No Time To Waste

This Legislature's session is nearly over and no bill has yet been enacted into law which appreciably reduces the cost of government or lightens the load of the taxpayer. We reiterate the belief that the Legislature will not, and perhaps can not, put through any measure which will directly bring about the desired relief.

Amateur Farming

Because of the popular delusion that anyone, who can't make a living doing anything else, can be a successful farmer, the back-to-the-land movement during the past year took on unprecedented acceleration.

Four cautionary generalities have been compiled recently by a man who spent his youth on a farm, and who was a back-to-the-lander under the pleasantest conditions.

1. Don't try farming for your health, or your wife's health; not if the two of you are so fixed that you have to do most of your own work.

2. Take it slow. Long, sure thoughts beat brilliance in farming. You have to be effectively intelligent in numberless ways—as a hand, a mechanic, a manager, a weather prophet, in veterinary science, engineering, practical chemistry, genetics, and so on, endlessly.

3. Don't expect independence. A man bosses his own place only in a manner of speaking. Most of his choices are choices made for him by the distant sway of markets, and by the swing of the earth and the weather.

4. Don't expect simplicity. It is city life which is really simple, with all the work specialized and most of it attended to by people you never see.

Aside from the fact that amateur farming is generally not profitable to those who practice it, there is another unfortunate side to the picture. The legitimate farmer in many instances is restrained from benefiting from a good market because of the surplus products raised by those whose operations are impractical and financially unsound.

SANFORD, TWENTY YEARS AGO

The exceedingly attractive and always interesting Chas Day exercises of the Senior Class occurred on the campus and north steps as usual of the High School building Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

EXIT, GABRIEL, SPUTTERING

In current filmdom no less a star than the Angel Gabriel is brought down from heaven to enter the White House and take charge of its proceedings.

POLITICS OVER HOLLYWOOD

In Hollywood the other night an enthusiastic producer told me that the public was now more interested in public affairs than in sex and that a new deal was beginning. He had been seeing the film called "Gabriel Over the White House," and the vast possibilities of the moving picture as an instrument of politics had been opened up to him.

No doubt there are great possibilities. But provisionally, at least, my own inclination would be to reassure the great lovers of the screen by telling them that they are in no serious danger. They will not, I think, be pushed aside immediately by worthy, but otherwise unattractive exponents of the gold standard and the Federal regulation of public utilities.

The film presents the story of a President who is converted to higher things by being knocked into unconsciousness in an automobile accident. Before the smash-up the President is a synthetic reflection of the most scandalous legends of the Harding regime. After it, he has a few weeks of insane lucidity and of supernatural power in which he solves practically all the problems of the world. Then, exhausted with his perfection he dies.

The period of his greatness, in which he cures the depression, wipes out crime and disarms the whole world, differs from any actual period of human affairs in that everything happens by wishing for it. I suppose many actual Presidents must have had moments when they had a daydream like this one.

Mooney's Trial Upon Old Count Gets Under Way

Mooney to use in an attempt to free himself from his life sentence. Mooney supporters hope that an acquittal in the present case would aid them in getting a pardon on the first conviction.

At the beginning of the trial Mooney stepped to the bar and pleaded not guilty to the 17-year-old indictment. This came after the prosecutor had again voiced his determination to present no evidence and after Judge Ward had warned counsel a verdict of acquittal under such circumstances would be useful only in a plea at bar in the event of future proceedings.

Asking the defense if it wished to proceed under that circumstance, Mooney arose to answer. "We do," he said.

In that case, said Judge Ward, "it is the constitutional right of the defendant to have the trial call the jury."

The court then called upon Mooney to plead. In civilian dress and minus the handcuffs that had been upon his wrists when he was conveyed into court by a squad of deputy sheriffs, Mooney stepped to the bar, heard the accusation and said: "Not guilty."

Confusion is over, but sympathy for the president will remain. For in the film Gabriel is all for the dictator idea and inspired his President to speak Congress, and it came and it is supreme. Had not Mr. Roosevelt good right to assume, therefore, that dictatorship was the word. It is not entirely surprising that Gabriel was planning the window behind him and sounding the trumpet.

Sentiment Strong For Giving Broad Powers To Sholtz

L. A. Bramley expressed approval with "I think that it's a mighty fine idea to give Governor Sholtz power to do something for the people. I am heartily in favor of it."

W. C. Hill believes that the legislators ought to be glad to turn their duties over to someone who wants to accept them if they aren't able to do anything themselves. I believe that the plan is a reasonable one and I am in favor of it.

A large number of city and county taxpayers' names were signed to one of six petitions that, after having been circulated throughout the city since Monday, will be sent to Representatives C. W. Entsminger and R. J. Holly and Senator J. J. Parrish this week. Nearly 200 names are signed to the petition.

Europe in 1931, with an old friend of her's, she said that the man in question was "Tuffy" Pine. Pine, she said, was paralyzed from the waist down and had no sense of balance and she used to walk the deck with him, helping him around. She said she had known him from childhood.

Mrs. Jelke declared her husband told her last November that in case of a divorce she be "paid enough money to buy my dirt or witness he wanted to, and he would charge me with two occasions of adultery."

The statement was made, she said, at a luncheon arranged by a mutual friend, Luke Doyle, in New York.

Doyle has testified he did arrange the luncheon, after talking with Mrs. Jelke, and invited Jelke, not with the idea of a reconciliation, but to arrange terms of settlement between the estranged couple.

Mrs. Jelke specifically denied a charge that she had been unfaithful with a man known only as "The Major" in Birmingham, Ala., a few weeks after the marriage, with Robert White, a New York bachelor, in the latter's apartment last year.

Florida Losses Upon Its Farms Lowest In U. S.

States that lost between 50 and 60 percent included Kentucky 51.1, Maryland 51.2, Delaware 48.6, North Carolina 48.7, Louisiana 48.8, Virginia 48.1, Missouri 48.2, Ohio 48.3, Texas 48.5, Utah 48, Oregon 48.3, Tennessee 48.4, South Carolina 48.5, Washington 48.5, Indiana 48.5, Illinois 48, Arizona 48.5, Minnesota 48.3, Wisconsin 48.3, Montana 48.6.

Gross income of farmers and growers amounting to $86,836,000 in 1932 gave Florida the rank of twenty-fifth of the 48 states in farm production. In 1929 the Florida aggregate of $130,111,000 ranked thirty-second. Records of the bureau of agricultural economics, United States department of agriculture, giving these figures, include income only from 78 principal crops and from 13 live stock items.

One car in 10 of the fresh fruits and vegetables moved in interstate commerce by rail and water carriers last year was shipped from Florida. Of the 833,913 carloads of perishables that the railroads and steamships handled, 83,333 were produced in this state. Output of Florida was included in 21 of the 44 classifications in which the official tabulations are kept.

Florida led all states in 1932 shipments of beans, snap and lima, celery, grapefruit and lemons, apricot, peppers and tomatoes, oranges and watermelons. This state held second place. On strawberries and mixed vegetables its rank was third. The cabbage production stood fourth. Vegetables, fruits other than citrus and melons gave 37,468 carloads of the 83,333 car total movement, leaving 46,067 for grapefruit, oranges and tangerines combined.
