BRIEFS

Bush set to visit Orlando

CLEARWATER — President Bush, facing a stiff challenge in Florida from Democratic nominee Bill Clinton, plans to tour the state's biggest markets next Saturday. GOP officials said.

Bush is tentatively set to start the day in Miami to recognize relief workers involved in the rebuilding and cleanup after Hurricane Andrew.

From there, he will travel to Fort Lauderdale, where he had flight training during World War II, for a speech on veteran issues.

Bush plans an afternoon stop in Clearwater to talk to retirees at On Top of the World, a large condominium complex, about issues of concern to senior citizens. The event will be limited to seniors from the complex and other invited guests.

The president is then expected to head to Orlando, where a late-afternoon outdoor rally is scheduled at Church Street Station downtown.

The Clinton campaign will bring in one of its own big guns next week. Tipper Gore, wife of Democratic vice presidential nominee Al Gore, is slated to visit St. Petersburg, Miami and Tallahassee on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Principal on the roof

AUGUSTA, Ga. — An elementary school principal who bet his students that they couldn't read 4,000 books over the summer lost the bet — and has to spend a night on the school's roof next month.

Peter Paige said his offer persuaded the 520 children at Warren Road Elementary School to read a total of 5,700 books.

"The children just got excited about me up on the roof," he said Friday.

Paige said someone had donated a tent and air mattress so he won't be completely unsheltered when he spends the night of Oct. 8 on the roof. But he's not sure exactly how he'll pass the time.

"I wanted a TV set, but the parents told me I should read a book," he said.

Veto looms for tax bill

WASHINGTON — The Senate completed work Saturday on a $34 billion package of tax breaks and social spending that faces a veto unless congressional negotiators eliminate some of the tax increases that finance it.

President Bush has indicated he will not accept permanent extension of two tax increases on high-income earners — the biggest revenue raisers in the bill.

But if negotiators dump those provisions, in the interest of not worsening the budget deficit they will have to eliminate some of the bill's benefits. And the starting point probably would be the most expensive — and, to lawmakers of both parties, probably the most attractive — part of the bill: expansion of tax-deductible Individual Retirement Accounts for upper-middle-income families.

Family effort a winner

By VICKI BOGOMER

SANFORD — Mike Vallot wants to give the young people of Sanford a healthy way to have fun. On Saturday, the Army thanked him for doing it and city officials and others endorsed the honor.

At the Children and Family festival, organized by Vallot, Sgt. Samuel Dawsey an Army recruiter in Sanford, presented Vallot with a plaque from the Army recognizing him for his efforts in helping the youth of the city.

"His efforts at helping the young people of Sanford are wonderful," Dawsey said. "We just wanted to thank him."

The crowd cheered Vallot who has given them parties at Lee P. Moore Park and in Academy Manor during the last year.

City Commissioner Bob Thomas, who was on hand to speak with the children about the importance of education and community service, said that Vallot is providing an invaluable service to the community.

Gloria, Mike Vallot

"He is given the youngsters a good time in a good environment," Thomas said.

Vallot said that the parties that he has organized over the last year are "the least we can do for the young people of Sanford."

He was not expecting the honor from the Army and said after the presentation that he was surprised to be given the award.

"I'm just doing this for the kids," Vallot said.

Yesterday's party, the first at which Vallot made an effort to include the parents as well as the children, periodic rain storms kept the crowds

SANFORD — Minnie Allen and Kelley Bartholow are dispatchers with the Sanford Police Department, but to the people in Homestead they are some of the heroes who are making possible the rebuilding of a city devastated by Hurricane Andrew.

The pair spent a week recently working in the Homestead Police Department helping to make the critical decisions that made the clean up run more smoothly.

"We really only handled routine calls, robberies, thefts, auto accidents, by the time we got there," Allen said. "We just offered relief for some of the Homestead dispatchers who were trying to rebuild."

While some of the local staff was on duty with the Sanford dispatchers, the volunteer staffers still had to work 12 hour shifts from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

"They were long days," Bartholow said. "We went to work in the

Mayor Morris: one term is all it'll be Fess against Rocket to be the Lake Mary mayor

By BOB SPENFAUF

LAKE MARY — Mayor Randy Morris will not be seeking re-election. "I made a commitment to my wife that I would only serve one term," he said, "and I'm sticking to it."

Lake Mary's political qualifying time opened on Sept. 1, and ended this past Friday. The two candidates who did qualify to run for Mayor are former Mayor Dick Fess, whom Morris defeated in 1990, and Lowry Rockett, who chaired the recent Lake Mary Charter Review Committee.

Although he had indicated he would not run for another term earlier, his final decision had been withheld until the final qualifying time Friday morning.

Morris, 57, has served as Mayor for the past two years having won the post after defeating three other candidates in the 1990 election.

Several weeks ago, Morris had said, "Right now, I don't intend to run, but I want to wait for a final decision when I see who qualifies for the job." He continued, "If I don't believe there are some good people running, I might reconsider."

I made a commitment to my wife that I would only serve one term.

Thursday night, Morris said, "There are two persons already signed up for the post, and I believe they will give the voters a good choice, so I won't be running for re-election."

He added, "I also believe there are excellent candidates running for the right reasons in the two Commission races, and I'm looking forward to continued progress by the new Commission."

"I believe I've done what I intended to do as Mayor," he commented. "I've worked out the funding of the Lake Mary Boulevard and Recreation and Parks programs, improved relations with the bus-

Runoff will narrow congressional race

By J. MARK SANFIELD
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Republicans and Democrat of Congressional District 3 will have a narrowed field of choices next Thursday during the primary runoff election.

Jacksonville talk show host and developer Andrew "Andy" Johnson will face state representative Corrine Brown of Jacksonville for the Democratic nomination. On the GOP ticket, Don Weidner of Jacksonville, director of the Florida Physicians Association, will face Steve Kelly, a Fernandina Beach pest control businessman.

The winners of the races will face each other in November.

In Seminole County, Brown is the distant favorite over Johnson. She received 64.8 percent of the vote locally and 43.4 percent of the vote throughout the district. Johnson edged into the runoff position with 31 percent of the district vote and a second-place 13.7 percent locally.

Although Weidner posted a strong 46.1 percent showing in Seminole County, to Kelly's 27.6 percent.

SANFORD — Is the Washington trek to save the Auto Train necessary at this time? The two Sanford mayoral candidates disagree.

Sanford Mayor, and candidate for re-election, Bettye Smith, will be leaving Tuesday afternoon, on the Auto Train, with Washington D.C. as her destination. She is making the trip along with City Manager Bill Simmons and Dave Farr, executive director of the Greater Sanford Chamber of Commerce.

The three are scheduled to meet with several officials and members of the planning committee of the Amtrak/Auto Train operations.

"I have no objections with the trip," said Sara Jacobson, announced candidate for the Mayor's race. "But I think it may be a war dance without a war. While it may be wise to meet with the Auto Train people, this trip is premature, and I don't believe it's wise to do this at the present time."

She added, "With the present economy, I worry about the blue collar workers, but they are going to Washington and spending the taxpayer's money for this trip. In no way will there be any negotiations. This is nothing more than looking at the future, but they would have you believe this is a sinking ship."

Jacobson

Smith believes the trip at the present time is necessary. "People have told us that they want us to do anything in our power to prevent the Auto Train from leaving the Sanford area," she said. "While I don't know if there is actually anything we can do about it right now, we want to meet with the Auto Train people and find out what their options might be, so we can come back here and have plenty of time to do whatever may be necessary to prevent their leaving."

Jacobson said, "I've talked with Auto Train officials including Richard Allen, Howard Robertson and Wick Leatherwood. Mr. Allen said it was just a pipe dream to think that they would be able to relocate to a perfect site."

She continued, "Allen said that the costs of moving outweigh the fiscal situation at the present time, and that no expansion is proposed."

"John Lombardi, at the Sanford Auto Train office told me the plans are to expand rather than move," Jacobson said.

Contacted Friday afternoon, Robertson said the plans to obtain a larger facility were indeed being considered. "We have many options," he said. "We can expand the facility where we are now, move to another location in Sanford, or move to somewhere else in the Sanford/Orlando area."

Former Miami Beach mayor convicted

MIAMI — Alex Daoud, former mayor of Miami Beach, was convicted of one bribery count and acquitted of racketeering charges.

Daoud, who had been accused of corruption and using his office for personal gain during his three terms as the resort city's chief official, was found guilty of the bribery charge on Friday. On Wednesday, jurors had acquitted him on six other counts of bribery, two charges of extortion and one money laundering count, but was still hung on 24 other counts.

A 41-count indictment was returned after a week of deliberations against the embattled mayor on Oct. 29, 1991, charging him with using his office to collect money and favors from city contractors and labor unions, and filing false tax returns.

Assistant U.S. Attorneys Frank Sherman and Bruce Udolf said they planned to retry Daoud on the remaining 24 counts, as well as on some income tax charges separate from the current case.

Feds probe telemarketing companies

FORT LAUDERDALE — Officials from seven South Florida telemarketing companies are facing a federal probe for enticing unsuspecting consumers into buying goods and promising big prizes that were never awarded.

The 12 officials are named in a 60-count federal indictment charging they were involved in a massive conspiracy between 1987 and 1989.

Fliers sent out by these companies arrive in the mail promising a valuable award for participating in a national promotion. The only requirement is a shopping club membership fee or purchase of a water purifier or vitamins over the phone.

Prosecutors say that seven telemarketing companies operating in Broward and Dade counties used such an approach to generate $3 million in sales nationwide, federal prosecutors say.

Congress

the two are very close throughout the district. Weidner received 35.4 percent of the total District 3 Republican and Kelley received a close 34.5 percent.

District 3, created by the Legislature to assure blacks have a representative in Congress, takes in portions of Ocala, Gainesville, Jacksonville, Sanford, Altamonte Springs and Orlando. In places, the district is only 50 feet wide to take in black neighborhoods but miss white areas. Still, the district takes in the largely affluent white communities in the Markham Woods Road area.

In the Sanford area, District 3 takes in the predominantly black neighborhoods south of Central Florida Regional Hospital, Academy Manor, Lincoln Heights, Lockhart subdivision, Ravena Park, the neighborhoods between 25th Street and Airport Boulevard, and Midway. The district also takes in Bookertown.

Of the two races, the Democratic race has been the most fierce, largely due to the continual assaults by Johnson against Brown.

Johnson, himself a former state representative, has accused Brown of everything from "biking" the state out of a $32,000 annual salary at Florida Community College in Jacksonville to costing Jacksonville $600,000 in a failed federal assistance program.

Johnson even criticizes District 3 itself, saying it was created to benefit Brown and former opponent Sen. Armette Girardou. On his campaign business card, Johnson declares "Seeking to represent bits and pieces of 14 counties!"

Brown responds by saying she has been cleared of all wrongdoing and with one salvo, claiming Johnson "bilked" his neighbor out of a $40,000 loan. The man responded Johnson is a friend and is satisfied the debt will be paid on time. Brown was honored by the endorsement of Jesse Jackson in a series of campaign stops last week.

In contrast, the Republicans have been quietly pursuing their runoff bids. Kelley, who has owned a pest control business in Fernandina Beach, north of Jacksonville, for 10 years. He serves on the Nassau County Council on Aging board and is active in several Nassau County organizations. Kelley is running on a plank of restoring faith in government.

Weidner is running on a plank of term limits, no new taxes, and a balanced budget. He is former executive director of the Florida Republican Party and held a ranking position in the campaigns of Paula Hawkins for U.S. Senate and Van Poole for Insurance Commissioner.

Recreation and Parks programs, improved relations with the business community along the I-4 corridor, and simplified procedures and regulations concerning the development of the business as well as residential communities in the City.

Lake Mary's Commission and Mayor election will be held as part of the general election on Nov. 3.

NEWS FROM THE REGION AND ACROSS THE STATE

Boss: Faculty deserves more

Associated Press

JACKSONVILLE — Board of Regents Chairman Alex Courtella said his top priority is getting significant pay increases for the 32,000 university employees who have gone three years without a raise.

"I agree with those who say we should run government like a business," Courtella said in his first meeting as chairman Friday. "It is sound business practice to reward employees for dedicated and outstanding performance and reward them for increased productivity."

Courtella acknowledged times are hard in the state university system. The nine schools are educating 12,000 more students with $165 million less money and 1,600 fewer faculty and staff members than two years ago.

"We have asked our employees to do more with less and they have responded," he said.

But state Education Commissioner Betty Castor indicated the state needs to spend money to make room for more students in the university system.

Although the number of high school seniors remained about the same in Florida throughout the 1980s, increasing demand for college slots sent university admission standards soaring.

The state's aggressive program encouraging Florida's top high school graduates to stay in state was a factor, Castor said.

But the number of public high school seniors started increasing last year. This year it is 103,000. In 1994 it will be 107,500. By 2000 it will be 135,000, Castor said, and that's not counting students in private schools.

"My top priority is access for Florida's top high school students into the state university system," Castor said.

The conflict between allowing more students into the university system and increasing the quality of education is an issue in the fight over tuition costs. This year the Legislature raised tuition and used that money to expand universities rather than give raises to the faculty and restore money lost after budget cuts.

Lawyers warned to mind own business

By BILL KASSON
Associated Press Writer

DESTIN — Lawyers should clean up their professional rather than try to regulate legal technicians, says the owner of a company that sells legal forms.

Ron Eubanks told the Florida Bar Board of Governors that if the organization really was concerned about protecting the public as it contends, it should focus on the harm done by some of its own members.

"This harm is caused by the shysters and defalcators which the Florida Bar allows to continue practicing law, who are literally raping the public with the bar's blessing," Eubanks said Friday.

Eubanks, who operates Able Legal Document Service Inc. in nearby Fort Walton Beach, accused the bar of trying to regulate non-lawyer legal technicians out of business to eliminate competition.

Legal technicians such as Eubanks sell and help people fill out forms for drafting wills, leasing property, divorcing and taking a variety of other legal actions without hiring a lawyer.

A bar committee has proposed what it termed limited regulation of legal technicians and the elimination of barriers that prevent lawyers from providing such low-cost services.

Earlier during its two-day meeting at the Sandestin Beach Resort near Destin the group voted to form a second committee to come up with proposals for implementing those recommendations.

Bar President Alan Dimond of Miami told Eubanks he agreed with some of the criticisms, disagreed with others and that the bar is examining some issues he raised.

"We are not so blind as to think there aren't things that need to be remedied," Dimond said later. "And we are not so proud to say we won't sit and listen to a very critical comment and evaluate it for whatever gems may be in there."

Dimond denied the bar wants to protect lawyers from economic competition. There is a place for legal technicians, but a line must be drawn between filling out forms and giving legal advice that technicians are unqualified and untrained to provide, he said.

He agreed the bar needs to make its lawyer-discipline procedures faster and more efficient and penalties tougher. But he disagreed with Eubanks' suggestion that discipline be turned over to an independent panel with a 4-to-1 majority of non-lawyer members. The membership of existing grievance committees is one-third non-lawyers.

War hero begins book tour

Gen. Schwarzkopf big draw to admirers

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA — Retired Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf kicked off a national book-signing tour near home Saturday, drawing more than 1,500 people who began lining up the night before to meet the Gulf War hero.

"The biggest problem is keeping enough refills for his pen so he doesn't run out of ink," joked Stuart Applebaum, spokesman for Bantam Books, publisher of the autobiography "It Doesn't Take a Hero."

Schwarzkopf's scheduled appearance began at noon, but people began snaking around the suburban Waldenbooks & More store as early as 11:30 p.m. Friday. Most were loaded down with five copies of the $25 book, the most any individual could have signed.

"He's a great man. Standing in line for a few hours is the least I could do," said Bob Crook, a 40-year-old Army reservist and Gulf War veteran who showed up at 2 a.m. "He was not just a leader because of the position he was placed in — he's one of the greatest natural-born leaders of all time."

The first in line, 24-year-old autograph collector Kevin Browning, had little interest in Schwarzkopf's military exploits. He was in it for the investment.

"A signed picture of Schwarzkopf goes for $150. I'm sure I could get at least $200 for each book," said Browning, who along with a friend walked out with 10 signed books.

The store, just a few miles from Schwarzkopf's retirement home, sold 1,200 copies the day the book hit the shelves Friday and had only 500 on hand to sell for the signing.

"It's a little overwhelming," said Waldenbooks spokeswoman Theresa Eldredge, calling it the most successful signing in the chain's history, dwarfing an event in Atlanta last year that accompanied the release of "Gone With the Wind" sequel "Scarlett."

Through it all, Schwarzkopf smiled, joked, shook hands and gave each person his loopy, left-handed signature.

POLICE BRIEFS

Domestic dispute brings two arrests

Patricia Ann Wayne, 27, 2650 Hartwell Ave., Sanford, was charged with battery on a law enforcement officer, with domestic violence and with resisting arrest with violence when she was arrested Thursday by Sanford Police officers.

Officers also arrested Druscilla Dee Ciccone, 27, of the same address and charged her with domestic violence.

Police said that Wayne and Ciccone, who police describe as her "live in girlfriend" were involved in a domestic dispute when it became violent with each side kicking and scratching the other.

A check of Ciccone's identification information revealed an active warrant for her arrest on misdemeanor charges, police said.

When officers attempted to arrest her, Wayne tried to prevent the arrest, they said.

When police tried to restrain Wayne, they said, she kicked and screamed. They said that it took two officers to handcuff her.

Wayne was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where she was held in lieu of $3,000 bond.

Ciccone was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $1,500 bond.

Driving violations alleged

David Paul Holladay, 22, 2517 S. Sanford Ave., Sanford was charged with driving with a suspended license when he was arrested by Lake Mary Police on Thursday.

Police said they saw him weaving back and forth through traffic so they stopped him.

Police said that he told them he did not have his drivers license or vehicle registration.

They said he smelled of alcohol but that there was insufficient evidence to charge him with DUI.

A check of his identity in the police computer, however, revealed that his drivers license had been suspended.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where he was held in lieu of $500 bond.

Verbal abuse turns violent

Bobby Lee Bradford, 41, 1209 W. 8th St., Sanford, was charged with domestic violence and resisting arrest without violence when he was arrested by Sanford Police on Thursday.

Police said he had been verbally abusing his wife when he suddenly struck his wife Barbara and daughter and knocked them to the ground.

When police arrived and tried to arrest him, they said, he tried to pull away and began hitting his head against a utility pole.

Police took him to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility where, they said, he began to hit his head on a concrete wall.

He was held on $1,000 bond.

Violence erupts at home

Mark Lane Mooney, 32, 184 Morning Glory Dr., Lake Mary, was charged with domestic violence when he was arrested by Seminole County sheriff's officers on Thursday.

Deputies said Mooney's wife reported that he had pulled her by her ear, grabbed her around the throat and thrown her to the floor during an argument.

He was taken to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $2,500 bond.

Trespassing charged

James Edward Stiltner, 45, 3291 S. Sanford Ave., Sanford, was charged with trespassing after a warning when he was arrested by Sanford Police on Thursday.

Police said that he had been issued a formal trespass warning at the Holiday Inn, 530 N. Palmetto Ave., Sanford, on Sept. 21.

He had returned on Thursday, police said, and was asked to leave.

When police arrived on Thursday, he still refused to leave, and identified himself as Ross Perot.

He was transported to the John E. Polk Correctional Facility and held on $500 bond.

Zoo welcomes backers

SANFORD — The monkeys peered cautiously from their cage at the entrance to the Central Florida Zoo on Saturday, unused to seeing throngs of humans before breakfast.

But 350 people, all of whom had supported the zoo financially in the past, were invited to have breakfast with the animals and tour the facilities before the zoo opened to the general public.

Arvida, developers of the Heathrow community in Lake Mary, sponsored the event and provided the continental breakfast for the humans.

"I think it's going really well," said Melanie Bartlett, a spokesman for Arvida. "We've had a lot of people come through here this morning to see the facilities."

Bartlett said that Arvida wanted to thank those who had supported the zoo in the past and to ask them to continue their financial support in the future.

"We have done what we could to help the zoo, we wanted to help show off the facilities," Bartlett said.

In addition to tours of the zoo, those in attendance were treated to special presentations about the dietary needs and feeding habits of many of the zoo residents, about the medical and dental care the animals receive and about the reptiles who live at the zoo.

Maria Keldor of Sanford and her husband John listened to the presentation about the medical care that the animals get and then went back to the zoo.

"You get better care than I do," John called to the monkeys.

The Keldors said that they have been supporting the zoo for several years and have seen it grow greatly.

"It's a lovely facility," Maria said. "We like to come here and just stroll around."

Bartlett said that Arvida will probably host a similar program next year.

"This worked very well," she said. "I think everyone will be pleased."

Sanford man shot to death

By VICKI BOESCHNER

SANFORD — A fight between two elderly neighbors left one dead and the other under investigation, Sanford Police said Saturday.

Late Friday morning, a police spokesman said, neighbors Otis Fuquay of 1016 Willow Ave., and Elliott Bellamy, of 1018 Willow Ave., got into an argument on Bellamy's front lawn that ended in Fuquay's death.

Police said that Fuquay, who was 81 or 82 years old, may have been drinking when he came to Bellamy's house and pulled out a knife and threatened Bellamy with it.

Witnesses told police that it was not the first time that Fuquay had threatened his neighbors with a knife.

Bellamy did not know why Fuquay wanted to fight with him or why he had threatened him with a knife, police said.

In what police called "self defense", Bellamy, 70, shot Fuquay once in the chest. Police said Fuquay died while being transported to the hospital for treatment.

Police said that Bellamy told them that he fired because he feared for his life.

I am writing this letter of endorsement for Sheriff Don Eslinger, because I believe that he is the best man for the job.

The leadership that he has shown as Sheriff of Seminole County for the past two years is second to none.

Now programs that he has initiated for each of you will ensure a higher quality and level of law enforcement service for Seminole County. Along with new department policies and procedures he is continuing to prove his leadership by setting a higher standard of professionalism and accountability.

This is why I take great pride in joining other Seminole County Police Chiefs in endorsing Sheriff Don Eslinger as Sheriff of this County.

A gimmick?

President Bush's plan to allow taxpayers to earmark up to 10 percent of their income taxes to pare the national debt has been dismissed on Capitol Hill, predictably, as election-year gimmickry.

But the fiscal truth is that Bush's idea, if adopted, would pose a frontal challenge to the profligate spending policies pursued by Congress during the last four years. Just as important, it would empower taxpayers to take direct action against the deficit. And that by itself would curtail the clout of Democratic committee chairmen and entrenched interest groups that long have dominated the budget process.

The strength of the president's proposal is its sheer simplicity.

Under the White House formula, tax filers could dedicate, through a checkoff on their returns, anywhere from 1 percent to 10 percent of their payments to the Internal Revenue Service for cutting the $4 trillion federal debt. The earmarked money would be set aside in a special trust fund, which could be used only to whittle down the debt.

The ultimate level of debt reduction would depend, of course, on how much money tax filers devoted for that purpose. Individuals are expected to pay about $515 billion in income taxes next year. If all filers dedicated the full 10 percent, it would decrease the debt by $50 billion. A study by the Congressional Budget Office projects that, under such a formula, the maximum annual debt reduction would grow to $263 billion in four years.

The key to making the White House strategy work is to require automatic, dollar-for-dollar cuts in spending to match the money set aside for debt reduction. Clearly, the plan would be an empty exercise if it were offset by the creation of new debt generated through higher annual deficits.

With guaranteed spending cuts equal to the amount dedicated for debt reduction, taxpayers would know that every dollar they set aside in the trust fund would trigger lower government outlays. Consequently, the White House proposal would test the view that Americans really do not want the deep level of spending cuts needed to balance the budget.

If, in fact, taxpayers were unhappy with the cutbacks in government spending, the amount of money earmarked for the trust fund would decline. On the other hand, if taxpayers supported, the checkoff enthusiastically, it would slow the growth of the budget substantially.

During the last four years, overall federal spending has soared despite steady decreases in defense expenditures. Domestic outlays have surged at a much faster clip under President Bush than under Ronald Reagan or Jimmy Carter.

The explosion in non-defense appropriations helps explain why the deficit is expected to reach a record $333.5 billion this year and jump to $341 billion in 1993.

Since 1989, the most dramatic spending increases have occurred in entitlement programs such as Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid (Medi-Cal in California). Taken together, entitlement programs have grown at an average rate of 8 percent a year, even after adjusting for inflation.

Not surprisingly, the federal budget now consumes 24 percent of the gross domestic product, compared to 22.1 percent four years ago. In 1993, federal spending is projected to devour 24.3 percent of the nation's economic output.

In his acceptance speech in Houston, the president belatedly pledged to cap the growth of entitlement programs and to veto any appropriations bill that exceeds the administration's ceilings. His renewed commitment to controlling the deficit stands in sharp contrast to Bill Clinton's call for $200 billion in new spending during the next four years. Only among such big spenders is the Bush checkoff plan summarily rejected as a gimmick.

Be sure to cast vote this Thursday

Mark your calendars, appointment books or tie a string around your finger to help you remember Thursday Oct. 1, 1992. It is unusual for voters to go to the polls on Thursday, because Tuesday is the usual day. However, this year the second primary is being held the first Thursday in October.

Seminole County has 122,136 eligible voters. Of this number 40,203 or 33 percent voted in the first primary. Statistics reveal that second primaries attract fewer voters. During the Governor's race in 1990, 28.1 percent of registered Seminole County voters exercised their franchise. The second primary witnessed a voter turnout of 16 percent. In 1988, when the presidency was the prize, 27 1/2 percent voted in the first primary and 18.7 percent in the second primary. Supervisor of Elections Sandra Goard is anticipating a voter turnout of 19-21 percent for the second primary, Thursday, Oct. 1, 1992.

Decisions made in primaries are critical. Winners of some primaries automatically become office holders when there is no opposing candidate from the other party. A case in point is the fact that Maryanne Morse was re-elected clerk of the court because the only person opposing her was Mona McGregor, a fellow Republican. The second primary will decide who will represent us in House District 37. The two candidates seeking that office are Republicans Wes Pennington and Lee Constantine; they have no Democratic opposition.

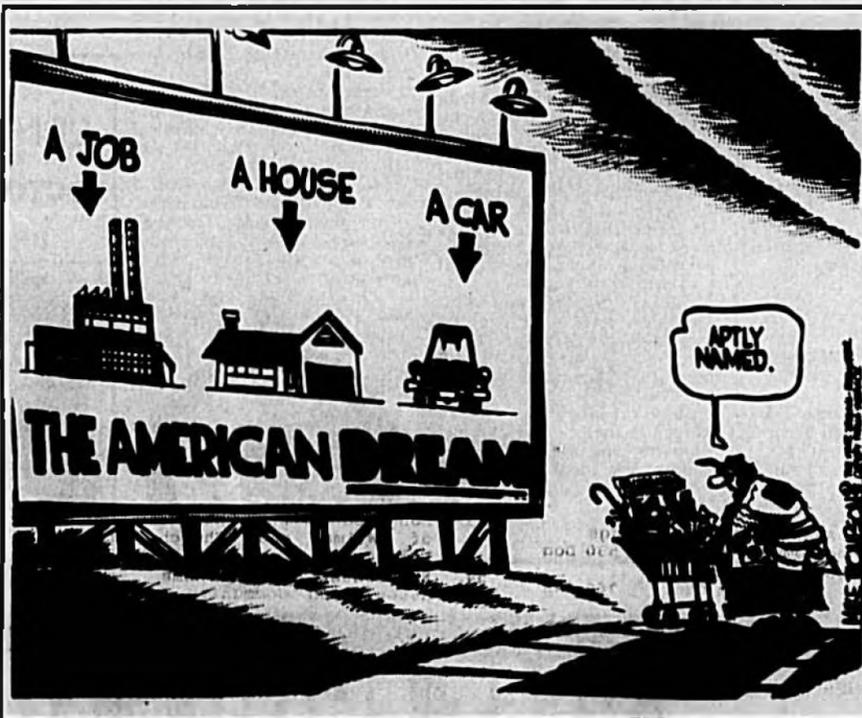

Seminole County's precincts have expanded to 133. However, Democrats in 30 precincts will have candidates to choose between; there is no contention among Democrats for any countywide office in the second primary. Conversely, Republicans in all 133 precincts should vote for Larry Conniff or Don Eslinger for sheriff. Republicans in Congressional District III will choose between Steve Kelley and Don Weidner. Democrats will choose between Corrine Brown and Andrew E. "Andy" Johnson for the same seat. Choices will be made between Candice Crawford and Buddy Dyer, Democratic candidates for State Senate 14th District.

If you have not registered for the second primary, it is too late. However, there is still time to register for the general election in November. The deadline for registering for the Nov. 1, 1992 election is 5 p.m., Monday, Oct. 5, 1992.

In order to combat voter apathy among young voters who statistics consistently reveal do not vote, volunteer deputy registrars have been registering young people at the various high schools. Pre-registration for 17-year-olds is an option. Should their 18th birthday fall on election day they would be permitted to vote. All eighteen-year-old residents are eligible to vote. The League of Women Voters held a voter registration drive at Seminole High School recently. Volunteer deputy registrars are scheduled for Lake Mary High School Oct. 1, 1992, just before the Oct. 5, 1992 deadline for registering people for the general election.

The only residents who meet age and residency requirements but are ineligible to vote are those convicted of a felony or declared mentally incompetent. Persons convicted of a felony in Florida must apply to the Department of Clemency for restoration of their civil rights. This process involves civil rights being restored by the Pardoning Board if they render a decision favorable to the applicant. Individuals declared mentally incompetent, must prove they are no longer incompetent.

In the case of a felony, the supervisor of elections is notified by the clerk of circuit court of persons convicted and their names are removed from the voter rolls. Relative to incompetency, information is provided by the Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services; these names are also removed from voting lists.

Pro-life, pro-choice compatible

AUGUSTA, Maine — Not far from the domed statehouse of this capital city, is a modest white-frame building that houses the Christian Civic League. Nothing about the architecture gives off a hint of its history. From this former outpost, Benjamin Buber, anti-evolutionist, fundamentalist, and author of "The Devil Loose in Maine" ran as the presidential candidate of The Prohibition Party, in 1976.

Today, the Christian Civic League is run by a man from another generation of conservatives, Jasper Wyman. If Wyman learned anything from the story of his predecessor, he says, it's that prohibition doesn't work as well as persuasion. That's true, he adds, whether the issue is alcohol or—as it is now—abortion.

"For years," explains the earnest 36-year-old father of three, "the country thought they would deal with drinking by force of law. But until people were persuaded that drinking wasn't good for them, that it would cause harm, would kill their loved ones on the highway, passing a law didn't make a lot of sense."

The analogy to abortion became clear to him, he says, only after years as a leader in the pro-life fight for a ban on abortion. He remembers a line from a conservative think-tank piece by Frederick Mathews-Green that influenced his own thinking: "No woman wants an abortion as she wants an ice cream cone or a Porsche. She wants an abortion as an animal caught in a trap, wants to gnaw off its own leg."

"I don't see us resolving this by force of law. The only thing we can do," he says of the pro-life movement, "is persuade women and men by offering better choices."

So Jasper Wyman, anti-pro-nography, anti-ERA, anti-gay rights and ardently anti-abortion, has come to be "pro-choice." He has become part of the nascent movement searching for common ground in the abortion wars.

The former state legislator, the once-upon-a-time liberal Democrat who became a culturally conservative Republican, the man who ran as a sacrificial Republican candidate against Sen. George Mitchell, has written a new manifesto for pro-lifers. In effect, he tells them to put aside the crusade for a legal ban in favor of the quest for what he calls "Better Choices."

"If you say to a woman, you can have an abortion or drop out and go on welfare, take your choice, she'll say I don't like those choices," says Wyman earnestly. "We can end abortion on demand, but not by taking an absolutist position. We can end it by slowly presenting better choices."

His agenda for the pro-life community begins with the simple premise: "To end abortion in America we must eliminate the root causes of abortion." First of all, he says, "Pro-lifers must drop their unreasonable and indefensible opposition to birth control."

Wyman goes on to spell out a legislative program. Job protection for pregnant women, speedier adoption laws, prenatal care, increased welfare, sex education, teen parenting programs. Not surprisingly, many outraged pro-life activists in Maine accused Wyman of treason, not seeking common ground but giving up ground.

If he believes—as he does—that abortion is murder, how can he compromise? "I don't know that you compromise in your heart and soul," he says. "but you can try to find the best way to go there."

Many pro-choice activists view Wyman with suspicion, as a political opportunist, a right-to-life pragmatist in a pro-choice Republican state. Nancy Kelleher, the associate director of Planned Parenthood, describes his legislative program as a watered-down or conservative version of Planned Parenthood positions, and unlikely to receive funding from this strapped state. But she says respectfully that "he really stuck his neck out on this" and that "he truly cares about this issue."

Indeed, these days when every public person has staked out a position on abortion, the political arguments are frozen and any movement off the mark is instantly seen as evidence—GOTCHA!—of hypocrisy or waffling. In such an atmosphere, the willingness to move in both risky and welcome.

"I'm on the winning side," says Wyman. "In our lifetime we'll see abortion greatly reduced but only when we have a humane society that provides choices." Pro-life, pro-choice. You can be both.

The willingness to move is both risky and welcome.

Who is against low interest? Savers!

WASHINGTON — George Bush states he doesn't know anybody who is against low interest rates. William Seidman, the former chief regulator of the banking industry during the Bush administration, brands that as one of "the most insane statements I've ever heard."

"The old people have had their savings robbed to benefit the banks, to boost the banks profits," says Seidman. "They have taken the money from the old people and the savers and put it on the bottom line of the banks. The Federal Reserve is reducing interest rates far below where they would be in normal markets."

Seidman hails low rates as a boon to the balance sheets of beleaguered businesses and borrowers. But he terms the earnings evaporation facing the elderly as "an emerging political issue" — one that is inflamed by record bank profits. The nation's 11,665 banks have earned nearly $18 billion through June of this year, a windfall owing to the lowest rates paid to depositors in generations.

"At least politically those people (elderly) are awakening to the fact that every time George Bush says to the Fed to cut the rates, they are cutting their income," Seidman said. "And there are a hell of a lot more of them than there are banks."

All money decisions flow from the Federal Reserve Board, which despite its vaunted independence, Seidman regards historically as one of the most politically driven institutions in Washington. He doesn't chalk off to coincidence the fact that there have been three reductions this year alone in the federal funds rate — nor does he spare his sometime tennis partner and friend Alan Greenspan from criticism.

Seidman says the Fed chairman has shown uncommon charity in letting rates drop to avoid being "blamed if Bush loses" this November. "What the Fed is doing, and George Bush loves it, is setting low short-term interest rates. The Fed is complying with the administration," Seidman says.

These are the ruminations of a lifelong Republican, not the rabid rantings of a wild-eyed liberal. Nearly a year after departing as the chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., from which he managed the crisis and clean up of failed banks and S&Ls, Seidman took White House officials to the woodshed during a recent interview with us. Nonetheless, he expects to vote for Bush, despite serving as an informal adviser to Ross Perot earlier this summer.

Seidman saves some of his most scorching criticism for members of Bush's palace guard, which whitewashed warnings of the gathering storm. "Somebody should have told George Bush two years ago that this recession is different, that we are in a recession," he says. "George Bush has been, in my view, sunk by the fact that he had more brown-nosers around him in the White House and the domestic area. And that's what he wanted."

Seidman relates one White House meeting with former Chief of Staff John Sununu. He says he warned Sununu early on that the country was headed for a disaster in the S&L area and that real estate values were going down the tube.

"You know what his answer was? 'We're not worried, you're just one of those guys ...' and then he just yawned. That's as close as I got to Bush."

The Bush administration made another politically tinged decision recently by opposing hefty hikes in the insurance premiums banks pay to the deposit insurance fund, agreeing to only half the amount proposed by regulators last May.

team called "The House of David." They carried a portable lighting system. They came to Sanford a couple of times. During the day the members of the club would "erect" the lighting system and play a local team that night. If you can remember the "House of David" team you'll recall they all had beards. I'm reminded of that when I see some of today's bearded ball players.

Night baseball on a permanent basis came to Sanford in 1937. The Florida State League reorganized in 1938. Sanford was a member. All home games were played in the afternoons. But just prior to the 1937 season a lighting system was installed at the old Municipal Park.

And that leads me to recall another barnstorming baseball team that "played" Sanford several times, battling a local nine. Do you remember the "Bloomer Girls" baseball team? They wore blue colored outfits and brother (or sister) they could really play baseball.

Recently you wrote about Henry and Susan (Bubba) Wight and their sons and daughters. Where did the Wight's come from?

At Mr. and Mrs. Wight first came from Georgia to Jacksonville. In 1911 they moved to Sanford. Mr. Wight founded the local Wight Grocery Company, a wholesale house serving retail grocery stores in Central Florida. At the outset in Sanford, Mrs. Wight, known to everybody as "Bubba," supplemented the family income by writing articles for home and garden magazines. And if you've ever wondered where the residential section of Sanford called "Mayfair" got its name, you'll have to thank Mrs. Wight. In January, 1924, "Bubba" was awarded first prize for naming the subdivision "Mayfair." It was a $25 check. By the way, someone recently asked who were salesmen for the Wight firm. I can account for five of them. They were Hubert Pearce, Lyman Phillips, Wally Dietricksh, Duke Dodson and St. Clair White.

Back in the 1930s Seminole County Sheriff J. F. McClelland had a couple sons who played football for Seminole High. What were their first names and what happened to them?

The eldest was George, the youngest was Leland. George was a high-stepping halfback at Seminole High and got a football scholarship at Stetson University in DeLand. He played under Coach Brady Cowell. I think George's highest moment during his football career came when a senior at Stetson, Cowell took his Hatters to Florida Field in Gainesville for what had been touted as a season opener warm-up for the Gators. McClelland played an inspired game. He led the Hatters to a 18 to 13 upset over Florida.

If my memory serves me right, the Gators were coached by Charlie Bachman. He left Florida and became the head coach at Michigan State, a job he held for many years. Or, it may have been Dutch Stanley. And, some of you old Stetson grads and fans might remember the Hatters had a quarterback named Lynn Warren. He was a crackerjack, too. And, by the way, he never wore a helmet. In those days you could get away with that but not today.

The younger McClelland, Leland, after his playing days at SHS got a football scholarship to attend Louisiana College in Pineville along with Bralley Odham. Several years later, Seminole High back, Joe Davis, who became a circuit court Judge, was awarded a scholarship in the same school. Leland now lives in Baton Rouge.

From time to time you've mentioned Joe Tinker of Orlando who was a part of the famed Chicago Cubs' double play trio. "Tinker to Evers to Chance." Did you know he had two sons who also played professional baseball?

No I didn't until I checked with my "consultant" Buddy Lake. He tells me their names were Robbie and Joe, Jr. Even I learn things when you folks toss your questions my way. "Keep 'em coming!"

Some months ago you wrote that back in 1932 a fellow in Miami tried to assassinate president elect Franklin D. Roosevelt. The bullet missed Roosevelt but struck and killed Mayor Anton Cermack of Chicago. He was in the car with FDR. The assassin was named Zangara. I've looked up his first name. It was Giuseppe. He was not a Floridian. He lived in Hackensack, N.J.

Thanks for the information. By the way, Zangara was indicted, tried, convicted, placed on death row at Ralford and electrocuted in a matter of just weeks.

Did you know that the first DC-3 airplanes built by Donald Douglas carried 14 passengers and a bed for each?

No, I didn't. But I did some checking and found out that these planes, first used by American Airlines, were not feasible financially. So, they eliminated the beds and installed 21 seats. That did work out financially. By the way, those first DC-3's were powered by two 900-horsepower engines and could fly 180 mph.

Take care and we'll be with you next Sunday morning for a brief trip to "Way Back When."

City building faces default and auction

By NICK PFENFAUF
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — The Sanford Riverfront project building, owned by the City of Sanford, is in mortgage default. The building is to be auctioned to the highest bidder on the Seminole County Courthouse steps Tuesday.

The building presently houses the offices of Dr. George Edwards, DMD. The Orlando Sentinel and Sanford Wellness Center.

On Nov. 25, 1985, after seeking bids for leasing the building, the City Commission approved a lease arrangement with John L. Smith, son of Mayor Betty Smith. According to Commission minutes, Mayor Smith filed a conflict of interest statement, and declined to vote on the matter.

The lease was finally approved April 28, 1986, and signed by Mayor Smith.

John Smith then obtained a loan of $700,000 from Sun Bank in Sanford. The loan, approved June 29, 1990, was to be paid with an ending date of July 1, 1993.

According to documents in the 18th Judicial Circuit Court files, Smith failed to pay property taxes for 1990 and 1991, and a motion for default was filed against Smith by Sun Bank on Jan. 8, 1992.

At the present time, with the unpaid mortgage of $689,352, unpaid taxes, court and attorney fees, the amount has now reached a total of $813,872.98.

A judgement has been declared for default and summary final judgement against Smith and the Sanford Wellness Center.

Mark Tracy, who presently owns the Wellness Center business said, "John Smith is no longer associated with us, although he was at one time. I don't know exactly why my business is included in the case, but I intend to be on hand for the auction and see if I can't purchase the property."

The present connection with the City of Sanford has not been approached in the court documents regarding the judgement and pending auction. Attorney Donna McIntosh, who is handling the case for the City, was not available for comment. Sun Bank's attorney, David A. Jones, of Orlando, was also unavailable.

At the present time, there is no specific indication of what involvement the City of Sanford may have with the sale of the property, identified as owned by the City.

The auction meanwhile, has been scheduled for 11 a.m., on the steps of the Seminole County Courthouse.

Leatherwood said. "We have been considering our south-end terminal (Sanford), and have been internally looking at moving it." She added, "This isn't in the immediate future, as we don't have the capital at the present time."

Regarding the plans for the double-decker trains scheduled to begin operating in 1995 Mahoney said, "Well, that's a ways down the road, and that's a subject we'll have to deal with in the future."

Robertson summed it up. "These are the facts. We are looking to see what possibilities we have in moving. Obviously, with 25 percent more ridership planned with the double-decker trains, we have got to be doing something. There is no way we can continue at the present facility."

low at first, but as the sun fought through the clouds, more people began to make their way to Fort Mellon Park.
"People might have stayed away because of the rain at first," Vallot said, "but they'll be here."
Lamar Richardson, an assistant principal at Seminole High School, came to lend his support to the event.
"I think what he (Vallot) is doing out here is great," he said. "I've been working in Seminole County schools for 27 years and I think this is a great way to get to know the kids."
Eugene "Mean Gene" Butler of Sanford, a party disc jockey, once again volunteered his services as an entertainer for the event.

"No matter what, Gene has been here," Vallot said. "He is always ready to help the kids out."
The Sanford Police Department handed out badges to the youngest participants and had anti-drug information for all.
Mr. Bill's Real Barbecue brought their mobile barbecue pit out from their First Street restaurant to cook the meat that had been donated by Winn Dixie and Publix for the occasion.

Hungry Howies and Pizza Hut donated pizzas for the event.
Vallot said he hopes that other businesses will come forward to help sponsor future parties.
"It only costs about $300 or $400 to put something like this together, I think," he said. "If we would get a couple of businesses together we could do something like this every month."
Vallot said he doesn't know when the next event will take place, but he hopes that it is soon.
"We'll do it again as soon as we can," he said.

Schools handle post-storm loss

HOMESTEAD — The schools that sheltered so many victims in the days surrounding Hurricane Andrew continue to be a source of comfort and tranquility, a place to learn, to be fed and clothed, to have some relief from the chaos and teachers were exhausted only two weeks into the school year.
"The scars we're going to have to deal with, it's going to be a long, long time in healing," said school Superintendent Octavio Valdeco. "The most important thing to do is to give the kids comfort and tranquility, a place to learn, to be fed and clothed, to have some relief from the chaos that they have to face at the end of the day."
For the 700 students who have found their way back to Redland Middle School in the heart of Dade County's hard-hit rural community, students say the school is giving them just that.

comfort and relief.
"I'm glad we started. People said we got an extra two weeks to play, but all we did was work," said Redland eighth-grader Amanda Garner.
Hurricane Andrew forced the district to push the first day of school from Aug. 31 to Sept. 14.
The Redland area in southwest Dade County is named for its red soil that has been a boon to the agricultural community. Another 600 students, rich and poor and from all ethnic backgrounds, still are missing from the large school here.
"When the hurricane came through, it was like dying," said 13-year-old Michelle. "You didn't get to say good-bye or say things you wanted to say to your friends before they were gone."
Michelle not only meant the students who were gone by way of moving, but she and her friends lost a classmate, 12-year-old Naomi Browning, by way of a falling beam during the storm.
"Naomi was one of my good friends. I also have neighbors who are dead, too, but I just didn't want to face it at first," said Buje, 13, burying her face in her hands as she began to cry.
The students in the group asked that their last names not be used.

while before it is Sanford's turn again.
"But the people there are so special," Bartholow said. "The Homestead Police Department welcomed us with open arms and treated us like queens. Many of them had nothing left, but they were concerned that our room was OK. It was very special."
Bartholow said that the damage to the buildings that she saw was so bad that "there was nothing there that was higher than your head."
She said that there were no trees as far as they could see and that the roadways were so clogged with debris and unguided traffic that it took 15 minutes to travel the less than two miles to work each day.
"It was depressing to look at the devastation all around," she said.

They said the Homestead area was like a war zone.
"Everywhere you looked there were military people," Allen said. "In the parking lot...at every intersection...there were armed military people."
She said that once she was used to the idea of the military presence, however, it offered a certain sense of security.
"You got used to it and it felt good."

dark and come home in the dark."
The two women stayed at Homestead Holiday Inn, which they described as only "half an inn" because half the building had been nearly destroyed by the storm.
The wing in which they stayed had electricity powered only by a generator. There was "usually" hot water and there was no television. They said they didn't mind the lack of television because after a long day on the job all they wanted to do was sleep.
Some of the local police officers tried to wire a makeshift antenna for them to be able to watch TV, but they never did.
The women described their room as relatively luxurious because the windows were intact and, thus, not boarded up.

They said the Homestead area was like a war zone.

Lazenby heads airport association

Mack R. Lazenby, executive director of the Titusville-Cocoa Airport Authority, has been elected president of the Florida Airport Managers Association for 1992-93. He officially takes office on Oct. 1.

Lazenby was director of the Central Florida Regional Airport in Sanford before becoming executive director of the Titusville-Cocoa Airport Authority in 1989.

The Florida Airport Managers Association is a trade group whose membership includes 81 publicly owned and publicly operated airports in the Sunshine State. Member airports include all those in Florida with scheduled air passenger service and a majority of the general aviation airports in the state. Collectively, association member airports handle well over 95 percent of the civilian air traffic in the state. The association is headquartered in Tallahassee.

The Titusville-Cocoa Airport Authority operates three airports in Brevard County: Space Center Executive Airport, Arthur Dunn Airport and Merritt Island Airport.

Other officers for the coming 12 months include: Jerry L. Sealy of Tallahassee, vice president; James E. Johnson, senior director of airports for the Hillsborough County Aviation Authority, Tampa, secretary-treasurer; and William H. Crouch, airport manager for the City of Fort Lauderdale, immediate past president.

Mortgage rates rising

NEW YORK — A recent spike in long-term interest rates is pushing mortgage rates higher, and homeowners, nervous that rates will continue to rise, are rushing to refinance their mortgages now.

If interest rates continue their upward trend — as many economists believe will happen — refinancing will no longer be a financial boon for homeowners. But analysts and mortgage bankers say rates need to climb much higher before that happens.

For the time being, homeowners who are undecided should take the refinancing plunge, analysts suggest.

Miami-based firm acquired

NEW YORK — American Home Products Corp. announced it will acquire Symbiosis Corp., a Miami-based pharmaceutical company, for $175 million.

Under terms of the agreement, American Home Products will make additional payments to Symbiosis based on the company's performance.

The privately held Symbiosis develops and manufactures disposable instruments for endoscopic and laparoscopic surgery.

Unemployment claims rise

WASHINGTON — The economy grew at a slightly less anemic rate than first thought in the April-June quarter, but new claims for unemployment benefits rose for the fourth week in a row, the government said.

Consumer caution held the seasonally adjusted advance in the gross domestic product to an annual rate of 1.5 percent in the second quarter, the Commerce Department said Thursday, revising its previous estimate of 1.4 percent.

Separately, the Labor Department said 414,000 Americans filed applications for unemployment during the week ended Sept. 12, an increase of 15,000 partly attributed to claims from victims of Hurricane Andrew.

N.Y. shipper will invest $220 million in cruise line

Associated Press

MIAMI — A New York bulk shipping line succeeded on its second try at getting a piece of a cruise line, committing $220 million to a joint venture with The Chandris Group, which operates Celebrity and Fantasy Cruises.

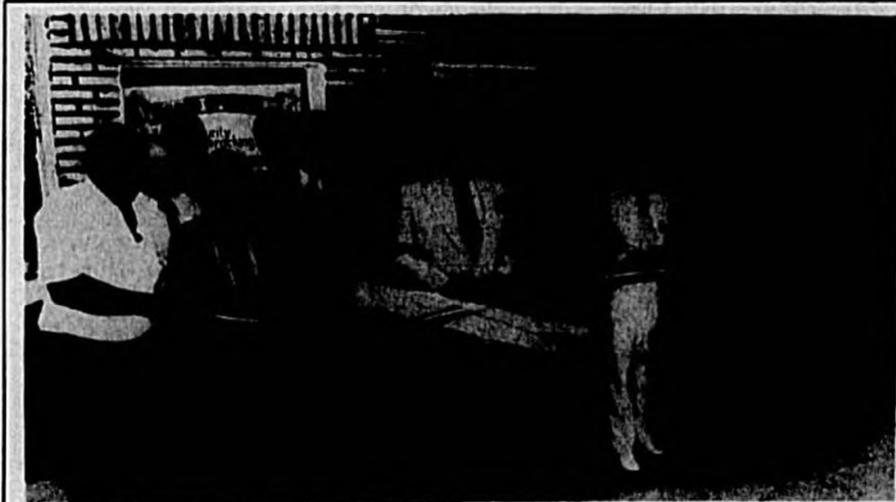

Chandris, which has a fleet of six ships, will retain majority control with 51 percent of the newly created Celebrity Cruise Lines Inc. in the deal with Overseas Shipholding Group.

The same company courted another Miami-based cruise company, Kloster Cruise Ltd., last November. But talks broke down on a $175 million loan offered for a half share of the operator of Norwegian Cruise Line, Royal Cruise Line and Royal Viking Line.

"We were in negotiations with Kloster and we came to a decision not to proceed with the transaction, but our commitment to the cruise industry has remained strong," said Michael Recanat, senior vice president of Overseas Shipholding.

He said Thursday his company offers Chandris "a long-term commitment, new capital and a belief in the industry's future growth." The deal is scheduled to close in late October.

SBA offers guarantees of credit

By CATHERINE WILSON
AP Business Writer

MIAMI — Small business owners who don't qualify for conventional loans are getting some help from the federal government, which is offering to guarantee revolving credit lines from banks in 13 Southern states.

The new Small Business Administration effort, called the Green Line program, provides the equivalent of a high-limit credit card, offering cash advances and requiring monthly payments.

"We're optimistic that it's really going to take off," said SBA administrator Patricia Saiki, who unveiled the program Thursday for Miami bankers facing requests for hurricane recovery money.

The guarantees, which cover a region critical to President Bush's re-election hopes, come on top of $63 million in disaster recovery loans issued by SBA since the hurricane.

About 40 percent of small businesses damaged by Hurricane Hugo in South Carolina failed to reopen. With that lesson in mind, federal and state disaster relief programs for businesses have focused in the month since Andrew on getting money to them quickly.

The SBA will guarantee 85 percent of five-year, $750,000 credit lines from convention lenders. Interest rates will be capped at 2.75 percent above the prime rate.

The agency previously offered only direct loans and guarantees on long-term loans, but the new program will help businesses fill the short-term financial gap between business orders and deliveries, Saiki said.

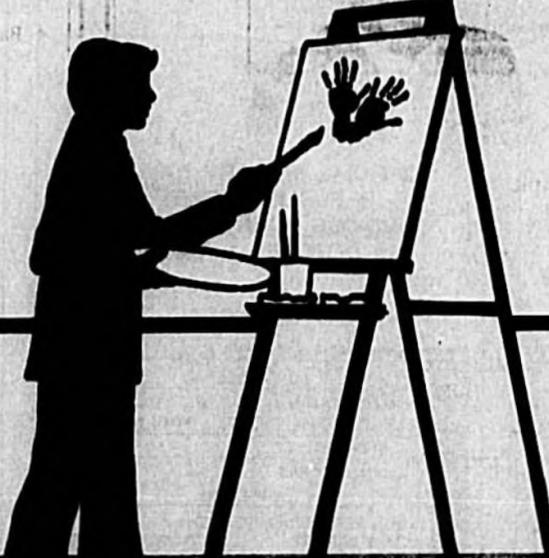

The program was tested for the last 1½ years in New England. "a test bed where you had very difficult circumstances" from the combined effects of the recession and bank failures, said Mitchell Stanley, one of Saiki's deputies. "We wanted to test it in a very harsh environment. Regulatory problems there are very significant."

Lending tightened during the recession as banks were forced by regulators to cut their delinquent loans, and wary businesses have been reluctant to take on more debt with the economy in bad shape.

"We think it's going to be something that's enthusiastically received because bankers have been sharing with us their concern that the short-term loans are just not available," Saiki said.

The SBA believes the program could be worth double the $120 million in standard SBA loans and guarantees issued in Florida in the 11 months ended Aug. 31, said Stanley.

Elizabeth Hicks of Barnett Bank said the new guarantee is "something that's been needed a long time" in an agency serving businesses that generally do not qualify for traditional bank loans.

INCUMBENT INVESTIGATED

We have heard it all before, the incumbents overzealous actions leading to lawsuits with settlements, his admission to alcohol use, while involved in an accident with a county vehicle, grand jury investigations with critical conclusions about him, the wrongful arrest of a person by the sheriff himself, the incumbent's attendance at an out-of-state federal training school for over two (2) months while still receiving full pay and benefits, and finally, big donations to the sheriff's campaign.

It is regarded that the political appointment of the Incumbent to Sheriff by former Governor Bob Martinez was a mistake. Consider, can a man in his early 30's, without an academic education, earning over eighty thousand dollars per year, successfully lead a department with over 500 employees, many with advanced degrees and years of law enforcement experience?

His record is controversial. The grand jury investigation summed it up best, "We, the Grand Jury, find that Sheriff Eslinger ignored procedures and by so doing brought about this miscarriage of justice." Clearly, the Incumbent has not earned your vote.

Incumbent Trains At Your Expense

While Sheriff, the incumbent enrolled at an out-of-state Federal Training Program taking over two months leave with pay and benefits. The pay rate for sheriff is over 80 thousand dollars per year. Seminole County tax payers paid the sheriff to go to school. Because of a lack of knowledge, the incumbent needs professional education. This educational expense adds to administrative salaries and the taxes you pay for them. This liberal use of your tax money is inappropriate and can be resolved by electing a qualified candidate.

RESTORE PROFESSIONALISM

Help take political patronage out of your Sheriff's office. With Larry Conniff no on-the-job training is required. He is qualified, the old fashion way, he earned his stripes.

With over twenty years in law enforcement, Larry is fully prepared to provide the decisive leadership. He has a clear vision of both the problems and the solutions. His conservative business philosophy will ensure that Seminole County will see its tax dollars invested wisely and judiciously.

Seminole County deserves a sheriff with only the highest academic credentials. With a Master's degree in Public Administration and a Bachelor's degree in Criminal Justice, Larry Conniff will bring skills, training and competence to the Sheriff's office.

Case sets precedent, but is it important?

By MITCHELL LANDSBERG
AP National Writer

If Heather hates her homework, can she sue? The correct answer is that the question is absurd. But that was the sort of outlandish scenario being suggested last week after a 12-year-old Florida boy went to court to "divorce" his parents.

More sober critics warned that American families might be threatened by less frivolous lawsuits filed by angry children who consider their parents abusive. But that appears to be a minority view. Although legal experts mostly agree that young Gregory Kingsley's case established an important legal precedent, few expect it to have much practical effect.

"It isn't that big a deal," insisted Sanford Katz, a Boston College law professor who specializes in children's issues.

David Liederman, executive director of the Child Welfare League of America, said he expected other children to follow Gregory's lead, but added: "Will it happen much? I don't think so."

Gregory's case was compelling on several levels. It involved a legal doctrine promoted by Hillary Clinton, bureaucratic bungling and a heart-rending story of love and abandonment. And the whole saga was played out nationally on CNN and Court TV.

The facts of the case, briefly, were these: Gregory, who has been in and out of foster care three times, asked to be adopted by his most recent foster family despite his biological mother's desire to have him back. He claimed that she abused and neglected him and should be stripped of her parental rights; she maintained that Florida social workers thwarted her efforts to stay in touch with her son, and that she's capable of being a good mother.

After a two-day hearing in Orlando, a circuit court judge Friday came down on Gregory's side, granting his wish to be adopted by the foster family he's lived with for nearly a year.

What made the case unusual, and possibly unique, was that Gregory "hired" a lawyer on his own (she accepted the case free of charge). Usually, such cases are brought by state agencies or by adults representing a child. In this case, the lawyer was working for the child, rather than in the child's behalf.

It's a technical but significant distinction. "That is the line that we have crossed, and it's an important line," Liederman said. Still, he said, "I don't think it's as dramatic as some would make it — because the whole field has been moving in the direction of making sure children have advocates or representatives in court."

For that change, some people ascribe credit — or blame — to the wife of Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton. Mrs. Clinton is former board chairwoman of the Children's Defense Fund, a Washington-based advocacy group.

Mrs. Clinton, a lawyer, wrote influential law journal articles in the 1970s about children's rights. Among other things, she argued that children, once considered chattel in America, have legal rights and sometimes may require independent legal counsel when their interests differ from those of their parents.

Her views were mildly radical at the time, but have since become standard legal doctrine in more than 100 countries, said Howard Davidson, director of the American Bar Association's Center on Children and the Law.

"I think Gregory's case points out exactly what Hillary Clinton was writing about," he said.

That is precisely the point made by conservative critics of Mrs. Clinton. It is, Mrs. Yoest said, a view that children "don't need the protection of adults — loving adults — when they're facing important life decisions."

The fact that Gregory was granted the right to hire a lawyer and file a petition against his parents marks "a fundamental shift in the way we view children," she said.

That's debatable — children already have the right to sue their parents, and do so with some frequency, Katz said. The difference is that they have done so in the past through an adult, not directly.

Mrs. Yoest agreed that Gregory's case was unlikely to lead to children filing frivolous lawsuits against their parents — the sort of danger suggested by Republican National Chairman Rich Bond when he said Mrs. Clinton wanted children to be "able to sue their parents rather than helping with the chores that they were asked to do."

But Mrs. Yoest worried that children's rights activists — usurping the role of government child welfare officials — might step in and encourage more serious lawsuits by children against their parents. The results, she said, could be emotionally devastating to the children.

Children's rights advocates dismiss such fears. They say judges would make sure that children take legal action only in the most dire cases of abuse or neglect.

On one point, all sides agree: The best solution is to improve the way government oversees the child welfare system. If the government was doing its job, state advocates would have stepped in on Gregory's behalf and he wouldn't have needed a lawyer.

"This child was allowed to fall through the cracks of the child welfare system, and he's representative of thousands of other kids just like him," Davidson said.

Normal childhood now boy's agenda

By RON WOOD
Associated Press Writer

ORLANDO — Now that Gregory Kingsley has been successful in "divorcing" his biological parents under the white-hot glare of the national media spotlight, he will try to lead the life of a normal child and start anew as Shawn Russ.

He's learning to play the saxophone, planning tennis lessons and continuing as a Boy Scout, with its camping and backpacking.

But first he'll find the neon lights are bright on Broadway.

The boy and his new father, George Russ, flew to New York Saturday, where they will attend a Broadway musical, visit a museum and then appear on ABC's Good Morning America on Monday, said Elizabeth Russ, the youngster's new mom.

"This is a reward for going through with it. He's never been on an airplane before," she told The Associated Press Saturday in a telephone interview from her Fruitland Park home.

But Tuesday, the sixth grader, who attends a middle school in Leesburg, will be back in class and may be able to push his celebrity status into the past, she said.

"Hopefully, it will die down and it will be back to normal," said Mrs. Russ, who said the past several weeks have been nerve-racking for the family.

The case was considered precedent-setting because the lawsuit was pursued by a 12-year-old boy and the ruling

"We don't feel like we have a new son, he's been part of our family for a long time."

-Elizabeth Russ, mom

gave a minor increased standing in a court of law.

Shawn hired a lawyer and successfully sued to end what he charged were years of neglect and mistreatment by his biological parents, asking instead to be adopted by the Russes, who served as his foster parents.

"We don't feel like we have a new son, he's been part of our family for a long time," she said.

"I really think he will be able to break out of this cycle of abuse and neglect," she said. "He's a fighter. He's real optimistic."

Shawn is learning to play the saxophone and Mrs. Russ wants him to become involved in sports, suggesting tennis lessons.

The youngster is active in Boy Scouts and likes to go camping and backpacking. His new father is a Scout leader, Mrs. Russ said.

And like many youngsters his age, Shawn has some problems with math, but he's excellent in reading, English and social studies, she said.

Shawn was able to endure years in foster care by constantly reading, she said.

"That's kind of how he survived. He escaped by reading," she said.

The family likes to rent movies and go to the beach, but much of their lives revolves around school activities, homework, and church.

The Russes have eight other children and Shawn will have five brothers and three sisters. Two of the eight are away at college in Idaho.

Rachel Kingsley, the boy's biological mother, has filed notice of appeal on the case and Mrs. Russ hopes it will not be too disruptive to Shawn's sense of security.

"I'm concerned it may be harassing to us. It may be another invasion of our time and money," she said.

Jeri Blair, a Tavares attorney and children's rights defender who represented the boy, said he wants to make a clean break with the past.

"What's next is for him to be a normal little boy ... for a change," Ms. Blair said.

The family and the squirming sixth-grader just spent two grueling days in the courtroom.

But finally the judge terminated Mrs. Kingsley's rights and said, "Gregory, you're the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russ at this moment."

Mrs. Russ cried and hugged her new son.

The judge's ruling culminated a day in which Gregory took the witness stand and nervously recalled bouncing from his mother's home to foster homes. As Christmas and birthdays passed without a card, letter or present from his mother, the articulate boy testified he "thought she forgot about me."

Questions on vasectomy answered

Vasectomy is the simplest and most cost effective form of sterilization. Men undergoing this procedure must be psychologically stable and understand the irreversibility of the procedure and the limited possibility of reversal by way of vaso-vasostomy (reconnecting the vas tubes).

The No-Scalpel method of the Peoples Republic of China is quite popular. The method uses special instruments to make a very small puncture into the scrotum and pull up the vas deferens. This method permits the performance of this operation without the use of a single suture.

lengthy and costly (usually not covered by insurance carriers). Is there an advantage to having a vasectomy, rather than my partner being sterilized (tubal tied)?

In our opinion, vasectomy is simpler and safer. Local anesthesia is used and a vasectomy is less expensive than that of a tubal ligation. The final answer depends on what you and your partner find that will best fit your needs.

E. Jake Jacobo, M.D., is a urologist with an office at 513 W. St. Rd. 454, Suite 302, Longwood.

The health column is provided as a community service by the Seminole County Medical Society. Inquiries may be directed to the medical society.

To better understand why a vasectomy makes a patient unable to have children. During a vasectomy, each vas deferens is blocked so that sperm can not travel through it.

Usually, a piece of each vas deferens is removed and the cut ends sealed.

What effect will a vasectomy have on my body and reproductive system?

None, other than preventing the sperm from traveling through each vas deferens and out through the urethra during ejaculation. Your testes will continue to manufacture sperm; however, the sperm will die and be reabsorbed. You will continue to have erections, there will be no noticeable difference in the amount of fluid ejaculated, nor any difference in the production of hormones.

I've heard that vasectomy may cause hardening of the arteries (atherosclerosis) or other systemic disease in man.

There is no evidence that vasectomy causes hardening of the arteries or other systemic disease.

Is a vasectomy a major surgical procedure?

No. Urologists (specialists of the male reproductive system) can usually perform a vasectomy in the office with local anesthesia. We make two small incisions, one for each side and remove a section. The ends are then sealed with electrocautery or suture material. Following the procedure you will walk out of the minor operating suite and be transported home.

If no general sedation is used you can probably drive your own car. If sedation is used you will need someone to drive you home. By the way, the use of sedatives depends on the wishes of the patient and the doctor preference. Feel free to discuss this matter with your doctor at the time of your interview.

What about after the vasectomy?

You should use ice for the first eight hours.

You should use Ibuprofen for pain if needed. Do not use Aspirin.

You should cancel for the first 24 hours any heavy lifting or major sports activities. From there after your doctor will tell you how much you can do.

Your doctor will alert you about what swelling to expect and symptoms to look for. Complications are rare exceptions.

Does a vasectomy work immediately?

A very emphatic NO! You still have sperm stored between your penis and the point that the vas deferens was cut. It takes about 12 ejaculations to clear the residual sperm. You and your partner should continue using the same or some form of contraception until your doctor, after examining a semen sample, determines that you are sterile.

Is a vasectomy reversible?

For all practical purposes the answer should be no. There are surgical procedures to reconnect the vas, but the success rate is not as good as with the vasectomy. The procedure is

Recent medical studies have shown a link between noise exposure and many medical problems. The list includes high blood pressure, increased heart disease, ulcers, indigestion, insomnia and irritability. Thus it is to your advantage to keep your home as calm and quiet as possible.

If you have problems hearing on the telephone, a special hearing aid can be inserted which contains a volume control. This allows the hard of hearing person to turn up the loudness of the speaker's voice to a comfortable level.

Many people have heard that when Ludwig Van Beethoven wrote his last symphony he was almost totally deaf, but he knew how his music could be made to actually vibrate through the floor, walls and ceiling and thus the inevitable composer could write music without ever being able to hear it if he understood the relationship between the notes and which notes occur in which key.

At stake for Perot: Image, issues, turmoil

By EVAN RAMSTAD
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS — Monday promises to be a day like no other in American politics — top aides of the president and his Democratic rival flying to the headquarters of a sometimes-challenger to defend their proposals before him and his supporters.

Afterward, Ross Perot's people will meet with their man, then he will go on national television and, presumably, give some indication whether or not he will re-enter the presidential race.

The goals of the Bush and Clinton camps are clear enough. They need to impress Perot's backers with their own plans to revive the economy and reduce the budget deficit — without offending anyone by speaking ill of Perot's proposals.

Washington 'gridlock' costs U.S.

By JAMES ROWLEY
and ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON — Americans have never hesitated to criticize their government as slow, expensive and incompetent. Deriding politicians and bureaucrats is a national pastime, but complaints now come with a harder edge that signals deeper discontent.

The evidence is in the poll-taker's notebook — widespread dislike of Congress, President Bush's low approval rating and Ross Perot's meteoric rise as a temporary alternative to the two major party presidential candidates.

Trust in government is "slipping to the danger point," said the Rev. William Linder, who runs a community development program in Newark, N.J.

Voter disillusionment is mirrored by the long list of members of Congress who are retiring, saying farewell to partisan bickering and a legislative stalemate on major issues that has come to be called gridlock.

Gridlock. It's the election-year buzzword for the political traffic jam that prevents the Democratic Congress and the Republican president from crafting solutions to such pressing new problems as the deficit or the rising cost of health care.

For many Americans, gridlock also means government's inability to fix old problems — like cleaning up toxic waste dumps, eliminating job-site hazards that kill or maim workers, and ensuring that pension funds give people financially secure retirements.

These are not just rhetorical issues — they are the problems that affect Americans' personal finances, health and the well-being of their families.

To cure government's ills, some politicians and pundits urge voters to end divided political control of Washington, where Democrats rule the roost on Capitol Hill and Republicans hold sway at the White House.

Bush campaigns against a "gridlock Congress" to blame Democrats for the nation's ills. Bill Clinton tells voters they can end the gridlock by putting him in the White House and returning Democrats to Congress.

Bush can't persuade the Democratic Congress to pass his economic program. Congress hasn't been able to muster the two-thirds majority to override any of the president's vetoes, though members will likely try at least once more before Election Day. Ultimately, voters perceive that this Congress and this White House are locked in a pattern of bicker, dicker and block.

"Things seem to be gradually grinding to a halt," said Kristine Gebbie, secretary of health for the state of Washington.

The seeds of today's stalemate lie in the Constitution's division of power among the president, the Congress and the courts.

By giving the president a veto, the founding fathers purposely made it difficult for Congress to make new laws. The committee system that has evolved in Congress makes the process even harder.

In the House alone, there are 136 subcommittees. Before a bill gets to the floor for a vote, it often must pass through several of these and more than one full committee.

"The framers of our Constitution would be very happy with the way Congress is working," said Bill Frenzel, a former Republican congressman from Minnesota. "Congress has organized itself to deliver the least amount of government."

A bill must clear so many hurdles "it makes it awfully easy for people who don't want things to happen to be successful," Frenzel said.

Much of the public's frustration stems from government's seeming preoccupation with political posturing at the expense of action to solve problems.

They're showing respect, too, in their choices of the people they are sending to Dallas.

President Bush's team includes National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft, campaign chairman Robert Teeter, and Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas.

Representing Democrat Bill Clinton will be campaign chairman Mickey Kantor, retired Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman William Crowe, Sen. David Boren of Oklahoma and civil rights leader Vernon Jordan.

But Perot has more than the feelings of fervent supporters to consider in deciding whether to revive the presidential candidacy he abandoned last month.

He has said that if his backers from the across the nation tell him, "It's a dirty job, Ross, but you've got to do it," then I belong to them."

But there's also his image, the issues he wants addressed, the media scrutiny he would again face and the effect he would have on who would actually win if he got back in.

Leaders of his 50-state ballot drive say they will urge Perot to get back in at the meetings in Dallas.

Analysts say he can't win in November but may well rejoin the race at least in a limited way to keep attention on the issues he thinks are important — and on himself. Aides, too, suggest he will revive his candidacy in some form.

What effect Perot thinks his re-entry would have on the race is unclear. When he left last month, he said a main reason was that he didn't want to disrupt an election he couldn't win.

"What I would be interested in learning from him is if he now feels that's less of a problem because of his diminished prospects or he feels that it remains a problem but is outweighed by inattention to the issues," said Bruce Buchanan, a political scientist at the University of Texas.

Analysts generally believe that Perot will hurt Bush's chances in Texas and Florida but may work against Clinton in California, all prize electoral states.

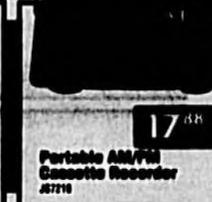

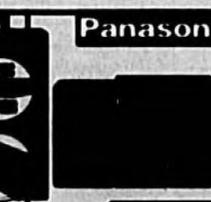

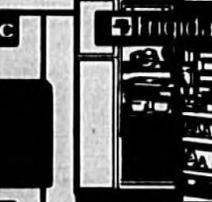

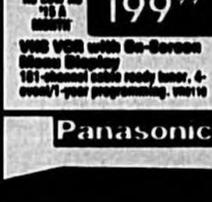

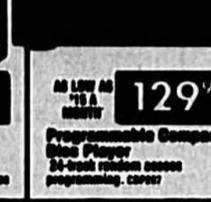

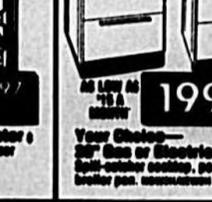

"We can assume he is much more interested in defeating George Bush than electing him and yet he has absolutely no reason to know that that would be the outcome," said Stephen Hess, political analyst at the Brookings Institution. "What clearly will happen is he can't win."

Jim Squires, who was media adviser for Perot, said the Texan knows that but may feel forced to run anyway "because those volunteers won't allow him not to."

WELL DONE

Lotenz reports ace

CASSELBERRY — Jorge J. Lotenz of Casselberry scored a hole-in-one while playing at Deer Run Country Club on July 29. The ace came on the 150-yard No. 3 hole.

Lotenz is now entered in the 32nd annual Drumbule Rusty Nail Hole-In-One Sweepstakes, which reported the ace.

Lotenz and club professional Steve Barfoot, who validated the sweepstakes entry, are both eligible to win the grand prize, a one-week trip for two to Scotland, a tour of the Drumbule Liqueur Co. Ltd. and $1,000 in cash.

AROUND THE STATE

Miami squeaks by Arizona

MIAMI — Steve McLaughlin was barely wide right with a 51-yard field goal on the final play, and top-ranked Miami survived its closest call at the Orange Bowl since 1985 to beat the Wildcats 8-7.

Arizona (1-2-1) was a 27-point underdog. The Hurricanes (3-0) nearly succumbed to missed tackles, missed field goals and a running game that was also missing. Miami's only touchdown — and the game's final points — came on Gino Torretta's 2-yard pass to Dietrich Clausell with 3:50 left in the third quarter.

Miami narrowly extended winning streaks of 31 consecutive games (longest in the nation), 47 in a row at the Orange Bowl and 53 straight over unranked teams.

Samford hammers B-CC

DAYTONA BEACH — Damian Hines scored three touchdowns in his first start as Samford routed Bethune-Cookman 42-13 Saturday.

Hines, a sophomore from Montevallo, Ala., rushed for 106 yards on 19 carries. He also scored on a 23-yard screen pass from Ben Wiggins, who threw for 119 yards and two touchdowns in less than three quarters.

Coached by Terry Bowden, son of Florida State coach Bobby Bowden, Samford (3-1) scored on its first three possessions.

The Wildcats (0-4) scored on a 29-yard pitchout by Kelvin Daniels to narrow it to 21-6 with 5:11 in the first half. But Samford answered with 66-yard drive that resulted in Wiggins' one-yard keeper that made it 28-6.

Malone returns to Gators

GAINESVILLE — The Florida Gators' ground game got a boost Saturday with the return to full speed of backup tailback Kedra Malone.

True freshman Tony Davis and walk-on Daryl Frazier struggled in his place after starter Errict Rhett went down a week ago with a sprained ankle in the Gators' 31-14 loss at Tennessee.

Meanwhile, coach Steve Spurrier said Rhett has been upgraded from questionable to probable for the Gators' nationally televised game Thursday night at Mississippi State on ESPN.

FAMU wins in Atlanta

ATLANTA — Tracy Weldon scored a touchdown and threw a 36-yard touchdown pass to lead Florida A&M to a 20-12 win over Tennessee State Saturday.

Florida A&M (3-1) opened the scoring when Terry Mickens caught a 36-yard pass from Weldon with 3:52 left in the second quarter.

Florida A&M increased the lead to 14-0 when Weldon scored on a 1-yard run with 6:02 remaining in the third quarter.

James Wade's 1-yard run in the third quarter narrowed FAMU's lead to 14-6 with 1:28 left.

But Florida A&M pushed its lead to 20-6 in the fourth quarter on Chuck Duffey's 3-yard run with 7:36 to go.

Defense ignites Tribe rally

SANFORD — Seminole High School's vaunted defense looked vulnerable as the Oviedo offense racked up 95 yards rushing in their Seminole Athletic Conference football showdown at Thomas E. Whigham Stadium Friday night.

Then the second half came. After getting pushed around pretty good in the first 24 minutes but only allowing seven points, the Tribe defense forced three turnovers while holding the Lions to 27 yards total offense, including 13 rushing yards on 13 carries, as Seminole posted a 13-7 victory.

Seminole improved to 2-1 overall and 1-1 in the SAC with the win. They have next Friday off before returning to the field Oct. 9 to take on Ocala-Forest in Ocala. Oviedo, 1-2 overall and 0-2 in the SAC, will host University at John Courier Field next Friday.

"The defense stepped up a level tonight," said Seminole head coach [See Seminole, Page 4B]

After scoring in the second quarter to give Oviedo a 7-0 lead, Lion quarterback Leon Lowman (with ball, right) was stymied by the Seminole defense, finishing with 21 yards on 12 carries as the Tribe rallied for a 13-7 win.

Kessler, Rams bounce back

LAKE MARY — It was gut check time for the Lake Mary High School varsity football team Friday night. And they responded with a 10-7 win over the Edgewater Eagles.

While it was a non-conference, non-district contest, it was a very important win for the Rams, coming as it did a week after having their collective heart ripped out in a last-minute 20-17 loss to the Lake Brantley Patriots.

"This game doesn't mean anything in the district or the conference, but we needed to prove to ourselves that we could win," said Lake Mary coach Doug Peters. "And we found a way to win against one of the best-coached teams we'll face all season."

That "way" turned out to be placekicker Chad Kessler, who punched through a 32-yard field goal with 10:57 left in the game.

Just as the game was important for the Rams as a team, that kick was crucial for Kessler, who missed a pair of field goal attempts against Lake Brantley, including a potential game-tying 51-yarder as time expired.

On Friday night, Kessler was 1-for-3 on field goal attempts, seeing a 36-yarder go just wide right in the first quarter and a 48-yarder miss to the right in the fourth quarter.

Ironically, the two field goals that Kessler has made in the last two games were his worst attempts, stylistically. The four he missed were plenty high enough and long enough but were wide by a total of maybe 10 feet.

While quarterback Jason Rasmussen (No. 10) and rest of the Lake Mary offense didn't have their most productive of outings, they were able to move the ball and control the clock in a 10-7 win over Edgewater.

"After I missed the first one, I just concentrated on following through on the next one," said

Kessler, who also punted four times for a 38.2 yard average. "It didn't matter how pretty it was, just as long as it went through."

Peters was almost as pleased to see Kessler make the kick as he [See Lake Mary, Page 4B]

Hawks top Pats in 2OT

ALTAMONTE SPRINGS — It was a Maalox moment for coach Mike Biceglia and the rest of the Lake Howell Silver Hawks varsity football team.

But instead of adding to their collective discomfort, the Silver Hawks found some relief with a 22-14 overtime win against the defending district champion Lake Brantley Patriots in a 5A-District 4 football game Friday night at Tom Storey field.

Lake Howell (1-2) suffered through a pair of blowouts to Winter Park and Apopka the first two weeks of the season, enough to make any coach reach for his antacid tablets.

"This is a great victory for us," Biceglia said. "Our defense played real well, but, offensively, we have a ways to go."

The Silver Hawks jumped on top late in the first quarter when Kelvin Chisolm ran the ball 80 yards into the end zone on Lake Howell's second play from scrimmage following a missed Lake Brantley field goal.

Chet King added the extra point, making it 7-0.

After a series of fruitless drives by both teams, the Silver Hawks once again penetrated Patriot territory. [See Lake Howell, Page 4B]

Do as I do New SCC coach leads by example

SANFORD — Old basketball players don't retire, they just move onto a different game.

Now, that's not to say that Sanford's Bernard Merthie is an old man at 28 years of age. He certainly doesn't look that old, but he can no longer go out and represent a school as he has done in the past.

But just because he is no longer a student, the new Seminole Community College basketball coach has not hung up his sneakers.

"I've tried to stay with the game some," said Merthie. "I don't feel I'm totally out of it. I'm still pretty athletic and can still play. I just love the game of basketball."

"I get frustrated now in coaching because I can't get out there and play. I see them (his players) do things that have become second nature, such as working hard to get open and asking for the basketball, not wanting the ball."

Merthie's talent is not completely natural. The 6-foot, 4-inch, 200-pounder made himself a basketball player. [See Warrior, Page 5B]

When not coaching the Raiders, first-year Seminole Community College men's basketball coach Bernard Merthie tries to find time to work on his own game. Not only does he feel it adds credence to his instruction, it helps him stay competitive in local leagues and tournaments.

Emory Blake. "Oviedo is such a good offensive team. In the first half, they (the Tribe defense) were missing assignments and their reads, but they came back real strong in the second half.

Oviedo took a 7-0 lead into the locker room as Oviedo quarterback Leon Lowman scored on an 11-yard run in the second quarter and Joe Schuyler added the extra point.

The Tribe had its chances to score in the first half, but several miscued and dropped passes and a fumble on the Lion 6-yard line kept the home team off the board.

"Our offense is getting better," said Blake. "But we're still missing open guys on the passing game. I think that timing will come with more repetitions in practice. I felt if we could have completed three or four passes in a row, we could have taken some of the pressure off, but our defense gives us an opportunity to make those mistakes."

"I didn't jump on them at halftime. I told them we knew what they could do, now let's go out and do it. They did what it took to win tonight."

After intermission, it was all Seminole, with some help from an unexpected source. The Tribe took the second half kickoff but was forced to punt after gaining one first down. Junior punter/placerkicker Jason Walraven then got off a monster punt, blasting a 66-yarder that was downed on the one-yard line, a hole from which the Lions never recovered.

Neither team was able to move the ball, but after a couple of possessions by each team, a fumble by Oviedo was recovered by Brian Leach at the Lion 35. Three plays later, Tyrone Williams raced in from the seven and Walraven's kick tied the game at 7-7 with 1:15 left in the third quarter.

On the first play after the ensuing kickoff, Seminole's Quentin Hunt grabbed yet defensive teammates in the second half, scoring touchdowns in the third and fourth quarters to rally past the Oviedo Lions Friday night.

another fumble and the Tribe was set up at the Lion 32.

With the help of a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty, Seminole scored on a one-yard plunge by fullback Gerard Shine seven plays later. Walraven's extra point was blocked after the snap was bobbled. But the Tribe was now ahead and there was only 10:23 left on the clock.

"Our young offensive line did a super job tonight," said Blake.

"They have matured so much. They were giving Todd (Braden) as much as six seconds to throw. You don't get that much time in the NFL."

Oviedo had two chances to get the tying score, but each time the Seminole defense snuffed the Lions in their tracks.

The Tribe faithful were a still a little apprehensive, however, as the Tribe were forced to give the ball back to Oviedo with 3:03 left on the clock. But Walraven again came to the rescue, burrying the Lions with a punt that was downed on the Oviedo six-yard-line.

"Believe it or not, our offense is getting better," said Oviedo head coach Jack Blanton. "We just can't seem to get it going. I thought our defensive coaches did a helluva job tonight. But give Seminole credit, they've got a great defense."

was with the resulting victory.

"I have all the confidence in the world in Chad," said Peters. "We've put him in some situations where we've had to have a kick, which is not the ideal way to break in. But I think he's potentially one of the state's best kickers."

Kessler's kick capped a workman-like effort by the Rams, who gained a total of 109 yards (103 passing, 66 rushing) that were anything but pretty.

"It was real blue collar football," Peters admitted. "They (Edgewater) are a stingy defense. They're so quick. Some things looked open, but they react so quickly to the ball, they'd close it down by the time we got there."

Lake Mary came out and appeared to have no trouble moving the ball, advancing to the Edgewater 15 on the first offensive series of the game (resulting in Kessler's missed 36-yard field-goal attempt) and scoring on their second series.

The Rams' first score was set up by a 14-yard Eagle punt that gave Lake Mary the ball at the Edgewater 21-yard line. Five plays later, Dexter Graham (26 yards on 18 carries) swept four yards around the left end for the game's first score with 3:23 left in the opening period. Kessler kicked the extra point.

By comparison, the Ram defense limited Edgewater to 13 offensive yards in the first half, 99 for the game. But the Eagles capitalized on a partial block of a Kessler punt. Willie Lewis catching the ball on the fly at the Lake Mary 21 and sprinting untouched into the end zone with 3:33 left in the half.

Chad Kessler

After forcing Edgewater to punt after seven plays at the start of the third quarter, Lake Mary took over at its 16-yard line and put together an 18-play drive that ended with Kessler's 33-yard game-winning kick. The Rams were aided by a crucial five-yard penalty against the Eagles on a fourth-and-five play.

The Eagles had no success against the Ram defense, save a 44-yard run by Tony Evans on the third offensive play of the second half, until Lake Mary dropped back into a prevent defense when Edgewater took over at its 20-yard line with 3:34 left to play.

David Washington, on in relief of starter Eric Taylor at quarterback, completed three passes to advance the Eagles to near midfield. After throwing an incompletion, Washington was picked off by Lake Mary linebacker Greg Menetto with 1:25 remaining.

With Edgewater out of timeouts, Lake Mary quarterback Jason Baumannon needed to look just two snaps as time expired.

"Our defense was exceptional," said Peters. "They kept us in the game. We didn't have real good field position for much of the first half, but the defense rose to the occasion."

Lake Mary (2-1) now turns its attention to next week's 5A-District and SAC game at Lake Howell (1-2). The Silver Hawks upset previously unbeaten Lake Brantley 22-20 on Friday night, giving the Rams an opportunity to get back in the district race quickly.

Edgewater (2-1) is off until Oct. 9, when the Eagles play at West Orange.

But King's 18-yard field goal attempt was blocked and returned for an apparent Patriot touchdown. But a clipping call brought the ball back all the way to the Patriot 21-yard line.

"We should have won the game in the first half," Bisceglia said. "We should have hit the field goal. I should have called time out when the official moved the ball, misaligning with the tee and giving Lake Brantley a better angle to block it."

The Patriots did score in the fourth quarter on a 1-yard run by Patriot quarterback Jeff Shaw. Tim LeCroix's kick on the extra point sent the game into a Kansas tiebreaker.

The Silver Hawks won the toss and elected to go on defense first, only to see Lake Brantley score on three plays on a 2-yard run by Jeff Butler.

The Silver Hawks answered with a touchdown, Maurice Smith completing a 9-yard pass to Jackson Patkus on fourth down.

This time, Lake Howell started on offense and scored on three plays, Patkus running the ball in from one yard out. On the extra point, the Patriots were called offside, putting Lake Howell inside the two yard line. The Silver Hawks then elected to go for the two-point conversion, Patkus running the ball in for a 22-14 advantage.

IN BRIEF

DISTINCTIONS

Program recognizes riders

Jeffrey Sargent, Sanford, recently enrolled in the American Quarter Horse Association Horback Riding Program, sponsored by Drysdale Western Store of Tulsa, Okla. The program was created to give every AQHA member a chance to be recognized for time spent riding American Quarter Horses.

Members must complete an official application and pay a one-time $25 enrollment fee. After approval, each participant receives an official AQHA log sheet to keep track of their hours in the saddle. Members need not own their own horse, but all official hours must be accrued either riding or driving a registered American Quarter Horse.

Awards are given for hours logged.

According to Gary Reynolds, director of the Horback Riding Program, "The program is different because it is not a competitive activity and it combines the social and recreational aspects of riding horses, which is great exercise and can be enjoyed by people of all ages." This is supported by the fact that the U.S. Department of Interior reports more than 27 million people participate in horseback riding nationally.

AQHA actively encourages recreational riding as a fun and relaxing activity.

Monica Wolff receives a certificate after completing the 4-H Textile and Furniture symposium from J. Douglas Galyon, director of public affairs for Guilford Mills Inc., Greensboro, N.C.

Teen completes textile seminar

Seminole County 4-H member, Monica Wolff, daughter of Bill and Mary Fran Wolff, Altamonte Springs, attended the Southern Region 4-H Textile and Furniture Symposium recently held in North Carolina.

The symposium was held at North Carolina State University at Raleigh, the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, and High Point College in High Point.

Activities were conducted by faculty in the colleges of Textiles, Engineering, and Forest Resources at NCSU, the Department of Interior Design in the School of Human Environmental Sciences at UNC-G, and the Home Furnishings Marketing Program at High Point College.

Fifty-four delegates and three returnees from 12 states participated and received certificates or silver trays upon completion.

First-year delegates opted to focus on either the textile or furniture industries during the week. Wolff chose the textile option. She studied fiber identification, yarn testing, design techniques, physical testing, color design and computer application.

Seminars for the textile and furniture tracks covered each industry's history, economic significance, future and career options. Delegates toured textile and furniture companies for a firsthand look at how industries use the concepts and techniques they studied.

Local rider qualifies

Jessica Karp, Longwood, was among the 25 junior riders to qualify for the prestigious Rolex-McLay National Championship for the ASPCA Horsemanship Classes at the National Horse Show Nov. 8.

A total of 43 entries competed at the Southeast Regional Championship held in Asheville, NC, September 13. These riders will join 125 others from Northeast, Midwest and Western Regionals in the national finale at the 100th National Horse Show at the Meadowlands Arena in East Rutherford, NJ, Nov. 3-8. These 180 junior equestrians (18 years old and under) from around the nation will compete for the national championship for the ASPCA Horsemanship Classes.

The regional competition was tested in three separate phases on different aspects of the riders' equitation, including jumping a course, a flat phase, and then a final test determined by the judges.

Karp and the other finalists will undergo similar tests at the National. The final confrontation will begin at dawn Sunday, Nov. 8, when competitors will display their horsemanship over a course of fences.

Approximately 25 riders will be called back to perform the under-saddle phase. More testing will follow later in the afternoon over fences, and those scoring at the top of the class may even be asked to exchange mounts for yet another jumping test.

Area school raises dogs for blind

By DEL FREEMAN
Herald Correspondent

LONGWOOD — Longwood resident Doris Houchins has the uncommon vocation of puppy coordinator for the south Florida area, on behalf of the Palmetto-based Southeastern Guide Dog School. The school is one of only 10 in the country, and Doris, who's been working with them since 1988, calls it the most rewarding thing she's ever done.

Her puppy raisers, eight families who will be the recipients of the latest litter, couldn't be more excited about their new babies, although they will bond with their dogs only 14 months.

The eight fluffy little bundles of joy will show up at Doris' house partially house-trained at age 10 weeks, having spent their formative weeks being visited by puppy pickers and socializers at the school. The puppies will be completely housebroken within a week of their arrival, she said, and this particular litter is somewhat special since they are the grandchildren of Doris' own Labrador.

The Palmetto Center keeps a close eye on both their dogs and their adoptive parents, Doris says, and controls breeding by assigning an alphabetic letter to the names of each group. The last litter were all

'S' dogs, and the latest litter will have names that begin with the letter 'D'. The school will assign three name choices beginning with that letter, and allow the raiser to choose which of the three is preferred.

The puppy will then go home with its raiser and must be allowed to sleep in the raiser's bedroom during its stay. The raisers, who have completed applications and had been pre-approved, must have fenced backyards. There is a minimum six-month waiting period after application to become a raiser of guide dogs for the blind.

Once the puppy is encooned in its raiser's home, it will attend monthly meetings along with its raisers and participate in outings to restaurants and malls, gaining experience with such novelties as elevators and escalators. The group is quite a sight, Doris says, with 15 or 20 people at a time, dogs in two, each dog wearing a coat announcing its affiliation with the Southeastern Guide Dog school. The dogs are obedience trained, only, in these classes, and at about 14 months of age must return to the Palmetto school for an additional six months of specialized training, where they learn 44 to 80 words.

They are each then placed with an unsighted person and trained for another month before graduation. □ See Puppies, Page 7B

'Retired guide dog needs home' sign sells couple

By DEL FREEMAN
Herald Correspondent

SANFORD — Missy and Mike Horn of Sanford went to the Habitat for Humanity thrift store and saw a sign that said "retired guide dog needs home." They already had a cockapoo and three cats, but thought they wanted to give the dog a home, so they did it on a trial basis.

"We took her for six weeks and fell in love," Missy says.

Although Trudy has her own way of doing things, and a bit of temper she exhibits when Missy goes off and leaves her alone, she has become Missy's constant companion.

"I'm home in the daytime and my dogs are like family," Missy says. Trudy insists on guarding the family while they swim and has made fast friends with Missy's in-laws who live next door. She frequently goes over to visit for a chat with Missy's father-in-law, or to get a treat from Missy's mom, and the whole neighborhood has just fallen in love with her, Missy says.

Although retired, Trudy takes her duties as person owner very seriously. When Missy was on crutches and not supposed to be on her feet, Trudy would follow her if she got up to move about the house, butting her in the legs until she sat down. Then, Missy says, Trudy would sit on Missy's only good foot to keep her stationary.

Missy's former owner, Lynn Russell, says she's just delighted that Trudy found a home with Missy.

"I was so worried that after being with me 24 hours a day she might go into a home where they wouldn't give her the proper attention," Lynn says. She had to give Trudy up, not because she wanted to but because Trudy's health combined with Lynn's own diabetic condition made it impossible for her to care for the dog.

"I wanted to keep her until she died and just let her retire," Lynn says, "but I couldn't ask for a better home for her and that means so much to me - it gives me such peace of mind to know that Trudy is loved and well cared for."

Missy says Trudy is not just loved and well cared for, but spoiled as well. If Missy goes to take an afternoon nap, Trudy, who can no longer jump onto the bed due to her arthritis, leans her nose over the edge and woofs to let Missy know she's not □ See Adopted, Page 7B

SANFORD — Lynn Russell knows first-hand what a fabulous service Doris Houchins is helping to provide with her guide dog puppy-raising activities. Katie, Lynn's golden retriever, came from the breeding program of the Southeast Guide Dog School with which Doris is affiliated.

Katie did not, however, go through Doris' puppy-raising program, but was raised in Tennessee after being born at the school and going through their puppy socialization program for the first 10 weeks.

And Katie had some big shoes to fill. She came as a replacement for Lynn's first lab, Trudy, who spent the put in 10 years on the job before retirement.

"They're like family," Lynn says of her guide dogs, "and it's really heart-breaking to have to give one up."

She had planned to keep Trudy until the dog's death, but says the combination of her diabetes, which caused her blindness 10 years ago, and the dog's age and infirmity, meant that the quality of care she could offer Trudy was less □ See Dog, Page 7B

Tracy V. McNeil, W.G. Morgan Jr. exchange vows

LAKE MARY — Tracy Virginia McNeill and William Gene Morgan Jr., were married at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 1 at Markham Woods Presbyterian Church, in Lake Mary, with the Rev. Dr. Don T. DeBevoise officiating at the candlelight, double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Richard McNeill Jr., of Sanford, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Gene Morgan Sr., Ravenswood, W.Va.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose for her vows a formal gown of candlelight Alencon lace on satin designed by Bonney. The gown was embellished with pearls and a sweetheart neckline and fitted bodice. The chapel length detachable train was made of satin embroidered with pearls. A designer creation of silk roses and pearls held her chapel-length illusion veil and blusher.

She carried a cascading bouquet of white bridal roses, off-white miniature carnations, ivory cymbidium orchids accented with white Queen Anne's Lace, Stephanotis and trailing English Ivy.

Julie Scott of Live Oak, cousin of the bride, was the vocalist. She offered the selections, "Only God Could Love You More," "Parents Prayer," and "Our Love In Christ."

Suzana Huaman of Sanford served as maid of honor. She wore a formal two-piece black crepe gown designed by Beth Levkoff. The gown featured a cowl-draped back and was accented by rhinestone buttons. She carried a cascading composition of exotic foliage defined with splashy bouquets of shades of pink, including Stargazer Lilies, Rosio Alstromaria, pink Augustina Heather with pink Hildegard Gerbera as focal points.

Bridesmaids were Tisha Futrell, Sanford; Tammy Lawhon, Rochester, Pa., sister of the groom; Britney Tyre, Sanford; and Judy White Soualey, Sanford. Their gowns and flowers were identical to the honor attendant's.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Groomsmen were John Mason, Ravenswood; Jonathan McCullough, Martinsburg, W.Va.; Kevin Lawhon, Rochester, Pa., brother-in-law of the groom; and Andy McNeill, Miami, brother of the bride. The groom, groomsmen, and father of the bride were all attired in black tuxedos.

The mother of the bride wore a center two-piece formal gown designed by Beth Levkoff and featured a draped jacket.

The mother of the groom wore a formal length teal original satin gown featuring long sleeves and fitted bodice. Both mothers' gowns were accented by orchid corages.

Following the ceremony, a buffet reception was held at the Heathrow County Club, Lake Mary. The cake was a creation by Bianca. Brandy buttercream was overlaid by Royal fondant with white chocolate porcelaine icing. Flowers made from pastillage and gum paste bows, pearls, and ribbons made beautiful cascading fillgree bouquets. A miniature waterfall accented the lighted, four-tiered cake. "Rizzo and Becker" from Tiffany Productions in Orlando supplied the music for the evening.

Following a trip to St. Croix, Virgin Islands, the newlyweds are making their home in Sanford.

The bride and groom are both employed by Westinghouse Electric Corporation, Orlando, in the Power Generation Service Division as nuclear projects field service engineers.

Decorations chase gloom from room

DEAR ABBY: Recently, my grandparents celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. After the reception was over, we were left with a collection of beautiful helium balloons. After some of the guests took home what they wanted, there were still plenty to spare. Since no one wanted to puncture those beautiful colored balloons, we called the nearest hospital and asked if we could donate the balloons to the children's ward, or to patients who had no visitors and could use a little cheering up.

We were told to bring them over, and were thanked for thinking about them. So, Abby, if you put this in your column, maybe the next time people have some leftover balloons or decorations, they will consider taking them to some hospital where they can be enjoyed and appreciated.

DEAR ANGEL: You were aptly named. Thanks for a great idea.

P.S. Readers, never deliver anything to a hospital, nursing home or any other institution without first calling to find out if it is wanted — and when it would be convenient to deliver it.

DEAR ABBY: Last year, you ran a column asking readers to send cards, letters and cheery gifts to Marines in Okinawa, Japan. I am hoping that you can do the same again this year. The response we received was absolutely wonderful! It was so enormous that we were able to split the mail among six separate USO's in Okinawa.

We have a new address for Okinawa:

Coffee opens club season

The Sanford Woman's Club began the season with the Annual Membership Coffee, Saturday, Sept. 19. It was a day to think pink. The clubhouse was festively decorated in a myriad of pink carnations accented with all sizes of delicate pink satin ribbons and bows.

In keeping with the pink theme, President Jean Metts greeted the members and guests wearing a pink dress complemented with a black hat and other black accessories.

A large square table, skirted in pink and overlaid with white lace, centered the auditorium. Silver and crystal appointments held a delectable variety of brunch fare, provided by the club's Board of Managers. A bowl of pink fruit punch graced one end of the table while silver coffee service was at the opposite end.

Past presidents serving and pouring were: Charlotte Smith, Pat Foster, Ann Brisson, Marty Colegrove and Hazel Cash. Others pouring were Nellie Coleman, Mary Boone and Fran Mitchell.

Several prospective members attended as guests of the members.

The event was under the chairmanship of Fran Morton, second vice president and her committee, including the president, Jeanette Padgett, Audrey Roush and Mary Childers.

Happy Hearts Fashions

Mary Pugh couldn't be happier with the outcome of the Happy Hearts meeting, luncheon and fashion show last Tuesday. The Happy Hearts are the senior citizens of the Central Baptist Church.

Mary coordinated a fashion show for this month's meeting to the delight of all attending. Fashions were from Petite and Pretty, Slim and Sassy and Bigger and Better. According to Mary, this is the season when anything goes on the fashion front. She said long, slit skirts are very popular, but that short skirts are also holding their own.

Vida Smith, the commentator and narrator, was also a model, as well as Mary. Other models were: Mary Boone, Evelina Yates, Hope Beverly, Pat Quiper, Eve Benton, Patricia Hicks, Tilly Daniels, Mary Riah, Evelyn Christopher and B.J. Reeves.

Reunion, birthday

The Sarita Street home of Margaret D. Brown was the setting for a family reunion Sunday, Sept. 20. About 40 relative and friends gathered for the reunion and to honor Margaret on her 73rd birthday.

Margaret, who claims she loves to cook, prepared all the food including: roast turkey and dressing, baked ham, boiled shrimp, potato salad, slaw, macaroni and cheese, green peas, baked beans, yams, a relish tray, chips and dips, Watergate Salad (made by daughter Louise) and the beautifully decorated birthday cake.

Margaret's birthday was Sept. 8. She grew up in DeLand and moved to Sanford in 1942. Her two living children are Louise Brown of Lake Mary, and Thomas Dillard Jr. of South Seminole.

There are two deceased children, nine grandchildren and eight great grandchildren.

Recognized throughout the community for her love of others and a mover and shaker, Margaret is a charter member of Central Baptist Church where she taught Sunday School for a number of years. She is retired chaplain of the Ladies Auxiliary Veterans of Foreign Wars, District 18. She was also chaplain of the American Legion Ladies Auxiliary and a member of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Fleet Reserve Association.

She has done volunteer work in politics and Seminole County schools. Margaret, who is presently caring for a 5-year-old boy, says she loves children. She said she has seen a lot of them grow up and many call her "Mamma" or "Grandma."

Among those attending the celebration were Margaret's sister and husband, Eva and Jim Jaqva, El Paso, Texas; and another sister, Rochelle Johnson, Orlando.

Nieces and nephews attended from Palatka, Daytona Beach, St. Augustine, DeBary, Altamonte Springs and Sanford. Several political candidates also attended.

Men honor women

The United Methodist Men of the First United Methodist Church honored the women of the church at Ladies Night last Thursday. Milner Ryals and his committee prepared a delicious turkey dinner with all the trimmings for the enjoyment of all.

President Sam Greene welcomed the group and introduced his successor, Dennis Butler, as the new president.

Dot Waller presented a musical group from Altamonte Springs, formed of her son, Steven Waller, his wife, Cherie, and Jana and John Cummings, who sang several songs, including one with Dot joining the quartet. The quartet is known in musical circles as "The King's Kids."

Charter Bram residents

Bram Towers, Sanford's highrise apartment complex, celebrated its 20th anniversary Sunday, Sept. 20. Among the charter residents attending the festivities were: Martha Wilson, Mildred Caskey, Ruby Amstutz, Frieda Gielow, Herman Wallstrom, Betty Weber, Ethel Jeter and Lindsey Jeter.

Rethwills home from trip

Marian and Lester Rethwill have returned after spending two months on the road in their motor home. The trip started by attending a Pilot International Convention in Chicago. They ventured to Michigan where they toured Mackinaw Island and saw the locks at Sault Ste Marie.

Later, they spent a month exploring their roots in Minnesota with friends and relatives. Following Minnesota, they traveled to Branson, Mo. where they "did a little country." Marian compared Branson to Nashville and said, "If you're into country, that's (Branson's) the place to go."

En route home, they stopped in North Florida to visit two new Sanford ministers and their wives, Jim and Elaine Thomas and Kip and Sherry Younger. At Quincy, the called on Jean Querry, former pastor of the First United Methodist Church. His wife, Pat, was working, so they did not get to see her.

Marian said the Querrys are fine and their parsonage is a Southern mansion, Tara-style, that is on the historic register. The lovely home was built in the early 1800s, and is open to tourists at certain times.

Jonathan wins prize

Who would have ever thought that a 5-year-old kid would win $3,000 just by sticking out his tongue?

Remember Jonathan Holbrook, whose parents sent a video of him to America's Funniest Home Videos for possible acceptance on the weekly TV show? Remember, also, that the studio accepted Jonathan's video which showed him playing a video game while rhythmically sticking his tongue in and out to synchronize with his movements.

The episode was shown last Sunday night as the season's opener and would you believe Jonathan's capers won second prize.

His parents, Triah and Alan Lucas, formerly of Sanford, were also shown in the clip rooting for Jonathan. They said they had a wonderful time as guests of Universal Studios, Van Nuys, Calif., where they were treated like royalty.

Teacher brings magic of performing home

Tajiri Arts International Inc. is drama and more.

Acting is an element of the performing arts that encompasses many forms. It is a vehicle by which students develop confidence in their talents and abilities, improve skills in language, speech, reading, socialization, listening and writing through drama. Students can portray many characters and yet keep their own identity. Dramatics can offer students opportunities beneficial to their total well-being. Tajiri Arts International Inc. enhances the knowledge of these components: Movements, Improvisations, audition-pageant techniques, stage business, voice placement, oratorical sessions, pantomime, costuming, make-up, and ideas for social cultural and religious interpretations. There are classes for the exceptional student. Classes will begin the fall term with an open house, to be held Oct. 3 at the Cultural Arts Center from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The community, concerned parents, prospective students are invited to come and receive first hand knowledge of this program.

Bring your children to meet other parents, staff and ask questions. Tajiri Arts International Inc. was founded by Patricia Merritt Hitchmon, who is also the director.

Pastor pitches in

The Rev. Nolan Pitts, pastor of the historic St. James AME Church, recently traveled to Homestead to help the Hurricane Andrew Victims. He joined in to carry donations of money and food that was donated by the St. James members here in Sanford. This effort was a part of a statewide AME church effort, that the newly appointed Bishop Frank C. Cummings, of the 11th Episcopal District, called on all AME members in the state of Florida to participate in. The Rev. Pitts and presiding elder Mainard of the Orlando District were pleased with the show of concern demonstrated by the members of St. James.

We thank you and your readers. Without the great support they showed, our military members would have had a very depressing Thanksgiving, Hannukkah and Christmas.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing to you because I would be embarrassed to ask anyone else, and I feel that you would know what is right and correct.

I lost my husband 13 months ago, and I am still wearing my wedding rings. My daughter says I should wear them on my right hand now. I was married for 52 years, seven months and three days. I never paid much attention to what other widows did about their rings. Please advise me, Abby. I don't want to look stupid.

MARY SMITH (NOT MY REAL NAME)
DEAR "MARY SMITH":

There is no rule of etiquette about the length of time a widow should wear her wedding rings. Each woman may do whatever is comfortable for her.

Some widows remove their rings when they are interested in dating again - others never remove them.

CONFIDENTIAL TO G.E. IN GOLDENVILLE, OKLA.:

Wisdom does not automatically come with old age. Nothing does - except wrinkles. It's true, some wines improve with age, but only if the grapes were good in the first place.

DEAR ABBY: I am 20 years old with a baby and a husband. My problem is my husband. It all started when I was six months pregnant. "George" started staying out late, saying he was with the guys. After the baby was born, I found out he had been seeing a young girl who lives next door to his mother. A friend had told me this, but I didn't believe it. When I asked

George if there was anything between them, he denied it.

A month later, I found a letter he had written to an Army buddy - but never mailed. In the letter he said he got a girl pregnant and had to rush her to an abortion clinic! That's not all. He got 90 days in the county jail for firing a gun at a girl he had been seeing. (The bullet missed her.)

When I visited him in jail, he broke down and told me he was sorry for cheating on me, but he said he is now a born-again Christian, and he's learned his lesson and wants another chance.

Should I give him another chance? He has lied so much, I don't know if I can ever trust him. He has even agreed to counseling. Our second anniversary is next week. What should I do? I still love him.

GEORGE'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Since you still love him, give him another chance. I hope his being born-again will keep him straight and honest. But if it doesn't, say goodbye and close the door on this relationship.

than she wanted for the dog. She gave her up for the dog's own good, but still misses her and tries to visit her when she can.

Katie and Trude worked as a team for a while, Lynn says, although Trudy no longer escorted Lynn around town. In fact, Lynn says she has a king-sized bed just so that there is sufficient room for Katie, Trudy, her and the cat to sleep together.

And it's a lucky thing for Lynn that those sleeping arrangements remain in effect. Before she found a new home for Trudy, the four of them were sleeping one night when Lynn's insulin pump malfunctioned. It meant that her brain would begin dying, she says, and the dogs must have sensed a change in her body, because they saved her life.

"Trudy pulled the pillow from underneath my head and Katie pulled the covers off me while the cat began biting my toes, trying to wake me up. They literally began trying to roll me out of the bed, and they woke me up and saved my life. If they hadn't reacted, I'd be dead now."

Katie's been a heroine more than once since she came to live with Lynn, though. She reacted by pulling Lynn from the path of a truck which jumped the curb, finally retreating into a recessed doorway and saving Lynn's life once again.

"They respond to praise and she got a lot of it that day, although we were both pretty shook up," Lynn said.

A guide dog spends 24 hours a day with its mistress, and they have to function so much like people. It's hard to remember they aren't, Lynn says. Katie has a fondness for Wal-Mart, and has fans in the store.

"I can say, 'want to go to Wal-Mart' and Katie whisks me there," Lynn says. The two go so often, sometimes arriving before the store opens. One summer day of an early Wal-Mart arrival is responsible for Katie's addition, in fact.

"We got to the store early and Katie was hot so I couldn't find anything else for her and bought her a Coke to drink," Lynn says. Since then, the two go to Wal-Mart and Katie has to greet the greeter, and then has to have a Coke.

"It can't be diet coke, either," Lynn says. "Katie won't drink diet Coke. If she doesn't get her Coke inside the store, she'll go to the machine outside and won't leave until she gets it."

So enamored is Katie of Wal-Mart that she grew accustomed to looking at the fish in the store's pet department tanks. When Wal-Mart took the fish out, Katie was not a happy shopper, Lynn says.

"She'd dawdle all the way home and seemed to be wondering if she'd gone into the wrong aisle, or whatever," Lynn says. Finally, Lynn had to buy Katie her own tankful, and now visitors to the home have to go and look at Katie's fish first thing.

Katie seems to be big on animals, in fact, and also adopted a kitten she found while she and her master were wandering around. Katie adopted the kitten, letting it eat from her bowl and drink from her dish, and the kitten often sidles up underneath Katie at dinnertime and the two share their meals.

Lynn says she'll never forget Trudy, and hated to have to part with her, but admits that Katie does a good job of filling the hole Trudy's departure left. "She's just a big mushpot," Lynn says.

Puppies

Puppy raisers are allowed to attend graduation of their puppies and Doris says it is that graduation that makes it all worthwhile.

"You meet the blind person who got what was once a goofy puppy and you get to see your dog ignore a passing cat, hesitate at street corners, and lead a blind person across the street," she says, "and it makes you so proud."

In Doris case, the puppies she has overseen rearing are all Labrador puppies, but the school does use some shepherds and Australian shepherds, she says. The dogs are routinely spayed or neutered at about nine months of age, and the school, which now graduates 100 guide dogs each year, operates completely on donations. That's quite an accomplishment for an operation that started out of a trailer just ten years ago, she says.

Despite the waiting list for puppies, there are a number of area residents already in the program, Doris says, with two Sanford families raising puppies, and one anxiously awaiting a dog from the latest litter. Doris not only has raisers throughout the Longwood/Lake Mary/Banford area, she has puppy recipients.

"A Seminole County law officer, who was shot and blinded in the course of performing his duties, has a dog from the School named McGruff," she says. And although Doris has raisers all over South Florida who drive untold miles to attend the training classes, that particular dog was raised by an employee of the Seminole County Fire & Rescue.

Puppy raisers are not allowed to see the dog or to make contact with the new owner for a minimum of six months after the puppy graduates and is placed with its master, but after six months the former raiser may call and be reassured that the dog is doing well. And occasionally, even with all the intensive training, a dog will not make the grade.

Recently, she says, just such a case occurred when a dog who had been placed developed a fear of thunderstorms. In such an event, the puppy raiser is offered first option on taking the dog.

"In this case, the person who raised the dog took it and was just delighted," Doris says, "because the raiser got a totally trained dog."

And when there's a thunderstorm, the two - raiser and puppy - can go into the bedroom they have shared and cuddle together.

supposed to be sleeping in the daytime.

Trudy's health, too, has improved since she moved in with the Horns, and Missy says she can go in and out the doors, play with the other dog and three cats, and is generally pretty active.

"I don't know what the lifespan is for a labrador, and I imagine Trudy is 13, maybe pushing 14," Missy says. "I hope the lifespan is 20 or 25 years, though, because Trudy is just a wonderful dog. I can't say enough good things about her and I'm just so glad we have her."

By Phillip Alder

Today's hand might look familiar. The North-South cards are identical to those in yesterday's column — except for one small but important change: South has the club three instead of the 10.

Against three no-trump, West opens the attack in declarer's weakest suit, spades. How does the lack of the club 10 affect declarer's best line of play?

After holding up the spade ace until the third round, declarer cashed the club ace, as recommended yesterday. When the queen dropped, he smiled. He continued with the club king. When East discarded a heart, South's smile evaporated. He couldn't win nine tricks without establishing the clubs, and he couldn't establish the clubs without letting West win a trick in the suit. But when South did that, West cashed two spade tricks to defeat the game.

Why was it right to cash the club ace yesterday but not today? Because if the club queen dropped singleton yesterday, declarer, holding the club 10, could run the whole suit. Today, though, South should take a small precaution. He should play a heart to dummy's ace at trick four. Then he leads a low club, planning to put up the ace. But when East plays the queen, South ducks. East, not West, is on lead, the club suit is established and the contract is safe.

If East plays a low club, not the queen, declarer wins with the ace and cashes the king. If the queen appears now, South wins an overtrick. If it doesn't, though, South plays a third club, hoping East has to win the trick.

Readers are invited to send card-play questions to Phillip Alder, in care of this newspaper. They can be answered only through the column.

IN BRIEF

Open house postponed

SANFORD — Because of the Rosh Hashanah holiday which does not end until sunset on Tuesday the open house for the parents of kindergarten, first and second graders at Pine Crest Elementary School has been postponed until Oct. 1 at 7 p.m.

Pine Crest is located at 406 W. 27th Street in Sanford. School officials wanted to be sure that all the parents who wanted to be able to attend the event where parents meet with their youngsters' teachers in the classroom would be given the opportunity.

The parents will meet in the school's media center on the night of the open house for a short meeting and then will proceed to their students' classrooms.

For more information, call the school at 322-1711.

Rock Lake to sell magazines

LONGWOOD — Rock Lake Middle School in Longwood is embarking on a drive to sell magazines to raise money for the school.

The Rock Lake Middle School Booster Club will begin selling Readers Digest and other magazines on Wednesday, Sept. 30.

Those who are interested can purchase new subscriptions or renew subscriptions to magazines they already receive.

Booster Club representatives said the proceeds will directly benefit the teachers and students at Rock Lake through the purchase of classroom equipment and supplies.

In addition to magazine subscriptions, compact discs can also be ordered through this program.

Rock Lake Middle School is located at 250 Slade Drive in Longwood.

For more information or to receive an ordering packet, call the school at 767-5447.

Apples for the band

LAKE MARY — The Lake Mary High School Band will be taking orders for red and golden Delicious Apples from now through Tuesday, Oct. 6.

The apples will be picked the day prior to delivery and shipped by refrigerated truck to Lake Mary to ensure they arrive fresh, crisp and delicious.

The price of the apples is $30 for a box of 100, $22.50 for 75 apples, $15 for 50 apples and $7.50 for 25 apples.

All orders are boxed. Delivery will be on Oct. 24 to the school which is located at 655 Longwood-Lake Mary Boulevard in Lake Mary.

All proceeds from the sale will benefit the Lake Mary High School Band to help defray the expenses for the purchase of uniforms, transportation and transportation for the band's trip to Washington, D.C. to participate in the Cherry Blossom Festival in the Spring.

To order apples or to get more information, contact Lucretia Lee at 324-4824 or Tom Whyte at 331-7953.

Any member of the band has information and order forms as well.

Idylwild collecting labels

SANFORD — Idylwild Elementary School in Sanford is participating in the twentieth annual Labels for Education program sponsored by the Campbell Soup Company.

Labels collected by the school can be sent to the Campbell Soup Company to be redeemed for various types of equipment for the school.

The school is located at 430 Vilhen Road in Sanford. Parents, students and members of the community are asked to save labels from Campbell Soup products as well as from Franco-American products and the Prego line of foods.

The school is also collecting caps from T.G. Lee Milk products. For each cap they collect, the school will receive five cents.

For more information on either fund raising campaign, call Diane Cuozzo at 322-8823.

Dividends breakfast set

High school report

Rams are proud of their scholars

LAKE MARY — Imagine being in the top .05 percent of seniors in Florida.

This is a reality for seniors Ryan Dickey, Bill Dougherty, Alyssa Haun, Mark Neri, Angela Thompson, Eric Welsh and Matt Wilson, seven of the 15,000 semi-finalists in the National Merit Scholar Program.

This program is conducted by the National Merit Corporation a non-profit organization that runs without government funding.

By taking the PSAT/NMSQT, students enter the Merit Program. The scores indicate whether or not they have met the eligibility requirements. Those who achieve qualifying scores become semi-finalists.

Each year, the semi-finalist are publicly recognized. Their names are sent to colleges and universities so that officials can contact the students about admission opportunities and other benefits.

The next step is to become a finalist, where financial rewards are given out. To do that, semi-finalists are given many papers to fill out.

"Filling out the paperwork has been the hardest part," said Eric Welsh.

Semi-finalists also need to have a good solid GPA and high SAT scores.

"Most of the semi-finalists go on to become finalists. Only a few do not," said Connie Hyland, director of guidance at LMHS.

Statistics show that approximately 90 percent reach the finalist level.

There are many different scholarships offered to the finalists.

Fund limitations cause only 48 percent of the 14,000 or so finalists to win an award and only one scholarship can be accepted per student.

The NMSC will notify the winners in the Spring of 1993.

The Merit Scholar Program can open several doors for students. It can help in receiving admissions to specific colleges and it can also aid the students financially.

"A great benefit is getting a scholarship at the college of my choice," said Welsh.

Elaine would like to thank Christy Van for her contributions to this column.

Seminole working to change image

SANFORD — Seminole High School's principal, Gretchen Schapker, is engaged with joy and pride for a school which is growing and trying to erase its unsavory image.

Mrs. Schapker's first step in rebuilding is adding new programs and facilities. The most highly-funded and talked about program is Tech Prep.

The school received a $160,000 grant with which to construct a new physics and math lab in addition to purchasing the highly-advanced CAD (Computer Assisted Drafting) system.

Other funds have been raised for the Turn-Key program and the two new computer labs. The Turn-Key program also uses high-tech computers in order to assist students in the field of auto mechanics. The two computer labs consist of forty stations equipped with Tandy computers.

"The concept that knowledge doubles every three years insists that technology is needed in order to keep up," Schapker said.

The lab's main purpose is to enrich and provide instruction on a variety of subjects.

In addition to many other programs, Seminole is also the center for the new Health Link.

Students can learn how to become a physical or health therapist, nurse or several other health occupations. The program was funded by the Business Partnership Challenge Grant, while HCA Central Florida Regional Hospital has also given the school a $4,000 grant in order to purchase supplies and equipment.

The Department of Education has given $500 in scholarship money toward the health occupations field.

Even though changing an image takes more than a day or a week, Mrs. Schapker believes that Seminole High School is unified and that the students take great pride in their school.

So, just maybe, with a few more changes, more people will begin to admire Seminole for what it really is: a place to receive a good education.

November, December meetings set

By VICKI DeSORMIER
Herald Staff Writer

SANFORD — Because of the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, the school board has traditionally had only one regularly scheduled meeting in November and one in December.

The schedule for those meeting times in 1992 were announced at the last school board meeting.

The board voted to have their November meeting on Tuesday, Nov. 17 at 7 p.m. and the meeting in December on Tuesday, Dec. 15 at 7 p.m.

The board, with at least one, and possibly two, new members will meet on Nov. 17 to reorganize their ranks as required by state law.

Board member Joe Williams who has served on the board for 12 years has decided not to run again for a fourth term. Bob Goff and Larry Strickler will be running in the November election to fill Williams' seat.

Chairman Nancy Warren is seeking a fourth term on the board and faces challenger Barrie Masters in November.

The new board members will be sworn in and the chairman and vice chairman will be selected by the board members.

The reorganizational meeting will take place just prior to the regular business meeting that evening.

"We are required by state law to have that meeting by that date," said Nancy Warren, chairman of the school board.

The reorganizational meeting has traditionally been an evening meeting for the convenience of those members of the public who work but were interested in seeing the ceremony.

It was decided to hold the December meeting in the middle of the month since there will only be one meeting that month.

Though there is only one regularly scheduled meeting each of the months, board members agreed that they will have any work sessions or special meetings that are required.

Crooms School of Choice

Alternative school hopes to grow

SANFORD — Barbara Kirby loves her job as principal of the Crooms School of Choice in Sanford.

The alternative school is comprised of three basic programs. There is a program for disinterested middle school students; another for middle school students who have had some disciplinary problems and the third program for teen age mothers who are continuing their education after the birth of their child.

"It is a very varied program," Kirby said. "We all work hard here...the students, the teachers, the staff and our volunteers."

Kirby has been the principal of the school since its inception in 1986 and says that while she puts in long hours working with the students, some of whom come into the school not wanting to learn, she believes the work is worth it.

teaching the students how to learn and succeed at their zoned school. After a semester or a year at Crooms most students return to the school for which they are zoned.

"The whole point of this school is to send them back to their own school ready to learn," Kirby said.

At this time, Crooms' programs (except for the Teen Age Parent Program) are designed for middle school students. Kirby hopes that in the future they can expand their offerings to help meet the needs of high school students as well.

"There are many 9th through 12th grade students who need alternative learning situations as well," she said.

Crooms was cited as one of nine schools in the state by the state Department of Education recently as an exemplary drop out prevention facility.

"We're very pleased with that," Kirby said.

The Crooms School of Choice PTA is very active works with Teresa Bellamith, secretary; Jathy in helping out at the school. President Sid Pollock Casella, treasurer and board member, Rachel Ash.
