he was picked up by a Malaysian fishing boat three days later, according to the official, who asked not to be further identified.

The pirates raped and then abducted all 10 young women aboard, he quoted the refugees as saying.

Before leaving the ship, they disabled its engine and then set it adrift. The boat drifted for three days before reaching Malaysia on Dec. 19.

The surviving refugees reported the pirate boats had letters on them in a non-Latin script which they could not identify.

Survivors of the attack — 17 older women, 11 children and the two males — are being held in Pulau Bidong Island refugee camp, the official said.

The attack was the worst reported such incident since 117 refugees were killed in a pirate attack about one year ago, he said.

Pirates continue to prey on refugees despite stepped-up anti-piracy patrols by the Thai Navy that has helped reduce the number of attacks.

Representatives of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said the percentage of refugee boats attacked by pirates has dropped from a high of 77 percent in 1981 to 23 percent through November this year.

In the first 11 months of this year, 2,921 Vietnamese boat people reached Thailand and 7,051 arrived in Malaysia, they said.

Appeals Court Blocks Kids Dial-A-Porn Ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — New federal rules making it harder for children under 18 to call "dial-a-porn" telephone recording services were blocked from taking effect Thursday by a federal appeals court.

The Federal Communications Commission said that the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in New York, in a Dec. 20 order that was not announced until Thursday, granted a stay of new FCC regulations designed to prevent children from calling "dial-a-porn" phone numbers, which offer sexually explicit messages.

The new FCC regulations, adopted in October but due to take effect Thursday, required the use of a special telephone access code before transmission of "obscene or indecent" recorded messages could occur.

Access codes could be provided only to people who could prove they were at least 18 and who wrote into the "dial-a-porn" service requesting code numbers, which would then be sent to applicants by mail.

The stay delays implementation of the FCC action until the court rules on the merits of an appeal brought by Carlin Communications Inc. of New York, which offers the "dial-a-porn" telephone service. A decision in the case is pending.

An FCC spokeswoman said the stay of the FCC regulations was contained in a one-sentence court order that did not explain the court's reasons for delaying the new rules.

Federal Job Listings Hidden In Unlisted Phone Recordings

By Irla Krasnow
UPI Feature Writer

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Securing government agency employment in Washington is no easy task, but finding the phone numbers to find the jobs may be tougher yet.

Most employment hotlines are unlisted, discovered freelance photographer Ed Streeky while trying to help a friend get a job.

"I made about six phone calls to federal agencies, and they said, 'tell your friend to call these numbers for 24-hour-a-day hotlines listing job openings.' I questioned the agencies on why they were unlisted numbers, but nobody could tell me."

Dozens of phone calls later, Streeky discovered there are some 70 unlisted numbers offering job information within various federal agencies. Streeky, who lives in Arlington, Va., works regularly for Time, Life, Newsweek and People magazines.

"It's a Catch-22; they need job applicants, but in order to get the hotline numbers you have to do a lot of work," he adds.

To make the task easier for the general public — and to make a few bucks on the side — Streeky has published his own phone listings, "The Book: A Directory of Federal Job Information Phone Numbers Plus Unlisted Numbers for Dial-a-Vacancy 24-hour-hotlines".

It retails for $6.95 in Washington bookstores.

Among the agencies with unlisted job information numbers are the U.S. Information Agency (parent agency of Voice of America), the Departments of Agriculture, Energy and Transportation, the CIA, FBI, the U.S. Army, House of Representatives, the Senate, and the Smithsonian Institution.

"The list goes on and on," says Streeky. "Many agencies will tell you, 'come in, we have job announcements on our bulletin boards', but with my little book, you can look from your apartment."

How did he get the unlisted numbers? "Hey, I'm a journalist; I'm not going to give out my secrets."

Howard Toy, director of personnel for the Smithsonian, insists it's an "oversight" that their dial-a-job number can't be found in the phone book or through directory assistance.

"I've always assumed these numbers are public information," he says. "We put them on job vacancy announcements and send them to all federal agencies. We post them on our bulletin boards. If the Federal Times or the Washington Post wanted to pick up our numbers and publish them, we would be delighted."

How about the telephone book?

"We will eventually recommend that we would put our dial-a-job number in there. It's public information as far as I'm concerned."

A media representative for the FBI says their employment hotline isn't listed because it's a new addition to the agency.

"The recorded message is an experiment," he said, requesting anonymity. "It's only been in existence two or three months. We are trying to gauge the volume of calls to see if that service is necessary."

"It's completely aboveboard. There is nothing secretive about that number. What we're trying to avoid is having a multitude of numbers listed for the FBI in the phone book. We'd rather let the operators designate callers to the proper departments."

For those on a serious search for a federal agency job, a phone call isn't the most effective route, advises the FBI spokesman.

"To make the best inroads, write directly to the personnel office or stop in," he says. "If you try to call, you aren't going to get the same kind of response as you will with a well-written letter requesting information. A letter like that usually ends up in the correct hands sooner or later."

Mad Money Won't Help

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — If space agencies fail to consider the social and psychological effects of longterm missions in space, the first star wars may be fought in their own spaceships, a researcher said Thursday.

"Our whole focus on research has been toward resolving the technological problems of space flight," University of Florida graduate student Anne Campbell said.

"As we move toward longterm missions where astronauts are isolated and confined to environments away from Earth, we're going to have to start looking at the psychological and social problems of group interaction."

Campbell told participants at the International Astronautical Federation in Sweden in October that the success or failure of colonization will hinge on how well humans get along in orbit.

"You can't just get in your car and drive away when you're mad," she said.

"So far, most missions have only lasted seven to 10 days and every minute of the flights was programmed," Campbell said.

"They don't have time to think about the conflicts. Once we get colonies up there, we'll need to let them self-organize rather than having people on Earth dictate everything that's going on. We need to train people now to eventually take on that responsibility."

Campbell, who specializes in bilingual education and began looking into the difficulties of longterm space travel as part of a special project, said NASA has gone through three stages of space exploration in the past three decades: getting into space, landing on the moon and developing the reusable shuttle.

"We're entering the fourth stage where life in space is possible," she said. "Now that we're talking about sending 15 or 20 people up to man a space station, we need to begin planning. A new language may develop to describe things that don't exist on Earth. New ways of interacting in space will develop."

Campbell said Russian cosmonauts already have experienced some problems of long missions.

"One thing they've done is send foods along so the cosmonauts will have familiar smells like cookies and turkey," she said. "They also schedule weekly phone visits with their families. They try to meet the needs of the group by creating a familiar environment."

Campbell said there were few conflicts among the first American astronauts because all were military pilots and "shared the right stuff."

"Then they started letting women in," she said. "Now you've got perhaps 15 different roles represented up there: technicians, journalists — they've even got a teacher going up. All of those different backgrounds living and working in a very confined area."

She said unique problems develop with crews made up of different nationalities. Russian space flights have included Cubans, Frenchmen, Indians and Czechoslovakians. A Saudi Arabian and Mexican have gone up on recent American space shuttle flights.

"Technical English is different from social English," she said. "The Russians have ... shown that in an emergency, when you've got to translate back and forth, there's no time to make sure that the other person understands."

"There's a tendency to say, 'You just sit and we'll get the job done.' That makes the other person feel left out, creating conflict."

Campbell said one astronaut told her there were some Russian cosmonauts he would never go into space with because they lacked a sense of humor.

"In a tense situation, he wanted to be with somebody who could laugh rather than getting all stressed out," she said.

Campbell said astronauts are reluctant to talk about any conflicts or hostilities that occur for fear they might be considered potentially dangerous to a mission and grounded. She said NASA should assign psychologists to train with the astronauts to help them deal with their feelings.

"If you've got someone up there undergoing a psychological breakdown, you can't just put them on the wall with duct tape and restrain them until you get back," she said. "I would suggest that we start seeing psychologists as the people who can keep us up in space once we get there."

Rambo: Symbol Of Our Times

A group opposed to the manufacture and sale of war toys held a symbolic "burial" of a pile of them recently in Santa Monica, Calif. A leader of the group spoke hopefully of efforts by similar groups elsewhere in this country and in Canada, Britain, Australia and The Netherlands to stamp out such toys, mainly by organizing boycotts. They've got their work cut out for them. According to the National Coalition on Television Violence, sales of war toys have increased 350 percent in just two years, creating a billion-dollar industry-within-an-industry.

It's uncertain that military-type toys breed an aggressiveness and an idealization of war in youngsters that they wouldn't otherwise develop. In any case, banning such devices in a free society is a dubious proposition at best. But it's indisputable that in recent years, with the renewed emphasis — from the White House on down — on American belligerence abroad, there's been a proliferation of symbols of a society that celebrates the macho and denigrates gentleness. Its spirit is captured in one word: Rambo.

The first Rambo movie, "First Blood," attracted only limited notice, but after the U.S. invasion of Grenada, and following the 1984 Summer Olympic Games — a triumph for American participants that was magnified by the jingoistic television coverage — the second Rambo film took the box offices by storm. Now, a veritable Rambo industry has developed. Coleco Industries will introduce a Rambo "action figure" in the spring, coinciding — not coincidentally — with the beginning of a Rambo animated cartoon series on TV that's expected to run for more than 60 half-hour segments. A company spokesman emphasized that there won't be any killing in the cartoons, unlike in the blood-drenched movie, where one man takes on and "wastes" what seems to be half the Vietnamese army, making up in fantasy, presumably, for American failure in Southeast Asia.

Not all war toys have evolved from concepts as mindless and destructive as the Rambo phenomenon, of course, but the enormous surge in their popularity suggests something inherently unhealthy. Among other things, it reflects a popular confusion between love of one's country and an eagerness to impose that country's will on others, preferably by force.

Those cashing in on this phenomenon are more interested in making money than in selling an idea, but if the result is the same, their culpability is scarcely diminished. Still, they're no more culpable than those "adults" who condone and abet such foolishness by buying these martial symbols for their children.

Share The Grief

The crash of a jetliner in Newfoundland snuffed out the lives of 248 U. S. servicemen and women returning home for Christmas. We share this grief with their families.

Terrorist groups were quick to claim responsibility. What a low form of life they are.

It could be months, however, before the cause of the crash is determined. We hope it doesn't come down to some violation of safety regulations. Deregulation of the airlines has brought many new routes and healthy competition, but there is also a strong incentive to cut corners on safety.

This cannot be tolerated. A full complement of safety inspectors is required to see that safety rules are followed to the letter. No half-measures can be tolerated.

How Do You Say Ho! Ho! Ho! In Martian?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Science-fiction books and movies unquestionably have made American citizens more conscious of unidentified flying objects, space ships and other alien visitations.

Early Christmas morning, I understand, a UFO investigator at the Pentagon received a telephone call more or less bearing out this observation.

"Hello," the caller said. "Could you tell me where I should report a UFO sighting?"

"This must be the place," the investigator replied, looking around.

"Well, I saw one about an hour ago."

"You did, did you? What did it look like?"

"It looked like a sleigh."

"A sleigh? How was it propelled? By nuclear power?"

"No. It was being pulled by eight tiny reindeer."

"Flying reindeer, eh? Sounds like something the Martians might try. Notice anything unusual about them?"

"Yes. The lead reindeer had a very shiny nose."

You could even say it glowed."

"Anything else?"

"The other reindeer had strange names. They were called things like Donner, Cupid, Comet and Blitzen."

"I see. How did you happen to get close enough to be on a first name basis?"

"The UFO landed on my lawn."

"Your lawn? Now I've heard everything. You were out in the yard at that hour?"

"Negative. I saw and heard the whole thing from my bedroom window. I in my kerchief and Ma in her cap had just settled our brains for a long winter's nap. When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter, I sprang to my feet to see what was the matter."

"Let's leave your bizarre sleeping garments out of this. What happened next?"

"I went to the window and threw open the sash."

"I mean, was the vehicle occupied when you first saw it?"

"Affirmative. It was being driven by a jolly old elf, jolly and fat. When he laughed, which was often, his belly would shake like a bowl full of jelly."

"That's Mars, all right. How was the driver dressed?"

"He was wearing a red suit, trimmed in white. And he carried on his back a big sack."

"Did he dismount?"

"Yes. He got out of the vehicle in the new-fallen snow, put his finger to his nose and flew up to the roof."

"What did he do then?"

"I know you aren't going to believe this, but he entered the house by way of the chimney."

"I'm just taking notes here. It's not my job to believe or disbelieve. Would you say the UFO was extraterrestrial?"

"It certainly looked out of this world to me. Have you ever heard anything like this before?"

"Sure, we get reports of such sightings every year on Christmas Eve. But usually the flight originate at the North Pole."

President Protected By Staff

By Helen Thomas

White House press coverage of President Reagan has been cut to the limit in the past several weeks with the press barred from covering many of his official activities.

An example was a farewell reception for Margaret Heckler, appointed U.S. Ambassador to Ireland after being eased out of the Cabinet as Secretary of Health and Human Services.

Reporters also were not allowed to cover the swearing-in of former Gov. Otis Bowen of Indiana as Heckler's successor. The HHS job involves managing a budget of some $300 billion dollars and the barring of the media from the ceremony was unusual.

He has not held a news conference since Sept. 17, and he has not been questioned by American reporters on the summit meeting in Geneva last month with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. After summit, Gorbachev submitted to questioning for one hour by the international press.

Deputy press secretary Larry Speakes tells reporters "That's the way we do business" or "That's the way I decided it" when asked why so much coverage is being denied the press.

Many events that merit a story are reduced to a so-called "photo opportunity," a term coined in the Nixon administration, in which reporters are not permitted to join cameramen.

One press aide was quoted as saying "If I died and went to heaven, it would be a photo opportunity without reporters."

The White House senior staff decides each morning what coverage will be allowed. More and more they are ruling out any type of coverage, obviously fearing that Reagan may be asked a question by reporters on the scene.

Reagan can handle himself. He did not get to be president by being unable to field questions from reporters.

It is quite clear that Reagan's press aides believe they can be his surrogates on all subjects and save the president from having to hold a news conference.

But news conferences are an important institution in a democracy because there is no other way to make a president accountable to explain his actions and policies.

He can make all the public statements he wants, but unless he is questioned from time to time, he will be ruling by edict.

WILLIAM RUSHER

Reagan's Nine Lives

In a dramatic last-minute photo-finish in the final days of the year, the Tom Pettit Award for 1985 went collectively to the entire Washington press corps, which unanimously proclaimed Ronald Reagan a "lame duck" when the Republican members of the House rebelled a week or so ago and temporarily blocked consideration of the Rostenkowski tax reform bill.

Pettit, you will recall, was the NBC political reporter in whose memory the award was created in 1980 when he solemnly declared Reagan "politically dead" the morning after the Iowa caucuses. It soon transpired that Pettit was simply the first of a long line of commentators, pundits and miscellaneous observers to let the wish father the thought and mislead them into reading highly premature funeral rites over the far from recumbent form of Ronald Reagan.

In this latest instance, it took Reagan less than 48 hours — even counting a trip to Fort Campbell, Ky., to comfort the bereaved relatives of the 101st Airborne's crash victims — to turn around enough Republicans to pass the bill and send it to the Senate, where he hopes it will be improved considerably. The media were left to grumble that his victory may be pyrrhic, since he achieved it by promising to veto the bill if it reaches his desk without those improvements.

When will the media learn that Ronald Reagan has as many lives as a cat? Take the much-exercised MX missile. Reagan wanted to build 100 and base them in the Western desert, but Congress refused — not even his closest senatorial friend, Nevada's Paul Laxalt, would go along. End of story? Far from it! Reagan appointed the Sowerscroft Commission and, on the basis of its recommendation, managed to wangle tentative congressional approval of 50 missiles, to be based in "hardened" silos. But further congressional action was blocked by Congressman Addabbo's Appropriations subcommittee — until the Russians shot down KAL 007, whereupon Mr. Reagan had the bill through the subcommittee within a month.

Ah, but the MX's foes had a parliamentary ace up their sleeve. Construction of the missiles (now reduced to 40) was made dependent upon the president's forces winning not one but two votes in each house of Congress — or four votes in all. The problem must have seemed, to those who devised it, as arduous as the labors of Hercules; but Mr. Reagan passed the four-part test with flying colors. Construction of the 40 missiles was duly authorized.

One can sympathize with the House Republicans who strayed briefly into apostasy over the tax reform bill. As shaped by the House Democrats, it is (not surprisingly) ferociously unfair to business. Without accelerated depreciation and the investment tax credit, it will be much harder for marginal businesses to stay afloat, let alone when that creates new jobs (and new tax revenues). The Democrats know this, but are unworried by it: Their vision of America is as a gigantic hospital, of which Congress is the medical staff. If business-bashing results in a higher number of unemployed, Dr. O'Neill and his colleagues will know how to care for them compassionately.

But the Democrats, too, consistently underrate Ronald Reagan. The tax reform bill, flawed though it is, is now on its way to the Senate. There are wily politicians in the Senate too, and many months of charges and countercharges, catcalls and screams in the night lie ahead before it emerges from that chamber.

ROBERT WAGMAN

The Truth But Not The Truth

BOSTON (NEA) — According to several of the people closest to him, some of the fire has gone out of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. In the end, despite the fact that the Massachusetts Democrat readily admits that he would still like to be president, he decided the Oval Office was simply not worth the hassle.

The latest Kennedy for president boomlet started in early November when the senator stated that he still hungered to be president, that he could not rule out running for the Democratic nomination in 1988 and that he would make a final decision after the 1986 elections.

Kennedy began seriously considering another try at the presidency last summer when polls showed he was far and away the leading choice among Democrats. In a July Gallup survey, registered Democrats were asked to select their first and second choices for the party's 1988 nomination. Kennedy drew 46 percent, while Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, the second choice, had 31 percent.

Although he did not go public with his renewed presidential aspirations until November, Kennedy put some of his closest staff to work on the question just after Labor Day. They commissioned their own polls, talked at length with party leaders around the country and, perhaps most importantly, tried to assess what kind of financial support Kennedy could expect, especially for a primary campaign.

In the short news conference here, the morning after his announcement, Kennedy said he was certain he could have won his party's nomination and that polls had nothing to do with his surprise announcement. He said the decision to skip the 1988 race was "not a complicated one."

But according to those in a position to know, that explanation is only partially true. Or, perhaps more accurately, it is true as far as it goes, but is far from the full story.

In the three or four weeks following his public admission that he might run, Kennedy became convinced that, while he might, in fact, win the Democratic nomination, winning the presidency was altogether a different question. Almost everything he heard indicated that his presidential campaign would be long and bloody, would disrupt his family, might be financially hard-pressed, and in the end, would likely fail.

KGB Excels In Political Forgery

By Jack Anderson
And Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — Forgery is a favorite Soviet weapon in the Cold War, but has never been an important part of the U.S. disinformation arsenal.

"There isn't that kind of concept in the U.S. government," explained Herbert Romerstein, a U.S. Information Agency expert on Soviet disinformation. In the Soviet Union, on the other hand, political forgeries are a tradition dating back to czarist times.

"We don't win in a war of lies," Romerstein told us. "We can win in a war of truth against lies. But our credibility is much too important to jeopardize. The Soviets don't worry about this, because truth or falsity is not relevant to their thinking of how to influence people. It is to ours."

For all its expertise, though, the KGB frequently turns out pretty crude fakes that are easy for Western intelligence to expose. From Romerstein and other sources, we've learned how to spot Soviet forgeries. Here are the clues:

— Anonymous mailings: The KGB usually sends its "leaks" to the media in plain brown wrappers with no return address, making it difficult to verify the document's authenticity. That often works with gullible or anti-American publications. Realizing that the communist press has little credibility, the KGB tries to plant its forgeries in non-communist publications. Even a tiny item will do; it can then be picked up and amplified as "a well-known fact" by the pro-Soviet press. After sufficient repetition, it is broadcast by the Soviet propaganda network, usually with the standard introduction, "As the whole world knows...."

— Outdated or inaccurate bureaucratic titles and forms. The KGB has as much trouble as Americans do trying to keep up with the ever-changing style of U.S. government paperwork. Even non-government jargon can foil KGB forgers. Last year, for example, spurious threats to African and Asian athletes at the Los Angeles Olympics were signed "Ku Klux Klan." The Soviets didn't know that authentic Klan groups have distinctive titles like "Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan." After this was pointed out in press accounts, the Soviet news service Tass promptly reported that the letters had been signed "Invisible Empire" — trying to cover one lie with another.

— Unidiomatic English and misspellings. While British traitor Kim Philby was alive, he was able to proofread the major KGB forgeries to make sure that at least American usages were authentic. Now there seems to be no one to correct the stilted, schoolbook English, or such giveaway spellings as "centre" (British) for "center" (American).

Unusual names also trip up the KGB forgers. A 1982 memo supposedly written by Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige, for example, spelled his name "Baldridge."

Occasionally the KGB will slip by using translations of Russian terms that have no meaning in American usage. One supposedly internal U.S. government memo, for example, referred to the CIA not as "The Company," as some Americans do, but as "Competent Bodies," which is the Soviet term for their secret services.

And in Nigeria, a purported internal memo of the American Embassy referred to the planned assassinations of two prominent Nigerian politicians as "wet affairs." That is the literal translation of the unique KGB terminology for what American spooks might have called "terminations with extreme prejudice."

According to Romerstein, this type of forgery is unique to the KGB. "I've never seen a forged Andropov letter," he said. "I've never seen a forged Chernenko letter. I've never seen a forged Gorbachev letter. But I have seen forged Reagan letters, and I've seen forged Ford and Carter letters. Nobody else does it."

GOING FISHING?

Maintain Full Reel For Fish Of A Lifetime

Most of us still feel guilty when we start to strip old line off one of our reels. We realize that most of the line is still good and that we are throwing it away because it no longer fills the reel spool satisfactorily.

The question of how often to change line is one that every angler has to face. It is a question with no pat answer, and each fisherman must make his own decision.

It is important, however, to maintain full reel spools. Break-offs, frays, and normal attrition gradually reduce the amount of line on a reel during the course of fishing trips. It is easy to procrastinate, but reels should be stripped and filled with line whenever the amount of line drops noticeably or whenever a large portion of line becomes frayed.

Spinning reel spools should be filled to within one-quarter to one-eighth of an inch from the lip of the spool. Bait-casting reels should be filled to the mark on the spool flange, or simply to the top of the spool.

Less than a full spool reduces both casting distance and accuracy. Inadequate line levels also adversely affect the drag system. As the diameter of line on the spool decreases, the amount of drag increases. The range of drag settings is reduced, and you do not have the margin of error that you would have with a full spool of line.

Regardless of a reel's gear ratio, the important factor relates to how many inches of line can be recovered with one turn of the reel handle. It stands to reason that you lose ground as the amount of line on the spool decreases.

No fisherman likes to work harder than he has to, and it is easy to see that more line can be cranked in with less effort by keeping the reel spool full.

Most importantly, a full spool of line is invaluable when a large fish is hooked. There is no substitute for a reel filled to capacity when a king mackerel or some other gamefish begins to streak for the horizon.

Many fishermen hate to change line because they have to do it by hand and it takes some effort to strip 300 yards of line off a reel. Fishermen will be happy to read that the Berkeley Company has introduced a battery-operated line stripper. It is not only very effective, but it is also small enough to fit into a shirt pocket or a tackle box.

A few ingenious fishermen have discovered that they can use a drill, rig it to a dowel and an empty line container spool, and use the power of the drill to rapidly strip the line from fishing reels.

Fisherman who use a great deal of line would be wise to purchase their line in service spools. These spools usually hold around 3,000 yards of line and can be purchased for a price that averages out to slightly more than one dollar per hundred yards. Fishing line can be very expensive when purchased in small quantities.

There are many advantages to maintaining full spools of line on your fishing reels. Increased casting distance, greater casting accuracy, a smoother drag, and increased line retrieve are but a few.

The main reason is that the angler must always be ready for that fish of a lifetime. Many of us will agree that most large fish hit when we least expect it. Why not be ready when it does happen?

JIM'S TIP — It is important to get into the habit of checking the first few feet of your fishing line during the course of a fishing trip. Serious anglers run their fingers down their line after each fish is caught. They cut off a couple of feet of line and tie a fresh knot if they detect the slightest fray, because they realize that the next fish may stress the line to the breaking point.

FISHING FORECAST — Dell Abernathy at the Osteen Bridge Fish Camp is expecting good things to happen soon with the dropping water levels and the lower water temperature.

Williams Not Guilty In 'Scalping'

JACKSONVILLE (UPI) — Florida State, a frustrated team bedeviled by injuries and controversy, arrived in this frigid town Thursday and immediately began practicing for its Gator Bowl matchup against No. 19 Oklahoma State.

The No. 16 Seminoles, 8-3, are rated seven-point favorites for Monday's 8 p.m. EST game, but Florida State freshman quarterback Chip Ferguson will be trying to dent the nation's sixth-rated pass defense with substitute receivers, Hassan Jones, Florida State's most dangerous receiver, is ineligible for the Gator Bowl because he admitted selling a dozen tickets to former Florida player Robin Fisher.

Another starter, Darrin Holloman, is out with a broken collarbone, leaving sophomores Herb Garner and Randy White and freshman Phillip Bryant — who is nursing an ankle sprain.

"This is tremendously disappointing because Hassan Jones has been a fine role model as a student and athlete at Florida State," said FSU Athletic Director Hootie Ingram. "It is unfortunate that this incident comes at the close of a record-setting career."

The Seminoles, however, did receive some good news Thursday when it was learned that standout defensive tackle Isaac Williams, along with reserve linebackers Anthony Johnson and John Eaford, were cleared of any wrongdoing by Ingram in the ticket-scalping scandal involving Jones, Williams, from Sanford, was an all-stater for Seminole High's 1981 district and conference champions.

Jones sold 12 tickets to Fisher for $100 apiece. Williams, Johnson, Eaford and Winter Garden's Thomas Harp supplied Jones with eight of the tickets. Williams, Johnson and Eaford designated that their tickets were for Jones' relative, which is in accordance with NCAA guidelines. Tickets may be sold to students or relatives.

Harp, though, did not indicate to whom the tickets were going and Ingram suspended the former West Orange High star for the Gator Bowl. Ingram said Jones and Harp were the only players guilty of any wrongdoing and "the rest of the squad is okay to my knowledge," meaning they did not receive any money from Jones for the transaction.

Ingram said FSU would move to have Harp's eligibility restored for next year. The NCAA usually suspends an athlete for one or more games in matters of this kind. Ingram said he would appeal to the eligibility committee and hoped to have an answer in a few months.

Oklahoma State, meanwhile, also 8-3, has been in Jacksonville since Sunday and the Cowboys worked out for two hours Thursday morning. A Canadian cold front that swept across Florida Wednesday night plunged temperatures below the freezing mark in the Panhandle and Oklahoma State Coach Pat Jones said he would taper practices in the days leading up to the Gator Bowl.

Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden said he plans light, early morning practices through Sunday as the Seminoles work primarily on timing.

The Cowboys beat South Carolina 21-14 in last year's Gator Bowl while Florida State will be making its fourth consecutive bowl appearance. The 1984 Gator Bowl drew a record crowd of 82,138, but a bowl spokesman said Thursday "several thousand" tickets still remain for Monday night's matchup.

Bowden was very upset with his team's 38-14 loss to Florida in the season finale while Oklahoma State Coach Pat Jones saw his squad drop a 13-0 decision to Oklahoma.

Rams Slip Trap, Corral Mustangs

By Chris Fister
Herald Sports Writer

Much in the same way the police set up speed traps, Merritt Island's defense tries to set up opposing offenses. The Mustangs set traps on defense to try to draw the opposition offside.

"The way that defense goes is either feast or famine," Lake Mary coach Larry McCorkle said. "If you play that kind of defense, you either draw the other team offside a lot or give up a lot of goals."

Thursday afternoon, the Mustangs couldn't snare McCorkle's Rams. In fact, Merritt Island died by its defensive play. Scoring three goals when the trapping defense didn't work, Lake Mary claimed a 5-2 victory in the opening round of the Pizza Hut Invitational at Bishop Moore High.

Lake Mary takes on Jacksonville Terry Parker's Braves today at 4 at Bishop Moore. Terry Parker advanced with a 3-2 victory over Orlando Evans Thursday. "Jacksonville has a real strong forward line with some big kids who are fast," McCorkle said. "But the defense doesn't seem to be real deep."

In other first round action Thursday at Bishop Moore, it was Daytona Beach Seabreeze edging Bishop Moore, 1-0, and St. Petersburg Seminole downed Lake Howell, 2-1. Seabreeze met St. Pete Seminole in today's other winners' bracket game.

A couple of nailbiters highlighted first round action Thursday at Lake Brantley High. Brantley dropped a 1-0 decision to Tampa Leto in a game that went to penalty kicks while Tarpon Springs pulled out a 1-0 win over Tampa Jesuit, also in penalty kicks. In other games at Lake Brantley, Lyman downed Orlando Colonial, 2-0, and Winter Park edged West Orange, 1-0. In today's winners' bracket, Lyman met Colonial and Tarpon Springs takes on Leto.

Lake Mary broke on top early Thursday as it scored three minutes into the game on a penalty kick by Rick Broennele. The penalty kick was awarded after Jerry Meyers was tripped in the penalty area.

The Mustangs came back with two unanswered goals by Jay Henton. The first came six minutes into the match on a set play off a free kick. Henton made it 2-1 in favor of Merritt Island when he scored on an assist from Keith Ames.

"It was a pretty helter-skelter game in the beginning," McCorkle said. "It was really high paced."

One minute after Merritt Island took the lead, Lake Mary came back to tie it at 2-2 on a breakaway goal by Tony Fiorentino after one of Merritt Island's traps failed.

The Rams made it 3-2 with 24 minutes gone in the first half when Pete Kinsley scored on a cross from Broennele. Lake Mary struck again one minute later when Ernie Broennele served a corner kick into position for Kinsley to head it in. Kinsley's goal was the fourth for the Rams in an eight-minute span and gave them a 4-2 halftime lead.

"Surprisingly, it wasn't com-

McKinnon, Reliford Pace Classic Scoring Leaders

Hempstead, N.Y. walked away with the first Central Florida Classic championship Monday night with an easy victory over Clearwater Countryside but a couple of local talents did make their mark scoring-wise before their teams bowed out.

Kelly McKinnon, a 6-3 sharpshooter for Lake Mary, and Darryl Reliford, a 6-1 junior from Altamonte Springs who plays for Luther, ranked 1-2 in average points per game. McKinnon scored 45 points for a 22.5 average while Reliford tallied 44 for an average of 22.

McKinnon and Lake Mary lost tough games to Dunedin and Bartow while 1A Luther gave fifth-place finisher Oviedo a scare before falling and then lost to Lake Howell in consolation. Luther had just seven players.

McKinnon, a sophomore, did most of his scoring from the wing and with follow-up events. He scored three consecutive buckets on second efforts against Bartow to keep the Rams close during the third quarter.

Florence, meanwhile, had a hot hand from everywhere. The former Inter-County Basketball Association standout almost single handedly kept the Crusaders in contention against Oviedo.

For the four-game performers, Countryside's senior whiz Greg Stauffer led the way with 85 points for a 21.2 average. Merritt Island, which played its final three games in the losers' bracket, totaled 84 points in four games for a 21.0 average.

George Alford, Hempstead's 6-3 forward, earned the tournament MVP by scoring 81 points in four games for a 20.2 average.

The Hempstead leader was joined by teammates Byron Prince (12.7 ppg) and Rob Smith (13.0) on the all-tournament team. Stauffer and Dunedin sophomore Tony Collie (18.0) were also selected along with Oviedo's Al Unroe (17.5), Auburndale's Terence Barber (17.2), Lyman's T.J. Scaletta (17.0), Countryside's David Fletcher (16.7), Seminole's Rod Henderson (15.7) and Seminole's Andre Whitney. — Sam Cook

5 Dolphins Missing With Hurts

MIAMI (UPI) — Five Miami Dolphins missed practice Thursday because of injuries as the AFC East champions prepared for Jan. 4's division playoff game with the Cleveland Browns.

Missing practice were strong safety Glenn Blackwood (ankle), safety Lyle Blackwood (ribs), running back Tony Nathan (back), fullback Woody Bennett (neck), and offensive tackle Jon Giesler (knee).

Glenn Blackwood sprained his ankle during Sunday's 28-0 win over Buffalo that clinched the AFC East title for Miami. Mike Kozlowski, an injured reserve, is being worked at safety in practice in case Blackwood cannot play.

Kozlowski started the first few games of the season while Blackwood was a holdout, but lost his starting job when Blackwood returned. He was later placed on injured reserve with an ankle injury.

The Dolphins have an extra roster move in the playoffs and it likely will be used to activate Kozlowski, who also returned punts and was a key player in long-yardage situations before being hurt.

Giesler's knee has bothered him all season and he will probably undergo major surgery in the off-season. He had arthroscopic surgery in October and missed one game, a 17-13 loss to New England.

The other injuries are not thought to be serious.

Citrus Bowl

Saturday's Matchup: Bosco's Arm Challenges Byars' Foot

By Ira Kaufman
UPI Sports Writer

ORLANDO (UPI) — The Florida Citrus Bowl matchup between No. 9 Brigham Young University and 17th-rated Ohio State Saturday will hinge on the right arm of Robbie Bosco and the right foot of Keith Byars.

The 1 p.m. EST game is rated even as '84 national champion BYU tries to avenge a 47-17 loss to the Buckeyes in the 1982 Holiday Bowl.

Behind the record-setting passing of Bosco, the Cougars, 11-2, won the Western Athletic Conference title for the 10th straight season. With the senior quarterback throwing for 4,273 yards and 30 touchdowns, Brigham Young averaged 33.5 points and 500 yards per game.

Byars, who led the nation in rushing and scoring in 1984, broke a bone in his right foot Sept. 2 and carried just 53 times this year. The 236-pound fullback with the 4.5 speed to turn the corner may require post-season surgery to insert a screw into the broken bone, but he is expected to play against the Cougars and Ohio State needs his rushing threat.

"They're throwing the ball more now as part of their total offensive package," says Brigham Young Coach LaVell Edwards. "It is much harder to defend when they throw when they want and not when you dictate by down and distance."

Despite the minimal contributions of Byars, Ohio State bolted to an 8-1 start before season-ending losses to Wisconsin and Michigan ended any Big Ten title hopes. The Buckeyes feature a balanced offense (20 TDs rushing, 20 passing) behind the short passing game of Jim Karsatos and the hard running of tailback John Woolridge (728 yards) and fullback George Cooper, who averaged 4.6 yards per carry.

Karsatos completed 62 percent of his passes for 2,115 yards and 19 TDs while throwing just eight interceptions. Cris Carter is Ohio State's big-play receiver, averaging 16.6 yards on 53 receptions, including eight TDs.

Sophomore linebacker Chris Spielman (133 tackles) will lead the defensive charge for the Buckeyes, who hope to keep the ball out of Bosco's hands with lengthy drives.

"The thing we have to guard against is a slow start," says Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce, whose team was upset 20-17 by Southern Cal a year ago in the Rose Bowl. "I didn't realize we were going to play that badly the first half of that football game against USC. You can't start slow against a passing football team."

Bosco has standout targets in wide receiver Mark Bellini (63 catches, 1,008 yards and 14 TDs) and tight end Trevor Molini (63-849), but the Cougars also boast an underpublicized weapon in versatile fullback Lakel Heimull. The 210-pound junior from Late, Hawaii rushed for 857 yards and 14 TDs and also paced the team with 66 receptions.

Brigham Young's defense rarely escapes the large shadow of the Cougar attack, but opponents averaged only 13.5 points per game. Cornerback Rodney Thomas paced the secondary with five interceptions and the Cougars are especially fierce in the second half, posting a whopping 230-57 scoring advantage after intermission.

"We've had problems in the secondary at times because of a lack of speed," Edwards says, "but now we've got better speed and better quickness. This defense is as good as any we've had. We're much bigger, but we're also quicker. Big quickness becomes a real joy."

The Cougars rushed for 146 yards per game, but Edwards says the 50,000 fans who jam Orlando Stadium today will see plenty of Bosco — who completed 313 passes this season to break the NCAA mark of 306 set by former BYU star Steve Young in 1983.

"We'd like to establish some type of a running attack. It makes your passing attack go a lot better," says Edwards. "But to be able to go out there and run the ball 40 or 50 times against them ... we can't do that."

Tough Big 10 QBs Readied OSU For BYU

By Gene Caddes
UPI Sports Writer

ORLANDO (UPI) — If Ohio State's much-maligned defense is able to control the Brigham Young passing attack in Saturday's Citrus Bowl, much of the credit should go to guys like Jim Everett, Jack Trudeau, Chuck Long and Jack Harbaugh.

None of those four — all Big Ten quarterbacks — will be on the field Saturday when the Buckeyes and Cougars face off in a bowl game for the second time in three years.

Everett plays for Purdue, Trudeau for Illinois, Long for Iowa and Harbaugh for Michigan and all gave the Buckeyes fits this year.

Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce believes, or at least hopes, having his team face those four will help in defeating BYU's Robbie Bosco, who passed for 4,273 yards and 30 touchdowns this season.

"I hope it's helped us," said Bruce. "The last two years, we've faced great passing in the Big Ten. We ought to be better prepared than when we faced them (BYU) in the Holiday Bowl three years ago because '83, '84 and '85 have been tremendous passing seasons in the Big Ten."

Ohio State won that Holiday Bowl matchup 47-17.

Bruce said if the Cougar offense is similar to win, lose & DREW any Big Ten team it would Purdue. "When you look at Iowa, they run the ball very well with (Ron) Harmon," said Bruce. "The running Purdue does is normally from the draw plays and sweep plays that BYU features. But they're not altogether the same passing attack." Bruce said Keith Byars, who missed eight of Ohio State's 11 games and played under par in the other three, should be a major part of the Buckeyes' offense against BYU.

THUMBNAILS

Brigham Young (11-2)
QB Robbie Bosco, 6 foot 3, 186, senior, Roseville, Calif. Backed up Steve Young until 1984, when he led the nation in total offense (327.7 yards per game) and guided the Cougars to the national championship with a 12-0 record in the regular season and a 24-1 triumph over Michigan in the Holiday Bowl. This year, Bosco set eight NCAA records and tied another as he finished with a 24.2 record as a starting quarterback for BYU. Bosco completed 62 percent of his passes as a senior for 4,273 yards and 30 TDs and overall he ranks third in NCAA career pass efficiency behind former BYU stars Jim McMahon and Steve Young.

FB Lakel Heimull, 5'11, 210, junior, Late, Hawaii. Led BYU in rushing as a sophomore with 796 yards and nine TDs, but blossomed in '83 with 14 TDs on the ground and a team leading 64 receptions. Rushed for 82 yards vs. Michigan in the Holiday Bowl a year ago and he will test Ohio State's linebacking corps, especially on swing passes out of the backfield. One of the most versatile backs in the country but often overshadowed by Bosco.

WR Mark Bellini, 5'11, 176, junior, San Leandro, Calif. This shifty receiver, who boasts 435 speed and a pet boa constrictor, walked on the club as a freshman in '82 and was red shirtd two years ago. He finally broke into the starting lineup midway through the 1984 season and caught 35 passes, including four TDs.

CB Rodney Thomas, 5'10, 194, sophomore, Chaffey, Calif. A three-sport letterman at Chaffey High, Thomas was captain of the football team, MVP of the basketball team and the most outstanding sprinter on the track team.

Ohio State (8-3)
QB Jim Karsatos, 6'3, 214, junior, Fullerton, Calif. Backed up Mike Tomczak for two seasons and then took command in '83, throwing for 2,115 yards and a school record 19 TD passes. Very accurate touch and adept at throwing the ball away rather than putting it up for grabs. Suffered just eight interceptions and broke Tomczak's accuracy mark by hitting 62 percent of his passes.

WR Cris Carter, 6'2, 192, sophomore, Middletown, Ohio. Carter already has the pro scouts drooling with his 33 1/2 inch vertical jump and his willingness to catch passes over the middle. Had 41 receptions for 648 yards as a freshman and improved numbers to 53 and 879 this year, including eight TDs. Caught nine passes for 172 yards in the Rose Bowl a year ago and his game breaking abilities represent Ohio State's best chance of beating BYU.

FB Keith Byars, 6'2, 236, senior, Dayton, Ohio. Second to Doug Flutie in last year's Heisman voting after leading the nation in rushing (1,744 yards) and touchdowns (24). Suffered a broken bone in his right foot four months ago and carried just 53 times this season.

LB Chris Spielman, 6'2, 224, sophomore, Massillon. In proud Buckeye tradition of Randy Gradisher and Tom Cousineau, the rangy linebacker has been called "the most intense athlete I have ever coached," by Earle Bruce. Had 12 solo tackles, three assists and a fumble recovery in Rose Bowl loss to Southern Cal.

3 Bears Lead All-NFC — Marino Repeats In AFC

Football

NEW YORK (UPI) — Leading vote getters Mike Singletary, Walter Payton and Jim Covert were among six Chicago Bears named today to United Press International's 1985 NFC All-Star team.

Inside-linebacker Singletary received 55 votes in voting among 56 sports writers, four from each NFC city. Running back Payton and tackle Covert tied for the lead among offensive players with 49 votes apiece.

Center Jay Hilgenberg, defensive end Richard Dent and outside-linebacker Otis Wilson were Chicago's other first-team picks.

The Bears cruised through the season 15-1 and won the NFC Central title. NFC East champion Dallas, with four, was the only other team with more than two players selected to the first team.

Payton is joined in the offensive backfield by conference rushing leader Gerald Riggs of Atlanta and passing leader Joe Montana of San Francisco. Riggs gained 1,719 yards and scored 10 touchdowns on 397 carries. Payton finished second in rushing with 1,551 yards on 324 carries. Riggs' 30 1/2 votes gave him a slight edge over San Francisco's Roger Craig, who received 28 1/2.

Montana completed 61.3 percent of his 494 passes for 3,653 yards, a conference-high 27 TDs and 13 interceptions. He received 25 votes to edge Chicago's Jim McMahon by four.

Philadelphia's Mike Quick (73 catches for NFC-high 1,247 yards and 11 TDs) and Washington's Art Monk (91 catches for 1,226 yards and 2 TDs) are the wide receivers and Doug Cosbie of Dallas (64 catches) the tight end.

Guards Russ Grimm of Washington and Dennis Harrah of Los Angeles, Detroit tackle Keith Dorney and New Orleans kicker Morten Andersen complete the offense.

Andersen made good on 31-of-35 field goal attempts and finished second in the NFC with 120 points. The Cowboys matched Chicago's three defensive picks, placing tackle Randy White, cornerback Everson Walls and safety Mike Downs on the first team. The New York Giants had outside-linebacker Lawrence Taylor and end Leonard Marshall named on defense.

The rest of the defensive consists of inside-linebacker E.J. Junior of St. Louis, San Francisco cornerback Eric Wright, Philadelphia safety Wes Hopkins and Los Angeles rookie punter Dale Hatcher.

Walls was the NFL interception leader with nine. Dent led the conference with 17 sacks, followed by Marshall with 15 1/2.

MIAMI QB SHAKES STIGMA

NEW YORK (UPI) — Miami Dolphins quarterback Dan Marino overcame the stigma surrounding his holdout early this season to earn his third straight selection to the UPI all-AFC team.

Marino, who left the Dolphins training camp over a contract dispute, came back from a shaky start to lead the NFL with 336 completions, 4,137 yards and 30 touchdowns in 567 attempts. He received 23 votes in a close race against San Diego's Dan Fouts, who finished second with 20 votes.

The West champion Los Angeles Raiders placed four players on the team, including unanimous selection Marcus Allen.

Allen, the NFL rushing leader, was the only unanimous selection on the AFC All-Star team. He received all 56 votes cast by four sports writers in each conference city.

Allen is joined by Raiders' tight end

Todd Christensen on offense while cornerback Mike Haynes was selected along with Howie Long on defense. Long received votes on 54 of the 56 ballots.

Miami, the New York Jets and Denver each had three players on the first-team. Marino, a first-team pick in each of his three NFL seasons, is joined by Miami center Dwight Stephenson and guard Roy Foster on offense.

New York's Freeman McNeil was selected alongside Allen in the backfield for the second straight year. Allen ran for 1,759 yards and 11 touchdowns in 380 carries and McNeil gained 1,131 yards on 294 carries.

Seattle's Steve Largent, a 10-year veteran, and second-year man Louis Lipps of the Pittsburgh Steelers are the wide receivers. Largent caught 79 passes for a league-high 1,287 yards and Lipps had 59 receptions for 1,134 yards and 12 TDs.

Point spread—Jets by 3

Quarterback

Jets' Ken O'Brien is the NFL's top rated passer. He's recently added long ball to his growing arsenal. Takes too many sacks by not throwing the ball away. NE's Tony Eason has more mobility and has played well since taking over for injured Steve Grogan. Has displayed the maturity he showed last year and not the impatience and interceptions of early this season. He still has a tendency to force the ball.

Key stat: O'Brien has thrown just 8 interceptions in 488 attempts.

Edge — Jets

Running Backs

When healthy Jets' Freeman McNeil is among the NFL's best runners. He has shown an increasing ability to catch out of the backfield. However, he was limited to 5 carries in two games against Pats during season and has a sore left knee. Johnny Hector has been a solid replacement. The NE tandem of Tony Collins and Craig James lacks a pure FB, but both can run. James is an exceptional receiver and Collins has killed Jets in past. Most Tatum is one of the NFL's top short yardage specialists.

Key stat: James is the only runner this season to top 100 yards vs. the Jets.

Edge — Patriots

Wide receivers

Jets' Wesley Walker has had some of his biggest games vs. NE. Al Toon has caught 37 passes in the seven games since he became a starter and has a knack for breaking tackles. Kurt Sohn gives NY a solid, if unspectacular, third wide out. There are few teams that can boast the firepower the Pats have at WR. Irving Fryar and Stanley Morgan can really stretch a zone. Besides those two, the Na's remaining WRs have combined for 2 catches in the last 2 games.

Key stat: Walker has 12 catches for 308 yards in 2 games vs. Pats.

Edge — Jets

Tight ends

Jets' Mickey Shuler is one of the NFL's most underrated players. He is an excellent possession receiver and blocker. Rocky Klier is used in 2 TE sets and has come up with several big catches. Lin Dawson and Derrick Ramsey bring experience for Pats, but cannot match the Jets' tandem as receivers.

Key stat: Shuler set a team record with 76 catches.

Edge — Jets

Offensive line

The Jets have had injuries here, but no excuse for O'Brien being the most sacked quarterback in 1 season in NFL history. LT Reggie McElroy is particularly vulnerable to pass rush. Rush blocking has gone up and down and looked good certain days because of McNeil's abilities. The OL is a strength of the Pats. They have a solid starting 5 and good reserves. The left side of G John Hannah and T Brian Holloway rivals any in the NFL.

Key stat: O'Brien has been sacked 62 times.

Edge — Patriots

Defensive line

Jets NT Joe Klecko and DE Mark Gastineau two of the best in the game. Klecko's key is penetration and forcing things into the LB's hands. Gastineau's is intimidation and wrapping up QBs in his own hands. Barry Bennett and Marly Lyons do a good job in support. Injury to Ken Sims hurts NE. Rookie Garin Veris has been a surprise with 10 sacks. Julius Adams, the NFL's oldest lineman, is still quick and cagey.

Key stat: Despite missing much practice with a broken thumb, Gastineau has 13 1/2 sacks.

Edge — Jets

Linebackers

Jets' ILBs Lance Mehl and Kyle Clifton don't get a lot of ink, but they are steady. Outside NY takes a huge drop with Bob Crable and Charles Jackson. Meanwhile, Pats' OLBs Andre Tippett and Don Blackmon are sensational. Tippett may be the NFL's most feared blitz. Inside NE has reliable Steve Nelson and Larry McGrew.

Key stat: Tippett led the AFC with 16 1/2 sacks.

Edge — Patriots

Secondary

The Jets have played patchwork here all season. They key to their success in the DB is the success of the line to pressure QB. Play a lot of man to man. Rookie CB Kerry Glenn can be picked on. Pats have two outstanding DBs in CB Raymond Clayborn and FS Fred Marion. CB Ronnie Lippert can be exploited.

Key stat: New England was 1 of 3 teams in the NFL to allow less than 50 percent of opposition's passes to be complete.

Edge — Patriots

Special Teams

Jets P Dave Jennings has a tendency to hit low line drives and against a dangerous returner like Irving Fryar that can be harmful. Jets K Pat Leahy has hit his last 12 field goals. K Tony Franklin and P Rich Camarillo provide a consistent kicking game for the Pats. The coverage teams are about even.

Key stat: Fryar has returned 2 punts for TDs.

Edge — Patriots

Coaches

Both Jets' Joe Walton and the Patriots' Raymond Berry have brought consistency to their teams. Each has found himself battling either the teams' or his own past. Usually these teams have not won big games to get to the playoffs or in the playoffs. This year they both won big games.

Key stat: Neither man has coached a playoff game.

Patriots Confront Same Rugged Road In Playoffs

Football

FOXBORO, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots played one of the NFL's toughest regular-season schedules this year and their road through the playoffs will be equally rugged due to the presence of some familiar faces.

New England lost five games during the regular season: each one was to a playoff-bound team. The four other teams in the AFC tournament, the Cleveland Browns, Miami Dolphins, New York Jets and Los Angeles Raiders, all defeated the Patriots once, as did the Chicago Bears, the NFC team favored to reach the Super Bowl.

But New England has also beaten the Dolphins and Jets and the loss to Cleveland was a narrow one, 24-20.

The Patriots fulfilled Craig James' definition of a good team as "one that beats all of the teams it's supposed to beat plus some of the others it has a chance to beat."

If the Patriots survive Saturday's wild-card matchup with the New York Jets at the Meadowlands, they would travel to Los Angeles for a game the following weekend with the Raiders, who administered the Patriots' worst beating, 35-20, in the season's fourth game. The Bears beat New England 20-7 on weekend No. 2, while the Patriots were starting the year at 2-3. A six-game winning streak followed, catapulting them into the AFC East race.

"Every team we have to play we can beat," said New England linebacker Steve Nelson. "We have played them before and there is no reason we should go into any game not thinking we can win."

"We are all even now and all we have to do is win one game a week for the next four," he said.

But history doesn't bode well. New England has not won a playoff game since 1963, when it was playing in the old American Football League as the Boston Patriots and beat the Buffalo Bills 26-8 to advance to the AFL championship. The Patriots were blasted 51-10 by San Diego.

The Patriots have since lost three more post-season games, in 1978 to the Raiders, by a 24-21 score; in 1978 to the Houston Oilers, by 31-14; and to Miami in 1982, by 28-13. New England has always had the stigma of fielding a talented team which couldn't produce when it was necessary. But Nelson, who played in each of the last three playoff games, said this year's squad is better than its playoff predecessors.

"Over the years, I think we were overrated," he said. "We have the ability now and most it is young."

If New England advances far enough, it can call upon an old pro — quarterback Steve Grogan, who guided the Patriots during their six-game winning streak.

The 11-year veteran, who suffered a broken leg on Nov. 24 in a game against the Jets and replaced by Tony Eason, is walking without crutches and hopes to be ready in two weeks.

"The leg's coming along really well now," said Grogan. "I've almost got the full range of motion back. Now it's a question of building up the strength again."

He estimated his chances of returning in time for the second week of the playoffs "at 50-50 and I'll definitely be ready the week after that."

IN BRIEF

Oviedo L.L. Sets Special Signup For Tusawilla, Winter Springs

The Oviedo Little League program will be conducting its registration for the 1986 season beginning Saturday, Jan. 4 with a special registration for players from Tusawilla and Winter Springs areas.

Youngsters from these areas may sign up between the hours of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Jan. 4 at the Willa Springs shopping center on the corner of Red Bug Road and Tusawilla Road.

On Saturday, Jan. 11 and Saturday, Jan. 18, registration will be conducted at the Oviedo Women's Club on King Street for youngsters from Oviedo, Geneva and Chuluota. The hours for these registrations will also be 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

All age divisions are open from Tee Ball for 6 and 7 year olds through Senior League for 13 through 15 year olds. The league is considering fielding teams of 13 year olds to compete in an inter-league division being discussed with Maitland.

"This effort is being made to entice more 13-year-old players to stay active in the Little League program," Oviedo Little League president Ed Niemiec said. "Whether the effort pays off will depend on how many 13-year-olds respond and sign up to play this year."

A youngster's playing age is determined by whether his or her birthday falls on or after Aug. 1 of each year. Thus a child who will turn six before that date is considered 6 and can play this year. A youngster who will be 16 before Aug. 1 is too old for Senior League.

Youngsters coming to register must have a parent or guardian with them, must bring official (not hospital) certificates of live birth as proof of age, and will be asked for donations of $25 each. This sum covers uniform costs and team pictures to be taken later.

Surgery For Stephan's Odyssey

HIALEAH (UPI) — Doctors have decided it will not be necessary to put Stephan's Odyssey to sleep, and the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes runnerup will undergo surgery.

The late-running son of Danzig will probably undergo surgery today for a broken leg. Veterinarians feared for a time he might have to be destroyed because a life-threatening blood clot prevented adequate circulation in the injured limb.

Stephan's Odyssey was responding to medication Thursday at Hialeah Park. Veterinarians were giving him the blood-thinning drug Streptokinase to break up the clot in his shattered leg.

The 3-year-old broke his left front leg on Dec. 15 after working a half-mile on the Hialeah course. He was being prepped by trainer Woody Stephens and assistant trainer Sandy Bruno for Florida's winter handicap season.

ML Dodge City Wins Inaugural

LONGWOOD — Young and fast was a good combination Thursday night as the Sanford-Orlando Kennel Club opened its chutes for the 51st time.

ML Dodge City, who won't be 2 years old until January, zipped to the championship of the 51st Annual Inaugural with a 5-16th time of 31.74 seconds. Spun Taffy was second and Conch Train was third.

ML Dodge City, a 3-2 favorite of the big opening-night crowd and a product of the D. & S. Young Kennel, trailed Spun Taffy in the early going but then established control halfway through the race.

"It was a good way to start the season," Jerry Collins, SORC chairman of the board and general manager, said. "The weather might have kept some people away but it was a good turnout despite the cold."

The attendance was 5,272 and the handle was $462,932.

Connecticut Restricts Kelley

STORRS, Conn. (UPI) — Earl Kelley remains part of the University of Connecticut basketball team, but has been placed on probation and cannot eat or sleep on campus.

UConn officials announced Thursday they had placed the high-scoring senior guard under those tight restrictions after he was found guilty of violating the student conduct code on charges of threatening, harassment and abduction. The probation will last four semesters or until graduation, the school said.

Dean of Students Frank Ardaiolo notified Kelley of his decision Tuesday and made it public Thursday.

After nine hours of testimony at a disciplinary hearing before Ardaiolo Tuesday, Kelley was found guilty of the charges — made in connection with an April 4 incident on UConn's main campus in Storrs.

Soviets To Face Gretzky Tonight

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — The Soviet Red Army hockey team will find the climate and competition more to their standards tonight when they battle the Edmonton Oilers.

After disposing of the Kings in balmy Los Angeles 5-2 Thursday night, the Soviets travel to frosty Alberta, Canada, to take on the two-time defending Stanley Cup champions and Wayne Gretzky.

"I know very well what kind of team Edmonton was last year," Red Army coach Victor Tikhonov said through an interpreter. "They play very well. It will be very, very difficult to beat them."

"I don't know which team is better."

Lyman Soccer Girls Play At 10

Lyman's Lady Greyhounds will play Bishop Moore in prep soccer at 10 a.m. Saturday at Lyman High School.

The game was originally scheduled for 11 a.m. but moved up an hour, according to Tom Barnes, Lyman's girls coach.

Barnes said there will be no junior varsity game.

Jackson Sparks St. John's

United Press International
Despite scoring just 10 points, Mark Jackson was the catalyst for an anxious 11th-ranked St. John's team Thursday night, paving the way for a 79-57 romp over James Madison in the 34th ECAC Holiday Festival.

"He gave us the lift that we needed," Redmen coach Lou Carnesecca said of Jackson, who had three steals as St. John's scored 11 of the first half's final 13 points.

"You need somebody to give you that real lift, and Jackson gave us that at that time. It was a 1-point game, and two or three quick hoops got us going off his steals."

Jackson, who also had 13 assists, had help from mainstays Walter Berry and Willie Glass, who scored 22 and 14 points, respectively, to power St. John's to its ninth straight triumph and into the tournament final.

Basketball

St. Bonaventure earned the right to oppose the Redmen with a 74-72 overtime triumph in the other first-round game.

James Madison, 2-5, surprised the Redmen with an running offense in the first half, and St. John's held only a 24-23 lead with three minutes left in the half.

St. John's, 11-1, keyed by Jackson's steals, then scored 11 of the last 13 points of the first half to take a 35-25 lead at the half.

"I was trying to get the team moving,"

Jackson said. "That was definitely going through my mind. A lot of us had a tough time getting going, and I had to make something happen. I got three steals and that got us going."

James Madison three times drew within 8 points in the opening minutes of the second half before the Redmen began to pull away behind Berry and Glass, who combined for 26 of St. John's 44 points in the second half.

John Newman led the Dukes with 17 points, but scored 14 of them in the first half. Eric Brent was the only other Duke in double figures with 14 points.

In the opener, Elmer Anderson sank an 18-foot jump shot with 4 seconds remaining in overtime to give St. Bonaventure a 74-72 triumph over Iowa.

Old Injury Now Needs Care From Specialist

Dr. Gott

DEAR DR. GOTT — In 1977, I got a lick from a tailor machine in the cotton mill. My jaw felt like a knife going up and down. I went to a nerve doctor, who put me in the hospital and deadened the nerve. Now the feeling has come back, and so has the ache. My jaw is swollen up and I have headaches. I have spent over $5,000 on my jaw, and the doctors all say that they can't do anything. Has the government given orders to doctors to do nothing for old people?

DEAR READER — Federal policies seem more and more to disregard patient care in favor of cost-effectiveness. Although the government has not, to my knowledge, ordered doctors to ignore old people's ailments, I can understand your frustration at not being able to obtain help. Before giving up hope, make an appointment in the maxillofacial clinic of a university hospital. Specialists in facial injuries may be able to help you.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I have a noise in my left carotid artery. Two years ago I had a sonogram, which the cardiovascular surgeon said showed a little irregularity in the artery. I just had it rechecked and nothing's changed. What do you suggest?

DEAR READER — A noise in the carotid arteries, the two major blood vessels in the neck, usually indicates a partial obstruction from an arteriosclerotic plaque or from kinking of the artery. You apparently have an arteriosclerotic narrowing in your carotid that is producing an irregularity in the arterial lining. Clots can form in this roughened plaque, subsequently break off and be carried to the brain, causing a stroke. So I'm concerned about your disorder.

Although there are risks in having a carotid angiogram, this type of X-ray test will tell the doctors if your "bruit," or noise, is something requiring treatment. Ask your physician if such a test would be advisable in your case.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I had surgery twice for kidneystones. After extensive testing, my endocrinologist prescribed a diuretic to be taken on a daily basis for an indefinite period. I'm 28 and would like to become pregnant in the very near future. What are the possible side-effects of diuretics on the fetus?

DEAR READER — There are many diuretics and each has its own side-effects and complications. Many physicians believe that any drug taken early in pregnancy may affect the fetus. Ask your gynecologist if the medicine you are taking could affect pregnancy. You might also question your endocrinologist about the use of a special diet to prevent kidneystones.

Send your questions to Dr. Gott at P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, Ohio 44101.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

WIN AT BRIDGE

By James Jacoby

In today's deal we see a kind of "mirror hand." In that a significant part of North-South's combined high-card strength overlaps in the diamond suit. If either North or South held a third diamond, the slam contract would be sound, depending upon either a 2-2 spade split or a successful heart finesse. As the cards actually lie, play for slam is poor. When the certain loss of a trump trick becomes apparent, declarer has even less hope for success. Still, even unlucky contracts must be played out to the bitter end, and confident play will sometimes reap rewards.

Declarer won the opening lead with dummy's diamond queen and played king and ace of spades. He then played a diamond to the ace and a heart back to his queen. Next came the ace of hearts, apparently establishing a heart winner for the opponents. But that was only an illusion. When an opponent holds an established winner, he must come on lead to be able to cash it. Declarer now cashed the club king and played dummy's ace and queen of clubs, discarding a heart as all followed.

Finally, he played dummy's fourth club. When East showed out, South ruffed. A spade now put West on lead, but he had nothing left to play but a diamond. That allowed declarer to ruff in one hand as he discarded the remaining losing heart from the other.

A Little Care Can Extend Life Of Christmas Poinsettia

If you received a potted poinsettia for Christmas, your enjoyment of this attractive plant needn't end with the holidays. Don't throw it away! With a little extra care (and a bit of luck) a gift poinsettia's life can be extended for many seasons to come.

Poinsettias are especially sensitive to extremes of heat and cold, as well as sudden temperature changes. While you are enjoying your potted specimen in your home, keep your plant away from hot air vents, cold windows, and doorways where temperatures fluctuate rapidly. Avoid overwatering. A thorough soaking about once a week should be sufficient. And, keep the poinsettia in a brightly lighted area—never in direct sun.

Once your poinsettia starts to fade after the holidays, you can prepare it for the big move outdoors. You'll have to hold the plant in a protected area until the danger of frost has passed. During this period, the poinsettia should be allowed to dry and become dormant. Water it only occasionally—just enough to keep it from completely drying out.

When you're ready to plant it outdoors, you should carefully consider its placement relative to the amount of light it will receive in the area where you want to set it. Poinsettias are "short day" plants. This means they will set flower buds in the fall only if the daily period of light they receive is relatively short. If you plant it where it's exposed to extra light from a porch, window, or street lights, it may never bloom.

In late winter or early spring, after the blooming period is over and the danger of frost has passed, all poinsettias should be pruned back to within 12 to 18 inches off the ground. If by chance they're frozen, you may have to cut even lower to get into live wood. To avoid legginess and insure compact plants at flowering time, you'll need to prune several times during the growing season. Each time new growth reaches a length of 12 inches, cut or pinch it back, leaving four leaves on each shoot. This should be continued until about September 10, but no later. Poinsettias begin to set buds as the days become shorter. Pruning after September 10 may reduce flower production.

Poinsettias grow in a wide range of soils—sand, muck or clay. But, they do need fertilizer. Apply a complete, balanced mix, such as a 6-6-6, three times a year. Begin when growth starts in the spring, again in June, and finally in late fall after the bracts begin to show color. This last application will help "promote large, showy, colorful bracts. Apply about one and a half pounds of 6-6-6 per 100 square feet of garden area each time you feed them.

Other gift plants you may have received, such as azalea, begonia, or chrysanthemum can last well into the New Year, if given a little tender care, too. The three most important things to pay attention to are temperature, water, and light.

Most flowering house plants need a fairly cool, but not chilling, temperature. Keep these plants away from any heat source. However, be careful not to expose the plants to cold drafts. A prolonged chill or sudden change in temperature will cause some plants to lose their leaves.

Be careful with the watering. Your enthusiasm to take good care of your gift plant can easily lead to overwatering. This causes more damage to plants than just about anything else. Remember, roots need air, as well as water. Too much water can literally drown plant roots. Apply just enough to thoroughly soak the soil. Then, don't water again until the soil is almost dry.

If the soil feels damp, don't add water.

Be sure your plant gets enough light. Some plants do well in artificial light, but most do well with as much natural light as possible. An east window is best so the plants catch the early morning sun. With insufficient light, the blossoms won't last long and the plant will begin to drop its leaves. After the danger of frost has passed, any of these gift plants, just like the poinsettia, may be planted outdoors in the garden to give you many seasons of blooming delight.

Keep in mind these basic things about how temperature, water, and light can affect your holiday gift plant's health, and you should be able to keep them looking attractive for some time to come. Happy New Year and Happy Gardening!

The Christmas spirit was shared by the Gaines and Morgan Amvets Post and Amvets Auxiliary No. 17, with the residents of the Good Samaritan Home. "Goodie Bags Of Cheer" were given to all and they sang carols and helped to make the residents happy. The adopted residents of the home, Albert Johnson and Anthony Collidge were given gifts. To further share and cheer the less fortunate, the post and auxiliary went to the DeBarry Manor Home and gave Christmas goodies to all of the patients. Christmas cheer was also shared with the sick and shut-ins of the Sanford community. They were given fruit bowls and gifts. The evening ended with the annual children's Christmas party held at the Amvets Post 17. Santa arrived, to the delight of over 250 children, who were given gifts and many party treats. The community is grateful to the Amvet Post and Auxiliary for their thoughtfulness of the shut-ins and needy persons of the community. James Milton is the Post Commander and Eartha Milton, Auxiliary President.

Sweet Harmony OES Chapter 388 sponsored a senior citizen dinner for the community. Over 100 persons attended and enjoyed a delicious meal. The special treat was the spiritual uplift of song and Scripture by Minister Ronald Merthie and the True Life Church Center.

Hope you had a Merry Christmas and will have a prosperous New Year.

'Perfect' Suitor Presents Hairy Problem

DEAR ABBY: I was a lonely widow for several years because I never met a man I wanted to be with.

I finally met a man who made me feel loved and wanted. He is gentle, kind and very loving. He doesn't drink or smoke—he's almost too good to be true. He asked me to marry him, and I asked for a little time to think it over. And now I'm glad I did.

Last week I saw him in swim trunks for the first time, and, Abby, he's as hairy as a chimpanzee! He has hair all over his chest, arms and even on his shoulders and back! I was horrified, and it put me right off.

I am very fastidious and would shrink from intimacy with such a hairy man, but I hate to lose him.

Short of asking him to always wear pajamas to bed, I can't think of a solution, can you?

UNDECIDED

DEAR UNDECIDED: Some women find hairy men very masculine and appealing, but if you would "shrink from intimacy" with a hairy man, he's not for you.

A shrink may help you get to the root of your negative feelings about body hair, and a man who's "almost too good to be true" seems worth it. But feeling as you do, don't marry a man who would have to cover his body to go to bed with you.

DEAR ABBY: I'm expecting my second child in about a month and have decided that this time I would like to spend my first week back at home with only my husband, our 5-year-old child and the new baby.

After I came home from the hospital with my first baby, I had so many visitors I was a nervous wreck from all the company, and couldn't even breast-feed my baby. I know my friends and relatives meant well, but they didn't know when to go home, and by the end of the day I was exhausted.

I told my mother that I was going to add a line to my birth announcements. "Please, no visitors for a week. Mommy needs her rest!" She said, "That would be cruel and offensive. Don't do it."

Abby, do you think adding that request on the birth announcements would be cruel?

OMIT MY NAME

DEAR OMIT: No. Considering past experience, I think your request is appropriate.

DEAR ABBY: I'll bet you never heard anything like this before. Our son, "Mike", has been living with his girlfriend, "Libby," for three years. They have a 2-year-old son whom we love like a grandson.

Last year, money got tight, so to help out with the expenses, Libby and Mike rented their spare room to a friend of Mike's. (I'll call him Gary.)

As it turned out, Libby carried on a secret affair with Gary, and now she has a child by him, too.

Our son wants to forgive Libby, marry her and adopt her new baby. We, his parents, cannot forgive her for what she did to Mike.

We love our son and the grandson he and Libby gave us, but we do not want to accept Libby as our daughter-in-law knowing she had an illegitimate child by a guy who rented a room in their house.

How should we handle this?

GRAMAW

DEAR GRAMAW: Regardless of how you feel about Libby, if you don't accept her as your daughter-in-law along with her children, you can say goodbye to your son and the grandson you love. It's a package deal. Take it or leave it: the choice is yours.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

IN BRIEF

Casino Petition Drive Successful In Securing Place On Ballot

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) — Casino gambling is headed for a new vote following a massive $600,000 statewide petition drive to get the issue back on the ballot next year.

Voters soundly defeated a casino gambling proposal in 1978. Next year's campaign to win the support of traditional gambling opponents will be equally as difficult, said attorney Andrew Rubin, who managed the petition-collecting drive of Citizens for Jobs and Tourism, Inc.

"The campaign is going to be an interesting one," he said. "It's not going to be easy."

Since the 1,720,275 to 687,460 defeat of casino gambling eight years ago, proponents have pumped $3 million into campaigns for another vote. A petition drive in 1982 failed and a plan last year to finance a new campaign folded.

This time, the petition-signing blitz that began Election Day 1984 garnered enough votes — representing 8 percent of Florida residents who voted in the last presidential election — to get casino gambling on the November ballot as Amendment No. 2.

Pilot Program Okayed For Blind

United Press International

Blind vendors will operate snack and beverage services at four Florida highway rest areas under a pilot program aimed at reducing high unemployment among the visually impaired, officials say.

The machines are expected to be in place by spring. The state Division of Blind Services will supervise the program to put vending machines at rest stops on Interstate 4 near Walt Disney World and Lakeland and at stops on Interstate 75 near Brooksville and Paynes Prairie, said Jack Bassett, program director.

He said it has taken years to work out details of the program with the state Department of Transportation. If the pilot proves successful, snack services operated by the blind might be installed along interstate highways in North and Central Florida, which are traveled heavily by tourists.

Sugar Ethanol Firm Opens

PALM BEACH (UPI) — A small Brazilian sugar refinery has set up shop in Palm Beach in hopes of getting a piece of the action when federal lead content levels in gasoline drop New Year's Day.

Atlantic Energy wants to get the jump on the U.S. ethanol market. When the rising cost of oil forced Brazil to use gasohol, Atlantic Energy and other companies involved in refining sugar cane diverted their efforts to making ethanol.

Atlantic Energy hopes to sell its surplus gasohol in the United States, said Renan Maia, president of the firm. "Ethanol, which Atlantic's Brazilian refinery derives from sugar cane is a natural replacement for the octane boosting lead content previously found in regular gasoline," he said.

Effective Jan. 1, sellers of regular leaded gasoline must lower the lead content to .1 gram per gallon — the same amount now found in unleaded gasoline.

Police opened fire on the gunmen, killing one. The two others escaped briefly by hijacking a car with two people inside, but were apprehended a short time later, a police spokesman said.

A man pronounced dead at the scene was identified as Austrian Ekhart Karner. A second person died later in the hospital.

An Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesman said Israel did not rule out the possibility the PLO was behind the attacks. However, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin told a business luncheon later that Israel does not yet know who was responsible.

Levy said, "The blood of those who were killed at the hands of this group cries out for what should be done to people that any comparison between them and animals is an insult to both the animal world and humanity."

Levy noted both attacks occurred in countries that had been friendly to the Palestinians. "Countries that have put up with terrorism and thought it possible to live with it, are learning the hard way that there should be no truck with terrorists," he said.

In Washington, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said President Reagan was notified of the incidents at 7 a.m. EST as he prepared to depart for a yuletide season vacation in California.

"We deeply deplore this cowardly act," said Speakes. "It underscores the need for international cooperation to combat terrorism. Those responsible should be rooted out and punished."

The dead in Rome included two women and an infant who died shortly after reaching the San Agostino hospital at Ostia, near the airport, police said.

At the time of the gunbattle, the international airport lounge was crowded with people. Two U.S. airlines, Pan Am and Trans World Airlines, were checking in passengers at adjacent ticket counters.

The attacks were the worst against El Al since July 31, 1982, when a bomb exploded in a suitcase at Munich Airport, injuring seven people, including four Israelis.

The most deadly attack on an Israeli civil aviation target was on May 30, 1972, when three members of the Japanese Red Army attacked Lod — now Ben-Gurion — Airport on behalf of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine. That attack left 26 civilians and two terrorists dead.

prior to the Feb. 3 hearing. "It's something we're certainly going to consider," he said.

Falson also told attorneys sufficient time was provided for notice of the special meeting. In his deposition, the city manager acknowledged the meeting was originally called in error for Thursday, Nov. 7, rather than Nov. 8 as he had intended, but said, "As soon as I saw the notice on Thursday morning, I had it corrected and delivered to the commissioners. We got it to them in time."

The meeting to sanction the condemnation suit was held three days after a representative of then-Yankee Lake owner Jeno Paulucci, whom Cleveland represents, hand-delivered a letter to Falson informing him that the property would be sold to Seminole County. Following Paulucci's decision, the county authorized purchase of Yankee Lake in the early morning hours of Nov. 6, at the tail-end of a seven-hour county commission meeting. The county intends to use the 2,867-acre site for its own wastewater management effort.

When asked by defense attorneys whether the Paulucci letter or the county purchase authorization prompted Sanford's decision to condemn, Falson said, "We began moving (to arrange the meeting) as soon as we got the letter. We weren't going to sit still after they told us the land was going to the county. Our second offer (to purchase Yankee Lake) was turned down, so we figured, hey, we got our second refusal, might as well go for condemnation, it's our only alternative."

Falson also took a stab at what the city claims is county commissioners' violation of the Sunshine laws by saying the letter "appeared at my office at 4:50 p.m. (on Tuesday, Nov. 5), which interestingly enough is just hours before the (purchase) contract appeared at an unannounced and unagendaded 2 a.m. (Nov. 6) meeting of the county commission. This tells me it was preconcived, but not agendaded regularly as required."

On Monday, Sanford commissioners voted to hire a private attorney to assist a city challenge of the county's alleged violation of the Sunshine laws during and after its negotiations to purchase Yankee Lake. Acting on a recommendation made by their attorney, Ken McIntosh, commissioners directed Falson to retain Thomas Julin, of the Miami law firm Steel, Hector and Davis. City Attorney William Colbert said Sanford will file against the county once Julin has completed his research.

However, just as Sanford has maintained the propriety of its action to condemn, the county has said it, too, acted according to law during efforts to obtain Yankee Lake.

Regarding Falson's comment specifically, County Attorney Nikki Clayton said the purchase contract had been added to the commission's agenda earlier in the day, during a workshop session attended by the media.

Falson also told defense attorneys the city was "being kept in a holding pattern" toward the end of its two-month effort to negotiate for Yankee Lake and because of this, he "wanted to move on the condemnation several weeks before (the second refusal)."

However, because purchase of Yankee Lake would be funded in part from a state Department of Environmental Regulation grant, Falson said, "I had to check with them before we could take action."

The DER has also mandated Sanford to cease dumping effluent into Lake Monroe, which prompted the city's effort to obtain Yankee Lake as an effluent disposal site.

Falson said when he inquired about the possibility of condemning Yankee Lake, the DER "said we could only take that course of action once our second offer (on the property) was turned down."

"So we held off," Falson said. "But sure enough ... bingo! I got a letter from Jeno's representative saying 'We decided to sell to the county.' Then I called Bill Colbert and the mayor to arrange the (condemnation) meeting."

Falson also said the city moved quickly to bring its suit after the second refusal "because there had been too much slippage in the project already. I was very mindful and still am of the tight schedule and time constraints we're under (to comply with the DER mandate)."

According to Cleveland the depositions "have raised some interesting points that will certainly be addressed in court."

"Although it's up to Judge Waddell to decide whether or not their actions were proper," he said, "We feel there is definitely enough there for us to challenge."

Commission: Deduct Child Support Payments From Pay

GAINESVILLE (UPI) — The Governor's Commission on Child Support recommended today that child support payments be automatically deducted from the paychecks of divorced parents who must make such payments.

"Our recommendation is that child support payments be automatically deducted from wages, just the way taxes are," said Elizabeth McCulloch, a member of the commission and assistant director of the Center for Governmental Responsibility at the University of Florida.

She said automatic deductions are needed to ensure the steady flow of payments to feed and clothe children in single-parent families who depend on support from an absent parent.

Florida ranks No. 8 in the nation in the number of divorces among families with children, the commission said in its final report.

The Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services handles 363,000 cases of families with children where one parent is absent, and 95 percent of the absent parents are men.

While HRS cannot say exactly how many children in Florida receive child support payments, many single-parent families have more than one child — bringing the total at well over 363,000. Further, HRS does not handle all child support cases Florida.

In recent years, public attention has focused on the issue of absent parents who neglect to make child support payments or who habitually are late in making them.

"It's a terrible handicap for a child when they're one payment late. It's the children who are suffering," said Marge Van Brackle, another commission member and the founder of Children Against Deadbeat Dads, CADD, an organization of single mothers headquartered in Daytona Beach with 17 chapters in Florida and Georgia.

If the commission's recommendation is approved intact by the next session of the Legislature, all parents who pay child support will have those payments deducted from their wages as soon as the court decides on the amount.

"I'm very leery about doing this immediately," Van Brackle said. "Why should the good parents who make their payments on time suffer along with the bad?"

"But if they're one payment late, then they should have child support payments automatically deducted from their wages. Give them one chance — then make them pay," Van Brackle said.

If automatic child support deductions becomes law, Ken Pangborn, head of a father's rights group called Men International said deductions should be made from the first day.

"This helps avoid the stigma placed on a man by his employer," Pangborn said. "Let's say a man is hit with a 'Deadbeat Daddie' warrant to have his salary garnished. His career is through. He'll either be fired or won't be promoted."

Pangborn said he had heard of a 27-year-old man in Wisconsin who was upwardly mobile in his company until he was served with a wage garnishment warrant.

"His upward mobility stopped and within a year he was demoted," Pangborn said.

But Pangborn's group does not wholeheartedly endorse automatic wage garnishments from Day 1.

"I think a better way is for people to voluntarily take care of it if they can," he said. Pangborn said, however, that if men are negligent in making child support payments, they should be punished.

"We're not around here to say men shouldn't support their children," Pangborn said. "We feel men have a responsibility to care for their children."

Rebels No Longer Honor Truce

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Leftist rebels said they no longer feel obligated to honor a holiday cease-fire because of government violations of the truce arranged by the Catholic church.

Guerrilla leader Ruben Zamora, said in a statement Thursday, the rebels would not attack power or transportation facilities, but might attack what they consider military targets.

"The FMLN forces cannot remain passive while the governmental armed forces persistently attack our territories and population, violating the truce," the statement said.

The Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, is a coalition of five leftist armies seeking to overthrow the U.S.-backed government of President Jose Napoleon Duarte.

The document listed 13 specific incidents insurgents claim violated the cease-fire, which called for both the military and rebels to halt offensive actions from Dec. 24 through Jan. 2.

Deadly force Said Justified

TAMPA (UPI) — An off-duty deputy was justified in shooting down the man who stabbed to death a teenage boy and wounded four other people in a butcher-knife rampage, State Attorney Bill James ruled.

"In fact," James wrote Thursday in a letter to Hillsborough County Sheriff Walter Heinrich, "based on our review of the incident, it is our opinion the deputy would have been justified in using deadly force" sooner.

Reserve Deputy David Rule had been on routine suspension pending investigation of the attack on bus passengers and others Saturday morning.

James' letter concluded Rule's actions "were justified in defense of himself and of others, and the shooting was also the justified use of deadly force in the apprehension of an armed and dangerous fleeing felon."

Police said Lester Mizell Green, 29, boarded the bus and stabbed driver Samuel Kelly, 30, and passengers Edward Kellner, 38, and Clyde Russell III, 14.

Russell later died of stab wounds in the neck and chest, but not before running for help into a motorcycle shop, where Rule learned of the attack. The boy was buried Christmas Eve in Brandon, where he was in the eighth grade.

He had been Christmas shopping with his mother and sister when Green went berserk. Investigators said today they have established no motive for the attack.

Kelly, the only stabbing victim still hospitalized, was in serious but stable condition at Tampa General Hospital.

The deputy chased Green into a motel, where Green stabbed Wava Gordon, 39, and John Saunders, 41. The deputy fired two shots into the motel and when Green fled fired three more, killing Green as he tried to attack another bystander, police said.

Green, an unemployed construction worker whose only previous arrest had been for drunken driving, was not identified until Tuesday, when a neighbor recognized a composite drawing shown on television and alerted authorities.

Latrusclano opened the case, and found nothing explosive inside but packing material.

"Apparently it was emptied, repacked, but never reloaded," Hughey said. The case was last used in 1964 according to markings found on it's side.

The carrying case was to be picked up by the U.S. Army today.

What's the catch? "I don't usually name 'em, Mrs. Brown said. "But I'll tell you. Blue gill, shell crackers, speckled perch, striped bass, catfish."

Mrs. Scurry's favorites are catfish, so naturally they're the most elusive. "I can't hardly catch them," she confessed.

And Mrs. Scurry sometimes yields to the pace and falls asleep while waiting for a nibble. "Life is so slow," she said.

"It relaxes my mind. I get away from everything. I don't think about nothing but is a fish going to bite that line?"

"I come as often as I can. I can't fish everyday, but sometimes my friends drag me out two days right behind each other just to see what I can do. I usually catch two or three or more."

"I love the rod and reel, so I can throw it out. If the fish is in, the pole is nice, but if they're out you need the rod and reel," Mrs. Scurry said.

The needs of bankside fishermen are rather simple, according to Sanford sporting goods dealer Don Smith who has been rigging fishermen for 29 years and who has, as a Sanford native, soaked a few hooks himself in just about every fishing hole in the area.

"They're all good," he said, and all you need to sample the waters is a cane pole along with hook, line, sinker and bait. The whole rig, including a day's supply of your choice of worms, minnows or crickets totals up to about $7, with a pre-rigged pole priced at $3.80," he said.

The length of the pole determines the length of the line. They should be equal, so when you lift the pole the big one that didn't get away will swing back and land right in your hand, Smith said.

The choice of pole length, he said, will depend on where you're fishing and the depth of the water. If you fishing from a bank you'll need a longer pole, and thus an equally long line to reach the catch. If from a seawall, the line and pole can be shorter, because the water at the base of the wall is deeper than at a sloping shore, Smith said. And if you're fishing from a boat, with easy access to deep water, the pole and line can be very short.

And just when do you need to shell out $8.50 to the state for a fishing license good for one year?

Smith said if you are a resident of the county where your fishing hole is you don't need a license as long as your cane pole or manmade rod isn't rigged with a reel. Anytime you add a reel or use artificial bait you must have a license, he said.

Out-of county residents, when fishing away from home must have a license no matter what gear they use, Smith said. Licenses can be picked up at bait shops or at courthouses, he said.

Bankside fishermen aren't going for the big catch, Smith said. They're usually working with a light line that is easy to handle, but which might snap under a heavy weight.

"A number of years ago a young fellow fishing from the seawall down here at the lake caught a 10-pound bass on a cane pole. That made the paper."

That catch may have been news, but most banksider fishermen aren't looking for notoriety. "They're just enthused by the fact that it's just a challenge," Smith said.

"You just don't know. At any moment you might have a bite on the end of the line. They sit there and wait on that. It's not addictive though."

Duke Ellington Albums Released

Albums "The Cotton Connection" and "The African Flower," two shining, but very different, examples of the strength of Duke Ellington's legacy.

The first is a combined tip of the hat from singer Brewer and a 17-piece band Mercer Ellington assembled for this studio session. They tackle standards as well as lesser-known works dating back to the 1920s. Brewer's expressive voice comes through best on "Stormy Weather," "Ring Dem Bells" and "Duke's Place." The instrumentalists include Barrie Lee Hall on trumpet, Norris Turney, Arnie Lawrence and Al Cohn on saxophones, and Eddie Daniels on clarinet.

Flutist Newton has brought his own fresh ideas and some hot mainstream and modern talent to seven of the most enduring works of Ellington and collaborator Billy Strayhorn. The result is a rich recording that takes Duke's orchestral concept to a new contemporary level.

Newton's cohorts here include violinist John Blake, alto saxophonist Arthur Blythe, cornetist Olu Dara, vocalist Milt Grayson, pianist Roland Hanna, drummers Billy Hart and Pheeroan akLaff, vibist Jay Hoggard, bassist Rick Rozie and percussionist Anthony Brown.

They tackle "Black and Tan Fantasy," "Virgin Jungle," "Strange Feeling," "Fleurette Africaine," "Cottontail," "Sophisticated Lady" and "Passion Flower."

This is a fine effort, adding Newton's flute to the Ellington mix. It blends an understanding of the orchestral tradition and some mighty fine personal artistry.

current effort. "What's A Memory Like You?"

Schneider's new album for MCA is due for release after the first of the year and stylistically it is his best so far.

Having a set purpose from an early age has helped his career tremendously, says Schneider. He was in local theater at the age of 8 and by age 14 was a seasoned veteran of the legitimate stage. After high school he continued his theater work and started acting in commercials and films — and also began playing music for tips at local nightspots around Atlanta.

In September 1977, with a week's stubble on his face and a beer in his hand, Schneider showed up to audition as a "good ole boy" for "The Dukes of Hazzard."

He thinks this helped him get the part that launched him on the road to stardom.

But there is a more serious and reflective side to Schneider.

He said he recognized from the beginning that there would be "a battle" to maintain his own identity.

"It's a constant struggle reminding people, 'Hi, I'm John Schneider, and this is the character I play,'" he said.

"Recognizing this at the very beginning was very, very important. A lot of people will sit back and just kind of do their show, take their off time, rest and relax — and when the show is over they wonder why people call them by their character's name," he said.

"This is a problem I recognized early on. (I knew) I would be typecast but because of the show I could get on the talk shows and get to sing on the Academy Awards show. It was good and bad but everything has worked out terrific."

Schneider prefers to record in Nashville rather than at home in Los Angeles because of the atmosphere.

"Country music is what I come here for. I select the material and work with the musicians, sequencing the album, mixing. I work on everything. This time even the album cover was done here."

The singer has been at it long enough to develop some down-home ideas about country music.

"A lot of the real country stuff has been there but a lot of people haven't been recording it during the crossover era. I hope we are getting out of that ... There have been a lot of songs on hold that no one has picked, but they are there."

Schneider has been picking them and the fans have been liking them.

Old acquaintances won't be forgotten when "Dynasty" star Emma Samms and "Love Boat" star "Ted McGinley co-host "Dick Temptations, Barry Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve — 86," airing live Tuesday on ABC. The Manilow and Tears for Fears also add to the festivities.

Ft. Lauderdale Ditching College Break Image

By Jeff Bator

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The unveiling of multi-million dollar quarters for an art museum that spent 27 years in storefront galleries reveals a city shedding its image of a mecca for beer-swilling college students and evolving into a community sinking roots.

The Museum of Art, Fort Lauderdale, opens its doors Jan. 18. The $7.5 million facility, sprawled over a downtown block near the New River, boasts a 262-seat auditorium, sculpture deck and library.

The white stucco building gives the museum a sense of permanence absent at its old homes, which included a former hardware store.

Elliott Barnett, museum president, said the area is no longer just a resort swarming with transients, but a community swelling with people who stay year round. The Broward County population has grown from about 333,000 year-round residents in 1960 to just over a million in 1985.

"I think it's the first confirmation that civilization has taken shape in the community," Barnett said of the new facility. "That's the message we want to get across: Spring Break does not identify Fort Lauderdale or Broward County anymore."

"We want to redefine, to refine the area's image, which is basically a bunch of beer-drinking guys and half-nude girls lying on the beach on Easter," said museum director George Bolge.

More than half of the museum's collection will be on hand for the thousands of schoolchildren and patrons expected to visit it each year. Less than 1 percent was displayed in the old gallery. The rest was stashed in warehouses.

The museum was founded in 1958. Since then, it has amassed 19th and 20th century American and European paintings and sculpture, and a collection of Oceanic, West African, Pre-Columbian, and American Indian art.

Also on view is the largest CoBra collection in the country. CoBra stands for Copenhagen, Brussels and Amsterdam, three European cities that launched a post-World War II movement of painters and sculptors who expressed suffering, morality and other social themes in the last half century and influenced modern day artists.

Bolge said that in shuffling from the tiny gallery to the new museum building, intimacy is lost, but there is room for diversity.

"You can deal with monumental outdoor structures, major monumental paintings," he said. "You have a much broader presentation palette."

As an inauguration, the museum is exhibiting "An American Renaissance: Painting and Sculpture Since 1940," made possible by a grant from American Express and ranging from the abstract expressionism of Jackson Pollock to the pop art of Andy Warhol.

"The exhibition attempts a coherent intellectual history of the past 50 years by linking its visual impact to chronological development of ideas," said guest curator Sam Hunter, who teaches at Princeton University.

"The show is thus an exploration of the relationship of American art to the historically specific conditions of American life, thought and artistic traditions since World War II."

Edward Larrabee Barnes, the architect responsible for the Dallas Museum of Art, designed Fort Lauderdale's new facility, which Bolge calls a distinctive piece of work that does not rob its contents of attention.

"The building has a neutral background to allow the art to speak eloquently, rather than compete with the architectural background," Bolge said. "You don't want artwork smothered with architectural grandeur."

Some of the building's off-white walls can be moved to accommodate temporary exhibitions. Wood and stone sculpture sits on the terrazzo and gray-carpeted floors.

In the auditorium, the film series will feature works by foreign masters such as Ingmar Bergman and Federico Fellini, and artists and critics will give lectures. A cafe opens onto a terrace dotted with oaks and iron sculpture.

Many of the museum's patrons donated money for the new facility, funded by about 500 corporations and private citizens. Memberships will keep dollars flowing in.

"It is private philanthropy that does the building of museums," Barnett said. "We're following a tradition of American culture."

The museum serves the golden strip of south Florida running from Miami to Palm Beach. But why did it go up in Fort Lauderdale?

"Why New York? Why London? Why Paris? It's an emerging metropolitan area," Barnett said.

He said Fort Lauderdale's shift from retiree and tourist center to metropolis, from "prolonged adolescence to adulthood," reflects the life of the United States.

"After people got here, they began to sink roots. That's the history of this country."

Film Review

CLUE (PG) — Eileen Brennan, Tim Curry, Madeline Kahn, Martin Mull. (Comedy Thriller) The opening shots — ominous clouds rubbing against a midnight sky, haunting howls, a foreboding mansion in the distance — make "Clue" look promising. Then the action starts. Based on the popular murder-mystery board game, Jonathan Lynn has directed the film with manic speed, but even his quick-before-they-find-out this-is-medioc e-stuff pacing can't hide the characters' cardboard personalities. There are three different ending to "Clue". GRADE: C.

How To Send Mail To Your Favorite Celebrity

Dear Dick — I always read articles about how many tons of fan mail famous people receive. Maybe I'm stupid, but how do people know where to send fan mail? I know there are a couple of address books you can buy, but there are a lot of stars not included in those — the stars of "Cagney & Lacey," for example. — J.L., Amarillo, Texas.

In the case of Tyne Daly and Sharon Gless, a.k.a. Cagney & Lacey, you send mail to them in c/o CBS, 7800 Beverly Blvd., Los Angeles, CA. 90036. And, with other stars, you can send mail to the studio that made their latest movie or the network that carries their program. Chances are they will never see the mail personally — most stars have fan mail services that screen the mail, or the studio or the network does it for them. And they only see letters that are significant in some way.

Dear Dick — I realize Suzanne Somers does not have a TV show but she does appear on TV from time to time. USA Weekend printed a "one-liner" by Suzanne that said: "If anyone has any extra love, even a heartbeat or a touch or two, I wish they wouldn't waste it on dogs." I hope you will print this for all the dog lovers of America! How can we write this lovely, heartless creature? — R.M., Houston.

I have no idea if that was an accurate quote or not, but, if she said it, she wasn't being too bright. You don't insult dogs, mothers, religions or political parties in public, if you want to remain beloved by the fans. Whatever she thinks about people who love animals, she should have kept it to herself. Her business address is 927 N. La Cienega Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Ask Dick Kleiner

Dear Dick — Years ago, I saw a movie with James Garner and a black actor. They worked a scam where Garner sold the "slave" at auction for a lot of money, then would sneak back at night and free him so they could go on to the next auction. It was hilarious and I've never heard of it since — and, guess what, I can't remember the name. — G.S., Muskegon, Mich.

It was a funny movie, and it was called "The Skin Game," and it was made in 1971, and Garner's co-star was Lou Gossett.

Dear Dick — I recently saw a movie on TV, "Poppy," with W.C. Fields and Rochelle Hudson, from 1936. Miss Hudson was my dad's screen sweetheart and who he named me after. I would like to know if she is still alive and if so where could I write to her. — R.M., Erie, Pa.

Your dad was (or is) a man of exquisite taste, because Rochelle was a beautiful woman. She died earlier this year.

Dear Dick — This has been puzzling me. In one of your articles, you wrote that Bob Barker was not married. I've seen his wife on TV. Whatever happened to her? Did they get a divorce? At the time I saw them on TV, they were bragging about how long they had been married. — Mrs. S.R., Tuttle, N.D.

Dorothy Jo Barker died a few years ago. They had been married close to 40 years.

Dear Dick — There are many people against me on this issue, so please save me by saying that I'm right. Was Meredith Baxter Birney the blonde girl on "Petticoat Junction" who played Billie Jo? I say she was not. — L.S., Canyon, Texas.

Consider yourself saved. People get their Merediths mixed up, that's the problem. There were three actresses who played Billie Jo over the course of that show's run — Jeannine Riley, Gunilla Hutton and Meredith MacRae.

Dear Dick — I recently heard that actor Christopher George was dead. Why wasn't it in the news? When did he die? Wasn't he married to Lynda Day George? Whatever became of her? He was one of my favorites and I was shocked to hear of his death. — I.G.T., Morgantown, W. Va.

Chris died in 1963 at the too-young age of 54. His death was in the news here, but I suppose the further you get away from Hollywood, the less important that event was. Yes, his widow is the beautiful Lynda, who is still here, still acting.
