Woman Claims Power Loss After CAT Scan; Jury Gives Her $1 Million

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — A woman who blamed a CAT scan for loss of her psychic powers has been awarded $1 million by a jury but a "shocked" hospital attorney said Friday the verdict would be appealed.

"If the verdict is allowed to stand, it's an outrage and an example of why the American tort system has to be changed," said Richard Galli, an attorney for Temple University Hospital, where the CAT scan was performed.

A jury deliberated about 45 minutes before awarding Judith Richardson Haimes, 42, $600,000, plus $418,000 in damages. Haimes, of Clearwater, Fla., lived in New Castle, Del., at the time of the test.

Haimes had contended that as a result of the CAT scan she suffered severe headaches when she tried to concentrate to use her psychic powers. Her attorney, Joel Lieberman, said Haimes had previously earned her living as a psychic and was able to read people's auras and help police solve crimes.

After the jury heard Haimes' case, Court of Common Pleas Judge Leon Katz ruled Haimes had failed to prove her claim that the CAT scan left her with headaches that made it impossible

Katz ordered the jury to disregard Haimes' allegations about her lost psychic powers and consider only her testimony about the negative allergic reaction she suffered from a dye injected during the CAT scan.

Galli contended the jury either did not listen to the judge's instructions, did not understand them or disregarded them in reaching its verdict.

'There is no way in the world a person who walked out of the hospital, did not pass out, did not lose consciousness, whose heart did not stop beating, who did not stop breathing, is entitled to pain and suffering in that amount of money." Lieberman said Haimes had told hospital personnel she was allergic to the dye used in a CAT scan and did not want the test.

"Within moments of the test being begun she had nausea, she was unable to breathe, she felt her eyes rolling back into her head - as a matter of fact she thought she was on her way to dying." Lieberman said.

Lieberman said the test was immediately stopped. Haimes left the hospital and spent the next three weeks in bed suffering from an "enormous headache."

1986 is indeed the Year of Halley, and most people are greeting this celestial wanderer or the first time. Some like Mildred Dalh of Sanford, however, are getting a second chance.

Mrs. Dalh's parents. her grandfather, Henry Nay, a Civil War colonel who established the town of Wheeling, and her grandmother. Eleanor, whom she described as "quite a nature buff." were all there to share the experience with her.

Halley's Comet "made such an impression on grandma." Mrs. Dalh said. "She thought it was sign of the times, an omen that there would be trouble."

And, the fact that the "Mexican uprising at the border" and World War I occurred after the comet's visit, she said, may

Crime Rate Increase Baffles FDLE

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) -Florida Department of Law Enforcement officials are at a loss to explain last year's 11.4 percent jump in the state crime rate, but are using the statistics to back their bid for a thorough review of the criminal justice system.

Floridians Believe Crime Is Increasing

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) One third of the people in Florida believe crime in their neighborhood has increased in the last year, according to a poll released by Florida State University Friday.

Those Floridians still ranked crime as only the second-worst problem facing the state. Community development - which includes rapid growth, roads and transportation - was named the number one problem.

Twenty-four percent of the people polled by the university's Policy Sciences Program's Survey Research Center named community development their number one concern. Crime was ranked tops by 17 percent of those polled.

Last year, 29 percent of those polled named community development their top concern, while 13 percent named crime.

Social problems - including immigration, discrimination, the elderly, health care, and housing - tied with environmental concerns for third place on the problems list. They were named the top problem by 10 percent of those polled. Their ranking were exactly the same in 1985.

Next were the economy and government problems, such as taxes and corruption, both with 9 percent.

Members Of Congress Warned Against Mideast Travel

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The State Department, heeding Libya's threats to launch terrorist attacks, has cautioned members of Congress against traveling in the Middle East, and Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., postponed his trip to Egypt, Israel and Jordan.

'We have not recommended that any planned trips be canceled," State Department spokesman Charles Redman said Friday. "We have, however, expressed our belief that the need for travel at this time should be carefully evaluated."

School Prayer Defeat Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Ten Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish agencies lodged a Good Friday protest against a proposed constitutional amendment to allow statesponsored prayer in public schools, branding the measure 'a terrible mistake.'

Representatives of the religious groups made public a letter they have sent to all members of the Senate urging defeat of the proposal, sponsored by Sen. Orrin Hatch. R-Utah.

"This bill presents a serious threat to the integrity of our religious heritage and displays a callous disregard for the rights of religious minorities," said the letter, released Friday.

The amendment would allow schools to permit periods of time for silent prayer and reflection for groups of students. The measure has been approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee and could be brought to the floor at any time.

The religious groups said that while supporters of the amendment claim it favors religious tradition, "it fails to respect the integrity of religious groups in teaching their

three Turks and three Bulgarians today of charges they plotted to kill Pope John Paul II, but convicted two of the defendants for smuggling into Italy the gun used to shoot

The court said it acquitted all but two of the seven defendants for lack of sufficient evidence.

Turkish gunman Mehmet Ali Agca Agca. 27, and fellow Turk Omar Bagel, 38, were convicted of illegally importing the Browning automatic pistol that Agea used to shoot and seriously wound the pope May 13.

Agea, already convicted of the shooting and serving a sentence of life in prison, was given an additional one-year term and ordered to pay $800 and court costs.

Bagel, who admitted bringing the weapon from Switzerland but said he knew nothing of the plot against the pope, was sentenced to three years on the weapons charge and cleared of the plot charge.

He was ordered released because he had been extradited from Switzerland only on the plot charge.

Absolved along with Baget of the plot charges were Bulgarian diplomats Todor Stoyanov Alvazov, 42, and Zhelio Kolev Vassilev. 43, former Bulkanair station chief Sergei Ivanov Antonov, 38, and Turks Musa Cerdar Celebi, 32, and Oral Celik, 25.

More Shuttle Wreckage Recovered

By William Harwood UPI Science Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL (UPI) -Divers hauled up more amashed wreckage from Challenger's crew cabin Friday but Navy crew. experts say they cannot guarantee recovery of key rocket debris before NASA's accident report is due next month.

A solid week of high winds and rough seas have disrupted salvage work, but search ships pressed on today hoping for predicted improvement in what has been an unrelenting period of bad weather.

The USS Preserver, whose divers earlier recovered 75 percent of Challenger's crew cabin and some remains of the seven astronauts, remained at sea overnight and Friday ran into more problems with poor visibility on the seabed near the cabin rash site, caned contact 6/.

Nonetheless, divers were able to haul up "four fairly good sized pleces" of wreckage.

"Right now my intentions are to remain on station, weather permitting," the ship radioed. 'Recovery is going slow ... and I don't anticipate filling the fantail too fast with what debris we've got available. So I don't anticipate coming in this weekend."

The presidential commission investigating the Challenger disaster has asked NASA to complete its accident review by April 18, but Capt. Charles Bartholomew, the Navy's supervisor of salvage, said he does not know if crucial pieces of Challenger's right-side booster rocket will be recovered by then.

'I have a very simple timetable," he said in an interview Thursday. "We'll be working until we're finished. It's kind of hard to put a schedule on when you're going to find something.

"We're trying very hard to get the booster issue solved by the 18th of April, obviously, but whether we'll succeed or not is difficult to say. I can't guarantee I'll find the right-hand booster by any date."

Engineers would like to recover wreckage from the right

Robert Steck, director of shuttle operations at the Kennedy Space Center, said engineers are optimistic about narrowing down by mid April the list of possible booster joint design changes that will be required before shuttles resume flying.

But he said the first post-Challenger flight probably will not take off until the summer of 1987 and then only if all goes

"This is already March, and I think just zeroing in on the solid rocket boosters we're probably talking next summer (1987) to

"I think that come mid April, no later than the third week in April, I think we'll be able to outline a pretty good plan on what the candidates are for the redesign and the schedule that goes with each one of those," he

"The other thing you could rightfully ask is what about other orbiter systems ... and will there be changes there. At this point, it's too early to say."

The primary goal of the salvage effort is recovery of wreckage from Challenger's right-side booster rocket to help engineers understand why it ruptured Jan. 28, destroying the spaceship.

But salvage crews have yet to be planning for the beginning of locate any remains from the joint near the area where the fatal "burn through" occurred.

The second priority is recovery of crew cabin wreckage. So far divers working from the Preserver have recovered about 75 percent of the smashed cabin and, sources said, remains of most of the seven astronauts.

Bartholomew said the third goal of the salvage effort is recovery of debris from the tracking and data-relay satellite - TDRS - that was carried aloft in Challenger's cargo bay.

The $100 million satellite was to have been the second in a planned fleet of orbiting relay stations to provide nearly continuous communications between shuttles, commercial and scientific satellites, military spacecraft and ground controllers.

County Studies Street Identification Sign Project

By Sarah Fischer Herald Staff Writer

Seminole County is considering spending $83,000 or more to install street identification signs in conjunction with the implementation of its E911 system.

County Traffic Engineer Steve Decker has estimated there are 834 intersections that either do not have signs or have signs that are not visible at night.

During the next two months. the county will perform a detailed field inventory to identify streets requiring signs and develop a contract for their installation, Decker said.

for implementing the 911 system. However, Decker said street identification is a "key factor" in emergency vehicles being able to locate roadways.

"If they can't find the address, 911 won't be effective," he said. "This could hamper response time."

The county is expected to pay for the signs with a 50-cent fee it added onto local phone bills. The charge, which is effective for a maximum of 18 months, is slated to go toward nonrecurring costs associated with implementation and installation of the E911 system.

He said the signing was a Decker said it is vital that the county initially developed plans that the street names be spelled correctly and that the signs be nighttime visible. Some subdivisions located throughout the county have wooden street signs, and the county could look at replacing these with reflective metal signs, he said.

However, the county will first concentrate on installing signs where none currently exist, he said. "It is better to have something there than nothing at all." Decker said.

County commissioners, who heard the plan at their Tuesday work session, instructed staff to complete the identification of street signs needed on roadways not maintained by the

C/CIB Arrests Suspected Cocaine Dealer

Agents of the City/County Investigation Bureau reported the arrest of a 28-year-old Altamonte Springs man who allegedly sold a gram of cocaine to an agent on March 15 at his home.

The man's home was searched by lawmen Thursday and cocaine, marijuana and drug paraphernalia reportedly found. The suspect wasn't at home at the time of the search for which agents had a warrant, an arrest report said.

The suspect surrendered at the Seminole County jail at about 7 p.m. Thursday and has been released on bond. Mathew David Popkin, 28, of #2309, 678 Timberlake Apartments has been charged in the case.

Libyans Slaughter Cow In Symbolic Slaying Of Reagan

TRIPOLI, Libya (UPI) - Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafy warned in a speech marked by blood spattering from the symbolic slaying of President Reagan that "all the world" would attack U.S. diplomats and businessmen because of the recent fighting in the Gulf of Sidra.

Khadafy on Friday used his first public speech since the U.S. Libyan military confrontation to deny that Libya lost any missiles from U.S. air attacks and claimed his forces downed three F-14 fighter planes.

Shortly after his address to several hundred uniformed militia and guards, a cow with "Reagan" written on its side in red paint was brought forth by the soldiers. They then slit the cow's throat, its blood splashing onto their Ortega said at a news conference Friday that the U.S. Senate's approval of $100 million in new aid to Contra rebels was the "crucifixion of Nicaragua." But he refused to confirm U.S. reports that Nicaraguan troops had moved across the Honduran border in the past week to attack Contra bases inside Honduras.

Instead, he said Honduras had "lost sovereignty" over part of its border area where the rebel camps are based. and he contended the use of American soldiers to transport Hondurans marked a new step in the growth of the U.S.-backed war against Nicaragua.

President Reagan authorized $20 million in emergency aid to Honduras on Tuesday and permitted the use of more than a dozen U.S. helicopters to ferry Honduran soldiers to the border area.

playing out in the yard of her home in Osteen, a small town in Volusia County, late one afternoon when Halley passed by. We lived out in the country and the family was on the porch," she said. "We saw it going from south to north. It was a tannish color and the tail was real long."

For Mrs. Brown, the comet was 'something extra.''

"It was just a normal adventure," she said. "Back then, the sky was god's work and that's what we looked at it as. It was something the Lord put through the sky.'

Today, people like David Branchett of Deltona are the new generation of Halley watchers.

Branchett, an evening supervisor at Central Florida Regional Hospital, has a special interest in the comet. An amateur astronomer since 1968, he is not only helping area residents get a bird's eye view of Halley but is also collecting data as a member of International Halleywatch. The world-wide group of professional and amatheir findings in 1989 through a grant from the National Acronautics and Space Administration (NASA), he said.

Branchett and his wife, Brenda, have been tracking Halley since Oct. 9. The couple has made some 70 observations of the comet as it has developed, using equipment at their home.

Most people need only be in the right place with their eyes wide open to catch a glimpse of Halley, Branchett said.

"The people who have been successful in seeing it are those who know where to look." he

The best time to view Halley began Feb. 26 and will end April 13. During that period Branchett said the comet would be visible from midnight to dawn directly to the south.

The comet looks like a star with a prominent, opaque. chalklike smudge that is its tail.

Branchett offered the following tips for viewing Halley:

• Get away from city lights. even street lights can obscure the view. Branchett said there are plenty of areas appropriate for local viewing, for example teur astronomers will publish the stretch of State Road 48 toward Titusville.

• Let your eyes adapt to the darkness. The pupils, he said, need to become accustomed to the dark in order to view faint objects.

• Take a lounge chair for added comfort.

 Dress sensibly. Mosquito repellant is also a good idea as the weather becomes more summer-like.

• The comet is easily visible with the naked eye, however Branchett said 10 x 50 binoculars afford a wider field of vision and a full-length view of the comet's tail.

Branchett invited residents to a series of open viewings he will be hosting April 7-14. He can be contacted at (305) 574-7741 for more information.

Those who opt to join Branchett in a little star gazing may be interested to know that they will be sharing the experience with a group of fellow English astronomers who will be staying with him in April.

The next best time for seeing Halley will be April 14-30 in the early evening. After May, the comet will begin fading rapidly. Branchett said.

However, on May 4. viewers can get an extra treat when a meteor shower associated with Halley's Comet occurs for about three days, he said. Shooting stars will be visible one hour before sunrise in the southeastern sky, he said.

The Branchetts, who also record meteor showers, will certainly be watching.

"It is very unusual." he said of Halley's return. "It is the first comet predicted to return in a certain period of time and it has captured the imagination of the general public and astronomers.

'There has been a great clation, over who would be the first to see it, the first to photograph it, and there probably will be over the last to see it." Branchett

Even those who've seen Halley before said the chance to do so again is one they won't want to miss. Grayce Delp and her friends said they're going to "make every opportunity" to view the comet for the second time around. She urged first-timers to do as she did when they look to the stars, to "look ahead to another 75 years.'

out of steam in November. The next major step in scientists' quest for galactical knowledge will be the Space Infrared Telescope Facility, a space telescope expected to be at least 1,000 times more sensitive than IRAS. NASA plans to launch it around 1993.

SIRTF will be able to gather even more information about planet and star formation as well. as evolution of galaxies, scientists involved in the project say.

The key to both projects has been use of the infrared light. emitted by all objects in space.

scope able to detect even the faintest infrared emission through clouds of dust that would obscure the view from telescopes observing only visible light. SIRTF will have similar. though more powerful, capabili-

IRAS was able to see the detail of galaxies because every gas cloud in a galaxy contains some dust. Once galaxies have collided, the gas is compressed. stars start forming and the light they shed is absorbed by the dust and converted to heat. It is the heat that IRAS picks up.

Scientists involved in the SIRTF project wrote recently in the journal Science that by observing infrared light, it has been possible to discover galaxies completely hidden in dust.

"In fact, the greatest discovery of all has been that the universe is so incredibly complex and interesting that it continually outstrips our imagination," they

Until the 1960s and 70s. according to Francois Schweizer. an astronomer at Carnegle Institution's department of terrestrial magnetism in Washington. quite a few astronomers believed galaxies evolved slowly and quite alone as remnants of the Big Bang billions of years ago.

There were three kinds: elliptical, spiral and irregular - a nice way of describing galaxies with shapes or features no one could figure out. They were often called "peculiar."

IRAS had a supercooled tele- things were going on. Their centers emitted vast amounts of energy. Quite logically. explosions were blamed. Then quasars, distant starlike objects discovered in 1963 that project powerful light and powerful radio waves, were believed responsible. Theoretically located at the center of some of these galaxies, they were also blamed for irregularities of shape.

But this idea did not explain the long, luminous filaments trailing from galaxies and photographed in the 1950s.

Now, it is known that galaxies interact with each other in many ways. Quasars are still believed to be the center of a few galaxies. but are not believed responsible for their form.

In 1970, astronomers Alar and Juri Toomre presented a paper explaining the tails photographed two decades earlier were the result of galaxies meeting and mixing in space.

Although the paper is considcred a landmark. Alar Toomre, a professor of mathematics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, downplays its Schweizer said in an interview.

"I think the mood was changing despite me and my brother at the time," he said. "It's clear there are explosions and active there was an excess of enthusiasm in the 1960s for trying to explain everything odd by explosions and exotic physics.

'We were lucky computers were becoming available. We odd-looking creatures could have some very mundane explanations, like tidal interactions."

What many scientists believe now is that although stars in galaxies are so far apart they do not collide, the galaxies slow each other down and exert friction on each other.

"It is that friction that then brings the galaxies to merge in one heap," Schweitzer said. "As the galaxies tumble together, the gravitational forces are so rapidly changing and so random in some ways that the stars totally lose the memory as to which galaxy they formerly belonged.

"In the resulting merger, they follow random orbits that give the final galaxy a very specific shape and function.

The idea of collisions and mergers was supported by IRAS data.

"The IRAS satellite found totally unexpectedly that there is a large number of barely visible galaxies that emit huge amounts of infrared radiation and when you looked at them closely they are colliding and merging.

Whereas before, scientists were reluctant to accept the theory, "now it's like a bandwagon." he said.

"I'm very grateful. I felt like a jets in the middle of galaxies, but lone wolf. Now everybody is working on mergers. We have lots to learn about what's going on." Schweizer said. "We have abandoned explosions, but what we have found is no less exciting. The universe is just as In many of these, explosive checked and found some of these violent as people had imagined."

Vince Coleman stole 110 bases last year.

Herald Sports Editor

The difference between Tim Raines and Vince Coleman isn't between first and second base. It's between second and third.

At least that's what Tim Raines thinks. He said he expects to make up the distance between him and the St. Louis Cardinals' speedster this year. The distance is considerable -40 bases.

The 26-year-old Raines is entering his sixth season with the Montreal Expos. Last year, he stole 70 bases in 79 attempts. Raines said the percentage (88.6) is great but the attempts are not.

"I have be more aggressive on the base paths," Raines said. "I've got to take more chances and not worry about being thrown out. Last year, I was worried about getting thrown out in crucial situations and killing a rally.'

Anyone who is successful 88.6 percent of the time shouldn't worry about getting thrown out. Raines has stolen 391 bases in 451 attempts in five-plus years. That's a National League record percantage of 86.7. He is the first player in history to steal 70 or more (71, 78, 90, 75, 70) bases five consecutive years.

"I got off to a good start last year but I pulled a hamstring the second week." Raines said. "That slowed me down. I didn't run as much as I should have."

In the long run, though, Raines didn't run near as well as Coleman. St. Louis' rookie left fielder swiped 110 bases in 135 attempts. Coleman, who played football at Florida A&M University, was the hottest thing to hit the National League base paths since a young man named Tim Raines. Coleman was probably the reason St. Louis won the N.L. East.

Raines said the difference was stealing third. It was a lot of that and more.

Coleman stole third 26 times and was caught five. He stole second 82 times in 102 attempts. He swiped home twice without getting caught. Coleman's percentage - 82 wasn't as good as Raines' but when one steals 110 bases no one's too worried about how many times he is caught.

Raines stole third just five times and wasn't caught. He stole second 65 times and was nailed nine times. Raines didn't

Sheffield Spins No-Hit Magic On Greyhounds

By Sam Cook Herald Sports Editor

LONGWOOD - In a week dominated by masterful pitching performances, there was no one more masterful than Seminole's Brian Sheffield Friday night.

The senior righthander pitched the first no-hit, no-run game of the prep season as Seminole blanked the Lyman Greyhounds, 2-0, in the final game of the Greater Greyhound Invitational at Lyman High School.

"Was that a masterful performance or what?" Seminole coach Mike Ferrell asked about the gem. "I've never seen a better pitched game than that. Brian didn't give them anything."

Relying on a mixture of fastballs, curves and knuckleballs. Sheffield faced just two batters over the minimum and struck out 11. He walked Darren Boyesen on four pitches to lead off the game and Marty Martin reached when Alonzo Gatney dropped his short fly ball in the fifth inning.

In between, he retired 13 consecutive and finished off the final eight. Ron Blake snared Bill Henley's foul pop fly for the final out and the Seminoles mobbed their senior ace. Sheffield's closest call came in the sixth when Byron Overstreet tapped a high bounder down the third baseline. Third baseman Gary Derr charged the ball perfectly and gunned the throw to catch Overstreet by a evelash he'd be unbeatable." Sheffield, who hurled a five-hit shutout against Lyman March 11. gave tournament fans an inkling of what was to come Monday when he tossed a onehitter against Lake Highland. He had the Highlanders no-hit until the sixth when Todd Wilson stroked a two-out single.

Friday's victory upped his record to 5-4 and improved his county-leading strikeout total to run.

"(Catcher) Roy Jensen called a great game and Brian made pitch periect. Scminole pitching coach Mike Powers said. "Brian's got that curve down just perfect. He was throwing a straight change that looked like his knuckleball that had them fooled, too.

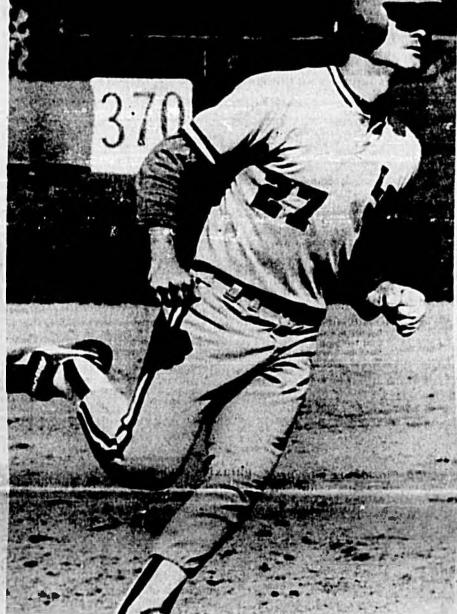

"I got goose bumps. I was on pins and needles when he hit that ball to Derr. That was a great play by Gary."

Sheffield said he realized the no-hitter in the third inning and couldn't help but think about it. "I started off the hitters with curves in the latter innings," he said. "Derr really made a great play. I was worried about that

Jensen said it was easily Sheffield's best effort. "One time his fastball was in the mitt when the guy swung." the sentor catcher said. "We had them all mixed up. Brian did a great job. I just handled his offerings."

Lost in Sheffield's artful effert was a similar strong showing by Lyman reliever Overstreet. The Greyhounds' senior ace relieved an erratic Kenny Oswald in the second and Seminole didn't get its first hit until the fifth inning. in the fifth, Jeff Blake reached on a one-out error by shortstop Chris Brock and stole second. Overstreet struck out Gainey but Brian Grayson smashed a ground-rule double to left center to chase home Blake. Sheffield followed with a looping fly-ball single inside the right field line to score Grayson for the second

Mike Beams opted to play baseball this week instead of taking Lake Brantley's Spring Break cruise. Beams didn't give the pitchers a break Friday but he did cruise around the bases after his eighth home run in the Pats win over Oviedo.

Green Turns Surprise Start Into 2-Hit Gem

By Chris Fister Herald Sports Writer

Going into the Greater Greyhound Invitational Tournament, Lake Brantley wasn't noted for having one of the better pitching staffs in the area. And the staff got even thinner when southpaw Tim Smith went on a cruise for Spring Break.

After four tournament games. coach Mike Smith had used practically every arm he had but. Friday afternoon, he handed the ball to sophomore Randy Green and sent him out for his first start.

Green not only surprised Smith, but himself as he tossed a two-hit shutout at Oviedo's Lions to lift the Patriots to a 5-0 victory at Lyman High.

Brantley closed out the round-robin tournament with a 3.2 record and improved to 8.13 overall. Oviedo, which was also blanked by Lake Highland, 2-0. on Friday, now stands at 10-4 having lost three straight. The Patriota host Seminole Tuesday

The only two hits Green gave up Friday came with two outs in the seventh. The big ries bander struck out seven and walked three.

"At first, I just wanted to get out of the first inning without getting ripped," Green said.
"Then I wanted to see how many innings I could last. I was taking it inning by inning until the fourth and that's when I started to feel really strong."

Prior to the tournament, Green had spent time on both the varsity and junior varsity and saw action as a pitcher in only three other varsity games, all in

"I definitely did not expect that from Randy (Green)." coach Smith said. "We put him on JV last weekend and he pitched well against St. Cloud so we gave him the opportunity to start today. He's got a good curve and a good high school fastball. He went out today in his first start and pitched an excellent ballgame." For Oviedo, the offense was practically non-existent for both of Friday's games. Against Lake Highland, the Lions managed just five hits and they were held to two by Green.

"Our bats went dead," Oviedo coach Howard Mabie said. "We went flat after our first loss (to Lake Howell on Wednesday).

While Brantley's pitching and defense have been question marks, no one doubts the strength of the Patriots' offense. Lake Brantley pounded Oviedo pitching for five run in the first three frames and coasted the rest of the way.

In the top of the first, Mike Davis ripped a two-out triple down the right field line off starter Tony Belflower. Mark Coffey then walked and stole second, and Dan Beaty smacked a double down the left field line to score Davis and Coffey for a 2-0 lcad.

"We're hitting .320 as a team with 25 homers," Smith said. "So we know we'll get our 5 or 6 runs a game. What we're concerned about is defense and pitching and we got both today."

From the third inning until the seventh, Green allowed Oviedo only one baserunner. He then retired the first two hitters in the bottom of the seventh before walking Steve Hofmann. Green then ran the count on 3-2 on Alan Greene before Oviedo's Greene slapped a single up the middle to break up the no-hitter. Scott Bowers followed with a base hit to load the bases but Green struck out the next hitter to end the game.

In Friday's first game. Oviedo's Craig Duncan limited Lake Highland to just one hit but the Lions couldn't get anything going offensively as they dropped a 2-0 decision.

Crum Turns Agnostic To Defensive Gospel

DALLAS (UPI) - Louisville coach Denny Crum, worldly man that he is, has seen this all before

The No. 7 Cardinals play Louisiana State (2:42 CST) in Saturday's opener of the NCAA semifinals at Reunion Arena. No. 1 Duke faces No. 2 Kansas in the second game. The two Final Four winners meet for the championship Monday night.

LSU employa a "freak defense," a baffling blend of zone and man-to-man combinations. Tigers coach Dale Brown, like a missionary bringing enlightenment to the natives, claims this defense has become basketball gospel in Turkey, Iraq and Belgium. Crum is an agnostic in such matters.

"It's not that different from what a lot of teams play," the Louisville coach said Friday. "In reality what he is trying to do is keep you off balance and off stride. But it's difficult to do against our team."

Crum has all but declared the Final Four his second residence, having been there six times. This edition of the Cardinals - winners of 15 straight with a 30-7 record — is exceptionally balanced and fine-tuned from its challenging schedule.

"The schedule has helped," Crum said. "We learned to compete with and beat the best teams in the country. Right now we are playing well and playing with confidence.'

Guards Milt Wagner and Jeff Hall can strike from the outside. At forward, 6-foot-8 Billy Thompson is explosive and 6.7 Herbert Crook is playing his best ball of the season. Pervis Ellison, a 6-9 freshman, clogs the middle and hits the soft shot.

It all amounts to one more obstacle for LSU, but that comes with the territory as far as the Tigers are concerned.

LSU, 26-11, has quick guards in

Anthony Wilson and Derrick Taylor and a frontline of 6-8 John Williams, 6-6 Ricky Blanton and 6-6 Don Re-

Williams is extremely versatile and Redden is a capable shooter. Blanton has been converted from guard to forward to center. He looks as if he should be playing on a fraternity football team.

It is all part of the mystique of the LSU team, which has overcome NCAA investigations, academic disqualification and even chicken pox.

"I feel like a 15-year-old on his first date," Brown said. "We stuck together. We weren't supposed to be

That's hardly the case with Duke.

The Blue Devils are on the verge of winning more games in a season than any major college basketball team.

Should Duke - 36-2 and winners of 20 straight - stop Kansas, it will exceed the victory total of the 1948 Kentucky team that went 36-3.

Said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski: "We're the type of team where people say, 'Hey, we can beat Duke. They don't have this or they don't have that.' But beating Duke has been a problem.

The lifeblood of Duke is its backcourt. All-America Johnny Dawkins and Tommy Amaker are simply the best combo around. They penetrate, shoot and fill the passing lanes. They also key the pressure man-to-man defense.

The frontline is not the most bruising, but it does bang the boards. Jay Bilas, 6-8, is in the middle flanked by 6-8 Mark Alarie and 6-5 David Henderson. Danny Ferry, a 6-10 freshman, is in reserve.

Kansas fell 92-86 to Duke early in the season. The Jayhawks, 35-3, lost precious few others and are riding a 16-game winning streak.

There is power up front in 6-11 Danny Manning, 7-1 Greg Dreiling and 6-5 Ron Kellogg, Containing Alarie, a threat inside or outside, will be a primary concern.

There are two keys for Kansas: Drelling must stay out of foul trouble and Kellogg, who was restricted in practice Friday because of an injured arch, must be healthy. Coach Larry Brown says he "hopes" Kellogg can play.

"If he doesn't play, Archie Marshall will start," Brown said. "It won't hurt our starting team, but it will kill our

Rummells Enters Golf Disney World With 65

PONTE VEDRA (UPI) - Dave Rummells, who lives with his wife in a mobile home on the edge of Dianey World, has entered golf's Magic

A 28-year-old Orlando, Fla., resident who graduated from Qualifying School just four months ago, Rummells tied a course record with six straight birdies Friday in a startling 65 that left him just one shot from the top midway through the $900,000 Tournament Players Championship. Co-leaders Bob Murphy and Larry Mize were at 10-under-par 134 while Rummells stood alone at 135.

Brett Upper, who shot a 65, Dave Edwards, who bogeyed two holes after the turn to finish at 69. and Doug Tewell, who fired his second straight 68, were two strokes off at 136. Jim Thorpe and Mike Hulbert each followed a 69 with a 68 and stood at 137.

"Last year I played in about 48 tournaments and made about $38,000," said Rummells. "I knew if I could just hang in there and get through Qualifying, I could do well on the Tour.

Rummells had a double-bogey six at 15 to go 1-under for the tournament, but a birdle barrage capped by a 20-footer at No. 3 dropped him to 7-under. After taking a breather for two holes, Rummelis tapped in a 2-footer for birdie at No. 6 and rammed in a 45-foot birdle putt at No. 7 to finish at 65.

"As I kept making all those birdies in a row I started thinking to myself if I keep this up I've got a real good chance of winning this tournament." Rummells said. "The first couple of weeks on the Tour I was in awe of these guys, but after that point I knew I would have a good year."

Conditions were idyllic for a second straight day as the gallery squinted from a bright sun that raised temperatures into the 70s. The field was chopped from 144 to 75, with an even-par 144 needed to qualify for the final two rounds - the lowest cut in the TPC's 13-year history.

Murphy, winless on the Tour since 1975, was in the first morning group and had five birdies on the front nine. Birdles at 12 and 16 left him without a bogey through 36 holes on the 6,857-yard Tournament Players Club course, which played easy for the second consecutive round. Both Murphy and Mize set a TPC record on this course for low 36-hole score.

"We teed off first yesterday in the afternoon and first today in the morning and that's the best of both worlds," said Murphy, 43, who has been hampered by hand, neck and back injuries in the past decade.

Connors, Becker To Stage Initial Duel At Chicago

CHICAGO (UPI) - Boris Becker, the youngest player to win Wimbledon, and Jimmy Connors, one of the oldest players on the Tour, meet competitively for the first time Saturday.

Becker, the 18-year-old from West Germnay plays the 33-year-old Connors Saturday in the semifinals of the $315,000 Chicago Grand Prix tournament. Connors won the first of his two Wimbledon titles in 1974 when Becker was a 6-year-old.

"I always admired him as a great fighter and a great player," said Becker, who took Wimbledon last year as a 17-year-old. "He is still a very good player. I think it is going to be a great game. especially since it is the first time for us."

Connors, the No. 2 seed, and Becker, the No. 3 seed, played once in an exhibition. They also pacticed together earlier this year in California for a week. "When he has one hour on the court, he never stops," Becker said. "When I practice with him for one hour, it is like I'm practicing with someone else for three hours."

The other semifinal Saturday features No. 1 seed Ivan Lendi against unseeded Scott Davis. Lendl defeated No. 7 seed Johan Krick 6-4, 6-3 Friday to advance to the semifinals. Davis needed 2 hours, 42 minutes to defeat No. 6 Kevin Curren

5.7. 7.6 (7-4), 6-4. Becker defeated No. 5 seed Paul Annacone 6-4. 6-4, and Connors needed only 68 minutes to whip No. 8 seed Andres Gomez 6-3, 6-1.

The best match of the day was Davis against Curren. Davis, ranked 42nd in the world, won

Steve Trout and Scott Sanderson pitch. St. Louis Cardinals

Ozzie Smith's sore shoulder and the departure of Joaquin Andujar make it tempting to pick Cards for the second division, but outfield speed will win lots of games for them. Manager Herzog must find two starting pitchers and keep Rookie of the Year Vince Coleman well distanced from "The Tarp." Keep an eye on right fielder Andy Van Slyke.

Philadelphia Phillies They drew guffaws with offseason strategy of trading an All-Star catcher (Virgil) and former Cy Young Award winner (John Denny). Right-hander Kevin Gross is a competent starter, and Mike Schmidt will probably hit lots of homers, but that's not enough. Manager John Felske could become an early victim.

Montreal Expes A one-time contender and a longtime pretender. Montreal now is neither. It's back to expansion futility, even though Tim Raines, Andre Dawson, Hubie Brooks and Tim Wallach should provide enough runs to interrupt the booing. Whatever happened to a starting rotation starring Steve Rogers, Charlie Lea and Bill Gullickson?

Pittsburgh Pirates Wanto to talk nicknames? "The Family" must rebuild its image after last summer's drug trafficking trials. "The Lumber Company" hit the fewest home runs in the majors last year. The team nearly left town. Now the franchise is safe.

Woot Division Atlanta Bravos

Last year, people considered the Braves a marginal contender, and that was BEFORE Bob Horner proved his wrist was sound. If manager Tanner's upbeat style can revitalize the keystone of second baseman Glenn Hubbard and shortstop Rafael Ramirez, Braves would own the best middle in majors.

Cincinnati Reds When manager Rose decides on fate of first baseman Rose, right fielder Dave Parker could move to first. That would free an outfield spot for promising rookies Kal Daniels or Paul O'Neill. The starting rotation looks super, especially if Mario Soto has a rebound year. Les Angeles Dedgers

Ask yourself this question: How good is all that pitching if ground balls keep sneaking through the infield? Steve Sax led NL second basemen in errors last year. Shortstop Mariano Duncan must cover lots of fround playing next to 35-year-old third baseman Bill Madlock.

San Francisco Gianto Darned if you can predict exactly who, but someone will parlay manager Roger Craig's split-fingered fastball into some victories. Infield corners of Chris Brown at third and Will Clark at first will generate some excite-

San Diego Padres

Losing manager Dick Williams was a blessing considering the circumstances, but lots of things will trap his successor, Steve Boros. Graig Nettles will get old at third base. Bip Roberts may fail at second, leaving uninspiring incumbents Tim Flannery and Jerry Royster. LaMarr Hoyt's absence will hurt starting rotation.

Neustea Astres This team hasn't done much since owner John McMullen fired general manager Tal Smith. Starting rotation looks weak, especially if Mike Scott's 18-8 record proves to be a fluke. Nolan Ryan is 39 years old. ladies and gentlemen. Manager Lanier, who waved home runners from Cardinals third base coaching Tox, wants Astros to create a much looser locker room atmosphere than his predecessor, Billy Martin. But will he be able to keep fire-breathing owner George Steinbrenner from scorching the necks of the players?

Detroit Tigers

Those World Series rings must possess magical powers; anyone who puts one on seems to lose his power of concentration. How else do you explain a team going from the best defensive team in baseball to one of the worst as Detroit did last season? There's enough talent to recapture the flag provided manager Sparky Anderson can restore the club's

Toronto Blue Jays A fall from grace is always expected from a team that won the previous year. Pitching and power are the team's strong suits and they could win again if their young hitters keep improving. Big question is whether the press will be able to spell new manager Jimy Williams' name correctly by the end of the ecason.

Booton Red Sez

Nothing ever changes in Beantown. The Red Sox are as predictable to the city as cold weather in April. The team hits but can't run. The pitchers look good on paper then crumble like onionakin. Wade Boggs' chicken recipes are more interesting. Don't expect anything different this year.

Milwaukoo Browers

Let's see, the Brewers are managed by Bambi, have a Deer in the outfield and a Moose on the mound. Are we sure Walt Diency's family doesn't own this club? Maybe they should. because this is a club that will appeal to the young. When the season opens the Brewers will have a 21-year-old first baseman, a 24-year-old shortstop and two pitchers in their starting rotation, ages 23 and 21. Patience is manager George Bamberger's strong suit. He'll need it.

Cleveland Indians

The Indians haven't won a pennant since 1954. But first things first. The club hasn't finished above .500 in this decade. Getting out of the cellar is the team's first priority and that won't be easy. Not with a pitching staff whose ERA last year was 4.91. Oh, well, they are the only team in the league with two players who were born in Europe.

West Division Minneseta Twins

it's time for the Twins to grow up. The nucleus of this team has been together for four years now and all that talent has had time to mature. The addition of Bert Blyleven to the staff for a full season gives the club four strong-armed starters who worked in excess of 200 innings last year. There's also plenty of power in the lineup.

Kansas City Royals The defending world champions are banking heavily on their pitching staff to carry them again this year. The rotation of Bret Saberhagen, Charlie Leibrandt, Bud Black, Danny Jackson and Mark Gubicza is hard to beat, but the Royals did nothing over the winter to bolster their anemic offense (.252). The Royals have won the division title the past two years, but as Missouri farmers can tell you, it's hard to reap a bumper crop every year.

Californie Angele The Angels are as old as owner Gene Autry's anddle bags, but manager Gene Mauch is counting on experience to overcome the club's encroaching age. The Angels came very close to winning the AL West title last year and will have the added advantage of having Don Sutton (295 victories) from the outset. But five of the projected regular players are over 35 and trainer Rick Smith may become the club's most valuable asset. Ockland A's

If Jose Canseco is as good as all the scouts say, the A's could have the most exciting lineup in the division. Canseco, Dave Kingman, Dwayne Murphy, Dusty Baker and Carney Lansford all are capable of hitting 20 or more homers. Even with the addition of 21-game winner Joaquin Andujar, though, the A's pitching is rezor thin and the best catcher on the team is probably the new public relations director, Ray Fosse.

Scattle Mariners

Chuck Cottier can look at his young pitching staff and actually hum, "M-M-M." That's for Mike, Mark and Matt. Mike Moore, Mark Langston and Matt Young are three reasons to sing. They may be ready to develop into a consistent threesome and, if they do, the Mariners should begin to make rapid strides. There's enough hitting to give opponents trouble.

Tozas Rangers

The Rangers are hoping Pete incaviglia is John Wayne in a baseball uniform. They are desperately in need of someone to save the day. Incaviglia hit a ball through a fence in spring training. Now if that isn't the stuff of legends, what is? With a pitching staff that lists Charlie Hough as its ace, though, the Rangers had better hope Incaviglia is John Wayne and Clint Eastwood rolled into one. Chicago White Son

One of the first things Ken "Hawk" Harrelson did when he took over as general manager was hire two pitching coaches, one for starters and one for relievers. Now if he only had some good pitchers. At age 41, Tom Seaver is still the ace of the staff, which gives you some idea of the club's mound woes. The Sox have sock, though, with four players capable of hitting more than 20 homers.

Baylor, Easler Trade Targets

United Press International Don Baylor and Mike Easler have switched teams and targets.

The Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees completed a long-rumored trade of designated hitters Friday, sending Easier to New York in exchange for Baylor.

The new surroundings should help both power hitters, with the left-handed hitting Easier taking advantage of the short right-field porch in Yankee Stadium and the righty Baylor taking shots at the Green Monster in left fleid at Fenway Park. "I loved playing for the Red Sox." Easier said, "but I know that trades are part of the game and I'm looking forward to coming to the Yankees. This is my seventh (complete) year and maybe it will be a lucky one for Baylor, 36, was unhappy about Yankees manager Lou Piniella's plans to platoon him with Ken Griffey and has been asking to be traded since last scason.

The former American League Most Valuable Player batted a career low .231 with 23 homers and 91 RBI last year. He is batting .114 this spring in 13 games.

Easier, 35, spent the last two seasons with the Red Sox and last year hit .262 with 16 home runs and 74 RBI. He is hitting .314 in spring training and cracked his third homer of the spring Friday against Dwight

Gooden of the New York Mets. In another move Friday, the Yankees placed knuckleball specialist Phil Niekro, the oldest player in the major leagues last season, on waivers for the purpose of giving him an unconditional relea Nickro, who will turn 47 April 1, was 16-12 with the Yankoes season.

No April Fool: 'Walkers' Are Back At Mayfair

The big news for a lot of folks is that starting on April 1 walking will again be permitted for members or nonmembers alike.

On weekdays, walkers may play the course between 7 and 8 a.m. and on any day including weedends and holidays after 2 p.m. If a pull cart is i used, the wheels must be at least two inches wide.

Also, pull carts will be expected to follow the same rules as the riding carts, that is, the cart paths must be used at all times and the carts are not permitted within 30 feet of the greens. Hopefully everyone will cooperate in obeying these simple rules.

Also, for those interested people, the hours of operation for the patio restaurant (snack bar) are as follows:

Monday: 7 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Tuesday: 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Wednesday-Sunday: 7 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The clubhouse is open as follows: Monday and Tuesday, closed; Wednesday-Friday: 3 p.m. to 8 p.m.: Saturday and Sunday: 11 a.m. to 8

Naturally, as always, the Pro Shop is open from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

Last Thursday and Friday, March 20-21, the Florida Mini-Tour played here at Mayfair. Although a larger field had been anticipated, 27 professionals teed off starting at 7:30 a.m. on both

The low round of both days was a beautiful 63 turned in by the eventual winner, Bob Royak. He had a 72 the second day (total 135) but still came out with first place money of $1100.

Other winners were as follows: Mark Carnevale 136, $600; John Morse 136, $600; Jim Cichra 138, $400; Danny Talbot 139, $240; Brad Kay 139, $240; Rick Schuller 139, $240.

The winners of the second daytournament were: Talbot 67, $200; Rocky Walcher 70, $110; Billy Sitton 72. $40; Regan O'Rourke 72, $40.

Last Saturday, Mayfair hosted an excellent tournament for the University of Central Florida. There was a great turnout of 129 players who had a wonderful time. Dr. Jack Canal, a member of the club, was the local coordinator and did a fine job.

The results of the Tuesday members' dogfight played on March 25 were as follows:

Low net team (27) - Wayne Delawder and Frank Arnoth: Second low net team (28) - Clark Wood and Ed Mioducki: Third low net team (29) -Bill Craig and Richard Barnes.

Finally, the Thursday scrumble on March 27 produced the following winners:

At 6-under was the foursome of Ken Holocek, Bill Craig, Rudy Seiler and Jack Prosser: Tied in second at 5-under was the group of Grover "The Legend" Todd. Bill Griffith, Rich Barnes and Gene Miller: Mayfair pro Mark Lesniak, Wayne DeLawder, Red "Topper" Cleveland and Del Foote.

At 4-under was the quartet of pro George Kraljevich, Joe Bishop, Bill Hutchinson and Paul Forsythe: Also at four under was the group of Gene Green, Al Greene Sr., Randy Smothers and Jeff Keffinger.

At 3-under was the foursome of pro Brian Merena, Carl Tillis, Wes Werner and Ray Badal.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Bergman's Knights Take 27th Consecutive Win, Set Record

Coach Jay Bergman's University of Central Florida Knights marched into Fiorida's baseball record book Friday night when they knocked off Ohio State, 12-5, for their 27th consecutive victory before a record 2,102 fans at Orlando.

The victory snapped the 26-game victory streak established by Miami in 1974. The Knights' next goal is the NCAA Division I record of 34 consecutive wins by Texas. UCF plays Ohio State again Saturday at 2 p.m. and hosts Southern Illinois Edwardsville at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Former Lake Brantley High standout Tommy Novak improved his record to 7.2 for the season by scattering 10 hits over eight innings. The tall righthander struck out

Brian Riggin and Bobby Miller each had three hits to pace the Knights. UCF, which scored in each of the first six innings, put the game out of reach with five runs in the

Mary Sets Cheerleading Tryouts

All ninth, 10th and 11th graders presently enrolled at Lake Mary High School who are interested in being football and basketball cheerleaders should begin Monday, March 31 learning cheers and skills required for the varsity tryouts which are scheduled for Friday, April 4, at 2:45

Boys and girls are eligible if they have maintained a 1.5 grade point average and have passed four subjects (the same as all athletic requirements).

All eighth graders from feeder middle schools will have an opportunity to learn their required cheers and other skills for the April 25 tryout at 4 p.m. The freshman squad clinic will begin April 21 at 4 p.m. in the Lake Mary High gymnasium.

Twelve girls will be chosen for each of the three squade (varsity, junior varsity, freshman) as well as boys who meet the minimum cheerleading score requirements.

Mike Schmit allowed one hit over five innings and Sean Flaherty gave up another single over the final two as the Lake Mary Rams blanked DeLand, 5-0, Friday afternoon in nonconference baseball at Lake Mary High School.

The victory snapped a two-game losing streak for coach Allen Tuttle's No. 5-ranked club and lifted its record to 17-2. Lake Mary returns to Seminole Athletic Conference action with Wednesday at home against Oviedo. "The kids came back ready to play," Tuttle said.

Schmit, who upped his ledger to 6-0, struck out four and walked two. He gave up a single in the second. Flaherty struck out two without a walk.

Lake Mary jumped on loser Tommy Hickox for two runs in the third and three also came around to score. more in the fifth.

Lake Howell. 13-7 overall. pushed across four runs in the first, knocking out loser Rob Helmling in the process. David Martin walked and stole second. One out later. Damon Marlette singled home Martin, who dodged the tag with a nifty slide to the inside of the plate.

Ed Taubensee cracked a single through the ride side which Jim Read checked the chased home Marlette for a 2-0 second on the throw to the plate. Eric Martinez grounded out to of Troy Barfield after the walk. Norton and Taubensee then executed a double steal with "Our team is really starting to Taubensee scoring on the front end. Mark Schnitker followed with a single to score Norton for a 4-0 lead.

> Barfield kept Lake Howell hitless until the seventh when Marlette rocketed a double over the right fielder's head and Taubensee followed with a fly ball which the right fielder dropped allowing Marlette to score.

> Read, meanwhile, mowed down the Highlanders every inning except the second when Helmling doubled over the center fielder's head to lead off. One out later, Todd Wilson singled to right center for Highland's run.

Mariette had two of the four Benjamin's club returns to action Tuesday at home against Lyman.

LEXINGTON, Kv. (UPI) - Texas coach Jody Conradt renovated her defense after losing to Western Kentucky in the regionals of the NCAA women's basketball tournament last year. The change sent her team to the tournament finals this season.

Texas advanced to the finals with a 90-65 victory Friday crowd of 9,894 at Rupp Arena.

Weekend Roll-Off For Stars, Queens

If you have been fortunate enough to win Bowl America Sanford's Star or Queen of the week this season, don't forget the Star and Queen of the month roll-off this weekend.

Contestants are rolling for a nice plaque and a shot at the Star and Queen of the year prizes. Roll-off times are Saturday 3:30 p.m., Sunday 2 p.m. and Monday 10 a.m.

There was another full house at moonlight last Saturday but no one broke the $200 jackpots, which are still on tap this weekend. Ed Kassab did win $50 by drawing the number 8 and getting 8 pins of a full rack.

Curtis Page was our bowling ball winner. Another Columbia White Dot will be given away this weekend. Every moonlite bowler gets a free ticket toward the ball.

Saturday and Sunday are your last chanes at Star Search No Tap Singles Tournament. There are over 160 entries now so we will be paying down at least 16

IN BRIEF

Central Florida Auto Dealers Adopt Advertising Ethics Code

Almost 50 Central Florida auto dealers have adopted a voluntary code of ethics designed to eliminate misleading car-sales advertisements.

Auto dealers were at the top of the Better Business Bureau of Central Florida complaint list because of consumer grievances stemming from misleading advertising. Kelley Lesperance, administrator of the BBB Truth in Advertising program, told members of the Central Florida Dealers Association.

The 18 point code adooted by the CFDA stresses truth in advertising. Dealers who comply with the code of ethics will be able to use a "Truth in Advertising" logo in their advertising.

Under the agreement to govern auto dealer advertising, dealers must substantiate all claims, and clearly present prices, disclaimers, qualifiers, extra charges and warranties, Jim Dever, president of the CFDA said.

Stromberg-Carlson Corporation has announced two digital switching projects with Continental Telephone Company of New York valued at more than $2 million.

One project calls for the installation of two of its Remote Network Switches in two upstate New York communities. All of the switching equipment is designed and manufactured at its Lake Mary plant.

"Opportunity '86" Coming

"Opportunity '86: Jobs and Careers," sponsored by the Job Service Employers Committee and the Private Industry Council of Seminole County, will be held in the Altamonte Mall on April 12, 1936.

Area businesses will be high-lighted as well as the training and services available for job seekers, for those wanting to improve job skills, and for the employed who want to improve or change their careers.

Many area public and private educational institutions will explain their programs to students of all ages and

Promotions and Progressions

Gary Adams, president of NTS Florida Properties, has announced the promotion of Susan Fox to resident manager of Sabal Park Apartments, a family-oriented complex located in Longwood.

Ron Thibodeaux has been promoted to senior vice president and Marc Oliveri has been named vice president for industrial development for the Industrial Development Commission of Mid-Florida.

Jean Streeter began her career with United Telephone System in 1946 and on March 22, 1986, retired. Co-workers, family and friends gathered at the Holoday Inn Marina in Sanford to recognize her achievements and celebrat her retirement with her.

Linda Critchett has been promoted to assistant operations officer of Southern National Bank of North Carolina in Favetteville. She began her career with the bank in Sanford in 1977. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Lipsey, reside in Sanford.

IDC Adds Motion Picture, TV Division

The Industrial Development Commission of Mid-Florida (IDC) has added a new division for the development of motion picture and television production, effective April 1.

The new division, established to aggressively develop the motion picture and television industry in Central Florida, will use all IDC resources to attract motion picture, television and therefore further diversifing the

A native of Bristol Connecticut, Savino attended Indian River Community College and is a member of the American Film Institute, the Fla. Motion Picture/Television Assn., Central Fla. Chapter and the Central Fla. Motion Picture/Television Council.

As the official economic development agency for Orange and Seminole Counties and the city of Orlando since 1977, the IDC has been Florida's leader for the past five years in attracting industrial projects and plans to operate this new division in a like manner.

"With Florida the third leading state in motion picture and television production, the IDC is going to make every effort to inform and educate this exciting. new industry about the Mid-Florida area and hopefully attracts some of that business coming into the state," added

Students Hobnob With Professionals During Women's History Week

By Susan Loden Morald Staff Writer

It isn't unusual for women and children to enjoy breakfast together, but idyilwiide Elementary School teacher Nancec Lowery hosted such a breakfast with a different twist.

On St. Patrick's Day, Mrs. Lowery invited about a dozen women from a variety of professions to eat breakfast at Idyliwilde with about 30 fourth and fifth graders from Idyllwilde, Wilson and All Souls schools.

Although the decorations were in keeping with St. Patrick's Day · green balloons, paper shamrocks and green attire sported by many of the youngsters - the gathering also was in recognition of Women's History Week, and the women were invited to share career information with the youngsters.

Many of the girls were in party dress for the occasion, and some admitted it had been a challenge to make the 7:30 a.m. fete of doughnuts, bagles and cream cheese, fruit. coffee, tea, juice and milk, when they weren't usually due at school until 9 a.m. Mrs. Lowery said she also planned the social

"It started with the idea that you must link the children with different careers," she said. "March has always been my month, since March 8 is International Women's Day, to honor

"I've been talking to the children about women and was going to assign a biography for the fourth and fifth graders to read about one famous woman, and they had started cutting out newspaper clippings about women.

'They discovered that's a hard job. They said, gee, if I had only let them clip stories about men they could have filled their notebooks. One of the boys last summer went to Texas and brought back a lot of newspapers. We discovered in Texas they have more news about women.

"It was obvious there aren't very many women they could find information on in different areas, so I started thinking about here. We have two county commissioners, we have three school board members, we have a mayor.

"I think that's marvelous. I thought, 'That's really great,' and I thought I would like to invite

"We're doing the newspaper for the school and I thought having someone from the newspaper was really important, so we sort of branched out that way.

"Also, they're supposed to be exposed to many things, including good table manners and how to hold conversations with adults.

"We eat in our small classrooms and we eat with the teachers sitting right there, so we behave to a certain extent. Then when they go on to middle school and have to sit at a table. they don't know how to do it. They don't know what to do.

"A child who's been in a self-contained classroom for five years gets into trouble in the lunchroom because he doesn't know the rules you never throw that third milk carton. The first two are never seen, but the third one.. The child who's eaten with a lot of groups knows you stop when you see the second one thrown. These children don't know how to sit at table with other groups and talk quietly. I know there are 30 children sitting here and they haven't made a lot of noise. They're not up running around. I felt it was a good way to develop many different skills all at the same

Lowery effected the pupils a chance to chat with Banker's Mayor Bettye Smith, Seminale County Commissioner Sandra Glenn, School Soard Vice Chairman Jean Bryant, two assistant principale, a nurse, a day care center operator, an environmentalist, a banker, a Ms. magazine staffer, a couple of businesswomen, a certified public accountant and this reporter. The youngsters were seated in groups of four to a table, along with two women, and attempts were made to match the careers of the women with the interests of the children.

This reporter joined accountant Rachel Siu of Sanford at a table with Wilson fourth graders Danny Watson, Chris Felski, Angela Oglesby. and Idvilwilde fifth grader Molly Young.

Molly is a budding mystery writer. Danny wants to be a scientist and specialize in the study of dinosaurs. Angela hopes to become a fashion designer and Chris said it's just too soon to tell, but he's interested in newspaper comics. Angela reads the frontpage, showing some interest in the newspaper business.

When Mrs. Siu asked if anyone wanted to be a CPA, she got the same negative response as did Mrs. Lowery when she offered the group milk. Danny said his mother is also an accountant, but he and Mrs. Siu's son Max, a fifth grader seated at another table, don't want to follow in their mothers' footsteps. Both boys plan to puraue acience.

Mrs. Siu, a native of Tawain who moved to the U.S. in 1970, gave an accountant's perspective on the status of working women.

Compared to her homeland. Mrs. Siu said. "The opportunities are about the same, except if you get the same job there the pay would be almost the same as a man's. The disparity in the pay is not as bad as here. Here, being an accountant. I know there is a definite disparity

"There is a good chance that we are going to catch up, although it's going to take a while. In the past women really hadn't gotten out of the kitchen, so we're really beginning to get into the economy and men are getting used to the idea that in these positions women can also be accepted. Once they get used to that idea. I think equal pay will be coming also."

Mrs. Siu now has her own accounting business, but she told the youngsters that when she first tried to break into the field, she knocked on the doors of major CPA firms, only to be told they didn't have an opening. "I know that wasn't true," she said. "It was because I was a woman and they didn't like a woman accountant on the road. They thought it was inconvienient and they didn't think women were as dependable as men.

think more and stank women are gaing to get in

Mrs. Lowery, who took 17 years to get her teaching degree after having a career in real estate, said many uncertainties lie ahead in the children's futures and the future of her own profession. But, she said, she can't imagine not working with youngsters.

"I feel very much that educators are our hope and I hope that the children I teach will think about going into education. I know they're not going to get rich, but I hope maybe one of these days money will become more important to education. If we're ever going to make anything of what's coming of this world, it's going to be up to the educators to take care of our children.

"I feel partial to teachers, because I feel we need more and more and better and better teachers." Mrs. Lowery said it worries her that many qualified teachers are leaving the profession for more profitable careers.

Although Mrs. Lowery is partial to teaching. she is making a special effort to teach her pupils that a variety of careers are available for girls as well as boys to pin their hopes on.

Saga Of Grammar Misuse Continues

DEAR ABBY: Here's another for your continuing saga of grammar misuse: The misuse of I, me and myself. One does not answer the question, "How are you?" with, "Fine - and yourself?" That's like asking.
"How is yourself?" The answer would have to be, "Myself is fine!"

To elaborate further, making a statement such as "My mother had three children - John. James and myself" is also wrong. Remove John and James, and you've said, "My mother had myself." instead of the correct, "My mother had me." One must be mentioned earlier in the phrase to qualify for the use of a "-self" word later in that phrase. Thank you!

World Hunger Discussed By Xi Theta Epsilon

Osteoporosis and world hunger were the interesting and informative subjects explored by the members of the Xi Theta Epsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi during their recent meeting.

In presenting her program, "A Cry for Life, Food for Hungry People," member Victoria Hughes identified areas of starvation throughout the world, identifying the greatest crisis areas as Sudan and Ethiopia. Mrs. Hughes explained, "The reason world hunger has reached such gigantic proportions is due to political manipulations, natural disasters and the lack of basic educational resources."

She further stated that in response to this devastation, massive aid from world governments and voluntary relief agencies is helping curb the agony of millions. The various agencies have established shelters and food warehouses to provide temporary relief. Additionally, agricultural experts are committed to establishing long-term development projects to aid these countries. However, she added, these efforts are not total solutions to the problem, only hope.

The informational guide, "Osteoporosis, Is it in Your Future?" was distributed to the group by Vice President Laurel Rodgers.

The pamphlet explains that osteoporosis is a condition of gradual bone deterioration that most commonly affects women.

President Ruth Gaines conducted the business meeting, in which plans for service, ways and means and social committee were finalized.

At the conclusion of the business meeting. informal discussion and refreshments were enjoyed by: Lois Smith, Ruth Gaines, Dos Laurel Rodgers, Bonnie Jones, Victoria Hughes, Al Kurtz, Ginny Hagan, Tracey Wight and Kay

Going to the dentist used to be a traumatic ex-perience for most people, but a visit to Sanford Den-tal Centre has a number of benefits, not the least of which is a friendly, relaxed atmosphere in which complete dental care is provided by an experienced professional staff at modest fees.

All efforts are made to please the patients and to save their time without curtailing the service. Sanford Dental Centre offers all phases of general dental care in a locally-owned and -operated dental health center in the Seminole Centre.

All patients receive dental exams, get estimates which are explained, and no work is started until they make sure the patient fully understands it.

They offer work in caps, crowns and bridges, dentures and partials, relines and repairs in which same day service is available, oral surgery, implants, endodontics, restorative, cleaning and diagnostic/hygiene services.

The work is done by experienced dentists in a completely equipped group practice setting.

Mercer Marks 1st Anniversary As City Commissioner; End Of An Era In Banking

By Karen Talley Herald Staff Writer

Within 10 years, there will be just three major banks in Central Florida, predicts Sanford's John Mercer, who left the banking community last month after 24 years.

Why just three? It will be the result of an amalgamation that has already begun and is leading to the end of "personal banking." More and more distance is being placed between financial institution and customer, Mercer said.

As for Sanford, Mercer said, the city, within 10 years, "will be better than ever." This will be the result of "positive development and the capitol it generates," according to Mercer, who just marked his first anniversary as Sanford City Commissioner.

Mercer, 64, sees "tremendous change" for both Sanford and banking during the next decade, when "they'll experience more growth than they did during the last 20 years."

However, regarding banking, customer relations that were a priority in the past will lose out to megabuck multi-mergers, he said.

The former Flagship Bank president and Southeast Bank vicepresident terms the situation an 'unfortunate trend" that began several years ago, as banks began merging and dictating their opertations from heaquarters located miles from branch offices.

"It's the end of personal banking and that's a shame," according to Mercer, who said his own leave from banking was related in part to "the inevitability of bankers losing touch with their customers.

"A good banker feels he's personally responsible for his customer's money." Mercer said. "He'll work with them to secure the best investments and loan rates."

The practice, however, "is being discontinued" as banks continue to merge and "corporate headquarters are dictating branch policy." Mercer

"Branches are no longer autonomous." he said. And while the institutions continue to grow, 'the customer loses out.

"Egos, power and profit," are motivating the trend, which will bottom out in approximately 10 years with three commercial banks "and a whole slew of branches" serving Central Florida, Mercer said. Sanford, he said, will see a like spurt of ambitious growth, although

This is a tremendous community and the citizens make it that way.'

this movement will be spearheaded "by the people" and they'll reap its

"This is a tremendous community and the citizens make it that way," Mercer said. "I'm very optimistic about Sanford's future because the people here, I'm sure, will continue to make the city a great place to

And, while banks certainly stand to benefit from the capital generated by growth, the same holds true for city residents, who can look forward to enjoying a more affluent environment, according to Mercer. 'As more development comes in. the capital expended will profit our financial institutions as well as our citzens," he said. A 22-year disnford resident, Moreoresid he has already witnessed and played a role in "our growth from a sleepy agricultural town to the vital city we are today." Mercer moved to Sanford in 1964 from Haines City, where he was assistant vice-president of that city's was a part of the McNulty group, which sought to expand its territory in the early sixties and Mercer said he was asked by McNulty president Gene Tucker to start a new financial institution in Sanford.

Mercer accepted the offer and opened the United State Bank of Seminole in the spring of 1964, on U.S. Highway 17-92, at the edge of Sanford Plaza. During its first year. Mercer said he would park his car in front of the small building "to make it look like we had customers."

Once inside, however, the service provided to residents kept them coming back regularly and in greater numbers until "the little bank that started with no capital" in 1964, had $24 million in assets when he left as its president in 1979, Mercer said.

At that time, the institution had merged to become a Flagship Bank and Mercer said when he tendered his resignation, the corporation of-fered him six month's extra salary to permanently retire from the local banking community.

He chose not to accept the offer and on June 10, 1980, opened a branch of the State Bank of Forest City (now Southeast Bank), in a trailer on Airport Boulevard. Again. what started "at zero," now boasts $18 million in assets, Mercer said.

The native Kentuckian taught college in his home state before moving to Florida and entering the banking profession in Fort Meade as an installment loan officer in 1962.

Initially, he was a principal for the Fort Mead school system, but was persuaded to pursue banking by a Rotary Club colleague, who was also the president of The First State Bank of Fort Mead.

From there, he, his wife, Juanny, and their three children moved to Haines City and then to Sanford, where he has spent the last 22 years

Mercer said now that he's retired from banking, he's seeking a real estate license and may join a local estate license and may join a local land brokerage firm.

He also said he's enjoying a full time pursuit of civic endeavors which, in addition to the city commission, include a sest on the Cantara Arpert Authority Beard of Directors and semborahisa with Santerd's Chamber of Commission and Rotary Club.

"I'm not worried about finding things to do," he said. "I've actually not my hands pretty full and I'm got my hands pretty full and I'm loving every minute of it."

TV Advertising Not As Expensive As it Seems

I have to admit I don't watch much television. Save for evenings on which there is a two-hour episode of Dallas, I never watch more than an

When I do watch, however, I try to pay close attention to the commercials. Advertisers spend millions to get their messages on the air: I figure the least I can do is listen. The average viewer sees 2,000 commercials a month. I'm under my quota, so the pressure on me to pay attention to the commercials I do see is great.

At least, I felt pressured until reading a Wall Street Journal report on Video Storyboard's latest survey of television viewers.

Video Storyboard is a company that studies our commercial viewing habits. It reports that a third of us cannot, ... It is easy to when asked, remember a single commercial we've seen. Not one. Out of 2,000 per month.

But the rest of us do pay sufficient attention to remember at least something. And Video Storyboard has calculated a kind of efficiency index, based on what companies spend on advertising and on the number of likely consumers of thinking we must be deveting a huge share of our national treesure to the geriel bomberdment of our senses.

make the mistake of their products who remember their ads. The index shows the cost to the advertiser of getting a thousand consumers to remember its ads.

Pepsi, according to this estimate, does it best. Its 1985 cost per 1,000 soft-drink drinkers who remember its commercials was only $9.72. That means it cost Pepsi less penny per person to get people to remember its message

Pepsi's commercials are also, according to Storyboard's survey, the most popular among

If Pepsi is only spending a penny to reach me, I think I'll relax a little more during its commercials. The pressure, as far as I'm concerned, is eff.

Other companies, of course, egend more. It is Burger King a whopping $55 per thouse thousand or any other firm—$500 million had yet.

But that still means it only cost McDonald's eight cents per hamburger eater who removed its ads. It wouldn't take many visits to McDonald's by that person to recoup the company's investment in him.

The point of all this is that advertising is cheep. When we read of the millions spent buying advertising time on network television, it is easy to make the mistake of thinking that we must be devoting a huge share of our national treasure to the serial bombardment of our senses.

Were you shocked when you read that advertisers had spent half a million dollars for a spot during the last Superbowl broadcast? That amounted to less than half a cent per viewer.

A lot is spent on television advertising, but a lot of exposure is delivered by it, just as radio and newspapers and magazines are able to deliver more and more exposure per dollar spent.

It is getting cheaper and cheaper to reach us. and so advertisers reach us more and more. It does not follow that we as a society spend inordinate amounts in the effort.

A hundred years ago advertising represented about two percent of gross national product.

Today, with the billions spent on advertising of all sorts, advertising expenditures represent about two percent of gross national product.

The falling cost star of the 19th century was transportation. In the 20th, it is communication.

We are cheaper to reach, so more people reach us. Even if it takes a whole lot of reaching to get us to remember, our consciousness is a good buy.

Tourists Lost To Terrorism:

Hit In Pocketbook, Greece, Other Countries Fight Back

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Greece, a

land known for its timeless, screne images, is fighting hard to win back American tourists lost to a dark new perception featuring guns, death and hostility.

Several terrorist attacks combined last year to dampen what should have been a giorious season for U.S. tourists in the Mediterranean. This year could be worne.

A survey conducted for Travel Weekly magazine found nearly half of 205 travel agents polled nationwide reported clients had changed destinations or canceled reservations because of terrorist incidents in 1985. Greece was involved in the changes more than 62 percent of the time, while Italy came second at 34 percent.

The Greek National Tourist Organization began its counterattack Feb. 26 with a television campaign in which 37 famous Americans of non-Greek ancestry announce they are "going home - to Greece." the birthplace of Western culture.

The $2.5 million campaign will run apace with a separate effort this spring in which more than 2,000 U.S. travel agents will take "familiarization tours" of Greece.

Italy has not announced what sort of campaign it will run for this summer season — an unusual delay. considering its annual campaign normally begins around March 1.

Recently released Transportation Department figures show clearly how terrorism hit Greece and Italy harder and harder as last summer progressed.

In Greece, the number of people flying from the United States to Athens dropped 7.66 percent during last April through June compared with the same period the previous year, then plummeted 21 percent in the third quarter compared with July through September of 1984.

The drops coincide neatly with the hijacking June 14 of TWA jet flying from Athens and forced to Beirut. The U.S. government issued a travel advisory warning Americans against using Athens airport because of lax security.

The advisory lasted until July 22. The TWA jet had been heading to Rome when it was hijacked, but American tourism remained strong through June. During the third quarter, however, business to Italy dropped 2.1 percent at a time when trips to Europe in general were increasing 4.9 percent.

Trouble came for both Italy and Greece during October, when Palestinians commandeered the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro and killed a wheelchair-bound American. Leon Klinghoffer. Within a few months, most of the major American cruise lines changed their schedules to eliminate port calls in Greece, Egypt and Israel.

Then, on Dec. 27, terrorist attacks at the Rome and Vienna airports killed 20 people. First-quarter 1986 tourism figures that would measure the effect of these attacks are not yet A total of 6 million people flew to

Europe last summer, providing the grist for scores of stories about how

Dangerous Precedent

Just when you think you've heard it all, up pops another unique idea that boggles the mind.

The latest we've heard about is that of a Miami lawyer who's charging the city of Sanford for the time he spent on the telephone answering a reporter's questions regarding the status of a case he was working on for the city.

Not that it makes any difference, but the case involves the city's dispute with the county over ownership of Yankee Lake, the site each municipal entity wants for a wastewater treatment facility.

The Miami lawyer, Thomas Julin, was hired by Sanford as a specialist in the area of Government in the Sunshine laws. The city was claiming the county had violated the Sunshine Law on different occasions while negotiating for the purchase of Yankee Lake.

Julin recently submitted an itemized bill to the city in which he lists some three and a half hours spent on the telephone talking with an Evening Herald reporter and another of the city's lawyers in Sanford. The itemization doesn't tell how much time Julin spent with the reporter out of the three and a half hours. but the combined charge for the phone conversations with the reporter and the Sanford lawyer comes to about $425. The reporter estimated she spent roughly 40 minutes talking to Julin, so that would come

Needless to say, the city was somewhat upset over the charge for the conversations with the reporter, and Sanford's city attorney William Colbert was asked to convey city commissioners' displeasure to Julin, although the city agreed to pay ... reluctantly.

A quick look into the practice indicates not too many lawyers had heard about charging a public agency for time spent talking with reporters, except in those instances when a law firm was hired specifically to represent a public agency during press conferences and the like, or to specifically field press questions on an issue in which that public agency was

Now then, no one knows for certain if various law firms around the state have billed public agencies they represented for time spent talking with the press. That's because some law firms might have billed those public agencies for such an expense item, but might not have delineated it on the bill, having lumped it together with other charges. But that's sheer speculation. Several local lawyers who've been asked about the practice said they didn't think it was proper, since the lawyer talking to the press presumably is doing so to give the reporter - hence, the public when it reads the story - an enlightened view of the topic. Further, some of those lawyers pointed out, allowing the lawyer to give his views regarding the litigation gives the story balance and doesn't present just one side. So ... who does the lawyer serve when he answers a reporter's questions? Seems obvious to us. When you look at the issue closely, it isn't difficult to understand that a lawyer's time is valuable, and if he/she has to be constantly talking with reporters about a case involving a public agency, he may feel he ought to be compensated for that time. But should he if he helps educate the public to his client's views? Should he/she when the interview affords the lawyer equal space in the story for a balanced report? Tough questions not easily answered. But if Julin is setting some sort of precedent, then the bar associaton - which says there is no written policy in the matter since it appears to be a relatively new practice - should take it up and write a policy.

Lawyers who might be inclined to follow Julin's example — indeed, Julin himself in the future - might at the very least alert a public agency which he's about to represent that time spent talking with reporters about the case will be charged to that agency, and give the agency an opportunity to direct the lawyer to refer such reporter inquiries to it, or give him the go-ahead, knowing it'll be charged for that time.

The Senate Budget Just Doesn't Do It

WASHINGTON - There's much to like - but more to dislike - in the 1987 congressional budget resolution that a bipartisan majority of the Senate Budget Committee approved last

True, the bill would cut next year's deficit down to about $144 billion, preventing Gramm-Rudman's across-the-board spending cuts from taking place. And it calls for $14.6 billion in non-defense-spending cuts - about half the domestic savings President Reagan wants.

But it achieves this largely through deep cuts in defense and by imposing nearly $19 billion in tax increases next year — about $75 billion in added taxes over three years.

Actually, these tax increases would be imposed, not to just cut the deficit, but essentially to preserve and protect wasteful, ineffective and unaffordable programs that should have been discarded years ago.

Incredibly, seven Republicans and six Democrats voted for a budget package that, with one exception, fails to call for the elimination of any wasteful programs. The exception is the Work Incentive Program, that helps welfare recipients find jobs. Not that WIN is worth keeping. As with many federal aid programs, very little WIN assistance reaches the people who need it. In 1985, three dollars out of four in WiN's $267-million appropriation paid for agency overhead and the salaries of state bureaucrats who run the

This one program elimination speaks volumes about the lengths many lawmakers will go to in order to protect billions of dollars' worth of program. Less than a fourth was spent on job pork-barrel programs. "What kind of priorities does the committee have when they can terminate a program for welfare mothers instead of Export-Import Bank loans for Boeing?" a top adviser to a committee member bitterly asked. Instead, the panel approved a budget that makes timid 10- to 15-percent cuts around the edges of most agencies the president wants eliminated - no doubt hoping that the programs can return to their salad days once

Reagan leaves office.

Typical of the committee's efforts to protect outdated programs was the acceptance of an amendment offered by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, to add $200 million to the New Deal-era Rural Electrification Administration a program whose need vanished decades ago.

Even the $4.5-billion-a-year revenue-sharing program - which, last year, Congress promised would expire in 1987 — gets a possible six-month reprieve if the Finance Committee can raise taxes to continue funding it.

Why would the committee want to preserve revenue sharing for thousands of upper-income communities like Beverly Hills and Palm Beach? Ask Sens. Donald Riegle Jr., D-Mich., and Robert Kasten Jr., R-Wis., who fought to save it from the ax (although, in the end, Kasten voted against the bill).

Despite stiff opposition to his budget, Reagan at least made some tough but defensible budget-cutting proposals that would drive down the deficit and keep it down.

A Test For Bone Disease

By Gayle Young UPI Science Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) - Doctors say a new test to measure bone mass has been effective in determining who is susceptible to osteoporosis, the disease that weakens bones and sets the stage for fractures and spinal problems.

"It is a low cost, effective test," said Dr. Martin P. Sandler, an endocrinologist at Vanderbilt University Medical Center in Nashville. who has conducted trials of the test for several years. "Someday I fully expect it to be as popular and routine as mammography.'

Women are more prone to osteoporosis than men, especially women past the age of menopause.

The test uses a technique called dual-photon absorpitmetry in which both low doses of X-rays and gamma rays are beamed into a section of the vertebra, said Sandler. An image of the bone is created on a computer, which calculates the grams of bone mass per square centimeter of area, he said.

The calculations are then compared with a chart, already created by doctors, which shows normal bone density for males and females at different ages, he said. Doctors can then determine if the patient has less bone mass than they should have at their age.

"If someone is way below the curve we know they are more likely to encounter fractures or osteoporosis," said Sandler. "We can monitor them over a period of years to see how radical the bone loss is."

Sandler said patients who show a significantly low bone mass for their age could be treated immediately with calcium and hormonal supplements to ward off osteoporosis and slow down the bone

A rectilinear scanner - an older piece of equipment used in nuclear medicine that is available in most hospitals - and a computer are needed to conduct the test, which is already undergoing trials in numerous hospitals across the country as well as Vanderbilt.

Sandler said the test will probably become available for general use within the year and said the trial runs have proved it an effective and safe procedure.

"There have been tests before to measure bone mass but they were expensive and used high doses of radiation," said Sandler, who said these tests were not routinely performed because they involved expensive equipment not widely

Coping With PMS

When PMS (Premenstrual Syndrome) first began getting widespread recognition as a physiological and psychological disruption affecting millions of women, I avoided writing about it.

I was relieved to learn that the symptoms had a physical basis and were not just "in our heads," but I still was reluctant to call added attention to anything that could be possibly misused to proclaim women's biological inferiority. After all, we have spent years trying to live down that "biology is destiny" argument.

So, I rationalized, far be it for me to lend credibility to linking behavior and menstruation. I certainly did not want to sanction PMS as justification for women unable to cope with their children, unable to perform on the job or unable to curb murderous acts.

But my thinking changed when I attended a PMS workshop led by Jan Thornburg, a clinical nurse who co-founded a group practice for professional nurse counselors. Her emphasis was on acceptance and self-help and not on PMS as a reason for special treatment from family, employers or the legal system.

The audience was made up of women seeking help. Most said they fell within the 40 percent of women who, in the days before their period, frequently experience fatigue, anxiety, anger, depression or irritability.

"I slapped my son," said one. Others admitted: "I nag my husband unmercifully": "I fly off the handle at work"; "I cry easily." They talked of guilt after their outbursts and how their shame affected their self-esteem.

Others complained of physical changes, including bloating, clumsiness and cravings for chocolate or

Some said their symptoms began after childbirth or when they started taking birth control pills. One woman had struggled with periodic depression since age 12.

Ms. Thornburg explained that these mental and physical changes occur when there is a temporary but predictable hormonal imbalance between body levels of progesterone and estrogen.

Having recorded her own moods and symptoms, day by day, for the past seven years, she is firmly convinced that a chart is the best starting point for every woman. "When you see feelings falling into a cyclical pattern, you validate yourself. It's concrete evidence that changes will occur at certain times and that you are not going crazy."

DICK WEST The Way Cookie Crumbles

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Originally, cookies of this type were called 'biscuits." a misnomer if ever I heard one. I don't care who bakes them. there is no way a cookie can become a biscuit. Registering the trademark as "Oreo Biscuit" doesn't make it

Technically, maybe. Certain cookles do indeed fit Webster's definition of a biscuit as a "hard or crisp dry baking product."

And if you sop a biscuit around in ribbon cane syrup, it indubitably becomes sweeter. Also somewhat softer. But it's still a biscuit, isn't it? Making it sweeter and softer doesn't turn it into a cookie, does it?

Anyway, in 1921, the National Biscuit Co. stopped calling cookies biscuits, changing the name to Orco Sandwich.

OK. So maybe you're one of those purists who insist a sandwich has an outer coating consisting of two slices of bread. But you would be insulation can be sandwiched between two slabs of concrete. Even people can be sandwiched together If it's crowded enough.

Sure, you can make a jam sandwich by jamming two pieces of bread together, but two slices of cake also can be sandwiched with lam. So if a baker wants to refer to his cookies as sandwiches, that's all right with me. In 1974, the National Biscuit Co. changed the name again to Chocolate Sandwich Cookie. As far as ! know, that was the first time the word "cookie" was used. But that is beside the point. The point is that Oreos will observe their 75th anniversary next year. Which means it is none too soon to start thinking of appropriate ways to celebrate. These things take time, you know. Incidentally, when I first realized such an important milestone was coming up. I asked around to find out how the cookies got a name like that to begin with. Nobody seems to know for certain. At least not company spokesmen.

It would be so easy if we were celebrating a 75th wedding anniversary. We could simply send the happy couple some diamond cufflinks, stickpins or carrings and be done with it. But a 75th cookie anniversary is more complicated.

It may be asking too much to recommend that the National Biscuit Co. put diamonds in its cookies next year. That probably would involve a recipe change. which might involve even more paperwork than a different name.

Pentagon Ready To Stop Free Press

WASHINGTON - The 1983 invasion of Grenada made dramatically clear that the U.S. government can't be relied on to give the American people anything but the rosiest view of its operations. With the press barred from Grenada during the actual hostilities. nothing marred the official picture of a perfectly conducted military action.

Only much later did stories leak out of imperfections in the Grenada strike: casualties from friendly fire. targets missed and other botched missions. In the glow of euphoria surrounding the invasion's overall success, the glitches that surfaced months or years later went largely unnoticed - which is just the way the Pentagon likes it.

Most Americans think of press censorship in peacetime as some-thing perpetrated by authoritarian or totalitarian governments of the left or right, and definitely un-

American. They'd be shocked to learn how certain U.S. officials have been quietly laying plans to silence the press whenever the administration in power decides there's an emergency. Our associate Donald Goldberg has been researching the issue; here's what he's discovered:

The blueprint for press censorship is the National Wartime Information Security Program, known in the Pentagon as WISP. It is patterned after President Franklin Roosevelt's censorship rules in effect from June 1941, till the apring of 1945 — covering most of the last officially declared U.S. war.

The broad sweep envisioned for WISP was described in an internal Pentagon memo prepared for a meeting of government planners on Sept. 21, 1963: "The National WISP provides for the control and examination of communications entering. leaving, transiting or touching the borders of the United States, and voluntary withholding from publication, by the domestic public media industries, of military and other information which should not be released in the interest of the safety and defense of the United States and its allies.

The memo included a perfunctory bow to the First Amendment: WISP was not to be used indiscriminately - for example, "as a guardian of public morals."

In 1963, the enforcement turf for WISP was divvied up in a National Censorship Agreement. The Pen-tagon would handle the censors' duties in all areas "occupied or controlled by the Armed Forces." The Emergency Planning Office, a civilian agency now part of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, would ride herd on the general media, mail and telecommunications.

Two years later a Defence Department directive on censorship was promulgated. It was updated in 1971. According to the 1971 order, there were to be virtually no restrictions on the authority of the WISP director, who would be appointed by the president. The directive assigned the censorship functions among the various armed

The alarming thing about the Pentagon directive is that it allows the defense secretary to set up a censorship program "if the United States is believed about to be attacked." Attacked by whom? The Soviet Union? Libyan hit squads? Killer bees? The directive does not specify. All the defense secretary needs is the president's permission and the press is silenced - at gunpoint if necessary.

There has been no congressional funding for work on the censorship program since 1974, but the Pentagon directive is still in effect. So, too, is Executive Order 11490. which outlines each federal agency's responsibilities in time of "severe emergency" — a term that former Attorney General William French Smith complained could include "routine" domestic law enforcement emergencies."

Ed Meese's Bill Of Wrongs

Attorney General Appointee's Amending Constitution Through Back Door

By Anthony T. Podesta

The Attorney General is the nation's top law enforcement officer. Throughout American history, just about every Attorney General. whatever his political philosophy, understood that his job is to protect the Constitution - not to attack it.

And then, along came Ed Meese. In just one year as Attorney General. Meese has declared war on the Constitution. He has said court rulings upholding the separation of church and state are "bizarre." He said making the states respect the Bill of Rights is "shaky." He's thrown out the idea of "Innocent until proven guilty," replacing it with innocent until arrested.

These views are seary enough. But what's really disturbing is that Meese has the power, as Attorney General, to mold federal courts to his way of thinking - through the candidates his Justice Department recommends to the White House to become federal judges.

Ed Meese also has the opportunity to put his personal stamp on the nation's courts • Five of the Supreme Court justices are over 76. • Before this term ends, this administration will have named over half of the federal bench. Because Judges are appointed for life. Meese's hand-picked judges could be deciding cases - and shaping our country's future - for decades to come. How is Meese selecting federal judges? According to the Wall Street Journal, his Justice Department is asking potential nominees what they think about issues including civil rights, school prayer, and abortion, Senators and Representatives from both parties are asking whether this pre-screening of potential judges violates a basic American tradition: that judges aren't supposed to make up their minds on cases until they have heard the evidence and weighed the arguments.

the arguments.

When you look at some of the potential judges who have gotten the Justice Department's seal of approval. there's even more cause for concern about whether they respect the Constitution and basic American traditions of fair play.

One candidate, Jefferson Sessions III, has been the cause of some recent fireworks in the Senate Judiciary Committee, over his views about blacks. A parade of witnesses testified that Sessions had called civil rights groups "un-American," a white civil

Voting Rights Act, which guards the and seemed more designed to produce rights of blacks to vote, is "intrusive."

In Alabama, where he is a federal prosecutor. Sessions caused a stir last summer over his insensitivity to the letters: "YOU CAN BE IMPRISONED." rights of voters in his handling of a case. Under Sessions' direction, voters was: "If you influence or try to - mostly elderly blacks - were intensively questioned by FBI agents and confronted with their own, supposedly secret, ballots. They were then forced to travel 180 miles to Mobile, by bus, under heavy police guard to testify. The defendants - including a former aide to the Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. — were acquitted. But not surprisingly, many of the witnesses have said they will never vote again after that experience.

Lino Graglia, a law professor from the University of Texas, is possibly the most extreme of any of the Justice Department's choices so far. He says the courts shouldn't be permitted to make Congress obey the Constitution. In 1979, when a federal court ordered Austin to desegregate its schools, he urged state officials and citizens to defy his court. In a recent National Review article, "Was the Constitition a Good idea?" Graglia's answer to his own question was - no. He wrote: "... it is doubtful that the net contribution of the Constitution to our national wellbeing has been positive."

Another Texan, 32-year-old Sidney Fitzwater is Meese's choice for the District Court in Dallas, despite his part in a controversial "ballot security" rights lawyer a "disgrace to his race," campaign in 1982. This program was the Ku Klux Klan "okay," and said the targeted to minority voters in Dallas.

voter intimidation than ballot security. On election eve. Fitzwater voluntarily helped post signs, warning in big, red One of the "crimes" cautioned against influence a voter how to vote." Fitzwater claims to see no conflict between that warning and the First Amendment's free speech guarantee.

Eric Bruggink, a candidate for federal Claims Court, has problems understanding the First Amendment, too. A newcomer on the list, Bruggink's resume includes the Alabama State Textbook Committee, where he made his mark by urging the state to censor literary selections from high school

The works Bruggink objected to include the Diary of Anne Frank: "Shock." an essay by Marian Anderson dealing with racial prejudice: F. Scott Fitzgerald's clasic short story, "Bernice Bobs Her Hair": and Ibsen's "A Doll's

One more candidate rounds out a quick sketch of what to expect from a Meese-picked judiciary. Samuel Currn. a U.S. Attorney in North Carolina, has been called a "fanatic" by one of the most conservative judges in the state.

There are charges that Curran hires staff on the basis of their religion - a practice banned by the Constitution and the overall composition of his staff seems to bear the charges out.

Regional Anesthesia Helpful For Elderly

It has opened new medical possibilities for the elderly. Regional anesthesia - unlike general anesthesia, it targets certain areas of the body - is used 10 to 15 percent more often in surgery today than it was a decade

This has allowed older adults to have knee and hip replacements, carotidartery surgery and other sophisticated operations that were once rarely advised for them because of physical changes brought by age.

in the past, patients with severely lowered reserves were simply told that their bodies couldn't take surgery, says William M. Owens, M.D., professor and chief of the Department of Anesthesia at Washington University School of Medicine and Barnes Hospital in St.

"Today," Dr. Owens says, "we're much more likely to say. 'Here's the risk, but we can do it.' And one of the ways we can do it is by using a regional anesthetic."

Dr. Owens says the elderly face special surgical risks directly related to age changes.

"Pulmonary-function reserves often diminish with age," he says, "while incidence of myocardial infarction. stroke and circulatory problems increases. Other factors contributing to increased surgical risk among older patients include impaired renal (kidney) function, diabetes, recurrent arrhythmias and dementia.

The advantage of using regional anesthesia for an older patient is that he or she remains alert and the central nervous system is not affected.

"Anesthesia is provided only where it is needed," says Dr. Owens, "allowing the rest of the body to function normally and resulting in less danger during a procedure and in a faster recovery period."

Owens cites a recent study in which patients with hip replacements were hospitalized for shorter times when a regional anesthetic was used than when general anesthesia was used. He notes that shorter hospital stays result in lower medical costs — an important benefit to older adults on fixed in-

Older people are also benefiting from a new method of regional analysis (pain relief).

"This new method - much like the procedure used following President Reagan's colo-rectal cancer surgery last year - has further reduced patients' post-surgery recuperation period," says Dr. Owens.

The only pain medication Reagan received was one milligram of morphine, says Owens. In the past, he says, after this kind of surgery, "somebody of his age would probably get four to five milligrams of morphine every three or four hours — and those doses or morphine would have impaired his mental abilities."

Because this method removes pain without numbness, says Owens, " tients can begin therapeutic exercises immediately following surgery, and the postoperative recovery period is shortened."

The use of both regional anesthesia and analgesia for older patients has important ramifications in the United States, where older people are one of the fastest-growing segments in the

Insurance Firms Promise Nothing In Return For Your Rights

Once again the Florida citizenry faces an assault in the legislature from big business, insurance, medicine and other special interests. Abolish joint and several liability - enact tort reforms is the cry. Are insurance companies willing to promise lower premiums in exchange for your individual rights? NO!

No documentation is presented to point out the need for tort reforms only theory, and legislation should be based only upon strong finding of fact. Depriving innocent victims of their rights simply places the burden upon the public PLUS THE BIG BILL, for if those responsible are not held accountable, YOU PAY.

Studies of medical malpractice do instead they point out that about one in ten injured patients sue: that the cost of patient injuries (whether or not they sue) is about $24 billion, or 10 times the cost of malpractice insurance premiums. The New England Journal of Medicine, March 12, 1981, documents a study of latrogenic (doctor-caused) iliness on a general service of a university hospital. Thirty-six percent of the 815 consecutive patients studied had been made sick and two percent died from doctor-caused illness. In nine percent of patients it threatened life or produced considerable disability. Maipractice itself is not a problem?

What they don't tell us is what (if anything) they told the patients made sick or the families of the dead, nor do not point to frivolous law suits: they tell us how much these people were charged for this doctor-caused iliness.

Perhaps if the medical industry would address it's own studies and place on their legislative wish list assistance in placing their house in order premiums could be lowered due to a decrease in malpractice.

Insurance Commissioner Gunter's HB138 calls for insurance reform not tort reform. Unless you are willing to trade your rights for a promise of nothing, let your legislators know, for the powerful lobbles of insurance. medicine, and their allies are hard at work in Tallahassee.

What Newspapers Across The Nation Are Saying

O'Neill Brought Morality, Honor To House

By United Press International The Boston Globe

For those wondering about the fuss over Speaker O'Neill's departure, the answer came in a House vote denying President Reagan $100 million in aid to the rebels seeking to overthrow the Marxist-Leninist government of Nicaragua.

... O'Neill personified leadership when he took the floor to speak against Reagan's plan to support the contras. The issue was singular, he said, because it was one of "conscience,

He told his House colleagues ... that when he came to Congress in 1953. "lists were drawn up of who was loyal and who was not."
"That dark era of fear" was ended by both parties. O'Neili said. The $100 million was "simply down payment" for further bloodshed and stalemate in Central America. O'Neill said. The House agreed, by 12 votes, but President Reagan ... will try again.

O'Neill will resist again. We hope that others can bring that same simple morality, political energy and historical memory to keeping

America on a sound and honorable course.

The Journal-Bulletin, Providence, R.I.

It was, as President Reagan put it. a "dark day for freedom" as the House of Representatives voted 222-210 against niding the course rich fighting for that cherished right in Nicaragus. The administration expects to win in the Scnate and return next month to the House. Even opponents of sid concede that Mr. Reagan probably will just further help for the contras in the cost.

He should resist, however, the lare of two much

The rebels serve no purpose — theirs or ours - if they cannot threaten the regime. ... They need not only the $100 million Mr. Reagan proposes, but also a firm sense that their fight will continue to receive U.S. support so long as the Sandinistas continue to repress their people and threaten their neighbors.

Easter It is now three days after that terrible Dark Friday when God said unto them, "Thus it is writ-ten, and thus it behaved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached among all nations." The weighty stones are being rolled away from the grave doors and the Spirit is becoming triumphant over death. The Old Rugged Cross and Christ's tomb are both being snatched, forever, from their association with death.

ever meant to the world is now wholly sanctified in Easter. Christ's promise that, He would build the Temple again in three days, has been fulfilled.

Easter is the springtime of the soul and Cru-cifixion has more radiant beauty and deep meaning when we see it through the fragrant glory of the snow white lily. Easter symbolizes the Crucifixion, Burial and Resurrection of our True Leader. The event is packed with all the drama of human emotion we can withstand.

Hallelujah, it is Easter. Amen.

Pathologist Details Jesus' Death On Cross

By Larry Doyle CHICAGO (UPI) — Biblical

scriptures say Jesus Christ called out in a loud voice from his cross at the moment he died and an "autopsy" nearly 2,000 years later reports a heart attack may have ended the crucified man's agony.

A Mayo Clinic autopsy pathologist now says the official cause of death may have been heart failure linked to asphyxia and other factors caused by the diaphragm-crushing suffocation of hanging on a cross and hastened by the gashing flog-gings and beatings he suffered before being crucified.

"Death by crucifixion was, in every sense of the word. excruciating," said Dr. William Edwards, of the Rochester, Minn., medical center.

Roman crucifixions were designed to cause maximum pain to victims left to exposure and slow death for up to four days. but Jesus did not live out the afternoon. He probably was in critical condition even before he was nailed to the cross, Edwards

"Jesus' death after only three to six hours on the cross surprised even Pontius Pilate. The fact that Jesus cried out in a loud voice and then bowed his head suggests the possibility of a catastrophic terminal event." Edwards wrote in a detailed medical reconstruction in the

Journal of the American Medical Association. Before Jesus was executed. Roman soldiers flailed him with a short whip made of leather thongs studded with pieces of sheep bone and small iron balls, Edwards said. The flogging would have shredded Jesus' flesh to the bone, leaving him in a pre-shock state from blood loss and near death.

Edwards said his report was based on analyses of the Shroud of Turin, Jesus' alleged burial cloth, as well as both Christian and non-Christian historical documents. A rather graphic picture of what execution was like during the Roman Empire emerges from the evidence, he Researchers emphasized. however, there is nothing to specifically link the boat to Jesus. The boat was found on the shore near the village of Migdal, halfway between Tiberias and the northern shore. James Munson, historical geographer at the American Institute for Holy Land Studies, said it was the general area of Gennesaret. where Mark 6 says Jesus and his disciples landed after he walked on the water.

For archaeologists and students of ancient boats. Wachsmann said, "it is the first fresh-water find in the Sea of Galilee ... it's a quantum leap forward in our knowledge of the Galilee."

It is important for Jews. Wachsmann said, because it may shed light on the "nautical Masada" in A.D. 67.

The boat being excavated was found by accident near a commercial beach. In extracating a tractor stuck in the shore mud. Hellenistic and more recent coins were uncovered.

Brothers Moshe and Yuval Lufan returned to look for coins and found a small, curving dark line in the mud that turned out to be a piece of wood. They dug and found the boat.

The boat's "very tentative" age was determined by a cooking pot dating between the first century B.C. and the first century A.D. found near the vessel. A lamp dating to the first century

B.C. was found inside the boat. Pieces of the hulls and frames of two other boats were found

On Feb. 26, the boat was sailed about 300 yards to Kibbutz Nof Ginnosar.

When my wife informet me that our 2-year-old son would soon be participating in his first Easter Egg hunt, apprehension gripped me. A church function, those involved would range from toddiers to fifthgraders.

"You'd better hide an egg for him in your purse," I suggested, recalling a childhood experience.

I was 11 so it must have been 1963, My family had just moved to the Pine Hills area from another state, it was spring, it was the Easter season, and best of all, the community egg hunt was planned for Saturday.

At that time, the Pine Hills shopping center had a large open area somewhere near the middle, it wasn't paved or pretty, it was just sand. This was the site of the Easter egg hunt.

I arrived early on Saturday. The martiy game unmortand, I had seen standar areas along I-4 where read areas hoped rate wouldn't week away ambankments. However, thry bits or red or given or blue betrayed Pener Rabbit's secrets.

I purveyed my competition. A few looked older than I, many were bigger. Certainly a stratagem was needed. Bullies confidently pointed to ego hardly an arm's length from the rope as a gesture of challenge. Toward the middle I distinguished three different points of color very close together. I would bypass these singularly placed ego near the "line of acrimmage," thus avoiding confrontation, and race for the trio. This was my strategy.

Before the rope actually touched hay; I belted for the eggs, grabbed all three, and enemed phase two of my plan. There would be no phase two. In lot had been claimed, some by more than one child. There were a couple of lights. Empty-handed toddlers cried. Nevert seems between cloud would at less figuratively, darken the Easter atmosphere.

I unecrewed my prizes, slipped two shiny quarters and a fifty-cent piece in my pocket, and tossed away the plastic eggahells. I immediately marched down to Murphy's and purchased the latest Beatles 45. So much for the Easter Spirit.

I hope to attend my son's egg hunt. It'll probably be civil and reverent.

Anyway, you big kide had better min's your manners.

Tour Guide Specializes In Contact With Soviets

DALLAS (UPI) - When Lou Smith takes a group of American tourists to the Soviet Union, he leads them to the center of an unfamiliar city and tells them to

Smith is not trying to scare off customers at his year-old travel agency. On the contrary, getting lost and having a Soviet citizen come to your aid pushes Soviets and American visitors into the one-on-one friendships that are the trademark of his tours.

Global Concepts, the agency Smith runs out of a tiny upstairs room in his assistant's apartment, will take at least 400 people on 20 "friendship adventures" to the Soviet Union this year, increasing to 50 tours in 1987. With any luck, most of the participants will get lost. turn to a Soviet for help and perhaps even be invited into his me and say, 'What's wrong with

And you've hugged them and you've shared food with them, and you've shared feelings with them. You've laughed with them." Smith said.

"You don't come back in two or three weeks an expert, but you will have an experience that no one can refute."

Contrary to Smith's technique. most of the 50,000 to 80,000 Americans who travel to the Soviet Union each year see only what their Soviet guides show them and return to the United States with all their preconceptions confirmed, he said.

The traveling Americans who encounter Smith's groups are puzzled by his unorthodox ways.

We constantly find people in the same hotels we stay in who think they can't walk out the front door of the hotel," Smith said. "They think it is illegal. They think they cannot break away from the group and have an encounter with a person on the street.

"Americans will come up to you? Why are you having such a good time?"

Smith has a good time by focusing on the people of the Soviet Union, not the sights.

Two years ago Smith, 45, was "happily minding my own business pretending that I couldn't do anything about international affairs." But after his first tour to the Soviet Union in 1984, he had trouble concentrating on his work as a self-employed management consultant.

He decided to funnel his business talents and three personal

The Reagan-Gorbachev summit, while failing to reach a major agreement on reducing nuclear weapons, added some substance to the easing of tensions. In their joint statement, the leaders announced a renewed cultural exchange program, a joint program of cancer research, an expansion of Americans were invading the continent and using their overvalued dollars to snap up everything in sight.

This year, travel agents say, tourists are booking flights to Asia and Hawaii and the cruise ships are playing the fjords of Alaska and Scandinavia. Reports about the dollar's declining value against other currencies also is dampening interest in Europe, they said.

"It's going to be a difficult year for all of Europe." said Stacy Rubis. director of Greece's advertising effort in the United States. "According to our colleagues at other tourist boards, a lot of countries are going to be advertising. The dollar is falling - although in Greece it's not plus terrorism (is a factor) and everybody is trying to keep their market share."

Greece made up for the falloff in American visits last year by recording an increase in European visitors. But Greece doesn't want to see that trend continue. said Simos C. Certainly the raid at Flumicino has created some problems for tourism, but we do not have the elements for abandoning ourselves to alarmism," he said. Francis H. Goranin, owner of a travel agency in Chicago and senior vice chairman of the American Society of Travel Agents, said he believes Italy only has to experience a few months without terrorism and the tourists will start coming back. Greece's case is different, he said.

"People are upset about the TWA hijacking but they also are upset about certain utterances by the prime minister." he said. "So in spite of the Greek tourist office's trying to restore confidence in Greece, their effort is being met with some resistance."

Anti-American feelings surged in Greece during the first term of Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou, who once called the United States "the metropolis of imperialism."

Papandreou, a former American citizen, has toned down his criticism since winning reelection last June but still complains that the United States' foreign policy is tilted in favor of Turkey, Greece's traditional cnemy.

Classic Love Triangle With Twists

Lie Down With Liens, Ken Follett (Morrow, 332 pp., $18.95)

This, more than most, is a book that lives up to its title. The opening third makes you want to lie down (and go to sleep). But from there on, this international thriller set in contemporary Afghanistan comes on with the speed and power of a lion. Perhaps that's understandable. Ken Follett took a break from fiction to write the non-fiction "On Wings of Eagles," so it may have just taken him the first hundred pages to get back into the form he does as well as any other author.

The result, despite the rough start, is a highly entertaining, very readable book. It is a classic love triangle with a variety of twists.

A CIA agent, a spirited young British woman and a French physician first cross paths in France. Ellis, the American, falls in love with Jane while on an undercover assignment breaking up a ring of terrorists.

But his identity is revealed and he is forced to flee, leaving Jane to marry Jean-Pierre.

The couple and their baby wind up in remote Afghanistan, tending to the medical needs of the rebels in the Valley of Five Lions a year later. Ellis, too, arrives in the wild, mountainous outback with an assignment to unite the guerrillas in their efforts against the Russians and with a hidden motive to find Jane.
