The Cost Of Insanity

Although Life magazine discounts the assertions of certain scientists that if the present rate is maintained throughout the next one hundred years everybody in the world will be insane, it does admit that the total number of persons suffering with every type of insanity increases annually, and that one person out of every twenty sooner or later suffers from some sort of mental disorder.

Furthermore, Life points out, there are about 500,000 persons at present confined in asylums throughout the country, and about 500,000 mental defectives at large. Of those confined three out of five will recover, but while 85,000 are released each year as cured, more than 109,000 are admitted as new patients. Thus the figure constantly increases and the need for additional accommodations grows.

Emphasizing the need for proper hospitalization for persons suffering with mental diseases, is not alone the fact that it is distressing to think of more than 500,000 crazy people running around loose in the country where they are at liberty to vote, practice their professions, and in many instances commit all sorts of crime, but also the assertion that insanity is a disease which can in most cases be cured if given proper care and attention.

That Florida is one state which does not realize the importance of segregating and treating mental cases is shown by a recent statement of Dr. J. H. Therrell, head of the state hospital at Tallahassee, who reports that there are now 4,250 patients housed in the institution designed to accommodate no more than 3,000 persons, and that there are at least 300 additional insane men and women, in desperate need of treatment and proper care, who because of lack of room, are being held in county jails.

Because there are at least 1,250 more patients in the state hospital than can be properly accommodated, none of them receive the treatment or attention which they need. Hence the chance for recovery among all of them is reduced. Furthermore because at least 300 are confined in county jails, and no telling how many are permitted to run at large—in neither case receiving any treatment at all for their disease—their chance of recovery is reduced almost to the vanishing point and they are, virtually doomed automatically to insanity for the remainder of their lives.

That this is a "penny wise and pound foolish" policy on the part of the state and the taxpayers, is shown by Life which says that it costs more to feed and house the insane than it does to cure them of their troubles. Figures show that the public spends $200,000,000 a year on its hospitals for the insane, but that the economic cost of insanity through loss of earning power among mental patients is $750,000,000.

Disregarding the humanitarian aspects of the problem and looking at it purely from a monetary point of view, it is better to spend whatever funds are necessary to provide proper care and treatment for all mental cases.

BISMARCK WAS ONE OF the greatest friends tobacco ever had. When Jules Favre visited him to discuss terms of peace after the Franco-Prussian War, the Iron Chancellor asked the Frenchman if he smoked, and offered him a cigar. Favre said he did not smoke. Then Bismarck made his deathless defense of smoking: "Then you are wrong! When a man begins a discussion which may easily lead to a heated argument, or even a show of temper, it is always better to smoke while one is talking. You see, a cigar held in the hand and nursed with care serves, in a measure, to keep our gestures under control. It is a sort of diversion; as the blue smoke curls upward the eye involuntarily follows it; the effect is soothing, one feels better tempered, and more inclined to make concessions—and to be continually making concessions is what we diplomats live on. It is true that you, as a non-smoker, have one advantage over me—you are more watchful and observant; on the other hand, you are more apt to be guided by the impulse of the moment."—Stanley Walker in This Week.

I ONCE TALKED to an old cannibal who, hearing of the Great War raging then in Europe, was most curious to know how we Europeans managed to eat such enormous quantities of human flesh. When I told him that Europeans do not eat their slain foes, he looked at me in shocked horror and asked what sort of barbarians we were, to kill without any real object.—Bronislaw Malinowski.

SILVER DOLLAR TABOR

It took just seventeen dollars for Horace Austin Warner (Haw) Tabor to buy the name that made him famous—"Silver Dollar" Tabor. That original investment got him, besides a nickname, a tidy fortune estimated to have totaled at one time $10,000,000.

Haw Tabor was a stonemason in the great quarries of Vermont as a boy. In 1856, when 25 years old, Tabor went West. He joined the Kansas Free-soil party and became a member of the state legislature for a term.

Tabor returned to Maine and married Augusta Pierce, whom he took back to the Kansas prairies with him to seek a fortune. By 1859 he had not found one so the Tabor's headed farther west into Colorado, where tales of rich gold mines were common talk.

Haw Tabor settled in California Gulch and in 1865 became the postmaster of the small mining town. He also opened a general store. One day two German prospectors, George F. Hook and August Riche, walked into Tabor's store, broke and hungry.

Tabor "grubstaked" the two men, giving them, enough provisions to last a few weeks. The bill came to seventeen dollars. Hook and Riche promised to put Tabor in for a third interest in whatever they found in the way of ore.

The two prospectors had little faith in their abilities as gold seekers, and less faith in the prospectiveness of the land around the mining town, then known as Leadville. They did stake a claim and made a poor pretense at working it, however, in order to impress Tabor.

Strange as it seems, this facial mine turned out to be one of the greatest silver-lead producers in the world. When the men reached a depth of 28 feet they struck a high grade ore vein and production began. The mine, known as the "Little Pittsburgh," in one month's time brought an income of $50,000 a month to the three partners.

Riche and Tabor purchased Hook's share for $96,000, and in 1878 the two men incorporated in New York for $20,000,000. The next year Tabor sold his interest for $1,000,000 and, by a shrewd series of investments, ran his wealth up to at least $10,000,000.

Tabor bought Leaville a $500,000 opera house and gave Denver one costing nearly $1,000,000. He owned 175,000 acres of mining land in Texas, 4,000,000 acres of grazing land in Colorado and rich holdings in Honduras. In 1883 he became U. S. Senator from Colorado.

Strange as it seems, Silver Dollar Tabor's quick fortune quickly dissipated, and in 1899 he died at Denver, in the lobby of the Windsor Hotel, broke.

who very much less frequently finds anything to approve in the Roosevelt policies, says that President Wilson wrote only one magazine article, after he left the White House. Mr. Franklin, a little bit mysteriously, states that President Coolidge "nicked Ray Long of the Cosmopolitan magazine for articles from his door Presidential pen," and added "it is a fact that President Coolidge wrote magazine pieces for money while in the White House."

It would not seem to be a very live issue, as long as the proceeds of the newspaper and magazine publications are to be donated to some public purpose. Nevertheless, some of these columnists gravely announce that no other explanation is possible than that there was so much criticism aroused (by themselves and by some hostile newspapers) that the President changed his mind in deference to public opinion. That is Mr. Keen's idea. Mr. Lawrence, on the other hand, figures out that the newspapers and magazine purchasing prices were not high enough to make worth while the President's holding on to it.

Both these hypotheses are in natural accord with the general principle that the President of the United States never does anything from a worthy motive.

In this connection one might consider the fact that presidential everything the President has done has been subject to the severest criticism from these sources, and it is hardly on record that in any single instance did these probabilities or contingencies, or his motives, cause Franklin D. Roosevelt to change his course or modify his policies.

But then a crowding occurred, anxious to make a point, is not going to be hampered either by logic or by his personality or even by facts.

From the age of 60 on, the law of mortality is found among those who are underweight.

Many Millions Advocated For State Waterways

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14. (AP)—Florida developments to cost many millions dollars were recommended yesterday by President Roosevelt's water resources committee.

The committee report, transmitted to Congress by the President, declared Florida's needs embraced development of rivers and harbors, water supply improvements, beach erosion control, wild life conservation and mosquito control.

It thus summed up the peninsula's public water requirements: "In numerous Florida cities and towns the population has almost tripled since 1900, creating pressing needs for water supply improvements."

Some coastal cities, the committee pointed out, have highly mineralized water as the result of overdraft, and are threatened with diminishing sources or salt infiltration.

A recent large increase in draft on underground water for industrial processes, as in the Savannah, Jacksonville and Pensacola areas, points to an urgent need of surveys to determine the permissible limits in draft."

For the first year of its proposed six-year program, the committee recommended expenditures of $160,000 for a "comprehensive study of water supplies and requirements for municipal use in Miami and nearby areas. Another $150,000 then will be needed, it said, to complete the investigation.

Southern Florida was included in a list of sections needing pollution abatement investigations. This study, which also would be concerned with the Savannah, Altamaha, St. Marys-Bunawasee, Apalachicola, Mobile and St. Johns basins, was estimated to cost $1,150,000 the first year and $1,000,000 thereafter.

The committee reiterated farm recommendations for Florida river and harbor developments to cost nearly $2,000,000 during the first year and an additional $650,000 in subsequent years.

Post Cards Will Tell Housewives Of Celery Value

Continued From Page One The housewife, in the key to the celery market, County Agent C. K. Dawson pointed out that, "If those are actively buying celery for the family table, the market is strong. If sales to these consumers fall off the market is weak and the price retards."

"Ask the average man or woman about celery and all they know is that they like it or don't like it. Question them as to its food value or health giving qualities and they are at a loss. Simply because they haven't been told," the County Agent asserted.

The main purpose of the proposed postal card campaign is to tell the housewife of the quality of locally grown celery and if she is sufficiently interested she will no doubt request the long list of celery recipes which will be furnished her on request, Mr. Dawson added.

Mr. Coleman emphasized that this program will not conflict with the free mailing service for postal cards advertising celery recently inaugurated for use of his customers.

Hitler Rides To Vienna In Triumph

Continued From Page One He has resigned. He had opposed the Nazification of his country. Then, Arthur Seyss-Inquart, the Hitler-chosen chancellor, took charge of the government under constitutional authority provided for such emergency and announced decrees legislating Austria out of existence.

Nazis Deliriously Happy. Anschluss (union) of Austria to Germany was accomplished at the height of a great wave of Nazi sentiment, vastly stimulated by Hitler's presence on the soil of his native Austria.

He spent the day at Linz, 100 miles west of here, deferring the climax of his triumphal homecoming, his entry into Vienna. Near Linz he visited the graves of his parents.

The death blow to Austrian independence was administered in the 1814-15 and where in 1934 Enckelmann of Vienna was held in 1814-15 and where in 1934 Engelbert Dollfuss, the little chancellor who fought Nazism, was assassinated.

It was a prosaic but tense session of the Austrian government. "Miklas" stepped out at Seyss-Inquart's demand. Then Seyss-Inquart took charge and it was all over in a minute.

The Austro-German border had wiped out. Messages immediately went to Hitler at Linz and to his ally, Premier Mussolini in Rome.

In a few minutes it became known in the streets, where deliriously happy Nazis went wild. In the first excitement there seemed to be no mourning for the old Austria.

A new day was being hailed by a united German people—and the world wondered what next.

PARIS, Mar. 14. (AP)—France planned last night to strengthen her treaty with Czechoslovakia to save the republic from any German move as formation of a new People's Front cabinet by Socialist Leon Blum was announced.

The treaty would be revised to provide military action against Germany even in event Chancellor Adolph Hitler of Germany should attempt peaceful modification of the war-created republic, with its 8,600,000 Germans, as with Austria.

Edouard Daladier, minister of national defense and war in the cabinet of radical-socialist Camille Chautemps which fell last Thursday, announced Blum successfully constituted a People's Front ministry shortly before 5 P. M. (noon EST).

Neutrality Not Violated Joseph Paul-Boncour, former premier and foreign minister-designate, conferred with Yvon Delbos, foreign minister in the last cabinet, preparatory to leading French resistance to possible further German expansion in Central Europe.

Spanish Rebels Take Alcaniz 50 Miles From Coast

Insurgents also reported the capture of other towns, much war material and many prisoners. Yesterday the Spanish Government rushed all available troops into a triangular sector of the lower Aragon front in a frantic attempt to halt insurgent march to the sea which would bisect Government territory.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco's army ambushed eastward from Huesca, apex of the triangle, against Alcaniz and Caspe, Eastern Spanish towns near the border of Catalonia and about 60 miles from the coast.

Huesca, some 40 miles southeast of Zaragoza, fell late Saturday, insurgent dispatches said. Its Government defenders died or surrendered when Navarrese cavalrymen rioted the town and infantrymen fought their way thru the town.

Government dispatches confirmed Franco's reports of a major advance in what probably was the greatest offensive of the 20-month-old civil war. Cavalrymen carried the insurgent red and gold colors eastward down the valley of the Ebro River toward Caspe, about 22 miles east and slightly north of Huesca, while other units advanced on Alcaniz, about 12 miles southwest of Caspe.

Official reports from Salamanca, the insurgent capital, said the Government dead numbered many thousands after five days of the lower Aragon push. Franco's own men suffered heavy losses.

Maverick Warns Against Danger Of Navy Program

Congressman States No Use Building For Distant Fight

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14.—(AP)—Representative Maverick, an ardent supporter of most administration policies, warned the public last night that the President's big navy program would involve this country in Europe's turmoil instead of protecting the nation from it.

Speaking less than 24 hours before the billion-dollar naval expansion bill was scheduled to be considered on the House floor, Maverick declared: "Some people seem to think because the world is mad, and that because Hitler is mad we should go crazy too. But I again say that the European crisis is not American, but European, and a long way off, and that it does not warrant the building of extravagant armament for distant combat." "We have necessary defense and present conditions demand more than ever that we be modern instead of wild. To go off on a war-preparing spree and go crazy, is to get into war." He urged more coast defense guns, and a stronger air corps. Maverick said that "if we fall again for the fallacy that going to war preserves peace" the reason would be a "tacit or secret understanding with England."

Mr. Roosevelt's fact finding conference which recessed with Chairman Morgan refusing to prove charges he made publicly against his colleagues, Congressional leaders insist meantime that outcome of the president's investigation may obviate a more comprehensive probe.

TVA Foes Demand Senate Inquiry Of Power Agency

WASHINGTON, Mar. 14.—(AP)—Foes of the Tennessee valley authority pooled forces last night in an attempt to override administration opposition and obtain a congressional investigation of the power agency.

Senators King, of Utah, and Bridges, of New Hampshire, who are demanding a senatorial inquiry, announced they had arranged to meet today with a group headed by Congressman Maury Maverick of Texas, to form a "united front." Maverick is author of two investigation proposals.

The two senators said that President Roosevelt's intervention Friday in the feud between TVA Chairman Arthur E. Morgan and his co-directors, David Lilienthal and Dr. Harold A. Morgan, had settled nothing, despite the fact the chief executive told the directors to settle their differences on their own.

Senators King observed that serious charges had been made and that the important thing now is a congressional investigation. "There is no use to conduct two inquiries," he said, referring to the "united front" meeting with Maverick.

PRESIDENT ASKS UNITED FRONT IN CHARITY DRIVE

Addressing a meeting of the mobilization for human needs in the historic East Room of the House, President Roosevelt said that "only in jobs and more jobs, at more pay, shall we find national stability and individual security." The President, whose address before the several hundred delegates officially opened the nation's annual community chest campaign, is shown at left on the arm of his aide, Thomas Quarters. His listeners crowded close to the temporary platform placed directly under one of the huge crystal chandeliers of the room.

CHAPTER FROM THE Mean Goodbye BY GERTRUDE GELBIN

Chapter Twelve

RETRIBUTION

Not President Lincoln's threat of martial law, but his own swiftness to his promise. But his weekly letter to Mary was all too little to soothe the ache in his heart and conscience. The knowledge of the anguish he had caused his mother was constantly with him, pursuing him through the grim nights and days of his work among the

One day word was received of a very fine battle, almost within reach of the field hospital he commanded. The Union men were forcing back the Rebels in hand-to-hand encounters. The struggle had left a carnage of horses and men in its wake. Jason leaped into action at once, obeying the necessary orders to make ready the hospital, dispatching ambulances which sped off and returning loaded with men, almost within the same moment. He himself dashed out into the yard to assist among the wounded.

As, unbidden, wheeled into the yard as he reached the gate; hard behind it galloped a great, white, thoroughbred which reared and whinnied as they bore the men away in stretchers.

"Many wounded?" Jason shouted to the ambulance driver.

At the sound of Jason's voice the horse came to a stop, pointing its ears. "Let me give you a hand," Jason called. The horse leaped forward, nuzzling Jason, then rearing wildly. Jason stepped back to avoid the animal. "What's the matter with this horse?" he asked.

"My picked his nose off the field," the driver explained. "He's followed us all the way back."

Jason turned to look at the horse. Faithful beast, he thought. Suddenly by the wheels of recollection began to spin in his brain. He rushed to the animal and examined its shoulder. It was there—the scar of the wound he had given one of Pilgrim's shoulders when he was only a boy.

Later they stated themselves at the table, Jason looked toward Annie happily.

"Pilgrim!" he cried and threw his arms around the shaggy old neck.

"Pilgrim, you old son-of-a-gun!"

Pilgrim whinnied and tried to nip Jason in playful delight at their reunion. Jason turned to the driver in excitement. "Who owns this horse—where is he?"

"It's Captain Griggs that owns him, sir; we've already carried him inside, where he loves him."

Jason turned to a nearby soldier. "Here—take care of this horse! Don't let him out of your sight. Don't let anyone touch him! Understand!"

The soldier nodded and seized Pilgrim's reins to lead him, but held them in a vice-like grip. Jason ran swiftly into the hospital. In another moment he had located Captain Griggs.

"Captain," he began tensely, "that white horse out there—does he belong to you?"

The wounded man nodded.

"Will you sell him to me?" Jason asked.

"Not for all the money in the world!" the other whispered. "He's almost human, that horse. He's almost human, that horse."

Jason knelt down beside the bed. "Listen, Captain. That horse belonged to my mother. She sold him to get enough money to send me through school. Let me take him back to her. She loves him. I'll pay you anything you ask, sir."

Captain Griggs began some word of protest, but Jason swept on. "Oh, Captain, I've got to make you understand. My mother sold everything she owned in the world and all for me! I've been an ungrateful fool—if I could just take that horse back to her."

The Captain looked away wearily. An intern, his finger on the sick man's pulse, entered a word of protest. "Please, Doctor, I'm not a grateful fool—if I could just take that horse back to her."

The Captain opened his eyes and stared at Jason. "Did he call you Dr. Wilkins?"

Jason nodded, dumbly.

"I've heard of you. You're the man who can save my arm. The other doctors here want to take it off. Will—Doctor Wilkins, I'll make a trade with you. Save my arm and you can have the horse—is it a deal?"

And so it was that Jason came into possession of Pilgrim.

Six months later, his Army discharge in his pocket, he mounted the faithful old horse and started the long trek westward to High Hill.

NAZIFICATION OF AUSTRIA WILDLY APPLAUDED BY CROWDS

Wildly cheering Nazi sympathizers milled about Vienna's streets, celebrating the surrender of the Austrian government to Hitler's nazification. These radiophotos show some of the crowds. ## Soviet Traitors To Be Denied Clemency

MOSCOW, Mar. 14.—(AP)—Soviet newspapers indicated yesterday that clemency would be denied 21 confessed and convicted traitors and Moscow awaited for announcement, probably before the week is over, that 18 of them had been shot.

Verdicts of death for 18 and long imprisonment for the other three were delivered Saturday night. Under ordinary procedure, three days will be allowed for weighing appeals for clemency and two days more must elapse before the secret execution.

The three spared from the firing squad were Christian Rakovsky, former Ambassador to France, sentenced to 20 years imprisonment, S. A. Bessonoff, former member of the Soviet trade delegation to Berlin, 15 years, and Dr. D. D. Pentyeff, heart specialist, 25 years.

Newspapers said the condemned 18 must be exterminated like snakes lest they "grow new fangs."

Their death would increase to 47 the number shot in three big treason trials within 18 months.

Sanford's First Press Agent

President Ulysses S. Grant may not have intended to do so—but he did blazon the name of Sanford across the country's newspapers. For he was a war hero; a dramatic chief executive. He was news.

When he came to Sanford during the 70's to visit his old friend, General Sanford, the newspapers followed. They reported his turning the first shovel of dirt to start grading the roadbed for the South Florida Railway in 1880. (The shovel may now be seen in the Sanford Public Library.)

For the first time the nation became aware of Sanford, Florida. It talked about the agricultural opportunity promised by our combination of soil, climate, easy irrigation; about the charm of our natural scenery. Soon eager men and women in ever increasing numbers were coming to this area for a better living; for a better way of life.

Steers Bring Good Prices In Florida Fat Stock Exhibit

JACKSONVILLE, Mar. 15.—Record prices received for the top steers in the fourth annual Florida Fat Stock Show and Sale here recently attest the fact that Florida is producing better quality beef cattle and the industry is willing to pay good money for good cattle, says those in charge of the event.

At the sale, which followed the show, 144,010 pounds of beef on the hoof sold for $15,429.48, an average of 10.71 cents per pound. This was one-fourth to one-third above the current market price on cattle, it was said. Buyers from many points in Florida and Georgia engaged in spirited bidding on the offerings.

The grand champion, a Hereford owned by the Gaines Tobacco Company of Madison, brought the handsome price of $645 (one cent per pound, at weighed 1,180 pounds and sold for $650). The reserve champion, a Hereford bred and raised on his own farm near Alachua, was shown by T. D. Matthews. It went under the auctioneer's hammer at 40 cents.

Harder, he has entered steers in all four shows since the event began in 1935 and who owned the grand champion the first year, region where the grizzly, or "white bear," as they call them, were a real menace.

A muzzle-loading flint lock was a poor weapon with which to face half a ton of grizzly that had never learned respect for man and cattle, M. C. Leslie of Lake City, knew no rival. If a hunter missed and wounded a bear, his best chance was to take to a tree and wait for help.

Before the United States came open classes, Joe Vana of Bonifay took grand championship honors in the club group for the second year in succession. His Angus steer was reserve champion in the Florida bred, fed and shown classification, finishing second to the Matthews steer, which was grand champion Florida steer.

Grizzly Is True King Of Beasts

By "DING" DARLING

The real king of beasts is the grizzly bear, with its close cousin, the big brown bear, sharing the title. The grizzly is the heaviest of all man-eating animals. A lion or a tiger, contrary to the usual conception, is puny in contrast, weighing no more than a third as much as a big grizzly.

When the Lewis and Clark expedition went up the Missouri river at the beginning of the eighteenth century they got into regions where the grizzly, or "white bear," as they call them, were a real menace.

A muzzle-loading flint lock was a poor weapon with which to face half a ton of grizzly that had never learned respect for man and cattle, M. C. Leslie of Lake City, knew no rival. If a hunter missed and wounded a bear, his best chance was to take to a tree and wait for help.

Before the United States came into possession of California, the Spanish ranchers used to rope grizzly bears and make them fight wild range bulls in log pens. One time a grizzly was matched with a tiger and the tiger in a few seconds killed the grizzly.

Grizzly bears fight quite a lot among themselves. It is believed that the mortality among young bears which are killed by the older ones is a considerable item in reducing the bear population.

Up in Alaska, on the Admiralty Islands, the United States government has established a large preserve to save from extinction the brown bear. There are a few all-weather-tips (the frontiers name for the grizzly) in remote mountain wilderness country of the northwest and only a number in Yellowstone National Park, otherwise the bear has disappeared from its original range.

Here's the first picture to reach the United States, showing Adolf Hitler's triumphant entry into Vienna. He is seen standing in an open automobile during his history-making procession through the streets of the former Austrian capital. Masses of people, packed along the street gave the Nazi salute as Der Fuehrer rode by. The picture was telephoned from Vienna to London and then radioed to the United States.

IN THE FIELD OF SPORTS

By JULIAN STENSTROM

A former Sanford Lookout hurler of the 1934 edition of the Florida State Loop, Herman "Spec" Medler, dropped in on his old home town late Sunday night for a brief visit before traveling on "downstate" Medler said he was glad to be back in this city and sorry he couldn't have stayed longer to visit many of his friends Medler hurled for Sanford in 1934 and had a medium record, as did many other Lookouts pitched that season. Medler played semi-pro baseball in Washington last summer and this year is undecided as to enter organized baseball or remain in the semi-pro ranks.

St. Augustine has so far failed to produce $600 in favor of Henry L. Gray, president of the state loop, for their franchise. Gray says that since the new Saint pilot and owner are still in the north looking for talent, this could be overlooked for the present, but some action must be taken soon.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington baseball business, says that he would like to sponsor a baseball school in Orlando next year similar to the one operated by him and Joe Egan in this city last season. However, he would throw a dent into the school that is operated in Orlando annually by Joe Stripp of the Cardinals. Stripp charges teaching fees and this year had approximately 100 students.

Celery Market Causes Anxiety Among Localities

Pessimism Is Felt In Face Of Heavy Shipments Anticipated

What will be the trend of the celery market during the next two weeks, the peak of the Florida season, is the question for which every grower and shipper in Sanford and Seminole County would like to know the answer, and next to politics is the most discussed question in this vicinity at the present time.

Much pessimism is felt over the heavy shipments last week and this week even though only a little over half of the available supply of the commodity has been allotted for shipment by the Celery Control Committee.

Prices, however, at the principal terminal markets stood up comparatively well, according to a report of the Federal State News Service, in view of the heavy shipments the latter part of last week and also in view of the enormous supply held on the tracks in 10 principle markets.

Yesterday the track holdings at the 10 markets were slightly over 300 and Monday the total cars which had not been unloaded was 322.

Locally, heavy cuttings were reported and the f. o. b. inquiry was light for Monday and Tuesday with the market weak and unsettled. However, prices on the small (Continued on page five)
