Hate crime closed

LAKE MARY — Investigators from the Seminole County sheriff's department have closed the case of a reported hate crime reported Tuesday evening near Lake Mary.

A woman on Sun Lake Loop, just south of the Lake Mary city limits reported finding the words "Jew" and "Go Home" and a Star of David on her front door. The words "NY'ers go home" were scratched onto the woman's car, and a threatening letter was attached to her door.

The woman and her 14-year-old daughter are Jewish, and moved to Lake Mary from New York last month.

Yesterday, sheriff's spokesman Ed McDonough said the daughter admitted writing the letter and scrawling the offensive remarks on the door and car, claiming she did so because she was unhappy living in Lake Mary and missed her home in New York.

McDonough said the girl has agreed to accept counseling from a rabbi affiliated with the Jewish Community Center. No charges are to be filed.

Public record seminar

SANFORD — State Attorney Norm Wolfinger is sponsoring a seminar on Florida's public record laws next Friday, Aug. 16, from 1:30 p.m. until 4 p.m. at Seminole Community College.

Guest speakers include Ms. Pat Gleason of the attorney general's office, and David Ramba of the Florida League of Cities. They will be presenting an overview of the Sunshine Law for municipal boards and commissioners.

While there is no charge for this seminar, seating is limited and persons planning to attend are urged to register as early as possible.

For additional information or to register, phone Carol Floyd at 322-7534, ext. 6410.

TDC meeting

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — The Seminole County Tourist Development Commission (TDC) will meet next Wednesday, Aug. 14, at Holiday Inn, Altamonte Springs. General Manager Bill Rodwick will be the host with a buffet lunch at noon and the meeting to follow at 12:30. This is a change in the meeting date.

TDC Director Jack Wert says there are several important items to review, and everyone is urged to attend.

The meeting is also open to the general public.

Truck overturns

SANFORD — A semi truck and possibly a dozen vehicles were involved in a wreck this morning at the intersection of Interstate-4 and SR-48. All of the cars involved were crushed, but not as a result of the incident.

The flatbed semi, owned by E&H Car Crushing Company of Orlando, was carrying the cars, which had already been flattened. According to a witness, the truck was said to be on the westbound entrance ramp to I-4 when it overturned, causing several of the crushed cars to fall off. Most were still attached.

The accident was investigated by the Florida Highway Patrol. A unit of the Seminole County fire department was also on the scene to handle a spillage of diesel fuel as a result of the accident.

The accident occurred shortly after 9:30 this morning. It is unknown what charges if any would be placed against the unidentified driver.

The marijuana surveillance flights of the Seminole County sheriff's office and other law enforcement agencies have yielded a number of arrests and shown to be useful in finding other things as well.

Thursday afternoon, a third arrest was made as a result of the surveillance operation.

Justin Darter, 15, of 430 S. Cochran Road, Geneva, turned himself in at the John E. Polk Correctional Facility. He was arrested for one DELTONA — The search for a 23-year old Sanford woman who is nine months pregnant shifted Thursday to Volusia County after the woman's car was found abandoned in Deltona.

According to the Volusia Sheriff's Office, Angelica M. Garner was last seen Wednesday morning after she left her Sanford home for a doctor's appointment in Orlando.

Before going to her doctor's appointment, Garner dropped off her two-year old son, Tyler, at his father's house in Deltona.

Angelica Garner and her son's 25 year old father, Michael Garner of 2442 Coachman Drive, Deltona are divorced. Tyler is safe and staying at a relative's house in Sanford.

Angelica Garner's boyfriend, Todd Allen Schimer, reported her missing to Sanford police Thursday

Sanford eyes road corridor redevelopment

By NICK PFEIFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Seminole County is working toward establishing a community redevelopment agency (CRA) for the U.S. Highway 17-92 corridor. Monday afternoon, the Sanford City Commission will consider several suggestions which have been presented.

Actually, the county has announced intentions to discuss the matter with each municipality through which the highway runs, from Sanford to the Orange County line.

At the present time, the city is involved in two CRAs, one which centered on the development of the Seminole Towne Center area, known as the Mall Community Redevelopment Area, and the other being the Waterfront-Downtown redevelopment area.

The mall CRA is strictly with the city, while the county has joined in with the waterfront development.

Sanford's Director of Planning and Development Jay Marder says the major question for the city is a financial commitment to this project.

The county has proposed four major steps in the CRA program. The first, scheduled from now through February of 1997, would involve a finding of necessity. It would designate redevelopment areas, establish blight conditions, declaration of slum and blight areas, and establish boundaries.

The estimated cost for the first phase is $90,000, which would be used basically for consultants and comprehensive planning.

The second phase would begin next March and involve the actual creation of the agency as well as approval of interlocal agreements.

The program is not expected to be completed until sometime in 1999, providing agreements are finalized in the early stages of discussion.

A 20-member U.S. Highway 17-92 task force has already been put into place. Sanford is represented by City Commissioner Bob Thomas; City Planner Matt West represents

Truck cowboy earns top honors in Road-E-O

By ANDREW CARDONA
Special to the Herald

Hurricane Bertha's threats of stormy weather on the East Coast of Florida didn't stop truck drivers, heavy equipment operators and mechanics from competing in the 12th Annual Florida Sunshine Chapter Truck, Mechanic and Heavy Equipment Road-E-O in Daytona Beach.

The Road-E-O is an Annual event and is sponsored by the Solid Waste Association of North America (SWANA). This year the Volusia County Chapter hosted the event.

The Road-E-O attracted 68 "truck cowboys" representing more than ten solid waste agencies throughout Florida.

In the transfer tractor/trailer class of the Truck and Mechanic Road-E-O, Seminole County was represented by Clyde Byrd, Solid Waste Operator III and Fred Bush, Solid Waste Operator II.

In the Heavy Equipment Road-E-O, Seminole County was represented by George Johnston, Solid Waste Operator III, who finished first place among 12 competitors in the Trash Compactor event.

Also competing in the Heavy Equipment category was John Hughey, Solid Waste Operator II, in the Bulldozer event.

Fraud brings down Customs vet

MIAMI — A 20-year Customs Service veteran who supervised a highly commended drug-hunting group has agreed to resign in disgrace and plead guilty to bankruptcy fraud.

Vincent Tirado did not list a World War II-vintage fighter plane and aircraft parts he owned as assets when he filed for personal bankruptcy in 1983.

Tirado served as a group supervisor for Miami's Customs Air Branch, a high-profile aerial surveillance unit that cruises the skies of the Caribbean and the Southeast in search of smugglers by air and sea.

On the side, he was president of a parts company called Classic Warbirds Inc., but he failed to list a P-51 Mustang fighter and parts when he filed a list of assets in his bankruptcy case.

Federal prosecutors estimate the loss to creditors totaled $70,000 to $120,000, but classic Mustangs, a bomber escort that was considered by many to be the top fighter of the war, often auction for $500,000.

Tirado, 53, Thursday agreed to plead guilty to fraud. Under the plea bargain, he agreed to resign from the Customs Service.

The fraud charge carries a possible five-year sentence, but prosecutors agreed to support a shorter term based on his acceptance of responsibility.

Man firebombs barbershop

JACKSONVILLE — Arthur Stevens didn't like his new haircut. Instead of asking for his money back, police say he tried to burn down the barber shop.

Stevens, 39, was charged with arson after police said he tossed two homemade firebombs through the window of Lee's Barber Shop last week. He remained in jail Thursday on $75,300 bond.

Stevens told officers he was upset because he had gone in for a haircut a couple of weeks earlier and thought his hair was cut too short, according to Duval County sheriff's Detective Dale Nixon.

"To me his hair didn't look bad," Nixon said. "He said he asked for a fade haircut and his hair was cut extremely short."

The barber shop was saved from serious damage when two men, Alexander Harley and Ronnie Crummel, jumped through a window and tossed the bombs back out. The only damage was the broken window.

Alleged highjacker enters plea

MIAMI — An attorney for a freshly shaven Palestinian pleaded innocent for him in the hijacking of a Havana-bound Iberia Airlines flight that landed in Miami.

The arraignment for Saado Mohamed Ibrahim Intisar lasted less than a minute Thursday, and he took no part in the proceedings aside from listening to a translation through an Arabic interpreter.

With his heavy beard and mustache missing, Ibrahim, 37, was barely recognizable when he was brought into court in handcuffs.

Assistant U.S. Public Defender Joaquin Mendes asked for a jury trial. He also filed a request for all information in the hands of prosecutors about two Palestinians detained in Germany who say they plotted the hijacking with Ibrahim.

Outside the courtroom, Mendes said he wants someone from his office to go to Germany to find out what the men know and what they can contribute to the defense.

Stopped for suspicious passports two days after the hijacking, the two men told German investigators they were involved in the planning with Ibrahim but did not show up at the Madrid airport to seek asylum in western Europe.

Records moved

PHOENIX — Anticipating a possible FBI search of its headquarters, the company responsible for packaging oxygen-generating canisters on the ValuJet plane that crashed in the Everglades moved boxes of records to its attorney's office.

SabreTech moved the records from its headquarters at the Phoenix airport hours after FBI agents searched the company's Miami maintenance center Wednesday, KNXV-TV reported Thursday night. Some files were clearly marked "ValuJet."

SabreTech issued a statement saying its lawyers had advised the company "to copy important business documents in use at its Phoenix headquarters and store them with its lawyers in the unlikely event that a search like the one in Miami would happen in Phoenix."

"All original SabreTech records remain in the Phoenix facility," the statement said.

The company said the documents were normal records SabreTech would need to continue regular operations if the FBI suddenly took over its headquarters, KNXV reported.

The FBI searched SabreTech's maintenance center at Miami International Airport as part of its criminal investigation into the May 11 crash that killed 110 people on the ValuJet DC-9.

Judge denies class-action status in discrimination claim vs. Publix

By LISA HOLIWA Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — A U.S. District Court judge has denied class-action status to a sex discrimination lawsuit against Publix Super Markets, which is already facing the nation's largest gender-bias lawsuit.

But a lawyer for former bakery plant manager Kathy Watkins said his firm would file another lawsuit seeking to represent female workers from Publix's warehouses, production facilities and corporate office.

"It doesn't mean the complaint is over," Miami attorney Juan Bauta said Thursday. "It doesn't mean that any of the other Publix employees that we represent won't be filing a class action."

Judge Henry Lee Adams ruled Wednesday that Watkins can continue her lawsuit accusing Publix of discriminating against her but cannot represent other women.

Her lawsuit, filed in March, had claimed as many as 20,000 non-store employees of the Lakeland-based chain were victimized by a pattern of discrimination.

Adams said that Watkins claimed "to represent women who were allegedly denied promotion because of her gender," even though she herself had been promoted to a high position within the chain.

"This ruling is a major victory for Publix," said Publix board chairman and CEO Howard Jenkins. "Showing respect for our associates is key to our success and, as we've said before, Publix provides career opportunities for all associates."

When she filed her lawsuit, Watkins joked that she was so dedicated to the chain that her blood ran green, the color of the company logo. Then, she said, she realized some male managers were earning more than her while managing fewer employees.

"They discriminate against women. They said we can't do things," she said. "I'm here for all the women who have been overlooked."

Watkins, a 46-year-old mother of two, was hired as a bakery worker in 1970 and moved up to become Publix's first woman general manager in 1980. But she said she was demoted in 1984 to manufacturing representative with lower benefits after returning to work from surgery.

"She's a person who has been with Publix and she started off at the very bottom rungs. She saw a lot of things on her way up," Bauta said.

Publix already faces the nation's largest gender-bias suit claiming at least 100,000 women working in its stores since 1991 lost out on pay, promotions and choice job assignments.

Dog has good first work day

By The Associated Press

RICHMOND HILL, Ga. — Jessica's first day of work found a bag of cocaine paid off for prosecutors, who have charged two people with drug trafficking along Interstate 95.

Jessica, a drug-sniffing dog, was on her first assignment Wednesday night when police pulled over Maria House of the Bronx for speeding. Officer Vinnie Cinelli became suspicious and called in the canine unit.

Police had Jessica, a Belgian Malinois, sniff the car and she found something.

"This was her first night out," investigator Tim Faught said. "We hit pay dirt."

Police then searched the car and found 2 pounds of cocaine.

Mack not bothered by the veep competition from friend Kemp

By WILL LESTER Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — U.S. Sen. Connie Mack has survived to the final round of the vice presidential derby, but the excitement has been swirling around former Housing Secretary Jack Kemp.

Mack is a strong fiscal conservative, smooth on television and popular with his colleagues. Kemp has the same attributes.

But Kemp, a former Buffalo Bills quarterback, is a veteran Republican leader with a national following. Mack is not well-known outside Florida.

The two are close friends and Mack said Thursday he thought Kemp would make an excellent choice. Kemp has spoken highly of Mack's potential for the job.

"We share a fondness for one another," Mack said of Kemp. On Thursday during the taping of Michael Putney's WFLG news show "This Week in South Florida," Mack said there's no need for Republicans to worry about poll numbers for certain GOP nominee Bob Dole's campaign at this point.

"Bob Dole understands you don't win elections in July and August," Mack said. "We have not gone out and campaigned on his tax cut plan yet."

Mack said he and Dole are philosophically in step. They both understand that "people are fed up with Washington interfering in their lives."

Again the 58-year-old senator fielded questions about marijuana use more than two decades ago and said, "If we are going to disqualify everyone who ever experimented with marijuana, there wouldn't be many people left to run."

"Our generation made a mistake and we should not have done it," Mack said.

"If I were running for re-election in Florida, this would not come up," he said. Mack had disclosed his marijuana use in 1967, but had denied he ever used it five years earlier. He says he quit before entering public life at age 41, but did not specify a date.

Mack was headed to New Mexico Friday to keep a commitment to appear at a youth league world series named after his grandfather and namesake, the Hall of Fame baseball manager. Then he was headed to San Diego, unless called upon to make a detour to Russell, Kan., to appear with Dole.

If Mack was the running mate and the Republicans won, he could serve in the Senate until January 20, Democratic Gov. Lawton Chiles would pick an interim senator, likely a Democrat, until the next general election in November 1988.

Two killers executed by injection

By The Associated Press

An Oklahoma man was executed by injection early Friday for the murders of a minister and his wife, separated by two windows from the victims' son and daughter who were able to watch because of legislation the son wrote.

Steven Keith Hatch, 42, was put to death just hours after another execution in Arkansas as state Sen. Brooks Douglass and his sister Leslie Frizzell looked on. Three of Douglass' uncles also watched.

Douglass and his sister survived being shot in the back during the 1979 attack at the family home and saw their parents killed. Hatch and an accomplice also tried to rape Ma. Frizzell, who was 12 at the time.

Douglass, 32, wrote the state law that made it possible for families to witness executions in Oklahoma.

"We're very sad, and very sorry, that the circumstances of 17 years ago have brought us to this place," Douglass said. "Leslie and I have again witnessed the taking of a life. The first time we did, we were young people who were present when our mother and father were viciously killed.

"It is the end of a very long ordeal that has dominated our lives," he said.

Earlier, 84-Fu William Frank Parker was executed by injection in Arkansas on Thursday night for killing his ex-wife's parents in 1984 because he felt they broke up his marriage.

After he took office from former Gov. Jim Guy Tucker last month, Gov. Mike Huckabee advanced the execution date of Parker by six weeks, saying the victims' family had suffered long enough.

In his final words, Parker invoked his Buddhist beliefs: "I seek refuge in the Buddha. I seek refuge in the Dharma. I seek refuge in the Sangha."

His mother, Janie Parker, waited out the final hours with her son after pulling up to the prison with several cans of beer iced down in the car and a handgun in her purse. The weapon was confiscated by guards.

"I forgot I had it in my damn purse," she told KARK-TV. "You never know when you might break down and someone try to kill you."

Parker, 42 — whose adopted name meant Teacher in Chinese — attracted support from the Dalai Lama, who wrote to oppose the execution, and actor Richard Gere, a fellow Buddhist who had hoped to visit him on Death Row.

The Corrections Department refused to allow the visit, saying it didn't have time to do a background check on Gere.

In Oklahoma, Hatch was executed for his role as a 10-year-old in the murders of the Rev. Richard Douglas and his wife, Marilyn.

Douglass was 16 when Hatch and Glen Burton Ake, posing as lost motorists, invaded the Douglass home. They hog-tied Douglass and his parents and forced Leslie to find them cash, jewelry and credit cards. Both men tried to rape her.

Ake told Hatch to go outside, "listen for the sound" and start the car, then shot all four family members in the back.

Ake was sentenced to die but won a new trial on appeal. A new jury sentenced him to two life terms.

Retail theft

Orlando Duran Gibbs, 25, 1805 W. 25th St., Apt. 505-B, Sanford, was arrested for retail theft on Wednesday evening by Sanford Police.

According to the arrest report, Gibbs was found to have taken several items, valued at $13.50 from the Winn Dixie store on French Avenue without paying for them.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $115 bond.

Drug charges

Bobby Leon Rouse, 34, 1811 W. 16th St., Sanford, was arrested for the sale of a counterfeit controlled substance and for the sale of a controlled substance by Sanford Police on Wednesday.

According to police, a drug sting operation was being conducted in the area of 18th Street and Blackstone Avenue in Sanford when Rouse sold both a piece of crack cocaine and a piece of rock which tested negative for the presence of cocaine.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held on $8,500 bond.

Retail theft alleged

Larry Busby, 55, 500 Oak Ave., Sanford, was arrested for retail theft by Sanford Police on Wednesday.

According to the arrest report, he took a comb and a box of fish nuggets, valued at $1.66 from the Winn Dixie on French Avenue without paying for it.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held in lieu of $115 bond.

Prostitution charges filed

Carmelia Evette ("Puddin'") James, 32, 1100 Willow Ave., Sanford, was arrested for assignment to commit prostitution by Sanford Police on Wednesday.

According to police, she offered her services to perform oral sex on an undercover officer in exchange for $20 in cash. She was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where she was held on $115 bond.

Theft, etc. alleged

Quincy Gerod Williams, 21, 810 Haakey, Lake Monroe, was arrested for burglary to a structure, grand theft auto and possession of marijuana by Seminole County sheriff's deputies on Wednesday.

Deputies said he was spotted near 12th Street and Mangoustine driving a car that had been reported stolen from a home during a burglary. When he was stopped, deputies also found two baggies containing marijuana and several rocks of crack cocaine.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $3,000 bond.

Nationwide attention credited with drop in youth violence

By MICHAEL J. SHIFFER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Nationwide attention to youth crime from every segment of society is being credited for a surprising drop last year in the arrest rates of juveniles for violent crimes, particularly murder.

With the release Thursday of preliminary 1995 FBI statistics that defied predictions that teen-age violence would continue to soar, experts like Northeastern University Professor Jack Levin said a new attitude toward youth crime in the last three or four years amounts to "a cultural revolution, and it's paying off in these rosy crime figures."

"Everywhere, police, clergy, school systems, parents, universities and even businesses are focusing on the problem of youth violence," said Levin, who directs Northeastern's Program for the Study of Violence and Conflict.

After surging nonstop since 1987, the nationwide arrest rate of youths aged 10 to 17 for violent crimes dropped 2.9 percent, and their arrest rate for murder plunged 15.2 percent, Attorney General Janet Reno said.

The murder arrest rate also declined two consecutive years, to 22.8 percent below the 1993 figure. The last time these two juvenile arrest rates — for murder and violent crime — both dropped in the same year was 1983.

"It's important that we recognize there's not one magic key," said Reno, whose top priority has been youth crime. "It's communities, governments coming together with their citizens to really reweave the fabric of society around our children, while at the same time letting our children know that they will be held accountable."

Youth violence became one of the nation's most feared crime problems as teen-agers were recruited and armed by crack cocaine barons during the 1980s. While adult crime has dwindled, youth violence has surged, and more was predicted because the number of teen-agers began to grow in 1992 and will increase 17 percent in the next decade.

Reno, police executives and academic experts cited a panoply of federal, state and local programs to explain the new numbers: more police attention and tougher sentences for the most violent youths, big-city crackdowns on guns in the hands of kids, increased community help for first offenders and prevention programs to occupy youths with free time and little supervision.

Police Chief Dennis E. Nowicki of Charlotte-Mecklenburg, N.C., where the number of juvenile murder arrests declined 15.4 percent in 1995, cited a change in police thinking.

"In my profession, there is a recognition that prevention is necessary and it works," Nowicki said. "Enforcement by itself will not solve the problem; we also need prevention targeted toward youngsters before they become hardened criminals."

Like others, Nowicki's department has put police into new roles. His police force attends parent-teacher meetings and trains with mental health professionals and social workers. Each of 140 schools has a volunteer police officer, teacher and parent running a club for disruptive or underachieving students. The students get rewards, like amusement park tickets, if they attain academic goals and stay out of trouble.

Fifteen students in one club who had been failing math all got "C's" or better after running a stationary store for other students, Nowicki said.

Like New York City police, Nowicki's officers conduct a truancy program to return kids to school.

Professor Alfred Blumstein of Carnegie-Mellon University hailed efforts in several big cities to take guns from juveniles, because gun murders accounted for the entire 189 percent increase in the teen-age murder rate between 1984 and 1993.

"A quarter of all murders occur in seven or eight big cities," Blumstein said. "For instance, New York is about 8 percent of the national total, so a drop of 25 percent in New York would take 2 percentage points off the national rate."

New York City saw its murder arrest rate for teens aged 15 to 19 drop 27 percent in 1995.

Fewer workers die on job in 1995

By LAURA MEEKLER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — It was safer to go to work in 1995 than in 1994, and 6 percent fewer people died on the job, the government reports.

A total of 6,210 people were killed at work in 1995, an average of 17 per day, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, an arm of the Labor Department.

The drop came after increases in 1993 and 1994, according to a report released Thursday.

Analysts credited a 10 percent decline in the number of firearm-related homicides, as well as fewer commercial airline crashes.

But deaths in the construction industry, which accounts for more fatalities than any other, were up, from 1,028 in 1994 to 1,048 last year.

Other statistics released Thursday:

—Highway traffic incidents and homicides accounted for more than one-third of all deaths in 1995. More than half the highway victims were in trucks.

—The 1,024 on-the-job homicides accounted for 16 percent of all work-related deaths, the second-leading cause behind vehicle deaths. The Oklahoma City bombing was responsible for 13 percent of the job-related homicides last year. Despite the bombing, workplace homicides dropped 5 percent from 1994.

—Falls accounted for 10 percent of fatal work injuries, with one-fifth of them from or through roofs.

—There were 217 multiple fatality incidents in 1995, involving 686 deaths. That's less than 1994, which saw 227 such events with 723 deaths.

—Men accounted for about 91 percent of all fatal work injuries, but deaths of women and teen-agers increased since 1994.

Also Thursday, the National Safety Council, a nonprofit public service organization, said injuries on the job cost society $119.4 billion in 1995. That includes lost wages and productivity, administrative expenses and health care costs.

"The total cost is equal to the combined 1995 profit of the 50 largest corporations in America. Companies need to make safety a value in their workplace," Jerry Scannell, president of the council, said in a statement.

USDA proposing yogurt as meat substitute in school lunches

By PHILIP BRASHER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Children could soon be seeing yogurt instead of meat in their school lunches under a proposal that has upset cattle producers.

"USDA should be promoting meat, not pushing it under the carpet," said Sen. Larry Pressler, D-S.D. "School children must be provided nutritious and healthy meals, and they should include meat."

The Agriculture Department last month proposed allowing yogurt substitute for meat in school lunches. School officials think it will be a hit with kids.

"I think they would like it, certainly not as a steady diet," Sally Rucher, co-manager of food service for the Rochester, Minn., schools, said Thursday.

Child-care providers and the food industry have been pressing for the change for at least 15 years, but USDA balked out of concerns about the lack of iron and other nutrients in yogurt.

The department has decided to leave it up to school nutritionists to make sure meals are balanced.

The department already allows some meat substitutes, including cheese, beans, eggs and peanut butter. That's enough, according to the National Cattleman's Beef Association.

The Clinton administration earlier this year attempted to prop up slumping cattle prices by stepping up purchases of beef for schools.

School lunch programs, which feed 25 million children nationwide, are a huge market for the food industry. The federal government subsidizes the cost of the meals and sets requirements for their nutrition and content.

USDA provided schools with 146 million pounds of beef during the past school year.

But yogurt would add variety to lunches, it's easy for children to digest and it requires no preparation, proponents say.

"It will give additional flexibility in menu planning and help school food authorities meet the religious, cultural and medical dietary preferences of students," said Janet Bantley, president of the American School Food Service Association.

The perfect politician

Twenty two years ago last night, much of the nation was shocked when Richard M. Nixon announced he was resigning as President of the United States. It was the first such resignation in the nation's history. It became effective at noon on this day in history.

His resignation was said to be under the threat of impeachment, as the result of the Watergate scandal.

Hardly anyone who was of adult age at that time had not heard of the Watergate scandal. While the president was implicated as having been involved in the break-in, or at least aware of it, people now seem to recall Watergate more than they recall the results, including the loss of a president.

But look at it now. Many people, including political activists, are recalling what they call the "good days" when Nixon was in power. People are forgetting the bad parts of his presidency and remembering the good.

It has always been that way. Time heals all wounds. Look at stories regarding the death of a prominent person. You never see what went wrong during his or her lifetime, only the positive aspects of the years.

Thank goodness it is that way. If people never forgot, never forgave, or never overlooked people's bad points, there would be no role models, good parents, or even honest politicians.

People know full well that no matter who it is, enough digging into the past can uncover something of fault, something which could be used to make what may be a decent individual, appear to be a real rat. Stressing only bad points and ignoring good will ruin anyone's reputation.

What does this have to do with today? Considering we are in the middle of one of the largest political campaign seasons we have had in many years on the local scene, we believe it is worth issuing a word of caution.

Many organizations are holding political forums. Citizens are having the opportunity to hear candidates for various posts give comments, debate, or answer questions.

Beware of what is tossed into the political cauldron during those meetings by opposition candidates, or friends of those candidates. Years ago, there may have been a blemish on a person's character. In most cases, not something of which the candidate is proud. But it happened, and there is nothing we can do now to make it disappear. Does one or two scars from the past prevent a person from changing for the better? Is anyone perfect?

Just like many people have forgotten or forgiven what happened with Richard Nixon 22 years ago, we hope people today have the willingness to overlook the past of political candidates, and support the best person, based on today, not yesterday.

If we could only elect people who are absolutely perfect, for whom would we vote? For that matter, would we even have a government?

Breaking through racial barriers

On Jan. 19, 1994, Janice Lamarena Ingraham, a student at San Bernardino Community College in California, began her first day of English 101. A widowed mother of three small children, she was eager to absorb as much education as she could because she expected to have to support her family for a long time to come. She was 24.

In front of the class, the instructor told Ms. Ingraham that she had to leave the room because the class was reserved for only African-American students. As she went out the door, the laughter of the students followed her.

The class was part of the Black Bridge Program that is geared to enabling black students to go on to four-year colleges. And it is largely successful in that goal. Those students receive special academic counseling and seminars, black mentors who advise on career development, and other targeted services.

The Black Bridge project exists on several dozen campuses in the community college system, as does the Puente Project that provides Latinos with special academic support. Ingraham also tried to enter the Puente Project but was informed that because she is white, there was no place for her.

Ingraham told me that the double-rejection made her realize that while one of her three children could in time enter the Puente Project, the other two would, like their mother, be excluded. Her eligible child is half Mexican-American.

As she said to the Crestline Courier-News at the time, "I have told my daughters they'd be treated fairly, regardless of race, but now they couldn't even attend the same college class together."

Furthermore, Ingraham discovered that there were black students in the Black Bridge project who came out of a background that was more economically advantaged than her own. By contrast to those students, she could be defined as disadvantaged.

Janice Ingraham decided to break down the racial and ethnic barriers in the California community colleges. She found the right lawyer,

Janice Ingraham decided to break down the racial and ethnic barriers in the California community colleges.

Robert Corry, who is on the staff of the Pacific Legal Foundation, a conservative outfit. Corry is particularly interested in free speech cases and in countering the separation of college students "into ethnic enclaves and telling them they can only succeed in an atmosphere restricted to other members of their race and mentors of their race." I first knew Corry when, as a recent graduate of Stanford Law School, he succeeded in having its speech code overturned even though he was faced in court by the university's high-priced attorneys. It was like Paul Newman v. James Mason in "The Verdict."

Ingraham's lawsuit wound up in the Federal District Court for the Eastern district of California. It resulted in a settlement that affects the nation's largest community college system -- with its 108 campuses -- and it may influence colleges in other states.

Ingraham did not ask for compensatory damages. She wanted all students to be treated fairly. This is what she won, as summarized by the Chronicle of Higher Education:

"Course catalogues and other marketing tools produced by the system may no longer describe certain offerings as 'designed' for black or Hispanic students. The system also cannot choose mentors or counselors for students on the basis of race."

BEN WATTENBERG

Coming: Close, critical contest

Impressions before San Diego:
It is said that this presidential race is boring. Not to me. It will probably be close. It will probably be more important than any in the last generation, certainly since 1980.

The poll released last week by the highly reputable Pew Research Center showed that voters were not very interested in the campaign. That will change with the conventions in August and the campaigns in the fall.

The survey also showed Clinton leading Dole by 10 percentage points. This is in stark contrast to the regnant judgment that Dole is trailing by "15 to 20 points" (also based on reputable polling). If the 10-point number is in the ballpark, and Dole gets a normal "bounce" from the GOP convention (a 10-point average for a non-incumbent since 1976), we could have a horse race by mid-August. If Clinton then gets the average incumbent bounce (6 points), we'd have a single-digit race by Labor Day, when serious campaigning and Republican spending begins in earnest.

It is said that by signing the welfare-reform bill Clinton acted for political reasons and "took welfare off the table," hurting Dole's chances. Perhaps so. But I give Clinton great credit for what he did. There is a little secret about presidents: They usually do what they think is best for America. Welfare as we know it had become a catastrophe. It was Clinton's six little words in 1992 -- "end welfare as we know it" -- that opened up the debate. His own plan didn't appear until 1994 and was limited. The Republicans added fiber to the bill, and on their third attempt, Clinton signed up. All hail speechwriters: Rhetoric yields reality.

Will it hurt Dole? Well, it takes something off the table for Clinton too. How can he base a campaign on the idea that Republicans in Congress are "extremists," and then sign their bills on an issue like welfare, which ends a major federal entitlement that has been in the deck for 80 years? (The same Pew poll shows an even -- 47 percent to 46 percent -- Democrat-Republican split on a generic ballot for Congress.)

Moreover, the high-profile results of the political struggle over welfare opens up another constellation of issues, clearly described in the three-part series in USA Today entitled "The Values Vote."

Consider these two sets of results from the USA Today/CNN/Gallup survey:

Q: Which concerns you more, the nation's moral problems or the nation's economic problems?
-- 53 percent said moral.
-- 38 percent said economic.

Q: Have government policies generally strengthened or generally weakened American's moral values in the last 25 years?
-- 48 percent said weakened.
-- 7 percent said strengthened.
-- 39 percent said they had no effect.

Now, the values issues, particularly the ones that are directly related to government policies, have been Republican strong suits over the years: welfare, crime, education and affirmative action.

Clinton has been masterful in his attempt to neutralize these issues. Suppose welfare is indeed off the table. Both parties claim they are super-tough on crime. But they are split on preferential affirmative action: Clinton says mend it; Dole says end it. And they differ deeply on educational policy, which may be this year's sleeper issue.

Dole's economic plan was much more than that, although the emphasis has been on his ideas for a tax cut and faster economic growth. It included a ringing call for "opportunity scholarships" -- the new phrase for "school vouchers." Dole says this will allow parents "to choose the best school for their child... the low-income parent has just as much right to have the best education for his child as anyone in this room..." This may well be Dole's signature issue, involving a demonstration project in about 15 states, with $12-to-15 billion dollars in federal funds. This is big money from the party that is preaching less federal government. With a Republican Congress it could become law.

That's a big reason why the election is so important. If the Republicans win they will control government pretty much from top to bottom -- White House, Congress, State Houses, probably state legislatures, a sympathetic Supreme Court -- for the first time in 70 years. We could find out if big conservative ideas can usefully help shape the destiny of global democracy in the 21st Century.

It's also important if Clinton wins. The serious conservative challenge has led him to declare that "the era of big government is over" and to go further on his quest to "reinvent government." They're talking big stuff out there. It's not boring.

It is said that this presidential race is boring. Not to me.

JOSEPH SPEAR

From deficit hawk to voodoo economist

It is a sad thing to see a person who has lived a life of integrity for seven decades surrender his principles at age 73, but that is exactly what seems to be happening to Bob Dole.

I had hoped that the aberrant behavior he had been exhibiting for the past few years was the consequence of the advice his friend Richard Nixon gave him -- run to the right to win the GOP nomination, then run back to the center for the general election. I had hoped this was the case when Dole campaigned for the repulsive Oliver North in the Virginia Senate race of 1994. I had hoped this explained Dole's vow to repeal the ban on assault weapons. I had hoped this was the reason for Dole's declaration that the Constitution had to be changed to ban flag-burning and to permit prayer in public schools.

He didn't mean to suggest that tobacco is not addictive, I said. He just wants the fanatics to understand that he's agin government regulation of everything, including carcinogens.

He didn't really mean to compete with Siskel and Ebert, I said. He just wants voters to know they can depend on a Bob Dole review to give them the straight skinny on unwholesome flicks.

Once he had the nomination wrapped up, I kept telling myself, he would thumb his nose at the rabid right and revert to the solid, center-right Republican he always was. A brooding, quick-tempered guy, to be sure, but sharp-witted and shrewd.

Well, Joseph, you've been fooled again. Of all the politicians who have run for the top job in my memory, there is none I would have trusted more to stand tall against the deficit dragon than stalwart Bob Dole. Throughout his 35 years in Congress, he preached parsimony and he practiced it. He insisted that expenditures not exceed income, demanded that the books be balanced -- first, foremost and forever. Only then, he said, can we talk about reducing revenues.

No more. Now he promises a half-trillion-dollar tax cut over a three-year period. He vows to trim the income tax rate by 15 percent, to halve the capital gains tax rate, to grant tax credits for birthing and raising children, to repeal the 1993 hikes in Social Security payroll deductions.

And how does he intend to make up for this huge loss of revenue? Well, he's found some more of those mysterious "administrative costs" that can be cut. He'll sell more of the public's airways. He'll gut the Commerce and Energy Departments. And he'll rake in $147 billion in higher revenues that will result from the economic growth spurred by his tax cuts.

In other words, we're going to get another free lunch.

In other words, we have returned to the same old Supply-Side Bushwa that Ronald Reagan pawned off on us in 1981. The same sorcery that quadrupled the budget deficit, helped create the Savings & Loan debacle and left us with a national debt that now exceeds $5 trillion and consumes nearly a billion dollars a day in interest. The same doctrinaire claptrap that Reagan's budget director, David Stockman, later said was Trickle-Down Bushwa in a Sunday suit and a "mind-numbing catastrophe."

In other words, our man Bob has metamorphosed from a deficit hawk into a voodoo economist. He is, indeed, no better than any pol slaving for high office. All the hints along the way that we thought were minor concessions?

It is a sad thing to see a person who has lived a life of integrity for seven decades surrender his principles at age 73.

Spiritual Workshop uplifting Local event attended by over 4700 people

By SUSAN WESSON
Herald Staff Writer

ORLANDO — The bi-annual Spiritual Growth Workshop was once again a success. The event, held at the Renaissance Hotel, formerly the Stouffer, continues to grow in attendance with each year since its conception. The hotel reported that 1,850 people were occupants in its spacious rooms from three days prior to the workshop to three days preceding. Many out-of-state visitors made a fun-filled and spiritual renewal vacation out of the time spent.

This year's theme "Intimacy with God" featured speakers and authors from various parts of the nation known for their inspiring messages. At least 75 exhibit spaces were offered and shared book and Bible sales and ministries available for support or assistance to brethren.

F. LaGard Smith, Willard Tate, Harold Haselt, Ronnie Norman, Neil Anderson, Charles Hodge and Becky Hamm were among a few of those who brought encouraging talks to those participating. Although the weekend was sponsored by area Churches of Christ, the public was invited to attend. Several employees and guests of the hotel found a welcome reception and enthusiastically spoke of the positive input they received.

James Moore, director for the event, along with the elders from Concord Street Church of Christ, were pleased with the favorable results. Moore commented, "This was a tremendous spiritual growth experience for those who attended. Members of the Churches of Christ felt enriched and inspired in their Christian faith and walk."

The three day conference held in the luxurious hotel across from Sea World offered families classes and child care for youngsters and lessons from the word of God. There was in fact, "something for everyone, young and old." Topics covered church growth, renewing an intimate relationship with others and God, as well as classes for the vocally inclined.

Over 45 churches participated locally with 17 heading various committees. Participants came from as far away as California, Texas, Ohio, New Hampshire, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina. Coordinators reported that 17 states were represented.

Moore concluded by saying, "Today people are seeking a deep relationship with God and are becoming more spiritually minded. They sense a spiritual vacuum and a deep yearning within for a lifestyle that offers more than materialism, entertainment and boredom. Consequently, great numbers are attending these type of events throughout America."

Stations must air 3 hours of educational shows a week

By JENNIFER AVENSA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — With the goal of giving America's kids more and higher-quality shows to tune into, federal regulators adopted rules requiring TV broadcasters to air at least three hours of educational shows each week.

The Federal Communications Commission's 4-0 vote Thursday ended a bitter, six-year battle over the matter and enacted a White House and TV industry plan.

The three-hour requirement, which doesn't apply to cable television, takes effect in September 1997. However, beginning Jan. 2 TV stations will have to promote shows they classify as "educational" in TV listings.

Children's TV advocates predict the new rules will eventually lead to more and higher-quality shows for children. "It's very good for kids because kids like choices just like adults," said Peggy Charren, a children's TV activist.

Some broadcasters say it won't make a big difference because the average TV station already airs more than four hours of high-quality educational shows a week. These shows include Fox's "Where on Earth is Carmen Sandiego" and CBS' "Beakman's World".

The rules provide for a tougher definition of what constitutes an educational show than previous regulations, when some broadcasters had listed "The Jetsons" and "Leave It to Beaver" in that category.

Like the old definition, the new one could be interpreted differently by broadcasters and regulators.

The rules generally define educational material as designed for youngsters 16 and under and serving their intellectual, cognitive, social and emotional needs.

Broadcasters are required between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. to air three hours of regularly scheduled, 30-minute shows specifically designed to educate children.

Stations that fall short could still meet the three-hour standard by airing public service announcements, specials and 15-minute shows like "School House Rock."

"Ultimately, our new rules will be most successful if and only if broadcasters, advertisers and the creative community embrace a new ethic of enthusiastic pursuit of the goal of teaching kids with television," said FCC Chairman Reed Hundt. "This ethic cannot be commanded or coerced by the commission."

As required by a 1990 law, stations must comply with the children's TV rules as a condition for getting their licenses renewed. Stations that violate the rules would be fined. Stations with a repeated pattern of abuse could lose their licenses, though the FCC rarely takes such action.

The licenses of all the nation's TV stations are up for renewal this year and next. The new children's TV requirement won't immediately be applied to most existing renewal applications; about one-third of them are not due at the FCC until after September 1997, said FCC attorney Julius Genachowski.

For six years, broadcasters, citing constitutional concerns, fought government efforts to impose a programming standard. But the prospect of even tougher regulations in the future persuaded the industry to change course and help write a plan.

The plan was announced on July 29 at a White House meeting with TV industry executives, children's TV advocates, program producers and actors.

FCC Commissioner James Quello, who preferred giving broadcasters more flexibility, worried that the rules "could open the door for future objectionable First Amendment incursions against broadcast speech."

But Vice President Al Gore said the rule "enhances the potential of television to serve the public interest by serving our children."

Are peremptory jury challenges an endangered species?

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court has curtailed the exclusion of potential jurors without explanation, but trial lawyers can still strike someone on a hunch — unless they are in the courtroom of one federal judge.

U.S. District Judge Constance Baker Motley in New York City recently declared peremptory, or automatic, jury challenges unconstitutional and banned them from her trials.

"All peremptory challenges should now be banned as an unnecessary waste of time and an obvious corruption of the judicial process," the 74-year-old judge wrote. She said the tactic, once a venerable tradition, always violates equal-protection rights.

Motley noted Supreme Court rulings that date back to 1986 and outlaw exclusion of would-be jurors based on their race or gender. She said lower courts have failed to eliminate all such discrimination, and added, "It is time to put an end to this charade."

Her decision, now under appeal, flabbergasted many legal experts.

"She's moved the debate over peremptory challenges to a new level," says Duke University law professor Sara Sun Beale. "Her position has a lot of logical force to it, the process has become pretty inefficient and unworkable. But many lawyers, especially criminal defense lawyers, believe such challenges help preserve fairness."

Michael Stout, a Roswell, N.M., attorney who chairs a jury-selection task force for the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, calls Motley's ruling "a manifestation of the frustration experienced by people within the system."

"But we need the safeguard to ensure fairness," Stout says. In theory, peremptory challenges protect against the unfairness of having someone who is less than impartial to serve as a juror.

Judges have the power to exclude potential jurors who might be biased, and lawyers have the right to seek such "for cause" exclusions. But reasonable people can disagree over the likelihood of bias.

Let's say a jury is being selected for a criminal trial in which the defendant is charged with drunken driving. Should a member of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers be allowed on the jury? If the judge says yes, the defendant's lawyer can use a peremptory challenge to exclude that person and dispel any lingering doubts.

There are limits. Federal courts, for example, limit defendants facing most serious criminal charges to 10 peremptory challenges. Prosecutors get six.

There also are costs, such as the public perception that those wealthy enough to hire jury-selection experts can manipulate the trial process.

"Many of us want to hold on to the notion of systematic fairness," Duke's Beale suggests. "Maneuvering for a favorable jury seems to run counter to that."

Gerald Bennett, a University of Florida law professor, says Motley's ruling may someday be the law of the land.

He says so many other things besides race and sex can come under the Supreme Court's equal-protection rubric — such as ethnicity, age, religion, physical disabilities — the justices some day may have to follow Motley's lead and do away with all unexplained exclusions.

"I think the court has been trying to preserve some aspect of peremptory challenges," he says. "The question is: Will it be able to?"

Study: Talk radio listeners more knowledgeable

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Talk radio listeners consume more news from all kinds of outlets, except television, and are more knowledgeable than nonlisteners, according to a study released Thursday.

The study by the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School for Communication also found that the mainstream media reports tend to portray talk radio "superficially and as powerful, pernicious and homogeneous" and news accounts may exaggerate the impact talk show hosts have on politics.

The study differentiated between political talk radio and formats that focus on sports, cars or finance, and it analyzed the content of radio talk shows.

It found 18 percent of adults listen to a call-in political talk show at least twice a week. Seven percent listen to Rush Limbaugh; 4 percent listen to Limbaugh and at least one other host; and 7 percent listen to some other show, either conservative in tone or moderate to liberal.

"Although most shows are conservative in character, there is a broad ideological range on political talk radio," the researchers reported.

A content analysis of 106 hours of Limbaugh's show suggested that mainstream reports falsely lead people to believe talk radio is routinely uncivil and possibly dangerous by "focusing on extreme moments."

It suggested the influence of political talk radio has been overstated.

"By focusing on moments in which talk radio may have mobilized citizens or influenced legislation, but not on those in which it failed to do so, articles on talk radio may exaggerate its impact," the study found.

Kathleen Hall Jamieson, dean of the Annenberg School, said the study, unlike other studies, followed the same group across three surveys.

Researchers conducted an initial random telephone survey of 1,203 people between Feb. 21 and March 5.

Volleyball's best

Spring champions honored by S.R.D.

By DEAN SMITH
 Herald Sports Editor

SANFORD — The City of Sanford Recreation and Parks Department extended the appropriate honors to the three winning teams from the Spring Adult Co-Ed Volleyball Leagues prior to the Fall Adult Co-Ed Volleyball League organizational meeting at the Downtown Youth Center in Sanford City Hall.

Kathy's Baby Shop and Palmetto Avenue Baptist followed up their regular season championships with undefeated sweeps in the post season tournament of the Sanford Recreation Department Spring Recreational Adult Volleyball League, while the regular season champion Hitmen wrapped up a nearly perfect season as they completed a 21-2 campaign by winning the Post Season Tournament of the Spring Power Volleyball League.

Kathy's Baby Shop went 3-0 in the A League Tournament, rolling past Sanford Church of God 15-6, B & M Lawn Service 15-5 and Park Air 15-2. Kathy's Baby Shop ended the season with a 39-5 record.

B & M Lawn Service wound up second with a 2-1 mark with wins over Park Air (15-1) and Sanford Church of God (15-5).

Sanford Church of God claimed third place by beating Park Air, which finished fourth, 15-11.

Members of the Kathy's Baby Shop squad were coach Matt Hibbard, Mark Hibbard, Don Hibbard, Donnie Hibbard, Maria Hibbard, Jenny Broberg, Jaunette Smith and Diane Dowly.

Palmetto Avenue Baptist also finished the season with a 39-5 record after going 4-0 to collect the B League Tournament title.

Palmetto Avenue Baptist topped Beer:30 15-3, the Court Jesters 15-9, Hopkins Meat Packing 15-11 and C.E.S. 15-1.

Hopkins Meat Packing went 3-1 to take second place, getting wins over the Court Jesters (15-9), Beer:30 (15-2) and C.E.S. (15-8).

Getting third, with a 2-2 record, was the Court Jesters. C.J.'s got victories over C.E.S. (15-3) and Beer:30 (15-11).

Beer:30 outduelled C.E.S. 15-4 to claim fourth place with a 1-3 record.

In the quarterfinals of the Power League

Tournament, the Hitmen topped the Spear-chuckers 15-6, 11-15, 15-11; 2 to 9 inches ousted the A Team 15-13, 15-13; the Phenoms knocked out the Power Rangers 15-9, 15-9; and Dig 'Em came from behind to defeat the Young Guns 13-15, 15-11, 15-10.

In the semifinals the Hitmen dumped 2 to 9 inches 15-9, 15-9 and the Phenoms took out Dig 'Em in a hard-fought contest 16-14, 15-10.

The championship finals was also tightly contested, but the Hitmen won in straight games by the identical scores of 15-12, 15-12.

Making up the Hitmen roster were coach Tim Love, Ed Cherry, Ish Perez, Gloria Burke, Steve Long and Sam Moore.

The Recreation Department is currently taking registrations for the Adult Fall Recreational and Power Co-Ed Volleyball Leagues that will be starting in September. The Recreational Leagues (no spiking), both A and B, play on Monday night's, while the Power League plays on Wednesday night's. All action takes place in the Dan Pelham Gymnasium at Sanford Middle School. For more information please call 330-5696.

UCF begins I-A era today

By JOHN BARNHART
 Special to the Herald

ORLANDO — Timing and testing drills for returning football players were conducted at the University of Central Florida Thursday, clearing the way for practice to begin at 7:30 a.m. this morning in preparation for UCF's first season at NCAA Division I-A.

Head coach Gene McDowell and his staff put the players through a series of drills to test quickness, agility and strength in the morning and then ran them on the field to test endurance in the afternoon.

"The overall conditioning of the players appears very good," McDowell said. "I'm also encouraged by the times in the sprints."

"Unfortunately, six or seven guys didn't prepare themselves this summer to report in shape. I'd hate to be one of those guys, because they are going to have to pay the price in this heat the next few weeks in order to get in shape."

Junior receiver Todd Cleveland, of Altamonte Springs, ran the day's quickest time in the 40-yard dash at 4.40, slightly ahead of sophomore cornerback Reginald Dozier, of Deerfield Beach, who ran a 4.41. Cleveland, a Lyman High School graduate, is returning to the lineup this season after missing last year due to academic ineligibility. He earned first-team Sports Network I-AA All-American honors as a kick returner during his freshman year in 1994, returning three kicks for touchdowns.

Sophomore quarterback Daunte Culpepper from Ocala, who came to camp bigger and stronger than last year, bench pressed 205 pounds 21 times, registering the highest total among the skill players. He also ran a 4.73 in the 40 and had a vertical leap of 33 inches.

Freshman fullback Page Seasoma, of Dade City, had an impressive showing during the day, tying senior linebacker Nakia Reddick, of Miami, with 30 repetitions on the bench with 225 pounds, just two shy of the school record.

Seasoma also ran the quickest 40 time among fullbacks at 4.80 and had the second highest vertical leap at 35 inches. Reddick led all linebackers with a 4.55 in the 40 and had a 36 inch vertical leap.

Sophomore tailback Mike Grant, of Jacksonville, was among five players measured to have a vertical leap of 38 inches.

McDowell also filed out his staff for the upcoming season with the announcement of three coaches joining the program: Sean Beckton, Andy Cox and Scott Knowlton.

Beckton, a standout receiver for the Golden Knights from 1987-90, will coach the wide receivers, while

BLAKE ON THE TUBE THIS WEEKEND

CONCENTRATION — Sanford's Jeff Blake works to make the most of his debut in the FootAction NFL Quarterback Challenge at Walt Disney World Resort. The Cincinnati Bengals signal caller was among 12 quarterbacks participating in the test of QB skills that will become an NBC Sports special airing this weekend, Saturday, August 10 and Sunday August 11, at 4 p.m. Eastern time both days. Saturday's showing on WESH 2 will follow the preseason NFL football game between the Baltimore Ravens and New York Giants that starts at 1 p.m. Sunday's show, also on WESH 2, will follow the NFL preseason football game between the Miami Dolphins and Chicago Bears, also starting at 1 p.m.

New Smyrna to host Special race

By TAMMY BRATNER
 Special to the Herald

SANSULA — Tomorrow night New Smyrna Speedway will host the Coca-Cola $1,500 to win 100 Lap Limited Late Model Special. Over 25 drivers from all over the state will compete in this race!

It is the second in a three event series. Chris Lawrence from Orange City won the first race on June 29. Qualifying starts at 6 p.m. and a full night of racing in all divisions begins at 7 p.m. Kids 11-and-Under are free.

Weather was threatening all around the speedway last Saturday night (August 3), but that did not slow the competition as, after a dispute over the Claimer Rule in the Modified race left more than a few upset, the schedule went on without a hitch and an exciting night of racing was enjoyed by all.

With Barbara Pierce on the sideline after he wreck from the week before gave her a couple of days in the hospital, husband Ritch took over and...

behind Tim Laurent in the Sportsman feature. It was the third win in a row for Laurent in his new car.

Rusty Edwards finished third, with Herman Reiss claiming fourth in his new mount. Dee Napier rounded out the top five.

The Bombers have become a family affair with several father and son teams competing. One of the fathers, series points leader Rick Clouser, was the winner over Ron McAloney, Chuck Rush, Steve Daugherty and Ron Adams.

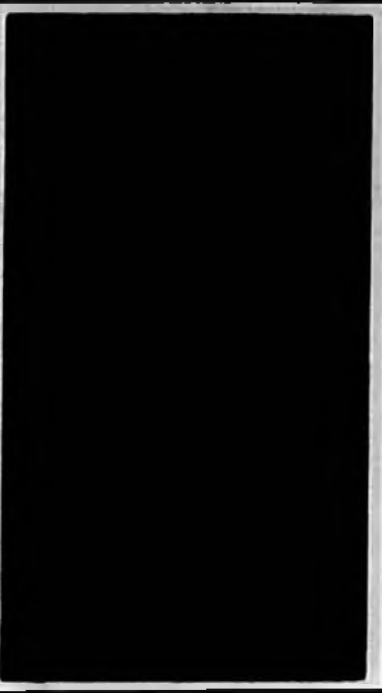

The Modified headliner started with a full field, but a blown engine by one of the competitors made for a lot of excitement and took out several of the cars. But that's racing! Bobby Blake went on to collect the win ahead of Kenny Heckle, Larry Everly and Wayne Heckle... Another family "thing."

A large field was also on hand for the Late Model finale. The event was slowed when Tony Ponder hit the wall head-on going into Turn One and everyone held their breath until he got out of the car relatively

Hotline offers nutrition answers

Can hot dogs cause leukemia? Does tea protect against cancer? Which is healthier for your heart: Margarine or butter?

Many of us are frustrated by confusing nutritional messages. Americans have been bombarded with contradictory information about nutrition and health. People who switched from butter to margarine were bewildered by reports that the "trans" fat in margarine may be more dangerous than the saturated fat in butter. While nutritionists have advised us to eat carbohydrates, especially from the grains food group, the media has reported the pasta and other carbohydrates can be fattening.

Help is just a phone call away. You can receive free, personal answers to your questions about nutrition and health from registered dietitians by calling the toll-free American Institute for Cancer Research (AICR) Nutrition Hotline, 1-800-843-8114. The Hotline operates weekdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Researchers estimate that between 40 and 60 percent of all cancers are linked to our diets. And while we are on the subject of food safety, here is more supporting information on research on plastic vs. wood cutting boards. This is a question that I am frequently asked about.

Plastic Beats Woods for Cutting Board in FDA Study.

A Food and Drug Administration researcher has added further evidence that plastic is better than wood for cutting boards. The information was reported at the general meeting of the American Society for Microbiology by FDA's Dr. Dren Shah.

Dr. Shah found that microorganisms were quickly and easily trapped in porous wood surfaces, not dislodged by rinsing, and survived for prolonged periods under high-moisture conditions. On plastic surfaces, the results were that most of the organisms were removed by rinsing.

"Cleaning cutting surfaces used in food preparation, especially raw animal products such as beef, poultry or seafood, is a critical factor in preventing microbial cross-contamination of foods with organisms such as Escherichia Coli O157:H7, Salmonella and Campylobacter that result in foodborne illness", Dr. Shah said.

The researchers placed colonies of E.coli bacteria on sterilized wood surfaces. They demonstrated that the majority of bacteria were trapped in the wood tissues and were still viable after air drying of up to two hours.

In a similar experiment, an associate placed E.coli on sterilized wood and plastic cutting boards for different periods of time. The boards were then cleaned in an automatic dishwasher at low temperature without detergent. The results were that the vast majority of bacteria were not removed from the wooden surfaces but were removed from plastic.

Give true love a year to develop

Dear Mary: I don't think I really have a problem, but I need to get an outsider's opinion. I have met a man that I think is almost perfect for me. I really never thought it would happen since I have a physical disability; and in school, the only attention I ever got from guys was making fun of me.

Anyhow, I met this guy about four months ago and it was love at first sight. We're planning to get married soon. The only big problem we have is that my family really doesn't like him because they say he tries to control me. I've always been close to my family, but he wants me to just kick them off so the two of us can devote ourselves to each other.

I've tried seeing them when he's at work or busy, but he still doesn't like it. I think he's afraid they'll poison my mind against him, but that will never happen. I'm afraid he will say I have to choose between my family and him, and either way, it would break my heart. How can I get them to give each other another chance?

FAMILY COUNSELOR

Can't Cheese

Dear Can't Cheese: Only you can put yourself into a position of choosing between your family and your lover. If anyone else tries, make it clear that you want both family and a love relationship in your life, and if someone else has a problem with that, they'll have to deal with it in whatever way they need to. Don't be manipulated!

There are a couple other things in your letter that got my attention. You say it was "love at first sight." I think "just at first sight" may be a more accurate description. Lust is fun and exciting, but it has little to do with making a long-term commitment. How can you know how much you like, admire and can trust a person you've only known a few months?

If it's love, your feelings will continue to deepen and strengthen. If it's lust, you'll begin to see little things that you'll want to ignore because they bother you, and you'll start trying to talk yourself out of paying attention to what you see.

Finally, attempts to control their wives or girlfriends, separate them from their families and push for quick marriage are all characteristics commonly seen in men with abusive tendencies. All you have to do to protect yourself from this potential disaster is to promise yourself you will never make a commitment to a man until you've known him at least a year; then pay attention to what you see (not necessarily what you hear) during that year. Good luck.

Home overrun with pets no place for new baby

DEAR ABBY: "Adam" and I have been married for one year. Prior to our marriage, we lived in separate apartments. Adam had two cats, I had three, and together we bought a dog. Now that we're married and living together, the pet population in our household is overwhelming. I have conveyed my frustration about this to my husband many times.

Well, four months ago, Adam decided to get another dog. I strongly objected, but he brought it home anyway, promising to take care of it 100 percent by himself. Instead, he lies on the couch watching TV and pays no attention to the new puppy, which isn't housebroken. He refuses to take either dog for walks, bathe them or clean the dog run. He says he doesn't like them outside because they destroy the yard (which he takes care of).

Meanwhile, our house — which is my responsibility — is being destroyed. I can't relax with all the chasing and romping that goes on.

Abby, I'm now four months pregnant, and I'm concerned about our baby's safety with so many untrained animals around. We both work full time, and lately Adam's been working on weekends, too. I have proposed that we each keep our favorite pet and find homes for the rest, but Adam won't hear of it. Please help me.

PET-PEEVED, MARTINEZ, CALIF.

DEAR PET-PEEVED: Insist that the animals be retrained to live outdoors, or find homes for them before the baby arrives. Your peace of mind and your baby's safety come first.

DEAR ABBY: I am a guy man in my mid-30s. I have known that I am gay for as long as I can remember. It is only recently that I have started to accept it. The catch is that I have a girlfriend.

We have been best friends since we were kids, and have had a serious romantic relationship several times. She is aware of my past struggles in dealing with my sexuality, but she believes we have gotten past it (because I led her to believe that). It was not easy on her before, and I'm sure it won't be easy a second time.

I know she truly loves me and wants to be with me the rest of our lives. I love her, too, and can't imagine her not being a part of my life, but as much as I want to, I cannot make my feelings cross over into the realm of romance — because I'm gay.

Abby, I want to have a house, kids, a station wagon and a family dog. If I stay in this relationship, I'm sure I can have these things, but maybe in time I will have to be content. However, I'm wondering if

ADVICE

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

maybe I should be honest with her — and everyone else. I hesitate because she's been through as much already, and I don't want to lose my best friend.

Abby, how can I tell her without losing her?

LIVING A LIE

DEAR LIVING A LIE: You may be able to tolerate living a lie, but it's unfair to everyone with whom you are involved. Show your girlfriend this letter and tell her that you wrote it.

DEAR ABBY: What do you do about a dog who barks and growls at every visitor who comes to the house?

Every time the doorbell rings, my dog growls viciously at the intruder. She's a Lhasa apso, a breed that originated in Tibet as guard dogs. I dislike scolding her for acting on instinct, but even I have to admit that my dog's bark is very threatening.

My parents are tired of my dog's bad manners, and I don't blame them one bit.

What should I do? DOESN'T NEED A GUARD DOG

DEAR DOESN'T NEED A GUARD DOG: Call a local veterinarian and find out where obedience training is available.

Your library may have a video on obedience training, but with such a high-strung breed, you will probably need a professional to help you train her.

Be persistent with chronic cough

DEAR DR. GOTT: My sister has had a chronic cough for a couple of years. A chest film was negative, and the only time the cough disappears is when she is placed on Phenergan. What's happening and why does the cough persist?

DEAR READER: Cough has many causes, ranging from allergies and post-nasal drip to serious lung disorders and heart failure. Without knowing the cause of your sister's cough, I wouldn't hazard a guess about treatment.

She needs a meticulous examination of her nose, throat and lungs, as well as blood tests and a cardiogram at the very least. Her doctor should be able to perform these analyses.

Is your sister taking a medicine that could cause cough? In particular, ACE inhibitors (drugs used for cardiac problems and hypertension) have been reported to cause a chronic, annoying cough in up to 10 percent of users.

Phenergan, an antihistamine and cough suppressant, may lead to temporary relief — especially if the cough is caused by inhaled allergens (such as pollen, dust and animal dander) — but the medicine really won't get at the cause of a serious and persistent cough.

Ask your sister's doctor for a detailed discussion of what has been done — and what he recommends further — to identify the cause of the problem.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had polymyalgia rheumatica about eight years ago. After being on prednisone for a year, it went away — only to return again now. Can it keep recurring?

DEAR READER: Unfortunately, it can — and usually does. Polymyalgia, a disease of unknown cause, leads to severe muscle pain and stiffness, in conjunction with an elevated sedimentation rate (a blood test). Other symptoms include fever, weight loss, malaise, and depression.

The disorder is common in people over 50. It is diagnosed by muscle biopsy and almost always responds promptly to prednisone (cortisone) therapy. However, acute attacks are usually followed by long periods of remission, only to re-appear without warning. Usually, prednisone is continued until symptoms disappear and the sedimentation rate returns to normal.

Some patients with polymyalgia experience partial visual loss, indicating that the disease has attacked the blood vessels of sight. This is an ominous complication, because blindness can result if the polymyalgia is not treated with prednisone for long periods (a year or more).

Therefore, any patient with polymyalgia who experiences headaches or disruption in vision should immediately bring these symptoms to his or her doctor's attention.

MEDICINE

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had problems with thinning hair and hair loss on the front of my head. Would it help to restore the hair if I take a zinc supplement every day? If zinc helps promote hair growth, will it also make thin hair grow? I've had electrolysis for that and don't want to undergo any more.

DEAR READER: Zinc is a trace mineral necessary for many bodily functions, including hair growth. However, zinc supplements do not cause the hair to grow in a healthy person who has thinning hair, most instances of which are governed by genetic influences.

Other common causes of baldness are scalp disorders (such as fungus infections), underactive thyroid glands and anemia. Also, various chronic diseases, such as lupus and tuberculosis, can lead to hair loss.

Tales built around bridge

By Phillip Alder

Another of those books that you'll either love or dislike has hit the streets. "Short Tall Bridge Stories" was written by Stanley Burkolf with an assist from Zeke Jabbour and Allan Falk. It is available from Zookeeper Publishing for $13.95 p.p. (2010 Cimarron Drive, Okemos, MI 48864-3698; 517-347-4877).

The book contains nine fictional stories. However, in the 180 widely spaced pages you get mainly prose and not much bridge. (There are 26 full deals and seven single-dummy problems.) But I liked the epilogue at the end of each chapter, used for clarification.

Here is a sample of Burkolf's writing style: "Pockmark was standing outside my door, a toothpick dangling in his teeth, one leg crossed insolently over the other. Rocky and I call him 'pockmark' because his face looks like the surface of the moon. The toothpick, alas, was no beauty aid."

This was my favorite deal in the book. I don't know the bidding, but in this auction two hearts is fourth-suit forcing, asking for more information.

Against six spades, West led the club jack. When declarer won in hand with the king and cashed the spade ace, East dropped the queen! Worried that West was still looking at the J-9-8 of spades, South continued with a low spade toward dummy's 10. However, disaster struck when West won with the jack and gave East a club ruff!

Does that play of dropping the spade queen sound fictional to you? Well, Zeke Jabbour found it at the table, defeating the apparently impregnable slam.

Your Birthday
 Saturday, August 10, 1996

In the year ahead you might establish a new friendship with an extremely unusual person. This fascinating individual may help you to completely change your outlook and attitude.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A profitable, secret ambition you've been considering should be pursued in earnest today. The probability of success will be strong. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 1788, Murray Hill Station, New York, NY 10158.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) If you can't accomplish something on your own today, you can still get someone else to do it for you. Do not hesitate to ask for help.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Instead of avoiding challenging developments today, be courageous and meet them head-on. The things you fear will prove to be figments of your imagination.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Today you might find yourself in a position similar to one you did not handle too well recently. Try to be thoughtful, rather than impulsive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Work hand-in-glove with your mate today on a collective endeavor. Worthwhile results can be achieved if you pull together in union.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you use your imagination properly today, you can find a number of alternatives to a dilemma you thought had but one solution.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Today, it will be important to speak for yourself instead of letting surrogates speak for you, especially in regard to your career.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone who has not agreed with you on an important matter can be awayed today if you go back to him or her and restate your position in detail.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It will be time to implement some of the labor-saving steps you've been thinking about recently. You won't know their worth until you try them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Someone whose comments usually bore you might provide you with some valuable information today. Do not jump to conclusions just because of the speaker.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A potentially profitable arrangement that has been on hold for a long time might change unexpectedly today. Benefits will replace liabilities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to be flexible when pursuing an important objective today because you may have to change direction. The new course could meet your expectations.
