Iranian Army Troops

Battle Separatist Rebels

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) - Iranian army troops besieged by Kurdish rebels lobbed mortar shells into rebel positions today in the second day of pitched fighting in the Kurdish city of Sanandaj, reports from the city said. Farlies exports raid the bodies of 26 dead and 155 wounded people were taken to Sanandaj hospitals after the initial outbreak of fighting Monday. Local residents said another 24 died in the fighting.

Ayatoliah Ruhollah Khomeini personally intervened to try to stop the fighting and stressed Iran's Shilite Moslem majority had "no dispute with our Sunni brothers. We are all members of a single nation, a single Koran." This was a reference to Kurdish demands for autonomy based on the fact the Kurdis belong to the Sunni Moslem sect and have a different language and culture.

WASHINGTON (UPI) - China is unhappy about the Taiwan legislation passed by the House and Senate last week - but neither Peking nor the State Department seems to know what to do about it.

The department so far has fended off the Chinese complaint, asserting the legislation does not violate the terms under which the United States recognized the Peking government Dec. 15.

The legislation is now before House-Senate conferees for adjustment of relatively minor differences in the two versions, but the provisions to which Peking objects are virtually locked in, since they were voted by both House and Senate. Chinese Ambassador Chai Zemin recently called on Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to express "grave concern" over the wording.

NATION IN BRIEF

Stock In Anti-Inflation

Program Down, As Profils Up WASHINGTON (UPI) - Normally, the government's quarterly report on corporate profits is a ho-hum affair that gains little, if any, attention outside the world of high finance. Today, that same report could deal the White House a crippling blow to its anti-inflation program. The Commerce Department report was expected to show U.S. companies earned 25 percent to 30 percent more in pre-tax profits during the final three months of last year than they did during the same period of 1977. Alfred Kahn the administration's troubleshooter in the inflation fight, could barely control his anger during a recent speech when he said: "At a time when the president has called on all of us to show restraint and we are asking labor to settle for what looks at the moment like a decline in real income, reports of record-high corporate profits are almost as much of a catastrophe" as the recent sharp surges in wholesale and consumer prices.

Carter Says No To Controls

WASHINGTON (UPI) - President Carter again has ruled out wage and price controls in his fight against inflation and is exploring how much cooperation he can get from Congress in curbing energy consumption.

"We'll let you know later," was all Carter would tell reporters who inquired about his Camp David meeting Monday on energy and inflation. The same aura o secrecy prevailed throughout the White House. Carter scheduled a breakfast meeting with the Democratic congressional leaders today and presumably planned to share with them at least some details of the deliberations of his top-level advisers and Cabinet officers. Carter arrived back at the White House late Monday after a five-day weekend at Camp David. He walked by reporters with a grin and turned aside their questions about energy. Moments later, press secretary Jody Powell criticized "persistent and totally unfounded speculation about wage and price controls. They are not going to happen," he declared.

Special Prosecutor Considered

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Justice Department officials are nearing a decision on whether to appoint a special prosecutor to investigate loans to the Carter peanut business, with one GOP senator contending anything less id like very much like a cover-u Sources said Attorney General Griffin Bell was ready to announce today whether he would hire an independen Watergate.style prosecutor. Robert Price, a Republican who managed Nelson Rockefeller's 1964 presidential campaign, and former housing secretary Carla Hills were among those interviewed about the job. But Bell has yet to indicate firmly that he will remove the Justice Department from the probe of irregularities in loans from Bert Lance's National Bank of Georgia to the Carter family warehouse in Plains, Ga.

Explosion Injures Six Workers

LINDEN, N.J. (UPI) - Six Exxon oil refinery workers escaped serious injury today in a fire and explosion that jolted people sleeping in homes up to four miles away. The fire and explosion in the 90-foot processing unit at the 1.500-acre complex sent flames and smoke hundreds of feet into the night sky. The complex is near the Goethals Bridge, which connects Staten Island and the neighboring city of Elizabeth. At least six of the estimated 100 workers on duty in various parts of the complex were injured, a company spokesman said.

Columbia Test Flight Today

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (UPI) - NASA officials gave the green light for the space shuttle Columbia's test flight today because the rain that had stalled the flight finally gave way to mostly clear skies. The test flight was scenduled for 6:15 a.m., PST and if all went as planned the huge craft would begin its two-day piggyback flight to Florida aborard its 747 mother ship at 10 a.m. PST. NASA spokesman Ralph Jackson said the craft was ready to go and only the stormy weather had been delaying its departure since Sunday.

Jury Selection In Flynt Trial

ATLANTA (UPI) - Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt, crippled by a miper during a Georgia pornography trial last year, hopes "a well-rounded jury" and not a bunch of "diehard Baptists" is selected today to try him on obscenity charges.

"Let's face it - if I get a group of diehard Baptists who are all pushing 60, and go to church every Sunday, I'm in trouble," Flynt said in an interview in his heavily guarded hotel suite Monday night.

"But, if I get convicted, it won't be my first time, and if I have to go to jail, then I'll go to jail. I'm ready to stand up for what I believe in." Flynt faces an 11-count obscenitypeddling indictment that could result in 11 years in prison.

New Transplant Technique

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) - Dr. Donald Kahn, the University of Wisconsin surgeon who gave a 47-year-old indianapolis woman a second heart, says he hopes a new echnique will improve the success of heart transplant operations.

Kahn told a news conference Monday the technique nvolved radiation and bone marrow transplantation in an effort to retard rejection of the new heart.

Ford Retirement Nears

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) - Henry Ford II, master of America's No. 2 automaker, made it official today and announced he will step down from his post by year's end.

Ford, 61, the grandson of the man who invested the reald success him, but ruled out his son, Edsel B. Ford II, at least for the time being. Ford said his son, who is the company's as

After a unanimous city council vote Monday night to institute the rate hike, Mayor Ben Beasley explained that new accounting procedures are responsible for the delay in applying the rate increase.

When the new rates take effect, residents will be charged $3.50 for the first 3,000 gallons used and 50 cents for every housand gallons thereafter. Under the present system the crease. Weasel Words Or Just Enigma?

Now that Congress and the Carter administration have generally agreed to characterize this coun-try's interest in Taiwan's security as a matter of "grave concern," we wish someone could tell us what this language means. We intend no cynicism. The "grave concerns" of one of the world's two superpowers are a serious matter. And this par-ticular expression of policy with respect to China and Taiwan leaves us, and the world, wondering.

Would this or some subsequent administration go to war if Taiwan were invaded by the People's Republic of China? Or, would the United States refrain from intervention but provide arms for Taiwan and, perhaps, break relations with Peking? Might Washington simply deplore an invasion but do nothing to assist Taiwan?

And what if Peking should seek to reduce Taiwan by means short of outright invasion? What guidance do the words "grave concern" provide in the event China attempted to blockade Taiwan's ports or collect tariff tribute from ships carrying Taiwan's imports and exports?

Suppose China should choose to wage economic war against Taiwan by formulating a Chinese version of the Arab boycott against Israel. Does the United States' "grave concern" for Taiwan's security mean we would resist such a boycott? And what precisely constitutes a threat to Taiwan's security?

The language of the Taiwan Enabling Act about to be adopted by congress provides no answers to any of these question. It is, in fact, purposely

Congress intends it as a compromise between the absolute guarantees of the 1953 mutual security treaty abrogated by President Carter and the total abandment that renunciation of the treaty im-

The purpose is to suggest to Peking that the United States retains a continuing interest in Taiwan's well-being while leaving the mainland government face-saving doubts about what the services were project - a weekly publication United States would do if Taiwan were attacked or called Congress Probe that's touted as "the only otherwise subverted.

But by purposely creating such obfuscation, the United States leaves the basic questions of Taiwan's security and the nature of the U.S. commitment to Taiwan unresolved. The security section of the legislation says nothing it can be made to encompass the whole range of options from direct military intervention to abandonment should Peking attack Taiwan.

It may be that this enigmatic language best suits the policy needs of the moment. After all, an invasion of Taiwan is more unlikely for at least the next several years. China's military capabilities are too limited and, in any event. Peking is preoccupied with modernizing its primitive economy and organizing against the real menace of the Soviet Union.

Nevertheless, no one can dismiss the possibility of a future renewal of open hostilities in a Chinese civil war that began more than 40 years ago and remains unfinished today.

Given the complexity of the Taipei diplomatic triangle, a certain ambiguity in the United States' ommitment to preserve Taiwan's security is probably unavoidable. And yet, Americans should perceive with open eyes the potential mischief in leaving so volatile an issue so much in doubt.

This country, no less than Taiwan, must hope that China is never tempted by the haziness of U.S. policy to test Washington's "grave concern."

Wrestling itself rates as one of the more boring spectator sports. It rates right up there with shuffleboard, monopoly and lawn bowling. But add the dimension of a participant with instant charisma, and you have a whole new ball

That's the way Dusty Rhodes hits you when he parades from the locker room and heads for the ring. It wasn't as much the deafening roar which greeted Rhodes that was most apparent Sunday night at Seminole High's gym as much as it was the magnetism - appeal, if you will - which draws fans into his corner.

And Dusty Rhodes has it ... in his every step. He's the Bolivar of jai-jai, the Catapult of greyhound racing and the Pete Rose of baseball.

Personally, I figure wrestling is fixed. No one has told me, but it is an assumption I make. The performances sometimes draw the same raves audiences have for a dinner theater show.

I was ready to leave the gym after the first two matches Sunday night. Seeing Rhodes kept me there, and I had planned to get a glimpse or two, watch him fake a drop kick to the chin and head out and beat the crowd. Coming into the ring with the same gait of a fine stallion, this blond bomber of a man commanded the attention of everyone, even his opponents... who even appeared slightly intimidated by him.

Rhodes' partner in the tagteam match, Steve Keirn, took an awful beating and there wasn't much Dusty could do about it. The Missouri Mauler and Pak Song were worthy opponents. But just when the script apparently called for the bad guys to prevail, Dusty reached back and pulled some extra gusta and saved the day by decking both foes and pinning his man for a come-from-behind

I don't know if he does that all the time for not, but Rhodes has certainly captured the imagination of those rabid wrestling fans who flock to the matches in the Central Florida area every week. Seminole High's athletic department was a

> VIEWPOINT The Draft:

A Fighting Question By DON GRAFF

To draft or not to draft? That is a question which could shortly become a major public issue. It is already being raised seriously in Congress, where House hearings have begun on several proposals to reinstitute either limited conscription or, at a minimum, compulsory registration. There is a good chance that one or more will be reaching the floor for debate within the next few months.

The draft, which for a third of a century was a rite of passage for American males entering adulthood, may now seem like ancient history. But it was not until 1973 that the system was laid

It did not go unmourned. Questions even then were raised as to the wisdom of trading what in theory at least was a citizen's Army for a professional force, the all-volunteer Army which succeeded it. Wouldn't it be too expensive? Wouldn't it have difficulty meeting manpower goals and draw so heavily for recruits on blacks and the economically underprivileged blacks that it would be in effect "Ghettoized?" Although the official stand of the Pentagon is that the volunteer Army is working, many critics today would say that time has provided an an-INCL IN THE OL FUE TOARS: XG2

Indiana, Purdue Settle NIT Wednesday

NEW YORK (UPI) - Indiana and Purdue usually let their hostilities out on the gridiron each year where they compete for the Old Oaken Bucket, but Wednesday night for the first time in history they'll square off for one of college basketball's most prestigious prizes - the National Invitation Tournament championship.

The state and Big Ten Conference rivals reached the championship round by disposing of Alabama and Ohio State. respectively, in Monday night's semifinals at Madison Square Garden.

Purdue, led by 7-foot-1 Joe Barry Carroll's career-high 42 points, crushed Alabama, 87-68, and Indiana staved off Ohio State, 64-55, to set up a third meeting between the two squads this year. The clubs split their previous two games this Bobby Knight, coach of Indiana, expects the game to be as tight as the two earlier ones.

"Carroll is a tremendous offensive player. He has a professional touch. They get the ball into him," said Knight. "Purdue sets up well at both ends of the court. I feel we'll play a lot of zone defense against them.

"But asking that question is like asking Wellington before the Battle of Waterloo what Napoleon was going to do. Don't think Purdue is a oneman team Carroll was just too big and too agile for Alabama. The Crimson Tide stayed with a man-to-man defense throughout the game, but their biggest player was only 6-feet-9 and Carroll acted like a starved wolf going after a lamb chop.

Julio Valdez Gets A Vote

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (UPI) - Of all the rookies I've seen this spring, I like Boston's kid shortstop, Julio Valdez, best.

Don Zimmer, who's more partial, says: "Me, too!" Valdez doesn't merely go after the ball, he hounds it and he covers more ground than a circus tent. The last shortstop I ever saw with the same moves was Marty Marion. Valdez, a rangy 22year-old Dominican, is even built like the former Cardinals' star. He can throw and run and he has hit well enough this spring so that he surprised even Zimmer. "If (Rick) Burleson got hurt tomorrow, Valdez would be my opening day shortstop," says the Red Sox manager, sounding almost exactly the same way the late Fred Hutchinson did in the spring of 1963 when he saw Pete Rose come up as a rookie second baseman with the Reds and said "If I had any guts, I'd open the season with the kid at second base."

Rose did start the season for the Reds at second, but Valdez won't open for the Red Sox at short and it isn't a matter of Zimmer not having the guts. The circumstances are altogether different with Valdez and in all likelihood he'll be sent to Pawtucket, the week or so.

Don Blasingame was the player Pete Rose beat out for the second base job with the Reds 16 years ago, but he wasn't as vital three doubles. Mike Terry to the Reds as Burleson is to the Red Sox.

Last season, Burleson had an off-year, missing 17 games due to an ankle injury right around the All-Star break and alumping to .348 from .363 the year before. For the five seasons he has been with them, though, "The Rooster" frequently has been the glue that has kept the Red Sox together.

A rookie, especially one with only three seasons in pro ball doesn't move a Rick Burleson aside just like that.

Yet, Valdez has looked so good this spring Zimmer thought he ought to get a few things straight with him. The Red Sox manager spoke with Valdez after he connected for three hits and performed flawlessly in the field against the Mets last Thursday and after Joe Torre, the Mets' manager, and Rube Walker, one of their coaches, rayed about the rookie upon seeing him for the first time. Some of the Boston newspapermen began asking Zimmer whether he was going to keep the 6-foot-2, 160-pound Valdez, who started switch-hitting only last year. "I called him into my office Friday morning and I told him I wanted him to play this year, not sit around on the bench." Zimmer says. "I said I wanted him playing in Triple A and he agreed. I told him if Burleson gets injured, I'd bring him right up and stick him in the lineup immediately. That's a strong statement to make to a kid with his limited experience, but I meant every word I said."

Valdez comes from Nizao de Bani in the Dominican Republic and identifies with such Domnician heroes as Manny Mota, Cesar Cedeno, Rico Carty, Nino Espinose and the Alou brothers, Felipe, Jesus and Matty. His English still needs polishing, but he's improving and he understood everything Zimmer had to say to him. "He tells me 'I think you have the ability. If we push you, I think it will hurt you.' I understand what he means," Valdez says.

So pretty soon now, he'll be leaving for Pawtucket and the fans there will be in for a treat watching him glide around the infield and swing the bat with enough power to have caused Reds' Manager John McNamara to move him in as his regular shortstop with Licey in the Dominican League this winter.

I asked Julio whether he came to a big league camp for the first time this spring thinking he could make the ball club and he said

What about Rick Burleson? Burleson is a fine player, Valdes said, but he felt maybe the Red Sox might move him to another position. He didn't say that in an egotistical sense; he simply said it as something he thought might Remember the name -- Julio Valdes. He'll probably be leaving the Red Son soon, but he'll be back for sure.

him a place on the Harlem Globetrotters and world record holder Bunny Levitt says that style should still be taught by basketball coaches. "It is a cardinal sin to shoot below 70 percent and while I don't want to change anyone's style. I'd certainly like to see more underhanded foul shooting," he said. The 62-inch-tall Levitt was forced to master the free throw during his youth or face the prospect of being nixed during pickup games in Chicago. Now living in Ocala, the 65-year-old is still a strong advocate of the underhand

Levitt still holds the AAUsanctioned world's record of 1,956 consecutive free throws when he was in high school

"Players miss free throws because they don't bend their knees or don't follow through on their shot," Levitt said.

"Foul shooting is pure shooting. Most pull on the ball and players also miss because they don't concentrate." He also attributes missed foul shots to an incorrect grip. "You have to hold the ball with the forefinger of your hand on the ball to get a natural spin. You have to develop form, then get confidence, follow through and get lots of practice." That means a minimum of 1,000 foul shots a day.

After playing college basketball for Crane College in Chicago, Levitt's extraordinary ability at the foul line earned him a berth with the Harlem Globetrotters. "I was one of two white guys who played with them," he said. "Abe Saperstein, owner and player, was the other." At halftime, Levitt would shoot 50 free throws at one end of the court and a fan challenging him would do likewise at the other end. If the fan sank more shots than Levitt, he would win $1,000. Levitt never lost.

Arson Checked In Fire

HENDERSON, Ky. (UPI) - Arson investigators are looking through the ruins of two wooden barns where a fire early Monday killed 20 harness horses stabled at the Midwest Harness Track. Most of the horses killed, all of which were stabled in one barn, were worth from $10,000 to $25,000, officials reported.

Bob Jeffers, public information officer at the track, said owners of the horses were attempting to set a financial loss figure late Monday. The arson investigators late Monday sifted through the ruins of the two wooden barns seeking a possible cause of the blaze.

LaSorda Rewriting Book?

VERO BEACH, Fla. (UPI) - Tommy Lasorda, who had to scratch for practically everything he ever got when he was a kid. was talking and at the same time keeping one eye peeled on his office door, which v 's open as it generally is. Each time he spotted one of his Dodger ballplayers walking past, leaving the clubhouse at the end of the day's work, he called "Reggie, c'mon in here, I got something for you," he called out to center-fielder, Reggie Smith who came into the office.

got a T-shirt.

Digging into a huge cardboard box on the floor near his desk, Lasorda pulled out a T-shirt with Frank Sinatra's likeness stenciled on the front. The lettering bordering the likeness said: Frank Sinatra On Tour 1979. Reggie Smith looked at the Tshirt and thanked his manager for

"You're welcome," Lasorda said. "Frank sent them over. He wanted all you guys to have 'em."

Whenever Lasorda spied one of his players, he made sure each

Only Burt Hooton gave him any static when Lasorda tossed him

"What do I want this for, I got plenty of 'em," snapped the really friendly but dour-looking right-hander, flinging the shirt back at Lasorda, who caught it in mid-air. "You haven't got one like THIS one!" the Dodger skipper hollered at Hooton, giving him back the shirt. "I don't care how many you got, you still don't have one like this." Thinking it over, Hooton took the shirt with him.

No other manager takes such good care of his players as Lasorda. His interest in them isn't phony. It's genuine. He knows the first names of the wives of all his ballplayers as well as the names of all their children. Lasorda also can tell you the names of the steady girl friends of his unmarried players. Maybe that doesn't win ball games, but it does show his players Lasorda regards them as more than merely performing objects. Some baseball people believe the Dodgers' players will begin to tire of his motivational efforts and of his perpetual clapping them on the back but Reggie Smith disagrees.

games for Boston.

"Managers aren't supposed to associate too closely with their own ballplayers, according to the old school. That was the stereotype for years and Lasorda has changed all that. He has kidded and joked with us and made something old seem new. He knows where to draw the line, though. If we abuse privileges, he takes measures. But he doesn't punish the whole team for one player. I've been with managers who do that and to me, that's a way of creating tension and animosity among players." Reggie Smith likes Lasorda.

"He's very aggressive," says the Dodger center fielder, "but he's also sensitive and compassionate. You can go into his room and fuss and scream, and you know there won't be any grudges when it's all over. His philosophy is that we, and not he, are the ones who play the game. He tells us 'I need you.' Every player has to know he's needed, wanted and appreciated." Something else Lasorda does with his players is encourage them to cooperate with the media. One time last season after the Dodgers had gotten him back from the Astros, Joe Ferguson became so infuriated over a tough loss to the Reds that he took it out on a TV interviewer...

Lasorda heard about it and the next day he said to Ferguson: "That guy didn't beat us ... he didn't get you out ... he was just doing his job. You wanna punch someone out, go punch Bench, Morgan or a couple of the other Reds. They were the ones who beat us, not the TV guy."

Lasorda would be right there at Ferguson's side if he ever needed help, but the Dodger manager has the right idea when he points out the fruitlessness of players creating an adversary relationship with the media.

"I've always believed in cooperating with the media and I tell ny players they should do the same," Lasorda says. "I just think it's good public relations for the Dodgers and for baseball."

Stanger Holds On

DURHAM, N.C. (UPI) - Bob Stanger's six-stroke lead disintegrated during Monday's final round of the Iron Duke Golf Classic, but he held on to take the individual championship over Oral Roberts' Bryan Norton.

Both had finished with 12-under 211s on the par-71, 6,856 Duke course when Stanger skies to a 77 while Norton fired a 66. IN BRIEF Southern Bell Refunds

To Begin Early April

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - The Public Service Commission expects to be satisfied with a $40.7 million refund being made voluntarily by Southern Bell Telephone, but reserves the right to order additional rebates later. The commission was told by accounting staffer Greg Follensbee Monday Southern Bell will refund $40.7 million beginning April 1, with the average residential customer getting a $12 to $13 credit or check. Commissioners refused to end their investigation of Southern Bell's 1978 earnings. While the $41 million, plus a $14.6 million refund granted last June, probably cover all excess profits, staff needs another two or three weeks to make sure, Follensbee said.

Hawkins OK, Eckerd's Bitter

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - Paula Hawkins isn't bitter because Gov. Bob Graham dropped her from the Public Service Commission, but Jack Eckerd is. Mrs. Hawkins took Graham's decision in stride Monday, saying she is considering other careers, including becoming a consultant in consumer affairs. Eckerd blasted Graham and said Republicans will lead a drive to resurrect the old elected PSC. Graham had "an opportunity to insure vigorous representation for Florida's consumers, but opted instead for business as usual," he said.

Energy-Saving Plan Proposed

TALLAHASSEE (UPI) - While every light in the House committee room burned brightly, legislators and representatives of utilities and merchants proposed a voluntary statewide energy saving plan to forestall mandatory controls.

The plan, authored by Rep. Helen Gordon Davis, D-Tampa, calls for the governor and Legislature to proclaim April 29 as Florida Family Energy Conservation Sunday. Energy-saving standards, adopted for public and private buildings and stores during the 1973-74 crisis, are still being followed in most instances, though State Energy Office spokesman Stan Crowe said the Legislature statutarily exempted itself from the criteria.

Things Looked Bleak 'Til A Hobby Changed Her Life

Herald Staff Writer Things looked bleak for Jo-An Milson, physically and emotionally, until what she thought of as a hobby blossomed into a whole new career that has changed her Jo-An, who lives with her husband, James, at 1701 E. 8th St., Sanford, suffered from polio when she was only 18months-old in Pittsburgh, Pa. and it left her right leg crippled. She did not walk without support until she was 18-yearsold and had to use a brace or crutches. She underwent 15 operations on the leg and joints were removed and the leg stiffed at the knee and ankles to enable her to walk.

She graduated from the University of Pittsburgh and was a cytologist at the Presbyterian Hospital when she met her husband. He was in training there as an anesthetist. They were married and moved to Ohio adopting a son, Scott and daughter, Sandy. The daughter is married and lives in ndiana and Scott, now 19, is a student at Seminole Community College.
