

Commissioner Would Have Public Select New Site

Stenstrom Wants Referendum On City Hall Issue

By AUDIE MURPHY
Herald Staff Writer

Sanford City Commissioner Julian Stenstrom says he thinks the question of locating the new city hall is too important to allow a mere majority of the City Commission to make the decision.

"I believe what we need to do is to gather information on every possible location suitable for a city hall, put them on a ballot, and then let the people decide on the site on which they want it situated. After all, it will be their city hall and their money that will pay for it."

Stenstrom said he arrived at the conclusion that a referendum was needed after talking to a "prominent downtown merchant."

"I thought about it, and became more convinced he was right," Stenstrom said. But he added he has been asked, "what if the people make a mistake?"

Stenstrom said his answer to that question lies in a quote he read in an Atlanta newspaper 25 years ago. He said the front-page item quoted a Florida legislator said: "Only the people have the right to be wrong."

"Incidentally, that statement was made by now Circuit Judge Volie A. Williams Jr.," Stenstrom said. "And I agree with it in this case. Something of this magnitude, a city hall that will serve the city for the next 50 years, is something the people should have a vote on."

Stenstrom said the city commission voted to designate a 14-acre site at trend avenue and Semole Boulevard as the tentative location for the city hall, but since then several local organizations have requested they be allowed to provide input into any final decision.

Two organizations — the Downtown Businessmen's Association and Sanford's Interchange 55 Sarasota Encouragement Association (SISTER) — have flatly endorsed leaving city hall at its present location on Park Avenue.

The Banker's Committee of the Greater Sanford Area Chamber of Commerce has adopted a resolution calling for the city hall site to be left in the Central Business District, and the 14-acre lakefront site, the Chamber of Commerce building site, and others.

County Savings Claimed

5 Officials Back Comptroller Post

Five county department chiefs in a workshop session with county commission today endorsed county sponsored legislation to create a county-appointed comptroller's office to take over bookkeeping functions for county operations from elected Clerk of the Circuit Court Arthur H. Beckwith Jr.

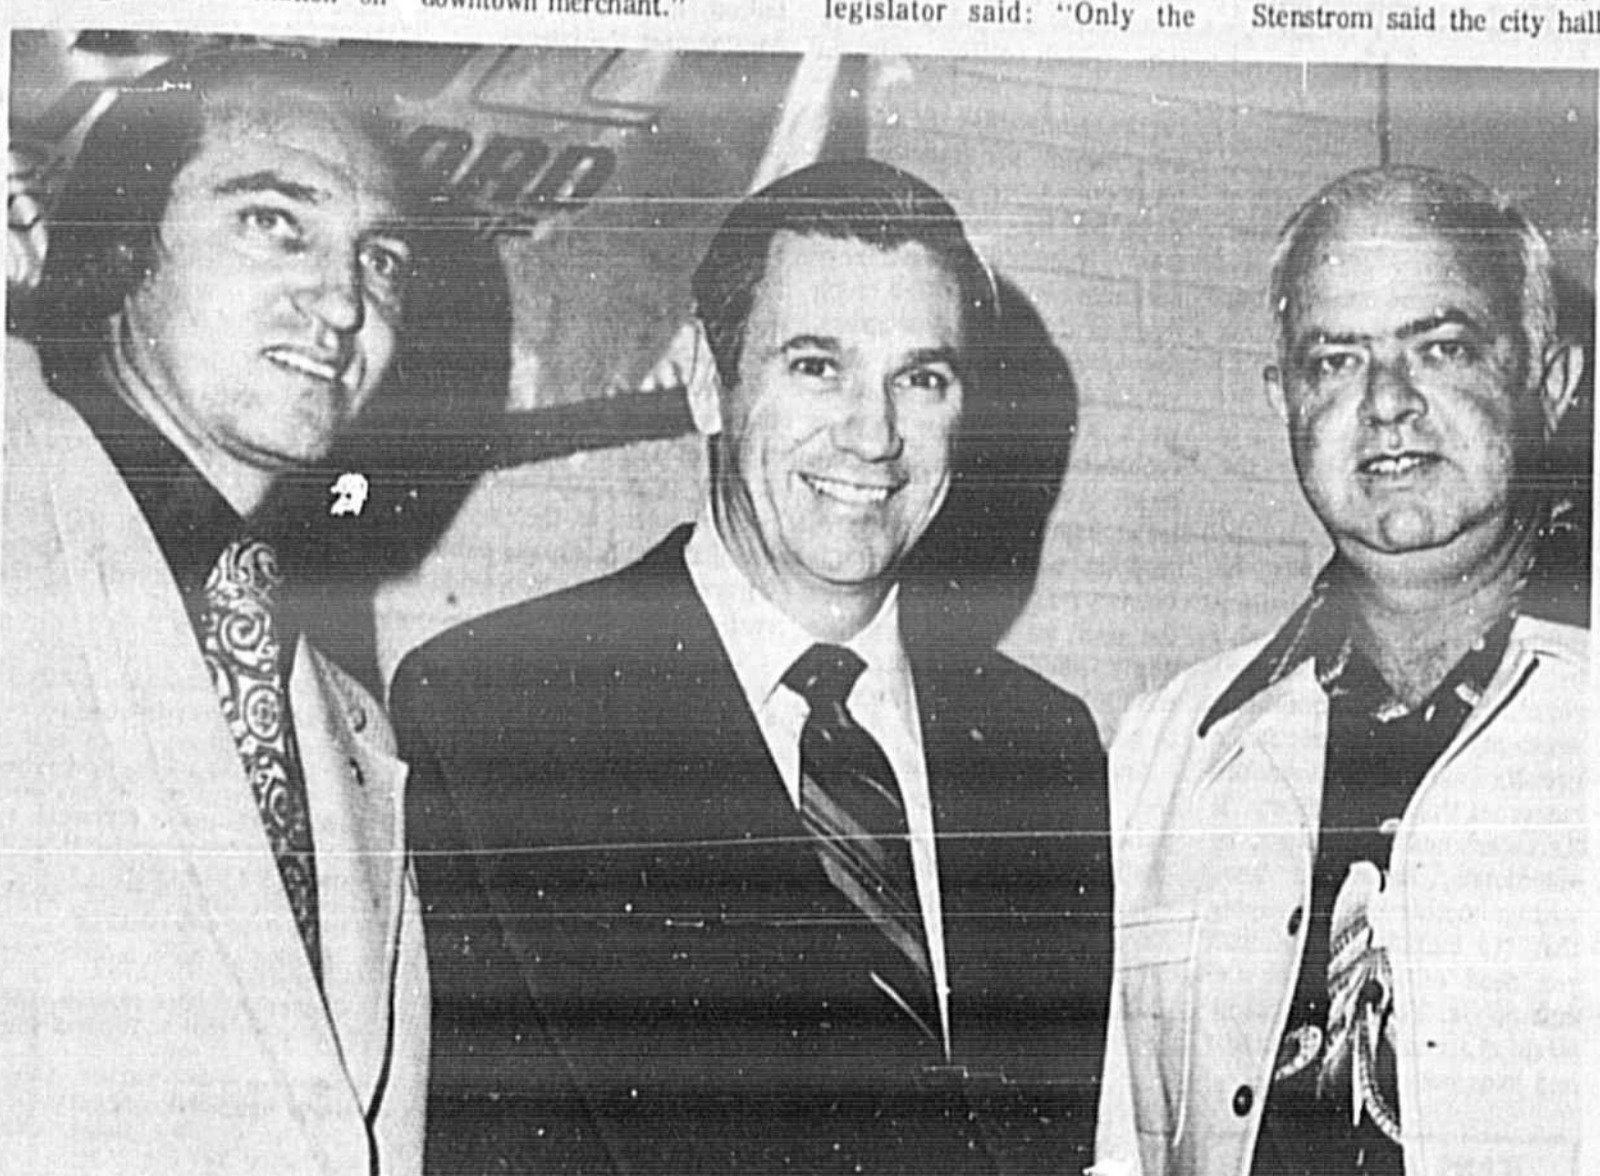

The department heads and the commissioners said creation of the comptroller's office in Seminole County would improve the system by elimination of costly double bookkeeping.

"My main objection to the present procedure is we are keeping two sets of books. And we are not kept informed on a day-to-day basis," said Bill Dale, the county's director of environmental control.

"Can we end this duplication of efforts?" Dale asked. He said if the duplication of record keeping procedures could be ended, it would eliminate the need for two persons in his department who presently are tied to keeping books.

Today's meeting was called by Commissioner Harry Kwiatkowski, who asked department chiefs to submit both pros and cons concerning the controversial law which creates a county comptroller by splitting the duties of Beckwith and Beckwith are scheduled to appear at several public forums to argue their respective positions.

On March 9, Seminole County voters will decide the issue in a referendum. Until that vote, however, the county commission and Beckwith are scheduled to appear at several public forums to argue their respective positions.

Seeks Support For Amendment

Gov. Reubin Askew spent Saturday stumping Seminole County to drum up support for his disclosure amendment to the State Constitution.

Members of the League of Women Voters, Common Cause, and the Sanford Jaycees presented Askew with signed petitions to aid his drive for the 210,577 signatures needed to place the proposed amendment on the November ballot for voter approval.

After a short speech at the Sanford Chamber of Commerce, the governor visited three residences on S. Sanford Avenue, giving away petition forms and urging those who answered the doorbell to sign the forms and mail them back to Tallahassee.

In a speech in Sanford the governor said that "it is the small gatherings like this that produce the greatest number of petitions." About 50 persons attended.

The amendment the governor is supporting would require full financial disclosure by all constitutional officers, public officers and candidates for such offices. This includes

A man police identified as a 25-year-old Seminole County Recreation Department employee was being held in county jail on a drug charge today after an early morning auto and foot chase by Longwood police.

George Mike Benner, 25, of 525 SR-436, Fern Park, was booked at county jail in lieu of $18,000 bond on charges of felony marijuana possession, assault and battery, resisting an officer with violence to his person and escape.

When booked Benner listed his occupation as recreation leader and his employer as Seminole County.

James Vincent Atkinson, on charges of no drivers license, fleeing and attempting to elude police and reckless driving, Atkinson later posted $600 bond at the Longwood police station and was released.

Manning said while Burfield was arresting Atkinson the officer observed what were believed to be seeds and loose marijuana on the seat of the stopped car.

Burfield reported that Benner ran from the scene while the officer was searching the automobile and was released.

Burfield pursued Benner on foot south in the median of U.S. 17-92 for about 100 yards and tackled the suspect.

Police said Benner and Burfield struggled and Burfield

The speaker was introduced by County School Superintendent William P. Lauer. The invocation was given by Rev. Gerald Seaman, Ascension Lutheran Church.

Included on the program was the presentation of a Bicentennial flag for the school by Jack Horner, chairman of the Seminole County Bicentennial Committee, to School Principal Jesse L. Meuse. Meuse introduced special guests.

Ken Bovio, administrative trustee, presented the key to the school and dedication plaque, donated by the Sterling Park Parents' Teacher Association, to Meuse.

Designed by Sanford architect Eoghan Kelley, the school cost over $1 million and opened in September. There are 494 pupils in kindergarten through fifth grade. There are 24 teachers and three members of the administrative staff on the faculty and 10 non-instructional personnel at the school.

Music for the occasion was entered by the Lake Howell High School Band, under the direction of Roland Castro, and the Sterling Park Chorus conducted by Lorraine R. Offer.

PUNXSUTAWNEY, Pa. (AP) - Phil, the groundhog who made Punxsutawney famous, emerged from an electrically heated burrow in subzero weather today and saw his shadow - a sign that winter weather is in store for at least six more weeks.

Phil's forecast came as the sun rose in clear but chilly skies. Although the temperature hovered at minus-10 degrees, members of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club's inner circle watched Phil emerge from hibernation.

According To Candidate McCarthy

Less Personal President Needed

EDITOR'S NOTE: Candidates for the presidential nomination of their parties, and other political leaders, were invited to contribute articles concerning presidential character: what sort of person should be elected President on Nov. 2, 1976, and why? Following is one of these contributions.

By EUGENE J. MCCARTHY We have to move away from the idea of the personalized imperial Presidency. I was saying that as early as 1968, and I had observed the over-personalization of the office of Presidency since President Truman's days.

President Eisenhower overpersonalized it by omission, saying, "I have the power, and I'm delegating it," so that John Foster Dulles ran around the world signing us up anywhere anyone would sign, and a few places where nobody would. Then President Kennedy began a personalization as to style but also in bypassing his cabinet members to go more to his personal staff for advice on public policy.

President Johnson really began manifesting the problem of overpersonalization when he referred to "my Cabinet," "my Vice President," even "my Congress."

President Nixon was the culmination, using the indefinite "we" as if he embodied the nation. He made no distinction between his private capacities and his public office, which led to the use of the FBI, the CIA and the third, the institutionalization of poverty and of unemployment must be ended. The Republicans and the Democrats propose programs of handouts and public service jobs which differ only in amount, not in conception. Both parties are willing to accept, say, seven per cent unemployment. As recently as 1969 three per cent unemployment was considered barely tolerable. We can't stand much more of this kind of progress. Only a lowering of the work week to 35 hours, or of the work week to 30 hours, can begin to rebuild the workers who have been surprised by technological innovation. I've said for some time that this beyond the parties to provide a real alternative.

At this stage, the chances of success for an independent President are one in three, which is fair enough. By November, after the parties have produced their lackluster nominees, our chances of succeeding will be even greater.

Every effort is then made to urge that corporation into the private industry, medical societies, and many others are examples of "so-called" private industries which receive federal subsidies.

SEEDCO ceased to exist in Seminole County, Orr says a total of 38 persons would be eligible for unemployment.

But Orr says 203 of the 295 employees on the SEEDCO staff are "candidates" for the welfare rolls. Orr said he bases these estimates on former job records, education and other factors which are cranked to determine a worker's ability to land a paying job.

So, Orr and his SEEDCO exist to help those who, for one reason or another, are unable to help themselves in a highly competitive society.

"When you establish an institution or business venture, or whatever, that enables people to contribute to the gross national product of this nation, you are contributing to the enrichment of this nation," Orr concludes.

FLORIDA IN BRIEF

Huge Theft Ring Smashed, Vehicles, Planes Recovered

MIAMI (AP) - A massive auto-truck-airplane theft ring has been smashed with the arrests of 30 persons and seizure of 49 stolen vehicles and two aircraft, the FBI says. "This is the biggest vehicle-theft ring case and largest dollar recovery in the Southeastern United States in over 60-year history of the National Auto Theft Bureau," said Clyde E. Byers, southern divisional manager of the bureau, said Sunday in Atlanta. Agents said that the trucks, cars and planes recovered were worth more than $1 million.

Film-Flag Charged

ORLANDO (AP) - Monroe "Doc" Lerman, who himself and his partner, James Hoffa, had been arrested in a alleged film-flag scheme. Orange County Det. William Morris said that Lerman, 45, a paraplegic, was charged with larceny by trick in the amount of $20,000. Morris said that the arrest came Saturday when Lerman sold a $1,000 franchise in a nonexistent medical firm to a Massachusetts man in the presence of an undercover agent.

Stolen Cubs Face Death

JACKSONVILLE (AP) - Two rare tiger cubs stolen from a circus cage they shared with their mother will die if they are not returned to her for nursing, police say. Officers also warned the cubs are capable of causing serious injury to the thieves. "I'm willing to call it even if the person or persons responsible will just tell us where the kittens are," Police Det. O.J. Brown said Sunday after the two unnamed kittens were reported stolen. "Those cubs are going to die unless we get them back to their mother."

Man, Grandchildren Killed

FORT WALTON BEACH (AP) - A smoldering cigarette lit in a reclining chair ignited a sofa that killed a Fort Walton Beach man and his two grandchildren, firemen say. "The number of fire deaths from people smoking in bed or setting a cigarette down on furniture has declined recently," Capt. Woodrow Sweet said. "This was one of those times."

Suspect Shot By Oviedo Officer

Action Reports

Oviedo Police Chief Ken Triplett said today that reserve officer Robert Merchant, of Oviedo, has been suspended from duty pending completion of an investigation by sheriff's detectives into the wounding early Sunday of a fleeing motorist. Triplett, patrolman Bob Fedi and Merchant pursued an auto at speeds reaching 100-miles-an-hour on SR 426 after trying to stop the suspicious vehicle in downtown Oviedo at 2 a.m. Triplett said the officers were on foot in an orange grove off Lake Howell Road at Casselberry when they heard the auto in the grove start up. Fedi had returned to the patrol car, Triplett said, and Merchant was attempting to fire his .357 magnum service tire when he stumbled in loose dirt in the grove. Triplett said a "bullet fragment" hit Horace Lee Davis, 21, of Oviedo, in the left earlobe and Davis was treated and released at Winter Park Hospital. Davis later posted $600 bond on charges of reckless driving, attempting to elude police and possession of a concealed handgun - a butcher knife - and was released from city jail.

And About The Milk ..

Florida Highway Patrol Trooper Walter W. Wolf was going off duty Sunday afternoon and stopping at a south Seminole food store for milk when he almost walked in on a robbery. Wolf, who was accompanied by a Little Food Truck store, 9550 Bear Lake Road, when a small white auto sped from an adjacent grove. Clerk Cynthia Weaver ran out saying she'd just been robbed. Wolf said he was searching a residential area off Bear Lake Road a half mile from the food store when he spotted fresh car tracks leading from a citrus grove. "I found the suspect still in the car about 100 feet inside the grove," Wolf said. Richard Egan Hughes, 19, of Avon Park was booked at Seminole County jail. Three hours after the robbery Trooper Wolf gave reports at the county jail. "I'm going home, but on the way I'm going to stop in and pick up that milk."

Ford's Budget Tests Congress

President Ford has high hopes for his $394.2 billion budget for the 1976-77 fiscal year. Sending it to Congress, he declared that it can represent "a very important turning point for the American people."

The fork in the road which Mr. Ford wants the American people to take would lead away from assumptions that have guided federal spending for too many years. They include the assumption that the problem is so great that a dose of government money can't cure it — that the government can somehow spend the country into prosperity — that deficits and a staggering national debt carry no peril to the economic health of the country.

It is those assumptions which have puffeted up the federal budget in recent years until even political leaders concerned about its size were confessing an inability to keep it under control. Mr. Ford's budget poses the first real test of the national will to lower the expectations of what government can do, and to raise the expectations of what a more balanced blend of public and private endeavor can accomplish. In its 565 pages, it is the tangles of the "new realism" — which Mr. Ford spoke in his State of the Union message.

It is transferring this realism to the 94th Congress that is now the President's task, and the old assumptions are by no means dead on Capitol Hill. Democrats in Congress are already questioning whether there is enough "stimulus" in the budget to avoid a slackening off in economic recovery in 1977. They are disputing Mr. Ford's basic contention that it is the inflationary fiscal policies they have embraced in the past which are jeopardizing our economic growth, and that jobs and prosperity will flow from leaving wealth in the hands of taxpayers.

Before the administration went to work on this budget there were projections that federal spending was heading for a level of $422 billion in 1976-77. The President has trimmed back that increase by $28 billion, and would return that amount to taxpayers in the form of tax cuts. The priorities assigned to different areas of spending are debatable in any proposed budget and will surely stir some vigorous debate in this case. It is clear, however, that this budget overall represents a responsible effort to steer the federal government toward a fiscal policy that makes sense — perhaps even a balanced budget by 1979.

Congress demonstrated last December, when Mr. Ford tried to get a commitment to a budget ceiling, that it is jealous of its prerogatives to decide how much the government should spend. Congress may desire to put its own imprint on the next budget, but if it chooses to veer away from the "turning point" perceived by Mr. Ford, it may find itself marching in a direction the majority of American voters and taxpayers do not want to take.

Spanish Treaty

Henry Kissinger signed a full-fledged treaty with the new government in Madrid recently.

That's good, regardless of the treaty, because it means it will be submitted to the United States Senate for public review of all its terms and conditions. It will not become effective unless and until it is ratified by two-thirds of the senators present.

Spain and the United States have had a 25-year defense relationship but never before a treaty. Up to now, Madrid and Washington have signed executive agreements, not subject to Senate approval, for U. S. military aid to Spain and use of bases on Spanish soil.

This time the White House will submit the terms of its agreement to the Senate. That is the way it should be when long-term agreements of this type are negotiated with foreign nations, binding this country to commitments initially made by the president.

This time the U. S. commitment will be thoroughly understood by the Senate before it is entered into.

BERRY'S WORLD

WASHINGTON — There is startling new evidence that former CIA chief Richard Helms still hasn't learned the lessons of Watergate.

In faraway Iran, where he is now U.S. ambassador, he has been conspiring with the Shah to suppress an anti-Shah newspaper in the United States. It makes no difference to Helms, apparently, that the paper is protected by the U.S. Constitution.

Meanwhile, the Justice Department appears to be maneuvering strangely to save Helms from a perjury rap.

In the spring of 1973, the Shah was preparing for a July trip to the United States, and he let Helms know that he wanted an orderly reception.

"It occurs to us," Helms cabled the State Department, "that GOI (Government of Iran) is putting us on notice and indirectly suggesting that we tidy up as much as possible anti-Shah elements in US to reduce or avoid unwanted incidents or anti-Shah demonstrations during his forthcoming visit to US."

In the same confidential cable, Helms requested passport information about Nassir Afshar, the publisher of a stridently anti-Shah newspaper.

Stewart Turley, chairman of the board of Jack Eckerd Corp., has announced that an agreement in principle has been reached to acquire a group of drug stores presently owned and operated by Webb's Fabulous Pharmacies, Inc.

Webb's pharmacies are located primarily in Central Florida.

Details of the transaction are subject to a definitive agreement presently being negotiated by the two parties.

Consumption of the acquisition is subject to the approval of both board of directors and shareholders of Webb's Fabulous Pharmacies, Inc.

Jack Eckerd Corp., based in Clearwater, presently operates 472 Eckerd Drug Stores in 10 states.

State Rep. Vince Fectel (R-Leesburg) is co-sponsoring a bill in the next session of the Florida Legislature that would make certain burglarizations a capital felony.

The bill stipulates that if a burglar commits or attempts to commit murder, sexual battery, aggravated battery or kidnapping upon any person lawfully within the dwelling place he is attempting to burglarize, the penalty for that crime, if the individual is convicted, could be a life sentence or the death penalty.

Fectel says, "Like everyone else, I'm dismayed and disgusted with the rising crime rate in our country and if potential criminals realize they may face life in prison, or even the death penalty, I believe this realization may deter them from attempting to burglarize a home."

Protesters Display Ignorance

The voices of the demonstrators is once again heard in the land, though it is but the faintest echo of what it was at the height of the Vietnam conflict.

While small contingents of demonstrators have picketed or paraded in various cities against U.S. involvement in Angola, there have been no demonstrations in front of the United Nations — which would probably do good but which might possibly serve to remind the body which country is the real troublemaker in Africa.

As usual, of course, the Soviet Union remains immune from criticism by our native mortals.

Something called "The American Committee on Africa" has urged in newspaper advertisements that Americans "Act Now, Organize, Demonstrate... Tell Congress to cut off all funds for the Angolan intervention."

There once was a "Fair Play for Cuba" committee, organized by admirers of that great human liberator, Fidel Castro. There is today, however, no such thing as a "Fair Play for Angola Committee," despite the fact that some 10,000 Cuban troops under Soviet auspices, are killing Angolans in Angola.

There are any number of reasons why Americans are not about to persuade their country to become embroiled in Angola's civil war, and none of them has anything to do with the inane, outworn and pathetic chants of the demonstrators against American "imperialism."

The Angola protesters are not only whipping a dead horse but that was never even alive.

Congress has pigeonholed the common sense picketing bill, following its veto by President Ford, and if history runs true to form it will not be resurrected during this administration.

From George Washington to Richard Nixon, American presidents cast 2,257 vetoes, and only about six per cent of them were overridden by Congress, says John R. Lee, a political scientist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

Among Lee's other findings, as reported in Human Behavior magazine:

"The use of the veto has been on the increase since the Civil War."

"Democrats use it more than Republicans (Grover Cleveland and Franklin D. Roosevelt have been the biggest veto-wielders)."

"Presidents who are elected with substantial electoral vote majorities use the veto more often than others."

"Congress tends to override vetoes more often when times are bad."

"Also, the study indicates that presidents who spent many years in Congress before rising to the chief executive's office were generally less inclined to veto, perhaps as a result of the respect they gained for that body."

This last bit of veto lore, as well as some of the other statistics, will have to be updated in light of the Ford administration record.

Gerald Ford, a Republican, not only spent 25 years in the House of Representatives, but as our first unelected President had no electoral vote majority at all and certainly has presided over bad times.

Yet in his first full year in office, he used the veto on some 16 bills, only three of which were overridden by Congress.

Loopholes Just Might 'Backfire'

WASHINGTON — The Kissinger-Brezhnev strategic arms limitation proposals the Secretary of State is passing from hand to hand in the administration are incredible. So much so that some among the President's men are advocating postponement of public debate on whatever is finally decided along these lines, if possible, until after November's elections. And most certainly until after the Republican and Democratic nominating conventions.

The delay would be accomplished, according to this scenario, by holding off as long as possible on fine details — so that, it would be late in the year before the projected treaty went to the Senate for ratification.

This mistake is a bone of contention because it can be made to fly long distances at altitudes so low it can sneak under defense radar. Experts say satellite photographs do not provide the information necessary to distinguish between the 375-mile cruise missile which Kissinger and Brezhnev define as non-strategic and which therefore could be built at will — and a 1,000 or 1,100 mile strategic missile.

On paper Perez looks the best. Last time, it took Vincent five minutes to get up after Perez caught him with a right hand. That has to be in Vincent's mind.

In that same battle, Perez took the best Vincent had to offer and came back from near certain defeat to win in impressive fashion. That has to be in Vincent's mind.

Perez has proven himself to be a 16-round fighter, while Vincent has never gone past six rounds. That has to be in Vincent's mind.

And it was Vincent's mind that led him to defeat last year. The man was a better fighter before he ever got into the ring.

He is reported to have come back to his corner after the first round in that battle for the Southern title, and told his handler, Larry Amalano, "I am exhausted. I can never go 10 rounds. I will have to get him out of there as quick as I can get out."

Vincent gave it a good try, but he failed and the result is now history.

This time around Vincent appears to be a different fighter. He looks stronger and healthier. He says he is ready for this fight and if he loses he will have no excuses.

Perez, on the other hand, has not looked good in the gym. He looks drawn. That might be from a cold he has had for several weeks or from a black eye he still has from his last fight. Whatever it is, he doesn't look like the old Taco.

There are rumors, personal problems are plaguing Perez, and if this is true, they could be his undoing.

Decision Or KO In Ninth

If Perez and Vincent were both coming into this fight at 100 per cent it would be a figure Taco would outlast him, and they take a narrow decision or stop him around the ninth.

But if Vincent is not on top of his game and Perez is not up to par, the Sanford fighter could be in for real trouble. Vincent is a deadly puncher who has never gone more than six rounds because he has taken out almost every fighter he has met with just one shot.

He is a fine boxer and he has proven his chin can take it. Yes, this one is a hard fight to figure. Because it will be decided in the minds of both men. The man who is most "up" will come home the winner.

I guess that will be Perez. But, not before he has the toughest fight of his career. Even tougher than the first time. And even tougher than his loss to Mad Dog Ross last December.

NOTES AND QUOTES . . .

Perez did all of his training at the Sports Stadium under the watchful eye of his trainer, Jimmy Williams. . . Vincent's workouts have been kept a secret until last Saturday when Vincent explained the reason for the mystery. "I have been working out at the Waterbury Apartments in Orlando, but the reason I couldn't let anyone know where I was, was because of my sparring partners. My good friend, Chris Cline brought down Mike Baker and Ray Leonard for me to work with, but he asked that I be kept quiet. Mr. and Mrs. Green, over at the apartment house, built us a gym and I am now in the greatest shape of my life thanks to them and Cline and his fighters."

Baker is the current United States junior middleweight champion and Leonard will be our Olympic representative this year in Canada. . . Gene Wells, who normally predicts the winner (exclusively for the Herald) of all the major fights held at the Sports Stadium, will not be available for this weeks battle. Gene will be fighting up in New Mexico, at the same time Vincent squares off against Perez. Wells will be placing his No. 3 ranking in the world on the line when he meets the recent K.O. winner over Glenn Morgan, Vincente Medina. Ross will be on the same card, as he is signed to meet Rubin Rascón in another scheduled 16-rounder. . . A week from Tuesday, Feb. 10, the scene will shift to Miami Beach where Termit Watkins and Eddie Ballard will be on display. Watkins, the undefeated darling of Central Florida, will be in action against an opponent to be named at a later date, while Ballard will face 64, 250-pounder of fury, Al Jones. Ballard is one quietly with the dubious break-in case.

This has led some insiders to wonder whether the department is deliberately trying to abort the Helms prosecution by pursuing the doubtful middleman rather than the stronger perjury charge.

Helms was before a Senate committee in 1973 that the CIA had not given covert support to political factions in Chile and had not engaged in illegal surveillance in the US. The Senate has submitted evidence to the Justice Department which cast him on both counts.

Footnote: Another reason the Justice Department may be reluctant to prosecute Helms, according to published reports, is that he has threatened to take other important officials down with him. Helms reportedly has told intimates that he had briefed others about the CIA's covert operations in Chile, yet they let him go ahead with his denials at the Senate hearings.

Justice Department attorneys have warned that the case against Helms is weak, that the trial will be held before a Virginia jury in the CIA's backyard and that the jury can be expected to be sympathetic toward Helms.

An acquittal could make a sympathetic backlash for Helms, making it difficult to get a conviction on the more serious perjury charges.

Law Ignites A Furor

MINNEAPOLIS — Neither the surgeon general's warning that is compulsorily printed on cigarette packages nowadays, nor the other efforts to warn people about the damage that smoking does to health, have made much of a dent in the cigarette industry.

Signs have appeared of a tiny falling-off in the number of cigarettes smoked a head and 10 million people are said to have quit smoking in the last 5 years, but total consumption in the United States continues up. The anti-tobacco campaigners are not giving up, but they are shifting the emphasis of their efforts from persuading smokers of the folly of their addiction to asserting the rights of non-smokers against them.

Last month six sports fans sued the Louisiana Superdome for allowing smoking and thereby inflicting them with the "involuntary consumption of hazardous fumes."

Some 30 states now have smokers' segregation laws of widely varying severity. By far the most comprehensive is the clean indoor air act in Minnesota. Although the act has been in effect for a long time, its real effect will depend on the implementing regulations, and these are still being vigorously fought over. The act was conceived as a bill of rights for the three out of every four Minnesotans who do not smoke.

Oh, So Close, But SCC Loses, 78-74

There were some long moments in the Seminole County College athletic department today. Not because the basketball team dropped a 78-74 decision to the Raiders, because the Raiders could have won that game so easily.

Introducing In This "Connar" The "Winner" -- Taco Perez

Taco Perez has been installed as an early 94 favorite over Joey Vincent, the pair of junior middleweights collide in the main event Tuesday night at the Orlando Sports Stadium.

But if you are using the odds as the odds in trying to decide which one of the antagonists will win the rubber match — forget it!

The first time around Perez was the "chalk" and the 7-5 favorite went down in defeat in the third round.

The second round Vincent the darling of the "smart money boys," who once again took to the chin when Joey was counted out last August in a fourth round.

This time around: From a neutral corner it is a tough fight to figure.

On paper Perez looks the best. Last time, it took Vincent five minutes to get up after Perez caught him with a right hand. That has to be in Vincent's mind.

In that same battle, Perez took the best Vincent had to offer and came back from near certain defeat to win in impressive fashion. That has to be in Vincent's mind.

Perez has proven himself to be a 16-round fighter, while Vincent has never gone past six rounds. That has to be in Vincent's mind.

And it was Vincent's mind that led him to defeat last year. The man was a better fighter before he ever got into the ring.

He is reported to have come back to his corner after the first round in that battle for the Southern title, and told his handler, Larry Amalano, "I am exhausted. I can never go 10 rounds. I will have to get him out of there as quick as I can get out."

Vincent gave it a good try, but he failed and the result is now history.

This time around Vincent appears to be a different fighter. He looks stronger and healthier. He says he is ready for this fight and if he loses he will have no excuses.

Perez, on the other hand, has not looked good in the gym. He looks drawn. That might be from a cold he has had for several weeks or from a black eye he still has from his last fight. Whatever it is, he doesn't look like the old Taco.

There are rumors, personal problems are plaguing Perez, and if this is true, they could be his undoing.

Decision Or KO In Ninth

If Perez and Vincent were both coming into this fight at 100 per cent it would be a figure Taco would outlast him, and they take a narrow decision or stop him around the ninth.

But if Vincent is not on top of his game and Perez is not up to par, the Sanford fighter could be in for real trouble. Vincent is a deadly puncher who has never gone more than six rounds because he has taken out almost every fighter he has met with just one shot.

He is a fine boxer and he has proven his chin can take it. Yes, this one is a hard fight to figure. Because it will be decided in the minds of both men. The man who is most "up" will come home the winner.

I guess that will be Perez. But, not before he has the toughest fight of his career. Even tougher than the first time. And even tougher than his loss to Mad Dog Ross last December.

NOTES AND QUOTES . . .

Perez did all of his training at the Sports Stadium under the watchful eye of his trainer, Jimmy Williams. . . Vincent's workouts have been kept a secret until last Saturday when Vincent explained the reason for the mystery. "I have been working out at the Waterbury Apartments in Orlando, but the reason I couldn't let anyone know where I was, was because of my sparring partners. My good friend, Chris Cline brought down Mike Baker and Ray Leonard for me to work with, but he asked that I be kept quiet. Mr. and Mrs. Green, over at the apartment house, built us a gym and I am now in the greatest shape of my life thanks to them and Cline and his fighters."

Baker is the current United States junior middleweight champion and Leonard will be our Olympic representative this year in Canada. . . Gene Wells, who normally predicts the winner (exclusively for the Herald) of all the major fights held at the Sports Stadium, will not be available for this weeks battle. Gene will be fighting up in New Mexico, at the same time Vincent squares off against Perez. Wells will be placing his No. 3 ranking in the world on the line when he meets the recent K.O. winner over Glenn Morgan, Vincente Medina. Ross will be on the same card, as he is signed to meet Rubin Rascón in another scheduled 16-rounder. . . A week from Tuesday, Feb. 10, the scene will shift to Miami Beach where Termit Watkins and Eddie Ballard will be on display. Watkins, the undefeated darling of Central Florida, will be in action against an opponent to be named at a later date, while Ballard will face 64, 250-pounder of fury, Al Jones. Ballard is one quietly with the dubious break-in case.

This has led some insiders to wonder whether the department is deliberately trying to abort the Helms prosecution by pursuing the doubtful middleman rather than the stronger perjury charge.
