"CRACKER DAY" PLANS ASSURE BIG SUCCESS

Merchants Are Co-operating By Offering Their Merchandise At Attractive Price

With the appointment of all committees from the Elks Auxiliary, The Seminole County Federation of Women's Clubs and the Sanford Elks Lodge and as a result of the willingness on the part of the City Commissioners to co-operate in every way, and in view of the consent of the majority of Sanford's leading business firms to offer special sales on "Cracker Day" Saturday, arrangements necessary for the day have been declared a success, according to Mrs. John Leonardy, chairman of the "Cracker Day" celebration.

"Cracker Day" And "Dollar Day"

Next Saturday is "Cracker Day" when Sanford will be the mecca of countless persons throughout the county and surrounding territory attracted here by the promise of exciting exhibitions of horsemanship, a fish fry, a fiddling contest, public speaking and a square dance.

Not in some time will there be so many persons congregated here to enjoy the round of festivities which are being planned. That the tournament riding, horse racing, and other equestrian sports will furnish plenty of excitement is attested by the number of entries already received and the preparations being made by horsemen to get in the pink of condition.

No less enthusiasm has been shown by the fiddlers who will participate for prizes and it is assured that many of the best known fiddlers in the Central Florida section will be on hand for the competitions. Sanford has always been noted for providing a "good feed" on these occasions and plenty of palatable edibles are assured. All in all it should be a day which will furnish a full measure of entertainment for the expected crowds.

While the day is primarily intended to give the people a good time, it offers the opportunity to purchase all kinds of merchandise at attractive prices, this through the progressiveness of Sanford merchants. "Special dollar day" sales will be in vogue and customers will be able to take advantage of what very reasonably may be their last opportunity to buy things at bargain prices.

These "dollar day" sales are coming on the eve of the nation-wide consumers' drive when the recovery administration will exhort the public to buy now, not only for the personal advantage of low prices but to help stimulate the national buying movement.

That prices are going up is as certain as the change of seasons. The person who buys any commodity today, even at standard prices, is making a wise investment. The smart people will use these "dollar day" sales to stock up on things which they know they must have sooner or later but which in a short time will cost twice as much as now.

We hear persons bemoaning the fact that they didn't take advantage of the low prices of a few months ago. They do not realize that they have the same opportunity today to save money by making purchases. Next Saturday offers this opportunity to a marked degree and if there are many wise persons hereabouts Sanford stores should do a land-office business.

Women And The Depression

Among the many panaceas for the depression is the suggestion that women, especially married women, give up their jobs and return to the home, where, tradition has it, there is some mysterious way of getting the necessities of life by merely washing the dishes and sweeping out the house.

Exceptions are often used to prove the rule, so we find many people pointing to certain cases of women who work despite the fact that their husbands have employment, contending that if the wife was in the home "where she ought to be" there would be another job for an unemployed.

This may be true in a few isolated cases but as a matter of fact recent investigations, made into the situation, reveal that 90 percent of the women who work do so because of economic necessity. When in the Nineteenth Century women entered factory life they did so because machines supplanted home-made products upon which many a family subsisted.

Somehow the opinion prevails that women as workers are something new, developed in recent years, bringing on the present evil conditions. It may be recalled, however, that women have long been in the labor market. There has been no sudden and overwhelming rush of women into wage earning positions. Statistics of the International Labor Office in Geneva prove that many countries have witnessed an actual decline in the number of women workers since the World War.

This panacea calculated to cure the depression by putting women back into the homes is like so many others along the same line. They get one nowhere. The only conclusion is that the removal of women from the sphere of paid workers would merely shift unemployment from one class to another leaving the problem just where it was before the shift took place.

U. S. TOPURCHASE STEELRAILS TO HELP RAILROADS

Purchases Expected To Lead Impetus to National Recovery

WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—(AP)—Faced by reports that the recovery program has dropped since mid-August, President Roosevelt entered into negotiations yesterday for the purchase of heavy consignments of steel rails for railroads.

The purchases were contemplated to lead impetus to the industrial drive. They would be made with government financial aid.

The negotiations went forward in a conference with leaders of the steel industry from whom Roosevelt sought a reduced price on rails.

The deal would be financed by loans from the public works administration to the carriers as one of the fleet of a series of moves planned by the administration to stimulate business.

Hugh S. Johnson, the recovery administrator, was confined to Walter Reed hospital with an infection and in his absence the President took personal leadership of the negotiations.

At a conference with four members of the steel industry, Joseph E. Eastman, the rail controller, and Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of the NRA, Roosevelt obtained agreement for "competitive bids" upon between 600,000 and 700,000 tons of rails.

Thousands of manufacturers over the nation were told last night by the National Association of Manufacturers that a closed union shop under which labor contracts were made with a single union would violate the intent of the recovery act.

This interpretation went out in a copyrighted bulletin, prepared by John C. Gall, associate counsel of the association, and took direct issue with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The association also informed employers that under the law they could advise workers against joining a labor union, or within limits, offer special inducements, such as group insurance, to employees, who will join and bargain through a company union.

The bulletin of the manufacturers' association was interpreted by NRA officials as widening the breach between capital and labor over the labor section of the recovery act that guarantees the right of workers to bargain collectively in any manner they choose without interference or coercion from employers.

Ewing, National Livestock Marketing Association; D. A. Geyer, National Co-operative Milk Producers Federation; Dan Wallace, uncle to Secretary Wallace, and Clarence Poe, editor of agricultural publications.

Members of the delegation said they sought "honest money," so that those who have borrowed will, on the average, be able to repay that money in the same kind of money they borrowed. They asked restoration of 1934 price levels and a dollar valued at that year's buying power.

"How far American agriculture now is from that goal may be seen from the fact that farm products on Sept. 18 were only 83.5 percent of their 1934 price level and against 69.2 percent a year ago," members of the delegation said. They commended the

TRUST COMPANY SURVEY REVEALS UPWARD TRENDS
Commodity prices have been distinctly firmer than last month, with many irregularities but apparently with a slight upward tendency. As the NRA movement passes from the phase of organization into that of operation, visible developments in progress become less striking. Viewed as a whole, the events of the last few weeks seem to support the belief that definite progress toward recovery has been made and that the normal stimulating influences of the autumn season may reasonably be expected to bring further improvement.

Review Of Business Shows Progress But At Reduced Pace
While the recession in business levels is disappointing to those who hoped for a quick transformation in the economic situation under the influence of government intervention, informed opinion inclines to the view that it may very well prove to have been a wholesome development for the long-term point of view. All the upward movement approached its midsummer peak, evidence was rapidly accumulating that the expansion, in many directions at least, was unbounded and unmanageable. Where the bulk of the output was intended to build up inventories in anticipation of inflationary price advances, as was clearly the case in many instances, the revival in activity could not have been expected to continue steadily for more than a brief period. And, as long as a serious possibility of inflationary action continues to hang over the country, a similar suspicion will inevitably attach itself to every upward movement in trade and industry, however welcome the greater activity and the increased employment may be for the moment.

amount of consumption goods of the market a large proportion of the aggregate plant capacity could not participate in the production of such commodities.

"This view is in accord with some of the most widely held theories of business cycles. It is well known that the production and consumption of consumers' goods vary comparatively little. The wide differences between rates of output during prosperity and depression are due, for the most part, to variations in the production of buildings, machinery, tools and other productive equipment. All this productive equipment, of course, can be used only to produce goods directly or indirectly for the ultimate consumer. According to several authoritative and widely accepted theories, it is the tendency of productive equipment in times of prosperity to expand too fast—that is, beyond the capacity of consumers to absorb the output which constitutes the principal factor operating to terminate prosperity and bring on depression. It has been estimated that the industries producing capital goods represent, roughly, half of the country's productive capacity and that in 1929 the total production of such goods amounted to about $40,000,000,000, as against $30,000,000,000 in consumption goods.

"It is evident, therefore, that wide-spread industrial recovery, if it is to take place within the reasonably near future must include a revival of the industries producing capital goods. But how to promote such a revival is a difficult question. One line of thought on this subject emphasizes the difficulties placed in the way of long-term borrowing by the new securities act, which lays heavy responsibilities on investment bankers and on the managements of corporations seeking to borrow. In the opinion of some authorities, these provisions are so harsh that they will practically prohibit the flotation of new securities by reputable concerns until the law is amended. Inasmuch as the great bulk of industrial expansion under modern conditions cannot take place without public borrowing, it is obvious that any factor hindering such borrowing must necessarily prevent, at the same time, the industrial expansion that is essential to business recovery.

"It is true that the flotation of new securities in the last few months has been practically at a standstill. However, the same situation existed for some time prior to the passage of the securities act; and it is a question whether the recent inactivity of the capital market may not have been due to more fundamental factors. Business concerns will not borrow unless they have a reasonable prospect of making money with the borrowed funds, and investors will not lend unless they are satisfied that the borrowers will be able to make payments on account of the interest and the principal of the loans. Both of these conditions depend on the present and prospective demand for the products of industry. In addition, the investor is concerned with the legal protection that will be given to his securities and with the purchasing power of the money in which the loan will ultimately be repaid.

"These possible alternative explanations of the present situation in the capital markets do not greatly alter the merits of the case against the securities act. Markets for long-term capital issues may be inactive at present from natural causes, but they cannot remain so indefinitely. To the extent that business recovery proceeds and the monetary outlook is clarified, the demand for investment securities, on the one hand, and for new capital, on the other, should revive. If the flow of capital into industry is paralyzed by an arbitrary and unjustifiable piece of legislation, the effect will be to hamper, if not actually prevent, sound business expansion.

"Recent developments in the business situation tend to emphasize the extent to which the more pronounced recessions have been confined to the basic industries. Both wholesale and retail trade appear to have been comparatively well maintained, although recent gains are admittedly due in large measure to seasonal influences.

Chamber of Commerce are included on the ballot for the election of directors mailed from the Chamber of Commerce office Saturday under the direction of the election committee of which S. D. Highleyman is chairman.

Chairman Highleyman called the attention of the membership to the fact that they should return their ballots properly marked to the Chamber of Commerce as soon as possible at no event not later than 6 P. M. Tuesday, Oct. 5. Last year there was some confusion as some of the members delayed returning their ballots and then misplaced them and did not cast their ballot in the election.

The board of directors of the Seminole County Chamber of Commerce consists of 24 directors from Sanford, 3 from each other town in the county except Orlando which has 5. These directors are elected by the paid members of the Chamber of Commerce from among their own number.

The newly elected directors elect the officers. A ballot box is placed in the Chamber of Commerce office in the City Hall. Ballots may be taken to the Chamber of Commerce office and deposited anytime between now and Oct. 3 or may be mailed to the office for deposit in the ballot box. This box is in charge of the elections committee, which will make the count and give results, notifying the present board of directors as to the nominees.

MANY SUBJECTS TO BE DISCUSSED AT LEGION MEET

Better Is Expressed That Bonus Demand Will Not Be Great

CHICAGO, Sept. 26.—(AP)—An agenda of 100 subjects ranging from disability payments to fighting crime was announced last night for the American Legion's national convention in Chicago today.

National officials of the Legion expressed a belief that demands for payment of the bonus, which has thousands of veterans marching on Washington two years ago, would enter the program only slightly.

They said a resolution asking payment of the adjusted service certificate to look at governmental business generally would be adopted.

Only three state departments, Illinois, South Dakota, and Texas, have signified they favor immediate payment, said National Adjutant Frank E. Kameel, while 45 have come out in favor of continuing demands for veterans' relief in the Legion's four-point program.

The program, drafted after five weeks' meetings that covered the entire nation, calls for adequate hospitalization, care for widows and orphans, and replacement of the 25 percent cut in disability allowances made last March.

Removal of Gen. Frank T. Hines as director of the Veterans' Bureau at Washington has been demanded in several state conventions. It was revealed at convention headquarters, while at least one state has recommended he be retained.

Each of the many questions to be sought to discussion has been advised by one of the 50 departmental units, and virtually all units have demanded full discussions of national defense, disability allowances, and the fostering of Americanism.

Under the heading of Americanism will come a resolution opposing United States recognition of Soviet Russia, and others suggesting means of opposing the spread of communism.

SE states have recommended that the Legion co-operate with local officials and urge the Federal Government toward greater activity in fighting crime. One, Indiana, has suggested that the veterans' organization make recommendations for uniform laws to cover the sale of alcoholic liquor.

A majority of the state departments have expressed sympathy with the aims and principles of the National Recovery Act, Samuel said.

Starting next Monday with a meeting in the Chicago stadium at which President Roosevelt is expected to be chief speaker, the convention will extend through Thursday.

With an expected attendance of 200,000 Legionnaires and auxiliary members, city officials have begun plans for emergency traffic handling, especially for the Legion's parade of 100,000, with 500 bands and drum and bugle corps, Tuesday.

Two additional names were added by arriving Legion officials to the list of five candidates for National commander. The list now includes: Ray Murphy of Ida Grove, Ia.; George W. Wallace of Carson City, Nev.; Vilas Whaling of Racine, Wis.; Ed Hayes of Detroit, Mich.; Lynd W. Brandon, of Omaha, Neb.; and Gen. Milton A. Beckford, of Baltimore, Md.

Plans are underway for an inquiry to know the convicts obtained arms, which obviously crossed the whole prison grounds and set the front door without meeting opposition from the guards, who line the high wall of the prison.
