Lake Mary woman killed

MERRITT ISLAND — A Lake Mary woman, Lisa Ann Polgar, 25, of 106 Highland Court, Lake Mary, was killed Sunday night in a single car accident on Merritt Island in Brevard County.

Polgar was a passenger in a vehicle driven by Dana Curtiss, of 10316 Grotton Court, Orlando. According to the Florida Highway Patrol, the vehicle reportedly went out of control about 3-tenths of a mile East of South Banana River Road, and smashed into a clump of trees. Curtiss was hospitalized at Merritt Island.

Bicyclist killed this morning

SANFORD — A man was killed at about 12:03 a.m. today when his bicycle traveling south on the outer edge of U.S. Highway 17-92, Sanford, was struck from behind by a car.

Police Chief Steven Harriett said police early today hadn't confirmed the identity of the victim who is about 27 years old.

The driver of the car, John Patrick Hendricks, 37, of Osteen, stopped at the scene and was very helpful, Harriett said. An investigation has begun. Harriett said at this point it doesn't appear that charges will be filed.

The victim was thrown from his bike and was dead at the scene, Harriett said.

Casselberry police chief named

CASSELBERRY — Casselberry's Acting Police Chief Durbin Gatch has been selected as the city's new police chief.

Gatch, 42, of Lake Mary, was chosen from a field of 39 candidates to replace Chief Fred McGowan, who recently retired.

Gatch was tapped for the new job Tuesday after a selection panel made a recommendation to Mayor Andrea Dennison. Gatch has been on the Casselberry police force 17 years. He has a bachelor of arts degree in criminal justice and is an FBI National Academy graduate.

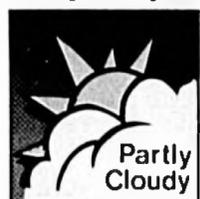

"I think I know the pulse of the city. I know where the police department ought to be now and where it should be five years from now," Gatch said in an earlier interview. He was attending a lawman's funeral in Orlando this morning and not available for comment.

Quick fix for schools

Portable classrooms will be added at some sites; solution only temporary

By NICK PFEIFFAUF

SANFORD — On a split vote, the Seminole County School Board last night added portable classrooms to elementary schools in Sanford and Oviedo as a temporary solution to the "crisis" overcrowding problem.

As the school board opened its meeting at the Seminole High School Auditorium last night, Superintendent Robert Hughes set the tone. "The County is in a crisis situation with too many students and not enough classrooms, yet we are faced with the need to provide the best educational experiences and best safety for our students."

By the time the meeting had ended, the Board had approved measures they believe will resolve the problems, but only for the upcoming school year.

With the defeat of the $519 million bond issue referendum last February, the schools are not only faced with a problem of no money with which to build new schools and/or classrooms, but problems of overcrowding at some schools and the expected

State officials cruised the river Tuesday, posting eviction and demolition notices on cabins like these that dot the islands in the environmentally sensitive body of water.

Wekiva 'squatters' ordered off the river

ALONG THE WEKIVA RIVER — To the state, they're "squatters" — trespassers.

But to the dozen or so owners of cabins on islands in this river, they are as much a part of the river as the river itself.

"Jealousy, greed and hate, that's why they want us out," says Rowland "Hap" Goble, a resident of Lake Mary and a Wekiva River cabin owner since 1959. "They say, 'We ain't got one, so you can't have one. People have been here for 30, 40 years, minding their own business. Now the state says 'You got to go.'"

But state officials paint a different picture of the cabin owners.

"Those cabins were not built on their land," says Deborah Shelley, an environmental specialist with the Florida Department of Natural Resources. "They were built on state land. The cabins have no permits for sanitary provisions. Some have sink drains that run out on the ground and right in the river. I don't know of any good they do."

On Monday and Tuesday, 17 of the cabins were posted with warning notices by Shelley and DNR law enforcement officers. Cabins that appeared abandoned were posted with letters stating the structure will be demolished and should not be occupied.

Truancy costs 86 local students their driving privileges

By NICK PFEIFFAUF
Herald staff writer

SANFORD — 86 students from Seminole County schools have lost their driving privileges because of truancy according to state figures, officials confirmed today.

In all, Florida has seized more than 5,500 driver's licenses from students under a 7-month-old dropout prevention law tying driving privileges to school attendance.

Seminole County officials however, believe not enough information is known to evaluate the merits of the program. "It's too early to tell," said Jack Heisler, Director of High School Education for Seminole County.

Heisler attended a meeting of school officials and reported that they have found the program to be very time consuming. "a whole lot of work for just a few students."

Much of the work comes under the jurisdiction of Ivan Bowers, Director of Student Services for Seminole County. "Out of the 86 students who have lost their licenses because of truancy, 16 have requested reinstatement of their driving privileges because of hardship," said Bowers.

"And out of the 16, I've only found 3 cases where hardship apparently did exist," Bowers said when students lose their licenses, many apply for hardship reinstatement because, "they'll grab at any straw to get that license back."

The Department of Highway Safety and Motor Vehicles reported it snatched 5,575 licenses statewide between October and May 8.

Duval County led all counties with 519 licenses seized, followed by Dade County, 437; Orange County, 411; Broward County, 393, and Palm

Gardner key player in budget talks

From staff, wire reports

Sen. W.W. "Bud" Gardner, D-Titusville, was appointed to a negotiating team assigned to iron out differences between the state Senate's $26.4 billion state spending proposal and the House's $26.3 billion budget that was approved Tuesday.

The conference committee was broken into three subcommittees, including general government and Health and Rehabilitative Services. Gardner was appointed Tuesday to the general government subcommittee. He served on the conference committee during the previous session of the Legislature in 1989.

The House voted 76-38 Tuesday to approve legislation raising $481 million in new taxes and fees for businesses, auto insurance customers and cigar smokers. The bill (CS-SB 402) contains several key elements of the House's plan to finance a state budget of more than $26 billion in the new fiscal year through new taxes, fees, budget cuts and transfers.

Seminole County Rep. Art Grindle, D-Altamonte Springs, voted against the package while Frank Stone, R-Casselberry, voted for the bill.

Last week the House voted to increase taxes on cigarettes, real estate and investment portfolios. A Senate bill contains a different mix of taxes amounting to about the same bottom line.

The tax bill which cleared the House Tuesday would raise $481 million in the first year, including

Family indicted on drug charges

JACKSONVILLE — A federal grand jury has indicted seven members of the same family on charges of operating a drug ring that police say controlled nearly 75 percent of the area's heroin supply.

The 38-count indictment, handed down last week and unsealed Monday, charges 11 people with conspiring to distribute more than 1 kilogram — 2.2 pounds — of heroin. Seven of the accused are members of the Ray Fulton family, who police say allegedly brought the contraband from Africa through U.S. Customs by hiding the heroin in the soles of their shoes.

The smuggling allegedly went on from 1987 until earlier this year, said U.S. Attorney Robert W. Genzman.

"Heroin dealers have traditionally preyed upon the black communities in Jacksonville, and this work should help to disrupt the trade in these communities," Genzman said.

The indictments are the culmination of a 16-month investigation by federal, state and local law enforcement officials. Federal prosecutors sought the indictments after the April 20 arrest of Tunde Ademuyiwa, a Nigerian who investigators said was the key importer for the ring.

Three found dead in Mulberry fire

MULBERRY — The charred bodies of a Mulberry couple and their daughter were found in the ruins of their home Tuesday by firefighters, who suspect arson in the blaze that nearly destroyed the house.

The bodies of Clarence Knowles, 60, his wife Barbara, 50, and their daughter Bonnie, 21, were found shortly before 4 a.m. by Mulberry volunteer firefighters responding to an emergency call.

The Knowles' other daughter, Maria Pittman, said her parents would have celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Tuesday.

Polk County Sheriff Lawrence Crow said it appeared the three had been murdered, but he would not confirm reports that all three had been stabbed. A 5-gallon gasoline can was found in the front yard.

"It would not be prudent for us to say how the Knowles' died before we see the results of the autopsy," sheriff's spokesperson Lynne Breidenbach said.

A man described as an acquaintance of the Knowles family was being questioned about the deaths Tuesday, she said.

"There was a vehicle missing from the scene. We found the vehicle abandoned and burning about a mile (from the house)," Crow said. "I think we know what happened at this point."

Breidenbach said firefighters arrived at 3:45 a.m. "By that time the house was completely engulfed in flames."

Agents halt computer shipment

MIAMI — Federal agents have arrested a man in Miami on charges of plotting to illegally ship one of the world's most powerful computers to an Easter Bloc nation.

The unidentified man was one of two readying to ship the computer out of Charleston, S.C., when customs agents swooped in Tuesday. The U.S. Customs Service scheduled a news conference for 10 a.m. EDT Wednesday to discuss the arrest.

They described the machine only as "the world's second most powerful computer." That would put it in the rare class of super-fast machines capable of processing hundreds of millions of instructions per second.

Supercomputers are manufactured only in the United States and Japan. Their export is strictly regulated and shipment is prohibited to certain countries.

Navy searches for clues in copter crash

JACKSONVILLE — Navy investigators returned Tuesday to the scene of a helicopter crash, searching for clues to the cause of the accident that killed all four of the crewmen aboard.

The Navy Seasprite helicopter crashed at about 1 p.m. Monday about 17 miles south of Mayport, Fla., and about 200 yards offshore. Navy divers recovered the bodies of the crewmen from inside the fuselage at 6:30 p.m.

The victims were identified Tuesday as Lt. Cmdr. Robert Dobson, 36, of Arlington, Va.; Lt. Edward Kleppe, 30, of Falls Church, Va.; Petty Officer Peter Ware, 28, of Norristown, Pa.; and Petty Officer Trevis Glover, 20, of Cope, South Carolina.

The helicopter was one of three assigned to a Naval Reserve unit based in Willow Grove, Pa., that were returning home from an assignment at the North Atlantic Underwater Test and Evaluation Center near Andros Island in the Bahamas, said Jim Kaufmann, a spokesman for the Jacksonville Naval Air Station.

A witness, Ronnie Ruffner, of Arlington, Fla., said he saw something fall from the front of the helicopter immediately before it crashed.

"Some people said they thought it was the back propeller, but it wasn't. It came from the front. I couldn't tell if it was someone diving out or not," said Ruffner.

Mike Orris, of Westside, Fla., said he was walking along the beach about 200 yards south of the helicopter when it went down.

"I thought it was just playing around, like a stunt or something, at first. Then it looked like it was trying to correct itself, and once it hit, it sunk in no time," he said.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Tiny filter blamed for launch delay

United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL — Engineers removed a suspect cooling system valve from the shuttle Columbia Tuesday and found a "crumpled" filter smaller than a thimble that apparently was to blame for delaying the ship's launch to around the end of the month.

Technicians working inside Columbia's payload bay removed the valve assembly before dawn Tuesday and immediately took it apart to find out what had caused a reduced flow of Freon-like refrigerant through one of Columbia's two cooling systems.

NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said engineers found the defective filter in the valve assembly, apparently explaining the low flow rate and easing concern about possible problems elsewhere in the complex cooling system.

The T-shaped valve routes refrigerant to either the shuttle's crew cabin or its payload. Malone said the filter inside the valve's inlet "was crumpled and pieces of it were found in the other two" filters where lines exit the valve.

She described the filter as "smaller than the tip of your finger. It's smaller than a thimble."

While the filter damage appeared to explain the reduced flow of refrigerant, Malone said engineers were inspecting the

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Jubilant NASA scientists began focusing the Hubble Space Telescope like a pair of giant binoculars and predicted the orbital observatory could take its historic first picture of the heavens Sunday.

As the 12-ton telescope orbited 381 miles above Earth, engineers sent commands Tuesday that moved one of two near-perfect mirrors about 240 thousandths of an inch in the first steps of painstakingly focusing its optical system.

The critical milestone followed successful efforts overnight to finally get the $1.5 billion telescope's high-precision fine guidance sensors to lock onto selected stars to keep the instrument pointed in the right direction.

"From my perspective as an astronomer, it's an especially exciting day. Since the launch, this has been the most exciting day," project scientist Edward Weiler said.

"For the first time, we now are sure we know where we're pointing. We can point to a place in space and actually find the stars that are supposed to be there, lock up on them and measure them and use them for focusing. So it's a significant accomplishment," he said.

The work was part of a 36-hour "bootstrap" focusing process that began at 8 p.m. Monday and will be followed after 8 a.m. Wednesday by a 38-hour guidance system test.

If all goes well, the work will lead sometime Sunday — probably Sunday afternoon — to the telescope's wide field planetary camera snapping the observatory's first picture, Weiler said.

lines running to and from the valve to make sure no other problems were present.

A replacement valve was scheduled to be installed aboard Columbia on Wednesday. Internal planning schedules indicated Columbia could be ready for blastoff by around May 30, although an official target launch date was not expected to be set until late this week or early next.

One issue for NASA is high overtime costs over the Memorial Day weekend. Agency managers could elect to delay the launch to June 1 or 2 to avoid having to start the ship's countdown during the holiday weekend.

Columbia and its seven-member crew were originally scheduled for blastoff this Thursday to carry a battery of telescopes into orbit to study X-ray and ultraviolet radiation from deep space.

But the flight was put on hold last week after engineers discovered a reduced flow of refrigerant through a T-shaped "proportioning valve" in one of the shuttle's two cooling systems.

Over the weekend, technicians drained about seven gallons of refrigerant from "coolant loop No. 1" and cut out the suspect valve early Tuesday. A replacement valve was scheduled to be welded into place Wednesday and subjected to X-ray analysis to make sure no leaks were present. If all goes well, the coolant loop would be recharged with refrigerant and tested to make sure it was operating properly.

The shuttle's two coolant loops are critical for safe operation in space because they carry away heat from the shuttle's crew cabin, electronic gear and payload. NASA flight rules require an emergency re-entry and landing if one of the loops fails in space.

Klan cancels cross-burning rally

United Press International

FORT PIERCE — The Ku Klux Klan announced it would hold a rally and cross burning Saturday night, but told authorities less than 24 hours later it was scrapping the plan, at least temporarily, police said Tuesday.

The Dixie Knights of the KKK late Monday asked the city for a permit to use Pinewood Park for the Saturday evening rally, but applicant Michael Balsamo called back Tuesday morning. Police Chief Gil Kerlikowske said.

"They've asked for an approximately one-month postponement," Kerlikowske said. "Rather than asking for it this Saturday, they'll be back in touch."

Balsamo did not return phone calls.

Kerlikowske said Balsamo gave no reason for the change, but the chief said the city would most likely approve the application.

"He had talked to me about two things: One is holding a rally. Two is burning a cross. The cross burning is clearly prohibited under our open burning ordinance, but certainly the freedom to assemble and make a statement is more than likely something they can do," he said.

In the application, Balsamo indicated he expected 175 to 275 people, but Kerlikowske said that included passersby and onlookers, and that Balsamo indicated only about 30 people would participate.

Earlier this year, the Klan held a weekend rally in Palatka, and Kerlikowske said that a Klan literature appeared on car windshields in Fort Pierce and Port St. Lucie.

"Our city is 45 percent black. I think the Klan is looking for somewhere there would be controversy, and, of course, we have a lot of media coverage," Kerlikowske said.

The last time the Klan rallied in Fort Pierce was Nov. 21, 1981, following racial disturbances in a local high school.

Defendant pulls pistol in court; bailiff wounded

UPI report

PLANTATION KEY — A 22-year-old Miami man being arraigned on a charge of driving under the influence pulled a gun Tuesday in a crowded courtroom and fired one shot, injuring a bailiff.

The suspect, Peter Anderson, was subdued by three bailiffs. Judge Reagan Pomey and sheriff's detectives, said Becky Herrin, a spokeswoman for the Monroe Sheriff's Department.

Anderson was placed in isolation at the Plantation Key Jail and charged with attempted murder of an assistant state attorney, aggravated battery on a bailiff, carrying a firearm in a courtroom and reckless display of a firearm in a courtroom.

The injured bailiff, Ron Dowmond, 62, was taken to a Miami hospital for treatment. Dowmond attempted to take the gun away from Anderson, but the weapon discharged, grazing one of his fingers before passing through his index finger.

The incident occurred in Pomey's courtroom at about 9:15 a.m., when Anderson was being arraigned on charges of driving under the influence, driving without a valid license and refusing to sign a citation.

Scientist links stinks to erosion of Sphinx

United Press International

GAINESVILLE — Sewage from modern developments may be destroying the Egyptian sphinx, which has endured for more than 4,000 years, a University of Florida scientist said Tuesday.

Wastewater from hotels and apartments built in the past decade within a few miles of the Sphinx may be flooding the foundation of the monument, said Scot Smith, a UF civil engineering professor advising the Egyptian government.

"It has become very fashionable to escape the congestion of Cairo to a flat or hotel overlooking the Sphinx," he said. "The lack of sewer lines in these developments means that sewage could have seeped into the groundwater, which is at its highest level and flooding the Sphinx foundation."

Water draws the natural salts from the monument's limestone rock, causing it to weaken, he said.

Acid rain and sandstorms also are eroding the figure with a man's head and a lion's body. Smith said. He and 10 other scientists are making recommendations to the National Research Council about how to preserve the Sphinx.

Rare but heavy rain storms also carry auto and industrial pollutants from Cairo, which crack the monument's limestone, he said.

"Another source of pollution is diesel fuel from the dozens of tourist buses that park within 20 yards of the Sphinx, letting their engines run to keep on the air conditioning," Smith said.

Sandstorms also have taken their toll over thousands of years, helping to loosen a two-ton chunk of limestone that fell off the Sphinx's shoulder in 1988. Scientists fear the neck will become so narrow that the head will eventually topple, he said.

Experts must decide whether the Sphinx should be restored to its original state.

Man charged with burglary, exposure

LONGWOOD — A man who allegedly exposed himself and performed a sex act on himself in front of a window at the entrance to Longwood Village Retirement Center, was arrested inside that enclosed compound.

Longwood police said they found Brian Lee Emmert, 23, of 148 Carriage Cove, Sanford, hiding there at about midnight. He is charged with burglary and exposure of sexual organs. Two witnesses told police they saw the incident, the arrest report said.

Woman accused of stealing bracelet

SANFORD — A woman who allegedly jumped into a man's car and offered him sexual favors without his permission is accused of grabbing the man's gold bracelet and fleeing after being rebuffed, Sanford police report.

The victim reportedly identified Bernadette James, 27, of 911 Cypress Ave., Sanford, as a suspect in the 4:05 p.m. Tuesday incident on Cypress Avenue. She was arrested at 4:12 p.m. on a charge of strong arm robbery.

Man charged after threatening family

CASSELBERRY — A man identified only as John Doe was arrested by Casselberry police at the house of his mother, Ana Cruz, 46, of 990 N. Winter Park Drive, after he allegedly threatened her and other occupants of the house.

One victim Valentin Garcia, 26, of that address said the suspect hit him and Garcia ran out and armed himself with a shovel. The suspect armed himself with a piece of pipe and allegedly threatened to kill the family, Garcia reportedly said.

The arrest was made at that location at 11:20 p.m. Tuesday on charges of aggravated assault and battery.

Gun found in van at middle school

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — A man questioned by a Seminole County sheriff's deputy when in line to pick up a student at Teague Middle School, Sand Lake Road, Altamonte Springs, was arrested after the deputy determined the man had a loaded pistol in his van.

The suspect also reportedly did not have parent's permission to pick up a student at that school. The gun was found after bullets fell out of the glovebox of the man's van when he was looking for the vehicle registration, a sheriff's report said. The man reportedly said there was a gun in the van and the deputy said he found it near the front seat.

Calvin Thomas, 28, of Apopka, was arrested at the school at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday on charges of carrying a concealed firearm and armed trespass.

New program to receive state funding

SANFORD — State funding for a new Community Development program may help scare children away from drug use by facilitating visits to the school by recovering addicts who will talk to the children about the problems of addiction and the struggles in trying to overcome it.

City Community Development Director, Charles Rowe, said the $9,500 in State Department of Community Affairs money will be available to the city in a matter of weeks.

All of the money will go to the Crossroads drug rehabilitation center in Sanford and half will go to a food voucher program in which low to moderate income families will be able to go to local participating grocery stores to exchange the vouchers for food items.

Melvine Miller-Smith at the Sanford CD office said she was not sure yet which stores would be participating or how much the vouchers would be for. But in the past, stores like Winn Dixie or Publix participated and the vouchers usually were for about $50, she said.

The remaining funds will be put toward enabling recovering drug addicts to visit schools and other organizations to talk to kids about the problems of addiction and the struggle to recover.

"We're pleased with it," Rowe said. The decision of which schools and organizations to participate in the program will be made by Crossroads, Miller-Smith said.

The application form submitted to the Florida DCA for funding states Crossroads will provide residents of the center to make 26 visits to schools and organizations.

"And (the vouchers) will help people who previously couldn't get help before," Miller-Smith said.

Injured bird's rehabilitation not a picnic

By J. BRADLEY DILLING

SANFORD — Whoever said that babies are just bouncing little bundles of joy obviously never tried to take care of a baby Osprey.

When Roger Nixie found the abandoned baby bird of prey floating in the St. Johns River last, the animal seemed friendly at first.

But that was before he tried to feed it.

The wet and exhausted little tyke turned into a tyrant the next morning day when Nixie approached the innocent looking bird with fresh fish.

"My brother caught some Shiners the night before, so I thought I'd try to feed it. I went and tried to drop one down its throat and it tried to bite my hand off."

Nixie was undaunted. He figured that if a welder's glove could protect a person from a white-hot propane flame and molten metal, surely it must be enough to protect a well-meaning surrogate parent from the wrath of a hungry baby bird right?

Wrong! "I got a welder's glove and tried to feed it but it got mean and was kicking and clawing and I just left it alone. It was mad. It got past the glove. And it was only a baby. I can't imagine what the mother must have been like."

When Nixie had found the bird, he also saw a nest on a channel marker in the middle of the river, but he decided against climbing it to return the baby.

"I was not about to climb up there and try to mess with mom," Nixie said. Nixie said that he gave the bird to Joan Harlie of "Harlie's Rehabilitation Center" in Geneva. She is licensed to rehabilitate injured, orphaned and abandoned wildlife, he said.

Tanner calls for X-rated tape removal

DAYTONA BEACH — State Attorney John Tanner threatened with prosecution Tuesday Volusia County video store owners who refused to remove X-rated movies from their shelves.

Tanner, a fundamentalist Christian, has led an anti-pornography campaign in east-central Florida. Grand juries in each of the four counties he serves — Volusia, Putnam, Flagler and St. Johns — have identified a small number of videotapes as being obscene.

Previously, Tanner had called for video store owners to remove those tapes, but on Tuesday when asked if he was calling for owners to remove all X-rated tapes, he said, "Of course I am, the same as I would any other business or group of individuals who may be violating the law. I would suggest that they follow the law, obey the law, and they'll have no trouble with the state attorney."

"He's way overstepping his bounds," said Barry Frellich, owner of an Ormond Beach video store and president of the Volusia County chapter of Friends of the First Amendment.

"The only thing he can tell me is, 'Take the obscene movies off my shelf,' and my next question is, 'Tell me which ones are obscene?' and he can't tell me until he goes to court and gets that determined."

Beware of credit repair clinics, official advises

ORLANDO — State Comptroller Gerald Lewis Tuesday warned Florida consumers to beware of credit repair clinics that promise a better credit rating for a fee, but rarely deliver.

"Our experience with these companies is that they rarely benefit customers," he said in a statement. "They prey upon those with credit problems while at the same time enrich companies that these people turn to."

Lewis said a tightening credit market and the proliferation of such clinics around the state prompted him to go public with the warning.

"Many Floridians are being confronted with credit problems today, and there's no shortage of companies out there that will happily take their money while claiming to help," Lewis said.

"But there's no quick fix, and any company that claims it can repair your credit overnight is perpetrating a fraud."

Lewis said the state has closed 12 such facilities since 1988.

Gorby's troubles

Mikhail Gorbachev must be wondering whether glasnost has gone too far in the wake of the May Day melee in Red Square, where thousands jeered him and a stunned Soviet leadership. Then again, it's altogether possible that the wily Soviet president not only anticipated the extraordinary demonstrations but plans to turn them to his political advantage.

There are two predominant schools of thought about the volatile situation in the Soviet Union.

One holds that Gorbachev is increasingly being pressured by party hard-liners and militarists to rein in his reform program. Accordingly, so the theory goes, he is responding by trying to stem the rising secessionist tide in Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia and other disaffected Soviet republics. He also appears to be backpedaling from arms control under pressure from the Soviet general staff, which still distrusts him. The logical extension of this reasoning is that Gorbachev could be deposed in the near future unless he restores a sense of stability to the Soviet Union.

The second school of thought suggests that Gorbachev viewed the demonstrations as a safety valve enabling dissidents to vent their anger and frustration over the Soviet system's many failures. The theorists further predict that he will use the upheaval as a counterweight against his conservative critics to get his reform program back on track.

Whatever the case, Gorbachev is playing a dangerous game.

If the steadily rising expectations he has unleashed throughout the Soviet Union get completely out of hand, this could lead to a Tianamen Square-style massacre. Such a brutal response could plunge the country into a protracted civil war or hasten the return of Stalinist repression. Yet if Gorbachev forsakes his program to rescue the Soviet system, he would almost certainly invite a national catastrophe.

It's often forgotten that Gorbachev came to power five years ago as a law-and-order man. After nearly a year of trying unsuccessfully to jump start the Soviet economy he switched gears and became a reformer. But most of the dramatic economic changes he has proposed have been thwarted by the Soviet bureaucracy that has a vested interest in the status quo.

Since Gorbachev came to power in 1985, the per capita income of the Soviet people has declined, contrasted with a doubling of Chinese income during Deng Xiaoping's 10-year rule. Gorbachev has repeatedly underestimated the depth of his country's economic problems and shrunk from the tough measures required to alleviate them. Only recently, he backed away from an economic modernization plan that was supposed to deliver goods and services to a people bitterly resigned to receiving neither.

The depth of the U.S.S.R.'s malaise was underscored by a panel of five prominent Soviet economists during their recent visit to Washington, D.C. They said that farm production is far lower than official figures; the system of distributing food and other goods to consumers is in shambles; and that the Soviet economy is much smaller when compared to the United States than previously estimated by the CIA.

Mikhail Sergeyevich Gorbachev is frequently lauded by the Western media as a high-wire artist, a magician and a master politician with an uncanny ability to keep his head when all about him are losing theirs. The Soviet leader will need all these skills to survive because he has become increasingly unpopular at home for failing to deliver on his many promises. And his margin for error is fading fast.

Don't believe the 'acid rain' myth

It's a good thing for the more extreme environmentalists that they have largely managed to change the subject from "acid rain" to such untestable hypotheses as "the greenhouse effect." For research on the former has pretty well exploded its alleged factual basis. Acid rain, it turns out, is not the cause of fishless lakes in the northeastern United States and Canada. Unfortunately, the political response to the environmentalists' earlier shrieks on the subject is only now taking shape as law. As a result, Americans will shortly find themselves ponying up several billion dollars a year for "improvements" in emission standards that won't solve the problem, while overlooking a much less expensive remedy that would. According to Edward Krug, a soil scientist with the Illinois State Water Survey who formerly studied lake acidification for the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station, rain and snow over the Northeast are indeed more acidic than normal, and the reason indisputably is the combustion of fossil fuels by Midwestern industry. But in a fascinating article in the spring 1990 issue of Policy Review, Krug points out that, even so, only one-fiftieth of 1 percent of the lake water in the whole eastern United States is "acid dead" (i.e., has a pH of 5.0 or lower, in which most fish cannot survive), and more than half of that is in Florida, which doesn't receive high rates of acid rain. Moreover, Krug reports a remarkable discovery: Studies of the fossil record in lake sediments reveal that many lakes that are acidic today have been highly acidic for centuries, except for several decades in the late 19th century and early 20th century when they were unnaturally alkaline. It was the record of early scientific tests dating from those exceptional decades that misled many well-intentioned people into assuming that today's acid rain is making matters worse. But what, if not acid rain, is making the lakes acidic? "Fish and many other species,"

Rain and snow over the Northeast are more acidic than normal.

Krug explains, "can survive in rainwater only because acids are naturally buffered by lime-like substances in rocks and mineral soils of lake and river drainage systems.... The acidity of lakes in the Adirondacks and Nova Scotia results not from acid rain but from the absence of this natural buffering." Why, then, did these lakes become unnaturally alkaline in the decades just before and after the turn of the century? According to Krug, in the late 19th century the Adirondacks "became a major center for lumbering and paper pulp — and also for the destructive slash-and-burn methods that until recently were typical of logging.... Forests gone, spongy and water-absorbent mosses and the acidic peaty forest floor were burned off and replaced by alkaline ash. The ironic result, though, was that sport fish could now survive in lakes that had previously been uninhabitable." This happy state of affairs lasted until an earlier generation of conservationists made a state park out of the Adirondacks. "Forest fires are now put out quickly. As a result, the forests, acid peaty soils, and acid-requiring and acid-producing trees and mosses are coming back. And lakes that historically have been highly acidic are nearing their natural pH balances." The story in Nova Scotia, and even in Norway, is broadly the same. What is the solution?

Taxaphobia? Say-it-ain't-so

WASHINGTON—The unenviable Marlin Fitzwater, whose vocation as feeder of the White House press corps requires him to discuss the administration's budgets without cracking a smile, explains, after a fashion, the administration's sudden willingness to talk about (or, to be precise, to be in the room when others have the temerity to talk about) taxes. Fitzwater says there now is "anxiety over a deficit that is fighting every reduction attempt that we can come up with."

That cunning deficit is a scrappy, plucky rascal. It is resisting, with all the considerable guile at its command, all those imaginative, strenuous measures that Fitzwater's employer has managed to "come up with." Fitzwater's language (as Orwell said, insincerity is the enemy of clear language) gives the deficit an anthropomorphic cast: The deficit is an active agent.

But of course it is not. It is a consequence of choices, of policies, particularly the Bush administration's policy of choosing not to "come up with" any, repeat any, serious attempt to cut the deficit either with tax increases or spending cuts. Remember, if all the spending cuts proposed by the administration had been enacted, there still would be a deficit. In fact, the deficit would still be higher than the Gramm — Rudman target. And if the administration had not been confident (because of previous emphatic rejections by Congress of many of those proposals) that many of them would be rejected yet again, it probably would not have proposed them.

Panic is never pretty, but it can be entertaining, as in the Republican reaction to the President's oblique (as filtered through Fitzwater) indication that, such is his devotion to the public weal, he will be brave and resist getting the vapors if Democrats propose raising taxes. This presidential intimation gave Republicans from coast to coast, but particularly in Congress, the vapors.

For example, 19 Republican senators fired off a say-it-ain't-so-Joe letter to the President, vowing to die in the latest ditch in defense of the President's no-new-taxes principle, even if it (the principle) isn't the President's anymore. And who cannot sympathize with these distraught senators. What we are witnessing has all the pathos of a full-fledged identity crisis — actually, 19 crises, simultaneously — on the part of adults, in public.

That is, what does it mean to be a Republican nowadays? Not long ago it meant three things, primarily: resistance to Soviet tyranny, support of cultural conservatism and, especially, defense of fiscal probity. This last was, as much as the first two, a moral matter. It defined deficits, correctly as theft by one generation from the voiceless, voteless rising generations.

Today, a Republican administration is abandoning a 50-year U.S. principle, spurning Lithuania and other captive nations as part of a policy of serving the convenience of the Soviet regime. And a Republican administration is adopting a mucky, mainstream (if the mainstream is defined, perversely, as media and academic opinion) attitudes regarding such social issues as public funding of obscene art and support for the agenda of homosexual groups. And by its budgets, a Republican administration is stealing from the future — devouring the nation's seed corn — at a rate that can only be called rapacious.

So what defines Republicanism? Taxaphobia. Period. Hence the panic.

From the intellectual shipwreck of the good ship GOP, taxaphobia — a refusal, gussied up as a high principle, to pay one's bills — is, believe it or not, the only spar large enough for all Republicans to cling to.

Hence the hilarious damage-control operation as the White House rushes to "clarify" things. Someone who sounds an awful lot like Chief of Staff John Sununu (described in the news story as "a senior White House official" traveling from Costa Rica to Washington with Barbara Bush — an official who is "the main White House link to conservatives") says the following:

When the President said there would be "no preconditions" on negotiations about a deficit-reduction package, the President meant that Democrats could propose tax increases but the White House would veto them. And Fitzwater offers what he called "a perspective" on the phrase "no preconditions." It does not mean taxes are on the table; it means "just the opposite. It means the table is clean." Got it?

Want to bet that the Democrats don't get it? The Democratic Party may not be completely brain dead, but its congressional leaders may be so somnambulant that they do not see the trap toward which they are slouching. Taxes get raised, Bush gets the money. Democrats get the blame.

That cunning deficit is a scrappy, plucky rascal.

Cabinet member faces threats

WASHINGTON — There is no question that the president of the United States needs to be protected by Secret Service agents. Death threats come with the territory. But who would want to kill the secretary of agriculture or interior?

We recently speculated in this column that Cabinet members surround themselves with a muscle-bound entourage because they like the trappings of nouveau royalty.

Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher has since learned that those trappings can come in handy. A woman has been in a Washington, D.C., jail for a month awaiting trial on charges that she threatened Mosbacher's life. Nancy Crawford allegedly wrote Mosbacher a letter saying, "Here is your choice, marry me or die. ... I'll kill you before you hurt me anymore."

Mosbacher refused to answer our questions about the woman. An FBI agent who questioned her said that she spoke about her relationship with Mosbacher, and blames him for some personal problems. "She stated that Secretary Mosbacher was destined to be her mentor and, in a mystical sense, the father of two children she has seen in her dreams and has always hoped for," the FBI said.

Crawford moved to Washington from Brooklyn, N.Y., earlier this year. She is now undergoing a psychiatric evaluation to determine if she is competent to stand trial.

Crawford refused to tell us whether she had actually met Mosbacher. "I'm not a threat to anyone," she said, adding that she had tried for a year to get an appointment with Mosbacher. "I am, in fact, in jail because I wrote a letter to Robert Mosbacher." Then she added, "It's quite possible I should be married to Robert Mosbacher," but she said he was the "just person" she would want to marry. "He's a miserable pig."

It's not likely that Mosbacher would be killed for his stand on Japanese trade issues or Eastern Bloc technology transfer. But a political beef is not the only motive for murder. President Reagan was shot by someone who cared more about Jodie Foster than Reaganomics.

The flamboyant Mosbacher is a more likely target for threats from the lovelorn than the politically disillusioned. The handsome, silver-haired millionaire and his stunning wife, Georgette, were hailed as a needed addition to the flagging Washington party circuit when President Bush appointed Mosbacher to the commerce post. Mosbacher keeps a high profile and gets more media attention than your average stodgy Cabinet secretary.

Many top government officials don't think their jobs are controversial enough to warrant tight security. Our associate Scott Sleek polled the Cabinet and found that a few members have no protection at all.

Even those with security like to keep it at a minimum. Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan learned to press the flesh as a congressman from New Mexico, and he has an aversion to security as a Cabinet secretary. But U.S. park police guard him when he travels. Once in California, he waded into a crowd of angry environmentalists protesting offshore drilling. Security people there advised him to leave, but he stayed to talk and was not harmed.

Agriculture secretary Clayton Yeutter is no stranger to threats, even though the nature of his work would tend to put him in touch with only salt-of-the-earth types. He and former agriculture secretaries have been threatened by eco-terrorists, displaced farmers and even an occasional animal-rights activist vegetarian.

It's not likely that Mosbacher would be killed for his stand on Japanese trade issues.

Elderly

Seniors would be required to take the written, vision and road tests, but would be exempted from the parallel parking examination.

"What we're trying to do is make the highways safer for those 80 and older," Lewis said. "All we're asking is they be examined every other year."

Lewis said that statistics compiled by the state Division of Driver's License support the measure. She said that 37 percent of drivers over age 80 taking their written exam fail on their first try, and 31 percent fail their driving test. Of those taking renewal exams, 12 percent fail their written tests and 54 percent fail their driving tests.

"The statistics and the support from law enforcement tells us it's a very necessary piece of legislation," Lewis said.

Opponents said the bill discriminates against the elderly.

"I'm against the whole bill, but why should there be an exception (for parallel parking)?" asked Rep. Jack Tobin, D-Margate.

"The reason we're re-testing is to see whether they're competent behind the wheel," said Rep. Art Simon in defense of the measure.

Rep. Alberto Gutman, R-Miami, said he objected that the elderly, many of whom are on fixed incomes, should have to pay $30 every four years to maintain their driving privileges.

"I have some serious concerns about taxing some citizens over 80 by making them take the test two times in one cycle, so to speak," Gutman said.

"We are not taxing them," Lewis replied. "We are charging them a fee to test their driving skills to make sure they are driving safely."

Lewis argued that she was not asking them to pay any more than anyone else taking the exam, and that a portion of the fee be deposited into the Transportation Disadvantaged Trust Fund.

As far as charges of discriminating against the elderly, she argued that seniors are given discounts on everything from movie tickets to bus fares.

"I know because I'm a senior citizen," said the 71-year-old lawmaker.

But the majority of committee members said that since elderly drivers would be taking the exam twice as often as everyone else, they should pay half as much. They overwhelmingly approved an amendment charging drivers age 80 and older $7.50 to take the exam.

The bill now goes to the House Appropriations Committee, where Lewis said she might try to raise the examination fee back to $15.

A similar measure calling for re-testing of senior citizens made it through all of the appropriate House committees last year, but did not get taken up on the House floor.

Beach County, 259, said Alan Cochran, chief of the records division with the state office of motor vehicles. Other numbers from Central Florida include 116 suspensions in Volusia County and 94 in Lake County.

The law requires schools to notify the state when students have 10 consecutive unexcused absences or when a student accumulates 20 unexcused absences during the school year.

Students who miss too much school are sent letters stating their licenses are no longer valid.

"I think it's stupid," said Susie Jennings, 16, a sophomore at Land O' Lakes High School who said she was a frequent truant before the law was enacted, but is now on the honor roll.

Students can appeal to their schools for hardship waivers to keep their licenses. Officials said the waivers are granted on an individual basis.

Students who are not granted waivers can regain their licenses by attending school for a period of time agreed to by the school, the parent and the highway safety department. They also can apply to regain their licenses after turning 18.

Nancy Zambito, director of school operations in Pinellas County, which includes St. Petersburg and Clearwater, said the law has not made a big difference in Pinellas, where 222 licenses have been suspended since October.

"It might spur some districts that were lax," she said, adding that many school administrators support Education Commissioner Betty Castor's request for $7 million to pay for the program.

The money would help because the law has generated "mountains of paperwork," Zambito said.

Information from United Press International is contained in this report.

$271 million by making large corporation forward sales tax collections to the state faster. That will free Gov. Bob Martinez and the Cabinet to dip into the state's rainy-day fund to bail the state out of a projected budget deficit in the current fiscal year.

Also in the bill is a $5 surcharge on personal injury protection auto insurance and an increase in the tax on surplus insurance liens from the current 3 percent to 9 percent.

The bill also extends the corporate income tax to general partnerships and imposes a 45 percent tax on cigars, which currently are not taxed.

House Republican Leader Dale Patchett, R-Vero Beach, told reporters the taxes and fees package was being split into separate bills because of the sheer bulk of the paperwork.

"They're afraid it'll be too heavy to get out (to the Senate)," Patchett said.

"The bill will probably not pass the Senate in the same way as the House," said House Finance Chairwoman Anne McKenzie, D-Fort Lauderdale. "We'll appoint a conference committee."

The House was expected to appoint its negotiators Wednesday, so negotiations could open as early as that afternoon.

Schools

tion that enrollments will increase even more next year. In a "Meeting before the public, and not a public meeting," as Board Chairman Ann Neiswender labeled it, the board heard recommendations for temporary solutions to the problems.

Initially, it was agreed that portable classroom buildings would be the most economical and immediate solution to most of the problems.

Wilson Elementary School, 985 Orange Blvd., Sanford, which already has eight portable classroom buildings, will receive three more. Any additional space would be absorbed by using available areas such as the media center, stage, music and art rooms and multi-purpose room. In making the recommendation for Wilson Elementary, Kenneth Bovio, Area Director of Elementary Education said the parents had been "positive and helpful," and had "supported the recommendations as being the best option available, more desirable than double sessions."

Stenstrom Elementary, 1800 Alafaya Woods Blvd., Oviedo, will not only add seven more portable buildings to the 12 they already have, but will conduct Kindergarten classes under double-sessions.

The first early morning session would be for students driven to school, and the second session would be for students who would require busing.

Board Member Pat Telson objected strongly to the double session kindergarten plan at Stenstrom. She said that while the School Board philosophy is to treat all schools equally, she felt that, "this time, Stenstrom is bearing the burden."

The portable buildings at Stenstrom were also discussed at length. As the additional buildings were planned for the playground area, it was announced that the City of Oviedo had agreed to allow the School Board to use property across from the school.

Board Vice Chairman Nancy Warren questioned using the property for a playground which would require elementary school children to cross a busy highway, and suggested the property might be better used for a teachers' parking lot, with placement of the new portables on the present lot, thus keeping the playground intact.

While the suggestion was taken under consideration, the current teachers' parking lot is also a school bus turn-around area which may present problems if the portables are put at that location.

The Board also voted to undertake rezoning of Spring Lake Elementary, 695 Orange Ave., Altamonte Springs, and Forest City Elementary, 1010 Sand Lake Road, Altamonte Springs, which would move approximately 117 Kindergarten through 5th grade students for the 1990-1991 school year.

Parents of children involved will be notified well in advance of any changes. Warren said she finds the prospect of "rezoning for only one to one and a half years, disruptive", but she agreed with several other Board members, that it was the best solution available at this time.

As for the portable buildings, some already in use will be moved from one location to another, others will require refurbishing, and previously approved portables will also have to be set up at various school properties around Seminole County. The project will begin as soon as school is out for this summer, and officials said there would be no problem in getting all of the moves accomplished by the start of school in the fall.

The actual vote last night, was for the complete package which included all the proposals that had been recommended. Board Member Pat Telson voted "no," with all other members voting in favor.

Cabins that appear to be in use were posted with letters stating the owners should vacate within 90 days.

Shelley said demolition of the cabins, begun in March 1989, may continue for another year or so. She said the 12 cabins demolished so far were unused. One site has been completely cleared and is ready for restoration with native vegetation. Debris from 11 cabins has yet to be burned or removed.

The demolition, done by volunteers to date, will be completed by contractors with $120,000 from the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation, Shelley said. Seminole County commissioners agreed two weeks ago to accept all debris at the county landfill from the project without charge.

The fate of another seven cabins remains in the hands of the courts.

For more than 15 years, the state has tried to evict the cabin owners, saying they had no claim to the islands because they were below the highest level the river reaches during a year with a normal rainfall, called the "mean high water level." They say the cabins are an eyesore and don't belong there.

One cabin, a modern two-story "A-frame" led Al Alexander to quip to Shelley during a tour of several of the cabin sites Tuesday. "When you get that you ought to let state people come out on weekends," Alexander is the DER deputy assistant secretary in charge of the central Florida region.

Goble says his cabin was posted Monday. "A lot can happen in 90 days," he says.

"They say we pollute the river," Goble says. "But how much pollution can a dozen or so cabins do compared to the 2,000 canoers who are on this river every weekend? I don't have to tell you where they go to the bathroom when they're out on the river all day."

Goble said most cabin owners try to maintain their property and do not pollute the river. He said the cabin owners once used septic tanks, but now all use portable toilets so waste can be removed.

Goble acknowledges that most cabin owners don't own deeds to the islands, although he says some people own deeds to the center of the river that includes islands. A trust including Seminole Circuit Judge Kenneth M. Leffler, the estate of the deceased father of former county commissioner Bill Kirchhoff and Sanford attorney William Hutchinson own one such deed. Goble said Rollins Collins owns a similar deed.

"We don't have title and we don't have deeds," Goble says. "But we have unrestricted use of this land and we have since year one. I don't know is this is the end of the cabins, but I know there is such thing as due process (of law). The courts will have to decide."

SEMINOLE SCENES

Winners in the power boat races this past weekend on Lake Monroe at Sanford received a kiss from Renee Lassabe, Miss Super Challenge. Collecting his reward here is Chuck Woodruff, first place in 5 litre and 7 litre classes.

A jet skier also took to the water.

Close races were not uncommon during the two-day event.

Power boats shoot up rooster tails as they race around a turn on Lake Monroe.

The downtown Sanford boat ramp at the city marina was used to launch the racing craft.

Spectators by the hundreds and hundreds lined up to watch a variety of activities during the weekend of power boat races.

When on assignment, the pictures shot by Herald photographers vary in angle, pose and content, and not all of them are published immediately. From time to time, the newspaper takes a second look at those news and features scenes from around Seminole County.

Pan Am families pleased with report

By JANET BASS
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Families of the victims of Pan Am Flight 103 were pleased with a report by a presidential commission critical of the Federal Aviation Administration and the airline, but questioned whether the government would take serious action to prevent future terrorist attacks.

"The report was done in earnest with a great deal of energy and thoroughness," said Maddy Shapiro, whose 20-year-old daughter, Amy, was one of several Syracuse University students returning to the United States on the flight from Frankfurt, West Germany, to New York on Dec. 21, 1988.

A suspected terrorist bomb blast destroyed the Boeing 747 over Lockerbie, Scotland, killing all 259 passengers and crew, most of them Americans, and 11 people on the ground.

"The major question is, what gets done next? I have serious concerns, as to just how far the president will go with it," Shapiro said Tuesday after the President's Commission on Aviation Security and Terrorism released its findings.

The commission recommended major changes in aviation security and, among other things, called for military strikes against terrorists to either prevent or punish violence in the skies.

The panel said safety programs for U.S. air travelers are "seriously flawed" and pointed to both the FAA and Pan Am for the failures that allowed a bomb to get aboard the holiday-season flight.

Shapiro's sentiments were echoed by other victims' survivors, who through their grief had the strength to lobby for the creation of the presidential commission and press for action to prevent a similar disaster.

Wendy Giebler, who lost her 29-year-old husband, William, said she believes the report said all the right things but she still does not feel whole.

"I need to see the president take action before it's going to alleviate any of the frustration I am feeling," Giebler said. "Today I'm ashamed to be an American. I want my country to come to my aid and to the aid of any other victim ... and to do whatever needs to be done."

At a meeting earlier with some victims' families, Bush gave his assurance that action will be taken on the recommendations. According to a spokesman, Bush said, "We'll take it and get right to work on the problems."

Chemicals damage human nervous system, says report

United Press International

Wednesday.

WASHINGTON — The government has failed to adequately protect Americans from seemingly harmless substances that could be silently damaging their nervous systems, a congressional report concluded

"The number of substances that pose a significant risk to public health and the extent of that risk are unknown because the potential neurotoxicity of only a small number of chemicals has been evaluated adequately." Office of Technology said.

Bush and lawmakers start budget summit cautiously

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The first budget summit session between President Bush and congressional negotiators began with an agreement that a pact is needed soon to reduce the deficit, but there were signs that just broaching possible solutions would be difficult.

The two sides met for just more than 90 minutes Tuesday at the White House, with House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., telling reporters later that the first session was friendly and open and devoted mostly to "technical matters."

Democrats warned the talks will likely take time and there should be no imposed deadlines.

"You can't force things with a schedule," said Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, who will lead the discussions when they shift to Capitol Hill on Thursday.

Democrats want Bush to present his proposals first — a plan the Republicans find objectionable because of the politically troublesome question of new taxes as a way to raise revenues.

"We need suggestions from the president. ... We get his suggestions for how to handle it, then we have a responsibility to respond and to come up with other suggestions if we don't like his," Gephardt said.

But Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said such a proposal would not be helpful "if we're going to have successful negotiations."

"It'll work itself out," Dole said of the timetable on when each side would make its proposals.

On Tuesday, the tax issue was mentioned only in passing, Foley said and didn't come from the president.

WORLD BRIEFS

Senior communist official captured

MANILA, Philippines — Army troops captured a leading communist official as he left a suburban restaurant, the military said Wednesday.

Edzel Sajor, who had a $31,000 bounty for his capture, was arrested Tuesday night after the army was tipped off by a civilian who saw him at the Marco Polo Restaurant in Mandaluyong town.

The troopers carried an arrest warrant for Sajor on unspecified kidnapping charges. Sajor was armed with a .38-caliber revolver but he gave up peacefully.

Army Chief Maj. Gen. Guillermo Flores said Sajor was the head of the propaganda commission of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines and a member of the organization's ruling central committee.

Flores said previously captured documents showed Sajor had been conducting a study on the reorganization of the party following the recent arrests of its top leaders.

Salvadoran commission in peace talks

CARACAS, Venezuela — A Salvadoran government commission arrived in Venezuela for U.N.-mediated talks with leftist rebels today aimed at ending a decade of civil war in El Salvador.

"The fundamental point that the government will be proposing is an end to armed confrontations and any actions that do not respect the rights of the civilian population," Salvadoran Justice Minister Oscar Santamaría, who heads the government delegation, told reporters Tuesday before leaving El Salvador.

Economic issues top Dominican vote

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — Economic issues were likely to dominate today's elections in the Dominican Republic monitored by former President Carter and other international observers.

President Joaquín Balaguer said he would implement measures to fight inflation "immediately following" the vote, should he win re-election.

Balaguer, 82, of the ruling Social Christian Reformist Party, was seeking his sixth term in office, but public-opinion polls showed his main opponent, Juan Bosch, 80, of the opposition Dominican Liberation Party, in the lead.

Also vying for the country's top post are Jose Francisco Pena Gomez of the Dominican Revolutionary Party and Jacobo Majluta of the Independent Revolutionary Party.

U.S. expresses concern over bases

MANILA, Philippines — U.S. negotiators today expressed concern over security at American military facilities in the Philippines, and a spokesman said "more has to be done" to stop the killings of U.S. servicemen.

The U.S. panel, on the third day of the exploratory talks on the future of the facilities, also disputed Philippine claims that Washington had failed to comply with aid commitments to Manila this year for continued use of the bases.

Van Gogh portrait most expensive

NEW YORK — Vincent Van Gogh's "Portrait of Dr. Gachet" became the world's most expensive artwork when a bidding war between two art market bulls pushed the price to a staggering $82.5 million.

The sale Tuesday of the painting, completed six weeks before the artist committed suicide in 1890, pitted bidders from Japan and Europe in a contest for the piece, officials at Christie's auction house said.

Gallery Kobayashi of Tokyo won.

Senate progresses on AIDS bill

The bill would provide financial assistance to 13 major cities with the highest number of AIDS cases and would award grants to states to help establish alternative care and other programs for sufferers of the disease.

MIT, Nintendo join forces to create educational videos

BOSTON — The makers of Nintendo, the addictive video game that keeps millions of youngsters glued to television screens, are joining the Massachusetts Institute of Technology to figure out a way to help kids learn.

Hiroshi Yamauchi, the president of Nintendo, said Tuesday his company will give MIT $3 million to conduct research into how video games can be used to teach children.

The announcement comes three months after three educators from the MIT Media Laboratory in Cambridge traveled to Kyoto, Japan, to pitch the idea of educational software to Yamauchi.

Seymour Papert, a mathematician and learning specialist from MIT, said the unconventional partnership is appropriate in today's world.

"You have to work from within the culture as it is. And Nintendo is part of the culture," said Papert, who will develop ideas with his Media Lab boss, Nicholas Negroponte, and Marvin Minsky, a pioneer in the field of artificial intelligence.

Papert has developed a way to teach children about physics and geometry by creating a computer language called Logo that utilizes Lego building blocks. The Lego-Logo system, which is used in about one-third of U.S. elementary schools, began with a grant from the Lego Group of Denmark.

MIT is not obligated to develop video games for Nintendo.

Baker in Moscow for pre-summit

United Press International

MOSCOW — U.S. Secretary of State James Baker arrived in Moscow for talks today aimed at determining whether the May 30-June 3 superpower summit would produce any major arms control agreements.

Baker and his Soviet counterpart, Eduard Shevardnadze, were scheduled to meet alone this evening in a session designed to determine instructions for negotiating teams that will be meeting Thursday and Friday.

Also today, Baker planned to meet with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, who is in Moscow this week on a state visit.

U.S. officials traveling aboard Baker's plane said Tuesday that Soviet willingness to compromise — especially on complex rules for limiting air- and sea-launched cruise missiles — will "be the litmus test" of whether the Kremlin is prepared to move forward on 50 percent reductions in nuclear weapons.

In February, when Baker was last in Moscow, Soviet and U.S. negotiators appeared to make a breakthrough in dealing with the issue of the cruise missiles — pilotless jets capable of carrying either nuclear or conventional warheads over hundreds of miles with great accuracy.

Anti-independence crowds attack parliaments in Estonia and Latvia

United Press International

MOSCOW — Anti-independence demonstrators in Estonia and Latvia stormed the Parliament buildings, and officials in the Latvian capital said mainly Russian workers began strikes at dozens of enterprises in protest of the Baltic republic's secession drive.

Estonian Prime Minister Edgar Savisaar interrupted Estonian radio twice Tuesday to appeal to pro-independence Estonians to "go to the scene and protect the government from a coup," said Estonian Foreign Ministry spokesman Arvi Jurviste.

Thousands of Estonians responded and forced the unarmed anti-independence protesters to disperse after about three hours. There apparently were no serious injuries.

The crowd broke a main gate and outside doors of the building and got into some outer hallways, but did not reach the Parliament chambers.

Parliament Speaker Ulo Nugis, reached by telephone inside the Parliament chambers in the ancient Toompea Castle at the height of the siege, said the building was being attacked by about 5,000 people who had attended a demonstration organized by the anti-independence inter movement.

"We are surrounded," said Nugis, who is also first deputy to Estonian President Arnold Ruutel. "This is the beginning of a coup against the legal government."

Officials said shortly after the demonstration in Tallinn started, protesters hoisted a red Soviet flag at the government building — which since a declaration of independence has only flown the blue, black and white Estonian flag. The Soviet banner was quickly removed by militiamen guarding the building. The crowd called for the resignation of Ruutel and other leaders and demanded that the republic's declaration of independence be revoked.

Latvian officials in the capital of Riga said mainly Russian workers went on strike at about 40 or 50 factories Tuesday to protest the republic's moves toward independence. Official Soviet media said at least 90 enterprises were affected.

About 20 people were hurt in shoving matches as the demonstrators were forced back by militiamen and Interior Ministry riot troops, but there were no serious injuries.

The incidents occurred during demonstrations and strikes called by anti-independence forces in two of the three Baltic republics a day after Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev decreed the Latvian and Estonian independence acts illegal.

Gorbachev's U.S. trip adds cities

UPI report

WASHINGTON — President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev plan to demonstrate "a new sense of realism" about superpower relations when the two meet in Washington later this spring, said a White House spokesman.

"I think this summit will demonstrate a new sense of realism about our relationship, one in which both sides can be critical of each other," White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater said Tuesday.

"Both sides can raise troublesome and difficult issues and expect to explore them in depth and to do so without rancor or arguments in any serious way."

Russia republic parliament could tip power

United Press International

MOSCOW — The new legislature of the Russian Republic opened today to elect a president and a standing Parliament in what could be a serious challenge to Mikhail Gorbachev's grip on the Soviet Union's largest republic.

Russia's Congress of People's Deputies, for the first time chosen in largely free elections, convened Wednesday morning in the Kremlin to select the Supreme Soviet, a permanent Parliament, and its chairman who will be effective president of the republic.

The session was seen as a battle between the old-guard state and party apparatus supported by Gorbachev and the Politburo and the Democratic Russia electoral bloc that is pushing for radical changes.

Nominations for the Supreme Soviet chairman's post have not yet been officially made, but the two most prominent candidates are radical Communist Boris Yeltsin of Democratic Russia and current Russian Prime Minister Alexander Vlasov, who is supported by the party and state apparatus.

The election will be a crucial test of whether Gorbachev will be able to contain in Russia the reform processes which have slipped his grasp in the Baltics and other republics.

Yeltsin, a former Moscow party boss whose popularity may exceed that of Gorbachev, promises to reassert Russian sovereignty within the Soviet Union.

Sanford's Ripley wins feature at both New Smyrna and Orlando

Special to the Herald

NEW SMYRNA BEACH — Driving his new Hamke-built, Fountain Auto Mall Oldsmobile, David Russell scored an easy victory in the FASCAR-sanctioned Late Model Feature at New Smyrna Speedway.

Second place finisher Pete Starr, back after three years of inaction, has been finding out that the price of speed has nearly tripled while he was out fishing.

Mike Fitch continued to dominate the Florida Modified division, as he scored his 15th feature win of the year for burly car-owner Billy Walker.

In Sportsman action, the early front runners soon dropped out one-by-one, handing Milo Vidlic his second consecutive victory on a silver platter.

Donnie Narmore, currently having the best season of his career, scored his fourth "A" Bomber feature win in a row and his eighth of the year.

With the entire "B" Bomber field trying to win the race on the first lap, John Ripley listened to the voice of experience. He waited in the wings, then made a late-race move for the lead and the win.

Jerry Symons drove the wheels off his Pinto to beat hard-charging Ted Vulpius at the conclusion of the Mini-Stock final.

The Spectator Drags went to Bobby Padgett. Jerry Barnes and Jeff Southard took The Great American Sack Race cash, while Jim Cobran was declared the winner of the $1,000-to-win Detroit Demolition, after the apparent winner was disqualified for "hiding" and not hitting often enough.

at Orlando SpeedWorld

ORLANDO — Pete Orr passed teammate David Russell near the midway point to win Friday night's FASCAR-sanctioned Late Model feature at Orlando SpeedWorld.

Russell took the lead from his outside front row starting spot and looked like he might win his first SpeedWorld feature since last November. However, after a crowd-pleasing side-by-side battle with Pete Starr and Dave McCabe, Orr broke free and pulled up on Russell's back bumper just as the caution flag flew for a spin by Jack Cook.

On the ensuing double-file restart, Orr out-dragged Russell for the lead, while McCabe followed to take the runner-up spot away from Russell. McCabe was flying low, but still had to settle for second place at the finish, even though he pulled up wheel-to-wheel with the leader on two occasions.

Russell fought his ill-handling car to third place while Cook came from the rear of the pack to take fourth, ahead of Pete Starr.

The Florida Midget Association returned to SpeedWorld, and as usual, put on a great show. Freddie Stutz put his "Hot Pink" TQ out front early, while heat race winner Dude Teate was trying to break free of traffic. Once Teate was in the open, he began to reel Stutz in, turning laps a second off the fastest Late Models.

Teate grabbed the lead on lap 12, but on a restart, he could not get his Honda-powered car up to full song, creating a wild four-car dash to the checker. At that point, Stutz made a spectacular move to take the lead and went on to win.

Wayne Marshall's Sportsman feature win was a real surprise to him. Subbing for son Ricky, he had to start scratch and was just hoping to cruise along and earn points for his son. But a major multi-car crash sent most of the participants to the pits. So Marshall suddenly found himself on the point, and he went on to win.

For car owner Nolan Marks, it was certainly a day of ups and downs. Marks suffered a mild heart attack earlier in the day, but was released from the hospital in the evening. Nolan was not about to go home and he arrived at the track just in time to see his driver, popular Russ Thompson, score his first ever Mini-Stock feature win.

David Indiveri took advantage of a late caution to claim his second Florida Modified win of the year, while the "thin man", Rick Johns romped to his seventh "A" Bomber feature win of the season.

For the second week in a row, the leader of the "B" Bomber feature had his car destroyed on the last lap. This week's victim was Dave Waddell, as John Ripley again took advantage of the situation to take the win, his fifth of the year, over Ted Head and Barbara Pierce.

Randy Grief won the V-8 Enduro, while Dwayne Waddell took the Spectator Oval Drags in a 1974 Camaro.

Basketball Hall of Fame welcomes four

United Press International

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Dave Bing, Earl Monroe, Elvin Hayes and the late Neil Johnston Tuesday were inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame.

"I think it's what we, as young men, and now young women, grow up thinking about," Bing said. "There are a lot of my coaches and a lot of my teammates that share in this enshrinement. I want to thank them all personally."

Bing, 48, now runs a steel business he founded in Detroit. He starred in college at Syracuse before going on to the Detroit Pistons, Washington Bullets and Boston Celtics. The 6-foot-3 guard averaged 20.3 points a game and had 5,397 assists during his 12 years in the NBA.

"Dave was always a problem for me because he was so fast and he could jump so high," Monroe said.

Monroe, "the Pearl," thrilled fans with his spins and high dribbles during a 13-year career with the Baltimore Bullets and New York Knicks. His backcourt play helped the Knicks to a championship in 1973.

"Early on I was called a 'hotdog' by some in the media," he said. "People never understood the way I played the game was just a logical way to play."

Said Bing: "He was the first true Magic. He did so many great things."

Monroe, 47, is now in the music business. "It's times like this, when you look around and see some of the guys you played with and against that you realize how much you miss the game," he said.

Hayes broke in with the San Diego Rockets in 1969, when he led the league in scoring. He later moved to the Bullets, pacing the club to the 1978 NBA crown, and Houston. In all, he spent 16 years in the pros and was a 12-time All-Star.

Hayes, 6-9, played center and set the standard for versatility at his position. Today, a player at Hayes's height would play forward or guard. Hayes says basketball is the better for the change.

"I think Larry Bird and Magic Johnson have revolutionized the game," he said.

Hayes was the 1968 college Player of the Year.

Phoenix Suns, Detroit Pistons advance

United Press International

The Phoenix Suns have scooped the Los Angeles Lakers to signal the dawning of a new power in the NBA.

With Kevin Johnson scoring 16 of his career playoff-high 37 points in the fourth quarter, the Suns sweated out a 106-103 triumph Tuesday night that handed Los Angeles its earliest playoff exit in nine years.

With a five-game loss to the Phoenix Suns in the Western Conference semifinals, the Los Angeles Lakers have suffered their earlier playoff exit since 1981. They will not participate in the NBA Finals for the first time since 1986.

Johnson contributed all 16 of his points in the second half and Mark West grabbed 16 rebounds as Phoenix rallied from a 15-point second quarter deficit while withstanding Magic Johnson's second straight 43-point performance.

By capturing the best-of-seven Western Conference semifinal series in five games, Phoenix advanced to the conference final for the second straight season. The Suns will open on the road against either Portland or San Antonio.

Phoenix, which won twice at the Forum in the series after failing to win there in 21 games since 1984, had lost all six of its playoff series to Los Angeles, including last year's sweep in the West final.

The Lakers posted a league-best 63-19 record in the regular season but went 4-5 in the playoffs.

Pistons 95, Knicks 84

At Auburn Hills, Mich., Mark Aguirre came off the bench to pump in 25 points and ignite Detroit from a 23-9 first-quarter deficit. Reserve guard Vinnie Johnson added eight of his 14 points in the decisive final quarter.

New York center Patrick Ewing made just one of 10 shots in the second half but led his team with 22 points and 14 rebounds. Gerald Wilkins scored 19 and Maurice Cheeks added 13 for the Knicks. Dennis Rodman hauled down 11 rebounds and Bill Laimbeer had 10 for Detroit.

The turning point was when they brought in Vinnie Johnson and Mark Aguirre and they played so well." Knicks forward Charles Oakley said.

"The turning point was when they brought in Vinnie Johnson and Mark Aguirre and they played so well." Knicks forward Charles Oakley said.

Blazers 138, Spurs 132 (OT)

At Portland, Ore., Portland's Terry Porter scored 38 points and Clyde Drexler added 35, career playoff highs for both, to spark the Trail Blazers. The Spurs rallied from a 22-point deficit late in the third quarter and San Antonio's David Wingate sent the game into overtime with a 26-foot 3-pointer with 1.6 seconds remaining. The Spurs were led by Terry Cummings, who had 32 points, and David Robinson, who had 27.

Winfield's case to be settled by arbiter

United Press International

NEW YORK — The dispute between Dave Winfield and the New York Yankees will be heard Wednesday by arbitrator George Nicolau, who will decide whether the outfielder can refuse a trade to the California Angels.

Winfield cited his status as a 10-and-5 player — 10 years in the major leagues and at least five with the same team — as clauses under the basic labor agreement which support his refusal to be traded.

The Yankees counter that Winfield's contract includes every year a list of seven teams to which he would accept being traded, and the Angels were on this year's list.

The Yankees have made it clear that they no longer want Winfield on their roster. After missing all last season due to back problems, Winfield was relegated to platoon status this year. Former Angel Mike Witt, who was traded for Winfield, reported to New York Sunday.

The Yankees still are paying Winfield's salary although his contract is under the control of the Angels. Winfield's refusal to report has prevented him from being officially added to their roster.

With the Winfield case undecided, the Yankees' 25-man roster requires reorganization. The activation of Chuck Cary from the disabled list leaves the team with 13 pitchers, two more than they require, but any trades will be difficult to complete until the Winfield matter is resolved.

Miami named regional host for NCAA's

United Press International

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. — Arizona State and Miami (Fla.) were awarded at-large berths and host roles for regional play in the 48-team NCAA Division I baseball tournament, it was announced Tuesday.

Arizona State will host the West II region while Miami will welcome the Atlantic regional teams May 25-28. The eight regional winners advance to the 44th College World Series in Omaha, Neb. June 1-9.

In addition to Arizona State and Miami, three teams were named regional hosts — automatically qualifying for the championships even before this weekend's conference tournaments, where teams can clinch a bid. Louisiana State will be the site of the South I group.

Mississippi State will host the South II region and Wichita State is the site of the Midwest region tournament.

Other region sites include Stanford, West I; Texas, Central tournament and Waterbury, Conn., host of the Northeast regional on a neutral-site basis. All eight regionals will conduct six-team, double-elimination tournaments.

Eight teams have clinched automatic berths to the tournament by winning conference titles. In addition to Stanford they are: Cal State-Fullerton, Citadel, Lafayette, Pennsylvania, Southwestern Louisiana, Stetson and Texas-Arlington.

A total of 26 automatic qualifiers and 22 at-large teams will comprise the field. The remaining at-large teams, top eight seeds (each assigned to a different region) and first-round pairings will be announced Monday.

Still cookin' after 50 years

By JOAN KING
Herald correspondent

SANFORD — Cook of the Week Jesse Jones has been cooking for over fifty years. The Sanford native first learned to cook southern staples during the Thirties.

He says: "My mama taught me the basics of simple dishes such as beans, rice, peas and grits when I was just 13 years old." Later he learned the art of satisfying a sweet tooth by baking jelly layer cake.

Jones and his wife, the former Martha Smith who is also a Sanford native, have three children.

Their son Jeffrey, stayed in Sanford and learned the family's weekend business, Jones's Smokehouse in Midway.

BEEF STEW

- 2 lbs. stew beef
- Flour for dusting and thickening gravy
- 1 onion
- 2 stalks celery
- White potatoes, 1 per person
- 1 lg. bell pepper
- Oil or fat back to brown meat

FOOD & NUTRITION

Salt and pepper
Dust meat cubes in flour, salt, pepper. Fry until brown. Cover with water and bring to boil.

Cut vegetables into good size pieces. Add all vegetables to meat and simmer for 45 minutes. The flour that the meat was browned in will help thicken the gravy. If it's not thick enough, make a runny paste out of flour and cold water. Slowly stir in the paste mixture until the stew thickens.

BAKED STUFFED CHICKEN

- 1 whole hen
- Boil hen for 1/2 hour so it will be tender
- Allow the hen to cool and stuff with cornbread dressing. Jesse says "Everybody knows how to make cornbread." If you don't know then he suggests you use a mix. Bake the cornbread according to directions. Fry slowly in butter.

1 chopped onion
1 stalk celery, chopped
1 bell pepper, cut into bite-size

pieces
Break up the cornbread and mix vegetables in. Add a little water or milk to hold together. Stuff hen and bake at 300° for 30 to 45 minutes.

Tales of shear terror fill salons

DEAR ABBY: Re the letter from "Sheared" who asked, "Has anyone ever sued a barber for a lousy haircut?"

I have. I took a hairdresser to small claims court. It was a matter of principle. I just wanted to recover the cost of the lousy haircut he gave me.

I presented pictures of myself before and after the haircut. My hairdresser used the defense that he was an artist and "created" hairstyles. The judge told the "artist" that in the future, he should give the clients what they want because there was only one "Creator" and he isn't working in a beauty shop.

WON MY CASE IN L.A.

DEAR ABBY: In answer to the lady who got "sheared": I am a hairdresser — not a "beautician"; "beautician" is old-fashioned. And don't call me a "hairstylist," either — it's too snobbish.

I've been serving my clients for 23 years. Some direct every move I make; which piece of hair should be how long; what size rods to use for a perm; what kind of perm to use; how long to leave the solution on the hair; how to comb it. I follow their instructions only to be told afterward that I didn't do it the way they wanted it.

As for turning the client away from the mirror: I do that only if she's easier to reach. Instead of walking around her and shepping my cart.

ADVICE

...are those who can't keep their heads still. (Ever try cutting a straight line on a moving object?) So much for the joys of being a hairdresser.

ULCERS IN CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: I have some advice for women when it comes to getting their hair cut. No matter how famous the hairdresser, no woman in her right mind should have her hair cut out of town by a barber she has never seen before.

I made this mistake when I went to my sister-in-law's wedding in another city. I can't see a thing without my glasses, and no barber will give you a haircut unless you take your glasses off.

Well, this "famous" barber I went to sure gave me my money's worth. When he got through with me, I looked like my brother in drag!

NEVER AGAIN

Take a culinary trip to Creole country

Take a culinary trip to Mobile, Alabama and the Gulf Coast to enjoy the flavors of Creole cooking. These recipes are classic for this uniquely American cuisine and have been adapted for preparation in the microwave without losing any of the true character of the dish.

RED BEANS AND RICE

- 1 lb. dried kidney beans
- Water
- 4 oz. salt pork, cut into pieces
- 2 bay leaves
- 1/2 onion, chopped
- 1/4 tsp. basil leaves
- 2 tsp. Creole seasoning
- 2 tsp. salt
- 1 lb. fully-cooked smoked sausage, sliced

Combine beans and water to cover 1 inch above beans in 3-qt. casserole. Cover with lid. M/W on 100% power 10-12 minutes or until boiling. Let stand covered 1 hour to soften beans. Drain beans into colander. Add water to make 7 cups. Add to beans along with salt pork, bay leaves, onion and basil. Cover. M/W on (100%) 15-17 minutes or until boiling. Then microwave on 50% power 45-60 minutes or until beans are tender. Mash beans slightly with potato masher. Add seasoning, salt and sausage. Stir. Cover. M/W (100%) 5-6 minutes or until heated through. Serve in bowls over rice.

Combine shrimp and rice for this Creole casserole.

SHRIMP JAMBALAYA

- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 small onion, sliced
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- 3 slices bacon
- 1 can (16 oz.) tomatoes
- 3/4 cup uncooked long-grain rice
- 2 t. instant chicken bouillon
- 1/2 t. Creole or Cajun seasoning
- 1/4 t. basil leaves
- Dash of pepper
- 1 1/2 cups water
- 1/2 cup sliced ripe olives
- 1 lb. shrimp, cooked, and cleaned

Combine garlic, onion, green pepper in 2-qt. casserole. Place bacon over vegetables, cover with paper towel. M/W on 100% power 3-4 minutes or until bacon is crisp and vegetables are tender. Remove bacon, set aside.

MICROWAVE MAGIC

MIDGE MYCOFF

Stir in remaining ingredients except olives and shrimp. Cover with casserole lid. M/W on 100% power 7-8 minutes or until mixture boils, reduce power to 50% and continue to microwave for 18-20 minutes or until rice is tender. Stir in olives and shrimp. Cover. M/W (100%) 4-5 minutes or until shrimp are heated, stirring once. Crumble bacon and sprinkle over casserole.

Dried beans have always been popular for Creole cooking because they are inexpensive and easily stored during the months too cold for a garden. Hardly a week goes by in this region of our country that a family does not eat red beans and rice.

SEAFOOD GUMBO

- 1 med. onion, chopped
- 1/2 C. chopped green pepper
- 1/2 C. chopped celery
- 3 Tbsp. butter or margarine
- 3 C. water
- 4 tsp. instant chicken bouillon
- 1 can (15 oz.) tomato juice
- 1-1/2 Tbsp. Creole seasoning

- 2 bay leaves
- 1 lb. large raw shrimp, peeled and deveined
- 1 pint fresh oysters, optional
- 6 oz. crabmeat pieces
- 2 Tbsp. file powder, optional
- Hot rice

Combine onion, green pepper, celery and butter in a 3-qt. casserole. Cover with lid. M/W on 100% power 5-6 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Stir in water, chicken bouillon, tomato juice, desired amount of seasoning and bay leaves. Cover. M/W (100%) 10 minutes or until mixture is steaming hot. Add shrimp, oysters and crabmeat. M/W on 100% power 10-12 minutes or until shrimp are opaque with a tinge of pink, stirring once. Stir in file powder and let stand 5 minutes. Serve in soup bowls over hot rice.

Do you have a question or suggestion about microwave cooking. Midge Mycoff will use her column to answer. Address letters to: Midge Mycoff, Sanford Herald, 300 N. French Ave. Sanford, 32771.
