Benefits reaped from science center support

By VICKI Boscom Herald Staff Writer

ORLANDO - As the Seminole County school board considers a $450 million budget that includes $1 million over five years to the Orlando Science Center, many may wonder what benefits locals may gain from an Orange County facility.

According to school district officials, the science center is the number one destination for students taking field trips. The science center said a full third of their members are from Seminole County. "And, really, we are only a half an hour away at the most," Sondra Quinn, executive director of the Orlando Science Center, said.

The science center is preparing to begin a long range expansion program that is being financed, in small part, by the $1 million from the Seminole County schools.

The new facility, being planned for Loch Haven Park near the current center, will include a 142,000 square foot educational facility: 50,000 square foot of interactive, permanent exhibit space; 8,000 additional exhibit space; as well as 12,000 square feet for classrooms, meeting and assembly areas for educational programs.

Quinn said there would also be a comprehensive teacher training center that could be used for pre-service and inservice training for teachers, a ☐See Science, Page 6A

Candidates agree to pull negative ads

Top GOP gubernatorial hopefuls call off their fued

By ADAM YEOMANS Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE - Three top Republican candidates for governor called off their feud over negative television ads, at least tempo-

Front-runner Jeb Bush and two of his closest competitors agreed Thursday to pull commercials attacking each other. They have been airing in Orlando, Tampa, West Palm Beach and Fort Myers for a week. The state Republican Party chairman said accusations about Bush's business dealings in an ad jointly produced by Insurance Commissioner Tom Gallagher and Secretary of State Jim Smith were inaccurate and violated the party's so-called code of con-

But even after pulling the ads, the candidates were playing political brinkmanship.

Both sides warned each other they had new negative commercials ready to roll if "I have given instructions for this adver-tisement not to be broadcast, and it will not be broadcast without further provocation."

Bush said in a statement.
Smith and Gallagher said they, too, were poised to unveil a new attack on Bush.

"In light of Jeb's decision to pull his attack ad, 'Fair Game' will not be broadcast without further provocation," the candidates said in separate releases.

After reviewing complaints about the ads, state GOP chairman Tom Slade admonished all three candidates and urged them to comply with the code they signed last year to try to prevent negative campaigning.

"Refrain from anything that can be misleading or questionable, even if it is technically permissible," he said in a letter to the candidates Thursday.

Slade said accusations in the Smith-Gallagher ad that Bush borrowed $4 million from a failed savings and loan "leaving taxpayers with the bill" and made "a fortune with a partner who is now an international felon" were inaccurate.

'This ad accuses Jeb Bush of borrowing' and defaulting, and this accusation is not supported by the documentation available to us," Slade said.

Bush's ad saying Smith and Gallagher advocated new taxes could be "easily misinterpreted" but didn't violate the party's conduct code, Slade said. Bush said he was gratified with Slade's

"It seems the 'smoking gun' some claim' to have found a few days ago was just burning political garbage after all," he said. Gallagher 'and Smith said they were disappointed and maintained Bush's business experience was fair game.

"The best defense Jeb's own running mate. Tom Feeney, could muster in defense of Jeb's business practices is that Jeb 'did business with people that turned out later to be deadbeats or crooks," they said.

Flood washes out oyster harvest The bay provides anywhere John Gunter, a shellfish

Hundreds of oyster harvesters will be out of work at least three months in the worst blow to the region's shellfish industry since hurricanes in the mid-1980s.

Unemployment up in July

By DAVE SKIDMORE Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - The nation's unemployment rate edged up to 6.1 percent in July and job growth - while still healthy was a bit more subdued than in recent months, the government said today.

July's rate, reported by the Labor Department, compares with 6 percent in both June and May. Economists were expecting the slight uptick and do not believe it signals a significant deterioration in the economy,

The report hasn't changed their belief that the Federal Reserve is preparing to nudge interest rates higher, either this month or next, in an attempt to slow economic growth and anuff out any potential increase in inflation.

The unemployment rate is derived from a survey of households. Meanwhile, a separate survey of employers' payrolls painted a somewhat brighter picture.

The economy created 259,000 new jobs in July, about 60,000 more than analysts forecast, after producing 356,000 jobs in

On killing turtles

I was appalled when I read the article about the sea turtles, "Sea turtles now nesting, beachgoers enraged over restrictions." I'm sick and tired of tree-nuggers and Bambi-ites," George Lock, a member of the Beach Trust Commission, said. I want to know who in heaven's name put an anti-environmentalist on an advisory board and they had the stall to call it a beach trust. What are anti-environmentalist on an advisory board and then had the galf to call it a beach trust. What are we trusting them to do with the beach? Destroy it?

Every time I begin to think we might, as a species, survive a few hundred more years. I read something like this. How can we survive when so few people have the intelligence to grasp one basic fact? And that fact is that we are part of one eco-system. You can't destroy any part of that eco-system without damaging the whole.

I understand the need for jobs. But short-term profits without long term understanding of their effects is what has created half the problems we have. I can survive without a job. I cannot survive without air to breathe, water to drink and food to cat.

For those greedy, unintelligent, shortsighted people who don't want to do everything to save the turtle just because it's the ethical thing to do, look at it from your own perspective. We know more about turtles now than we use to, but certainly not as much as there is to know. Maybe, one day, if we save the turtles, they'll save us. Maybe studying them will give us a clue toward the cure for cancer or AIDS. Or maybe we'll learn how to stay healthier longer. And if you think that sounds like science fiction, so did studying molds a hundred years ago.

If Mr. Locke and his kind have their way, one day further. What will be say to his there'll be no more turtles. What will he say to his grandchildren and his great-grandchildren then? We killed the turtles for a few extra bucks.

A great American family gathers

HAMPTON, VA. — A special "collector's edition" of Life magazine last June was dedicated to "the heart of the American family."

Because fame was one of the determinants of diversity inclusion, Tom Brokaw, Natalie Cole, Alan Dershowitz, Carl Lewis, Mariec Matlin and their families were profiled, though they don't quite typify the average American family.

But neither does the myth of the black family, which is afflicted by disproportionate crimes, drugs, school drop-outs, bables born out of wedlock and youthful self-annihilations. This is the type of black family with which the media is obsessed. Less tantalizing is the growing number of black families who are celebrating their heritage at annual reunions. This past weekend, one of those black families featured in the Life magazine collector's edition

— the Davises of Hampton, Va. — celebrated a majestic heritage that is as American as the Stars and Stripes. "We're not just an American family," softly explained Thulani Davis, the prominent novelist, playwright and essayist. "We are a great

Why health care plan won't work

As the ongoing debate over health care reform languishes in the sweltering heat of a Florida summer, everyone involved in the process should use this time to refocus on the millions of patients who will be directly affected by whatever legislation is enacted.

Like it or not, it seems that some lawmakers have allowed their concern for the welfare of Florida's patients to play second fiddle to the politics surrounding this volatile issue. In the end, it will be the patients, those millions of "health care consumers," who ultimately will bear the brunt of attempts to reform the bear the brunt of attempts to reform the

As an outside observer sifts through the reams of rhetoric swirling about this critical debate, it becomes increasingly clear that someone is going to come out on the short end of the stick — and the smart money says it will not be the big insurance companies or the government bureaucracy.

If you guessed that patients will be left holding the short end of the stick, give yourself a dubious pat on the back. dubious pat on the back. Actually, it should come as no surprise to anyone who now enjoys the unprecedented benefits of a medical system which is the envy of the world that "reform" of the system may eventually deform quality and, strangely enough, access to care.

If the reformers have their way, patients face the unhappy prospect of being herded into enormous managed care entities whose enormous managed care entities whose primary interest is and always will be the financial bottom line. The doctor-patient relationship will become a relic of the past because "right sixing" the system will demand it.

What is happening to the practice of medicine in Florida and elsewhere is the byproduct of a systematic, calculated attempt by so-called social reformers to disrupt and potentially destroy medical delivery as we know it. Once the doctor-patient relationship is curtailed or eliminated, the health care system will become infused with "third party" decision makers. The predictable and tragic result for patients is obvious.

Physicians deal directly with patients and have always been their traditional advocates. We are trained to act in the best interest of our patients — not of insurance companies or patients - not of insurance companies or patients — not of insurance companies or government bureaucrata. Is it any wonder our patients tell us they will not accept a health care system in which they are shuffled around like cattle and deprived of the chance to choose their doctors?

We should never forget that the free enterprise system has, to a great extent, been the catalyst that created the American health care system. Once "reforms" are put into place, the system will determine how care is delivered, not patients and their physicians.

It is no coincidence that people from countries around the world travel to America for medical care. They know who practices state-of-the-art medicine. And whether or not they admit it, they also know that the free enterprise system made it possible.

Whatever "crisis" may exist in the health care delivery system today, it will pale in comparison to the true crisis that wil result when patients are cut off from their physicians.

From the beginning of the health care debate physicians have struggled against the prophets of doom, namely large insurance and managed care interests and their allies in government, who appear resolute in their quest to dismantle our present system of health care.

Allowing patients the basic freedom to see the doctor of their choice will become unacceptable under their new and "improved" system! Giving patients the right to choose the health care plan best suited to their individual and family needs borders on heresy to these interests.

As summer's searing heat intensifies over Tallahasee. Iswmakers should remind themselves that their faithful constituents are depending on them to craft health care reform legislation that puts them first. After all, what possible good is reform if it is used as a smoke screen to conceal a power grab by special interests whose only true interests are their financial bottom line and distancing patients from their doctors.

Money falls from star to candidate

WASHINGTON - Actor Dustin Hoffman may be the "Rain Man," but Sen. Bill Bradley. D-N.J., recently starred as the "Rainmaker."

Hoffman, who won an Academy Award for his part in "Rain Man," is playing a cameo role in this year's Idaho governor's race. Hoffman recently donated $50,000 to Democrat Larry Echohawk, who's trying to become the nation's first American Indian governor.

But Hoffman was just following a script produced by Bradley.

Bradley spokesman Eric Hauser acknowledged that in a phone conversation Bradley
""suggested" that
Hoffman make the contribution to Echohawk. "They talk on a fairly regular basis," Hauser told us. "During the course of a conversa-tion this came up."

Hauser says it was routine contact between long-time friends and insists that Bradley never broached a dollar flature with Hoffman.

Bradley joined several Democratic luminaries — including President Clinton and Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii — at the April 28 fund-raiser for Echohawk, which was timed with a major tribal leaders' conference at the White House. Tribes have shown tepid support for Echohawk because he's pro-life and is against casine-style gaming on Indian reservations.

One knowledgeable source said Inouye, who is chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, has had trouble inducing tribes to contribute to Echohawk's campaign - and something was required to keep the Washington event from "embarrassing" Democratic leaders. On May 7, a personal note from Hoffman arrived at Echohawk's headquarters with a $50,000 check -roughly 10 percent of Echohawk's entire war

Hauser denies any connection between the disappointing fund-raiser and the Hoffman check. But he failed to explain why Bradley would be shaking the Hollywood money tree for an obscure Idaho Democrat. Bradley has refrained from fund raising for most Democrate because "he doesn't involve himself in primary battles," said Hauser, who seemed surprised when informed that Echohawk was in the midst of a primary battle at the time of the Hoffman contribu-

Hoffman, who did not return our phone calls, has previously said he was impressed with Echonawk's credentials. His contribution was legal because Idaho has no limit on individual contributions to state races. But the Bradiey-Hollman connection dramatizes why Congress can't come to a consensus on campaign finance reform: Thanks to their star appeal, senstors like Bradley don't need political action committees to the same extent as their House counterparts. Senators can count on six-figure fund-raisers in Hollywood, which is why they can tolerate PAC restrictions.

Few have benefited more from Hollywood largess than Bradley. An analysis by the Los Angeles Times found that Bradley raised Angeles Times jound that bradley raised $500,090 from contributors in Los Angeles (primarily Hollywood) in the 1990 election cycle, the highest among out-of-state politicians. Meanwhile, Bradley is stumping for public financing of campaigns to "bring real change to Washington and clean up the political process."

Population levels of largemouth bass have dropped dramatically in the 30,000-acre lake near Orlando over several decades. Scientists have also documented an almost 90 percent reduction in the number of alligators living in the lake.

All this is leading scientists to believe the lake may be more contaminated than previously thought.

There was only one problem: Where would she find the money to cover what financial aid and her savings couldn't?

That's when Young-Edgar found some unexpected allies. Community leaders impressed with her gumption set up a scholarship fund and organized a raffle to help her realize her dream.

The fund has raised about $5,000 so far — or about $2,000 short of what Young-Edgar needs for room, board and tuition for her freahman year.

"We felt that we should do something for her," says Pat Jones, an administrator of the Richmond Housing Authority, which oversees the project where Young-Edgar lives with her mother.

Sanford Finance Director Carolyn Small says she does not foresee the opening of the Seminole Towne Center Mall in September of 1995 as any immediate increase in taxable income for the city.

"They won't open until late next year," she said, "and any taxation will probably be based on an early opening figure, so the first tax income from the mall may be smaller than what we would normally expect."

Small predicted taxes from the mall development would not begin to come in to the city until at least November of 1996.

Sanford City Manager Bill Simmons commented, "Certainly, I would like to reduce the millage rate. No one likes to be listed as having the highest rate In the county, but at the present time, we have no alternative."

While circuit court judges who preside over criminal cases take their annual two-week summer vacation, workers are giving some of the courtrooms, judges chambers, and offices in the south wing, along with the courthouse halls a facelift.

Before taxpayers begin to bristle about the $155,000 price tag, court officials are quick to note the project is not being funded by ad valorem taxes.

Edna H. Johnson, senior deputy court administrator, explained the money comes from the court facilities fund. A portion of the filing fees charged on each court case filed in Seminole County is set aside for the court facilities fund. About $240,000 a year goes into the court facilities fund. $120,000 from circuit court filing fees and $120,000 from county court filing fees, Johnson said. The court facilities fund is used for the maintenance and upkeep of the courthouse.

"I think the maintenance people take good care of the building." Johnson said, noting ours is one of the best around. "The courthouse has to have a atmosphere when you come in."

Old, worn, stained carpeting. holes in drapes and broken juror chairs signaled it was time to update the facilities.

"This will be, in effect, a regional science school that serves Seminole, Osceola and Orange counties as well as visi-tors from other areas," she said,

School district officials believe they are making a strong in-vestment in the future by con-tributing to the science center

"I believe we are using our resources wisely." Dr. Marion Dailey, executive director of in-structional services, said. "I believe the science center will give all our students access to top-notch resources and facili-

In courtrooms A. B and C the carpeting is original and has been in place 21 years. Carpeting in some of the office areas was replaced eight years ago. Johnson said, but is being replaced because it is in very high traffic areas.

Purchasing through a state contract, Johnson said, the county saved money on the $97,468 price tag for the carpeting. Chairs in the jury boxes and for court personnel are being replaced and chairs in the speciator sections are being recovered. Vertical blinds will replace worn drapes.

'Moulin Rouge' (red) carpeting will cover the floors in the courtrooms, accented by blue chairs. 'Griffin Nocturne', shades of blue with a hint of burgundy will replace the dark blueishpurple upholstery in the visitors section.

Johnson said it was less expensive to replace the court personnel chairs than to recover

"We wanted to make the courts look uniform." she explained. The old brown chairs will be used in other county offices. However, the juror chairs which were bolted to the floor will be declared surplus. Several of those seats are broken and beyond further repaired.

Johnson also noted that by making the court furniture uniform, the movable chairs could be taken from one court to another should the need arise.

The worn tweed black, gray and white carpet covering the stairs, hallways and lobby areas is being replaced with a pattern called 'Chain Reaction' described by Johnson as a multicolored blue with a hint of burgundy. A blue carpet called 'Chesapeake' is being installed in the judges' and court personnel offices.

Employees and workers are putting office equipment and furniture back in place in the judges offices this week. Work on courtrooms A and E which are county courts on the first floor begins next week.

Besides the carpeting, Johnson listed the following break-down of the project's costs: $5,299 wallpaper and installation: $13,000 vertical blinds: $852 recovering benches: $11,236 recover spectator scat-ing chairs; $26,967 Jury and court personnel chairs.

The chairman of the HBA interview panel for Seminole County candidates said late-comers may well be left out, but that can't be helped.

'Certainly, that's something that could always happen," said Mike Bass, pesident of JMB Financial Group. "That's the risk you take by entering the race late." Bass said.

Last week, the politically-powerful HBA announced their endorsement of incumbent Democrat Carlton Henley for the primary, over former Longwood mayor Adrienne Perry and Webster. The District 2 Democratic winner will face former Lake Mary mayor Randall Morris in November.

The HBA endorsed former Casselberry mayor Andrea Dennison in both the District 4 Republican primary and against incumbent Democrat Larry Furlong.

For the District 2 endorsements, only Henley and Perry were interviewed, said Beth McGee, HBA governmental affairs director. The Democratic primary winner and Morris will be interviewed prior to November. In District 4, only the Republicans were interviewed since Furiong faces no challenges (1997)

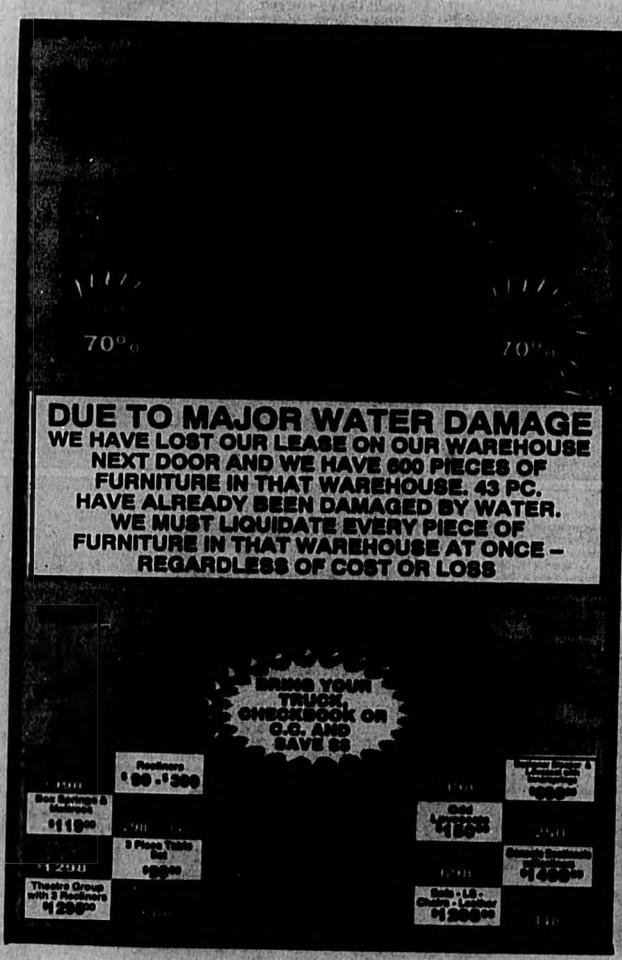

McGee said Webster wasn't interviewed because he wasn't an announced candidate in June. HBA members interview candidates in Seminole and Orange County races and some statewide races, so they can't wait until qualifying ends to begin the time-consuming interviews. McGee said interview panels are comprised of members, business persons who take time away from their jobs to participate.

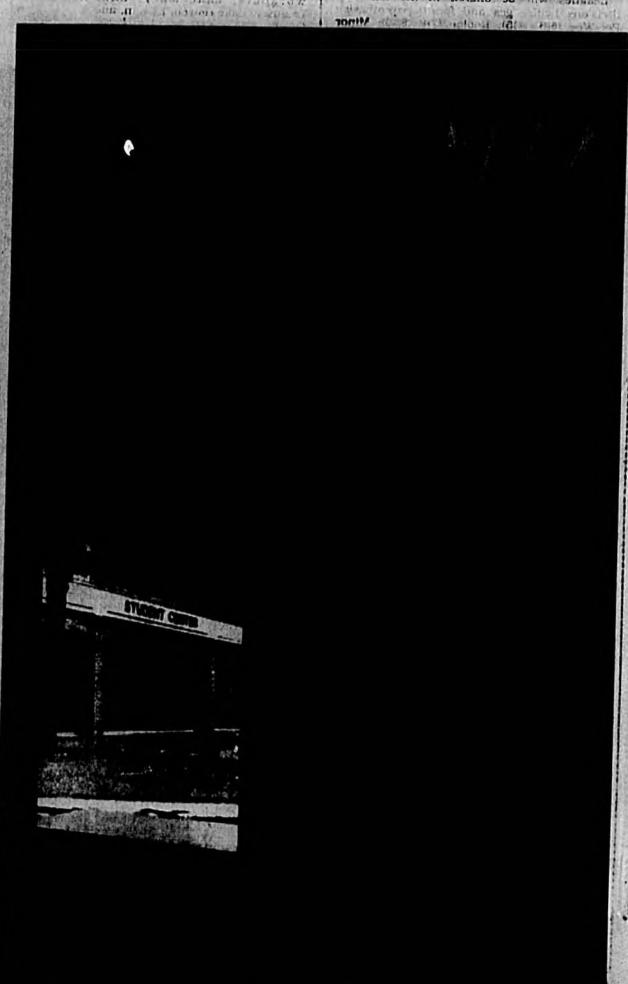

Endorsement decisions are made by the full 15-member HBA Board of Trustees, the group's directors, McGee said.

Panel chairman Bass said the interviews were held before the candidate qualifying week because assuring volunteer participation is sometimes difficult.

"In past years, we've spent days interviewing and it was difficult to get people to show up," said Bass, owner of JMB Financial Group. "We decided to have them in one day this year to assure we had a full attendance."

Base said five members served on the Seminole County panel. In past years, some candidates complained only two or three members sat on the

AP poll: Fans irate over looming strike to start Friday, Sept. 2.

NEW YORK - Most baseball fans are really angry that a dispute between owners and players could end this year's season, and they say both sides are too money-hungry to care about the game.

A whopping 78 percent of respondents in an Associated Press poll blame greed for the dispute. Pifty-two percent say both sides are too greedy. 20 percent say it's the players who are getting carried away and 6 percent fault the owners.

"If I were a fan, my first reaction would be, 'it's a bunch of millionaires fighting each other," said Richard Ravitch, who represents the owners in negotiations. "Then, if there's a strike, I'd sit down and learn more. I know I'm biased, but I think I'd find nothing unreasonable in what we're asking."

But union head Donald Fehr said the notion that players and owners are both millionaires is silly. They have vastly more money. They have corporate entities. They are vastly wealthier," Fehr said. "I think " it's clear to everyone that this is not a fight of the players' choosing."

Only a third of the fans say they're not particularly annoyed by the possible interruption of the season. Of the miffed majority, 17 percent describe themselves as annoyed but resigned to a strike, 33 percent are very annoyed but not enough to stop following baseball, and 14 percent are annoyed enough to give up on the sport. Baseball fans split about evenly on which side they support, with 37 percent backing players and 40 percent the owners. Of the rest, 16 percent back neither side and 7 percent are uncertain.

The owners claim that teams in smaller cities are losing money, and they want to cap player salaries, which averaged $1.89 million on opening day.

Mast, Hoosier make history with first Brickyard pole

AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS - Rick Mast was too concerned with making hard left turns through indy's flat, narrow corners to think about history.

This was no Talladega or Michigan or Daytona: NASCAR's high-banked ovals with sweeping curves are nothing like indy. You go like 190 or whatever it is down the straightsway and you make a 90-degree turn to the left. ... This baby looks like a square at the end of the turn," Mast said. "And it really scares you; it does me." Apparently not too much, though.

Winning a pole position for only the second time in his Winston Cup career, Mast's lap at 172.414 mph was the fastest among 70 drivers who made qualification attempts Thursday for the inaugural Brickyard 400, the first non-indy race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway in more than 80 years.

The top 20 qualifiers were locked in place, leaving the next 20 with a big decision today whether to gamble that their speeds would hold up or to try again.

For everyone else, there was no choice if they hoped to get into Saturday's 40-car field for shares of a stock car record $3.2 million purse. Mast, 37, who has never won a race in 141

Speedway is unlike any other track.

"You know you've got to stay wide open. You can't hit the brakes; you've got to get down there and get out of the gas and turn," he said. "And everything's supposed to work right; sometimes it does and sometimes it doesn't.

The speeds - by Indy standards - were hardly dazzling. Roberto Guerrero's Indy record qualification lap two years ago was some 60 mph faster. But Mast was working just as hard. "You've got to be real aggressive with the accelerator, real aggressive with the steering wheel," he said. "You've got to use all the race track getting in and out of the turns. That's going to make a real interesting race, I think." Six-time NASCAR Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt was the second-fastest qualifier at 171.726 mph. Jeff Gordon, last year's NASCAR rookie of the year, celebrated his 23rd birthday with the third-fastest lap at 171.125. Four others topped 170, with Geoff Bodine at 170.982, Bobby Labonte at 170.794, Bill Elliott at 170.338 and Brett Bodine at 170.084.

Mast, who earned $50,000 for winning the pole, gave Hoosier tires a victory over the more established Goodyear. In fact, the warring tire companies split the top four spots, with Earnhardt and Gordon on Goodyears and Bodine The slowest among the top 20 qualifiers was Hut Stricklin at 169.065.

"That was a good lap, but it still wasn't as fast as we had tested," said Earnhardt, the defending series champion. "I healtated about picking up the throttle in turn one. I think that cost me a tenth (of a second) right there, but I felt like the rest of the corners were pretty good."

A.J. Foyt, a four-time Indianapolis 500 winner who also won seven NASCAR races in the 1960s and early '70s, was far back in the qualifying list at 166.889, hoping to earn a spot today for his first race since his retirement more than a year ago. Indy drivers Danny Sullivan. Davy Jones. Stan Fox and Gary Bettenhausen were in a

"A lot of people want to compare these cars to the indy cars, but that's hard to do," Foyt said. "It reminds me of the late '60s when we ran the roadsters and they kind of slipped and slid and you had to thread the needle. It's kind of what it felt like — the old indy cars here.

"I wouldn't be here if it didn't feel right," the 59-year-old Foyt said.

The only non-NASCAR driver among the top 20 qualiflers was Geoff Brabham, a veteran Indy and road racer who was 18th fastest at 169.310. Just ahead of him was Ernie Irvan, the NASCAR season points leader, at 169.453.

More summer safety tips Repellent is effective in battle against ticks

As you relax outdoors this summer, don't let your guard down against barely visible but potentially dangerous ticks that may carry Lyme disease. Without taking the necessary precautions, you may in-adevertently allow an infected tick to "camp out" on your body while you sleep under the stars, making you a potential target for this disease. Untreated, Lyme disease may cause serious long-term disabilities.

The most common tick-borne infection in the country. Lyme disease is caused by the often unnoticed bite of an infected tick. While a number of species of ticks have been found to carry Lyme disease, the deer tick is most often the culprit responsible for infecting humans.

Woodlands, damp areas around bushes. and wet leaves and grass create ideal living conditions for deer ticks since deer and small mammals, the main hosts of deer ticks, are found in this type of environment. Because deer ticks are most active from April through October, take extra care during these summer months to ward off these unwanted insects.

DEET, the most widely used personal insect repellent in the world, is an effective armor in the battle to prevent Lyme disease. The Chemical Specialties Manufacturers Association distributes a brochure on the benefits and proper use of DEET-containing insect repellents. Available to consumers, DEET and Insect Repellents also are offered to 11 national parks, health care officials, and physicians nationwide by the association. It includes the following guidelines from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and insect repellent manufacturers for using insect sprays:

Apply only as directed on the product label. Do not use under clothing.

 Never use repellents over cuts, wounds. or irritated skin.

 Do not apply to eyes or mouth. Do not apply to hands of young children, who are prone to putting their hands in their mouths.

 Use just enough repellent to cover exposed skin. Saturation or frequent reapplication is not necessary for effective-

• After returning indoors, wash treated skin with soap and water, or bathe. This is particularly important when repellents are used repeatedly in a day or on consecutive

• If there is a suspected reaction to an insect repellent, wash the treated skin and seek medical attention. The product should be shown to the health specialist for proper

So as the warmer weather beckons you and your family outdoors for recreational activities at parks and beaches, arm yourself with personal insect repellents containing DEET for the best protection.

Peers important to middle-schoolers parent knows that be the time our kids have reached middle school age, peer influence has become much more important than what adults say. Everyone wants to fit in with their group and for young teens, that often means going along with what "everyone else" is doing. Since this is also a time where experimentation, exploration, and risk-taking is a part of learning more about themselves. alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs are often a part of the picture. It is difficult for some kids to say "No" to experimentation with these and other drugs because they haven't developed enough self-confidence and they often fear that refusing may result in their being rejected or ridiculed by their friends.

One of the best gifts we can give our young teens are some specific resistance skills necessary to face these tough situations. These skills must em-power the teen to look good, sounds too risky, dangerous, or tions. These skills must em-have fun and keep their friends while staying out of trouble. But, learning resistance skills is like learning to ride a bike. You don't learn it by discussing how to do it - you've got to practice before the skills are needed. Research indicates that there are five steps to effective peer resistance skills:

Step 1: Ask questions and probe. Asking questions about the activity in question helps the teen confirm exactly what (s)he is being asked to do. Additionally, there is a subtle shifting of pressure when the other person is asked to describe the exact behavior in question.

Step 2: Say "No" - several

Step 3: Provide an alternative. Examples of this might include: "I can't go to the park with you today. I was planning to go to the mail. Would you like to come with me?"

Step 4: Leave the door open. If the other person declines the invitation at first, extend a second invitation.

Step 5: Physically move away from the situation if steps 3 and 4 do not provide a suitable alternative.

OK, parents - now it's your turn to play teacher. Role playing some actual potential trouble situations is the best way to prepare your kids to use these steps to deal with the problem before it becomes one.

Fashionably thin gets unfashionably dumped this for "Fat but Not Happy."

Many men actually prefer women with a few curves and a little meat on their bones. I have noticed that some men don't care for skinny women. I am a thin woman, and I watched my weight so I wouldn't get fat, and guess what? My husband dumped me for a fat woman not "chubby." mind you: 5 foot 4, weighing 210.

THE OTHER SIDE

DEAR ABBY: I, too, have struggled with weight all my adult life. I am 36. The man I was married to for 11 years constantly threatened to leave me if I ever became fat. (I was pregnant at the time.)

Well, I spent most of my married life wishing he would leave. As I got heavier and heavier, topping 300 pounds, he didn't leave me, but I left him! After that I slimmed down.

dropped 60 pounds and remained single for four years: then I met a wonderful man and we have been happily married for a year.

My weight started creeping up on me again, and when I mentioned it, he laughed and said he loved me just the way I was, and I shouldn't expect to become a slave to a thin body just because that's what society expects.

Abby, "Not Happy" needs to love herself and be happy with who she is. And her husband needs to love the person inside of her. With age, accidents, surgery or having babies, our bodies

The Creator, when planning the world, gave order to our lives ... a rhythm as old as time. In the third chapter of Ecclesiastes, we are told there is "...a time for every matter under heaven; a time to be born, and a time to die; ...a time to weep, and a time to laugh; ...a time to seek and a time to lose; ...a time to keep silence, and a time to speak; ...'

God has also given us a time to worship. "Six days you shall labor; but the seventh day is a Sabbath to the Lord your God" (Exodus 20:9-10).

Our Heavenly Father knew that though toil was good, we would need to observe a regular time each week to rest our bodies and strengthen our faith by communing with Him. Begin the renewal of your spirit this Sabbath with the Creator, for it has been said, "Time and the tides wait for no man."

Newton pursues ministry

Deacon and family leave for Bible college

By SUSAN WENNER Herald Correspondent

Mark Newton knows that God leads in many different ways and directs his sheep down various paths. Assorted talents are given to each person. At times one doesn't recognize those gifts until later after career decisions have been made.

Newton received his calling only three months ago. Newton and his wife, Jennifer and children, Meghan, Justin and Taylor plan to leave Sunday for Florence, Alabama. It is there that Newton plans to pursue a bachelor's degree in Bible at International Bible College. His plans are to minister in a church upon completion of his educa-

Newton's brother, Glenn and his wife, Regina, have been there for over a year. Their mother, Ann Newton, who is also the church secretary, commented on her feelings about two of her four sons pursuing the ministry. "It really makes a mother proud." she said. "It makes me feel that maybe I did something right along the way. We'll be well acquainted with the road from here to there."

Newton was a 1978 graduate of Seminole High School. He has been a member of the Sanford Church of Christ since 1977 and has served as the deacon of fellowship for six years. Before his decision to enter the ministry he was employed as a field service technician and worked on copiers and fax machines for Basetec Office Systems out of

The Sanford Church of Christ prepared a money tree for the Newton family. Harvey Covington, elder, and minister, Tony Black presented the gift to Mark, Jennifer, Taylor, Justin and Meghan, along with several books for the children.

The Newton family will make their home in Leona, Tennessee which is 25 miles from Florence. Alabama. Jennifer just completed her degree in the Nurses Assistant program at Seminole Community College. She plans to work in that field to assist with the family finances while her husband studies.

Tony Black, minister of the Sanford Church of Christ, spoke of Newton and his work at the congregation. "During my 10 years at the church I have seen Mark very involved. He's very organized in working with people and in meeting their needs. Anyone that loves the Lord and loves people makes a great servant in the ministry. I'm looking forward to him completing his formal training so he can minister to others."

Newton said he dreams of one day becoming a preacher. "I never in a million years thought I would be a preacher. It's just the Lord opened the right doors.

I finally realized that I was doing stuff I didn't like. Why should I do that when I can be working for the Lord. That's what I really love." He emphasized that he would make frequent trips back to visit or at least as often as

Praise Fellowship moves to theater

Top:Pastor Jerry and Nancy Walsh in fron of Lake Mary Center 8

Herald Correspondent

Jerry Walsh, pastor of Praise Fellowship Church spoke excitedly about their new move to Lake Mary Center 8 Theater. "The pews are gone, replacing them are theater chairs," he said. "Compact disk players and a D.J. have replaced the organ and choir.

Contemporary pop music and upbeat messages are featured at the Sunday morning services. The 4 month old church prides itself on designing their program to attract "baby boomers and busters", as Pastor Walsh put it. "who may not recently, or ever, have seen the inside of a church." Walsh added," We are a Purpose Driven Church doing a seeker-sensitive ministry."

Walsh spoke of his ministry. "I think baby boomers are looking for a relationship with God withour having the church expect them to give up 8 to 10 hours a week. The services are always out by 11: a.m. which allows people to still have a productive or recreational day."

Services start at 9:45 a.m. with music from the vocal group. The program includes a dramatic sketches and multimedia video presentations of contemporary movie clips. According to the Barna Research Group less than 3 % of churches in America use video and drama regularly. "I think boomers and busters are attracted to a state of the art worship experience," said Walsh.

Walsh is quick to point out that one of the most important ministries of the church is that of the care of children. "A safe . clean nursery environment is available for the preschool/toddler age. The older children have their own fun activity. The children must have fun," said Walsh.

Waish's messages address everyday issues like marriage. family, money management and jobs. Walsh added, When it's time to pass the collection plate I announce if you are our guest we want you to get something out of our service and not put anything into it so don't feel obligated to

opinion on chronic sinusitis. DEAR READER: The sinuses are air-filled cavities contained within the cheeks and forehead. In order to function normally, the sinuses must remain open to the air in the nose and throat through tiny holes called sinus ostia.

At times, allergic reactions or upper respiratory infections cause the tissue around the ostia to swell, thereby blocking the sinuses. This leads to a sensation of pressure in the cheek. sinus headaches and a feeling of head congestion - all of which can usually be relieved by antihistamines, decongestants and nose sprays. These drugs shrink the tissue lining the ostia and permit the sinuses to vent.

Under circumstances where the sinus blockage is not relieved - in cases of severe allergies, for example - the sinuses, which normally contain bacteria. become infected. Such an infection aggravates the pain of mere sinus blockage and often causes malaise and a post-nasal drip (because infected mucus literally bulges out of the tight sinus ostia and drains down the throat).

Therefore, acute and chronic sinusitis (sinus infection) is usually treated with both antibiotics and antihistamine/decongestant combinations.

This is the reason that I doubt your diagnosis of chronic sinusitis; if you were to have infection, you would need antibiotics. I suspect you really have chronic sinus congestion (without infection) that comes and goes.

The diagnosis of sinusitis is made by X-ray tests or CT scanning. If the condition is present, the sinuses appear airless and "whited out" on the X-ray films. Also, liquid abscesses may be visible.

Although most cases of sinusitis can be cured using the medicine I mentioned, resistant cases may need surgery to ostia and widen them. In addition, the nasal septum may have to be straightened. (This plate of cartilage separating the nostrils may -- from injury or inheritance -- be pushed to one side, con-tributing to obstruction of the sinus ostia. A deviated septum is a common cause of sinusitis.)

Sinusitis does not interfere with good health in most instances, although it will cause annoying symptoms.

MEDICINE

If your sinus problem is relieved by non-prescription anti-histamines, such as Actifed and Chlortrimeton, fine. However, if you continue to be bothered by this condition, you should see an ear-nose-and-throat specialist or an allergist.

To give you more information. I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Allergies."

By Phillip Alder

King Whitney, Jr., the former President of Personnel Laboratory Inc., once said, "Change has considerable psychological impact on the human mind. To the fearful it is threatening, because it means that things may get worse. To the hopeful it is encouraging, because things may get better. To the confident it is inspiring, because the challenge exists to make things better.'

There has, of course, been change in bridge, usually for the better, but sometimes for the worse. In some areas, players don't lead fourth-highest from longest and strongest against no-trump contracts. Instead, they use Attitude Leads, which don't give count. In principle, the lower the card led, the stronger their holding in the suit. It does depend on the strength of the rest of their hand, but in general from, say, J-7-6-4, they lead the six or seven. But from K-J-6-4, they lead the four.

the diamond seven, after which we should defeat the contract. But playing attitude leads. West selected the diamond three. Dummy's four won the first trick! The declarer, benefiting from the extra dummy entry. took a winning spade finesse. South continued with two top clubs. When West discarded on the second, declarer played a diamond to dummy's ace, repeated the spade finesse and claimed nine tricks: three spades, two hearts, two diamonds and two clubs.
