

Alaska Oil Only High Court Could Halt Its Flow

Copley News Service
Within a few weeks legislation designed to remove the last known legal barrier to the trans-Alaska oil pipeline will be approved by Congress and go to the White House for President Nixon's expected signature.

Yet those who have fought for years in a bitter struggle with environmentalists groups still fear some last-minute maneuver before the Supreme Court might threaten the $3 billion-plus project to carry two million barrels of North Slope oil a day 800 miles south to the warm water port of Valdez on Alaska's south coast for shipment by tanker to the "lower 48" states.

With an eye on the growing U.S. fuel shortage, the House and Senate have passed measures authorizing the largest privately funded construction project in history.

Each bill carries a key provision so far as pipeline advocates are concerned — exemption of the controversial undertaking from further lawsuits aimed at halting it.

Even so, the project's chief foes, the Wilderness Society, Friends of the Earth and the Environmental Defense Fund, likely will seek some sort of redress from the Supreme Court. Both versions also clear the way for granting a government right-of-way for the pipeline — a point bitterly challenged by environmentalists — and include a declaration that the project complies with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969.

The President long has supported the pipeline project and the Supreme Court contended the pipeline would endanger fish, birds and animals along the route and thus violates the act's provisions. When Congress returns to work next month, House and Senate conferees are expected to agree on a compromise pipeline measure quickly, for the two versions differ only slightly.

The Greek government has acted firmly and swiftly in dealing with the two Arab terrorists who killed three travelers and wounded 55 others in the Athens airport terminal. The absurd attempt by the killers to bargain for safe passage to an Arab country was rejected, and they are in jail charged with willful manslaughter. This incident came at a time when there has been hope that extremists in the Middle East had begun to realize the emptiness of terrorism as a political weapon.

Aside from the provisions exempting the project from continued legal broadsides by environmentalists, the proponents' greatest victory was a congressional decision to reject a proposed alternate route across Canada. The consortium attacked this proposal by trans-Alaska opponents by warning it would take from seven to 10 years to build such a line, three times longer than the Alaskan route, cost three times as much and give Canada 51 per cent control of the project at a time when the United States faces a mounting fuel shortage.

The environmentalists' chief attack on the project was a claim that it would create the peril of damaging oil spills along the Alaskan tundra; threaten wildlife and pose the additional danger of great oil spills along the route of huge tankers carrying the oil from Valdez to West Coast ports.

Dramatics Near End Watergate Enters Dull Phase

COPLEY NEWS SERVICE
America for a long, long time, but a few conclusions are nevertheless possible today. First, and with all due respect to the enthusiasm, dedication and ability of young people. Watergate exhibits the value of experience. Certainly one of the basic causes of the tragedy was that several arrogant young people exercised the authority of the President when they did not have it to exercise. Unfortunately, they discharged that assumed authority over the actions of seniors, dedicated and loyal men — many quite new in their assignments — who were willing to accept it unquestioningly.

Puerto Rico Celebrates 'Adulthood'

By EARL COPELAND JR.
Copley News Service

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico—Puerto Rico has come of age. The Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, defined in Spanish as a freely associated state of U.S. citizens, not a territory or possession, observed its 21st birthday July 25. True, the island, roughly 35 by 100 miles in dimensions, a thousand miles out in the Caribbean, east and south of Florida, was populated when Christopher Columbus discovered it on his second voyage in 1493. But it was, first, a Spanish colony and, after the Spanish-American War, under U.S. rule for over four and a half centuries. As Puerto Ricans generally regard their history, it was not until mid-1952, when their constitution became effective, that they really began to grow up. Most of the credit goes to Puerto Rico's elder statesman, Luis Munoz Marin. He was the island's first popularly elected governor and most likely still would be had he not retired in 1964. Himself the son of the man who had won short-lived autonomy from Spain at the end of the last century, Munoz Marin had long given thought to some sort of relationship with the United States that would retain the economic benefits essential to the island's life and, at the same time, would bypass old arguments about independence or statehood. That came with commonwealth status. Today, islanders choose all candidates for elective office. The commonwealth government closely resembles those of the 50 states. U.S. customs, postal and monetary systems operate just as in any state. But Puerto Ricans cannot vote in U.S. national elections and federal taxes do not apply. The commonwealth's own income taxes, however, are equivalent to U.S. federal levies. Still, the little island, densely populated and lacking natural resources or land for expansion, probably would have been condemned to the leibnizian existence that is the fate of most of the rest of the Caribbean. That is, had it not been for the "Operation Bootstrap" industrialization program that Munoz Marin sponsored. In effect, he compressed half a century or more of economic development into a period of 20 years. By 1960, Puerto Rico's per capita income was the highest in Latin America and it still is. Life expectancy went from 46 years in 1940 to 71. One out of every three of Puerto Rico's 2.9 million people is currently attending school or college. All this is not to say that there are not problems aplenty in Puerto Rico. Political, social and economic difficulties frequently arise. The question of "independence" is one such and it is discussed in the United Nations with considerable heat by such as Communist Cuba. Yet, the Puerto Ricans themselves are not much moved by the idea. In 1967, 15 years after the constitution was approved, an islandwide referendum on status gave commonwealth 60.4 per cent of the vote, statehood, 38.9 per cent, and independence, less than 1 per cent. Puerto Rico's present governor, Rafael Hernandez Colon, was elected in November, 1972, on a commonwealth platform.

Iceberg Water May Help Quench World's Thirst

"The good Lord has stored this water high and in frozen form for man to use as soon as he desperately needs it."
—Capt. Charles W. Thomas: "Ice Is Where You Find It"

By RON WELLS
Copley News Service

The time may not be too far off when coastal residents in Australia, South America and California will gaze out to sea and view icebergs on the horizon. No, this won't be heralding the coming of a new Ice Age. What it will herald is the true age of Aquarius, the Water Bearer. For the first time, water-short nations are casting covetous eyes at a phenomenon of nature which has long been considered useless—the antarctic iceberg. Antarctica annually creates enough icebergs to equal the entire rainfall of the continental United States. Unlike their jagged, unstable counterparts that break off the Greenland ice shelf and menace North Atlantic shipping lanes, the antarctic icebergs resemble gigantic bars of soap—one half to 10 miles long and 600 to 1,000 feet deep. Due to the circular ocean currents in the southerly latitudes, these huge bergs tend to float around in the Antarctic Ocean rather than drift northward. However, bergs have been towed northward. In the late 1800s small icebergs were towed by steamships from Laguna San Rafael, Chile, to arid Callao, Peru, a distance of 2,400 miles, to be melted down for water. The idea of towing icebergs to a port and melting them for freshwater source wasn't seriously repropounded until the early 1950s when Prof. John Isaacs of Scripps Institution of Oceanography, La Jolla, Calif., laid out a plan for towing an average-size 10-billion-ton antarctic berg all the way to Southern California. Isaacs' much publicized, but unpublished, report estimated it would take six oceangoing tugboats generating 80,000 horsepower following the Humboldt Current at least six months to bring a berg up from Antarctica. The cost back in the 1950s was expected to run around a cool $1 million but the berg was expected to produce an even cooler $100 million worth of fresh water. But the iceberg theory is not without controversy. There are presently two published reports on icebergs as a successful source of such a venture. According to W. P. Weeks of the Army's Cold Regions research and Engineering Laboratory and W. J. Campbell of the U.S. Geological Survey, "... the idea is highly attractive when applied to selected locations in the Southern Hemisphere and appears both technologically feasible and economically attractive."

Weeks and Campbell believe that a "super tug" with two-thirds the power of the nuclear aircraft carrier Enterprise could deliver an iceberg to Australia or southern South America with enough water to irrigate more than 6,000 square miles of land. Weeks and Campbell estimate such a berg would be worth more than $1 billion based on the current production costs of a large-scale desalination plant. However, a Rand Corp. study by physicist John Hult and chemical engineer Neil Ostrander believe, like Isaacs, that these huge tabular icebergs can be towed all the way to California. In fact, Hult and Ostrander contend that if one can be towed, why can't several? They envision seagoing ice trains up to 30 miles long containing enough fresh water to fill one-third of the reservoir behind Hoover Dam.

Bride-Elect In Candlelight, Double Ring Ceremony. . . Honor Guest Cheryl D. Chester Bride Of James A. Hunt Jr. At Parties

Mrs. J.M. Leonard and Mrs. Bess Herman recently entertained their great-niece, Cindy Lippincott, with a lingerie shower-bridal luncheon.

The living room and dining room were decorated with a profusion of lovely flowers from the Leonard garden. The hostesses gift to the honoree was a lachia gown.

The luncheon consisted of chicken salad on a lettuce leaf, deviled eggs, cucumbers in sour cream, asparagus with hollandaise sauce and silvered almonds, a relish tray, hot rolls and fruit balls in champagne.

Attending were Miss Lippincott, Mrs. Robert Lippincott, Mrs. Roy Brown, Mrs. Margaret Proctor, Mrs. Floyd Brown, Miss Marcia Kay Lippincott, Mrs. John Rumbley Jr., Mrs. Melvin Dekle, Mrs. Guy Vitale, Mrs. David Leonard of Orange City, Mrs. Frank Voltoline, Mrs. J.F. Heard and the hostesses.

Cindy was entertained at a bridesmaids luncheon by her sister, Marcia Kay Lippincott, who was the maid of honor at the wedding.

Guests gathered at Miss Lippincott's apartment in Spanish Trace then went across to Maison & Jardin in Altamonte Springs for a delightful lunch of each guests choice.

Miss Lippincott's gift to her sister was a pair of inscribed silver champagne goblets.

Mrs. Lippincott gave her daughter a novel gift—a scrapbook of "Love It" cartoons saved by her since her daughter became engaged.

Cindy gave her attendants the dresses they were to wear in the wedding and silver necklaces.

Invited, Mrs. Robert Lippincott, mother of the bride, Mrs. Roy Brown, mother of the groom, Mrs. Margaret Proctor, grandmother of the bride, Mrs. Floyd Brown, grandmother of the groom, Mrs. Melvin Dekle, the bride's godmother, Mrs. Evelyn Proctor and Miss Laine Proctor.

Mr. and Mrs. James Allan Hunt Jr., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E.M. Chester, Lake Mary, and James Allan Hunt Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Allan Hunt Sr., Sanford, exchanged wedding vows, July 27, 1973, at 8 p.m. in Central Baptist Church, Sanford.

Rev. Robert Loy was officiating clergyman at the candlelight, double ring ceremony. Mrs. Penny Housack was organist and Miss Karen Gregory, soloist.

The church sanctuary was decorated with potted palms, basket arrangements of white gladioli, carnations, daisies, baby's breath, fern and jade foliage.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal wedding gown of heirloom lace over taffeta, styled along the empire line featuring long sleeves ending in points at the wrist and satin buttons on the sleeves, at the waistline, and bodice.

Her waist-length multiple layer veil of silk illusion was secured by a headpiece of daisies and tear drops and she carried a Bible topped with a bouquet of white roses, tinted with purple, English Ivy and showers of ribbon streamers.

Miss Karen Doolittle, maid of honor, was attired in a deep lavender gown, styled similar to that of the bride, with puffed sleeves and daisy trim. She carried a tiffany bouquet of daisies, carnations, English Ivy and baby's breath.

Bridesmaid, Miss Faith Gillon's, gown was identical to that of the honor attendant and she carried pink flowers. Both wore picture hats with matching ribbon and daisies on the hatbands.

The groom's father was best man and serving as ushers were William Davis and Ralph Dykes.

The bride's mother wore a long polyester crepe dress with sheer sleeves, silver trim and accessories. The groom's mother chose a rose pink sleeveless dress with lace bodice, matching accessories and both wore white orchid corsages.

Mrs. W.A. Lowe, grandmother of the bride, wore a lavender polyester crepe dress with white accessories and a white carnation corsage.

The reception site was Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table was decorated with arrangements of daisies, and roses and two turtle doves, a gift from the maid of honor.

The three-tiered cake was separated by turtle doves and topped with a miniature bride and groom standing under an arch of white daisies. Mrs. Jack Owens cut and served the cake and pouring were Mrs. R.L. Reeves and Mrs. Eugene Brewer. Terry Cooper was in charge of the rice bags.

For traveling, Mrs. Hunt chose a long shortwaist style navy and white dress with long sleeves and the bouquet from her bridal bouquet. The couple left for a wedding trip to The Plaza, in Daytona Beach.

After September, they will be home in Graceville.

The groom will enroll for his second year at Baptist Bible Institute in Gainesville, where he is studying for the ministry.

Out-of-town guests came from Jacksonville, Orlando, Miami, Longwood and from Atlanta, Ga.

A buffet dinner of dishes prepared by the attending members preceded a short business meeting. Members are planning to attend the District Five meeting at the Langford Hotel in Winter Park, Aug. 19 with Sanford presenting a workshop entitled, "For the Woman Who Wants to Start Her Own Business."

A candlelight ceremony was presented by membership chairman, Cathy Haig, for two new members, Mrs. Kelly Hamrick and Mrs. Thea Whitcomb. Kelly and Thea are manager and owner of the new Vivienne Woodard Cosmopolitan Studio which recently opened in Sanford and they were the first mother-daughter member induction presented by the Sanford Club. Mrs. Val Colbert is sponsor of the group.

Others attending were Mrs. June Foley, Laura Garrett, Jill Gongwer, Nora Gordon, Diana Jarrett, Maria Perez, Elinore Slicer, Karen Westmark, June Woodruff, and guests Lou Williamson, Maureen Siker, Judy Bellamy, Mary Ann Alexander, Jane Gordon and Kathleen Gibb.

Winning Ways Stay Hounds Out To Stay On Top

A winning formula that works the first time, is good enough to use again, reasons Seminole County's most successful big school head coach, Dick Copeland, who brought Lyman High School to a 7-3-1 campaign mark, said he plans to keep the same offensive and defensive style of play that brought his Hounds to their over-2000-point season over Eau Gallie in the Space Bowl, this time with hopes of going even higher.

Copeland took 50 prospective players through their drills Wednesday, as the Longwood school officially opened their pre-season.

With long-distance running for conditioning and more in the morning, "sweat-soak" in the afternoon, the long-time Hound mentor started trimming the fat early. Skull seasons will be added to morning sessions, and the team will move into pads on Aug. 23, the coach revealed.

He intends to utilize the talents of quarterback Bob Costantine and split end Tom Gooch to establish a strong passing game.

Last season Gooch led the Metro Conference in receiving. The rest of the offensive punch should come from running backs Al Cleveland and Terry Travis. At the other end of the line, the defense should be a little different, with nine instead of the traditional four quarters.

The Hounds will be playing in the seventh quarter against Oak Ridge, and the eighth will be a rematch between Lyman and rival Winter Park.

Even though these are exhibition matches that's no reason to believe that the action will be anything less than furious.

Oak Ridge was victimized by Lyman last season by the close margin of 29-27, and Winter Park and Lyman battled to a 14-14 deadlock.

Fearless Football Forecast

Editor's Note: This is the second of two stories on team prospects for the 1973 National Football League.

The experts are watching the Redskins to repeat their conquest of the NFL's National Football Conference this year if Duane Thomas plays like he did for Dallas in 1971 and Larry Brown's performance is anywhere near a carbon copy of 1972.

The experts are gunning to regain their world championship form of 1971 and Coach Tom Landry thinks the signs are encouraging. The Cowboys may have more talent than Landry knows what to do with.

The Vikings had a disappointing 1972 season last year, partly because they could mount only one-sided passing attack despite the return of Fran Tarkenton to the quarterback slot.

At the same time this controversial art, or technique, or whatever it is, gets some support from the medical and dental professions and from many laymen as a practical, everyday psychological tool.

Yet few in the medical or dental profession these days flatly reject hypnosis as under circumstances. As for the practical use of hypnosis, some famous athletes have been helped over rough spots by posthypnotic suggestion. Jackie Jensen, former Boston Red Sox outfielder and before that a Stanford University football and Rose Bowl star, developed a fear of flying that threatened to end his professional baseball career.

Jensen for posthypnotic suggestion to wipe from the athlete's consciousness the old fear of air travel. It worked and helped to "save" a brilliant career. Maury Wills, black ex-Los Angeles Dodger star, developed a fear of sliding at the end of a season when he set a new record for stolen bases. Wills credits his seasons with a hypnotherapist for his ability to dismiss fears of sliding.

Rudy may visited a hypnotherapist for treatment this year to overcome a growing fear that he would be hit by a ball smashed hard through the center. The fear was causing an unconscious flinch which could have been affecting Rudy's pitching form. Rudy says he has overcome the phobia through posthypnotic suggestion.

Fabric Firm Reports Net Loss

BRUNSWICK, Ga.—Land O' Fabrics, Inc. today reported sales of $376,624 for the three months ended March 31 as compared to $336,603 for the same period last year. The company sustained a net loss of $20,540 or $0.08 per share based on 250,514 average shares outstanding. Net income for the three month period last year was $12,340 or $0.05 per share on 248,800 shares.

A.C. Walker, Land O' Fabrics president, said that the decrease in sales could be largely attributed to two factors. Freezing rains and snow storms in February curtailed business in several of the company's large volume stores. Also, Easter was 20 days later this year than last, thereby shifting a portion of the heavy sales associated with that period into April. Walker further reported that gross profit margins improved for the period over last year.

Harold W. Sands, a vice president of The First National Bank of Miami, has been appointed the bank's new London-based European representative. John B. Ogiers, who has held that post for the past two years, will return to Miami and First National.

Per share earnings from operations were $6.2 compared with $4.9 for the same period last year. Net earnings, including realized capital gains, amounted to $2,077,185 as compared with $1,675,819 last year. ## Finance Planning A Corporate Art

By JOHN CUNIFF AP Business Analyst
NEW YORK (AP) — There's more than one kind of money circulating today, as most stockholders are well aware. They may be paid in cash or check, and that's money; and they might receive some of their pay in benefits, and that's another kind.

DEARBARY—Blair Electric Company held its grand opening last week on 17-82 in DeBary. This is the first venture for owning their own store for Mr. and Mrs. Bill Blair, who moved to DeBary in 1971 from Brewster, N.Y.

These incredibly low price-earnings ratios follow reports by GM of one of the best years in its history, by Ford of the best quarter in its history, and by Chrysler of the best April-May-June period — or multiples of current earnings at which these stocks are selling — with the 50s and 60s so common seven years ago among some stocks that offered little but promise.

Blair Electric Opens In DeBary

The store carries toasters, ovens, broilers, baker combinations, can openers, hair dryers, skillets, air conditioning units and fans of all sizes. They also have all items needed for wiring and electrical supplies, vacuum cleaner bags, light bulbs and batteries.

There is also money that comes without instruction on how to use it, and that which comes with advice on how to invest, how to limit tax payments, how to build an estate — in short, money that begets money.

Dining Alone:

Invite Self To Dinner For Company

By TOM HORTON Copley News Service

Renting May Be Answer

"Neither a borrower, nor a lender be" is good advice if you've already got everything you need.

It's simply amazing what a few bucks can rent: everything from tools to televisions, from cribs to crutches.

Resides saving you money, renting can also eliminate certain problems of ownership.

Whatever your needs, it's great to know that when money is tight or desire for ownership small, a phone call can get you a ladder, cotterman, power lawnmower or bicycle.

It's foolish to rent SOME things, however. Though hammers, shovels, and garden tools cost but a buck or two a day, for a week's rental you'd be paying more than once a year.

Think RENTAL if you're asked to do something that might threaten the life of your own equipment.

Rent-all stores aren't the only places to rent your heart's desire.

Even if a store doesn't advertise its rental services, you can ask the manager if he'd be willing to rent what he has.

So when money's depressing and real needs are pressing, don't rant and rave. Rent and save. Done wisely, it's CHEAP BUT GOOD!

enjoy, but one which I so rarely bring about, partly because the structure of dining in public in America is so prejudicial against the man dining alone.

But each time I dine alone, whether at home or in the quiet booth of a little sandwich shop, I am reminded of how enjoyable it can be to dine with no one except yourself, and I vow to have myself to lunch or dinner more regularly, which, of course, I fail to do.

I so completely agree with these remarks by M. P. A. Fisher: "At such times (when dining alone) few men realize that they are dining with themselves. In fact, they try to forget that rather frightening truth. They read the newspaper or turn on the radio if they are at home. More often they dine from themselves to friend-filled clubs, or to the noisiest nearest restaurant, where other lone humans eat crowded together in a hungry, ugly mob and take digestive pills between their hurried courses."

"It is a pity. An occasional meal with himself is very good for Mr. Doe. ... It gives him time to look about him; quiet in which to savor his present mouthful; opportunity to broil his steak a new way or try again those dishes his wife hates."

and result is not that I had anticipated, I preferred it is better than it really is because I don't want to disappoint either myself the cook of myself the guest. It is dining alone in public that demands courage.

You've Come A Long Way, But You've Got Longer Yet

By IRON WELLS Copley News Service

You've come a long way, baby, but baby, you've got a long way to go.

Every day more and more of the 108 million women in the United States enter the work force either out of necessity or the desire to achieve fulfillment outside the domestic confines of the home.

"The place of women in the nation's economic life is one of the important issues of the day," says Alexander B. Towbridge, president of the Conference Board, Inc., of New York City.

Both in principle and law, we are firmly committed to the concept of equality between the sexes — in job opportunities and in pay scale," says Towbridge.

The results of their investigation shed added light on the changing status of women, both in their role as family members, and as members of the economic community.

and often turbulent decades of the post-World War II era.

This generation of women, says Linden and Axel, will be imbued with the "new consciousness."

This coupled with the facts that women have consistently outnumbered men in the population since 1943 and outlive men by some seven years can only mean that it won't be a "man's world" for eternity.

The study points up some interesting trends, including that today's young women are remaining single longer. Less than 40 per cent of women age 20-21 have selected husbands to date.

The study also shows that when women do get married they're having fewer babies. In 1968, the average woman had 1.8 children in the same period.

Among the wide-ranging findings in the study: — Today there are about 15 million females who have had at least some college training — which is more than twice as many as two decades ago.

The median income for a full-time year-round female worker is about 60 per cent of that of the male. In the mid-fifties the figure was 64 per cent, which the study says reflects changes in the characteristics of the female working population and in the occupation mix of the labor force.

some age groups the birthrate has dropped off markedly.

For example, wives who are age 20-24 have had an average of 1.8 babies to date, compared with a comparable figure of 1.3 six years ago.

— Today there are about 15 million females who have had at least some college training — which is more than twice as many as two decades ago.

— The typical housewife spends 57 hours a week caring for family and home. The average workweek in industry is only 40 hours. Women who are holding down a paying job spend more than 40 hours weekly in housekeeping and child care.

— Over the last two and a half decades about half again as many females as males have entered the labor force. In 1972 43 per cent of the adult female population was in the labor force; 20 years ago the ratio was only 34 per cent.

— Fifty per cent of the nation's 60 million families earn $10,000 or more, up from 15 per cent in 1960. While this trend reflects steady wage jumps, it is also due to the increasing numbers of working women.

On the endowment policy, the arithmetic is simple. Harry paid premiums of $350 for 30 years — a total of $10,500. If he takes his $18,000 in cash, a lump sum, his gain is $7,500 — taxable as ordinary income, in the year in which he receives the money.

Stock Rubber Stamps

Save time and labor with these popular, most-used stock stamps. Each stamp is made of heavy, clear acrylic and makes ready, legible impressions on forms and contracts wherever used.

Adirondacks Memories

Gamble took a little longer. He climbed 3,544-foot Mt. Marcy, New York State's highest peak, in 1921, the same year he arrived in Portersville.

Metier Musings

By JOAN COLBY. Copy News Service. I've always envied the lucky studio who, at age 5, has found their metier in life and steadfastly pursue their ambition ending as pianists or off-field wide receivers.

For years, various careers seemed appealing (Hollywood Sex Symbol; Chic Jet-Setter; First President; if equally white or not welcome after dark).

However, I know quite well what I did not want to be. I did not want to be a teacher. Though I have the utmost respect and admiration for the profession, and though I know it's my own character that precludes me from still and all, I did not want to be a teacher.
